THe law of paying tithes did borrow part of the morall, part of the iudiciall, and part of the ceremoniall law. The morall part therefore, is the equitie of the law, which is perpetuall, that as the Leuites then liued of the tenth, ſo the Miniſters at all times ought ſufficiently to be prouided and cared for. The iudiciall part was in this, that as the Leuites were not much leſſe in common account then the tenth part, being one of the tribes, (though in proportion of number, they made welneere the thirtieth part: for the reſt of the tribes were numbred to ſixe hundred, three thouſand, fiue hundred and fiftie perſons, Numb. 1. the Leuites made but two and twentie thouſand, Numb. 3.) As I ſay the Leuites made one whole tribe, and were not much leſſe then the tenth part in that account, being in number the thirteenth tribe, for there were twelue beſide; So it was thought reaſonable that the tenth part of their brethrens goods ſhould be allotted vnto them; which being a iudiciall and politike conſtitution of that countrey, doth neither neceſſarily binde Chriſtians now, neither is forbidden, but left in that reſpect indifferent. Thirdly, the ceremonie of the law was in this, becauſe the tenth was due to the Prieſts and Leuites for their ſeruice at the Altar, and as belonging to their Prieſthood: In which ſenſe tithes are neither due now vnto Miniſters, nor in any ſuch reſpect can bee chalenged, ſeeing the Prieſthood of the law is gone, and all the ceremonies thereof: wherefore although it be a wiſe and politike conſtitution, that the people ſhould pay their tithes, and may conueniently be retained, yet is it not now of neceſſitie impoſed vpon Chriſtians, as though no other prouiſion for the Church could ſerue but that.

Argum. 1. Bellarmine thus reaſoneth (for herein he is an aduerſarie to our Rhemiſts) (one Ieſuite againſt another) If the law of tithes be morall, then the other precept annexed to this law was morall alſo, that the Leuites, becauſe they liued of the offerings and tithes, ſhould haue no patrimonie or inheritance beſide. And by this reaſon euery Miniſter now ought to reſigne ſuch inheritance and poſſeſſions, as are left him by his friends: which is not to be admitted: Ergo, neither the other law ſtandeth neceſſarily in force, Bellarm. cap. 25.

Heb. 7. 12. Argum. 2. S. Paul ſaith in flat words, If the Prieſthood be changed, of neceſſitie there muſt alſo be a change of the law, Hebrew 7. 12. But the Prieſthood of the law is altered and changed: Ergo, alſo the law of the Prieſthood, and ſo conſequently the ceremoniall dutie of tithes.

In Pſal. 146. 3 In Auguſtines time, it was no generall law nor cuſtome in the Church, that tithes ſhould bee payed. Præcidite & deputate aliquid fixum ex annuis fructibus vel quotidianis quæſtibus: Defaulke, ſaith he, and appoint ſome certaine portion, either of your yearely fruites, or your ordinarie and daily gaines. Decimas vis? decimas exime: Will you make choyce to pay tithes? then let that be the portion. And yet this is no great matter: for the Phariſies, whoſe righteouſneſſe you ought to exceede, payed their tithes: Tu vix milleſimam das: Thou ſcarce payeſt the thouſandth part: Tamen non reprehendo, vel hoc fac, ſic ſitio, vt ad iſtas micas gaudeam: Yet I finde not fault: doe ſo ſtill: for I ſo thirſt after your well doing, that I refuſe not your very crummes, &c. We ſee then, that then the payment of tithes was voluntarie: Auguſtine refuſeth not the ten hundreth, that is milleſimam partem, the thouſandth part, which he calleth their crummes. De tempor. ſerm. 205.

Concil. Aurelianenſ. can. 17. Sicut in arbitrio dantis eſt, vt tribuere, quod voluerit, debeat, ita ſi inobedientia vel contumacia, in aliquo accipientis extiterit, in arbitrio ſit præſentis, vtrum debeat reuocare: [illegible] is in the will of the giuer, to giue what pleaſeth him, ſo if hee [illegible] him ſtubborne and froward, which receiueth it, it is in his power to reuoke the gift, &c. Wee ſee then that the word of God hath laid no ſuch neceſſitie vpon tithes, for then this Councell would not haue permitted ſuch libertie.

Let vs adde the ſeale, The profeſſed Bohemians thus deliuer their opinion, who endured much for Gods cauſe: They preach and ſay, that men are bound to giue them tithes, wherein they ſay falſely, for they cannot prooue by the new Teſtament, that our Lod did command it, and his Diſciples warned no man to doe ſo, neither did they themſelues receiue them: exhortat. Bohemor. articul. 15. Therfore tithes are not neceſſarily due by the word of God.

This may further appeare by the practiſe of other Churches, that the paiment of tithes (though of all other moſt fit is not impoſed as a neceſſarie law. 1. For among the Muſcouites: ſacerdotes ex contributione quadam ſuſtentantur, the Prieſts are maintained by a certaine contribution: and certaine houſes are aſſigned vnto them with fields and medowes, whereof they liue, as husbandmen, by their owne labour, or their ſeruants.

Guagnin. de religion. Ruth.

2 The ſame is the cuſtome of the Aethiopike Church, the Prieſts haue no tithes, but certaine grounds, whereof they liue by their owne labour, or their ſeruants: Zaga Zabo an Aethiopike Biſhop: I alleage not the practiſe of theſe Churches, as allowing the ſame, (for I preferre the condition of thoſe Churches, which yet doe enioy the ancient prouiſion of the Miniſterie by tithes) but only to ſhew, that the cuſtome of tithing is not impoſed by any neceſſitie.

4 Bellarmine is a witneſſe againſt them in this caſe, who denieth, that the paiment of tithes is of diuine right, or a moral precept, quoad determinationem quantitatis, in reſpect of the determinate quantitie, and he confuteth the Canoniſts for ſo holding: and therein hee conſenteth vnto Alexander 3. par. qu. 51. in 3. and Thomas in 2. 2. q. 87. art. 3.

THE SECOND PART BY WHAT RIGHT tithes are due to the Miniſters of the Goſpell.

The Papiſts.

Tithes or their equiualent are due to Chriſt and the prieſthood of the new Teſtament, Rhemiſt. annot. Heb. 7. 4. This then is their opinion, that the prieſthood of the Goſpell being more excellent then the prieſthood of the Law; and their ſacrifice, which they offer vp in the Maſſe, being of greater worthines, they may with better right challenge tithes, then the Prieſts of the law did for their ſeruice at the Altar: So that tithes are due to the Church onely becauſe of the prieſthood, not for any other dutie appertaining to that office, as preaching the word, miniſtring the Sacraments, or any ſuch.

87. Error.

Abraham paied tithes, they ſay, to Melchiſedech: which was the Prieſt of the moſt high God, in offering the formes of bread and wine, wherein Melchiſedech did ſacrifice: Ergo, tithes are now due to the Prieſts of the Goſpell and new law, which are all after the order of Melchiſedech, Rhemiſt. Heb. 7. ſect. 4. & 8.

Anſw. Firſt, Melchiſedechs prieſthood conſiſted not in offering bread and wine to God, but brought them foorth to refreſh Abraham: neither were they formes of bread and wine onely, as you imagine, but very materiall bread and wine: for if Melchiſedechs prieſthood had conſiſted therein, the Apoſtle would not haue omitted the chiefe thing, wherein Chriſts prieſthood was ſhewed foorth, as he doth, making no mention at all of it, Heb. 7. Againe it is great blaſphemie to ſay, that euery popiſh Prieſt is after the order of Melchiſedech, nay that the proper act of Chriſts prieſthood conſiſteth in the perpetuall offering of his bodie and blood in the Church: for by this reaſon euery impure prieſt doth more properly offer the bodie of Chriſt in the Maſſe, then it was offered by himſelfe vpon the Croſſe: then the which, what greater blaſphemie can be vttered? And yet they are not aſhamed to ſpeak it: yea the ſacrifice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe, (ſay they) was after the order of Aaron, and not after the order of Melchiſedech; and ſo they prefer euery popiſh Prieſt offering in the Maſſe, before Ieſus Chriſt ſacrificing himſelfe vpon the Croſſe: contrary to the Scripture, which maketh this difference betweene the prieſthood of Aaron, and the prieſthood of Melchiſedech; that the prieſts of the law were many, becauſe they were taken away by death: but Chriſts prieſthood is eternall, becauſe he dieth not, Heb. 7. 23. But if there ſhould be many prieſts after Melchiſedechs order, there ſhould herein bee no difference at all. Wherefore ſeeing Melchiſedechs prieſthood onely reſteth in Chriſt, and is not tranſlated to any other; and that there is now no ſacrifice left but ſpirituall, of praiſe and thankſgiuing, Heb. 13. 15. it followeth that by reaſon of any ſuch externall prieſthood or ſacrifice, tithes are not now due vnto the Church, neither in any ſuch regard ought to be challenged.

The Proteſtants.

Tithes, or their equiualent are not due to the Church in reſpect of any ſacrificing prieſthood, of which ſort there is none in the new Teſtament ordained to continue: but for other paſtorall duties, and principally the preaching and diſpenſing of the word, and inſtructing of the people.

1.Cor.9.14. Galath.6.6.

*Argum.*1. If there were any ſuch prieſthood, and tithes in that right did appertaine to the Church; it is moſt like that our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles would haue challenged them: But there is no one precept in the new teſtament concerning paying of tithes, but onely for a ſufficient maintenance for the Miniſters of the Goſpell, Fulk. Heb.7.ſect.4.

*Argum.*2. Saint Paul euery where, ſo oft as hee ſheweth the dutie of Chriſtians in relieuing and maintaining their paſtors, maketh only mention of ſowing of ſpirituall things, 1.Cor.9.11, and of teaching and inſtructing, Gal.6.6. Ergo, tithes are due vnto Paſtors and miniſters onely or eſpecially for their feeding and inſtructing, and ſowing ſpirituall ſeede, which is the word of God.

Reuel.1.6.

*Argum.*3. There is no ſuch ſacrificing prieſthood now in the Church, as wee haue partly ſhewed before, and ſhall of purpoſe more fully declare it afterward: for euery where in the new Teſtament ſpirituall ſacrifices are commanded: and all Chriſtians are made Kings and Prieſts vnto God, Apoc.1.6. Other prieſthood we reade of none. Wherefore in that reſpect tithes cannot be due.

1.Tim.5.17.

Laſtly, Auguſtine ſaith; Si mendicum non contemnis, quanto magis bouem, per quem trituratur hæc area: If thou deſpiſeſt not a begger, how much more oughteſt thou to haue regard of the oxe that treadeth out the corne on the floore, &c. That is, the Miniſter that preacheth the Goſpell: for ſo Saint Paul expoundeth it, 1.Tim.5.17. The Elders, ſaith he, that labour in the word and doctrine are worthy double honour; and then it followeth, verſ.8. for the Scripture ſaith, Thou ſhalt not mouzle the mouth of the oxe, that treadeth out the corne. Sufficient maintenance therefore to the Miniſters is due for their labour and trauell in the word.

Concil.Ticinenſ.ſub Lodouico Pio: Vt decimæ Eccleſijs tribuerentur vbi baptiſmum, prædicationem, & alia Chriſti ſacramenta percipiunt: That tithes ſhould be payed to theſe Churches, where men receiue Baptiſme, preaching of the word, and other Sacraments. *Concil.Lateran.ſub Alexand.*3.*part.*48.*c.*1. Illi eccleſiæ decimæ ab his perſoluendæ, qui ab ea eccleſiaſtica percipiunt ſacramenta: To that Church men muſt pay their tithes, where they receiue the Sacraments of the Church, &c. So likewiſe their Canon law giueth two reaſons for the payment of tithes, one in reſpect of God himſelfe; In ſignum vniuerſalis dominij: To ſignifie the vniuerſall dominion and ſoueraigntie, which God hath, *decret. Gregor.lib.*3.*tit.*30.*c.*33. Innocent. Another reaſon is in regard of the Miniſters themſelues, as *eod.libro. tit.*28.*c.*1. Leo 3. tithes and other rights are due vnto that Church, In qua cœleſti pabulo refici conſueuit; Where a man hath vſed to be refreſhed with the heauenly food. Tithes therefore are due not in reſpect of any ſacrifice, but for the Sacraments and the Word preached.

W.Thorpe holy confeſſor: Tithes were the hire and wages limited to the Prieſts and Leuites in the law, for bearing about the tabernacle, for ſlaying of beaſts, and for burning of ſacrifice, &c. But now, as Saint Paul ſaith, ſeeing the prieſthood is changed, there muſt alſo be a change of the law, &c. pag.537. col.2. The argument is framed thus: By what right tithes were payed vnder the law, they are not payable now, becauſe the law is changed; but then they were due for ſacrificing: Ergo, they are not ſo due now.

THE SIXTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING THE SVPERSTITIOVS ORDERS, AND SECTS OF MONKES, AND FRIERS.

MOnkes in Latine, called Monachi, deriued of the Greeke word, were ſuch as liued ſolitarilie, and thereupon had they their name: And they were at the beginning of three ſorts: ſome were called Eremites, that liued in woods and deſerts by themſelues: there were other which were mued vp and incloſed in Cels and walles, which had not ſo much libertie as Eremites had; but kept alwaies in their cages and cloſets, and ſo in miſerie ſpent their daies: and theſe were called Anchorites, that is, ſeparated, ſet apart from all men and liuing by themſelues. There was a third ſort called Cœnobites, which liued in companies, as it were in Colledges by themſelues, and had all things common: and theſe properly were called Monks, Bellarm. lib. 2. de monach. cap. 3. This controuerſie hath many queſtions.

1 Concerning the beginning and originall of Monkes, and of their diuers ſects, two parts.

2 Concerning Counſels of perfection, whether they differ from Euangelicall precepts.

3 Concerning vowes in generall, three parts: Firſt, whether it bee lawfull for Chriſtians to make vowes. Secondly, in what things lawfull vowes conſiſt. Thirdly, whether voluntarie vowes are any part of the worſhip of God.

4 Concerning Monaſticall vowes in particular, three parts. Firſt, of the vow of voluntarie pouertie. Secondly, the vow of obedience. Thirdly, the vow of continencie.

5 Concerning Monaſticall perſons. Firſt, whether the younger ſort ought to be admitted to profeſſe Monkerie. Secondly, whether children can profeſſe without conſent of their parents. Thirdlie, whether married perſons may with mutuall conſent. Fourthly, whether either of the parties, the marriage not conſummate, may enter into profeſſion.

6 Concerning the rules and diſcipline of Monaſticall life. Firſt, of their ſolitarie and ſeuere kind of life. Secondly, of their canonicall houres. Thirdly, their habite and apparell. Fourthly, of their maintenance, whether they ought to liue by begging, or labour of their hands. Of theſe in order.

THE FIRST QVESTION, OF THE BEGINNING AND ORIGINALL OF MONKES, AND OF THEIR DIUERS SECTS.

THis queſtion hath two parts: Firſt, of their originall. Secondlie, of the diuerſitie of their ſects.

THE FIRST PART, OF THE ORIGINALL OF MONKES.

The Papiſts.

88. Error.

THey make this profeſſion to be as ancient as the time of our Sauiour Chriſt, and prooue the beginning thereof both out of the new and old Teſtament.

Argum. 1. Elias and Elizeus were Eremites, and liued without wiues, neither poſſeſſed any riches: Ergo, this profeſſion of life is moſt ancient, Bellarm. cap. 5. Rhemiſt. annot. in Mark. 9. 3.

Anſ. Firſt, the argument followeth not; they had no wiues, nor riches: Ergo, were Eremites: for euen amongſt the Papiſts themſelues many were kept from wiues, (as their prieſts) and yet were neither Monkes nor Eremites. Secondly, though we reade not that Elizeus was married, yet the ſonnes of the Prophets were, that liued as it were in the ſame Colledge with him, which Bellarmine maketh a Colledge of Monkes and Eremites: and ſaith very vntruly, that they all liued without wiues, cap. 5. Thirdly, though Elias and Elizeus were ſometime in the wilderneſſe, yet they alwaies remained not, neither liued there.

2. King 4. 1.

*Argum.*2. Iohn Baptiſt a perfect patterne of Eremiticall life, for liuing in the deſert and wilderneſſe, for his rough apparrell, for abſtaining from all delicate meate, *Rhemiſt. annot. Matth.*3.1.

Anſ. Firſt, Iohn Baptiſts calling was ſingular and extraordinarie, and therefore he cannot be made an author of any ordinarie profeſſion. Secondly, we denie not but his life was auſtere, and that he made his abode in a ſolitarie place, yet there were houſes and villages not farre off: his apparrell alſo was courſe cloath, made of the hard haires of Camels: his food was of locuſts and wild honie, the vſuall and common meate of that countrey: he was an extraordinarie preacher of repentance, and ſhewed in himſelfe an example of auſtere life, as it became the forerunner of Chriſt: but being no miniſter of the Goſpell, but the laſt Prophet of the law, he cannot bee a patterne of an ordinarie profeſſion vnder the Goſpell, *Fulk. annot. Matth.*3.*ſect.*1.

*Arg.*3. Nay Bellarmine fetcheth his Monkiſh order from a more ancient beginning, then from Elias, and Iohn Baptiſt; yea from before the flood: for Enos (ſaith he) ſeemeth to haue brought in ſome ſtricter kind of life, and peculiar maner of worſhipping God: whereas the text ſaith, that he began to call vpon the name of God: that is, after another manner: for Adam, Seth, Abel, before this time called vpon the name of God, *cap.*5.

Anſ. Firſt, who would haue thought, that there had bin Monks and Eremites before the flood, if the Ieſuite had not ſaid it, or that this text, which he alleageth, could haue prooued it? The argument followeth not: Enos brought in a peculiar worſhip of God, therefore was founder of the Eremiticall life: for he brought in the true worſhip of God; but the other is ſuperſtitious and erroneous. Secondlie, Tremellius readeth agreeably to the Hebrew, Tum nomen Dei cœptum eſt innocando profanari: Then the name of God began to be prophaned in calling vpon, that is, his worſhip began to be corrupted: for the Hebrew word ſignifieth, both to inuocate and call vpon God, as alſo to corrupt, pollute, or prophane. Thirdly, if we reade as they doe, The name of God began to be called vpon: it only ſheweth a reſtoring and renuing of the true worſhip of God, which was polluted by the poſteritie of Cain, whoſe ſtocke and familie is ſet downe in that chapter, Geneſ.4. and when profaneneſſe encreaſed in the poſteritie of Cain, then the faithfull ſeperated themſelues from the reſt, and aſſembled by themſelues apart, to worſhip God.

*Argum.*4. Bellarmine alſo ſaith, that the inſtitution of Monkes proceeded from the Apoſtles, who appointed all things to be common, as it may appeare, Act.4. and the Apoſtles were the firſt Chriſtian Monks: So that his argument concludeth thus, All things were common in the Apoſtles time: Ergo, there were Monkes then, *lib.*2 *de monach.c.*5.

*Anſ.*1. If the Apoſtles were the firſt Monkes, how then is Iohn Baptiſt, princeps monachorum, prince of the Monkes, as Bellarmine hath affirmed a little before? he cannot be the firſt, and the Apoſtles the firſt too. 2. If the communitie in vſe amongſt the beleeuers in thoſe daies, made them Monkes, then the whole congregation was of Monks: for as many as beleeued had all things common, Act.2.44. which were reckoned to the number of three thouſand ſoules, v.41. So then by this reaſon al Chriſtians muſt be Monks. 3. There was a communitie amongſt them, but not like the Monkiſh communitie: for firſt their communitie was voluntarie, not impoſed vpon them; but the other is inforced by vow: ſecondly, their community was not, in relinquiſhing their goods, and not to meddle with them themſelues, as men were perſwaded in monkery, but an equall diſtribution of them to as many as needed: thirdly, that communitie was in reſpect of that preſent neceſſitie in the time of perſecution; but Monkiſh communitie is not vpon neceſſity, but vpon ſuperſtitious curioſity, whereby they think to merit heauen. 4. We grant there was ſuch a communitie, as we ſay, amongſt them, but they cannot ſhew a profeſſion of ſingle life amongſt the beleeuers in thoſe daies, of whom many were maried, as Ananias and Saphira, Act.5. and therefore they could not be Monks. 5. I oppoſe againſt them the iudgement of their owne Thomas, who affirmeth, that there were no Monks in Saint Pauls time: ex citat. Eſpenc. in 2. Tim. pag. 189.c.

Leuit.11.9.

Our Doway men will picke out Monkes in the old Teſtament: as whereas Moſes ſheweth what fiſh may bee eaten and are counted cleane in ſeas, riuers, and ſtanding pooles: by the firſt they vnderſtand Chriſtian people taken out of the Sea of this world, by the ſecond Preachers, by the third Monkes, which keepe alwaies in their cloiſters, as thoſe fiſh in their pooles.

Doway Bible. pag.409.

Contra. Thus haue they fiſhed in theſe waters, as the ſaying is, and caught a frogge: firſt, there is no ſuch word in the originall which ſignifieth a lake or ſtanding poole: there are three words, bamaijm, ἐν τοῖς ὕδασιν, in the waters, baiammim, ταῖς θαλάσσαις, in the ſeas, benechalim, ἐν τοῖς χειμάῤῥοις, in the riuers: the firſt is the generall word, which comprehendeth the two either ſalt waters on the Sea, or freſh water in the riuers. Secondly, of all other waters, the ſtanding pooles are the worſt, and therefore thereby their cloiſter Monkes are vnfitly ſignified, whom they take to be the beſt. Thirdly, euen in all theſe there were ſome cleane fiſh with finnes and ſcales, and ſome vncleane, as the muddie eeles: and ſuch were their vncleane cloiſter Monkes, of muddie and ſtinking life: thus haue they loſt a good argument for Monkes.

The Proteſtants.

WE ſee then that this Monaſticall and ſolitarie kind of life hath no proofe nor ground out of the Scriptures, either by precept or example: Nay, this kind of profeſſion was not knowne in the Church, for diuers hundred yeeres after Chriſt; how could then the Apoſtles bee the founders of this order? And though the name of Monkes be of ſome antiquitie in the Church, yet they were farre vnlike vnto Popiſh Monkes, that for theſe many yeeres haue peſtered the Church.

1 It is certaine, as Hierome witneſſeth, that Antonius, and his diſciples Amathas and Macarius, were the firſt beginners of Monkiſh profeſſion almoſt three hundred yeere after Chriſt, Fulk. annot. Mark. 6. 3. Anno 260. when Sixtus the 2. was Biſhop of Rome, Paulus began the profeſſion of Heremites, as Mantuan writeth:

Iſta ego crediderim per noxia tempora Paulum:
Niligenam ſole ardentem, qui primus eremum
Incoluit, liquiſſe vrbes, &c.
About this time Paul was the firſt, I geſſe,
Who neere to Nilus dwelt in wilderneſſe.

Hierome alſo reporting diuers opinions of the originall of Monkes, as how ſome ſhould fetch their beginning from Elias and Iohn Baptiſt, which conceit hee miſliketh, at the laſt alleageth the common opinion, Antonium huius propoſiti fuiſſe caput, that Antonie was the head or beginning of this profeſſion: to the which he ſubſcribeth, in vita Pauli. And he ſaith of Hilarion: Nec quiſquam monachum ante ſanctum Hilarionem in Syria nouerat: There was no Monke knowne in Syria before Hilarion. But the Apoſtles were not vnknowne in thoſe countries.

2 The beginning of Monkes, was not for the more merite, and to doe penance for their owne ſins and the ſinnes of the world; for Antonius the firſt Monke confeſſed, that Chriſt only ſuffered for the ſinnes of the world: But the firſt occaſion was giuen in the time of perſecution, when as men were not ſuffered to worſhip God aright publikely: and therefore they fled into the wilderneſſe, Rhemiſt. Matth. 3. ſect. 3. As Hierome reporteth of Paulus the Heremite, who being perſecuted of his ſiſters huſband vnder Decius and Valerian, fled to the mountaines, & ſic neceſſitatem in voluntatem vertit, and ſo made a vertue of neceſſitie, vita Pauli. But now ſeeing the Chriſtian faith is openly profeſſed, they haue no ſuch cauſes to ſeeke ſolitarie and ſecret places.

Fulk. Matth. 3. ſect. 3.

3 The popiſh Monkes are altogether vnlike theirs: Firſt, they liued in ſolitarie places, farre from reſort of people: but the popiſh Mock-monkes liue in cities and the frequencie of the people, Fulke annot. Matth. 3. ſect. 3. Secondly, the Monkes in times paſt laboured with their hands: but the popiſh fat-bellies pampered themſelues in idlenes. Thirdly, they are altogether vnlike in life and doctrine, as we ſhall ſee more at large afterward, Fulk. ibid.

Concil. Colonienſ. part. 10. cap. 1. Vita monaſtica non multo poſt Apoſtolorum tempora cœpit, quanquam multis perſuaſum ſit, aliam tunc fuiſſe, quam nunc eſt, monachiſmi rationem: The Monkiſh life began not long after the Apoſtles time, although many think, that the profeſſion of Monkes was farre otherwiſe in thoſe times, then now.

This Councell maketh Monkerie not to be ſo ancient as the Apoſtles, and beſides ſaith, that the Monkiſh life now, is farre vnlike the life of the ancient Monkes: as it followeth, cap. 9. Videmus monaſteria mulierum in pleriſque locis, in ſuſpectas de incontinentia domos, ne quid grauius dicam, eſſe commutatas: We ſee the monaſteries of women, to be turned into wanton houſes ſuſpected of incontinencie, to ſay no more, &c. But ſuch were not the ancient Colledges and aſſemblies of Monkes.

Their owne Extrauagant alſo ſaith, that the rule of S. Francis is not grounded vpon the example of Chriſt or his Apoſtles: Quæ vtique nec Chriſtus, nec Apoſtoli, &c. Which neither Chriſt, nor his Apoſtles did either teach by word, or confirme by example, Ioann. 22. Extrau. tit. 14. c. 5.

I will adioyne the teſtimonie of Sir Iohn Borthwicke Knight, who endured much trouble for the faith of Chriſt: What ſhall I call the cloyſters of Monkes in theſe our daies otherwiſe then brothel-houſes, ſwine-ſtyes, and dennes of diſcord, &c? Wherefore I conclude, that this their kinde of life is wicked and naught, which is not grounded nor eſtabliſhed of any certaine calling of God, Fox pag. 1265. col. 1. In this holy mans iudgement therefore, the profeſſion of Monkerie tooke not beginning neither from Chriſt, nor his Apoſtles.

Pag. 1152. 2. 50.

And further, that popiſh Monkerie had not the beginning from the Apoſtles times, it is euident:

1. For the Greeke Church, Sozomen ſheweth that the firſt Monkes did betake themſelues to ſolitarie places, to auoid perſecution: The Tripartite ſtorie ſaith, that the Monkes, which laboured not with their owne hands, violentis latronib. ſunt æquales habendi, are to be held like vnto violent theeues and robbers.

Lib. 1. cap. 12.
Tripartit. hiſt. lib. 1. cap. 8.

2 For the South Church, Athanaſius teſtifieth, that diuers Monkes were married. In the Aethiopike Church, as Zago Zabo witneſſeth, Monachi labore ſuo viuunt, The Monkes liue by their labour, and digge the ground.

4 Gregorie in his time hath this obſeruation of certaine heretikes: Qui populis admiſceri fugiunt,

Moral.lib.16. in 21.c.Iob. ſed ſeceſſum vitæ ſanctioris petunt, &c. which refuſe to be conſorted with the people, but ſeek to leade a ſolitarie life, which doe ſo much the more infect others, peſte perſuaſionis, with their peſtilent perſwaſions, &c. by how much more they haue them in greater reuerence for the merit of their life, &c. Who ſeeth not, how fitly this deſcription ſuiteth the popiſh Monkes and Heremites? theſe three markes agree vnto them, ſolitarie life, peruerſe doctrine, opinion of merit. Some of their owne ſide Aluar.Pelag. planct.p.130. haue complained of their Monkes: Though they haue the likenes of the Apoſtles, yet they are farre remoued from their life, let the Church lament her Monkes, &c. Bellarmine confeſſeth, that Athanaſius Lib.2.de Monach.c.5. affirmeth, that there were no Eremites before Antonie, who liued in the beginning of the fourth age or hundreth yeere from Chriſt, &c. Their Monkes then and their heremites had not their beginning from the Apoſtles.

THE SECOND PART, CONCERNING THE diuers ſects of Monkes and Friers.

The Papiſts.

89.Error. THey ſay that imitation of diuers holy men, as of S.Francis, S.Benet, S.Dominicke, which hath brought in diuers ſects and orders of Religious men, doe tend all to the imitation of Chriſt, Rhemiſt.annot.Philip.cap.3.ſect.2.1.Theſſ.1.2.

Philip.3.17. This their aſſertion they would ground vpon the Apoſtles words, Philip.3.17. Be ye followers of me brethren, Rhemiſt.

1.Cor.11.1. Anſw. Firſt, Saint Paul would haue them no otherwiſe to follow him, then hee did Chriſt, 1.Corinth.11.1. Neither gaue any other rules to his followers, then hee had learned of Chriſt, as the patrones of the Monkiſh ſects haue done. Secondly, neither did S.Paul erect a new order of Paulians, as Franciſcus did of Franciſcanes, Dominick of Dominicanes. Thirdly, S.Paul was a perſwader of vnitie, not a maker of diuiſions among Chriſtians; as the Monkes and Friers haue done, one ſort perſecuting another for their opinions euen to death: Fulk.annot.1.Theſſ.1.ſect.2. Fox pag.798. Fourthly, if the rule of S.Francis, the beſt approued ſect amongſt you, be no other then this, as witneſſeth one of your Popes; Domini noſtri ſanctum Euangelium, &c. to obſerue the holy Goſpell of our Lord, ſext.decret.lib.5.tit.12.c.3.Nichol.4. Then is the rule of S.Francis ſuperfluous, ſeeing euery man is bound, that is called a Chriſtian, to follow the Goſpell of Chriſt.

The Proteſtants.

COntrariwiſe wee affirme, that it is a great derogation to Chriſt when the people ſhall ſay, I follow the religion of Auguſtine, the religion of Francis: another ſaith, I hold of Dominicke: another, I hold of Ieſus, as the Ieſuites doe, Fulk.Philip.3.verſ.17.

*Argum.*1. Saint Paul reproueth the Corinthians, becauſe they made the like ſects amongſt themſelues: one ſaid, I am Pauls, another, I am Apolloes; and concludeth, that therefore they were car- 1.Cor.3.4. 21,22. nall, 1.Cor.3.4. And further, he ſaith, they ſhould not reioyce in men, for all things were theirs, whether Paul, Apollos, or Cephas, verſ.21.22. That is, they were not maſters of their faith, to inſtitute new religions and ſects, but the Miniſters and ſeruants of the Lords inheritance. If therefore it was not lawfull to ſay, I hold of Paul, I hold of Cephas: neither is it lawfull to ſay, I hold of Dominicke, I hold of Francis, I hold of Ieſus: for ſeeing they make their ſects, and Ieſus maketh his, it is euident that they are not all referred to the imitation of Ieſus: for then they might all as well be called Ieſuites. So then in the Apoſtles time there was not any ſuch following of ſects, or calling of men by the names of their patrones and authors, as it is now in Poperie; but all that beleeued in Chriſt, were cal- Acts 11.26. led of his name Chriſtians, Act.11.26.

*Argum.*2. The number of Monkes and Friers was almoſt infinite, ſects vpon ſects, and new orders daily were deuiſed, as Auguſtinians, Bernardines, Carmelites, Carthuſians, Dominicans, Franciſcans, and a great ſort more, to the number of an hundred ſects, as they are reckoned by Maſter Fox pag.260. And Tilmane Heſhuſ. ſetteth downe 65. ſeuerall ſects, or rather ſchiſmes of Monkes, loc.25. error.10. This irkeſome rabble therefore of Monkes is fitly ſhadowed foorth by the ſwarme of Lo- Reuel.9.4. cuſts, which came vp out of the bottomleſſe pit, Apoc.9.4. And verily as the Locuſts and Graſhoppers conſume and deuoure the fruites of the earth, ſo the begging Friers, and idle Monkes deuoured the goods of the people, and corrupted the doctrine of the Church.

3 Laſtly, this diuiſion of Monkerie into ſects and ſundrie orders, is of no great antiquitie; they were not knowne in Auguſtines time, who knew no other name of them, then Monkes: for he wrote a book of purpoſe, De opere Monachorum; Of the labour of Monks: But other names of Carmelites, Carthuſians, Franciſcans, or ſuch like, were not heard of in the Church in thoſe daies; but came in long after in the time of Innocentius the 3. about *ann.*1212. many yeeres after *Auguſtine: Fox p.*259.

The time by peruſing the ancient monuments and records, may eaſily be aſſigned, when moſt of theſe Frierly and Monkiſh ſects began. Anno 1100 Vrbanus the 2. confirmed the ſects of the Carthuſians, and Ciſterſians: Anno 1118. vnder Paſchal the 2. began the ſect of the Templaries: Anno 1125. Calixtus the 2. confirmed the order of the Pramonſtratenſes: Anno 1150. Eugenius the 3. confirmed the order of the Gilbertines in England. Anno 1223. Honorius the 3. receiued vnder his protection the Auguſtinians, Carmelites, Franciſcans, Dominicans. Anno 1295. vnder Celeſtinus the 5. the order of the Celeſtines began. Iohn the 23. confirmed the ſect of the Grandimontenſes. Anno 1371. Vrban the 5. confirmed S. Bridgets order. Gregorie the 12. did approue the ſect of the Hieronymites and Montolinenſes, anno 1410. Iohn the 24. ratified the order of the Friſonarians, anno 1418. Anno 1555. Paulus the 3. or thereabout, confirmed the ſect of the Ieſuites: ex Cælio 2. Vergerio. Balæo & alijs.

This inuention of Sects and new Profeſſions, hath bin by the Emperiall lawes prohibited; as Cod. lib. 1. tit. 12. leg. 11. Honor. Theodoſ. Cælicolarum nomen inauditum, &c. The ſtrange and vnknowne name of Cælicolites, that is, inhabitants of heauen, hath found out a new ſuperſtition: and ſo the law proceedeth, Niſi ad fidem Chriſtianam conuerſi fuerint, &c. Vnleſſe they bee conuerted to the Chriſtian faith, ſhall bee puniſhed as heretikes. This law approoueth no name or faith to bee vſed, but of Chriſtians: the name of Cælicolites was a goodly title, as the name of Ieſuites is; but as that name was made a cloake for ſuperſtition and hypocriſie, ſo is this: and, howſoeuer they are called, if they ſwarue from the name and faith of Chriſtians, by this law they are accounted heretikes.

This innumerable rabble of Monkes hath miſliked alſo their owne patrones the Popes of Rome: Concil. Lateranenſ. ſub Innocent. 3. cap. 3. Firmiter prohibemus, &c. We doe ſtreightly forbid, that no man from henceforth inuent a new Religion, leſt the too great diuerſitie of religious perſons doe bring great offence into the Church of God; but he that will enter into religion, let him chuſe ſome one of them which is alreadie approued: and he that is diſpoſed to erect an houſe of religion, let him follow ſome rule alreadie in vſe, &c. But yet for all this decree, many ſects of religions were afterward inuented. Likewiſe Gregorie the 10. doth not only forbid new religions to be inuented, but condemneth, Ordines mendicantes, all the orders of begging Friers, begun ſince that generall Councell of Laterane: ſext. decret. lib. 3. tit. 17. c. 1. Ioann. 22. doth alſo reuerſe and diſſolue the order of the Fraticelles, who were after the order of Francis: Extrau. Ioan. tit. 7. c. 1. Clemens 5. deſtroyed the ſect of the Beguines; which is reuiued notwithſtanding by Iohn 22. Extrau. commun. lib. 3. tit. 9. c. 1. Thus we ſee what good opinion the Popes themſelues haue of their owne ſects.

Adde the ſeale of holy Martyrs, Iohn Wickliffe holy Confeſſor; Benedict, Francis, Dominicke, with all ſuch as haue been patrones of priuate religion, except they haue repented, with ſuch as haue entred into the ſame, are in a damnable ſtate. Fox pag. 450. col. 1. artic. 43. Pag. 414. 1. 66.

Maſter Tindall holy martyr, to follow the rules of Auguſtine, Benedict, Francis, and ſuch other, is to leaue the faith: Fox pag. 1251. col. 1. Pag. 1140. 1. 60.

I adde for further proofe: 1. That the Greekes haue no Monkes but after the order of S. Baſil Biſhop of Cæſarea, who inſtituted his order of Monkes, about anno 380. 2. The Aethiopians haue but one only order of religion, which is of S. Anthonie the Heremite: and their great Patriarke is alwaies of that order; as Zago Zabo ſaith, an Aethiopian Biſhop. Theuet. lib. 6. cap. 2. Aluares deſcrip. of Æthiopia. Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop.

Confeſſion of Baſil, artic. 5. The Church of Chriſt doth labour all that ſhe can, to keepe the bounds of peace, therefore ſhe doth by no meanes communicate with ſects, and the rules of orders, deuiſed to make difference of daies, meates, apparell, &c. Harm. ſect. 16. pag. 484.

4 Eraſmus complaineth of the vnneceſſarie rabble and ſects of Monkes: Ego puto, cucullatum vitæ genus expertus, rem Chriſtianam nihilo deterius habituram, &c. I thinke, as hauing good experience of a Monkes cowle, that Chriſtianitie would be no whit the worſe, ſi non eſſent tot cultuum, ciborum, titulorum diſcrimina: if there were not ſuch difference of profeſſions, meates, titles: ſeeing Monkerie is come to that paſſe, that if you take away certaine externall things, fere deteriores ſunt cæteris, they are almoſt worſe then others, and the better part of the Monaſteries haue ſo little exerciſe of religion, vt nuſquam minus liceat religioſam vitam agere, that no where may one leade a leſſe religious life, &c. Epiſt lib. 22. ad Ioann. Gacchum Monachum.

Our Doway countrimen may be here brought foorth as witneſſes againſt their fellowes: for vpon that place, Deuter. 25. 10. where he was to put off his ſhoe, as a ſigne of ignominie, that would not raiſe vp ſeed to his brother, they giue this rule: Paſtors and Doctors muſt beget ſpirituall children to Chriſt, not to themſelues, and ſo they are called Chriſtians, not Paulians, whom S. Paul conuerted: and why then, I pray you, are your Franciſcanes, Benedictines, Dominicanes, and the reſt, ſo called of Franciſcus, Benedictus, Dominicus, and other their founders? Doway Bible. 447.

THE SECOND QVESTION, CONCERNING the Counſels of perfection.

The Papiſts.

This they ſay is the very foundation of the Monaſticall life, which is the moſt perfect eſtate and calling of Chriſtians: for they performe more then Chriſt hath commanded, not only his precepts, but euen his counſels alſo, which, they ſay, doe much differ: for the precepts are enioyned to all Chriſtians, and to leaue a precept vndone, is ſinne: but the Euangelicall Counſels are giuen onely to thoſe that are perfect, which they are not bound to keepe, neither doe they ſinne in leauing them vndone: yet if they obſerue them, they doe merit more and ſhall haue a greater reward: Such Counſels of perfection are theſe; To giue all wee haue to the poore; to abſtaine from eating of fleſh, to vow chaſtitie and ſuch like: Bellarm. cap. 7. Rhemiſt annot. Matth. 19. ſect. 9. 90. Error.

Argum.

*Argum.*1. Matth.19. verſ.21. Chriſt ſaith, Goe and ſell all thou haſt, if thou wilt be perfect. This was a Counſell of perfection, not a precept giuen to all Chriſtians.

Anſw. Firſt, this was both a Counſell and precept, though not to all, yet to this one man, to diſcouer his hypocriſie and vaine confidence which he had in himſelfe, as though he had kept the law, when he was farre from it, Fulke Matth.19.9. Mark.10.3. Secondly, it is a generall precept vnto all, to loue the Lord with all the heart, and to be content, when the Lord requireth, for Chriſts ſake, to leaue all we haue, Caluin. Inſtitut.4.cap.13.ſect.13.

Bellarmine replieth: Firſt, it is not like, that this young man was an hypocrite, or a vaine boaſter of himſelfe, becauſe it is ſaid Chriſt loued him; but he loueth no hypocrites or proud men.

Math.12.20. Zach.4.19. Mark.12.34. Matth.22.35.

Anſw. Firſt, it was prophecied of our Sauiour, as it is alleaged, Matth.12.20. that hee ſhould not quench the ſmoaking flaxe; that is, that Chriſt ſhould accept and approue the leaſt good things that he found in men, increaſing and not extinguiſhing them: as it is alſo ſaid, Zach.4.10. Who hath deſpiſed the day of ſmall things? ſo Chriſt is ſaid to haue loued this young man, becauſe he ſaw ſome beginning and likelihood of goodneſſe in him, though in the reſt he approued him not. Secondly, the like example we haue, Marke 12.34. where our Sauiour ſaith to a certaine expounder of the Law, that had anſwered him diſcreetly, Thou art not farre from the kingdome of heauen: which was a great commendation of him; and yet the other Euangeliſt Saint Matthew reporting the ſame ſtorie, chap.22.35. ſaith he came to tempt Chriſt; he was not then void of ſome diſſimulation, yet Chriſt commendeth him.

Secondly, Bellarmine ſaith, that a man may loue God with all his heart, and yet is not bound to doe all, which God counſelleth; but, which hee commandeth, Bellarm. lib.2. de Monach. cap.9. in argum.5.

Prou.1.25.26. Dan.4.24.

Contra. This is a moſt groſſe anſwere, and contrarie to the Scripture: for he that loueth God with all his heart, is bound to keepe the Counſels of God, and it is ſinne to tranſgreſſe them: as Prou.1.25.26. You haue deſpiſed all my counſell, and therefore I will laugh at your deſtruction: and Daniel ſaith to Nabuchadnezzar, 4.24. Let my counſell be acceptable vnto thee, breake off thy ſinnes by righteouſnes, &c. Will they ſay now, that the King was not bound to obey this counſell?

Acts 2.44.

*Argum.*2. Acts 2.44. They had all things common. This is not a rule or precept to all Chriſtian men to liue in common, but a life of perfection and counſell followed of the religious, Rhemiſt.

Anſw. This liuing in common among the brethren in the Apoſtles time, is the ſame that ought alwaies to be among all Chriſtians, that no man account that to be his owne, which the neceſſitie of his brother requireth to be beſtowed vpon him; this the rule of charitie requireth, which is one of the great commandements: Fulke in hunc locum.

1.Cor.7.25.

*Argum.*3. 1.Cor.7.25. Concerning Virgins, I haue no commandement of the Lord, but I giue mine aduice. A precept therefore is one thing, a Counſell of perfection another: Bellarm. cap.9.

1.Cor.7.9.40. Math.19.12.

Anſw. Firſt, Paul hath no generall commandement from God to impoſe the yoke of continencie vpon any, becauſe God had left mariage free, and therefore no man is to be barred and kept from it: But the Apoſtles particular aduice and ſentence (being moued by the ſpirit of God, verſ.40.) is not only a Counſell, but a commandement, that both they which haue the gift of continencie, ſhould glorifie God by that gift, verſ.7. and they which haue it not, ſhould marrie rather then burne, and ſo diſhonour God, verſ.9. Therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, Let euery man wherein he is called therein abide with God, verſe 24. If a man be called to liue ſingle, he ought to obey his calling, hauing receiued the gift: if a man be called to the married eſtate, he muſt not preſume beyond his ſtrength, to liue vnmaried. Wherefore it is both a Counſell and a precept, to thoſe that haue receiued the gift of ſingle life: for otherwiſe they diſobey Gods calling, which is ſinne. And our Sauiour ſaith, he that is able to receiue it, let him receiue it, Matth.19.12. He that hath the gift, is commanded to vſe it, for in leeſing it he ſinneth. And laſtly, euery man by commandement is bound to the vttermoſt of his power to ſet forth Gods glorie: But God is moſt glorified by the ſingle life of thoſe, which are able to containe, and therefore they ought in dutie ſo to doe.

Hom.16. in 3. cap. Ionæ.

Againe, in that the Apoſtle ſaith he had no commandement of the Lord, his meaning is, that he was not directed in this caſe of virginitie by any ſpeciall precept out of Scripture, otherwiſe then by the counſell of the ſpirit ſpeaking in him: but that the aduice of the Apoſtle is of the ſame nature and authoritie with a precept, it may appeare, for that he ſpeaketh not of himſelfe, but by the ſpirit of God, verſ.40. and he had receiued mercie to be faithfull, verſ.25. Wherefore if it be faithfulnes in the Apoſtle to giue this aduice, it was faithfulnes in them to follow it. Vnleſſe any man will entertaine Origens light conceit, that thinketh S. Paul to haue ſpoken of himſelfe, without warrant from God: as he vntruly ſaith of the Prophets, that they ſpake ſome things of themſelues, as namely, when that came not to paſſe which they prophecied: as that of Ionas 3. that within three daies Niniuie ſhould be deſtroyed: and that of Gad, that ſpake of three daies peſtilence to Dauid, 2.Sam.24. whereas it ceaſed the ſame day. So he ſaith S. Paul ſpeaketh of himſelfe in this place. But he is both there and here deceiued: for the Prophets ſpake as God bid them, who notwithſtanding vpon their repentance ſeemed to change the decree, as when hee ſent the Prophet to tell Hezekiah he ſhould die: But this by the way of Origens error.

Thirdly, as S. Paul ſaith here concerning Virgins hee had no commandement, but gaue aduice; ſo he ſaith of marriage, verſ.6. I ſpeake this by conceſſion, or as giuing aduice, not by commandement: that is, that to auoide fornication a man might marrie: but this is a commandement, as verſ.9. to marrie rather then burne; and yet the Apoſtle calleth it an indulgence, or conceſſion.

Fourthly, verſ.12. the Apoſtle ſaith in the ſame ſenſe, to the remnant I ſpeake, and not the Lord, that is, I giue counſell, hauing no preſcript commandement in the word; that is, that a faithfull man ſhould not leaue his vnbeleeuing wife, if ſhe be content to dwell with him. But this is a commandement, and not to bee tranſgreſſed; as it may thus appeare: firſt, by the manner of ſpeech, being imperatiue, let him not forſake her, verſ.12. Secondly, verſ.15. if ſhe will depart, the man is not in ſubiection: therefore if ſhe will not depart, but abide, the man is in ſubiection, that is, bound to keepe her. Thirdly, verſ.16. The beleeuing man may be an inſtrument to ſaue his vnbeleeuing wife: but we are bound to doe all that may further anothers ſaluation: Ergo, euen this counſell alſo of the Apoſtle is a commandement. And thus hath Bellarmine gained nothing by this place. 1.Cor.12.15. 16.

Here alſo the Doway gloſſe-men doe thus argue for Euangelicall Counſels: becauſe vnder the law there were ſpeciall ſtates not commanded by law, but voluntarily profeſſed, as of the children of the Prophets, the Nazarites, Rechabites, &c. which were exemplar figures of religious orders in the new Teſtament: to this purpoſe the Doway ſtudents, p.936.

Contra. 1. The olde Teſtament cannot bee a rule vnto the new in the ceremoniall obſeruations thereof. 2. Some of thoſe ſpeciall ſtates were commanded to ſome, as the profeſſion of a Nazarite to Samſon, Iudg.13.7. And the Rechabites were enioyned that ſtate of life by their father Ionadab. Ierem. 35.8. 3. The children of the Prophets did not vow chaſtitie, for they were married, 2.King.4.4. wee grant a difference betweene thoſe which they call precepts and counſels: but thus farre, that although in particular the Counſell is not commanded, yet in the generall it is included, that euery man is bound to ſerue God with all his might, in what thing ſo euer he may; as one may haue more ſtrength then another: yet neither the keeping of a precept nor counſell is meretorious.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe truely affirme and according to the Scriptures, that it is impoſſible for any man to performe the law and commandements of God, much leſſe to fulfill more then is commanded: And therefore it is falſe, that beſide the precepts of Chriſt there are Counſels of perfection, which are at a mans choyce to doe or not to doe: for whatſoeuer is to the glorie of God, wee are bound to doe. We acknowledge then no ſuch euangelicall Counſels, as they imagine, Caluin.

*Argum.*1. Matth.5.48. Our Sauiour ſaith, Yee ſhall be perfect, as your heauenly father is perfect. Therefore all Counſels tending to perfection, are commandements. If there be any thing whereby we may more neerely attaine vnto perfection, that we are bound and commanded to doe: As if a man can better obtaine this perfection of godlineſſe, by liuing ſingle, if he haue the gift, he ought to doe it: for hauing not the gift, and yet preſuming, he burneth in luſt, and ſo is ſet further backe in the courſe of godlineſſe, Caluin. argument. Matth.5.48.

Bellarmine diſtinguiſheth, there are (ſaith he) two kindes of perfection; a leſſe which conſiſteth in the full keeping of the law, which is neceſſarie to ſaluation: ſuch a perfection is commanded, Matth.5. There is a greater perfection, not ſimply neceſſarie to ſaluation, but to obtaine a more excellent degree of glorie, in obſeruing the counſels: and this our Sauiour meaneth, when he biddeth the young man to ſell all he had, to be perfect, Mark.10.21. Bellarm. cap.9. argum.5.

Contra. Firſt, there can be no greater perfection, then in the abſolute fulfilling of the law: for the beſt perfection in this life is in loue, 1.Iohn.4.12.16.17. But loue is the fulfilling of the law, Rom.13.10. Wherefore, that which he calleth the leſſe perfection is the beſt, ſeeing it fulfilleth the law. Secondly, the perfection ſpoken of, Matth.5.48. is the beſt perfection, to be perfect as God is perfect: for what greater perfection can there be, then to be perfect according to the example of God? Thirdly, that thing, to the which Chriſt exhorteth the young man, to ſell all he had to giue to the poore, is not ſo great a point of perfection, as this, whereof Chriſt ſpeaketh, that we ſhould loue our enemies, and ſo be perfect as God is perfect: for a man may giue all his goods to the poore, and yet bee without loue, 1.Cor.13.3. but he cannot loue his enemies, vnleſſe hee haue loue: wherefore this point of perfection ſeemeth to be greater then the other, and ſo Bellarmine hath loſt a good diſtinction. Wherefore, this remaineth a ſtrong place, notwithſtanding all his cauils; that exhortation to perfection conteineth not onely a counſell, but a precept alſo and commandement. 1.Iohn 4.12.16 Rom.13.10. Matth.5.48. 1.Cor.13.3.

*Argum.*2. We are bound to loue God with all our heart, with all our ſoule, with all our ſtrength: Therefore whatſoeuer thing there is, whereby wee may expreſſe the loue of God, wee are bound by commandement to doe it; it is not left to our owne will: for not to loue God more then thou doeſt, if it be in thy power, it is a grieuous ſinne, Martyris argument.

Bellarmine anſwereth thus: Qui deum diligit ſuper omnia, etiamſi eum non tam ardenter amet, quam ferre poſſet, vel non faciat pro eo omnia, quæ poſſet; ille habet Deum pro ſummo bono, cap.13. Hee that loueth God aboue all things, although he loue him not ſo entirely, as perhaps hee may, neither doth all things for his ſake that lie in his power: yet for all this, he eſteemeth of God as his chiefe good, &c. I pray you ſee, what contradictorie ſpeeches theſe bee: The Ieſuite ſaith, a man may loue God perfectly and aboue all, and yet not loue him ſo much as hee is able, that is, imperfectly: ſo a man, by his Monkiſh diuinitie, may loue God aboue all, and yet not loue him aboue all: for if he did, he would refuſe to doe nothing for Gods loue that is in his power.

Luk. 17.10. Argum. 3. Luk. 17.10. When you haue done all thoſe things which are commanded you, ſay, We are vnprofitable ſeruants, and did nothing but that which was our dutie to doe: Ergo, wee are bound to doe all things that are to be done, and we cannot doe that which we ought, much leſſe more then we ought to doe, Martyris argument.

Bellarmine anſwereth: Firſt, Chriſt ſaith, when you haue done all which I commanded you, not which I counſelled you.

Anſw. As though the argument followeth not ſtrongly: you cannot doe the leſſe, that is, keepe my commandements, therefore you cannot doe the more, that is, ſpeaking now (as the Ieſuite doth) the Counſels of perfection, which are more then the precepts. It is a precept of neceſſitie to diſpenſe our goods to the vſe of the poore; it is a counſell of perfection, as they ſay, to giue all away to the poore: But if a man cannot performe the firſt, that is, keeping his goods to vſe them aright, much leſſe is he able with a reſolute minde to giue them all away.

Secondly, he anſwereth: Chriſt biddeth them to ſay ſo, as ſhewing their humilitie, not that they were indeede vnprofitable ſeruants. A poore ſhift, as though Chriſt enuied the good of his ſeruants, or would obſcure their well-doing, and doth not rather aduance it to the vttermoſt, and make the Matth. 25.34. moſt of the ſeruiceable workes of his children, as we ſee, Matth. 25.34. And Chriſt being a faithfull Prophet, would not ſurely deceiue his Diſciples, and tell them one thing, and himſelfe know and thinke another. Some anſwered in Bernards time to this place, as the Ieſuite now doth: Hoc (inquies) propter humilitatem Chriſtus monuit dicendum eſſe: Chriſt onely would haue vs thus to ſpeake, namely, that we are vnprofitable ſeruants, to ſhew our humilitie. He anſwereth: Planè propter humilitatem, ſed nunquid contra veritatem: You ſay true, for humilitie, but not againſt the veritie, de triplici cuſtod. ſerm. So likewiſe was it decreed, Concil. Milenitan. can. 6. Placuit, quod ait S. Iohannes, ſi dixerimus, quod peccatum non habemus, nos ipſos ſeducimus, &c. quiſquis ſic accipiendum putat, vt dicat propter humanitatem non oportere dici nos non habere peccatum, non quia veritas eſt, anathema ſit: Whereas Saint Iohn ſaith, If wee ſay we haue no ſinne, we deceiue our ſelues, &c. Whoſoeuer thinketh it is ſo to be vnderſtood, that for humanitie ſake it becommeth vs not to ſay that we haue no ſinne, not becauſe the truth is ſo indeede, let him be accurſed, &c. But theſe Frier-like miſts and ſmoake of Locuſts, are not able to dimme the cleere light of this Scripture, which ſheweth, that when wee haue done all we can doe, we come farre ſhort of our dutie.

Argum 4. Bellarmine, the better to perſwade that there are certaine Euangelicall counſels beſide precepts, ſetteth downe certaine differences betweene them, cap. 7. which differences if they ſhall appeare to be none, then precepts and counſels ſhall be all one.

1 His firſt difference is, in reſpect of the matter, precepts (ſaith he) are more eaſily kept; but counſels more hardly and with greater difficultie.

Contra. It is an harder matter to loue our enemies, then for a man to giue all his goods to the poore: and therefore the loue of Chriſt is ſet forth to be the moſt excellent kinde of loue, becauſe he died for Matth. 5.48. his enemies, Rom. 5.8. But the firſt is a precept of perfection, as Bellarmine confeſſeth, Matth. 5.48. the other a counſell of perfection, Matth. 19.21. confeſſed alſo by Bellarmine: Ergo, a precept is more difficult then a counſell.

2 The ſecond difference in reſpect of the ſubiect: a precept is generall, preſcribed to all; a counſell is particular, belonging onely to ſome, Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. They confeſſe that ſingle life appertaineth to counſell, as the Apoſtle ſaith, he giueth coun-
1. Cor. 6.7. ſell concerning virgins, 1. Cor. 7.25. but this is generall, verſ. 7. I would that all men were as I am, that is, ſingle. Againe, to marrie to auoide fornication is an indulgence or counſell, 1. Cor. 7.6. yet generall, verſ. 2. To auoide fornication, let euery man haue his wife: ſo theſe counſels are generall, that euerie man hauing the gift of virginitie ſhould vſe the ſame; and euery one not hauing it, ſhould vſe the remedie.

3 A third difference, a counſell not obſerued deſerueth no puniſhment, as a precept doth, being obſerued it hath a greater reward.

Contra. Firſt, to marrie rather then burne, is an Apoſtolicall indulgence or counſell, 1. Cor. 7.6. but to burne rather in luſt then to marrie, is ſinne, and deſerueth puniſhment: Ergo. Secondly, to feede Matth. 19.21. the poore with all a mans goods is a counſell, Matth. 19.21. but this counſell may be obſerued, and
1. Cor. 13.3. yet no reward follow, 1. Cor. 13.3. If a man giue all to the poore, and haue no loue, it profiteth nothing. Wherefore ſeeing the Ieſuite can make no ſound difference betweene precepts and counſels, we muſt needes conclude that they are all one.

4 Auguſtine, though ſometime he ſeeme to make ſome difference betweene a precept and a counſell: Præceptum eſt, ſaith hee, cui non obedire, peccatum eſt: Conſilium, quo ſi vti nolueris, minus boni adipiſceris, non mali aliquid perpetrabis: de Virginit. cap. 15. A precept is that, which not to obey, is ſinne: A counſell is that, which if thou wilt not follow, thou doeſt not commit any euill, yet thou haſt the leſſe good, &c. Though he ſeeme in words, I ſay, to make difference, yet his meaning is this, That a precept is of things neceſſarie, as to follow vertue, to eſchue vice: A counſell is of things indifferent, as to vſe or not to vſe, as to eate or not to eate fleſh. But yet the occaſion may ſo ſerue, that euen this counſell is neceſſary: for we ought not to eate fleſh to offend our brother: Multa facienda ſunt non iubente lege, ſed libera charitate: Many things are to be done (ſaith hee) not by force of any law, but by the rule of charitie: that is, we haue no particular law, but the generall rule of charitie. A counſell then is ſeene in things indifferent, which are alwaies lawfull, but not alway expedient: and it is nothing elſe but a particular application of the generall rule of charity: Charitie wiſheth that nothing ſhould be done to offend our brethren. 1. Cor. 10. 32. The Scripture likewiſe giueth liberty to eate 1.Cor.10.32. fleſh, there is no generall precept, or prohibition: yet the Apoſtle giueth counſell, that is, according to the rule of charitie ſaith, that although all things are cleane, Malum tamen eſt homine, qui per offenſionem manducat: yet it is euill to the man that eateth with offence, Rom. 14. 20. Heere we ſee the tranſgreſſion of an Apoſtolicall counſell is ſinne. And though we bee not bound by any particular Rom.14.20. precept, at this time or that to abſtaine from fleſh, yet, quæ facienda ſunt libera charitate, the things that are to be done in the duetie of loue, doe as well bind vs, as if we had a direct commandement: for loue is the fulfilling of the commandements, yea it is one of the great commandements to loue one another. Yet the counſell or liberty concerning indifferent things, remaineth in it owne nature free ſtill: as the Apoſtle counſelleth to eate, not asking any queſtion: in ſuch a caſe it is neither euill not to eate, nor good to eate; but if any man be preſent that may take offence by our eating, then is it euill to eate. So Auguſtine concludeth: Multa mihi videntur licere & non expedire, quæ per iuſtitiam, quæ coram Deo eſt, permittuntur, ſed propter offenſionem hominum vitanda ſunt: Many things are lawfull, but not expedient becauſe of the offence of our brethren leſt therby they ſhould be hindred from ſaluation, de Adulter. coniug. lib. 1. cap. 14. 17. Thus we ſee Auguſtine doth nothing fauor the popiſh diſtinction of precepts & counſels: for by his ſentence, euen counſels, that is, the liberty and freedome of things indifferent, are reſtrained, and made neceſſary in the externall vſe, by the rule of Charitie.

That precepts, and counſels or monitions are confounded, and both taken for one, their owne Canons doe teſtifie, decret. 2. cauſ. 28. qu. 1. c. 9. Quæ iubet Dominus, non eſt indignum, ſi eadem monet Apoſtolus: That which the Lord commandeth, it is not vnfit, if the Apoſtle doe moniſh the ſame. Sext. decret. lib. 5. tit. 12. c. 5. Nonnulla conſilia ſub verbo præcepti: Many counſels are contained vnder the word precept. Clement. in lib. 5. tit. 11. c. 1. Nichol. 4. there it is determined, That the rules of Francis giuen to his diſciples that they ſhould goe barefoot, and not ride but in caſe of neceſſity and ſuch like, are precepts: which notwithſtanding according to their definition are but counſels.

This truth the holy Martyrs haue ſealed: Iohn Huſſe, There are ſo many Counſels and determinations of God in the Goſpell, as there be lawfull and honeſt things ioyned with precepts and commandements of God, binding vs thereto vnder paine of deadly ſinne: for euery ſuch thing doth the Lord command vs to fulfill in time and place, &c. Fox. pag. 617. col. 1. lin. 21.

Claudius Monerius French Martyr; No man can vow to God ſo much, but the law requireth Pag.567.c.2. l.9. much more then he can vow. This holy Martyr died in this confeſſion, and was burned at Lyons, anno 1551. ex Iohanne Criſpin. lib. tert. Thus then it appeareth, that before the Lord, there is no difference betweene his counſels and commandements, but that we are bound to keepe them both.

Yet that we ſpeake more diſtinctly hereof, we doe not take away all difference betweene precepts, and counſels, neither yet doe we denie a difference of reward for the ſame.

The firſt we grant, allowing a threefold difference. 1. In the matter & ſubiect: precepts are of things neceſſary & in their nature good or euill, as are the ten moral commandements: counſels are in things indifferent in themſelues, as in taking, or not taking a wife, in abſtinence frō fleſh: as Hierome ad Demetriad. prohibentur mala, præcipiūtur bona, permittuntur media, ſuadētur perfecta: euill things are forbidden, good things are cōmanded, indifferent things are permitted, & perfect things perſwaded &c.

2. They differ in reſpect of the manner: precepts are generall for all perſons, times and places: counſels are applied to particular perſons, times and occaſions: as to abſtaine from marriage, for ſuch as haue the gift, and are thereunto called.

3. They are to be conſidered in reſpect of the commander; and ſo in regard of Gods iuſtice, who requireth of vs to be perfect as he is perfect, there is no difference betweene precepts and counſels, but euery one is commanded to enter into that profeſſion of life, which is neereſt to perfection: as Hierome in the ſame place ſaith: in cauſa iuſtitiæ omnes vnum debemus, virgo, vidua, nupta: in the cauſe of iuſtice, wee all owe the ſame dutie, the Virgine, widdow, and married, but in regard of Gods mercifull indulgence, which beareth with our infirmities, ſome are called counſels; which they follow which moſt ſtriue againſt their infirmities; as true virginitie is more commendable in thoſe which haue the gift, than in them which vſe the remedie becauſe of their infirmitie: for the ſecond point, we alſo grant a difference of reward, but with a threefold limitation. 1. That cæteris parib. other things being alike, no doubt he ſhall haue a greater reward which obeyeth the counſels, as Marie had choſen a better part, in leauing all worldly matters to heare Chriſt then her ſiſter Martha: but ſimply it is not a greater degree of perfection: as Abraham no doubt pleaſed God better in his rich married eſtate then many doe in their ſingle life and pouertie: ſuch therefore muſt compare themſelues with themſelues, that they pleaſe God better, in the ſtricter kinde of life, if they haue that gift, then they ſhould doe otherwiſe, but that is not alwaies true, if they compare themſelues with others.

2. Where ſuch Counſels are embraced, the neceſſarie precepts muſt not be neglected; hee which obſerueth a precept, and proceedeth further to ſuch a counſell, as we ſpeake of, is to be preferred before one, that walketh in the precept onely: but obedience to a Counſell onely, is not to be preferred before the obſeruation of a precept: as a Miniſter, which hath the gift of ſingle life, and preacheth not, is not therefore better, then one that preacheth and is married: ſo Hierome in the ſame place, non a lege ſoluitur, qui ſupra legem facere proponit, Hee is not freed from the law, who propoſeth ſomewhat to himſelfe aboue the law: Nullus magis illicita vitare debet, quam qui reſpuit quæ licebant: No man ought more to ſhunne things vnlawfull, then he who refuſeth things lawfull.

Iſay 64.6. 3 Here muſt be laid aſide all opinion of perfection, & merit, of the one before God, and of the other with men; for neither by the obſeruation of precepts nor counſels, is there any thing merited with God: for all our righteouſnes is as a ſtained clout: neither is a man more perfect then another, becauſe he is ſingle or otherwiſe abſtemious: for his brother may exceede him in other more excellent graces.

We therfore both refuſe the error of the Apoſtolici, which made the obſeruation of ſuch Counſels neceſſarie, affirming, that none could be ſaued, that liued not ſingle and in pouertie as the Apoſtles did. Epiphan. hæreſ.61. as alſo the fancie of Vigilantius & Iouinian, that gaue no preeminence at all to marriage and virginitie, of the one before the other: wee alſo reiect the Popiſh diſtinction, which make Counſels a ſtate of greater perfection and more meritorious: But we hold ſuch a difference, as is before expreſſed.

Cenſur. Oriental. Eccleſ. c.20. And for further euidence herein. 1. Ieremie, Patriarke of Conſtantinople, ſpeaking of monaſticall profeſſion, thus writeth, Cum omnia opera bona, vt dicitis, complectimini, cum hæc ipſa eius generis ſint, &c. Seeing yee ſay, you embrace all good works, of the which kind theſe are, yee ought alſo to be ſtudious of theſe, &c. And in the ſame place he alleageth Baſile, who thus writeh: Aſcetica vita vnum ſolum ſcopum habet, ſalutem animæ, &c. This contemplatiue life hath only one ſcope, the ſaluation of the ſoule: Omniaq; ea tanquam Dei mandata, &c. ſeruare, &c. and to obſerue all things, which may helpe thereunto as the commandements of God, &c. Loe here the ſingle life of monaſticall perſons, is counted among Gods commandements: it is then a commandement, not a counſell onely.

De humanitat. verb. 2 Of the Ægiptian and South Church, Athanaſius ſaith directly: Saluator noſter tantum valuit in huiuſmodi preceptis, &c. Our Sauiour did ſo much preuaile in theſe precepts, that euen children did profeſſe virginitie, which is aboue the law, &c. this counſell of virginitie he calleth a precept.

Harm. ſect.17. p.535. Sect.18. p.562. 3 Confeſſ. of Saxonie, artic. 20. Hypocrites doe imagine, that ſuch workes are a kinde of perfection, as Monkes do preferre their vowes full of vanitie before the Ciuill and houſholders life, &c. Auſpurg. artic. 5. The Monkes haue taught, that their life is a ſtate of perfection, becauſe they did obſerue not onely the commandements, but alſo the Counſels: this error is contrarie to the Goſpell, becauſe they haue feigned, that they cannot onely ſatiſfie the commandements, but doe ſomewhat more: whereupon aroſe that horrible error of the workes of ſupererogation, &c.

Aquin. Opuſcul. 19. 4 Gulielmus de S. Amore, as he is cited by Aquinas: thus expoundeth that precept of our Sauiour to the young man, If thou wilt be perfect ſell all: Ibi mandatam nobis eſſe paupertatem habitualem, &c. that there an habitual pouertie is commanded, not that we ſhould actually waſte away all, which we haue, but when the confeſſion of the name of God, and the glory of Chriſt ſo requireth, Tunc omnia deſerere parati ſimus, Then we ſhould be readie to leaue all, &c. This place, which before is alleaged by the Romaniſts to proue the perfection of counſels, is here expounded to be a generall precept.

Lib.2. de Monach. c.2. Yea, Bellarmine himſelfe determineth, that the ſtate of Biſhops is more perfect, then of Monks: for theirs is a ſtate perfectionis adeptæ, of perfection attained vnto; the other acquirendæ, of perfection to be attained vnto. So then Biſhops not following theſe counſels, of forſaking the world, & of perpetuall abſtinence are more perfect then Monks, that profeſſe both: thoſe then are not counſels of perfection.

THE THIRD QVESTION, CONCERNING vowes in generall.

THis queſtion hath three parts: firſt, whether it be lawfull for Chriſtians to make vowes. Secondly, in what things lawfull vowes conſiſt. Thirdly, whether voluntarie vowes be any part of the worſhip and ſeruice of God.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER VOWES PERtained onely to the olde law, and are not now permitted vnto Chriſtians.

The Papiſts.

91. Error. THey hold it as lawfull, and as free a thing for Chriſtians to binde themſelues by vowes vnto God, as it was vſed and practiſed of the Iewes in the time of the law.

Iſay 19.21. verſ.19.18. Argum. 1. Iſai. 19.21. They ſhall know the Lord in that day, and doe ſacriſice and oblation, and vow vowes vnto God and performe them. This prophecie is concerning Chriſtians, which ſhould in the time of the Goſpell make vowes vnto God, Bellarm. cap.17.

Anſwere. The Prophet doth, by the externall ſeruice of God vſed in the Church at that time, ſet forth the ſpirituall worſhip of God in the Church of Chriſt: for Iewiſh vowes ſhall be no more then in force, then their ſacrifices and oblations. Alſo verſ. 19. the Prophet ſaith, that an Altar ſhall be ſet vp in Egypt: and verſ.18. They ſhall ſpeake the language of Canaan: But theſe things were not literally, but myſtically performed, neither is it neceſſarie the other ſhould.

Argum.2. Pſalme 76. 11. Vowe vnto God and performe: Ergo, vowes now are lawfull, Bellarm. ibid. Pſalm.76.12.

Anſwer. It appeareth by the text, that it was a commandement vnto the Iewes, and for that time: for it followeth, All ye that are round about him: that is, the Leuites & Prieſts that dwelt round about the temple. And bring preſents to him that ought to be feared. But now Chriſtians bring no ſuch externall preſents and gifts, therefore it cannot be properly vnderſtood of them. This appeareth alſo by the beginning of the Pſalme, that this charge appertained to the Iewes: as verſ.1. God is knowne in Iudea, and verſ.2. in Salem is his tabernacle, &c. Therefore while the tabernacle continued in Salem, and God was worſhipped onely in Iudea, ſo long vowes were in force.

Argum.3. Vowes did not take beginning from Moſes, for Iacob vowed, Geneſ.28. therefore neither are they to ceaſe with *Moſes. Bellarm.cap.*17.

Contra. Firſt, the Argument followeth not, for there were altars and ſacrifices before the law, yet they will not ſay, that they muſt remaine ſtill after the law of ceremonies determined. Secondly, ſuch a vow, as Iacob made, is lawfull for Chriſtians to make ſtill; for he voweth, that the Lord ſhall be his God: the vow then of obedience, and of more ſtrict ſeruing of God is commendable in Chriſtians. And as for the vow of tithes, Iacob maketh it, not as it were in it ſelfe a principall ſeruice of God, but as a ſigne of the worſhip of God and obedience, which he vowed.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe not condemne all vowes, neither denie, but that a Chriſtian in ſome caſes may vow, as preſently it followeth to bee ſhewed: but Iewiſh vowes are vtterly vnlawfull; ſuch as the vowes of the Nazarites were, Numb.6. as to abſtaine from wine and ſtrong drinke, not to ſhaue their haire, and ſuch like: if we place religion in ſuch vowes.

Argum.1. Their vowes were ceremonious, and conſiſted in externall rites, which were ſhadowes and ſignifications of ſpirituall things: as not to cut their haire, not to touch any dead thing, to abſtaine from wine and ſtrong drinke. But all ſhadowes are now gone and aboliſhed: and ſuch externall vſages are vnprofitable, as were thoſe precepts of the falſe Apoſtles, Touch not, taſte not, handle not: which all periſh with the vſing, and are the commandements of men, as S. Paul ſaith, Coloſſ.2. 21.22. Such precepts notwithſtanding, Monkes and Friers at this day doe binde themſelues vnto; for it is not lawfull for them to touch ſiluer, nor to taſte fleſh, according to the ſtrict and ſuperſtitious rules of their patrones. The Apoſtles reaſon ſtandeth thus, religion conſiſteth not in any thing, that periſheth with the vſe: but vowes not to taſte, not to touch, not to handle, periſh in the vſe: Ergo, there is no religion in ſuch vowes. Coloſſ.2.21.22.

Argum.2. It was ordained in Moſes law, Leuit.27.26. that no man ſhould vow vnto the Lord the firſt-borne, for it was the Lords alreadie. From whence this argument may be drawne, That which is the Lords alreadie, cannot be vowed vnto him: but we are Chriſts, 1. Cor. 3. 23. and all that wee haue, verſ.21. Wherefore it is a ſuperfluous thing to vow any thing, which we haue, as therein placing the ſeruice of God; ſeeing alreadie we are deuoted to Gods ſeruice. If it be here obiected, that by the ſame reaſon neither was it lawfull for the Iewes to offer any thing at all, becauſe the earth is the Lords, and all things therein, Pſalm.24. they ſhould offer vnto God of his owne: I anſwere, that it is true all the earth was the Lords in right of the creation; but the firſt-borne were due in a ſecond right of their deliuerance and redemption from Egypt: and ſo we in reſpect of our ſpirituall deliuerance are bound to ſerue God all the daies of our life, Luke.1.74. And therefore it is no more in our power to vow or be vowed vnto God, then it was lawfull for the Iewes to dedicate their firſt-borne. Leuit.27.26. 1.Cor.3.23. Pſal.24.1. Luk.1.74.

Argum.3. Saint Paul ſaith, He that is circumciſed is bound to keepe the whole law, Galat.5.3. He that keepeth any one ceremonie of the law, doth make himſelfe a ſeruant to the whole law: for if after the profeſſion of the Nazarites, they will vow not to drinke wine, not to ſhaue their heads, hereby the better to pleaſe God; why are they not alſo purified, and bring an offering according to the law, as Paul did, who becauſe of the infirmitie of the Iewes, was agreed with foure other men which had a vow, to be purified according to the law? But this S. Paul did being amongſt the Iewes, who cried out againſt him as a breaker of the law, leaſt he ſhould be ſcandalous vnto them. Hence alſo we reaſon thus; that which S. Paul did for that time to auoide offence, namely, to be purified with them that had a vow, is not now lawfull for the people of God to doe, as Act.21.25. We haue determined concerning the Gentiles, that they obſerue no ſuch thing: Ergo, it is not lawfull now after the manner of the Iewes to make a vow. Galat.5.3. Act.21.25.

Auguſtine thus notably writeth concerning this matter: Sicut defuncta corpora neceſſariorum officijs deducenda erant quodammodo ad ſepulchrum, non deſerenda continuo, vel ſicut canibus proijcienda: The ceremonies of the law (ſaith hee) were not preſently to be caſt off, but as dead bodies muſt bee brought to the graue with ſome ſeemely pompe of their friends, and not to bee caſt vnto dogges, &c. Thus he ſaith, that in the Apoſtles time all Iewiſh ceremonies were not in act aboliſhed, though they were alreadie as dead carkaſſes, that is, by right depriued of life: yet they required ſome ſpace to bee honourably laide downe, and as it were buried. But whoſoeuer would now goe about to renew the Epiſt.19. Hieronymo.

Ibid. Iewiſh ceremonies againe (ſaith he) Tanquam ſepultos cineres eruens, non erit pius deductor vel baiulus corporis, ſed impius ſepulturæ violator: Hee ſhould as it were rake in dead mens aſhes, and not bee a ſeemely bringer of the bodie to the ground, but a wicked violator of Chriſtian buriall: Euen ſo Auguſtine maketh it as wicked a part, to bring in vſe any Iewiſh rites, as to pull one, honeſtly buried, out of his graue.

There is a rule in the Ciuill law, Cod. lib. 7. tit. 6. leg. 1. Iuſtinian. Abſurdum eſt, ipſa origine vel ſublata, eius imaginem relinqui: It is abſurd, the originall being remoued, the image or reſemblance to remaine ſtill, &c. According to this rule, ſeeing that the Iewiſh ceremonies are ceaſed, it is not fit that Iudaicall vowes ſhould haue any place in the Church.

The Canon law alſo ſaith, Vmbra legis euanuit, illuxit veritas Euangelij: The ſhadow of the law is vaniſhed, and the light of the Goſpell hath ſhined, decr. Greg. lib. 3. tit. 47. c. 1. Vpon which ground Innocentius 3. decreeth, the law of Moſes, concerning the purifying of women, not to be in force: of the which nature alſo is the law of vowes.

To this agreeth the ordinarie gloſſe, de 4. Concil. Primitiua Eccleſia. Modus colendi Deum per externos ritus & ceremonias legis, quia hæ fuerunt vmbra Chriſti tum venturi & myſteriorum eius, ideo adueniente veritate Euangelica illicita facta ſunt, & euanuerunt: The manner of worſhipping God by externall rites and ceremonies of the law, becauſe theſe were a ſhadow of Chriſt to come and of his myſteries, the truth of the Goſpell being come are made vnlawfull, and are vaniſhed away, &c. But vowes are a part of the externall and ceremonious worſhip of God. Ergo.

Thus we ſee that theſe Monaſticall vowes haue miſliked ſome of their owne writers.

THE SECOND PART, WHAT THINGS MAY lawfully be vowed by Chriſtians, and whether baptiſme be properly a vow.

The Papiſts.

92. Error. They hold that the proper vowes of Chriſtians are voluntarie, not of ſuch things which Chriſtians are bound in dutie to doe, but of ſuch as they may leaue vndone, if they will, ſuch as are their Popiſh vowes of continencie, and voluntarie or rather wilfull pouertie.

Deut. 23. 21. Argum. 1. Deuteron. 23. When thou ſhalt vow a vow vnto God, thou ſhalt not be ſlacke to pay it; it ſhould be ſinne vnto thee; but when thou abſtaineſt from vowing, it ſhall bee no ſinne vnto thee. By this the Ieſuite prooueth, that the vowes of Chriſtians are voluntarie, and not of neceſſarie duties, for it were ſinne to leaue any thing vndone, that we are in dutie bound vnto, cap. 19. And hereupon hee inferreth, that the promiſe made in baptiſme is no vow, becauſe it is neceſſarie.

Anſw. Firſt, we denie not but that the Iewes had voluntary vowes, and might binde themſelues by vow to performe many things, which being not vowed, it was no ſinne to leaue vndone: As the Nazarites vowes concerning abſtinence from wine and ſtrong drinke; which things other might lawfully vſe without ſinne, if they were not profeſſed Nazarites. But theſe ceremoniall lawes doe nothing appertaine to Chriſtians.

The ſame anſwere may ſerue to the like obiection made out of the 27 of Leuiticus, The firſt borne which pertaine to the Lord, no man may ſanctifie, &c. they are the Lords: whence is inferred, that thoſe things wherein wee are alreadie bound, are not properly matter of vow, &c. For the Iſraelites had two kinde of vowes, ſome were legall and ceremoniall, which were of ſuch things as otherwiſe were not due: ſome were morall, whereby they did binde themſelues to the ſeruice of God, as Deut. 26.17. Thou haſt ſet vp the Lord this day to be thy God, &c. and the Lord hath ſet thee vp this day to be a precious people to himſelfe. And of this kinde is the vow of baptiſme.

Doway Bible annot. vpon that place.

Secondly, it may alſo be vnderſtood of neceſſarie vowes, which wee are bound vnto of dutie, and then the ſenſe is this: If you abſtaine from vowing ye ſinne not, that is, not ſo hainouſly as after the vow made; as Pagans and Infidels do ſinne in tranſgreſſing Gods law: but a Chriſtian ſinneth more after publike profeſſion and promiſe made of obedience vnto Gods commandements.

Thus our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith of the Iewes: If I had not come, and ſpoken vnto them, they ſhould haue had no ſinne, Ioh. 15. verſ. 21. that is, in compariſon; their ſinne of ignorance ſhould haue been none in reſpect of their ſinne, which they haue now: ſo his ſinne, that bindeth not himſelfe to the obedience of Gods commandements, is not like to his ſinne, that hath bound himſelfe, and yet tranſgreſſeth: but I rather inſiſt vpon the former anſwere.

Argum.2. The Ieſuite would thus alſo proue the promiſe made in baptiſme to be no vow. The vowes of children vttered by their parents, are not ratified but by them, in whoſe name they were made, when they come to yeeres of diſcretion: but the promiſe made in baptiſme doth binde children, whether they will or not: Ergo, it is no vow.

Anſw. Firſt, if this reaſon proue any thing, it concerneth onely the baptiſme of infants, ſo that the promiſe made in the baptiſme of thoſe, which are adulti, alreadie come to yeeres of diſcretion, ſhall be a vow, whatſoeuer Bellarmine ſaith to the contrary; for they euen when they are baptized are able to giue conſent vnto the vow and promiſe then and there made. Secondly, it is vntrue, that the vowes of the parents made in the name of their children, doe not abſolutely binde: for vnder the law euen in ceremonial vowes vttered by the parents, the children were bound: as 1. Sam. 1.11. Anna voweth to God, that a raſor ſhall not come vpon her ſonnes head; which vow was accordingly kept in her ſonne: Ierem. 35.6. Ionadab enioyned his ſonnes, that neither they nor their ſeede for euer, ſhould drinke any wine, or ſtrong drinke; and they obeyed without any gainſaying or reſiſtance. Thirdly, concerning neceſſarie duties, the children are bound to keepe their parents vowes and couenant made with God: as Ioſua made a promiſe for himſelfe and his, I and my houſe will ſerue the Lord, Ioſua 24.15. And if in ciuill matters the parents may binde their children abſolutely to the couenant, which they make, as Ionathan and Dauid made a couenant for them and their ſeede, 1. Samuel 20.42. much more this ſpirituall couenant bindeth, being grounded vpon the ordinance and commandement of God: notwithſtanding all that hath been ſaid, the promiſe made in baptiſme ſhall be a vow ſtill.

Ierem.35.6.
1.Sam.20.42.

Argum.3. It is both vnprofitable and ſuperfluous for a man to vow to doe that, to the which he is bound alreadie; but in baptiſme we promiſe obedience vnto God, which we are bound to doe by the law: Ergo, it is ſuperfluous to ſeeke to tie our ſelues with new bonds, and conſequently it ſhould be a ſuperfluous vow: Bellarm. cap. 19. argum. 5.

Anſw. Firſt, if this reaſon proue any thing, it ſeemeth to conclude, that it is ſuperfluous for any promiſe to be made in baptiſme, as well as a vow, ſeeing wee are alreadie bound to ſerue God by the law of Creation. Secondly, neither is it ſuperfluous to vow, more ſtrictly to doe that, which wee are bound to doe; for a double bond bindeth more ſtrongly then one, and as the wiſe man ſaith, a threefold cord cannot be broken, Eccleſiaſt. 4. So Iacob vowed that the Lord ſhould be his God, Gen. 28. which notwithſtanding was couenanted before in his circumciſion. Thirdly, there is a common bond, which bindeth all men, namely the law of Creation; but as God hath his peculiar people, ſo is there a peculiar bond to tie them vnto God, namely, their deliuerance by Chriſt, which is profeſſed in baptiſme: as before the commandements, God doth moue his people to obedience, not becauſe he created them, but for that he brought them out of the houſe of bondage. Fourthly, if two bonds are ſuperfluous, wherefore then doth the Lord by two immutable things, his word and his oath confirme his promiſes to vs, Hebr. 6.18. let him ſay alſo that one of them is ſuperfluous.

The Proteſtants.

WEE hold that to vow is not a thing ſimply forbidden Chriſtians: but our vowes are limited and reſtrained: for they are either ſuch, as directly or immediatly are referred to the worſhip of God, whereby wee binde our ſelues more ſtraitly to ſerue him: and ſuch vowes are only of ſuch things as are commanded, and neceſſarily to be done: and in this ſenſe there is but one common vow of all Chriſtians, and that is our ſolemne promiſe in baptiſme, which the Papiſts denie properly to be a vow, *Bellarm.cap.*19. There is another kind of vowes, that directly concerneth not the worſhip of God, which may be of things not commanded, of the which we will intreate in the next ſection. Now we are to proue, that baptiſme is the only proper vow of Chriſtians, which directly toucheth the ſeruice and worſhip of God.

Galath.5.3.

*Argum.*1. Circumciſion was a generall vow of the Iewes, for thereby they bound themſelues to keepe the whole law, Galath.5.3. Ergo, Baptiſme is the vow of Chriſtians, which commeth in the place of circumciſion. And againe, it appeareth by this, that becauſe Chriſtians tranſgreſſing, do deſerue greater puniſhment, then Iewes or Gentiles, that they are more ſtreightly obliged and bound by their couenant vnto God then the other: and not only, as the Ieſuite ſaith, becauſe they haue taſted more of the goodneſſe of God, and ſo are more vnthankfull; for there are two parts of the couenant betweene God and vs: The Lord ſaith, Thou art my people, and ſo inricheth them with knowledge, and euery good thing: The people ſay, Thou art my God, Hoſh.2.23. And thus as the Lord doth couenant with them, ſo they doe binde themſelues vnto God: The breach of which couenant, is that which ſtirreth vp principally the anger of God againſt vs.

Rom.6.13.

*Argum.*2. A vow is that, whereby any thing is giuen vnto God; as Anna, 1.Sam.1.11. gaue her ſonne vnto God, which the Scripture calleth a vow: but in baptiſme wee are giuen vnto God: Rom.6.13. Giue your ſelues vnto God, ſeeing you are aliue from the dead: namely, by the power of Chriſts reſurrection repreſented in baptiſme: as the Apoſtle ſheweth, verſ.4. Ergo, in baptiſme wee doe vow our ſelues vnto God.

Judg.11.36.
Nehem.10.9.

*Argum.*3. An oath bindeth as well as a vow, if not more, before God; (this Bellarmine confeſſeth, *cap.*16. *argum.*3.) for a vow is but a ſolemne promiſe, as Iephtah his vow is called a promiſe, Iudg.11.36. but an oath is more then a promiſe: but by oath we may binde our ſelues to the performance of thoſe things, which notwithſtanding are neceſſarily enioyned vs, as Pſal.119.106. I haue ſworne to keepe thy righteous iudgements: and Nehem.10.9. the people binde themſelues by an oath to obſerue Gods commandements: Ergo, alſo theſe things are incident to our vowes. Auguſtine alſo vpon the 75. Pſalme writeth thus: Vouete & reddite Domino Deo veſtro omnes communiter: Quid debemus vouere? credere in illum, ſperare ab illo vitam æternam, bene viuere, ſecundùm communem modum: Make your vowes, and pay them vnto God generally altogether; What muſt wee vow? to beleeue in him, to hope for eternall life, to liue honeſtly, not to ſteale, not to commit adulterie, &c. Theſe then are the common and generall duties of Chriſtians: no other then we promiſed and vowed in baptiſme.

*Concil. Colonienſ. part.*7. It was decreed, that the Godfathers ſhould be growne in yeeres, not children: Ne infans infantem offerret aut ſponſorem pro alio ſe Deo conſtitueret, qui quod promittit, non intelligat: Leſt that one childe ſhould offer or preſent another, or vndertake for another before God, not vnderſtanding what he promiſeth, &c. From hence we reaſon thus: A vow is nothing elſe, but religioſa promiſſio Deo facta, a religious promiſe made vnto God, as Bellarmine himſelfe defineth it, *cap.*14. But in baptiſme there is religioſa promiſſio & ſponſio, a religious promiſe and trothgiuing made vnto God, as this Councell ſheweth: Ergo.

Their owne Authors alſo are againſt them, that the things commanded of God may properly bee vowed: as *Dominicus a Soto, lib.7. de iuſtitia qu.*1. *art.*3. *Alphonſus a caſtro, lib.*1. *de leg. pœnal. cap.*10. The Maſter alſo of the Sentences confeſſeth, that the common vow of Chriſtians is made in baptiſme, namely to renounce the diuell: and in the ſame place, he thus expoundeth that place 1.Tim.5. They haue broken their firſt faith; which Bellarmine expoundeth of vowes, *cap.*17. *argum.*3. that is, ſaith he, votum, vel fidem, quam in baptiſmo profeſſi ſunt; Their vow or faith, which they profeſſed in baptiſme.

1.Tim.5.12.

That vowes may be of neceſſarie duties, ſuch as we promiſed in baptiſme, we want not teſtimonie from other Churches.

Cenſur. Oriental. Eccl. c.7.

1. Gregorie Nyſſenus ſaith, Eſt ieiunij & abſtinentiæ genus, &c. There is a kinde of faſting and abſtinence, which is ſeparate from externall or bodily matter, and concerneth only the minde, & ea re perficitur, vt a vitijs temperemus; and conſiſteth in abſtaining from vices. Ieremie Patriarke of Conſtantinople ſaith, that Monachatus nihil aliud eſt, quam veræ pœnitentiæ profeſſio: Monkerie is nothing elſe but a profeſſion of true repentance: but thoſe things, to abſtaine from ſinne, and to practiſe repentance, are vowed and promiſed in baptiſme.

2. Tertullian ſaith, ſpeaking againſt thoſe which tooke a libertie to ſinne before they were baptized: Then let none keepe his hands from ſtealing, &c. Si nemo domino deditus delinquere deſinet, niſi intinctione alligatus: If no man dedicated to God muſt leaue off to ſinne, but he that is bound by his waſhing, &c. Baptiſme then bindeth. Athanaſius of Alexandria: Non qui a cibis ieiunat ſolummodo probe ſe geſſit, ſed qui abſtinet ab omni opere malo: Not he only who faſteth from meate, hath done well, but he which abſtaineth from euery euill worke. Zago Zabo an Aethiopike Biſhop, ſaith, Cum ſumus omnes filij baptiſmi, &c. Seeing wee are all the children of baptiſme, and agree in faith, there is no cauſe why we ſhould contend about ceremonies. Baptiſme bindeth to obedience vnto God, as children are bound to their parents.

But what elſe are thoſe vowes then of obedience to Gods commandements, which were vowed in baptiſme. Ex vita Hierom. tom. 1.

THE THIRD PART, CONCERNING VOLVNTARIE VOWES, whether they be any part of the worſhip of God.

The Papiſts.

ALL voluntarie vowes (ſay they) made by Chriſtians, though not commanded of God, as not to eate fleſh, not to drinke ſtrong drinke, or to liue vnmaried; doe concerne the worſhip of God, and thereby men are made more acceptable vnto him, Bellarm. cap. 26. 93. Error.

Argum. 1. Iacob vowed to pay tithes, Gen. 28. Dauid to build a Temple vnto God, Pſal. 132. 2. But neither of theſe two were commanded them, and yet they were properly referred to the ſeruice of God: Bellarm. cap. 26. The ſame places alſo are vrged in the Doway Bible lately ſet forth. Annot. in Leuit. 26. verſ. 18.

Anſw. Firſt, we denie not, as we haue ſaid, but that in the law and before, there might be ſuch voluntarie vowes: yet it followeth not, that there ſhould bee any ſuch now. Secondly, both thoſe duties were neceſſarie, and commanded in generall, though not in particular. As firſt, Iacob profeſſeth, that the Lord ſhould be his God, verſ. 21. No man can denie, but this was neceſſarie, and a commandement. Then ſeeing the Lord is his God, it is alſo neceſſarie that hee ſhould acknowledge him by ſome externall worſhip, as by appointing the Lord an houſe in that place, and bringing oblations vnto his altars: theſe are but particular duties, that doe follow that generall commandement.

Secondly, Dauid did vow that, which hee was bound to doe being King of Iſrael, namely, to haue a care of the Temple of God: for thus he ſaith to Nathan the Prophet, I dwell in an houſe of Cedar trees; but the Arke of God remaineth within the curtaines, 2. Sam. 7. 2. This belonged to the King of dutie, as it was generally commanded all Iſrael, Hagg. 1. 4. but that Dauid was diſcharged of this care, by the eſpeciall warrant of God by the Prophet. 2. Sam. 7. 2. Hagg. 1. 4.

Thirdly, neither ſimply, to builde a Temple is a part of religious worſhip: for Herod the great built the Temple of Ieruſalem in moſt glorious manner: but, as it is referred to the true worſhip of God, it is gratefull and acceptable.

Argum. 2. Heb. 13. 16. To doe good and to diſtribute forget not, for with ſuch ſacrifices God is pleaſed. Intelligitur (ſaith Bellarmine) de eleemoſyna non præcepta: which is vnderſtood of almes not commanded: And if God be pleaſed with euery vertuous act, yea done without a vow, in things not commanded; much more where a vow is.

Anſ. Firſt, it is a moſt groſſe and abſurd ſaying, that there can be any vertuous act not commanded in Scripture: the Apoſtle ſpeaketh contrarie, 2. Tim. 3. 17. that the man of God by the Scriptures is made perfect to all good workes: Ergo, all good workes are preſcribed in Scripture. Secondly, it is alſo vntrue, that there are almes-deeds not commanded, ſeeing that in this very place, it is an expreſſe charge and commandement of the Apoſtle, To doe good and to diſtribute. 2. Tim. 3. 17.

Argum. 3. To keepe promiſe or faith giuen vnto God, is properly to ſerue God; a vow is a promiſe made vnto God: Ergo. Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. By a vow or promiſe made vnto God of that which is not lawfull, is no worſhipping of God, but rather a diſhonouring of him, as may appeare in the vow of Iepthe, of the which S. Ambroſe thus writeth: Melius fuit nihil tale promittere, quam promiſſum parricidio ſoluere: It had bin better neuer to haue vowed or promiſed any ſuch thing, then with parricide to performe his promiſe: lib. 1. de offic. c. 50. Then our Doway tranſlators are much deceiued in their gloſſe, that Iepthe ſinned not in performing his vow, (in ſacrificing his daughter, as they ſuppoſe) but rather pacified God thereby: for both the example of Abraham ſheweth the contrarie, whoſe hand God ſtaied from ſacrificing his ſonne, and yet he was commanded by the Lord to doe it: and as well may they ſay, that Herod ſinned not in putting Iohn to death, becauſe he had ſworne to doe it. Annot. in 12. Iudg.

Argum. 4. An oath euen in a thing not commanded, is the worſhip of God, as to ſweare not to drinke wine: and ſo conſequently a vow alſo: Bellarm. ibid. c. 16 argum. 3.

Anſw. The conſequence or dependance of this argument I willingly yeeld vnto, hauing vrged it before againſt the Suite himſelfe (I would ſay Ieſuite;) for an oath and a vow may be well compared together: but an oath, ſuch as the Ieſuite ſpeaketh of, is not acceptable to God: Firſt, becauſe an oath is appointed to make an end of ſtrife betweene men, Heb. 6. 16. not to determine matters betweene God and vs; men ſweare by God, not ſo properly to God. Secondly, neither is it pleaſing to God, to bind thoſe things with an oath abſolutely, which are not in our owne power, as not to drinke wine, ſeeing his infirmitie may cauſe him to drinke it, as Saint Paul counſelled Tim. 1. 5. Heb. 6. 16. 1. Tim. 5. 23.

Thirdly, yet an oath in theſe externall matters, doth not verily or properly belong to the worſhip of God, though in ſome ſort may be referred vnto it, as now followeth to be ſhewed.

The Proteſtants.

WE grant that there are other kinds of vowes then before we ſpake of, which doe not directly concerne the worſhip of God, neither are of things commanded vs, nor yet is God thereby the better pleaſed: but they ſerue only as helpes, to make vs more fit vnto Chriſtian duties: As a man that ſeeth he is by nature giuen to drunkennes, doth vow that he will take no ſtrong drinke, leſt hee ſhould offend that way: Another purpoſeth to faſt, thereby to tame his fleſh, and the more ferIob 31.1. uently to pray; as Iob made a couenant with his eyes not to looke vpon a maide, 31.1. But theſe things of themſelues, by the outward act, are not the more acceptable vnto God, neither is God by eating or not eating, or looking or not looking, the better worſhipped, as theſe things are conſidered in themſelues. Wherefore by the word of God wee condemne all voluntary and ſuperſtitious vowes of men, inuented to ſerue God by, as vowes of chaſtitie, of going in pilgrimage, offering to Images, and ſuch like.

Argum. 1. Saint Paul condemneth all voluntarie worſhip of God which is inuented by man, as vnprofitable, though it haue a ſhew of wiſedome in humbleneſs of minde, and not ſparing the bodie, Coloſſ.2.23. Coloſſ. 2.23. As ſuch are the ordinances of the world in worſhipping of Angels, and in abſtinence, Touch not, taſte not, handle not. But ſuch are all popiſh vowes, a voluntarie ſeruice of God, euen in the ſame things which the Apoſtle taketh exception againſt: for they make vowes to Angels, to Saints, vowes to keepe daies holy, and to faſt in them: Ergo, they are vnlawfull.

Argum. 2. Rom. 14.23. Whatſoeuer is not of faith, is ſinne, that is, not grounded vpon knowledge out of the word: Ergo, all voluntarie vowes made to ſerue God by, are to be abandoned, becauſe they haue no warrant out of Gods word. Bellarmine anſwereth, that the place is not ſo to bee vnderſtood, but rather, by faith, is meant the conſcience of man, and ſo whatſoeuer is done againſt the conſcience is ſinne.

Anſw. By faith, is not vnderſtood euery conſcience, but the aſſurance of a right conſcience, which muſt needs be builded vpon the word: for verſe 22. S. Paul ſaith, If thou haſt faith, haue it with God: This cannot be ſpoken of a corrupt conſcience which is not able to abide Gods triall, but a right conſcience eſtabliſhed out of the word.

Thus Bernard expoundeth this place: De fide vera non falſa puto dixiſſe Apoſtolum, omne, quod non ex fide, peccatum, quia fides falſa, fides non eſt: I thinke the Apoſtle ſpake of a true, not a falſe faith, ſaying, what is not of faith is ſinne; for a falſe faith, is no faith: lib. de diſpenſation.

Argum. 3. To mortifie the bodie, and to be renewed in the minde, is the reaſonable, that is, the true and proper ſeruice of God: but the mortifying of the fleſh, and change of the minde conſiſteth not in meate or drinke, or any ſuch externall thing: Ergo, therein ſtandeth not the true ſeruice of God: And 1.Cor.8.8. ſo the Apoſtle alſo euidently ſaith, Meate maketh vs not acceptable vnto God, for neither if wee eate haue we the more, or if we eate not haue we the leſſe, &c. 1. Cor. 8.8. The Apoſtle reaſoneth thus: that, which being vſed bringeth no reward, not vſed procureth no loſſe, doth not make vs acceptable to God: for the neglecting or not vſing of thoſe things, wherein Gods ſeruice ſtandeth, is damnable: but the not vſing of meates and drinkes and ſuch like is not damnable: Ergo, therein ſtandeth not Gods ſeruice.

Argum. 4. Let vs heare Auguſtines iudgement: Sunt multi qui vouent, &c. There are many that vow, one a cloake, another oyle, another a waxe candle, another that he will drinke no wine, another that he will faſt, another that he will eate no fleſh. This is not the beſt kinde of vowing: God neither careth for thy comely apparell, nor for thy oyle, nor for thy faſting: but offer that vnto him which he hath redeemed, that is, thy ſoule, De tempor. ſer. 7. We ſee by this what account Auguſtine maketh of ſuperſtitious voluntarie vowes, made with an intent to pleaſe God thereby.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, CONCERNING Monaſticall vowes in particular.

THere are three kinds of vowes which belong vnto Monkery: the firſt is the vow of voluntarie pouertie: the ſecond, the vow of obedience vnto the Monaſticall preſidents and gouernours: the third is the vow of continencie. Of theſe three in order.

THE FIRST PART, CONCERNING THE vow of voluntarie pouertie.

The Papiſts.

THey ſay it is an acceptable ſeruice vnto God, for a man to giue all he hath to the poore, and by vow to conſecrate and addict himſelfe to voluntarie pouertie.

94. Error.

Argum. 1. Math. 18. 21. Chriſt ſaith, If thou wilt bee perfect, goe and ſell all thou haſt, and giue it to the poore, and come and follow me. This is properly to follow Chriſt, to lacke proprietie and liue in common: and thus the Apoſtles followed Chriſt, Rhemiſt. ibid.

Math. 18. 21.

Anſw. Firſt, this is a precept not generall to all, but giuen to this one man to diſcouer his hypocriſie, and vaine confidence that he had in himſelfe, as though he had kept the law, which he came farre ſhort of. Secondly, the Apoſtles themſelues had proprietie: Peter had a houſe: Iohn had to prouide for the Virgin Marie, whom Chriſt commended vnto him: Matthew made a feaſt of his owne goods, Fulk. ibid. See before error 90. in the end, how this place is interpreted by Gulielmus de S. Amore, alleaged alſo by Thomas, not of an actuall but habituall forſaking of all, required of euery Chriſtian, when occaſion ſerueth, to ſet forth the honour of Chriſt.

Argum. 2. Acts 2. 44. They had all things common: and Acts 5. Ananias and Sapphira, after their profeſſion of common life, detaining ſome part proper to themſelues, were reprooued and iudged of the Apoſtles: Ergo, it is acceptable to God to liue in common: Rhemiſt. ibid. Bellarm. cap. 20.

Anſw. Firſt, that communitie vſed then amongſt the brethren, ought alwaies to be among Chriſtians, no man to count that his owne, which the neceſſitie of his brother requireth to bee beſtowed vpon him. Thus alſo witneſſeth Vrbanus in his Decretall, Cauſ. 12. qu. 1. c. 9. Scimus vos non ignorare, &c. We know you are not ignorant that hitherto a common life hath floriſhed amongſt all Chriſtians, and yet by Gods grace doth floriſh, &c. Neither was euery man then bound to giue vp the proprietie of their goods: for they diſtributed to euery man as they had need, Act. 4. 35. But if they had giuen vp all the proprietie of their goods, then all ſhould haue needed alike: And Peter ſaith not the contrarie, but that Ananias might haue kept the proprietie of his goods, if he had not made publike profeſſion to the contrarie, Act. 5. 4.

2. Your owne law giueth another reaſon of that communitie among the Apoſtles, ibid. c. 15. Futuram eccleſiam, &c. The Apoſtles did foreſee that the Church ſhould be amongſt the Gentiles, and therefore they would not haue any poſſeſſions in Iudea, but tooke the price only for the reliefe of the poore.

3. Concerning Ananias, wee doe not reade that hee made any vow to giue his goods to the Church: nay the contrarie appeareth, in that S. Peter ſaith, While it remained with thee, appertained it not to thee? But if his vow were paſt before, the goods, though yet not ſold, could not appertaine vnto him. Againe, the principall and chiefe cauſe, why Peter proceeded againſt him, was his lying and hypocriſie, not for breaking his vow: for it cannot be proued that hee promiſed all, but that he affirmed that he brought all, whereas he withdrew part.

Math.5.3. Argum.3. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit, Matth.5.3. that is, ſuch as willingly make themſelues poore: for ſo did our Sauiour Chriſt, who both in action and affection was poore, and did as he taught. Luke 6.24. And Luke 6.24. There is a woe denounced to the rich in this world. So that by the contrarie the bleſſing is vpon the poore, Bellarm.cap.10.

Anſw. Firſt, it is euident, that Chriſt ſpeaketh not of outward pouertie, but of the humilitie of the minde: firſt, becauſe it is ſo expreſſed, bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit. Secondly, the Prophet Dauid Pſal.26.16. in the ſame ſenſe ſaith, I am poore, Pſalme 26.16. yet was he King, and abounded in riches. Thirdly, Math.11.5. Matth.11.5. The poore receiue the Goſpell: yet were they not all poore in ſubſtance that receiued Chriſt, as Nicodemus, Ioſeph of Arimathea, Zacheus. Now to anſwere likewiſe to his proofes: Firſt, where Chriſt ſaith, woe vnto the rich, he meaneth not all rich men, but ſuch as truſted in their riches: Mark.10.24. for ſuch only are excluded the kingdome of heauen, Marke 10.24. Secondly, it is vntrue, that Chriſt did profeſſe voluntarie pouertie, as your owne Extrauagant hath decreed, that it is an hereſie ſo to affirme: for Chriſt had both money, and a bagge for the almes of the poore, Ioann.22.tit.14.c.5.

The Proteſtants.

Voluntarie, or rather wilfull pouertie, for a man hauing no vrgent cauſe, to leaue all he hath, and bequeath himſelfe to a poore and needie life, only for opinion of greater merit, and hope thereby better to pleaſe God, is neither a thing acceptable nor commendable before God, nor any where commanded in the Scriptures.

1.Tim.6.17. Argum.1. 1.Timoth.6.17. S.Paul giuing counſell to rich men, biddeth them not to caſt away their riches: but charge them (ſaith he) that they be not high minded, nor put their truſt in vncertaine riches. Surely it had been a more compendious way to wiſh them at once to leaue their riches, ſo they ſhould not bee in daunger, either of pride, or vaine confidence: but the Apoſtle ſaith no ſuch thing. Againe, God giueth vs abundantly all things to enioy: riches are the gift of God, we ought not to be wearie of Gods bleſſing. And as Iob ſaith, The Lord giueth, the Lord taketh: therefore a man ought not make himſelfe poore, becauſe hee made not himſelfe rich, but to waite vpon God.

Further it followeth, verſ.18. that they doe good, and be rich in good workes: he that can vſe riches well, may be rich in good workes: but he that is poore, wanteth occaſion and meanes to doe good, as the rich man indued with grace may: wherefore he is an enemie to the glorie of God, that changeth his rich eſtate, wherein he may more glorifie God, for a poore.

Againe, if it were ſo acceptable a thing to God, and ſo meritorious to liue in pouertie, what made the Prophet to pray againſt it? Giue me not pouertie nor riches, but feede me with foode conuenient, Prou.30.8. Prou.30.verſ.8.

Argum.2. What better argument can we haue againſt them, then their owne practiſe? for, though in words they much commend voluntarie pouertie, yet it is a rare thing to finde it amongſt them: for not one among a thouſand of them, if they haue lands, doe giue them to the poore, but to their owne kinſfolkes, or elſe to the Abbeyes, where they know they ſhall bee wealthily maintained. The Pope alſo is good to many, and granteth them capacities to poſſeſſe temporall goods, contrarie to their former vow.

Argum.3. The Wiſeman prayeth vnto God, Giue me not pouertie, leſt I be poore, and ſteale, and Prou.31.8.9. take the name of God in vaine, Prou.31.8.9. From this place two arguments may bee drawne: That which may lawfully be praied againſt, is not willingly to be deſired: pouertie may be praied againſt; therefore it is not to bee purpoſely ſought. Againe, no man is willingly to runne into temptation; but pouertie is a temptation to ſteale, and to take Gods name in vaine: Ergo &c.

Auguſtine ſaith, Diuitiæ ſeculares ſi deſint, non per opera mala quærantur in mundo: Si autem adſunt per opera bona ſeruentur in cœlo: Epiſt.1.Poſteriorum. If ſecular riches be wanting, let not a man ſeeke to get them by euill doing in the world: but if hee haue them, labour by well doing, to ſtore them vp in heauen, &c. He counſelleth not men to caſt away their riches: It was the hereſie of the Pelagians to perſwade rich men to caſt away their goods, Auguſt.epiſtol.106. and of the Manichees likewiſe, Auguſt.cont.Fauſtum.lib.5.cap.10. For they promiſed the kingdome of heauen to none but to thoſe, that caſt away their riches, and ſo conſequently they perſwaded to caſt them away: the cauiller might haue ſpared his labour here. See this cauill further anſwered elſewhere. Retect.p.147.

Concil. Cabilonenſ. ſub. Carol. cap.6. Imputatur quibuſdam fratribus, &c. Certaine brethren are charged, that for couetouſnes they perſwade men, that renouncing the world, they ſhould giue their ſubſtance to the Church, which practiſe ſhould be rooted out of all mindes: for the Paſtor ſhould ſeeke the ſaluation of mens ſoules, not earthly commoditie: becauſe Chriſtians muſt not bee compelled to giue their ſubſtance, &c. But I pray you, if it were a thing ſo meritorious and healthfull for the ſoule to giue all away, why ſhould not men be perſwaded and allured thereunto.

Let vs ſee the Imperiall conſtitutions: Cod.lib.1.tit.5.leg.11.Valentinian. By this law it is made lawfull for women profeſſed (who are now called Nunnes) to make their willes and teſtaments, and to bequeath what they thought good. Likewiſe tit.6.leg.42. the ſonne, though a profeſſed Monk, may ſucceed his father in his inheritance, Iuſtinian. It ſhould ſeeme then, that in thoſe daies the vow of voluntarie pouertie was not practiſed amongſt thoſe ancient Monkes.

Their owne Canons alſo doe helpe vs in this matter: Decret.p.1.diſtinct.30.c.16.Diuites, &c. We doe not reiect rich men hauing good works. Againe, Cauſ. 12. qu. 1. c. 25. Sine peccato poſſideant ſua, &c. They that are profeſſed, may without ſinne poſſeſſe their owne. Cauſ. 16. qu. 1. c. 68. In pauperibus, &c. We muſt not in the poore ſo much conſider their pouertie, as their religion: Ergo, pouertie of it ſelfe by your owne law is not meritorious.

And yet more euidently, whereas the order of S. Francis was bound to voluntarie pouertie, it being not lawfull for them to touch any money, nor yet to haue propertie or dominion in any thing, but in the ſimple vſe onely, as may appeare by the conſtitution of Pope Nicholas, ſext. decr. lib. 5. tit. 12. c. 3. Afterward commeth Iohn 22. who determineth the contrarie, ſhewing that, in rebus conſumptilibus, in things which conſume in the vſe, as meate, drinke, apparrell, the vſe could not be ſeuered from the propertie: for then the vſe may be ſeuered from the propertie, when there ariſeth ſome profit by the vſe, (ſalua rei ſubſtantia) the ſubſtance being preſerued, but in vſing of meate and drinke, the ſubſtance alſo is conſumed: And ſo he concludeth, that the ſaid order had not onely the vſe, but the propertie alſo in the ſaid things; and ſo conſequently it may be inferred, that where a propertie remained, there could be no reſolute pouertie, Extrau. tit. 14. c. 5.

The ſaid Iohn 22. condemned them for heretikes, who affirmed that Chriſt and his Apoſtles had nothing proper, Extrau. tit. 14. c. 5. If neither Chriſt nor his Apoſtles entered into this rule of perfection, nor did betake themſelues to voluntarie pouertie, ſhall any man now ſtriue to bee more perfect then they?

Iohn Lambert (holy Martyr) ſheweth what voluntarie pouertie is required of Chriſtians, and how that precept of our Sauiour, Goe and ſell all that thou haſt, &c. may be fulfilled, for he hath ſold (ſaith he) all whatſoeuer he had, that can finde in his heart to depart from it, when God ſhall pleaſe, or charitie ſo requireth: Voluntas reputatur pro facto, the will is accepted for the deed, &c. Fox pag. 1110. col. 1. Pa. 1014. 1. 20.

As touching this point, of voluntarie forſaking of riches. 1. Ieremie the Patriarke giueth a rule, that it is in vaine, if it be not diuini amoris et æternæ fœlicitatis conſequendæ cauſa: For the loue of God, and to obtaine euerlaſting felicitie: and to that end he alleageth that ſaying of S. Paul, Though I feede the poore with all my goods, &c. and haue not loue, it profiteth mee nothing: but they which doe ſuch things of a ſuperſtitious minde, to merite thereby, ſhew not therein their loue to God, or to their brethren, but to themſelues. Cap. 20. Cenſur. Oriental.

2 It was the ſaying of Antonie an ancient Monke of Egipt: Nec vniuerſo orbi renuntiantes, dignum aliquid habitaculis poſſumus compenſare cæleſtib. Though we ſhould renounce the whole world, we cannot do any thing worthie of the heauenly habitations, &c. the Patriarke of Æthiopia is alwaies a Monke of Antonies order: to whom the Emperour granteth the third part of his reuenewes to beſtow in charitable vſes: and when he dieth, the Emprour taketh all his goods into his hands, &c. It ſeemeth then, that the Monkes of that order profeſſe not voluntarie pouertie. Vit. Antonii. Zaga Zabo, ex Damiano a Goes. Tileman. de religion. Æthiop.

3 Confeſſ. of Wittemberg, c. 21. It is to no better purpoſe to vow pouertie, for either thou art poore by condition or eſtate, & then the croſſe that God hath laid vpon thee, thou muſt beare patiently, &c. or elſe thou doeſt poſſeſſe ſubſtance, and voweſt, by forſaking of thy ſubſtance, to lead a poore life, and get thy liuing by begging, and ſo to merite eternall life: this vow is firſt repugnant to the loue of thy neighbour, which requireth no further to be troubleſome to thy neighbour, then neceſſitie requireth: ſecondly, it is contrarie to faith in Chriſt, becauſe that hee alone is the merite of eternall life: if thou forſake thy ſubſtance to giue it to a common vſe, it is not to follow after pouertie, but to prouide a more certaine and bountifull kinde of life for thy ſelfe. Harm. ſect. 18. p. 574.

4 Rabadineira the Ieſuite in the life of Ignatius Loyola, their founder, ſaith, that he prouided that they of his order ſhould haue ſufficient prouiſion for their ſuſtentation: for his ſaying was in ſumma mendicitate ſapientiæ ſtudium conſiſtere non poſſe: That in beggerly pouertie the ſtudie of wiſedome could not conſiſt: So it ſeemeth this new vpſtart order of Friers, miſlike the vow of beggerly and extreame pouertie: yet they boaſt much of their Generall Francis Borgias, who of a Duke became a Ieſuite, who to ſhew his humilitie, when new breeches were offered vnto him, would rather weare his olde, that were patched and torne: But ſuch baſe ſorditie is diſliked of Melchior Canus, who giueth this cenſure of that fable of S. Francis, that hee would put Lice vpon himſelfe againe, that fell off: I know, ſaith he, Paupertatem placuiſſe, &c. non ſordes, that pouertie was pleaſing to that holy man, but not ſorditie and baſeneſſe. Lib. 2. c. 1. Schott. Ieſuit. de vit. Borg. lib. 4. c. 2. Loc. Theolog. lib. 11. c. 6.

THE SECOND PART, CONCERNING the vowe of obedience.

The Papiſts.

THey that doe enter into the Monkiſh profeſſion, doe vowe in all things to become obedient to their gouernour, and to follow his rules and iniunctions: as the Franciſcans follow S. Francis rule, who in ſtead of a girdle, put a cord about him, went bare-foot, in Winter ſeaſon couered his fleſh with yce and ſnow. It is acceptable, and gratefull ſeruice, ſay they, vnto God, to be thus obedient to their fathers and gouernours. 95. Error. Fox. pag. 259.

1 Ierem. 35. The ſonnes of Ionadab are commended, for being obedient to their father, who enioyned them to drinke no wine, nor to ſowe their fields, nor build houſes, but dwell in tents: Thus they obeyed their father in things not commanded of God: Ergo, ſo ought religious Monkes to doe, Bellarm.cap.21.

Anſw. Firſt, you cannot ſhew that your monkiſh Abbots haue ſuch authoritie ouer their Monkes, as the father hath ouer his children: for Coloſſ.3. and in many other places, children are commanded to be obedient to their parents: but the other haue neither authoritie nor calling out of the word. Alſo S. Paul ſaith, Coloſſ.3. Sonnes obey your parents in all things: wherefore Ionadabs children did no more, then was commanded. Bellarmine anſwereth, that children are bound onely to obey their parents while they are little ones, and not afterward: as the Apoſtle ſaith, that the heire, as long as hee is a childe, differeth nothing from a ſeruant, Galath.4.1.

Contra. Firſt, a childe while he is young is more in ſubiection, then afterward: for he is then kept in awe as a ſeruant; but when he commeth to yeeres of diſcretion, he is ſtill held as a ſonne: and this to be the meaning of the Apoſtle appeareth by the application of this compariſon; that euen ſo wee as ſeruants, were kept vnder the bondage of the rudiments of the world, and ceremonies of the law, but by the redemption of Chriſt haue receiued the adoption of ſonnes. Secondly, and that ſonnes, euen when they come to mens eſtate, muſt be obedient to their parents, it appeareth by the ſonnes of Eli, 1.Sam.2. who is both puniſhed for not chaſtiſing his ſonnes, and they likewiſe for not hearing their father. Wee ſee then what goodly ſtuffe this Popiſh doctrine is, that teacheth children to caſt off the yoke of obedience to their parents.

Secondly, Ionadab enioyned nothing contrarie to the law of the Nazarites, Numb.6. And if you ſay, that it was not the cuſtome of the Nazarites to dwell in tents; you ſhall finde that the Rechabites
Ierem.35.11. did not ſo ſtreightly obſerue this, as the other, namely not to drinke wine: for Ierem.35. verſ.11. they came vp for feare of the Chaldeans that were in the land, and dwelt at Ieruſalem: they diſpenſed with the voluntarie iniunction of their father, for dwelling in their tents, but kept the other vow of abſtaining from wine ſtill, becauſe it was according to the law. Wherefore this example maketh not for Monkiſh obedience, ſeeing they are enioyned things not commanded by God, nay contrarie to his commandements.

Math.16.24. Argum.2. Our Sauiour ſaith, He that will follow me, muſt denie himſelfe, Math.16. but this deniall conſiſteth in the vow of obedience made to another: for then a man doth denie himſelfe, when he is bound by vow to obey; and not ſometime to obey, ſometime not to obey at his pleaſure, Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, then by this reaſon, none can be followers of Chriſt, vnleſſe they will be Monkes: for the words of our Sauiour are generall of all, that will follow him. Secondly, to be a follower of Chriſt, and a follower of men, are contrarie: for the Apoſtle ſaith, If I ſhould pleaſe men, I were no more the Gal.1.10. ſeruant of Chriſt, Galath.1.10. Wherefore they which addict themſelues by their ſuperſtitious obedience to pleaſe men, are not the ſeruants of Chriſt, but of men.

Argum.3. Our Doway tranſlators vpon that place, Gen 3.17. Of the tree eate thou not: giue this note, that any other law in things otherwiſe indifferent proceeding from lawfull ſuperiours, bindeth the ſubiects in conſcience: and in the margen thus, true obedience is blinde and prompt.

Anſwere 1. There is great difference betweene the law of God, and the precepts of men: the one Iames.4.12. bindeth in conſcience, not the other: for there is one law-giuer which is able to ſaue and deſtroy. It is Act.5.19. therefore great preſumption to match theſe together. 2. True obedience is indeede prompt, but not blinde: it examineth the precept giuen in charge, whether it be lawfull or not, as the Apoſtle did, that choſe rather to obey God, then man.

The Proteſtants.

NO obedience to any ruler either ſpirituall or temporall is to be yeelded vnto, but for the Lords ſake, and in ſuch matters, wherein we haue the warrant of Gods word for our obedience.

Coloſſ.3.23. 1 Coloſſ.3.23. Seruants be obedient to your maſters, and whatſoeuer you doe, doe it heartily as to the Lord. But if any thing be enioyned vs which is not warranted by the word of God, we cannot with a Coloſſ.2.18. good conſcience obey as before the Lord. Againe, S. Paul ſaith, Coloſſ.2.18. Let no man at his pleaſure beare rule ouer you, or beguile you; or as the Rhemiſts tranſlate, ſeduce you wilfully: Ergo, no man muſt impoſe rules of life beſide the Goſpell, for this were to rule ouer men at their pleaſure.

2 Auguſtine ſaith, Cum homo conſtet anima & corpore, &c. Seeing a man doth conſiſt both of bodie and ſoule; in regard of that part, which the affaires of this life concerne, we ought to be ſubiect to the higher powers: but in reſpect of that part whereby we beleeue, and are called to the kingdome of God, we muſt be obedient to none, Auguſt. in 13. ad Rom. Therefore no man may impoſe any new religion vpon vs, which altogether toucheth the conſcience.

Argum.3. Saint Paul commandeth obedience to the Ciuill authoritie, that beareth the ſword, Rom.13.1.4. Rom.13. but obedience cannot be yeelded to the Prince, if another thing be commanded by the Monkiſh gouernour, to whom they are tied by the vow of obedience: as there is a Canon of a ſuperſtitious Councell, Tribuvienſ.c.9. Si Epiſcopus placitum, &c. If the Biſhop doe canonically decree a Synode, and the Ciuill Iudge at the ſame time enioyne alſo a law day, his law day muſt giue place to the other: Ergo, to vow obedience to any which may hinder obedience to the Ciuill Magiſtrate, is contrarie to S. Pauls rule.

1.Cor.7.23. Argum.4. Saint Paul alſo ſaith, 1.Cor.7.23. Ye are bought with a price, be not the ſeruants of men:

but they which vow Monkiſh obedience in things not preſcribed in the word, make themſelues ſeruants of men. Ergo.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Apoſtle forbiddeth vs to be ſeruants vnto men for mens cauſe, but it is lawfull to ſerue men for Gods cauſe.

Contra. Firſt, to ſerue men for Gods cauſe, or in the name of God, is not to be ſeruants vnto men, but vnto God: and therefore in this caſe they are not the ſeruants of men, but of Chriſt; as Saint Paul exhorteth ſeruants to be obedient to their maſters, as the ſeruants of Chriſt, Epheſ. 6. 6. Secondly, they doe not ſerue men for Gods cauſe, which are obedient vnto them in things not commanded by God, nor warranted by his word: as Monks that doe vow obedience euen in ſuperſtitious fancies, and meere humane inuentions: So that this place of the Apoſtle is very ſtrong againſt them.

Epheſ.6.6.

We haue in this caſe plentifull teſtimonie from both lawes: firſt, Cod.lib.3.tit.13.leg.7. Anaſtaſius the Emperour hath this conſtitution, That he, which is entred into any profeſſion in a colledge, ſhould be obedient to the gouernour thereof, ſo that notwithſtanding hee yeeld obedience alſo to the Preſident or Magiſtrate.

To this agreeth the Canon law: Decret.part.2.cauſ.11. queſt.3.c.91. Eutychianus Pope thus decreeth, Si quis Epiſcopus ſiue Abbas,&c. If a Biſhop or an Abbot command a Prieſt or a Monke to ſay Maſſe for an heretike, he muſt not be obeyed: Ergo, the vow of obedience may be broken.

Further, the vow of obedience, which they vrge ſo ſtrictly, is not obſerued amongſt themſelues: as in the order of the Franciſcanes, who by the rule of S. Francis ſhould haue but one coate, they ought to labour with their owne hands, they ſhould make no gloſſes vpon S. Francis rule: yet in all theſe things they are now diſpenſed with, Sext.decret.lib.5.tit.12.c.3. Againe, they are forbidden by their rule to handle any money by themſelues, or others, to haue the execution of teſtaments, or granaries, or cellers, or vineyards: yet now all theſe things are permitted them, Clement.lib.5.tit.11.c.1. So that they themſelues are the chiefe tranſgreſſors of their vowes of obedience.

See alſo Concil. Senonenſ.decret.morum.30. Ex nunc iuramenta,&c. From henceforth we diſanull and forbid the oathes which are accuſtomed to be made in the entrance to certaine fratries and religious houſes, for the obſeruing of their ſtatutes, that no ſuch oathes ſhould hereafter be made, or exacted, &c. This councell, we ſee, hath decreed againſt the oath of obedience, which nouices were wont to make in their entrance.

Iohn Huſſe holy Martyr: Paulus Phariſæus propter meliorem ſectam Chriſti, ſuam reliquit ſectam, & ob hoc clauſtrales cuiuſcunque ſecta fuerint, debent exire, & induere ſectam Chriſti: Paul the Phariſie, for the betrer ſect of Chriſt, did leaue his owne ſect, and therefore all that are profeſſed in cloyſters ſhould leaue their ſects, and come forth to profeſſe the ſect of Chriſt, ex Concil. Conſtantienſ. can.15. Ergo, the vow of ſuperſtitious obedience bindeth not.

Concerning obedience to be yeelded to ſuperiours. 1. Ieremie Patriarke thus writeth, alleaging that place of S. Paul, If an Angell from heauen ſhould preach otherwiſe,&c. If any man, though neuer ſo excellent, ſhould command vs any thing which God forbiddeth, or the contrarie, Tanquam peſtem fugiendum eſſe: We muſt ſhunne him as a peſtilent fellow.

As for obedience, it is either referred to God, and then it is not an arbitrarie vowe, but of neceſſitie, of which obedience it is ſaid, Obedience is better then ſacrifice,&c. as it is referred to man, and then men of their owne accord, are to performe their duties to their ſuperiours, as ſubiects to Magiſtrates, children to parents, &c. but yet with this condition, that wee doe alwayes obey God rather then man.

4 The Ieſuites commend their Generall Francis Borgias for his great humilitie, in ſubiecting himſelfe to the Cookes demand, in ſweeping the Kitchen, and ſcumming of pots, and doing ſuch other baſe ſeruices: And yet their Preacher Ferus ſaith, that the Apoſtles, Nec propter pias quaſdam cauſas,&c. Would not omit the preaching of the word, no not for certaine holy offices, &c. May not now one ſay of ſuch hypocrites, that play the cookes and ſcullions in this baſe manner, as Plato ſaid of Diogenes, that delighted in a baſe and ſordide kinde of life, that he was Socrates out of his wits, ſo they are Papiſts out of their wits.

Commentar. in Act.6.4.

THE THIRD PART, CONCERNING THE VOWE of continencie or chaſtitie, and whether it be lawfull to marrie after ſuch a vowe made.

The Papiſts.

THe vowe of chaſte and continent life is commendable and meritorious, they ſay, in all that doe take it vpon them, and after the vowe made, they are ſure to receiue that high gift of continencie, if they duly labour for it, Rhemiſt.annot.1.Corinth.7.verſ.7. But whoſoeuer marrieth after the vowe made, ſinneth damnably, and turneth backe after Sathan, Rhemiſt.annot.1.Tim.5.ſect.12.

96. Error.

Math.19.12. Argum.1. Math.19.12. Some haue made themſelues chaſte, or as the Rhemiſts doe very homely tranſlate it, haue gelded themſelues, for the kingdome of heauen: This proueth the vowes of chaſtitie to be both lawfull and meritorious, Rhemiſt.in hunc locum.

Anſwere. This is meant onely of thoſe that haue the gift of continencie, who, if they be ſure they haue receiued it, may vowe and purpoſe ſingle life: but without ſuch aſſurance no man can vowe continencie lawfully: Neither can euery man receiue this gift that will, for Chriſt ſaith, verſe 11. All men cannot receiue this thing, ſaue they to whom it is giuen: Secondly, as for meriting heauen, it commeth neither by being married or vnmarried, but it is the free gift of GOD through Chriſt, Rom.6.13. Rom.6.23.

1.Tim.5.12. Argum.2. 1.Tim.5.12. Hauing damnation becauſe they haue caſt away their firſt faith: that is, the vowe of continencie, which they made to Chriſt: it cannot be meant of the firſt faith in baptiſme, for that is not loſt by marriage, Rhemiſt. And againe, verſ.15. They are turned backe after Sathan: wee may here learne, for thoſe to marrie which are profeſſed, is to turne backe after Sathan, Rhemiſt.in eum locum.

Anſw. Firſt, S. Paul ſpeaketh not here of widowes alreadie choſen, but to be choſen: he would not haue younger widowes to be choſen, becauſe they would waxe wanton and marrie: and therefore it is not like, that by the firſt faith here is meant the vow of chaſtitie, ſeeing there is no cauſe that theſe younger widowes ſhould make any vow, being excluded by the Apoſtle from Church ſeruices. Secondly, verſ.14. S. Paul himſelfe counſelleth the younger widowes to marrie, therefore it is not like they were votaries. Thirdly, by the firſt faith is vnderſtood the Chriſtian faith, which the younger widowes waxing wanton, and laſciuious, not caring to match with Infidels, were in danger to breake, as the Apoſtle telleth them of ſome that had done ſo alreadie, and were turned backe after Sathan. Fourthly, we ſay not that the faith of baptiſme is broken by all marriage, but with ioyning with Infidels. Fifthly, it appeareth what breach of faith Paul meaneth, when he ſaith, They waxe wanton, and idle, and are buſie-bodies, goe from houſe to houſe, and ſpeake things vncomely, verſ.13. Which is a ſliding backe from the Chriſtian faith, when our life iarreth with our profeſſion; not a breach of any vow of continencie. Laſtly, your Maſter of ſentences ſo expoundeth it of that faith, quam in Baptiſmo profeſſa ſunt, which they profeſſed in Baptiſme, lib.4.diſtinct.38.b.

Argum.3. We muſt vow vnto God, that which is the beſt and moſt perfect ſtate of life; but virginitie is more excellent then marriage; therefore we ought to vow virginitie vnto God: and it is better and more acceptable to God to doe it with a vow, then without. Bellarm.cap.28.

Anſwere. Firſt, wee grant, that the beſt things ought to be giuen vnto God, ſo that it be in our power to performe them, otherwiſe it is but a tempting of God: ſuch was the vowe of Iephthe, that promiſed vnawares that vnto God, which by the law hee could not performe, namely his daughter: ſo they which vowe ſingle life, promiſe a thing, which is not in their power. Secondly, concerning virginitie, though in it ſelfe it be preferred before marriage, yet in them that haue not that gift, marriage is better: for as the Apoſtle ſaith, It is better to marrie, then burne, that is, to liue a conſtrained ſingle life in luſt and concupiſcence. Thirdly, to the proofe of the propoſition, that it is better to doe any dutie with a vowe, then without, becauſe it ſheweth greater charitie and loue to God, and it better defendeth againſt the tentation of Sathan; when a man is bound, &c. We anſwere: Firſt, loue is 1.Cor.13.4. alwayes ioyned with humilitie; For loue doth not boaſt it ſelfe. 1.Corinth.13.4. but hee that voweth, boaſteth and preſumeth of his owne ſtrength. Ergo, to vowe a thing not in our power, ſheweth not greater charitie. Secondly, for a man to be bound to keepe a vow aboue his ſtrength, doth giue greater aduantage to Sathans tentation; that while they labour to keepe their vowe, they are tempted to ſome greater euill; as fornication, or ſuch like: for now Sathan encombreth a man on both ſides; that being weake, hee muſt breake his vowe and marrie, or keeping his vow muſt burne in luſt. And this teſtifieth Gregorie, as it is in their owne decrees, par.1.diſtinct.13.c.2. Nerui teſticulorum Leuiathan perplexi ſunt, &c. Leuiathans ſtones are wrapped in together, that is, his ſuggeſtions are folded and linked together: and he putteth this very caſe of vowes, when a man is tempted and aſſaulted on both ſides.

The Proteſtants.

OVr ſentence then appeareth to be this: that the vowe of continencie cannot lawfully be made of all, neither is indifferently to be required of them, ſeeing all are not indued with that gift. And that it is better euen for vowed perſons, hauing raſhly preſumed beyond their ſtrength, to marrie, rather then to burne.

1.Cor.7.2. Argum.1. The Scripture euery where commandeth ſuch to vſe the benefit of marriage, that haue not the gift to liue ſingle, 1. Cor. 7. 2. For auoyding of fornication let euery man haue his wife: and verſ. 9. If they cannot abſtaine, let them marrie. Wherefore they tranſgreſſe the commandement of God, and preſume raſhly, that hauing not this gift, doe vow virginitie.

Bellarmin. Anſwere. Firſt, Saint Paul wiſheth men to marrie, not for euery temptation of luſt, but when they are readie to fall into externall workes of vncleanneſſe, as into fornication: and therfore he ſaith, For auoyding of fornication let euery one haue his wife: For S. Paul felt the pricke of the fleſh, that is, the luſt of concupiſcence, and was buffeted of it, yet married not for all that, cap. 30. Rhemiſt. annot. 1. Cor. 7. ſect. 8.

Anſwere. Firſt, we ſay not that for euery light temptation which by reſiſting may be ouercome, in thoſe that haue the gift of continencie, a man is to deſire mariage, but when he is continually inflamed with luſt, ſo that the will doth conſent: though he be not yet ſo ouercome, that hee fall in outward vncleanneſſe: and this is the Apoſtles meaning when he ſaith, It is better to marrie then to burne, that is, with inward luſt when his minde is diſquieted: And ſuch a man as doth burne with ſecret concupiſcence, ſtill wraſtling with that fire, and not being able to quench it, if he refuſe to vſe the lawfull remedie of marriage, is in danger alſo to fall into outward fornication.

2 Concerning Pauls example: Firſt, the place is not ſo to be vnderſtood of the luſt of concupiſcence: for it is not like, that the Apoſtle being kept vnder with hunger, cold, impriſonment, ſhould be ſo greatly tempted that way. But either it may bee vnderſtood of the particular temptation to pride and vaine glorie, as he himſelfe expoundeth it, verſ. 7. Leaſt I ſhould be exalted out of meaſure through the abundance of reuelations: or elſe generally S. Paul vnderſtandeth by the fleſh, the whole maſſe of corruption, and whatſoeuer was in him that reſiſted the ſpirit: In this ſenſe he crieth out, Rom. 7. Who ſhall deliuer me from this body of death! Caluin. Rom.7.24.

3 Though we yeeld that S. Paul was tempted of his concupiſcence, yet he ouercame and ſubdued it, obtaining from God, after ſome ſtriuing, grace and power to quench the ſecret fire: And ſo we denie not, but that men ought by faſting and prayer to labour for that precious gift. But if they feele the fire to burne within them ſtill, then are they to vſe the remedie preſcribed by S. Paul, that is, to marrie.

Secondly, ſaith Bellarmine, S. Paul giueth libertie of marriage onely to thoſe which were free and had not vowed continencie, cap. 30.

Anſw. Firſt, the Apoſtles words are generall: Let euery man haue his wife. Yea ſay the Rhemiſts, he ſpeaketh of thoſe that were married before their conuerſion, that they might ſtill vſe and keepe their wiues. Yea but S. Paul ſpeaketh of all vnmarried, in the verſe next before, It is good not to touch a woman: I trow he meaneth not, it is good for a man that is married not to touch his wife. Secondly, it is a generall libertie, which he granteth to all, verſ. 9 If they cannot containe, let them marrie: but many votaries cannot containe, as it may appeare by the vnchaſte liues of your Monkiſh rabble, therefore hauing the diſeaſe, they may vſe the remedie, that is, marrie.

The teſtimonie of antiquitie in this caſe is moſt plentifull, to ſhew that raſh vowes and oathes, ſuch as the vow of chaſtitie is in him, that hath not power to keepe it, may ſafely be broken, Concil. Toletan. 8. cap. 2. Tolerabilius eſt ſtultæ promiſſionis vota reÿcere, quàm per inutilium promiſſionum cuſtodiam, exhorrendam criminum implere menſuram: It is more tolerable, to reiect raſh and fooliſh vowes & promiſes, then by keeping vnprofitable promiſes, to fall into horrible ſinnes, &c. As the monkiſh votaries did, who for that they wanted lawfull matrimonie, gaue themſelues to vnnaturall luſts. Concil. Triburienſ. cap. 21. ex Beda: Si forte nos incautius iurare contigerit, quod ſcilicet obſeruatum peiorem vergeat in exitum, liberè illud mutandum nouerimus ſalubriori conſilio: If it chance that wee ſweare raſhly, which oath being obſerued, will haue a worſe end, vpon more holeſome aduiſe we may freely change it, &c. If an oath may be changed, much more a vow, for an oath is greater.

The Ciuill law thus ſaith, Cod. lib. 5. tit. 4. leg. 23. authentic. Illicitæ rei iuramentum, &c. An oath of an vnlawfull thing is not to be kept, as if one ſweare to continue in the profeſſion of ſtage playes, &c. By the ſame reaſon alſo, whether it be a vow or an oath, that one taketh not to marrie, if he liue incontinently, it ought not to binde him.

Cod. lib. 5. tit. 35. leg 2. Valentinian. Theodoſ. A mother could not be admitted to the tuition of her childe, vnleſſe ſhe would ſweare not to marrie againe: notwithſtanding ſuch oath, ſhe is permitted by this law to marrie againe: In optione nulla cogatur; No woman ought to bee enforced to her choiſe, &c. So then after an oath made to continue a widow, which is as much as a vow, yet by the Ciuill law marriage is lawfull.

Cod. lib. 6 tit. 40. leg. 2. Iuſtinian. Whereas the law was, that a man dying and leauing a legacie to his wife vpon condition, ſhe ſhould remaine a widow, the woman could not haue the legacie, vnleſſe ſhe would ſweare not to marrie, but for procreation of children: By this conſtitution it was lawfull for the woman to enioy her huſbands gift, and without any ſuch oath to marrie againe. So this conſtitution alloweth not any oath to be taken againſt marriage: but a vow and an oath are of the ſame nature.

Cod. lib. 9. tit. 8. leg. 2. A man ſwearing that hee would neuer forgiue his ſeruant, but keepe him in continuall bonds, is not tyed by this oath; Alexander: no more is a man bound, that voweth to keepe his body in the perpetuall bonds of luſt and burning without marriage.

Let vs take a view of their owne Canons: Lateranenſ. ſub. Alexandro 3. part. 5. cap. 2. cap. 10. this caſe is put: A certaine woman promiſed marriage to a man being abſent, but afterward hearing more of his inhumane nature: Votum continentiæ promiſit: Shee vowed and made promiſe of continencie: it is thus determined: Tutius eſſe ducimus, vt præfata mulier, poſt fidem & votum ſimplex oblatum matrimonium contrahat, quàm fornicationis reatum incurrat: Wee iudge it more ſafe, that the ſaide woman, after her ſimple vowe and faith thus giuen and made, to marrie rather, then to fall into fornication, &c. But it will bee heere anſwered, that this woman made but a ſimple or ſingle vowe; nec veſtem, nec locum mutauit, ſhe changed neither place nor garment: Marke then what followeth, *Lateranenſ.part.47.cap.*8. Pope Adriane decreeth thus: Si quis timore mortis habitum religionis aſſumpſerit & clauſtrum intrauerit, licitè poterit ad ſeculum redire: If any man for feare of death doth take the habite of religion, & goe into a clauſter, he may lawfully returne to his ſecular eſtate, &c. Here is both a change of place and habite, and yet libertie giuen to diſſolue the vowe. If it be againe anſwered, that it was done of feare: ſo I ſay, that as this is one infirmitie, ſo there be many beſide; and if this infirmitie may breake a vow, why may not alſo other infirmities, as of incontinencie, and ſuch other? Now where as they thinke a ſimple vow may be broken, which conſiſteth onely in the purpoſe or promiſe of the votarie, but a vow ratified, by changing of place, habite, and profeſſion, cannot bee broken, this alſo is but an idle ſhift; for a vow vttered onely before God, though there be no ſuch outward teſtification, doth binde in conſcience, as if it were done in the preſence of many: Iacobs vow, Geneſ.28. was but a ſingle vow, vttered onely in the hearing of God: and of ſuch vowes ſpeaketh the Preacher, When thou haſt vowed a vow to God, &c. And herein their owne law helpeth vs; decret.Greg. lib.4.tit.7.c.6.Celeſtin.3.Votum ſimplex, &c. A ſimple vow doth no leſſe binde before God, then a ſolemne: And againe, *ſext.decretal.lib.3.tit.15.c.1.Bonif.*8. Voti ſolemnitas, &c. A ſolemne vow was found out onely by the conſtitution of the Church, &c. Wherefore if marriage be lawfull after a ſimple vow; why not as well after a ſolemne?

We haue yet alſo more euident teſtimonie out of their law: decret.Greg.lib.2.tit.24.c.3.Greg.Propoſitum non infringit, &c. He doth not breake his vow or promiſe, that changeth it into a better: wherfore he that changeth vnchaſt ſingle life, with chaſt marriage, doth not breake his vow.

Bonif.8.regu.iuris.6.Nemo poteſt ad impoſſibile ligari: No man can be bound to that is impoſſible, &c. but for him to liue ſingle, that hath not the gift, is impoſſible: therefore he cannot be bound vnto it with vow or without. Againe, *regul.*58. Iuramentum contra bonos mores non ligat: An oath againſt good manners bindeth not, &c. and ſo conſequently a vow; wherefore a vow to liue without marriage in ſinfull luſt, bindeth not, being againſt good manners.

Other vowes may be altered and changed, as the vow of going in pilgrimage to Ieruſalem may be redeemed with almes, *decret.Greg.lib.3.tit.34.c.*1. It may be altered for the benefite of the Commonwealth, *c.*5. for the neceſſitie of the Church, *c.*7. becauſe of ſickneſſe or pouertie, *c.*8. Why then may not the vow of Continencie vpon the like conſiderations be diſpenſed with *Sext.decretal.lib.3.tit.12.c.*1. A vow to be buried in a certaine place, may be altered. *Bonif.*8. Why may not the like alteration in other vowes be admitted?

Here wanteth now nothing, but the ſeale of the Martyrs, D. Taylour holy Martyr ſheweth the vnlawfulneſſe of ſuch oathes and vowes, whereby Prieſts and others are conſtrained to vow chaſtitie, and forſweare marriage by the like caſe: In Iuſtinian titulo de indicta viduitate, where it is thus written: That if one would bequeath to his wife in his teſtament a legacie vnder a condition, that ſhee ſhould neuer marrie againe, and take an oath of her for the accompliſhment of the ſame, yet ſhee may marrie againe if hee die, notwithſtanding the aforeſaid condition, and oath taken and made againſt marriage: and an oath is another manner of obligation made to God, then a Papiſticall vow made to man, Fox pag. 1522.

William Flower, who was firſt a profeſſed Monke, and afterward married, proteſteth, that therein he beleeueth hee did well, and according to Gods lawes, Fox pag. 1575. Raſh vowes then and inconſiderate, as of chaſtitie, ſingle life and ſuch like, may lawfully be diſſolued: but let vs now proceede.

*Argum.*2. Virginitie, and continent life is onely to bee required of thoſe which haue the gift of continencie: But all haue not that gift: Ergo, the vow of virginitie is not indifferently to be made by any. That the gift of continencie cannot be had or obtained of all, neither reſteth in our free will, it is plaine by Scripture.

1 Matth.19.12. He that is able to receiue this gift, let him receiue it: Ergo, all are not able to receiue it.

Bellarmin. Firſt, though they are not able to receiue it yet, yet they may if they will, and aske for it by prayer: for the text is, Some haue made themſelues chaſte for the kingdome of God: whereby it appeareth that it is in the will of man, *cap.*31. Anſwere. He ſpeaketh cleane contrarie to the text: for Chriſt ſaith, None receiue it but to whom it is giuen; and the words are, qui capere poteſt, not, qui velit, he that can receiue, not he that will receiue. And they are ſaid to make themſelues chaſte, not becauſe it is in their owne choyce, but being enabled of God, and hauing receiued power ouer their will, they are ſaide to make themſelues chaſte, hauing receiued power by the ſpirit of God: So our Sauiour ſaith, Come vnto mee all ye that are laden, Matth 11. and yet no man commeth to Chriſt, but his father firſt draweth him, Iohn.6.44. Wherefore it being a peculiar gift of God, all cannot haue it, neither are ſure to obtaine it, though they aske it by prayer, becauſe wee haue no promiſe to be heard.

Rhemiſt. When a man is bound to abſtaine by vow, or other neceſſarie occaſion, as impriſonment, baniſhment, ſickneſſe, no doubt if he labour for the gift of continencie, hee may haue it. Anſwere. They that binde themſelues to a raſh vowe, haue no promiſe to bee heard praying for continencie. Secondly, they that are driuen vnto any ſuch neceſſitie as you ſpeake of, which they are not a cauſe of themſelues, neither can auoide, as in long and perpetuall ſickneſſe, it is certaine that God will giue the gift being ſought by lawfull meanes: But as for baniſhment and impriſonment, they are not of ſuch neceſſitie, but that the husband is bound to follow the wife, and the wife her husband, Fulk. 1.Cor.7.6.

Neither are many of thoſe meanes commendable, which were vſed in Monkerie: for ſome of them were ſuperſtitious and vnlawfull, as they vſed Phyſicke and medicine to correct or ſlacke, and extinguiſh nature in them: Francis was wont to couer his bodie with yce and ſnow; others did whip themſelues: This was not to ſubdue and tame the bodie, but to deſtroy and kill the bodie, and make it vnfit for other duties. The Scripture preſcribeth no other meanes but prayer and faſting, and labour in our vocation. Some of them againe vſed externall exerciſe of their bodie, as by faſting, by lying hard, by watching, which in themſelues were not amiſſe: but they leaue the chiefe and principall, which is the ſpirituall meanes: for the outward exerciſe of their fleſh without this, is little worth: Coloſſ.2.23. Coloſſ.2.23.

Bellarmine. To beleeue is no leſſe the gift of God, then to liue chaſte, yet we exhort all men to beleeue, and they doe vow and promiſe it in baptiſme: why may they not as well vow continencie, although it be a peculiar gift? cap.31.

Anſw. They are both indeed the gifts of God, but one is neceſſarie to ſaluation, namely, to beleeue, and is promiſed to all that will ſeeke for it: But the other gift is not neceſſarie, neither hath any ſuch promiſe.

Secondly, Saint Paul calleth this a proper gift: But if all men were capable of it, how could it be called a proper gift? One after this manner, another after that, ſaith the Apoſtle. But if euery man might attaine to that one gift of continencie, they ſhould not all haue their proper gift, but all one gift, and after the ſame manner. And though S. Paul ſhould meane, that to liue chaſtly in wedlock be alſo a proper gift of God, as Bellarmine vrgeth, and we denie not: yet it remaineth ſtill, that the other is a more ſingular and proper gift; and is not therefore commonly, and indifferently beſtowed vpon all.

Thirdly, S. Paul ſaith, that a man may marrie his Virgin if need ſo require, 1.Cor.7.37. But if euerie one labouring for the gift of continencie, might obtaine it, there ſhould then bee no neceſſitie of mariage: which the Apoſtle here affirmeth. 1.Cor.7.37. Capitul. Græcar. Synod.21. collect. à Martin. Bracarenſ. Epiſcop. and it is alleaged, decret.part.1, diſt.55.cap.9. Si quis ſanus non per diſciplinam religionis, & abſtinentiæ, ſed per abſciſionem à Deo plaſmati corporis exiſtimans poſſe à ſe carnales concupiſcentias amputari, caſtrauerit ſe, Clericus ne fiat. If any man being ſound and in health, doth caſtrate or geld himſelfe not by the diſcipline of religion, and abſtinence, but by mangling his bodie framed of God, thinking that it lieth in him to cut off carnall concupiſcence, let him not be a Clergie man, &c. Here their opinion is reproued that thinke euery man hath power to be continent.

Further, the decree of Martin. Cauſ.27.queſt.1.c.8. witneſſeth in theſe words, ſpeaking of a certaine widow, Si ſe continere non poterat, &c. If ſhe could not containe, ſhe was not forbid to marrie. And againe, Cauſ.32.c.11. Si poſt nuditatem, &c. If S. Paul after nakedneſſe, hunger, faſting, priſon, ſtripes, crieth out, O vnhappie man that I am, who ſhall deliuer me from this bodie of ſinne; doe you thinke your ſelfe ſecure? rectius fuerat hominum ſubiſſe coniugium, &c. it had been better to haue entred into mariage with other men, then ſtriuing to climbe higher, to fall downe to hell, &c. We ſee by this decree of theirs, what an hard thing it is to attaine vnto virginitie, and that euery one cannot haue it.

Maſter Tindall holie Martyr hath put to his ſeale: If wee haue infirmities, that draw vs from the lawes of God, let vs cure them with the remedies that God hath made; if thou burne, marrie: for God hath promiſed thee no chaſtitie, as long as thou maiſt vſe the remedie that he hath ordained: no more then he hath promiſed to ſlake thine hunger without meate: now to aske of God more then he hath promiſed, commeth of a falſe faith, &c. Fox pag.1251, col.1. Pag.1139.2.70

Laſtly, the Rhemiſts ſay, that the mariage of thoſe that haue vowed, is the worſt ſort of incontinencie and fornication, 1.Corinth.7.ſect.8.

Auguſtine ſaith cleane contrarie: Non ipſæ nuptiæ talium damnandæ iudicantur, ſed damnatur propoſiti fraus, &c. The mariages of ſuch are not condemned, but the violating of their vow is condemned, not becauſe they afterward entred into the league of mariage, but becauſe they did breake the firſt faith of continencie. Auguſtine ſaith not, that ſuch mariages are no mariages, but plaine adulterie and fornication: but maketh the mariage lawfull, and reproueth their raſhnes before in making, and their vnſtedfaſtnes now in breaking their vowes.

Now concerning theſe two points, that it is lawfull to marrie after a vow made, where neceſſitie ſo requireth, and that it is not in euery ones power to attaine to the gift of continencie, this further euidence we haue:

1. Of the Greeke Church for the firſt, we haue Theophylact in 1.*Timoth.*5.12. vpon theſe words, hauing damnation becauſe they haue broken the firſt faith: ſaith he, Maluiſſem à pactionib. cum Chriſto initis non diſceſſiſſent, &c. I had rather they had not gone from their couenants made with Chriſt; but ſeeing they had rather marrie, & ipſe aſſentior, I alſo agree thereunto. Likewiſe Chryſoſtome vpon the ſame place: They ought indeed to haue kept their faith: quoniam illa non fiunt, melius 1.Tim.5.12.

Cenſur. Oriental. Eccleſ. 2. cap. 21.

iſta fieri: but becauſe theſe things are not done, it is better the other ſhould. For the other point, Ieremie the Patriarke telleth vs: Nos illis ſacerdotibus, qui in virginitate perſiſtere non poſſunt, &c. Wee giue vnto thoſe prieſts, which cannot continue virgins, &c. licence to take wiues. And againe, Qui non poteſt virginitatis perferre certamina, vxorem accipiat: He that cannot endure the combat of virginitie, let him take a wife. Euery man then that would, cannot attaine to virginitie.

Lib. 1. epiſt. 11. ad Pompon.
Lib. 2. de Monach. cap. 34.

2 The South Church: for the firſt, witneſſeth Cyprian, ſpeaking of thoſe virgins which had dedicated themſelues to Chriſt: Si perſeuerare nolunt vel non poſſunt, &c. If they will not or cannot perſeuere, it is better that they marrie, then to fall into the fire of luſt. Bellarmine will haue Cyprian to ſpeake of ſuch as were to vow, that they ſhould take heed by the fall of others, that if they haue no purpoſe to continue virgins, they ſhould not vow at all, but marrie. But their owne Pammelius vpon the ſame epiſtle ſheweth, that Cyprian ſpeaketh de velatis virginibus, of vailed and profeſſed virgins: See before Auguſtine of the ſame iudgement. For the other point, Zaga Zabo giueth this reaſon, why in the Aethiopike Church they allow mariage vnto their Prieſts, becauſe, as S. Paul ſaith, it is better to marrie, then to burne: whereby it ſeemeth their opinion is, that euery one hath not the gift of continencie, for then it were not neceſſarie, they ſhould either marrie or burne, they might vſe the gift of continencie.

Ibid. ſect. 18.

3 For the firſt point, we haue of the reformed Churches, the confeſſion of Auſpurg, artic. 6. Although the commandement of God touching wedlocke, doe free moſt men from vowes, yet there is another reaſon, &c. that maketh vowes fruſtrate, becauſe that all worſhip of God inſtituted without his commandement, and choſen to merit remiſſion of ſins, &c. is wicked. Saxonie, artic. 21. Vowes, which wrap men in a kinde of life, wherein is the worſhip of Idols, are without doubt fruſtrate. Sweueland, artic. 12. Becauſe all our iuſtification doth conſiſt in faith in Chriſt, whereupon we haue libertie giuen vs in all externall things, we haue permitted the bonds of Monkerie to be releaſed amongſt vs.

Sect. 18. p. 540.
Pag. 543.

And for the other point: that continencie is a peculiar gift giuen to ſome, and not to all; we haue alſo the confeſſion of Heluetia, the latter, chap. 29. Let them ſerue the Lord in that calling, as long as they ſhall feele themſelues endued with that heauenly gift. Bohemia, chap. 19. They meane ſuch vnmaried perſons as haue this peculiar gift giuen to them of God, &c. Sweueland, chap. 12. Let him know, that to renounce mariage, and to make himſelfe an Eunuch for the kingdome of heauen, &c. is a peculiar and ſpeciall gift of God. It followeth then, becauſe euery one hath not this gift, euery one cannot vow it.

Maldonat. Ieſ. Summ, qu. 12. art. 7.

4 Of the Romane Church: for the firſt point, their Ieſuite Maldonate confeſſeth, that Votum minoris boni relaxatur per votum maioris boni, &c. A vow of a leſſe good may be releaſed by a greater good: and ſo when a greater good is offered, then to keepe chaſtitie, the partie is not bound to his vow, &c. as he giueth inſtance of the King of Arragon, to whom the Pope gaue licence to marrie a Nunne, for the publike peace of the kingdome, &c. why then may not as well the vow of continencie be diſpenſed withall, to auoid fornication? But here one of their Popiſh writers telleth vs, perperam egiſſe Epiſcopum Romanum, that the Biſhop of Rome did very euill, in diſpenſing with this vow. But the Ieſuite Maldonate hath a more cleanly anſwere, that the Pope did not diſpenſe with a ſolemne vow, neither can he, but only did declare, by the rule of equitie, non teneri voto, &c. that he which had ſo vowed, was not tied to his vow: which in effect is the ſame. Panormitane their great Canoniſt ſaith, that Sixtus, Paludanus, Caietane, and all their ſchoole Canoniſts doe hold, that the mariage after a ſolemne vow, is only made void by Eccleſiaſticall law: they haue then no law of God againſt the ſetting free of ſuch vowes. Our Doway tranſlators alſo in the keeping of vowes except the caſe of neceſſitie: as they ſay Saul offended, when he made that vow (that all the people ſhould faſt, till night) in not excepting the caſe of neceſſitie: the neceſſitie then of him, that cannot liue chaſt, diſpenſeth with his vow: who then can endure ſuch groſſe ſpeeches of the Popiſh writers: that a Prieſt grauius peccat, doth ſin more grieuouſly if he contract matrimonie, then if he play the fornicator, &c. And one of our countrimen affirmeth as much: Minus peccat, qui fornicatur; That he ſinneth not ſo much, which committeth fornication: and he giueth two reaſons thereof, one is, becauſe the fornicator may leaue his concubine, and leade a chaſt life, ſo cannot a married man: and the other is, for that the fornicator doth not iuſtifie his ſinne, as the other doth his mariage. But one anſwere may ſerue for both: for ſeeing mariage after a vow is not forbidden by diuine law, but only Eccleſiaſticall, as their owne Canoniſts confeſſe, it is no ſinne, for ſinne is defined to be a tranſgreſſion of the law: that is, of the diuine law, but fornication is ſinne by the law of God: then it followeth, that for a man once to commit fornication, is worſe then to liue all his life in a married eſtate, wherein he may continue without ſinne, and iuſtifie the ſame without any ſhame.

For the other point, that continencie is not in euery many mans power: their Caſſander may bee a witneſſe of, who ſaith, Vix conteſimum inuenias, qui ab omni commercio fœminarum abſtineat: You ſhall not finde the hundreth Prieſt, who doth abſtaine from all companie of women. A certaine Germane Biſhop is reported to haue ſaid in a certaine banket, that in one yeere, delata ad ſe vndecim millia ſacerdotum palam concubinariorum: there were brought vnto him an eleuen thouſand Prieſts, which openly kept concubines, &c. Let any indifferent man now iudge, how eaſie and common a gift continencie was among the Popiſh prieſtly votaries.

THE FIFTH QVESTION, CONCERNING MONAſticall perſons which doe enter into that profeſſion.

THere are foure ſorts of people which the Papiſts doe offer great wrong vnto, in drawing them to the profeſſion of Monkerie: Firſt, vnto the younger ſort, which haue libertie to marrie. Secondly, to the children and ſonnes whom they make Monkes without conſent of their parents. Thirdly, they ſay, married perſons, by mutuall conſent, may betake themſelues to a Monkes habite. Fourthly, if mariage be contracted, not conſummate or finiſhed, they may one leaue another without conſent firſt had.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE YOVNGER ſort are to be admitted to profeſſe Monkerie.

The Papiſts.

IF they be come to the yeeres of diſcretion, they may, men or women at any age, take vpon them the vow of Monkerie: Bellarm.cap.35. 98.Error.

1 Matth.19.14. Suffer little children to come vnto me: Ergo, young men and maids may become Monkes, Bellarmine. Matth.19.14.

Anſw. Firſt, the text ſpeaketh of little children: but by your confeſſion, they muſt be of yeeres of diſcretion that ſhould enter into your profeſſion: ſo are not little children. Secondly, as though none could come to Chriſt, but through a Monkes cowle: nay, I would they of all men did not goe furtheſt off from Chriſt. It followeth alſo in the text, Of ſuch is the kingdome of heauen: ſo by this reaſon, heauen gates ſhould be open only to Monks and Friers: and this is the right hereſie of the Pelagians, and Manichees, that promiſed the kingdome of God not to any, but thoſe that caſt away their riches.

Argum.2. Iohn Baptiſt liued from a childe in the wilderneſſe: Ergo, lawfull for young ones to profeſſe Monkerie.

Anſw. Firſt, Iohns example is extraordinarie, as his office and calling was ſingular, and therefore is no more to be imitated and followed in his ſolitarie life, then in his diet of Locuſts and wilde honie: He ſprang alſo in his mothers wombe: ſo I thinke all Monkes and Eremites doe not. Secondly, it is not certaine at what yeeres Iohn entred into the wilderneſſe: for hee was thirtie yeeres old when he came and preached in the wilderneſſe, as Matthew writeth, chap.3.1. Matth.3.1.

The Proteſtants.

THough we ſhould grant, that a Monaſticall life were in ſome perſons, and at ſome times tolerable among Chriſtians; yet of all other the younger ſort, in whom luſt doth raigne, were moſt vnfit, and not to be admitted vnto that kinde of life.

Argum.1. Saint Paul would haue no widow to be choſen vnder 60.yeeres, 1.Timoth.5.9. and I will the younger to marrie, verſ.16. Ergo, it is contrarie to Saint Pauls rule, to ſuffer any ſuch to make vowes of continencie. 1.Tim.5.9.

Rhemiſt. anſwere: Firſt, it was but a rule for that time, when as yet there were no Monaſteries nor diſcipline, but young widowes wandred vp and downe idlely.

Anſw. Firſt, the ſame cauſe that young women had to marrie then, they haue now; and therefore the rule is generall. Secondly, as though the walles of Monaſteries were able to keepe in virginitie: no, it is notoriouſly knowne, that vnchaſt life hath ſcaled the walles of Nunneries, crept in at windowes, and found muſes in the ground.

2 Saint Paul (ſay they) counſelleth young widowes to marrie, not young virgins, which hauing not experience of luſt, are not ſo greatly tempted.

Anſ. How chaſt your cloyſter women haue bin, and free from theſe tentations, the ſtories of former times make mention; and the examples of ſo many vnchaſte milch-Nunnes, and filthie Monkes and Friers, are a ſufficient proofe: Fulk.1.Timoth.5. ſect.11. But all theſe ſhifts notwithſtanding S.Pauls rule muſt ſtand, that no widowes muſt be admitted vnder 60.yeeres old.

Bellarmine alſo anſwereth, that the Apoſtles meaning is, that the younger women ſhould be refuſed, not from the vow of continencie, but not to bee of the number of the widowes, which were maintained of the Church.

Contra. Firſt, this is flat oppoſite to the Apoſtle, who would haue the younger women to marrie, verſ.14. how then is it like they were votaries? therefore it is euident, that they are excluded from vow making, ſeeing they are counſelled by the Apoſtle to marrie.

To this he againe replieth, that where the Apoſtle ſaith, I would haue the younger marrie, that it is not a precept, but a counſell.

Contra. Firſt, it is a charge and commandement which the Apoſtle giueth, that they ſhould marrie, in reſpect of their frailtie, becauſe diuers were turned alreadie after Satan by their incontinencie, and gaue occaſion to the aduerſaries to ſpeake euill. Wherefore to auoid theſe things he not onely aduiſeth, but willeth and chargeth, they ſhould marrie. Secondly, though it be but a counſell, yet it will follow, that the Apoſtle gaue counſell to them to marrie, which had vowed ſingle life, as Bellarmine confeſſeth, that the younger women were not barred from vowing continencie.

Secondly, if the younger women are not admitted to be of the number of the almes-widowes for feare of incontinencie, they were as vnfit to enter into any vow or profeſſion of ſingle life. And be it granted, that it might be a greater offence for publike widowes, then priuate votaries, to breake their vow; yet in the other the offence were great enough: and therefore the Apoſtles rule of their age ought to be obſerued in both.

Argum.2. The Manichees tooke occaſion hereby to inſult againſt the Catholikes, becauſe they admitted ſo many virgins to the profeſſion of ſingle life; Certatim ad hanc profeſſionem eas incitatis ſuaſionibus veſtris, vt iam pene maior in eccleſiis omnibus virginum apud vos, quam mulierum numeroſitas habeatur: Auguſt. cont. Fauſtum. 30.4. Ye labour (ſay the Manichees) to draw women of euery hand to this profeſſion by your perſwaſions, that now in your Churches, the number of profeſſed virgins exceedeth the number of women, &c. And hereby the Manichees that extolled virginitie, and condemned mariage, were induced to thinke that the Catholike Biſhops alſo were of their opinion.

The Imperiall law enioyneth, that no woman be admitted to be a Deaconeſſe of the Church vnder fiftie, or threeſcore yeeres, according to the precept of the Apoſtle: Cod. lib.1. tit.6. leg.9. Theodoſ.

We haue alſo for this point very euident teſtimonie of their owne law: Clemens epiſtol.1. S. Peter is brought in ſpeaking thus: Ad preſbyteros fiant iſta ante omnia vt pudicitiæ ſtudentes, adoleſcentes nuptijs iungant, quo calorem feruentis ætatis, coniugali lege præueniant: item iuniores viduas nuptijs copulate: Theſe inſtructions concerne the Prieſts, firſt of all, as men carefull to preſerue chaſtitie, let them ioyne young men in mariage, that the heate of burning youth may by the matrimoniall law be preuented: likewiſe let the younger virgins be coupled in mariage.

Concil. ſub Sylueſtro, cap.10. Vt vidua non niſi 72. annorum eligatur: nulla porrò ſchemata monachorum oportet fieri niſi poſt 25. ætatis annum propter ſcandala, iam euacuato omni feruore diaboli, vt inueniat ſibi mundum vas ſpiritus ſanctus: That a widow be not choſen vnder 72. yeeres: let none take the habite of a Monke before he be 25. yeere old, to auoid offence, that the diuelliſh heate of the fleſh being euacuate, the holy Ghoſt may finde a cleane veſſell.

Concil. Agathenſ. can.19. Sanctimoniales, quantumlibet mores earum probati ſint, ante annum ætatis quadrageſimum non velentur: Holy virgins, though their behauiour be neuer ſo much approoued, let them not be vailed before the fortieth yeere of their age. This is alleaged in their owne decrees, cauſ.20. qu.1. c.13.

And many ſuch Canons and decrees might be alleaged, againſt the entring of the yonger ſort into Monkiſh profeſſion.

And for further euidence: 1. The generall Greeke Chalcedon Councell decreeth that a Deaconeſſe ſhould not be ordained vnder 40. yeeres, Can.15.

De virgin. veland.

2 Tertullian of the South and Africane Church ſaith: Scio virginem in viduatu ab annis nondum viginti collatam: I know a virgin not yet twentie yeeres old made a widow of the Church: which he calleth miraculum, ne dixerim monſtrum, a wonder, that I ſay not a monſter, &c. He miſliketh that young women ſhould be deputed to the ſeruice of the Church. At this day, in Aethiopia their Prieſts are not ordained till after thirtie yeeres of their age: as Zaga Zabo witneſſeth: it is like they obſerue no leſſe time for their Monkes, which are not allowed to marrie, as their Prieſts are.

De ſtat. Eccleſ. pag.56.

4 As Clemangis a Doctor of Paris, that liued 200. yeeres agoe, thus ſetteth out for the inconuenience of cloyſtering ſuch young Nunnes: What are Nunneries now adaies, but the execrable brothel houſes of Venus, the harbours of young wanton men, where they ſatisfie their luſt, &c. that now the vailing of a Nunne is all one, as if you proſtituted her openly to be a whore. Thomas Aquinas ſaith it is inordinatum, an inordinate and diſordered thing that young women ſhould be made Abbeſſes, &c. and ſo is it alſo inconuenient for young girles to become Nunnes: for as Plutarke well ſaith, Mariage is the ſureſt and ſafeſt bond of youth.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER CHILDREN may enter into profeſſion of Monkerie without their parents conſent.

The Papiſts.

99. Error.

IF they be of ſufficient age, as the men of 14. yeeres at the leaſt, the women of 12. and their parents be not driuen to any ſuch neceſſitie, that they neede their childrens helpe, they may without parents conſent enter into Monkerie.

Geneſ.12.1. Math.10.37.

Argum.1. God ſaid to Abraham, Get thee out of thy countrie, and from thy fathers houſe, Geneſ.12. And Chriſt, Math.10. Whoſoeuer loueth father or mother more then me, is not worthie this of life: Ergo, children may become Monkes, without their fathers leaue: Bellarm.cap.36.

Anſw. Firſt, who would haue thought that Abraham was a Monke, but that the Ieſuite ſaith it? Secondly, by the ſame reaſon a man may not leaue his parents onely, but goe out of his countrie. Thirdly, Abraham was 75. yeeres old at that time, when hee went out of Haran, verſ.4. Ergo, wee will conclude that none ought to be made Monkes before thoſe yeeres. Fourthly, when God calleth any man to a Monkiſh life, as Abraham had an eſpeciall calling of God, we will giue him good leaue to goe.

Concerning the other ſaying of our Sauiour, it maketh nothing for you. Firſt, Chriſt ſpeaketh of perſecution, when a man ought not for loue of his friends to denie Chriſt: but, I trow you will not grant, that your Monkiſh life is perſecution: and yet it is after a ſort; for the Locuſts, which are none other but Monkes and Friers, Apocal.9. doe bite and ſting like ſerpents, that is, doe ſecretly wound mens conſciences. Secondly, a man may leaue his parents, as Chriſt commandeth, though hee dwell in the ſame houſe with them: that is, by ſetting his loue and affection on heauenly things. Thirdly, doe all goe to Chriſt that come into your Monaſteries? nay, I would they went not from Chriſt: for they liue after another rule, then Chriſts: Francis your great founder erected a new ſect of Monkerie, and found out a new rule for them, which he called regulam Euangelicam, the rule of the Goſpell: as though Chriſts rule were not ſufficient.

*Argum.*2. Here the conſtitution of Iuſtinian may be obiected, *Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*6.*leg.*42. which is, that a ſonne, etiam inuito patre, againſt his fathers will, may become a Monke. To the which I anſwere: firſt, this ſame conſtitution alſo decreeth, that a ſonne againſt his fathers will profeſſing monaſticall life, may ſucceed him in his teſtament, and to be his heire, nullo eis impedimento, &c. their ſanctimoniall conuerſation being no let vnto them. If they will haue this law ſtand in force for the one, why not alſo for the other? as it ſeemeth to make with them in one point, ſo in the other concerning voluntarie and profeſſed pouertie of Monkes, it maketh againſt them. Secondly, the Conſtitutions of Iuſtinian, which were firſt inſerted into the Code, more then fiue hundred yeeres after Chriſt, doe ſomewhat ſauour of the ſuperſtition which began then to ſet in foote, and therefore are not of that authoritie which the more ancient Imperials haue. Thirdly, this conſtitution is contrarie to other Imperiall lawes of greater antiquitie: as Alexander made a law, *Cod.lib.*8.*tit.*47.*leg.*3. That a father might chaſtiſe his ſonne if he offended him, and if he ſo continued, the Preſident, at the appointment of his father, ſhould more ſeuerely puniſh him. This law permitteth not the ſonne to be diſobedient to his father without due correction: but to enter into a profeſſion to his diſlike, is diſobedience: Ergo, by the law not tolerable. Likewiſe, *tit.*49.*leg.*4. Pater inuitus non cogitur, &c. The father againſt his will cannot be conſtrained, no not by the Princes letters to ſet free or manumit his ſonne: but he is manumitted by entring into Monkerie againſt his fathers will. This then is contrarie to the law: and thus euery Abbot and Monke ſhall preſume to doe more then the Emperour himſelfe challengeth.

The Proteſtants.

Children ought not by the law of God to make any vow of ſingle and continent life without the conſent and liking of their parents: Luther. Pet.Martyr. lib.de caelibat.& votis.

*Argum.*1. By the law of Moſes the father had power to diſallow the vowes which the daughter made being in his houſe, Numb.30.6. which law was not ceremonious: for it was grounded vpon the Morall law, which commanded all obedience and dutie of the children to the parents. And that it is not abrogate, it appeareth, becauſe the ſame law is renued by S.Paul, 1.Corinth.7.verſ.36.37. where the Apoſtle referreth the whole matter of keeping a virgin, or placing of her in mariage to the will of the father; yet ſo, that he muſt haue regard vnto the neceſſitie, the eſtate and condition of his virgin. Both theſe places doe apertly proue, that neither the childe can be beſtowed in mariage, nor vowed to virginitie, without the conſent and determination of the parents.

Numb.30.6.

1.Cor.7.36.37.

*Argum.*2. The father hath as great power ouer his ſonne, as the maſter ouer his ſeruant: but the ſeruant cannot take vpon him the profeſſion of Monkerie without the conſent of his maſter: Ergo, &c.

The ſecond part of the reaſon is proued both by the Ciuill and Canon law: firſt, *Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*6. *leg.*16.Honor.Theodoſ.Ruſticus, &c. A rurall ſeruant being made a Clerke, is bound to ſerue his maſter by a ſufficient ſubſtitute. But more euidently it appeareth by the conſtitution of *Anthemius, leg.*34. Inhomnis aſcriptitiorum, &c. Wee will that no ſeruant make choice of a ſolitarie life without the conſent of his maſter: if he doe, his maſter ſhall haue the ſame power ouer him, which he hath ouer other ſeruants.

See alſo for their owne law the decree of Gelaſius, That ſeruants entring into Monaſteries without conſent of their maſters or patrones, ſhould be reſtored vnto them, *Decret.part.*1.*diſt.*54.*c.*12.

Likewiſe, *Concil.Chalced.can.*4. Decreuimus, &c. Wee haue decreed that no ſeruant bee receiued into a Monaſterie without the knowledge and leaue of his maſter.

The firſt part of the argument is denied by Bellarmine, that ſonnes to their parents are not in like ſubiection, as ſeruants to their maſters; and therefore haue more power of themſelues, then ſeruants haue.

Contra. Though children are not in ſuch ſeruile ſubiection, for there is one feare of children, an other of ſeruants; yet the father hath as great power ouer the perſons of their children being within age, as ouer ſeruants: becauſe the law of nature, which bindeth ſonnes, is ſtronger then the law of men, which maketh ſeruants: and parents haue greater power ouer their owne fleſh, then ouer ſtrangers.

Let vs heare what authoritie Auguſtine yeeldeth to the father ouer his children: Agite vicem noſtram in domibus veſtris: Epiſcopus inde appellatus eſt quia ſuperintendit: vnuſquiſque ergo in domo ſua, ſi caput eſt domui ſuæ, debet ad eum pertinere epiſcopatus officium: de Sanct. Ser. 51. You (ſaith Auguſtine their Biſhop) muſt ſupplie our ſtead in your houſes: a Biſhop or Superintendent, is ſo called, becauſe he ouerſeeth: therefore euery houſeholder, being the head of his houſe, ought to play the Biſhop in his houſe, &c. The father then is a Biſhop ouer his children: ſhall any man then dare to take any out of his houſe, that is, his Biſhoprick, or any ſheepe out of his fold, without the Biſhop and ſhepheards conſent?

The teſtimonie alſo of their owne law in this caſe is very cleere: Si puella in puerili ætate, &c. If a maiden in her childhood, or vnder yeeres, doth binde her ſelfe with an oath in her fathers houſe, without the knowledge of her father, if her father, ſo ſoone as he heareth of it, doth gainſay, her vow and oath is void: Cauſ. 32. qu. 2. c. 14.

Likewiſe, Bonif. 8. ſext. decret. lib. 3. tit. 12. c. 4. Filius pro anima, &c. The ſonne can make choice of nothing concerning his ſoule, without conſent of his father, though hee may chuſe ſepulture for his bodie.

See the conſent herein both of the Eaſt and Greeke, and of the Egyptian and South Church, in the 4. Canon of the Chalcedon Councell before alleaged: where though Dioſcorus Patriarke of Alexandria were depoſed for fauouring the hereſie of Eutyches, yet there were twelue other Egyptian Biſhops preſent, and gaue conſent. See alſo of the Latine Church the decrees of Gratian before produced: See alſo in the former queſtion the iudgement of the reformed Churches, against the thruſting of young maides and young men vpon Monaſteries. Chalced. art. 4.

THE THIRD PART, WHETHER MARIED PERſons may with mutuall conſent become votaries.

The Papiſts.

100. Error. With mutuall conſent the man and the wife may ſeparate themſelues, and vow and promiſe ſingle life for euer, ſo long as they both ſhall liue, Bellarm. cap. 37.

Argum. 1. Mary and Ioſeph were perfitly man and wife, yet by mutuall conſent they liued continently all their daies: Ergo, it is lawfull for maried couples to ſeparate themſelues for euer, both agreeing thereunto, Bellarm. cap. 37.

Anſw. 1. It appeareth by the text, that there was no ſuch thing purpoſed by Ioſeph before hee was admoniſhed by the Angell in a dreame, but that, as ſhe was alreadie betrothed, ſo there was an intent on Ioſephs part, that they ſhould come together, Matth. 1. 18. but that in the meane time Marie was found with childe by the holie Ghoſt: and ſo from that time Ioſeph being a iuſt man neuer knew his wife: there was no ſuch purpoſe or vow before. Math. 1. 18.

2. That this was an extraordinarie example, who ſeeth it not? When any man ſhall be admoniſhed by an Angell as Ioſeph was, and ſhall haue the like cauſe as Ioſeph had to abſtaine, which ſhall neuer be, he may be bold to doe as Ioſeph did.

Argum. 2. I will not here conceale a certaine law of Iuſtinian. Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 42. whereby it is prouided, that if the husband or wife, Religionis cauſa a coniugio receſſerit, &c. Doe for religion ſake depart from mariage, and chuſe ſolitarie life, the other ſhall haue ſuch dower, or gift, as if the partie ſo departed were dead.

Anſw. This law ſeemeth to allow of the departure of the married parties, euen without conſent each of other, for it ſpeaketh of the departure of one of the parties onely: and thus Bellarmine interpreteth this law, and refuteth it alſo, holding it to bee a great error, that either partie ſhould depart without mutuall conſent: wherefore ſince that this law is refuſed by them, I ſhall not neede to refute it.

The Proteſtants.

They that are once ioyned together in mariage, and haue made a couenant each to other before God, cannot ſeparate themſelues though they both conſent, there being no other cauſe, but a purpoſe of ſingle life for more holineſſe ſake.

1. Cor. 7. 5. Argum. 1. It is flat contrarie to S. Pauls rule, 1. Cor. 7. 5. Defraud not your ſelues except it be with conſent for a time, that you may giue your ſelues to faſting and prayer, and againe come together, leſt Satan tempt you for your incontinencie. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith directly: they ſhould but ſeparate themſelues for a time. Secondly, we doe thus reaſon out of his words: There is no cauſe of ſeparation, but to be giuen to faſting and prayer; but this may be done by a ſeparation for a time: neither is it neceſſarie we ſhould alwaies be giuen to faſting and prayer, but vpon ſpeciall occaſion: therefore perpetuall ſeparation is not needfull. Thirdly, they that are long ſeparated, are ſubiect to fall into tentation:

the ſame cauſe therefore that moued them firſt to marrie, for auoyding of incontinencie, ought to moue them to come together againe: Therefore it is not good nor lawfull they ſhould ſeparate themſelues for euer.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Apoſtle ſaying, This I ſpeake by way of indulgence or permiſſion, verſ.6. ſheweth that he would rather, they ſhould abſtaine altogether; yet in reſpect of their frailtie he permitteth, that they come together againe: ſo then, they that doe ſeparate themſelues at once for all, doe that which is beſt agreeable to the Apoſtles meaning, *cap.*30.

Contra. Firſt, it is vntrue, that Saint Paul had rather the married ſhould be ſeparated altogether: for where he wiſheth that all men were as himſelfe, he ſpeaketh directly to the widowes, and vnmarried, verſ.8. and not to them, which were married: and againe, hee ſhould be contrarie to himſelfe, verſ.24. Let euery man, wherein he was called, abide: and it followeth verſ.27. Art thou bound to a wife, ſeeke not to bee looſed? wherefore they that are married, ought to remaine in that eſtate which they are called vnto. Secondly, this then, which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh by way of indulgence, is not to be referred to their comming together againe, for the Apoſtle hath for that a direct commandement, verſ.10. I command, not I, but the Lord, let not the wife depart from her husband: and againe, verſ.5. Defraud not one another: which is a precept, as Bellarmine confeſſeth; but if they ſhould be ſeparated altogether, they ſhould one defraud another: wherefore this permiſſion belongeth to the ſecond verſe, where the Apoſtle to auoide fornication, granteth the remedie of marriage to euery one, that hath not the other gift.

1.Cor.7.24.27.

Verſ.5.10.

*Argum.*2. That which God hath coupled, no man ought to put aſunder: but they that are married haue made a couenant to God, Pro.2.17. as well as to themſelues, and are ioyned by Gods law together: Ergo, they cannot diſſolue their marriage by their owne power and will, the Lord hauing an intereſt therein.

Pro.2.17.

Bellarmine ſaith, that by this ſeparation marriage is not diſſolued. Anſwere. It is as much diſſolued, as by your law in caſes of diuorce: for theſe are their words: For aduoutrie one may diſmiſſe another, but neither partie can marrie againe for any cauſe during life, *Rhemiſt. Matth.*19. *ſect.*4. So ye allow onely a kinde of diſmiſſion in the caſe of adulterie, and ſo you doe in the vow of continencie: and thus you make this cauſe as forcible as the other, to breake off matrimoniall dutie, which is contrarie to the Goſpell.

Auguſtine thus writeth, *Non licet excepta cauſa fornicationis coniugem à coniuge dirimi et nec ſterilem coniugem fas eſt relinquere, vt facunda ducatur, de nupt & concupiſcen. Lib.*1.*cap.*10. It is not lawfull for married couples, one to be ſeparate from another, vnleſſe it be for fornication; nor to leaue a barren wife to marrie a fruitfull. Therefore if fornication onely be a iuſt cauſe of finall ſeparation, there can be no other: If there were any other it is moſt like it ſhould be for procreation of children: But neither for that cauſe is a man to leaue his wife: Ergo, for no other.

Nicholaus 1. *de matrimon. can.*7. Hi, qui matrimonium ſani contraxerunt, &c. They, which were ſound when they married, if afterward one of them chance to bee mad or franticke, or hath any other infirmitie: as if hee bee made blinde by his enemies, maymed in his bodie, or cut in his priuie members, for none of theſe cauſes is their marriage to bee diſſolued, &c. But thoſe are greater lets and impediments to marriage, then marriage is or can bee to the exerciſe of religion: therefore not for any vowe of continencie is marriage to bee diſſolued, or any ſeparation to bee admitted.

And yet we haue clearer euidence out of their owne law, *Decret. p.*2. *cauſ.*33. *qu.*5. *c.*11. Vota abſtinentia, quæ mulier, &c. The vowes of abſtinence, which the wife made by her husbands leaue, if hee afterward forbid, ſhe is not bound to keepe. By this Canon it is not lawfull for the wife, no not with the husbands conſent to become a Votarie. *Decret. Gregor. lib.*2. *tit.*24. *c.*24. This caſe is put, a certaine man and his wife doe ſweare each to other, that they would neuer deſire one the others companie againe: afterward the man would haue receiued his wife, ſhe refuſed, ſaying, ſhe would be a Saracene firſt, &c. Innocentius 3. thus reſolueth the caſe, that if the man could not be perſwaded to liue ſingle, the woman ſhould be enforced by excommunication to returne vnto him, &c. If an oath then doe not hold as touching ſeparation of the husband and the wife by conſent, no more ſhal a vow binde.

Likewiſe *decret. Greg. lib.*3. *tit.*32. *c.*1. Alexander 3. this caſe is propounded: the husband in the preſence of diuers Prieſts and Monkes, by the licence of his wife profeſſeth Monaſticall life: if his wife afterward ſuſpected not to liue continently deſire her husband, Vt poteſt & debet de monaſterio reuocari; The man may and ought to be fetched out of his Monaſterie. Ergo, there can be no finall ſeparation in marriage, no not by conſent, by their owne Canon law.

It ſeemeth, that both in the Greeke and Æthiopike Church there is no ſuch faſhion to ſeparate man and wife for the loue of Monaſticall life: for among the Muſcouites there is no Prieſt, whom they call Pope, cui non ſit Popadia, that hath not a Popadie, that is a Presbiteſſe: and ſo is it alſo in the Aethiopike Church, who ſeeme ſo to vnderſtand litterally theſe words of S.Paul, that a Biſhop may be vnius vxoris vir, the husband of one wife, &c. He muſt then haue his wife: which verball interpretation of S.Pauls words though we allow not, neither is it brought in to that end: yet it ſheweth, that this vſe is not heard of among them.

4 The teſtimonie of the Latine Church is before cited out of the decrees.

THE FOVRTH PART, WHETHER MARRIAGE contracted not conſummate, may without conſent be broken for the vow of continencie.

The Papiſts.

101. Error. THeir opinion is, that if the marriage be contracted onely and ratified, but not yet conſummate, by the parties comming together, it is lawfull for either of them without the others conſent to vow chaſtitie, *cap.*38. Bellarm.

His reaſon is, becauſe it is lawfull for a man to paſſe from a leſſe perfect ſtate of life to a more perfect, if it may be done without detriment, as this may be: for yet they haue no children, and the partie may as well be married to another, Bellarm.

Anſwer. First, a ſingle life is not alwaies the perfecter ſtate, nor to all, as it is not to them that haue not the gift to containe, as it is moſt like he hath not, that is contracted, and hath made promiſe of marriage: for then all this needed not. Secondly, though there bee none of thoſe impediments named, yet there is a greater; namely, their faith and promiſe made each to other before God, which they ought not to violate. Thirdly, S. Paul ſaith, If thou be bound to a wife, ſeeke not to be looſed, 1.Cor.7.27. But they that are eſpouſed one to the other, are bound; vnleſſe you will ſay, that the couenant made by them vnto God, Pro.2.17. bindeth not. 1.Cor 7.17.

*Argum.*2. There is a double bond in Matrimonie, a carnall and ſpirituall, as the carnall is diſſolued by the temporall death, ſo the ſpirituall is by the ſpirituall death; ſuch is the Monaſticall profeſſion, whereby a man dieth to the whole world, in renouncing his goods, *Bellarm. cap.*38. *ration.*2.

Anſwere. First, if to renounce the goods of the world, be to die to the world, then your Clergie ſhould thus die vnto the world, as well as your Monkes; as your owne decree teſtifieth, *Cauſ.*1. *qu.*2. *c.*6. Qui opibus ſuis, &c. They that can be maintained by their owne goods, if they liue of the ſtipends of the Church, commit ſacriledge: wherefore your Orders are as able to diſſolue a contract of marriage, as Monkerie, which notwithſtanding you denie. Secondly, if to be a Monke, is to die to the world, then euery Monke ſhall be ſaued: for they that die with Chriſt, ſhall alſo liue with him. Rom. 6.8. But I thinke they dare not ſay ſo of all Monks, ſeeing they denie not but that the Pope may be a reprobate: and yet Saint Peters chaire will as ſoone bring them to heauen, as a Monkes coule. Thirdly, the ſpirituall death may bee euen in marriage, vnleſſe Bellarmine will ſay, that in marriage is no ſaluation (for where there is not dying with Chriſt, there is no liuing with him:) If a man then that is married, may die vnto ſinne, then it is falſe, that the ſpirituall death doth diſſolue the ſpirituall bond of marriage. Rom. 6.8.

The Proteſtants.

MAtrimonie whether ratified onely by lawfull contract or eſpouſals, or conſummate, ought not any way to be broken with conſent or without, for Monaſticall profeſſion.

Argum 1. Our reaſon is, becauſe it is perfect marriage alreadie in ſubſtance and before God, which is ratified by contract onely and ſolemne vow and couenant made each to other: And being thus betrothed, the one giueth power of their bodie to the other, and now they are no more free. That this marriage is perfect before God, and in ſubſtance, it appeareth by the law of Moſes, by the which a man defiling a maide betrothed, was to ſuffer death, as well as if he had committed vncleanneſſe with a woman alreadie married, Deuterom.22.verſ.22.23. And Matth.1.18. Marie that was but betrothed to Ioſeph, is by the Angell called his wife, verſ.20. Deut.22.22. Matth.1.18.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that notwithſtanding the contract, the wife is not bound to yeeld the due debt of marriage to her husband, if it be a detriment to her ſpirituall good, as in this caſe it is, when ſhe entreth into Monaſticall profeſſion.

Contra, First, this reaſon maketh as much for the diſſolution of marriage conſummate, as of the contract onely: for the temporall good of marriage alſo muſt yeeld to the ſpirituall good. Secondly, we denie that it tendeth to any ſpirituall good, for monaſticall life to violate a contract made before God: firſt, becauſe the partie is not ſure to haue the gift of continencie, hauing ſo lately contracted and agreed to vſe the remedie of marriage, feeling her owne weakneſſe: and ſo ſhe is more like to fall into a ſpirituall euill, to liue in continuall burning and luſt of the fleſh, as many of their milch-Nunnes did. Secondly, becauſe no ſpirituall good is to be hoped for contrarie to Gods ordinance, which euen vpon the contract giueth the husband power ouer the wife, and maketh her bound vnto him as long as ſhe liueth; 1.Cor.7.39. The wife is bound to the husband, as long as he liueth: but ſhe that is eſpouſed onely is a wife, as was ſhewed before in the example of Marie. Thirdly, the Apoſtle ſaith, verſ.27. Art thou bound to a wife? ſeeke not to be looſed: but he that is contracted onely, is bound: Ergo, hee ought vpon no occaſion to ſeeke to be looſed. 1.Cor.7.39.27.

*Argum.*2. The vow of continencie made in the taking of orders, non eſt efficax, is not of force to diſſolue matrimonie before contracted, as Iohn 22. decreeth, Extrauag. tit. 6. c. 1. Ergo, neither monaſticall profeſſion.

Bellarmine anſwereth, the reaſon is not alike, becauſe marriage is repugnant to monaſticall life of it ſelfe ſimply: but to orders it is repugnant onely by the decree of the Church.

Contra. Firſt, wee take it then as granted, that by the word of God marriage is not repugnant to orders, but onely by the conſtitution of the Church. Secondly, Monaſticall life alſo is an humane inuention, as well as the ſingle life of the Clergie: for S. Paul knew no ſuch profeſſion, when he giueth euery man leaue, without exception, to haue his wife, 1. Cor. 7. 2. Thirdly, though wee ſhould grant, that Monkerie bindeth more from marriage then Orders, yet the vow making bindeth as well in the one as the other: for to marrie contrarie to vow, is ſimply repugnant in their opinion: wherefore ſeeing that a vow after contract in Orders diſſolueth it not, neither ſhall a vow made in Monkerie. 1. Cor. 7. 2.

Concerning the Ciuill law, it may appeare, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6, leg. 42. that the law did puniſh ſuch, as being contracted, betooke themſelues to ſolitarie life: the man loſt all his tokens and gifts ſent to his ſpouſe, and ſhe was to render double the value of the tokens receiued: although this law is abrogated by Iuſtinian the laſt law-maker of the Emperours, whoſe times ſauoured of ſuperſtition.

Their owne law is alſo ſomewhat doubtfull: Decr. Greg. lib. 3. tit. 32. c. 14. Innocen. 3. though hee dare not ſwerue from the practiſe of his predeceſſors, yet deliuereth this to be his iudgement: Poteſt non inconſulte videri, &c. It may with good aduiſement be thought, that matrimonie contracted by words of the preſent, in nullo caſu, &c. in no caſe ſhould be diſſolued as long as the parties liue.

Likewiſe, lib. 4. tit. 1. c. 16. Alexander. 3. thus determineth, That if a man ſweare to be contracted to a woman within a certaine ſpace, and in the meane time haue a purpoſe to liue monaſtically, hee ſhould firſt, to ſaue his oath, performe the contract, &c. If then the vow or promiſe of monaſticall life be not able to diſſolue a promiſe of a contract, much leſſe the contract it ſelfe, which is more then a promiſe of marriage.

The Maſter of Sentences alſo is of opinion, that a contract made, per verba de præſenti, by words vttered of the preſent, cannot without common conſent be broken, lib. 4. diſt. 27. I.

Eſpencæus alſo a reuerent writer among the Papiſts holdeth, that marriage whether conſummate or contracted onely, ought not for any profeſſion of monaſticall life to be diſſolued, lib. 6. cap. 4. de continent.

Concil. Ancyran. can. 11. ſic Deſponſatas puellas, &c. We thinke it meete, that if a maide eſpouſed to one, be defiled of another, that ſhe ſhould be reſtored, to whom ſhe was eſpouſed, although it be certaine, that ſhe hath loſt the flower of her Virginitie by the other, &c. But the looſing of her Virginitie is more forcible to diſſolue the contract, then the vow of chaſtitie, for it is able to diſſolue marriage conſummate, and ſo is not the other without mutuall conſent, as the Ieſuite affirmeth: therefore by this Canon, if the more forceable cauſe cannot breake the eſpouſals, much leſſe can the other not ſo forceable.

2 Auguſtine ſaith, Coniuges fidem ſibi pariter debent: Cui fidei tantum iuris tribuit Apoſtolus, vt eam poteſtatem appellaret dicens, Mulier non habet poteſtatem ſui corporis ſed vir, &c. Married couples doe owe faith and troth one to the other: which mutuall troth the Apoſtle maketh ſuch account of, that he giueth it the name of power, ſaying: The woman hath not power of her owne bodie, but the man, and likewiſe the man, &c. Auguſtine ſaith, that by the very plighting of their troth each to other, they receiue mutuall power and intereſt one of anothers body. But this troth was plighted before the conſummation of their marriage: Ergo, they had one intereſt in another then, and can doe nothing one without the conſent of the other. De bon. coniugal. cap. 4.

Herein, 1. The cuſtome of the Muſcouites (though in many other things, they are verie rude) which follow the Greeke Church, is to be preferred: for in their ſolemnizing of marriage, the Prieſt asketh the man: Nunquid ægrotam, ſcabioſam et decrepitam derelinques: Wilt thou forſake thy wife being ſicke, ſcabbed or decrepit: and he likewiſe asketh the woman, An cæco, curuo et decrepito marito fida eris comes, Whether ſhee will be a faithfull companion to her husband, though he be blinde, crooked and decrepit: and they both ſweare they will, &c. ſo it ſeemeth that theſe their eſpouſals hold inuiolably firme. De Ruſſor. relig. ad Dauid. Chytreum.

2 In the Æthiopike Church, it ſeemeth they make no difference betweene the contract and ſolemnizing of marriage, for both are done at home, not in the Church: the one then holdeth as firme as the other. Zaga Zabo in the ſame.

3 Likewiſe here the reformed Churches condemne vtterly all ſuch vowes, to breake eſpouſals, or otherwiſe: For he which voweth virginitie, doth either vow it as a worſhip of God, and then (becauſe it is not commanded in the word of God) it is a commandement of men, &c. or elſe he doth it to merit the remiſſion of ſinnes, and then it is a wicked vow. Wittemberg. c. 26.

THE SIXTH QVESTION, CONCERNING THE rules and diſcipline of Monaſticall life.

THis queſtion hath foure parts. Firſt, of the ſolitarie and ſeuere kinde of life in Monkes and Eremites. Secondly, of their canonicall houres appointed for prayer. Thirdly, of their habite and apparell. Fourthly, of their maintenance, whether it ought to come by their labour.

THE FIRST PART, CONCERNING THE ſolitarie and auſtere life of Monkes, and of Eremites.

The Papiſts.

102.Error. TO liue in ſolitarie places, to weare ſack-cloth, to bee giuen continually to faſting, to lie hard, to fare meanely, and by other ſuch wayes to puniſh and afflict the body, they ſay, are notable meanes to bring the ſoule to the contemplation of heauenly things.

*Argum.*1. Iohn Baptiſt liued in the Deſart, fared courſely, and was barely apparelled, he ate Locuſts, (that is either the tops of certaine hearbs, or a kinde of ſmall beaſt, it was a courſe kinde of diet) and wilde honie, and wore a garment of Camels haire: he was a right paterne of true Eremites, Bellarm.cap.39.lib.2.de Monach.

Anſwere. Firſt, Iohns life was not ſo auſtere, as they make it: for the place where he liued was not ſo ſolitarie, but that there were villages and houſes not farre off, as it may appeare by the peoples reſort vnto him: his apparell was of Camels haire, and was ſomewhat courſe, yet no ſuch thing as ſack- Fulk.Mat.3. ſect.1. cloth, or haire-cloth; for of the fineſt of the Camels haire Chamblets and Groggraines are made, that are had in price amongſt vs: his diet alſo in eating Locuſts and wilde honey was vſuall in that Countrey; yet there is ſome queſtion, what thoſe Locuſts were: ſome thinke that they were the tops of certaine hearbs, which are called ἀκρίδες as Zaga Zabo an Aethiopike Biſhop thinketh, that Iohn liued onely of hearbs: ſome that they were certaine Crab-fiſhes, which the fiſher-men caſt vpon the ſhore out of Iordane, as vncleane meate, but it is not like that Iohn would eate any meate vncleane by the law: others reade ἀχράδας, which were a certaine kinde of wilde Peares: And Epiphanius ſaith, lib.cont.Ebionitas: that ſome Iewes would haue it ἐγκρίδας, which ſignifieth certaine pleaſant confections made of honey: but it is moſt like, that they were a kinde of Locuſts, which ſome people vſed to feede of: as Dioſcorides lib.2.c.44. ſaith that the people called Alphet, and Plinie, lib. Leuit.11.22. 11.c.29. writeth that the Parthians did eate of Locuſts. And a certaine kinde of Locuſts, called Arbeh: of their multitude, is counted in the Leuiticall law among the cleane meates. It was then a courſe foode, which Iohn liued of, though not ſo vile, as the Ieſuite imagineth. Secondly, wee denie not but Iohn liued an auſtere life, becauſe hee was a Preacher of repentance, and had a ſingular office to prepare men for the comming of Chriſt: Therefore his calling being extraordinarie, he cannot be an author of an ordinarie calling among Chriſtians. Thirdly, ſeeing Chriſt came eating and drinking, liued amongſt men, and was apparelled as others were, why ſhould Chriſtians rather chuſe to imitate the Math.11.11. Baptiſt, who had no office, or miniſterie in the Goſpell, Matth.11.11. then our Sauiour Chriſt, whoſe life and doctrine is for our imitation?

Bellarmine replieth, notwithſtanding this which hath beene alleaged, that Iohn verely liued in the Deſart and ſolitarie wilderneſſe, where was no reſort; nor frequencie of people at all; which hee Luk.1.80. would proue by theſe two reaſons chiefly: firſt, becauſe it is ſaid, Luke 1.80. That hee dwelled in the wilderneſſe, till the time he ſhould ſhew himſelfe to Iſrael: but if hee had beene in his fathers houſe, he could not haue beene vnknowne to Iſrael. Secondly, becauſe they aske if he were Elias: but if he had beene conuerſant in his fathers houſe, they would not haue doubted, knowing whoſe ſonne hee was, cap.39.

Anſwere. To the firſt reaſon I anſwere, that it followeth not, Iohn was not yet knowne to Iſrael, Ergo, he liued in the wilderneſſe: for our Sauiour was not knowne to Iſrael, till he was 30. yeere olde, when he began to preach; yet liued he not in the wilderneſſe, but in his parents houſe, and was obe- Luk.2.51. dient vnto them, Luk.2.51. Neither yet do we ſay, that Iohn all that time liued in his fathers houſe: he might ſequeſter himſelfe to ſome more priuate or ſecret places, for meditation, though not altogether ſolitarie and vnfrequented of none, but wilde beaſts. To the ſecond, our anſwere is, that they John 7.27. knew alſo whence Ieſus was, Iohn 7.27. yet they were doubtfull who hee ſhould bee, whether the Luk.1.65. Prophet, or the Chriſt, verſ.40.41. ſo concerning Iohn, though his parents were knowne, yet might they be doubtfull of his office. Againe, though he had liued in the very wilderneſſe from a childe; yet his birth was ſo famous, bruted ouer all the Countrie of Iudea, Luke.1.65. that his parentage could not be hid.

2 Now our contrarie reaſons, that Iohn liued not in ſuch a wilderneſſe, as where no reſort of people Luk.1.80. was, are theſe: Firſt, it is ſaid, that he was in the wilderneſſe, till he ſhewed himſelfe, &c. Luk.1.80. but it is not like, that ſtraight after his birth, being yet an infant, he was put forth into the wilderneſſe, vnleſſe they will imagine, that he ſucked of ſome wilde beaſt: wherefore by the wilderneſſe here muſt be vnderſtood the hilly and leſſe inhabited Countrie of Iudea, where Zacharie dwelt, verſ. 39. and where Iohn alſo had his education. Secondly, Matth. 3. 1. Iohn is ſaid to haue preached in the wilderneſſe of Iudea: which addition ſheweth, that it was the leſſe frequented part of Iudea, not ſimply a wilderneſſe, as Chriſt is ſaid to haue beene led into the wilderneſſe, Matth. 4. 1. without any other addition. Thirdly, it is not like that Iohn would begin to preach where there was no people at all, but ſauage and wilde beaſts. Fourthly, Iohn preached and baptized in the wilderneſſe, and there was Ieſus baptized of him, and from thence was led into the wilderneſſe to bee tempted: ſo that Chriſt was led from Iohns wilderneſſe, to another wilderneſſe, which was the very Deſart, and not that, where Iohn preached. So then, our ſentence is this, that the wilderneſſe, where Iohn liued till hee publikely ſhewed himſelfe, and where hee preached, muſt of neceſſitie be taken for the leſſe peopled Countrie of Iudea, which was ſo called in reſpect of the more popular and frequented places of Iudea: yet wee denie not, but that Iohn alſo did giue himſelfe to a ſtrict and ſolitarie kinde of life, though hee kept not in ſuch a Deſart, as they imagine, that hee ſhould giue occaſion to bee called an Eremite. Matth.3.1. Matth.4.1.

The Proteſtants.

THat the ſolitarie life of Eremites, in flying the comfortable ſocietie of men, and their rigorous manner in the vnnaturall chaſtiſing of their bodies, is contrarie to the rule of the Goſpell, thus we ſhew it.

*Argum.*1. Heb.10.24.25. Let vs conſider one another, and prouoke one another to good workes, not forſaking the aſſemblies of our ſelues together, as the manner of ſome is, but exhorting one another. Heere the Apoſtle ſpeaketh manifeſtly againſt thoſe that ſhunne the ſocietie and companie of their brethren, becauſe they muſt needes faile in the duties of charitie, as in exhorting one another, and prouoking to good workes: theſe duties Eremites cannot performe, therefore their life is vnlawfull: and Matth. 24. it is a note of falſe Prophets and falſe Chriſts to liue in the Deſarts. Againe, they that loue ſolitarie places, doe offer themſelues to tentation, and fall into the ſnares of the diuell: God ſaw it was not good for Adam, no not in Paradiſe, to liue alone: but I thinke their Deſarts are farre vnlike to Paradiſe: Chriſt to bee tempted of the diuell was led into the wilderneſſe: Therefore ſuch places are fit for Sathans working. The Preacher ſaith, Two are better then one, for if one ouercome him, two ſhall ſtand againſt him, Eccle. 4. 12. We are better able being ayded by our brethren to reſiſt Sathan, then being alone: We ought not then to tempt God, and not knowing our owne ſtrength, to goe forth into ſolitarie places, and as it were prouoke Sathan to the Combat. See to this purpoſe, Conc. Oxonienſ. ſub Stephano: Quia ſerpens antiquus, &c. Becauſe the olde Serpent, when hee found holy men ſolitarie, liuing without any mutuall comfort or conſolation, did ſo much the more eaſily inuade and oppreſſe them, we with good deliberation haue decreed, that Monkes, regular Canons, Nunnes, ſhould ſleepe together in the ſame dorters. Hebr.10.24. Matth.24.26. Eccleſ.4.12.

*Argum.*2. That cruell and inhumane kinde of chaſtiſing their bodies by faſting and other diſcipline vtterly is vnlawfull. The Monkes, called Grandimontenſes, did weare ſhirts of maile next their bodies, the Charter Monkes haire-cloth: the Monkes Flagellants, went bare-foote in linnen ſhirts, leauing an open place in the backe, where they did dayly whip themſelues before the people till the blood followed. Moſes a certaine Abbot, did ſo afflict his body with faſting and watching, that for two or three dayes together many times hee had no appetite at all to his meate, neither could ſleepe. Another Eremite (as Caſſianus writeth) did purpoſe with himſelfe not to eate meate, vnleſſe hee had ſome gueſt or ſtranger with him, and ſo was conſtrained to abſtaine ſometime fiue dayes together: two other Monaſticall brethren, trauailing in the Deſart of Thebaide, did vow not to take any ſuſtenance, but ſuch as God ſhould ſend them; and as they went, a certaine wilde people, contrarie to their cuſtome, offered them meate, the one tooke it as ſent of God; the other refuſed it, becauſe he thought it to be ſent rather of man then of God, and ſo died.

Baſilius magnus, and Gregor. Nazianzene, did ſo plucke downe themſelues by immoderate faſting; that when they were called to bee Biſhops, they were not able to ſuſtaine the labour thereof.

Where in all the Scriptures learned theſe men, thus to puniſh their bodies? This is not with S. Paul to ſubdue and bring vnder the fleſh: but to kill and deſtroy it; contrarie to that ſaying of Saint Paul, No man euer yet hated his owne fleſh, but loueth and cheriſheth it. See I pray you, how theſe men loued and cheriſhed their bodies?

*Argum.*3. That Religion which conſiſteth in the afflicting and not ſparing of the body, hath but a ſhew of wiſedome, and is a voluntarie or will worſhip, ſo ſaith the Apoſtle, Coloſſ. 2. 23. but ſuch is the religion of Heremites, which ſay, Touch not, taſte not, handle not, as it is in the ſame place, verſ. 21. Ergo. Coloſſ.2.23.21.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that to afflict and humble the body is lawfull, ſo that it be not done ſuperſtitiouſly, and vnprofitably, as S. Paul ſaith, I doe chaſtiſe my body, and bring it into ſubiection, 1. Cor. 9. 27. Bellarm. cap. 39. 1.Cor.9.27.

Contra. To humble the body by faſting for a time, that our prayer may be more feruent, as Saint Paul did, is a thing both commendable and commanded, and it is neither ſuperſtitious nor vnprofitable; table: but continuall and immoderate abſtinence from ſuch things as are lawfull, ſuch as Eremites are deuoted vnto, is not to keepe the body vnder, but to kill it; not to vanquiſh the affection, but to extinguiſh it; and is both ſuperſtitious and vnprofitable: Firſt, it is ſuperſtitious, becauſe it is a will-worſhip according to the doctrine of men, Coloſſ. 2. 22. So the Lord ſaith, Zach. 7. 5. Did you faſt vnto me? Eſay. 58. 3. When you faſt, you will ſeeke your owne will, and chap. 1. 12. Who required this of your hands? wherefore, ſeeing this ſtrict vſage is but an humane inuention, I conclude it is meere ſuperſtition. Secondly, it is alſo vnprofitable: for a man to redeeme his ſinne with the fruite of his body, Micah. 6. 7. and ſo likewiſe with the body it ſelfe, is not pleaſing vnto God: but this doe Eremites, thinking by the puniſhment of their body to ſatisfie for their ſinnes. Ergo.

Coloſſ. 2. 22.
Zach. 7. 5.
Micah. 6. 7.

Concerning the rigorous and hard vſage of Monkes, the iudgement of the Imperiall lawes is this, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 6. leg. 8. authentic. It is decreed, that Prieſts, giuing falſe witneſſe, Monaſterijs pro tormentis tradantur: Should be deliuered to the Monaſteries to be tormented: So likewiſe, leg. 14. authent. a ſeditious Biſhop is condemned to the Monaſterie, for his correction. What kinde of life then and profeſſion call you this, which is appointed for a torment and puniſhment to men?

As touching ſolitarie life alſo, the Canon law ſaith, Va ſoli, Woe to him that is alone, Decret. Gregor. lib. 3. tit. 35. cap. 2. The decree alſo of Clemens 5. in the Councell of Vienna is extant, Ne Monachi ſinguli in ſingulis, &c. That Monkes ſhould not liue ſingly or ſolitarily by themſelues. And as for their ſtrict diet, and ſtaruing of the bodie, faring courſely and lying hardly: your owne Canons haue decreed, and deſcribed the Seueriani to bee heretikes, that refuſed to drinke wine: and they reckon vp other hereſies, ſome that, Nudis pedibus ambulant: Walke barefoote: ſome refuſe to eate in the companie of men: Cauſ. 24. qu. 3. c. 39. Such heretikes are their Monkes and Heremites.

In Pſal. 49.

Let vs heare what Auguſtine ſaith, Tu deſeris res humanas & ſegregas te, vt nemo te videat: Cui proderis? tu ad hoc perueniſſes, ſi nemo tibi profuiſſet? An quia veloces pedes tibi videris habuiſſe ad tranſeundum, præciſurus es pontem? Thou leaueſt the care of humane things, and ſeparateſt thy ſelfe that no man ſhould ſee thee: to whom doeſt thou good in ſo doing? Hadſt thou come to this perfection thy ſelfe if no man had done thee good? becauſe thou haſt quickly paſſed ouer, wilt thou cut off the bridge, that no man elſe ſhould paſſe? See then Auguſtine maketh the heremeticall life altogether vnprofitable to men.

Ibid.

2 Antonie the firſt founder of monaſticall life among the Egiptians, whoſe order the Æthiopian Monkes doe follow at this day: was himſelfe nothing ſo ſtrict, either in his ſolitarie life, or pinching abſtinence, as his followers imagine: for though in time of perſecution hee fled into the Deſart, yet he had after recourſe vnto Alexandria, encouraging and animating the Chriſtians to endure the torments with patience, which they were put vnto for the Chriſtian faith. It is alſo reported of him, that while hee exerciſed himſelfe with ſome other of his brethren, in leaping and running for the health of his bodie, and was therefore found fault with by ſome paſſers by, as though it beſeemed not his grauitie: he perceiuing it, cauſed one of them to bend his Crosbow, which he did, he bid him bend it ſtill, nay ſaith the other, for then it will breake: ſo ſaith Antonie, ſhould wee deſtroy our bodies, Si nimium affligeremus, if we ſhould afflict them too much.

THE SECOND PART, CONCERNING the habite and ſhauing of Monkes.

The Papiſts.

103. Error.

Both theſe ſuperſtitious cuſtomes, for Monkes to be knowne by their coules and ſhauen crownes, they receiue and allow as commendable and fit for them to be knowne by. Beſide ſome ſhew of antiquitie, Scripture they haue none: but their beſt reaſon is this: that as Senators and ſouldiers, Noble men and ruſtickes are knowne by their apparell; ſo it is meete that Monks ſhould be diſcerned from others by their habite, Bellarm.cap.40. Our Rhemiſts vſe the ſame reaſon for ſhauen crownes, that it is a note of diſtinction betweene the Clergie and lay-men, annot. 1.Pet.5.ſect.2. And for prieſtlike garments, they alleage out of Apoc.1.verſ.13. how Chriſt appeared to Iohn, veſted in a prieſtlike garment. Reuel.1.13.

Anſw. Firſt, wee denie not, but that it is conuenient for Miniſters to bee diſcerned from others euen in their apparell: which may bee done by the grauitie and modeſtie thereof in colour, in plaines, not neceſſarie to bring in ſtrange and ridiculous faſhions of attire, ſuch as Monkes cowles are: yet Miniſters are better diſcerned by other things, then their apparell, as they are deſcribed by S. Paul, 1.Tim.3. But as for any ſuch diſtinction of Monkes we allow not: for the very calling it ſelfe ought to be aboliſhed. As for ſhauen crownes and beards, they are but tokens of Baals prieſts, make the beſt of them you can.

2. Chriſt appeared in a long garment downe to the feete: which they tranſlate a prieſtlike garment, as though Chriſt were then going to Maſſe: The word is, poderes, which ſignifieth a long veſture, downe to the feete, which was one of the high Prieſts garments, and hereby is ſignified the Prieſthood of Chriſt: but what is this to the attire of Monkes or Prieſts? We deny not but long garments for their comelines are fit for Miniſters, according to the faſhion of the countrie, but not as neceſſarie, repreſenting more holineſſe: for in the Eaſt countries, ſhort garments were graue and comely enough: as the Prophets had their mantles: and S. Paul maketh mention of his cloake, 2.Tim.4.13. 2.Tim.4.13.

Argum.2. The ſpeciall habite of Monkes doth binde them to liue well, for being knowne from all other men by their habite, if they ſhould doe amiſſe they ſhould be rebuked of all: Bellar.cap.40. ration.2.

Anſw. Firſt, this is right Phariſaicall to doe well onely to auoide the rebuke of men, and to haue their praiſe: as our Sauiour ſaith, Matth.23.5. All their workes they doe to be ſeene of men, for they make their Phylacteries broad, &c. Wherefore it is plaine hypocriſie rather for feare of men then of conſcience, not to do euill. Secondly, their habite ſerueth not as a ſtraiter bond to doe well, but as a pretenſed cloake of their euill doing: for by this meanes they practiſe knauerie without ſuſpition, masking vnder the colours of religion: by their Monkes cowles they haue entred into the preſence of Princes, and moſt treacherouſlie murthered them, as in our memorie hath been practiſed in France. Matth.23.5.

The Proteſtants.

WE condemne both the habite and ſhauing of the Monks as ſuperſtitious, euen as their whole life and profeſſion is.

Argum.1. There is no one precept in the new Teſtament concerning formes and faſhions of apparell to be vſed by Clergie men, but only in generall termes, that they ſhould be modeſt and ſober, and graue in their behauiour. The Leuites and Prieſts indeed in the law had rules and precepts ſet them, both for their veſtures in the temple, and their ordinarie apparell, Num.15.39. that it ſhould be made with fringes in remembrance of the commandements. But who ſeeth not that ſuch ſignifications of apparell were Leuiticall, and meerely ceremonious? ſuch is the habite of Monkes: for their cowles, ſaith the Ieſuite, ſignifie their innocencie, like vnto children that are couered with vailes like vnto cowles. But to place any religion or holineſſe in apparell, as they did, (for it was thought a great priuiledge to bee buried in a Monkes cowle) is abominable ſuperſtition: for ſuch Monkiſh ſuperſtition our Sauiour rebuked the Phariſies, Matth.23.5. All their workes they doe, to bee ſeene of men: for they make their Phylacteries broad, and make long the fringes of their garments. If the Phariſies did abuſe to vaine-glorie and ſuperſtition, that kinde of apparell which the law commanded: there can bee no good vſe of Monkiſh habites, which the Goſpell neither commendeth nor commandeth. 1.Timoth.3.2. Numb.15.39. Matth.23.5.

As for ſhauen crownes: they were directly forbidden by the law of Moſes, not onely to round the tufts of their beard, as the Gentiles did, Leuit.19.27. but not to ſhaue their beard, or make bald their head, Leuit.21.5. And then it was a ſigne of holineſſe not to cut the haire, as in the Nazarites it appeareth, Numb.6. It was then the cuſtome of the heathen and of their Idolatrous prieſts to ſhaue themſelues: How then dare the Papiſts make that a ſigne of holineſſe now, which was a ſigne of prophaneneſſe, and heathenneſſe then? And is their religion ſo beggarly, that they muſt needs borrow their ceremonies of the heathen? Leuit.19.27. Leuit.21.5.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Leuit.21.5. the Prieſts were not ſimply forbidden to ſhaue their heads, but not to doe it in the death of their friends.

Contra. Firſt, there is no ſuch addition in the text, but the words are generall, They ſhall not make bald parts vpon their heads. Secondly, the prohibition in Ezechiel is generall, chap.44.20. They ſhall not ſhaue their heads. Ezech.44.20.

Bellarmine replieth againe, that the ſhauing of their heads was not ſimply forbidden, as euill in it ſelfe; for the Nazarites according to the law did ſhaue their heads, Numb.6. and S. Paul alſo, Acts 21.24. But it was forbidden onely in reſpect of the Gentiles, among whom they dwelt, that they ſhould not be like them, Bellarm.cap.40. Act.21.24.

Contra. Firſt, to ſhaue the head as the Gentiles did, was ſimply forbidden, ſauing where the Lord himſelfe made an exception, as in the vow of the Nazarites: neither were they forbidden to doe ſo only, becauſe the Gentiles did the like, but becauſe it was a ſuperſtitious vſe receiued of the Gentiles, and therefore not beſeeming Gods people: And therefore this reaſon is giuen, you are the children Deut.14.1. of the Lord and an holy people to God, therefore you ſhall not make any baldnes, &c. Deuter.14.1. Secondly, the ſhauing of the Nazarites, was a ſpeciall exception, as likewiſe the ſuffering of their haire Ezech.5.1. to grow long, which is ſimply forbidden, Ezech.44.20. yet for a time tolerated in the Nazarites: ſo alſo the Prophets ſhauing of himſelfe to be a ſigne to the people, Ezech.5.1. was extraordinary, and by the Lords direct commandement. So that if Monkes can ſhew a ſpeciall toleration for their ſhauing, as the Nazarites had, they may doe as they did; but the profeſſion of the Nazarites is now ceaſed, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, where hee ſaith, Touch not, taſte not, &c. which was the vſe of Nazarites, not to Coloſſ.2.17. taſte wine, nor to touch any dead thing: that they were but ſhadowes of things to come. Coloſſ.2.17.

*Argum.*2. The great varietie of their habites, and fooliſh ſignifications of their ſhauings, do ſhew what beginning they had. The Monkes of Baſils order went in white; of Benets rule in blacke; the Fox pag.154. Ciſtercians had white rotchets vpon a blacke coate; the Grandimontenſes a coate of maile, with a blacke cloake vpon; ſome ſtarred Monkes; ſome Ieſuites with a white girdle, and a ruſſet cowle: ſome Celeſtines all in blew, both cloake, cowle and cap. The Franciſcans did weare ropes for girdles and treen ſhooes.

They render alſo diuers reaſons of their ſhauen crownes: ſome ſay it reſembleth Chriſts crowne of thornes: ſome by ſhauing the haire, doe ſignifie the mortifying of the affections, as cutting off of things that are ſuperfluous: ſome by baring of the head, the ſimplicitie and plainnes of life: Bellarmine ſaith, it is a ſigne of repentance and conuerſion. Is not here good ſtuffe, thinke you? Such rites, ſuch ceremonies, ſuch ſignifications, ſuch humane traditions, I thinke, the Phariſies would haue abhorred. For theſe are worſe then their waſhing of tables, braſen veſſels, pots, cups, and ſuch like: and yet our Sauiour ſaith of them, that they did lay the commandement of God apart, to eſtabliſh Mark.7.8. their owne traditions, Mark.7.8.

Laſtly, let Auguſtine ſpeake: concerning the habite of eccleſiaſticall perſons, thus he writeth: *Similiter laicis patet cœli palatium Dei mandata ſeruantibus veluti clericis, &c. ſanctimoniali habitu præditis. De ſalutar. docum. cap.*38. The heauenly palace is as well open for Lay men, keeping the commandements of God, as for Prieſts in their holy attire. What profiteth then, I pray you, to bee buried in a Monkes cowle? Againe, Auguſtine found fault with certaine diſſolute Monkes in that time, that ſuffered their haire to grow long: againſt whom he vrgeth the ſaying of S. Paul, 1.Cor.11. 1.Cor.11.14. 14. Doth not nature it ſelfe teach you, that it is a ſhame for a man to haue long haire? And ſo he concludeth: Hoc quò pertinet, quæſo, tam aperte contra Apoſtoli præcepta comari? What meaning haue you in this, to ſuffer your haire to grow, contrarie to the precept of the Apoſtle? But this precept did no more belong to Monkes, then all other Chriſtians. Concerning the ſhauing of Monkes, Auguſtine hath not one word at all, but of polling, and clipping the haire: he ſpeaketh only againſt certaine crinitos fratres, that nouriſhed their haire and ſuffered it to grow of length.

Nay, our Rhemiſts loue ſhauing ſo well, that they defend the ſhauing of Nunnes, and would proue it out of Hierome, who indeed ſpeaketh of the cutting off of their haire, not for any religion, but to auoid certaine little beaſts that bred betweene the skinne and the haire, (you know what beaſts they are) becauſe they vſed not the bathes, nor oyle, as other women did, Fulk, 2.Theſſ.3.ſect.2. But whatſoeuer Hierome ſaith, it is flat contrarie to S. Pauls rule, who ſaith, It is a ſhame for a woman to bee 1.Cor.14.6. ſhorne or ſhauen, 1.Cor.14.6.

Concerning the habite of Monkes, antiquitie thus ſpeaketh: *Si quis virorum putauerit ſancto propoſito, i. continentiæ, conuenire, vt pallio vtatur, tanquam ex eo iuſtitiam habiturus, & iudicet eos qui veſte communi vtuntur, anathema ſit. Concil. Gangrenſ. cap.*12. If any man think that to weare a cloake, doth fit his profeſſion, as though thereby hee were more iuſt, and doth condemne or deſpiſe thoſe which vſe a common veſture, let him be accurſed, &c. But the Monkes and Friers doe put holineſſe in their habite, as euen now ſhall be ſeene. Ergo.

*Celeſtine Epiſt.*2.*cap.*1. Diſcernendi à plebe, vel cæteris ſumus doctrina, non veſte; conuerſatione non habitu; mentis puritate, non cultu. We are diſcerned from the people, by our doctrine, not our garments; by our conuerſation, not by our habite; the puritie of our minde, not by our apparell.

*Colonienſ. part.*2.*cap.*26. Ex veſte apud homines opinionem ſanctimoniæ prohibuit Chriſtus, &c. Chriſt forbad, that men ſhould haue opinion of holineſſe in garments: who firſt biddeth that to be cleanſed, which is within, denouncing woe to the Phariſies, who to ſeeme iuſt, made broad their phylacteries, but within were full of rauening, &c. But Friers and Monkes did aduance themſelues as more holie, by their habite. Likewiſe in the Canon law, *Cauſ.*33.*qu.*5.*c.*4. Expediret te potius candidis moribus, &c. It were better for you to obey your husband, with white and faire conditions, then in black raiment to reſiſt him.

*Decret. Greg. lib.*3.*tit.*31.*c.*13. *Clem.*3. Monachum facit non habitus, ſed profeſſio: not the habite, but the profeſſion maketh a Monke.

Maſter Bilney holie Martyr, perſecuted to death, for this article with others: if to bee buried (ſaith he) in S. Francis cowle ſhould remit foure parts of penance, what is then left for our Sauiour Chriſt, which taketh away the ſinnes of the world? This I will iuſtifie to be a great blaſphemie againſt the Pag.913.2.25. blood of Chriſt, *Fox pag.*1001.*col.*1.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr condemneth the ſuperſtition of thoſe, which ſay that a man being buried in a gray Friers frocke, ſhall haue the remiſſion of the third part of his ſinnes, Fox pag.1107.*ad articul.*13. Pag.1011.2.69

Concerning the ſuperſtitious ſhauing of crownes, wee haue alſo the teſtimonie of antiquitie: *Concil.Eliberin.can.*55. Qui tantum ſacrificantium coronam portant nec ſacrificant idolis, placuit poſt biennium communionem accipere: They which only beare the crowne of ſacrificing prieſts, though they ſacrifice not to idols, ſhall want the Communion two yeeres, &c. Behold then it was the faſhion of heatheniſh Idolatrous prieſts, to haue their crownes ſhauen.

*Concil. Gangrenſ. cap,*17. which is alleaged in the Canon law, *diſtinct.*30.*c.*2. Quaecunque mulier propter diuinum cultum crines attondeat quos ad ſubiectionis materiam Deus tribuit, tanquam praeceptum diſſoluens obedientiae, anathema ſit: If any woman for religion ſake doe poll her haire, which God hath giuen as a ſigne of ſubiection, as one tranſgreſſing the precept of obedience, let her be accurſed. Yet for all this our Rhemiſts commend the ſhauing of Nunnes.

Concerning the iudgement of other Churches: 1. What the practiſe of the Greeke Church was, is ſeene before in the Councell Gangrenſ. And at this day the Muſcouites, who follow the Greeke Church, cucullas ignorant, know not what a cowle meaneth, and they weare their haire hanging downe to their ſhoulders, and keepe their beards long: and therefore they finde fault with the Romane prieſts, for ſhauing their beards. De religion. Ruthen.ad D.Chytr. Appendix error.Ruthen.

2 In Athanaſius time in the South Church, it ſeemeth their Virgins and Nunnes were not ſhauen: for in deſcribing their habit, he would haue vittam crinalem laneam, their hairelace to be of wollen. Hilarion (who imitated Antonius the Egyptian Eremite in his ſolitarie life) did poll his haire once in the yeere at the Paſch: Hieron.in vita Hilarion. Athanaſ.lib.de Virginit.

THE THIRD PART, OF THE MONKES Canonicall houres.

The Papiſts.

THe 3.6.9. houres, they ſay, are conſecrated and deuoted to prayer, which they call their Canonicall houres: at the 3. houre the holy Ghoſt deſcended: at the 6. houre Peter went vp to the top of the houſe: and at the 9. houre Peter and Iohn went vp to pray in the Temple, Act.3.1. And Daniel vſed to pray thrice in the day, Dan.6.10. Ergo, thoſe times ought to be conſecrate to prayer, *Rhemiſt. Act.*10.*ſect.*6. 104.Error.

Anſw. Firſt, we denie that it can be gathered by any of thoſe places, that theſe houres only ought to be ſet apart for prayer. Peter and Iohn went vp at the ninth houre, which was the time of the euening ſacrifice, when the religious Iewes went vp to pray. Secondly, Daniel prayed three times a day, but at what houres the text ſpeaketh not: yet by this example, and by the other proofes alleaged, we doe gather, that at the 3.6.9. houre, that is not preciſely at any of theſe times, but in the morning, when men riſe vp to their labours, at noone before their repaſt, and at night when they go to reſt, it is meete and conuenient that men ſhould make their prayers vnto God, and at other times alſo when they finde themſelues fit. Thirdly, the popiſh ſeruice hath nothing but the names of theſe houres: for they are all finiſhed in the forenoone, whereas the ſixth houre is at high noone, the ninth houre is the third houre before the Sunnes ſet: And this toleration, to diſpatch all in the forenoone, is agreeable to their owne ſuperſtitious decrees: *Decret.Greg.lib.*3.*tit.*41.*c.*1.Preſbyter mane, &c. The Prieſt in the morning muſt performe his ſeruice, the firſt, the third, ſixth, ninth houres, and for the euening, &c, and all this may be done in the morning: for after theſe houres diſpatched, hee muſt goe foorth faſting, ad rurale opus, to his field buſineſſe, &c. Thus we ſee how well they obſerue their houres themſelues.

The Proteſtants.

WE denie not, but that ſet times of publike prayer are commendable, as wee haue our forenoone, and afternoone ſeruice: but at vnſeaſonable houres, as at midnight, or the riſing of the Sunne, to call the people together, when they cannot conueniently be aſſembled, is but a ſuperſtitious cuſtome. Againe, it is profitable for men in the morning, noone, euening, though not preciſely at any ſet houres, to direct their prayers vnto God, and to binde themſelues by a conſtant purpoſe thereunto: but ſo to ſtint mens prayers, as that they ought of neceſſitie to keepe their houres, as though their prayers were then more auaileable, it hath no ground out of Scripture.

*Argum.*1. Saint Paul ſaith, Pray continually, 1.Theſſ.5.17. Ergo, it is lawfull to pray at all times, and one time as fit for prayer as another, if a man be prepared. Againe, the ſame Apoſtle ſaith, I will that the men euery where lift vp pure hands without wrath and doubting, 1.Timoth.2.8. Out of theſe words we gather two arguments: Firſt, prayers are no more bound to times, then to places: a man 1.Theſſ.5.27. 1.Timoth.2.8.

may pray euery where: Ergo, at euery time. Secondly, a man ought not to pray, but when he is voide of wrath, and is otherwiſe prepared: but it may be, that at the ſtinted houres, of the third, ſixth, ninth, a man may bee in wrath, and otherwiſe not fit: therefore hee is not neceſſarilie to be tied to thoſe houres.

2 Auguſtine thus writeth: Cum quiſque orationem quærit, collocet membra ſicut ei occurrerit accommodata pro tempore poſiti corporis ad mouendum animum. Cum autem non quæritur, ſed infertur appetitus orandi: hoc eſt, cum repentè aliquid venit in mentem, &c. quocumque modo inuenerit hominem, non eſt vtique differenda oratio. Lib.2.ad Simplician.quæſt.4. When any man deſireth to pray, let him diſpoſe his members as it falleth out, fitteſt for the time, in diſpoſing his bodie for the ſtirring vp of his minde: but when as it commeth not of his deſire and ſeeking, but ſuddenly his affection is ſtirred vp to pray, howſoeuer prayer findeth him (that is, whether ſtanding or ſitting) he muſt not in any caſe deferre it and put it off to another time, &c. This then is Auguſtines minde, that a man ſhould pray ſo oft as he hath a diſpoſition thereunto, and not deferre his prayer, as they doe, which binde themſelues to Canonicall houres.

Concil. Conſtantinop.6.cap.7. Singulis diebus qui amplius non poteſt, ſaltem duabus vicibus oret, manè ſcilicet & veſpere, dicens ſymbolum, ſiue orationem dominicam: Euery day, he that cannot oftner, let him pray twice, that is, morning and euening, ſaying the Creede, and the Lords prayer, &c. It appeareth that in thoſe daies when this Councell was held, which was about the yeere 670. men were not tied to their Canonicall houres.

Claudius Monerius holy Martyr: To houres and times prayers ought not to be tied, but whenſoe-Pag.826.l.47. uer Gods ſpirit doth moue vs, or when any neceſſitie driueth vs, we ought to pray. Fox pag.905.

But who could haue ſaid better of this matter, then Winchester doth, if hee had been conſtant in the truth? The obſeruing (ſaith he) of daies, houres, number, time, place, if they be orderly and publikely commanded by the rulers, it is but to ſet the Church in an outward and publike order: but if a man inwardly and priuately be addicted to the ſame, thinking his prayer otherwiſe not auaileable, but by obſeruing thereof, it is an error, Fox pag.1791.ex depoſition. D. Redman. I thinke no reaſonable man will refuſe to ſubſcribe to this ſentence.

In ancient time it ſeemeth, 1. That the Greeke Church obſerued no ſuch preciſe canonicall houres

Lib.de exhort. Martyr. 2 Cyprian of the Africane Church, ſaith, Hora nulla à Chriſtianis excipitur; No houre is excepted to Christians, &c. they muſt pray continually. Athanaſius of Alexandria, thus preſcribeth vnto Monkes: Orationibus ita frequenter inſtandum eſt vt vix eos aliquod tempus interpellat: You muſt be ſo inſtant in prayer, that ſcarce any time muſt be intermitted: He ſetteth them no certaine preſcript houres.

See further of this point afterward, in the queſtions about prayer.

THE FOVRTH PART, CONCERNING THE maintenance of Monkes.

The Papiſts.

105.Error. They neither denie that it is vnlawfull for Monkes to labour with their hands, where neceſſitie, bodily ſtrength, the order of the Church doth require them, neither doe they confeſſe, that it is neceſſarie for them to worke: and ſo are not aſhamed to maintaine their idle, ſlothfull, and Epicures life: Bellarm.cap.41.42. Rhemiſts, 2. Theſſal.3. ſect.2. But they may either liue of the lands giuen to their houſes, or elſe by their religious begging, cap.44.

Argum.1. Monkes are not now bound to worke, hauing wherewith to liue beſide of lands giuen vnto them, becauſe moſt of them are prieſts, and doe ſerue at the Altar, Rhemiſt. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, wee graunt that Miniſters of the Goſpell labouring in the Word and Sacraments, ought to be maintained by the Goſpell: but ſuch are few or none of your Monkes, who being fit for no other ſeruice either in the Church or Common-wealth, are thruſt into Monaſteries by their friends: they are idolatrous prieſts, and ſerue little better then at Baals Altar. If any of them bee fit for the Miniſterie, as we denie not but ſome haue come out of your Cloyſters, as Luther, Bucer, Peter Martyr, by whom the Church of God hath receiued much good: but they muſt come firſt out of your Dennes, and relinquiſh their Monkiſh life, and labour amongſt the people; ſo ſhall they bee no more regular, but ſecular prieſts, as you terme them. Secondly, the lands which were beſtowed vpon them, were firſt giuen vpon an euill intent, that by their prayers they ſhould redeeme the ſoules of their founders, who moſt of them had committed ſome notable ſinne, and ſo pro remedio animarum to helpe their ſoules, they built Monaſteries. So King Ethelſtane for killing his brother Edwin, built two Monaſteries, Middleton and Michelney for his ſoule, Fox pag.153. King Offa for killing Ethelbert a good Prince, who came peaceablie for the deſpouſage of Athelдred his daughter, being pricked in conſcience, gaue the firſt Peter pence to Rome, pag.114. Thoſe lands therefore being giuen firſt for vngodly purpoſes, and continued by them for idolatrous vſes, ought cleane to be taken from them, and to bee beſtowed vpon better vſes: neither is it lawfull for them in that ſort to enioy them.

Argum.2. They proue the impudent begging of Friers, which they call religious begging, to be lawfull and commendable, by the example of Chriſt, who had not a place where to put his head, Luke 9. and of his Apoſtles, that were charged not to poſſeſſe gold or ſiluer in their purſes, Matth.10. Bellarm.cap.45. Luke 9.

Anſw. Firſt, I pray you where euer did you reade that Chriſt went a begging? he liued not of almes, but gaue almes, and Iudas was the almes-man, though he plaied his part but euill. Auguſtine flatly denieth that you auouch: He ſaith that Chriſts bag was as Fiſcus regis, euen as the Kings Exchequer; and that what was giuen him, was as due as tribute money to the Prince: But the King, I trow, is not a begger: Niſi putetis (ſaith he) quia dominus petebat & indigebat, cui ſeruiebant angeli, qui de quinque panibus tot millia pauit: Vnleſſe you think (ſaith he) that Chriſt begged, and wanted, whom the Angels ſerued, and who fed with fiue loaues not a few thouſands, in Pſal.146. Secondly, if the Apoſtles were beggers, then they liued of almes, but that is vntrue: for Chriſt ſaith, The labourer is worthie of his hire: but the labourers wages is earned and deſerued, it is no almes.

Iohn the 22. defined them to bee heretikes, that affirmed Chriſt and his Apoſtles to haue had nothing proper of their owne. Then by this determination, Bellarmine and the Rhemiſts are found heretikes, in ſaying that Chriſt and his Apoſtles went a begging: vnleſſe they will reuerſe the ſentence of their holy father, which were alſo no leſſe then hereſie, &c. Thus are they intrapped on both ſides: let them vnfold themſelues as they can.

Notwithſtanding all this, yet Bellarmine taketh vpon him to prooue that Chriſt was a begger: firſt, becauſe he had no houſe, nor poſſeſſions of his owne, nor any place where to reſt his head: but was entertained ſometime in one place, ſometime in another, and liued of the almes that faithfull women miniſtred vnto him, Bellarm.cap.45.

Anſw. All this we graunt, that Chriſt had no poſſeſſions here in earth, becauſe he ſaith, his kingdome was not of this world; and that he refuſed not the miniſterie of the faithfull: yet this proueth not, that he begged, or liued of almes. Firſt, the women are ſaid to miniſter to him of their ſubſtance, Luk.8.3. which word of miniſtration ſheweth, that they acknowledged a ſeruice in their goods vnto Chriſt, whereas he that giueth almes, hath a dominion in that he giueth, and is a Lord thereof, rather then a ſeruant. Secondly, almes are giuen to him that needeth: but Chriſt needed not, that was able of fiue loaues to feed fiue thouſand. Luke 8.3.

Secondly, he alleageth that ſaying, Pſal.40.17. Ego mendicus, But I am poore, and a begger: which words are vnderſtood of Chriſt: As the Apoſtle applieth thoſe words, verſ.7. in the beginning of the booke it is written of me, &c. to our Sauiour Chriſt, Heb.9.7. Bellarm.ibid. Pſal.40.17. Heb.9.7.

Anſw. Firſt, though ſome part of this Pſalme bee prophetically applied to Chriſt, yet the whole Pſalme is not, as that, verſ.12. My ſinnes are more then the haires of my head; let him ſhew, if he can, how it may be pronounced of Chriſt. Secondly, Dauid in ſaying, I am a begger, had ſpoken contrarie to himſelfe, Pſal.37.25. where he confeſſeth, that he neuer ſaw in all his time, the ſeed of the righteous to begge their bread. Thirdly, the word here vſed ſignifieth not a begger, but one that is needie, and ſo your owne vulgar tranſlation for mendicus, begger, noteth in the marget egenus, needie. Fourthly, Dauid ſpeaketh not of any want of ſubſtance, but that he needed Gods helpe to deliuer him from his enemies: as it followeth in the ſame verſe, thou art my helper and deliuerer, &c. So is Bellarmine anſwered. Pſal.44.12. Pſal.37.25.

Contra. Now I will inſert the reaſons of their owne law, as they ſtand in the Extrauagant of Iohn 22. againſt thoſe that affirmed Chriſt to be a begger, and that he had no propertie or dominion in any thing, but the ſimple vſe thereof.

Firſt, Quis ſimplicem vſuarium: Who can call him a ſimple vſer of a thing without any right or propertie, that hath power to giue it, &c. But Chriſt gaue almes to the poore: for one of them alwaies carried the bagge: Ergo, he had right and propertie.

Secondly, In rebus conſumptibilibus, &c. In things that conſume and waſte, as meate and drinke, there can be no vſe without propertie: for then there may be an vſe ſeuered from propertie, when the ſubſtance reſerued, there ariſeth ſome profit to the vſer: but this cannot be in meate and drink, which conſume in the vſing, Extrauag. Ioann.tit.14.cap.3.

Thirdly, euery vſe without a right vnto the thing vſed, is vniuſt: for that is vniuſt, where there is no right; and ſo conſequently if Chriſt had no right in the things he vſed, the vſing ſhould be vniuſt, which were blaſphemie to affirme.

Fourthly, the contrarie may be proued out of Scripture, that Chriſt had both the vſe and propertie of the things which he vſed: for one alwaies carried the ſatchell or bagge of prouiſion for themſelues, ſelues, and of almes for the poore, tit.14.c.5. So vpon theſe and other reaſons he concludeth them to be heretikes, that affirme Chriſt and his Apoſtles to haue been without any right or propertie in any thing, and ſo conſequently beggers.

The Proteſtants.

First we ſay, that no idle perſons ought to be maintained in a Chriſtian Common-wealth, but they that haue not any other neceſſarie calling, being not lame, defectiue in their members, or otherwiſe impotent, ſhould labour with their hands, and therefore Monkes that are fit for no other ſeruice in the Church, ought to labour and worke.

2.Theſſ.3.10. Argum.1. Saint Paul giueth a generall rule: He that will not worke, let him not eate, 2.Theſſal.3. verſ.10. ſpeaking of thoſe that haue no neceſſarie calling in the Church: Ergo, Monkes muſt worke, or elſe by Saint Pauls rule, not eate. The Rhemiſts anſwere, that this is but a naturall admonition or counſell. Nay, it is a precept and commandement, that all in their ſeuerall places and callings ſhould labour, none liue idly: for S. Paul ſaith not, this I counſelled you, but this I warned you of, or denounced vnto you, and he calleth thoſe that followed not this rule, inordinate walkers.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that Saint Paul giueth this precept to labour vnto the ſecular ſort only, not to Monkes, which, ſaith he, in the opinion of our aduerſaries, were not as yet in the Church, Bellarm. cap.42.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtle writeth to the whole Church of the Theſſalonians, 2. epiſt. chap.1. verſ.1. wherefore this precept alſo bindeth Monkes, vnleſſe you will ſay they are no members of the Church, as indeed they are not of the true Church. Secondly, if you will graunt, that there were no Monkes in Saint Pauls time, that you may finde out a colourable anſwere, then haue they not their foundation out of the Scripture, as you beare vs in hand: yet S. Pauls rule ſhall ſtill binde all that belong to the Church.

Bellarmine againe anſwereth, that Saint Paul doth not abſolutely commaund to worke, but only to auoide offence, and idlenes: ſo that they are not bound corporally to labour, which can by other meanes, then labouring corporally, auoid theſe dangers. Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtle doth giue an abſolute charge to all to worke, ſetting himſelfe for an example, who could haue kept himſelfe from idlenes otherwiſe then by working, yet he laboured, verſ. 7.8. Secondly, if he commaund to worke, only to auoid idlenes and offence, then is the commandement abſolute, becauſe theſe inconueniences muſt needes enſue vpon not working: as the Apoſtle ſaith, verſ.11. We haue heard of ſome that walke inordinatly, and worke not at all: where the reaſon is giuen of their inordinate walking, euen their not working: ſo that they muſt needs walk inordinatly, that worke not. Thirdly, they which haue a lawfull vocation, beſide bodily working, are not bound to corporall labour: but ſo haue not your loitering lubberly Friers, that neither preach, nor worke: neither can they keepe themſelues from idlenes and offences, by any other meanes, then by working, which they doe not.

Argum.2. Neither is it to be permitted, that Friers ſhould get their liuing by begging: for what are they elſe but valiant beggers? Firſt, there ought to bee no beggers in the Common-wealth: as Deuter.15. Though the Lord ſay, that they ſhould neuer be without poore or beggers, which ſhould want their helpe, verſ.11. yet, verſ.5. this charge is giuen, that by them, that is, their default, there ſhould not be a begger in Iſrael: they ſhould ſo prouide for the poore, that they neede not goe a begging. There are alſo poſitiue lawes, to reſtraine the number of beggers, and therefore there is no reaſon, that by a number of idle vagrant perſons, belly-god Friers, that begging order ſhould be enlarged. Deut.15.11.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Deut.15.4. there is no prohibition of beggers: for our Sauiour Chriſt in all the Goſpell findeth not fault with the beggers, that then abounded; but it is a promiſe onely that they ſhould haue ſuch plentie, if they kept Gods commandements, that they ſhould haue no beggers, cap.46. reſp. ad argum.1.

Contra. Firſt, to ſuffer beggers is a thing diſpleaſing vnto God and forbidden: becauſe begging proceedeth either from the hardnes of mens hearts, and therefore wee are commanded not to turne away our eyes from our owne fleſh, that is, from our poore brethren, Iſai.58.7. or elſe from idlenes; and therefore men are commanded to worke, that they be not in want, 1.Theſſ.4.12. and both theſe, as hardnes of heart, and idlenes, are diſpleaſing to God and forbidden. Secondly, it is vntrue, that in the Goſpell the rich are not rebuked for ſuffering beggers; as may appeare in the parable of the rich man, Luke 16. who is puniſhed for ſuffering Lazarus to lie crying at his gates: and it is Iobs commendation, that hee ſuffered not the eyes of the widow to faile, Iob 31.16. that is, ſuffered not the poore to waite for their almes, or lie begging at his gates; but hee eftſoone admitted them vnto his table, as it followeth verſe 17. Iſai.58.7. 1.Theſſ.4.12. Iob 31.16.

Argum.3. Seeing it cannot be choſen, but there muſt needs be ſome beggers; they ought not to be young ſturdie lubbers, that are able to worke, as moſt of the Friers were; but ſuch as he deſcribed, Luk.14.21. where the King ſaith to his ſeruants, Goe out quickly, and bring hither the poore, the maimed, the halt, the blinde: Ergo, ſuch luſtie fellowes ought to liue by the ſweate of their browes, not to eate vp the bread of the poore. Luke 14.21.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that in this place alleaged, Luke 14.21. all the poore are not vnderſtood, to be blinde, lame, impotent, &c. but it muſt be read with a diſtinction, Bring in the poore, and the maimed: ſo the poore are called, whether they are maimed or not: and S. Paul, Act. 24. 17, brought almes to the poore at Ieruſalem, yet were they not all blinde and lame, &c. Act. 24. 17.

Contra. Firſt, wee ſay not that almes are not to be giuen to any poore, but ſuch as are impotent; but that no poore ought to be ſuffered to liue by asking and begging, but ſuch as are impotent, and vnfit to labour. Secondly, the example of S. Pauls bringing almes to Ieruſalem is impertinent, ſeeing the queſtion is of beggers, not of all poore: And beſide, we ſpeake of a ſetled ſtate in the Commonwealth, not of the daies of perſecution, when the brethren of neceſſitie muſt be relieued. Thirdly, that in the parable, impotent poore onely are vnderſtood, it may be gathered by the place from whence they were called, namely from the ſtreetes, high wayes and hedges: where in thoſe daies none were ſuffered to ſtand and begge, but onely the impotent, as blinde, lame, and ſuch like.

Laſtly, in the Sermons, Ad fratres in eremo, which are aſcribed to Auguſtine, thus wee reade: Eia fratres mei, &c. ſemper boni aliquid facite; quem tædet orare, vel pſallere non deſiſtat; quem tædet orare, vel pſallere, manibus laborare non differat. My brethren, &c. alwaies be ye doing of ſome good; if you be wearie of praying, ſing; if of ſinging, then labour with your hands. And in the ſame place, olde men onely of 80. yeeres olde are exempted from working. And in another place Auguſtine ſheweth, that the Monkes in his time did ſo plie their worke, Vſque adeo, vt etiam naues oneratas in ea loca mittant, quo inopes incolunt: That they ſent ſhips laden with neceſſaries, vnto thoſe places where the poore inhabited, de morib. eccleſ. cap. 31. Ergo, in Auguſtines time Monkes liued not by begging, but with labour of their hands. Serm. 16.

This alſo is further prooued by the generall conſent of antiquitie: that Monkes ſhould not meddle with any part of the Miniſterie, and therefore had no right to their maintenance. Chalcedon. Concil. can. 4. Vt nullus monachorum tentet ciuilia aut eccleſiaſtica negotia inquietare: That no Monke vnder paine of excommunication, meddle with ciuill or eccleſiaſticall buſineſſe. Leo epiſtol. 60. Nullus præter eos, qui ſunt domini ſacerdotes ius docendi & prædicandi audeat vendicare, ſiue ſit monachus, ſiue laicus, &c. Let no man, beſide the Miniſters of God, take vpon them to teach, or preach, whether hee be a Monke, or a lay man, Tarraconenſ. can. 11. Vt nullus monachorum miniſterium Eccleſiaſticum præſumat agere: That no Monke preſume to execute the Eccleſiaſticall Miniſterie.

Hereunto agree their owne Canons: Cauſ. 2. qu. 7. c. 54. Pelag. Nec ſecularia, nec eccleſiaſtica negotia monachus, &c. That a Monke ſhould not entermeddle either with matters ſecular, or eccleſiaſticall. Cauſ. 7. qu. 1. c. 45. Monachorum vita, &c. A Monkes profeſſion is to be ſubiect, not to teach, or beare rule. Likewiſe, Sext. decretal. lib. 5 tit. 2. c. 11. Clemens 4. Prædicatores quæſtuarios à prædicationis officio, &c. Begging Preachers muſt bee inhibited to preach, for it appertaineth onely to them to aske charitable reliefe, &c. Thus Monkes in times paſt, were excluded from the office of the Clergie.

And as Monks could not become Clerkes, ſo neither was it lawfull for Clerks to enter into Monkerie. Concil. Cæſar auguſt. can. 6. Clericus, qui propter luxum, &c. ab officio ſuo ſponte diſceſſerit, ac velut obſeruatorem legis ſe monachum videri maluerit, de eccleſia repellendus: A Clergie man, which of wantonneſſe doth leaue his office, and chuſeth rather to be a Monke, that he may ſeeme an obſeruer of the law, let him be expelled from the Church.

Secondly, as there is no affinitie betweene Monkes and Clerkes, for their office, ſo haue they nothing to doe with Clerkes maintenance. Monkes ought to take no tithes, Lateranenſ. ſub Innocent. 3. cap. 61. Ne religioſi ſuſcipiant decimas de manu laicali: Religious men (meaning Monkes) ought to receiue no tithes of the lay ſort. Yet Monkes are commanded to pay tithes: Concil. Lateranenſ. part. 13. cap. 6 ſub Alexandro 3. Ex prædijs ruſticis traditis monachi decimas ſoluant: Monkes muſt pay their tithes out of their farmes let out to husbandmen. And as for other maintenance by land, it is likewiſe forbidden, Lateranenſ. part. 27. cap. 1. Alexander. 3. Monachi non debent villas aut eccleſias ad firmam tenere: Monkes muſt not take villages or Churches to farme.

3 Monkiſh idle life is condemned, Concil. Toletan. 7. can. 5. Illos quos in tali propoſito ignauia impulit, quoſque nulla vitæ dignitas ornat, ſed ignorantia fœdat, decernimus à cellulis eijci, &c. They which entred into this profeſſion for idleneſſe ſake, who are of no commendable life, but foulely ignorant, we would haue them caſt out of their Cels.

4 Monkes alſo and Friers are forbidden by the ancient Canons to liue by begging, Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. cap. 107. Ipſi pauperes, ſi ſe poſſunt ſuis artificijs & laboribus expedire, non præſumant, quod debet infirmus, & debilis accipere: The poore, that are able to helpe themſelues by their labour, muſt not take that, which is allotted for the weake and impotent: Colonienſ. part. 11. cap. 3. In hoſpitalia, nulla aliæ quàm miſerabiles perſonæ, quæ aut morbo, debilitate, aut ætate impeditæ ſunt manibus laborare: Let none but miſerable poore perſons be receiued into hoſpitals, which are hindred by their ſickneſſe, impotencie, or age, from working with their hands. Cap. 5. Sint mendicantibus validis non ſolum hoſpitalia clauſa, ſed & publice & oſtiatim mendicare interdictum ſit: * Not onely hoſpitals are to be ſhut vp againſt valiant beggers, but we forbid ſuch to begge from houſe to houſe, &c. Therefore luſtie, ſturdie, lubberly Friers ought not to goe a begging, but to get their liuing with labour.

* That this is not meant onely of common beggers, but of idle lubberly Friers: ſee Retect. pa. 50. and the exception taken hereunto anſwered.

See alſo to this purpoſe their owne Canons: Cauſ. 16. qu. 1. c. 18. Pſeudomonachi, &c. Monkes that wander too and fro, are called falſe Monkes. Cauſ. 18. qu. 2. c. 10. Monachi in ciuitate vagantes, &c.

Monkes wandring vp and downe in Cities, do but make a ſhew onely, they are not true Monkes. Extrauag. commun. lib.3. tit.8. c.2. Ioann.22. Monachi ad tranſmarina, &c. Monkes going beyond the ſea, muſt bee taken for Apoſtatae, &c. Theſe Canons forbid the wandring and runnagate life of Monkes.

5 Laſtly then, that there is no meanes left to Monkes for their maintenance, but the labour of their hands, it is thus further ſhewed, Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. cap. 96. ex Hieronym. Facito aliquid operis, vt ſemper inueniat te diabolus occupatum: Be doing of ſome worke, that the diuell may alwaies finde you occupied.

Concil. Carthag.4. can. 51. Clericus quantumlibet verbo Dei eruditus, artificio victum quaerat: A Clergie man, though very well inſtructed in the word of God, may get his liuing by ſome artificiall worke. Can.53. Omnes Clerici, qui ad operandum validi ſunt, artificiola & literas diſcant: All Clergie men, that are ſtrong to labour, let them together with letters learne ſome handicraft, &c. If Clerkes in thoſe daies were inured to hand-labour, whoſe office was to teach; how much more did it become the Monkes, who had nothing to doe with Eccleſiaſticall functions?

Laſtly, Iohn Wickliffe condemned for this article with others, for ſaying, that Friers are bound to get their liuing by labour of their hands, and not by begging: and that whoſoeuer gaue any almes to begging Friers, is accurſed, Fox pag.435. articl.22.23.

Pag.401.1.40.

Now for further euidence. 1. In the Greeke Church the Monkes of auncient time laboured with their hands, as Chryſoſtome witneſſeth, that the Monkes hauing finiſhed their prayers, Exorto iam ſole ad opus ſe vertere, The Sunne being riſen doe goe to their worke: and the ſame is the vſe of the Greeke Monkes to this day, as Ieremie their Patriarke exhorteth Monkes to continue in watching and prayer, &c. in opere ipſo, and in their worke.

Cenſur. Orient.c.21.

2 So Athanaſius preſcribeth to the Egiptian Monkes: that they ſhould not goe forth of their houſe, but when, either Ratio religionis exegerit, aut operis exercendi cauſa, &c. Either ſome religious buſineſſe required, or to follow their worke for their liuing. And at this day, it is not lawfull for the Monkes of Æthiopia, vicatim mendicare, to begge abroad in the Countrey, but they get their liuing with their hands: as Zaga Zabo an Æthiopike Biſhop confeſſeth.

Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop. Hann. ſect.18. pag.574.

3 Wittemberg.confeſſ.c.26. This vow (to get thy liuing by begging) is repugnant to the loue of thy neighbour, which requireth, that by begging thou be not further troubleſome to any, then neceſſitie requireth.

4 Polydor Virgil ſaith, I ſee no reaſon, why Monkes Debeant ſemper in mendicando haerere, &c. ſhould hang vpon begging, when it is euident Chriſtum non mendicaſſe, that Chriſt begged not, neither did the Apoſtles, otioſos expectare, expect their maintenance from others being idle, &c. yea he ſheweth that Francis in his teſtament tooke this order, that his Monkes ſhould get their liuing by the labour of their hands, Nec prius ad mendicandum aggredi, quam laboris pretium eſſet negatum, And not to betake themſelues to begging, vntill they ſhould be denied the price for their worke.

Polydor lib.7. de inuention. c.3.

Thus by Gods goodneſſe we haue finiſhed this queſtion, and this whole controuerſie: one other queſtion remaineth, whether the monaſticall life be meritorious or not, which wee haue referued to another place, when wee ſhall come to the queſtion of virginitie in generall, and the priuiledges thereof.

THE

THE SEVENTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING THE CIVILL MAGISTRATE.

MAny things, which Bellarmine in this Controuerſie laboureth to proue, are agreed vpon betweene vs and our aduerſaries, and therefore wee will ſpend no time in them.

1 We teach, as well as they, that there ought to be Magiſtrates, Princes and gouernours amongſt Chriſtians, contrarie to that which the Anabaptiſts holde, that there ought to bee equalitie among Chriſtians. The holy Ghoſt, Iudg. 17. 6. and 19. 1. maketh this the cauſe of all diſorder: At that time in Iſrael there was no King amongſt them, but euery man did that which ſeemed good in his owne eyes.

Iudg. 17. 6. 19. 1

2 We doe hold, that euen wicked Kings and Tyrants haue power ouer the goods and liues of men, neither that it is lawfull to diſobey them, but in matters onely belonging to our conſcience, where it is better to obey God then men: Ierem. 27. 6. I haue giuen, ſaith the Lord, all theſe lands to Nabuchadnezzar.

Ierem. 27. 6.

8 Concerning the power of Princes, we grant, that they may make lawes and ordinances to gouerne the people by, Prou. 8. 15. that they may puniſh the offenders of their lawes, Rom. 13. They doe not beare the ſword for nought: That it is lawfull for Chriſtian Princes, vpon iuſt occaſion, to wage battell, Luk. 3. 14. Iohn Baptiſt doth not condemne the calling of ſouldiers, but teacheth them to vſe it aright.

Prou. 8. 15.
Luk. 3. 14.

But here by the way we muſt a little ſalute the Ieſuite, who findeth great fault with Luther, for ſaying; That to fight againſt the Turkes, is to repugne againſt God, viſiting our iniquities by them, Articul. 34. condem. in bulla Leonis. As though Luther ſhould thinke it vnlawfull to wage battell with the Turke. Firſt, I will briefly declare, that Luther had no ſuch meaning; and then it ſhall appeare by whom the Turkiſh warres haue beene moſt hindered.

As concerning the firſt, Luther doth not ſimply ſpeake againſt ſuch warres, but onely the abuſes among Chriſtians, in ſuch warlike enterpriſes: the firſt is, their malice and hatred againſt the Infidels, whom they ſeeke by no meanes to conuert or winne vnto the faith, but vſe altogether violent and bloodie meanes, whereas the other way ought firſt to be attempted, as M. Tindall ſaith; I am bound to loue the Turke with all my might, &c. after the example that Chriſt loued mee, neither to ſpare goods, body or life to winne him to Chriſt, Fox pag. 1248.

The ſecond abuſe is their ſuperſtition towards the land of Iudea, which they call the holy land, for the recouering whereof principally all thoſe great warres were taken in hand: whereas there are greater motiues, as the propagation of the Goſpell, the redeeming of the libertie of Chriſtians: And therfore it is to be thought, that God in his great wiſedome, hath giuen ouer thoſe places to the poſſeſſion of the Heathen, to let vs know, that before God one place is not more holy then another.

A third fault is, for that Chriſtians ſeeing the mightie encreaſe of the Turkiſh tyrannie, doe not enter into conſideration of themſelues, and repent them of their ſinnes, which are the cauſe why Chriſtians are ſcourged with the Turkiſh yron rods. The ſinnes of Chriſtians (ſo called) are very great, and doe farre exceede the manners of the Eaſt: As one thus writeth, Latini licèt ad ea, quæ ſunt fidei, verius adhereant Deo quàm Græci, tamen quoad mores multo pluribus fœditatibus & ſceleribus implicati ſunt: Though the Latines in things concerning faith doe more neerely cleaue to God, then the Grecians, yet are they more polluted in their manners, Oper. tripartit. lib. 1 cap. 2. tom. 2. Concil. But as the truth is, the Latines are more corrupt both in life and manners: this is that therefore that Luther miſliketh in theſe warres, that men will not conſider, that they are chaſtiſed for their ſinnes, and ſo learne to amend their liues: and otherwiſe he thinketh not. Yea Bellarmine himſelfe alleageth Luthers owne words, whereby he ſheweth his great miſlike of thoſe Preachers, that crie out the Turke ought not to be reſiſted: Hic ſermo ſeditioſus eſt, &c. This ſaying is ſeditious and not to be ſuffered. Theſe are Luthers owne words in his booke, De Viſitation. Saxonica: howſoeuer the Ieſuite in other places wreſteth his meaning.

Now in the next place I will ſhew, how that not Luther, or any of his part, but the Pope and Popelings haue beene the onely hinderers of the Chriſtians couragious enterpriſes againſt the Turke, and the greateſt cauſe of his riſing.

1 The firſt aduantage which the Infidels had, was by the diuiſion of the Chriſtian Empire, when as firſt Gregorie the 3. anno 742. began, and Leo the 3. finiſhed his deuice, in erecting a new Emperour in the Weſt about anno 800. and ſo weakened the power of the Emperour of Conſtantinople. And afterward they tooke vpon them to excommunicate the Greeke Emperour at their pleaſure; as Clemens 5. dealt with Andronicus Paleologus, excommunicating him, and all the Greeke Church beſide, charging all Princes, Earles, Barons, &c. vnder paine of excommunication, to haue no ſocietie or confederacie with him, Extrau. commun. lib. 5. tit. 10. c. 3. And by this meanes the Greeke Emperour being forſaken of all helpe, was vnable to reſiſt the cruell Turke.

2 After that the Empire of the Eaſt was thus weakened; by little and little the Weſt Empire began to decay: for the Popes vſurped vpon the Emperours, tooke vpon them to depoſe them, to make them their vaſſals, to hold their ſtirrup, to kiſſe their feet, to receiue their Crowne and dignitie at the Popes hands: And at the length Gregorie the 5. anno 1000. or there about, made a decree, that the Emperour ſhould bee choſen from thenceforth by ſeuen Prince-Electors of Germanie: ſo the maieſtie of the Empire, which before deſcended by certaine inheritance, now began to depend vpon vncertaine and corrupt election. And hereof it came to paſſe, that anno 1350. Carolus 4. that his ſonne might ſucceede him in the Empire, did lay to pledge vnto the Prince-Electors the free Cities belonging to the Empire, which to this day were neuer redeemed: and thus alſo was the Weſt Empire weakened, and a way made for the Turke to inuade Chriſtendome.

3 A third practiſe of the Pope in weakening the ſtate of Chriſtendome was, by his cruell taxes and impoſitions vpon the Clergie and others, in leuying ſometime the tenths, ſometime the firſt fruites, ſometime halfe the fruites of all Eccleſiaſticall promotions, as Innocentius the ſeuenth did: And vnder the pretenſe and colour of the holy warres, gathering great ſummes of money, as in the Laterane Councell ſub Innocent. 3. in fine: the twentieth part of euery ſpirituall liuing for the ſpace of three yeeres was allotted towards the expedition intended againſt the Infidels: and at diuers other times the like exactions were required. And thus by the Popes Annates, Buls, Indulgences, yeeres of Iubile, firſt fruites, pall money, diſpenſations, Peter pence, and ſuch other deuices, all Chriſtendome was robbed and ſpoiled, and left naked to the Turke.

4 Beſide, theſe former practiſes, the Popes haue dealt vnfaithfully, and entred themſelues into league with the Infidels: Alexander the third anno. 1160. perſwaded the Emperour Fredericke to goe in battell in his owne perſon againſt the Souldane, and ſo betrayed him into his enemies hand, ſending vnto the Souldane the Emperours counterfeit taken by a skilfull Painter: Alexander the ſixth, tooke 200000. crownes of Baiazetes the great Turke to poyſon his brother Gemes, that was fled to him for ſuccour, and ſo he did: Eugenius the fourth, anno. 1430. perſwaded Vladiſlaus King of Hungarie to breake the truce, and violate his faith giuen vnto Amurathes the great Turke: whereupon the Turke in great indignation ioyned battell with him, wherein the King himſelfe and the moſt of his Armie were ſlaine: And by this occaſion the Turke entred into Chriſtendome, and to this day neuer could be driuen out.

5 Laſtly, if the Pope were an enemie indeede to the Turke, and would haue battell waged with him, he ſhould doe as his predeceſſor Innocentius the third did, Concil. Lateranenſ. who proclaiming warre againſt the Turke, Imperauit pacem Chriſtianis ad quadriennium ſub pœna excommunicationis: Inioyned peace & truce to all Chriſtians for foure yeere vnder paine of excommunication. So ſhould the Pope cauſe the King of Spaine to leaue off moleſting and troubling his neighbours: but now he is ſo farre from this, that the Pope is rather become the chiefe author of diſſention, and ſtrife, and ſower of diſcord among Chriſtian Princes, exciting and ſtirring them vp to warre one againſt another. Did not Marcellus the ſecond ſay, not long ſince, Expeditionem magis fieri debere in Lutheranos, quàm Turcas? That warre ſhould be made vpon the Lutherans, rather then againſt the Turkes? But as the ſaying is, it is well that a curſt Cow hath ſhort hornes, for this Marcellus was but a Pope of 23. dayes. Alexander Farneſius Cardinall and chiefe Captaine vnder Paulus the third, againſt the Lutherans, ſaid, he would ſhed ſo much Lutheran bloud, as that his horſe might ſwim therein: ex actis Paul. 3.

Iudge now (Chriſtian Reader) whether by this meanes the Pope hath not greatly decayed the ſtrength of Chriſtendome, in nouriſhing of domeſticall warres: and ſo comparing this, with the other practiſes, you ſhall finde, not Luther nor Lutherans, as they are ſlaundered; but the Pope and his Popelings, to haue beene the chiefe hinderers of the Chriſtians warlike enterpriſes againſt the Turke: let vs now goe forward.

The ſeuerall queſtions, wherein we differ from our aduerſaries, and they from the truth, concerning the office of the ciuill Magiſtrate, are theſe.

1 Concerning the authoritie of the Prince in Eccleſiaſticall matters, three parts of the queſtion. Firſt, whether he haue power ouer perſons Eccleſiaſticall. Secondly, whether ouer their goods. Thirdly, whether in Eccleſiaſticall cauſes.

2 Whether the ciuill Magiſtrate may proſecute heretikes to death: and whether hee ought to be the iudge of heretikes, with other like queſtions.

3 Whether the poſitiue and ciuill lawes of Princes doe binde their ſubiects, and oblige them ſimply in conſcience. This matter we haue diſcuſſed before, Controuerſie 4. queſt. 7. part. 1.

4 Whether the Pope ought or may excommunicate the Prince, or Emperour, or otherwiſe hath any temporall iuriſdiction aboue him: this queſtion alſo is handled before, Controuerſie 4. queſt. 8. part. 1.

THE FIRST QVESTION, CONCERNING THE authoritie of the Prince in Eccleſiaſticall matters.

THis queſtion hath three parts. Firſt, whether hee haue power ouer the perſons Eccleſiaſticall. Secondly, whether ouer their goods. Thirdly, whether the Prince bee chiefe in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall.

THE FIRST PART, CONCERNING THE AVTHORITIE of the ciuill Magiſtrate ouer Eccleſiaſticall perſons.

The Papiſts.

THe Clergie is not bound to keepe and obſerue the ciuill and poſitiue lawes of Princes, if they be contrarie to the Canons of the Church: neither ought they for any cauſe to be cited before the ciuill Magiſtrate, or to be iudged by him, Bellarm. de Clericis, cap. 28. 106. Error.

It is abſurd (ſaith the Ieſuite) that the ſheepe ſhould iudge the ſhepheard, Bellarm. And the Apoſtle willeth all men to obey their Biſhops and ouerſeers, Heb. 13. 17 and to ſubmit themſelues vnto them, from which rule neither Kings nor Emperours are exempted: Prelates muſt bee obeyed; Ergo, not obey, Rhemiſt. ibid. Heb. 13. 17.

Anſw. Firſt, the obedience here required we acknowledge; that it ought to be yeelded by Kings and Emperours to thoſe that haue the ouerſight of their ſoules: for the Prince is bound to receiue and beleeue all true doctrine which is taught by the Paſtors and Biſhops of the Church, agreeable to the word of God, vnder paine of damnation: and the Paſtors are bound vnder the like paine to obey the Princes lawes, made according to the word of God. Secondly, the ſpirituall obedience of the ciuill Magiſtrate to the word of God, taught by the Paſtors of the Church, is no exemption of them from their ciuill obedience: for euery ſoule is ſubiect to the higher powers, Rom. 13. 1.

Argum. 2. Bellarmine in this place much vrgeth the conſtitutions of certaine Councels, for the priuiledge of the Clergie: as Chalced. can. 9. Agathenſ. can. 32. concil. Carthag. 3. can. 9, Toletan. 3. can. 13.

Anſw. Theſe Canons doe not ſimply forbid Magiſtrates to haue the cognizance of Clergie mens cauſes, or to conuent them before them: but onely, that Clergie men vpon euery occaſion, ſhould not draw one another before the ciuill Magiſtrate, but be contented rather to be ordered by their B. as the words of the Canon of the Chalcedon are theſe, Si Clericus aduerſus Clericum, &c. If a Clergie man haue a matter againſt a Clergie man, he ſhould referre it to the B. &c. The Agathenſian ſaith, a Clergie man without the licence of his Biſhop, ſhould not preſume to ſue to a ſecular Iudge: ſo the Toletane, Vt Clerici Clericos, &c. that Clergie men ſhould not draw Clergie men before the ſecular Iudge contemning the Biſhop, &c. Who ſeeth not that here is no limitation of the ciuill authoritie, but a monition onely, that Clergie men in ſuch matters, as belonged to the cognizance of the Biſhop, ſhould be ordered by him rather with quietneſſe, then to runne to forraine iudgement vpon euery occaſion. And this we denie not, but it is practiſed in our Church, which notwithſtanding attributeth to the Prince the chiefe Soueraigntie ouer Eccleſiaſticall perſons.

The Proteſtants.

THat Eccleſiaſticall perſons are ſubiect to temporall gouernours, and are to bee iudged by their lawes, the Scriptures ſpeake plainly.

Argum. 1. Rom. 13. 1. Let euery ſoule bee ſubiect to the higher powers; Ergo, Biſhops, yea the Pope himſelfe, if he haue a ſoule. The like ſaith S. Peter 1. 2. 13. Submit your ſelues to all maner ordinance. Salomon remoued Abiathar from the Prieſthood, and put in Sadock. Paul appealed, & ſubmitted himſelfe to Caſar. Againe, if Prieſts offend and commit any grieuous ſinne, as of murther, theft, who ſhal puniſh them? The ciuill Magiſtrate onely beareth the ſword. They muſt either grant, that Prieſts are no euill doers, which were too too groſſe; or if they be, that they are vnder the ciuill Magiſtrates power: for he is the Miniſter of God to take vengeance vpon euery euill doer, Rom. 13. 4. Rom. 13. 1. 1. Pet. 2. 13. Rom. 13. 4.

Our Doway men to the inſtance giuen of Salomon, make this anſwere: That Salomon by ſpeciall inſtinct diſplaced Abiathar, being not onely a King but a Prophet: and againe, ſay they, ſome ſecular Princes doe nominate ſpirituall ſuperiours, and inſtall them in their ſeates; yet their iuriſdiction is not depending on the Prince, but the Prince to be directed by them, Numb. 27. 21. And further, they tell vs in another place, that whereas it is ſaid, Iudg. 4. 4. that Deborah iudged Iſrael: being a Propheteſſe ſhe reſolued hard & obſcure things, but exerciſed no iuriſdiction in any cauſes, for that belonged to the councell of Prieſts and of ſeuentie ancients, where the high Prieſt was the chiefe Iudge, Numb. 11. Deuter. 17. Marginall annotations vpon the 2. of the third of the Kings. Numb. 27. 21. Marginall note vpon the 4. of Iudg. verſ. 4.

Contra.1. True it is, that Salomon was both a Prophet and a King; but the depoſing of Abiathar was an act of his kingly office, the writing of canonicall bookes of Scripture was an act of his Propheticall gift: if as a Prophet he depoſed him, and not as King, then as a Prophet alſo he might haue put him to death, for he ſaid vnto him, Thou art worthie to die. 1.King.2.26. for his conſpiracie with Adoniah: and if it had beene a Prophets part to doe it, why was not the matter referred to Nathan a profeſſed and knowne Prophet. Salomon then by his Kingly power depoſed Abiathar for conſpiracie. 2. Neither needed he any ſpeciall inſtinct thereunto, but Princely diſcretion in diſcerning of his offence: that as he cauſed Adoniah to die for his ambitious attempt; ſo Abiathar was by the ſame power diſplaced from the Prieſthoode for his ſedition. 3. It is confeſſed, that Princes may nominate Princes, and inſtall them: and why not as well deueſt them as inueſt them, & foreſtall as well as inſtall them: their ſpirituall iuriſdiction we confeſſe hath no dependance of the King, nor yet any other eſſentiall parts of their ſpirituall function: yet are they vnder the temporal obedience of the King. 4. Deborah alſo is ſaid to haue iudged Iſrael, as other of the Iudges did: ſo Iair is ſaid to haue iudged Iſrael, chap.10.3. and Ibzan.chap.12.8. and Elon.chap.12.11. by iudging then is vnderſtood, gouerning, and deciding of controuerſies: as it is ſaid, All Iſrael came vnto her for iudgement. And this may appeare further, for that ſhe giueth direction for warre vnto Barak, and was the chiefe that managed that buſineſſe: this was more then to reſolue obſcure doubts. There was an high Prieſt, and ſeuentie auncients: but it ſeemeth they were careleſſe and negligent in their office, and therefore God raiſed vp extraordinarie Iudges. 5. And in that place obiected, Numb.27.21. Eleazars office was to aske counſell of God: ſo that direction was from the Prieſt, but the execution belonged to Ioſua: and who denieth but that it belongeth to ſpirituall Paſtors, to inſtruct the Ciuill power by the word of God: yet their Ciuill authoritie is not thereby impaired.

Epiſtol.162. In Auguſtines time, the controuerſies betweene the Catholike and Donatiſt Biſhops, were committed to the iudgement of the Emperour: Ait quidam, ſaith hee, non debuit Epiſcopus proconſulari iudicio purgari: Quaſi verò ipſe ſibi hoc comparauerit, ac non Imperator ita quæri iuſſerat, ad cuius curam, de qua rationem deo redditurus eſt res illa maximè pertinebat: But, ſaith one, a Biſhop ought not to haue beene purged before the Proconſull, or ciuill Magiſtrate: As though (ſaith Auguſtine) the Proconſull did of himſelfe intermedle in this matter, and was not commanded rather of the Emperour ſo to doe: vnto whoſe charge that matter principally appertained, and whereof he ſhall make account vnto God. Ergo, by his ſentence, the cauſe of the Biſhop principally was to bee iudged by the Emperour.

Agatho Biſhop of Rome writing to Conſtantinus the Emperour, calleth himſelfe, Imperij famulum, a ſeruant or ſubiect of his Empire: and againe, Pro obedientia, quam debuimus: he confeſſeth, he oweth obedience to him.

Pope Leo ſubmitted himſelfe to Lodouicus the Emperour, 2.quæſt.7. as it appeareth vnder theſe words: If wee haue done any thing incompetently, or haue not obſerued the path of equitie among ſubiects, we will amend the ſame, either by your owne iudgement, or elſe by the aduiſe and iudgement of thoſe, whom you ſhall appoint, &c. If the Popes therefore themſelues are not exempted from the ſecular power, I thinke inferiour Clerks are not?

Epiſtol. Leodienſ. cont. Paſchal.2. Omnis anima poteſtatibus ſublimioribus ſubditor, qui hoc omni animæ præcipit, quem à ſubiectione terrenæ poteſtatis excepit? Let euery ſoule (ſaith S. Paul) be ſubiect to the higher powers: he that enioyneth this to euery ſoule, whom hath he exempted from the ſubiection of the earthly power?

M. Bradford collecteth out of this place, that all men ought to be ſubiect to the temporall power, Poteſtati, quæ gladium geſtat: to that power which beareth the ſword, which is the temporall power. Pag.1460.2.86. Fox pag.1608.col.1.

B. Cranmer holy Martyr: By the Scripture the King is chiefe, and no forraine perſon in his owne Pag.1701.2.10. realme aboue him: there is no ſubiect, but to a King, I owe my fidelitie to the Crowne, &c. Fox 1874. col.2.

Now whereas Bellarmine maketh ſhew both of Imperiall and Pontificiall conſtitutions, as though he could out of them warrant his aſſertion: I will briefly declare, what plentifull teſtimonies we haue out of both.

Firſt, for the Ciuill law, whereas Bellarmine affirmeth, that the Magiſtrate can neither puniſh Clergie men, nor conuent them before them: I will proue the contrarie, concerning both theſe points. Firſt, that the Ciuill power hath authoritie to cenſure and puniſh the Clergie offending, it is euident, Cod.lib.1.tit.4.leg.3. Martian. Si Clericus erit, &c. If a Clergie man ſhall ſeeme to diſpute or doubt of the faith, he ſhall be depriued. Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.14. Arcadius, a Biſhop offending againſt the Common-wealth, ſhall be exiled.

For the conuenting of Clerkes, the law is as cleare, Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.24. Martian. Cum Clericis, &c. The Clergie men of Conſtantinople may be conuented before the Patriarke or Preſident of the Citie. leg.31. Authentica, Clerici extranei: Forraine Clerks, and not of the Citie of Conſtantinople, muſt be conuented only before the Preſident of the Citie. Ibid. authentic. In ciuili crimine ciuilis præſit Iudex, &c. In ciuill offences the Ciuill Iudge muſt beare ſway. And there criminall offences are interpreted to be murther, adultery, periurie, &c. Likewiſe Cod.lib.1.tit.6.leg.34. Anthemius, Præſidali iuriſdictioni,&c. To the Preſidents iuriſdiction all of what degree ſoeuer are ſubiect, Biſhops, Clerkes, Monkes,&c.

Now let vs take a view of their owne law: *Cauſ.*11.*qu.*1.*c.*20. Gregorius, Paulinum Aquileienſ.&c. I pray, ſend vnder ſafe cuſtodie vnto the Emperour, Paulinus Biſhop Aquileienſ. and the Biſhop of Millaine,&c. This Canon attributeth this power to the Imperiall crowne, to puniſh eccleſiaſticall perſons. Alſo *cap.*45. Si quis cum Clerico,&c. If a man haue a ſuite with a Clerke concerning a money matter, if the Biſhop refuſe to heare, Tunc ad ciuilem iudicem: Then it may bee lawfull to bring the matter before a ciuill Iudge: *Decret.Greg. lib.*5.*tit.*39.*c.*23. Clemens 3. Clericus à Comite iuſſus fuſtigari,&c. A certaine Clerke for making ſedition, was commanded by an Earle to be beaten with a club, and thereof died,&c. The Pope himſelfe determineth this to be lawfullie done. Thus wee ſee, how that in former time, Clerkes were ſubiect, both by the law of God and man, to the ciuill Iuriſdiction.

Now then, as by the preaching of the Goſpell, Princes are reſtored to their Imperiall dignitie, and made Lords of all their ſubiects both ſpirituall and temporall, whereas they are but halfe rulers before: ſo Princes likewiſe haue prouided great immunities and priuiledges for the Preachers of the Goſpell, by whom their princely authoritie is reuiued; as *Cod.lib.*1.*tit.*6.*leg.*1. Conſtantinus made a law, that Clergie men, their miniſters and ſeruants ſhould be free from all new exactions and impoſitions. Likewiſe *Conſtantinus ibid. leg.*2. exempteth Clergie men, their wiues, children, ſeruants, goods, from all militarie ſeruices, from carriage, poſt-ſeruice, and ſuch like. And Fredericke made an excellent conſtitution in the behalfe of the Clergie, and eſpecially ſuch as were Profeſſores ſacrarum legum,&c. Profeſſors of Scriptures, Ne à viliſſimis hominibus,&c. That euery vile perſon ſhould not be readie to offer or doe them wrong, or conuent them at their pleaſures before euery Iudge, but only ſuch as are there named: And the reaſon of this conſtitution is rendred, Quia illorum ſcientia,&c. Becauſe the whole world is lightened with their knowledge: Et ad obediendum Deo & nobis,&c. And the ſubiects are taught by them to obey God, and vs his Miniſters. Then it followeth, Dignum exiſtimauimus, vt quadam ſpeciali dilectione eos ab omni iniuria defendamus: Wee haue therefore thought it good, by our eſpeciall fauour to defend them from all iniurie: *Conſtit.Frederici.Cod.lib.*4.*tit.*13.*leg.*5. A worthie conſideration, that the Miniſters and Preachers of the Goſpell, which teach the people obedience, and would haue none exempted from their regall authoritie, ſhould themſelues be chiefly defended and protected by it. Agreeable to this Conſtitution, are the Imperiall lawes of this nation yet in force, which forbid that any hay, corne, beaſts, cattell or any goods of Clergie men, ſhould be taken from them, by any colour of Commiſſion, without their conſent: For wee doe take (as the words of the law are) the ſaid Clergie men with their poſſeſſions, goods and chattels, into our eſpeciall protection and defence: Anno 14. *Edward.*3.*cap.1.& anno* 1.*Richard.*2.*c.*3. Thus Chriſtian Princes in token of thankfulneſſe to the Goſpell and the Miniſters thereof, haue endued them with excellent priuiledges, if through the enuie, and pragmaticall attempts of inferiour miniſters and officers they might bee ſuffered to enioy the ſame: But it is now farre otherwiſe, that the Goſpell with the Miniſters thereof are growne into ſuch contempt, that euery vile perſon is readie to offer them wrong, and to moleſt them with iniurious ſuites, and that with many they finde ſmall fauour, neither are reſpected according to their calling; a ſmall reward for their labours in the Goſpell. And thus wee are made a ſcorne to our aduerſaries, who laugh in their ſleeues, to ſee the Miniſters of the Goſpell, that haue by their preaching enlarged the Ciuill authoritie, to receiue no more fauour from it, and in enlarging other mens libertie, to abridge their owne: which I ſpeake not, as complaining of the ſoueraigne and ſacred Princely Maieſtie, or the honourable Miniſters thereof; vnder whoſe comfortable ſhadow we liue, and haue libertie of conſcience; but of ſome inferiour officers, that haue not that regard to the excellent calling and miniſterie of the Goſpell, which is fit of all Chriſtians to be acknowledged. But leauing this complaint I will proceed.

Iuſt complaint againſt the iniurious vexation of Miniſters and Preachers of the Goſpell.

This right and power ouer Eccleſiaſticall perſons, firſt, the Emperours of Conſtantinople did exerciſe ouer their Patriarkes: as Nazianzene could not leaue his place there without licence of the Emperour: he went to Theodoſius to his Court, and craued remiſſionem laborum, to be eaſed of his labours, and with much adoe the Emperour gaue him licence to depart. Conſtantinus the 6. depoſed Michael Patriarke of Conſtantinople.

2 The ſame was practiſed in the South Church: Athanaſius Patriarke of Alexandria thus writeth to Conſtantius the Emperour; entreating, vt cum epiſtolis tuis patriam ingreſſus, ita acceptis mandatis tuis diſcederem: That as I came into my countrey at your ſending, ſo I may depart by your commandement,&c. At this day the Aethiopian Emperour hath ſoueraigne command ouer the Patriarke, not ſuffering him to meddle in the temporall adminiſtration of the kingdome; and when the Patriarke dieth, what goods ſoeuer he hath, ad imperatorem deuoluitur, it is deuolued to the Emperour.

Brethren obey all his iuſt and equall commandements: finally let them pay all cuſtomes and tributes,&c.* Here this dutie and ſubiection is required of all ſubiects: if ſpirituall perſons be ſubiects, they are not exempted.

4 Their Biſhop Eſpencaeus, doth acknowledge, that the Greeke Doctors, Chryſoſtome, Theophylact, Theoderet, and in the Latine Church, Gregorie the 11. Bernard, doe inferre out of theſe words of Eſpenc.in ep. ad Tit.cap.3. pag.513. S.Paul,Rom.13.1. Let euery ſoule be ſubiect to the higher power: that it is granted to the Emperour, non ſolum militibus, ſed ſacerdotibus dominari: not onely to haue dominion ouer Souldiers, but Prieſts alſo.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER THE PRINCE haue power ouer Eccleſiaſticall goods.

The Papiſts.

107.Error. THe goods of the Clergie both ſecular and Eccleſiaſticall, are and ought to bee exempted from paying tribute to Princes: yet they haue not this libertie, ſay they, by the law of God, but by the grant of Princes themſelues: *Rhemiſt.annot.Rom.*13.*ſect.*5.*Bellarmine de Clericis,cap.*28.

*Argum.*1. Geneſ.47.22. and 27. The lands of the Prieſts were exempted from paying tribute: Geneſ.47.22. Ergo, it ſeemeth that this cuſtome is grounded vpon the law of nature, Bellarm. The ſame preſident is vrged by the Doway tranſlators, who giue this marginall note vpon that place: The immunitie and care of Prieſts in the law of nature, yea among infidels.

Anſw, Firſt, the Hebrew word ſignifieth rather Preſidents, ſuch as were the Kings officers, not Prieſts, as Tremellius ſheweth: who were maintained by the Kings prouiſion, being officers of his houſehold: for Geneſ.41.45. Ioſeph is ſaid to marrie the daughter of Potyphar Prince, not prieſt of On. The ſame word Cohen is there vſed: for it is not like that Ioſeph would match himſelfe with an idolatrous prieſts daughter. Secondly, be it granted, this was but a politike conſtitution for that countrie: other Princes are not bound to Pharao his law. Thirdly, they gaine nothing by this, but that it is an humane conſtitution.

Matth.17.25. *Argum.*2. Some of them doe thus reaſon out of our Sauiour Chriſts words, Matth.17. when he ſaid thus to Peter, What thinkeſt thou Simon? of whom doe the Kings of the Nations receiue tribute, of their owne, or of ſtrangers? Simon anſwered, of ſtrangers: the Lord ſaid, then are their children free. But Clergie men are the children of the kingdome: Ergo, they ought to be free: thus reaſoneth Marſilius de Padua, and the Rhemiſts *Matth.*17.*ſect.*8.

Anſ. To this argument Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, by this reaſon all Chriſtians, as well as Clerks ſhould be exempted from tribute, becauſe they are all the ſonnes of God, being borne anew in Baptiſme. Secondly, Chriſt ſpeaketh only of himſelfe: that as Kings children are freed from tribute, ſo much more he, being the Sonne and Heire apparant of the King of kings, ſhould be exempted from all temporall tribute: thus one of them anſwereth another. Thirdly, to this anſwere may be added, that Chriſt ſtandeth not vpon any ſuch priuiledge, as he might iuſtly alleage; but notwithſtanding leſt he ſhould offend, yeeldeth to pay tribute: therefore by the words of our Sauiour, it is ſcandalous and offenſiue for any to pleade priuiledge in denying of tribute to Princes.

The Proteſtants.

THat Princes haue authoritie to puniſh Eccleſiaſticall perſons offending in their goods; either by diſplacing them, or by conuerting the Church poſſeſſions by them abuſed, to better vſes, we haue ſhewed before, Contr.5.queſt.6.part.1. And that their goods are liable to pay tribute, ſubſidie, taxe, vnto the Prince, thus now it is proued.

Matth.17.25. Rom.13.1. *Argum.*1. Our Sauiour Chriſt paied poll money, Matth.17.25. Rom.13. Euery ſoule ought to be ſubiect to the higher powers, and there verſ.5. paying of tribute is made a part of ſubiection: the argument therefore thus followeth: Clergie men are ſubiect to Princes, therefore they ought to pay tribute.

*Argum.*2. Ex conceſſis, we reaſon thus from their owne confeſſion: That which Princes gaue to the Church, vpon good cauſe they may take away: but this immunitie, not to pay tribute, was firſt granted, as they confeſſe, to the Church, by Kings and Princes: Ergo, they haue the ſame right, hauing iuſt occaſion, to take it from them againe. What Auguſtines iudgement is, we haue ſeene in the place before alleaged.

*Concil.Lateranenſ.ſub Leon.*10.*ſeſſ.*11. there the ancient cuſtome and priuiledge of Parliaments is approued: Quod habeant iuriſdictionem in perſonas Eccleſiaſticas: That they haue power and iuriſdiction ouer Eccleſiaſticall perſons. And the whole Councell ratified it, ſauing only Iohannes Dominicus Epiſcop.Terdonenſ. But Parliaments haue authoritie to leuie taxes and ſubſidies vpon Clergie men: ſo that conſequently herein alſo this Councell doth authorize Parliaments.

Fredericke the Emperour writeth well to Pope Adrian the 4. Ab ys, qui regalia noſtra tenent, cur homagium & regalia ſacramenta non exigimus, cum ille noſter & veſter inſtitutor ab homine rege nihil accipiens, tamen pro ſe & Petro cenſum Cæſari perſoluit, & exemplum vobis dedit, vt vos ita faciatis: Why ſhould we not require fealtie and other regall rights of thoſe, which doe hold and enioy our regall dignities, he meaneth Biſhops, ſeeing that Chriſt the founder both of the Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall ſtate, whereas hee receiued nothing of any humane King; yet for himſelfe and Peter paid tribute to Cæſar, and gaue you an example ſo to doe.

This is agreeable to the Ciuill law, *Cod. lib.*1.*tit.*6.*leg.*3. Conſtantius: Clerici pro ÿs prædÿs, &c. Clergie men, for ſuch poſſeſſions as they hold, muſt be vrged to pay tribute.

Their owne Canons conſent: Decret.par.1.diſtinct.8.c.1. Noli dicere quid mihi & regi,&c. Say not, what hath the King to doe with me? for what haſt thou to doe with thy poſſeſſion, which thou enioyeſt by the lawes of the King? *Decret.par.2.cauſ.*11.*qu.*1.*cap.*27. Si tributum petit imperator, non negamus: If the Emperour require tribute, we denie it not: for euen the lands of the Church pay tribute, &c. But becauſe theſe Canons are but compiled by Gratiane out of the fathers, as the firſt out of S. Auguſtine, the ſecond from S. Ambroſe; let vs heare the decree and ſentence of their owne Biſhops of Rome: as Vrbanus thus determineth, *Cauſ.*23.*qu.*8.*c.*22. Tributum in ore piſcis inuentum eſt, &c. Tribute was found in the fiſhes mouth; for the Church of her externall things paieth tribute: but he was not bidden to giue the whole fiſh, but only the piece in the fiſhes mouth: So the Church and the office of a Biſhop muſt not be yeelded to the Emperour; but that which is found in the mouth of the fiſh muſt be paied for the defence of peace, &c. Boniface 8. indeed decreed all ſuch lay officers to be excommunicate, that laid any taxes or impoſitions vpon the Church, and all Clergie men paying any ſuch, to bee ſubiect to the ſame cenſure, *ſext.decr.lib.*3.*tit.*23.*cap.*3. But this conſtitution is reuerſed by Clemens 5. *Clementin.lib.*3.*tit.*17. and by *Benedict.*11. *extrauag.commun.lib.*3.*tit.*13. *c.*1. where two caſes are excepted, namely, of neceſſitie, and common vtilitie, when it ſhall be lawfull for Clergie men to pay taxe and ſubſidie to the Ciuill ſtate.

4 See for the iudgement of the Latine Church, their owne decrees, and reſcripts of their Popes before alleaged.

So then it is euident, that the goods of Eccleſiaſticall perſons by common right are liable to ſuch taxations and charges, as the Ciuill power for the defence of the Common-wealth, and other neceſſarie ſupplies hath need of: yet herein both the liberality and bountie of Princes is to be commended, who haue of their noble and honourable minde granted immunities vnto ſome Eccleſiaſticall perſons and corporations: and their princely prudence and clemencie alſo ſhall neuer want due praiſe, not to impoſe more heauy burthens vpon them which watch ouer mens ſoules, then vpon other of their ſubiects: Neither in a Proteſtant Princes gouernment, ſhall one neede to feare, or haue occaſion to complaine, as a popiſh Biſhop doth of their gouernment: Plus iam quouis laico vectigalius ſumus, & merito quidem, quia plus quàm laice viuimus: We are more taxed and ſaid at, then lay men, and no maruell, becauſe we liue like more then lay men.

Eſpencæus digreſſ.in 1.Tim. lib.2.cap.2.

THE THIRD PART, CONCERNING THE PRINCES authoritie in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall.

The Papiſts.

THe Prince, they ſay, hath no authoritie to giue voyce deliberatiue or definitiue in Councels concerning matters of religion, nor to make lawes Eccleſiaſticall concerning the ſame: onely they giue them authoritie to execute the Eccleſiaſticall lawes made by the Church, Rhemiſt. 1.*Cor.*14.16. *Bellarm.de Pontif.lib.*1.*cap.*7.

108.Error.

*Argum.*1. Kings and Princes may in their owne perſons execute if they will, whatſoeuer their inferiour officers doe, as to heare and determine cauſes, as the Iudges and other Magiſtrates doe: but the Prince cannot execute any Eccleſiaſticall function, as to preach, baptize: Ergo, he hath no authoritie in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall: for how can the Prince impart that to others, whereof he is himſelfe incapable, as to giue Biſhops and Paſtors power to ordaine, to preach, and ſuch like? Bellarm. Rhemiſt. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, the authoritie of Ciuill Magiſtrates doth not giue any thing to Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters, which apperteineth to their office, as to ordaine, preach, baptize; neither is the Prince to deale in theſe offices: yet may the Ciuill Magiſtrates command them to execute their charge and duties according to the word of God. Wherefore it followeth not, Princes cannot execute the paſtorall duties themſelues: Ergo, they ought not to ſee them executed. Dauid, Salomon, Ieboſaphat, Ezechias, commanded the Prieſts to execute their office according to the law of God, though it was not lawfull for them, neither did they execute any thing proper to the Prieſts office in their owne perſons; neither doth any Chriſtian Prince challenge any ſuch right in Eccleſiaſticall functions: wherefore it is an impudent ſlaunder of Bellarmine, which he giueth foorth of our Queene, Iam re ipſa Caluiniſtis in Anglia mulier quædam ſummus pontifex: And now (ſaith hee) in England the Caluiniſts haue a certaine woman for their chiefe Biſhop: De votis Eccleſ.lib.4.cap.9.

2 It doth not follow, that the Prince might as well execute Eccleſiaſticall offices, as he may Ciuill in his owne perſon, if he haue authoritie ouer both: no more then it followeth, that becauſe Eccleſiaſticall perſons doe teach both Ciuill Magiſtrates and Church officers their duties, and may in their owne perſons execute the one, that is, ſpirituall duties, that they may as well intermeddle in the other: But theſe two offices of Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall gouernment are diſtinguiſhed, and muſt not be confounded. The Prince, though he haue authoritie to command Eccleſiaſticall perſons; yet being a Ciuill Magiſtrate, is not to deale with the execution of ſpirituall duties. Biſhops and Paſtors likewiſe haue a ſpirituall charge ouer Kings and Princes, to ſhew them their duties out of Gods word, yet becauſe they are perſons Eccleſiaſticall, they ought not to meddle with meere ciuill duties. The Prince hath the ſoueraigntie of externall gouernment in all cauſes and ouer all perſons, yet not alike; for ciuill offices he may both commaund and execute; Eccleſiaſticall duties he commandeth only: Biſhops and Paſtors haue alſo a ſpirituall charge ouer all, preſcribing out of Gods word as well the dutie of Magiſtrates, as of Miniſters, but not alike; for the one they may fully execute, ſo may they not the other. The head in the naturall bodie reſembleth the Prince in the Common-wealth, in ſome ſenſe; the head giueth mouing to the whole bodie and all the parts thereof; but to the principall parts in the head, the eyes, tongue, eares, it giueth beſide the facultie of mouing, the ſenſe alſo of ſeeing, taſting, hearing: So in the Common-wealth, by the Princes authoritie all perſons are kept in order, and vrged to looke to their charge, both ciuill officers and ſpirituall, as all the parts of the bodie receiue mouing from the head: But the ciuill officers receiue power and authoritie beſide, and their very offices of the King, as the parts in the head receiue ſenſe from their fountain: but Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters receiue not their offices from the Prince, or any mortall man, but they haue their calling according to the order of the Church of God.

Argum.2. For the ſpace of three hundred yeeres the Church after Chriſt had no Chriſtian gouernours, but all Heathen and Idoll worſhippers, yet then the Church was eſtabliſhed, and preuailed: Ergo, Ciuill Magiſtrates ought not to deale in Eccleſiaſticall affaires: Bellarm.de laicis, cap.17.

Anſw.1. Euen then alſo, the Heathen Emperours had authoritie in Church matters, and if they had commanded any thing agreeable to true religion, they ſhould haue been obeyed; as Cyrus in the law which he made for building the Temple, Ezra.1. Darius the Median, for worſhipping the true God. The Heathen Emperours then had the ſame power, but they knew not how to vſe it: Chriſtian Princes doe ſucceed them in the ſame office, but are better taught by the word of God how to exerciſe the ſword. Secondly, we denie not but that in the time of perſecution all things neceſſarie for the ſpirituall building thereof may be had, without the Magiſtrate, as a vineyard may bring forth fruite without an hedge, but it cannot enioy peace, nor be in a perfect eſtate, in reſpect of the externall gouernment, but vnder good Magiſtrates; as the vineyard may ſoone be ſpoiled, the wild bore and the beaſts of the field may breake in vpon it, hauing no hedge. The childe being in the wombe, though it haue as yet ſmall vſe of the head, but is fed by the nauell, which is in ſtead of the mouth, hath in it ſelfe the lineaments and proportion of a humane bodie, yet it wanteth the perfect beautie, till it be borne and come forth, and the head receiue his office: So may the Church haue a being in perſecution, and the want of the ciuill head may be otherwiſe ſupplied, but it is not beautifull till the head be ſet vp, and the ſword put into the Chriſtian Magiſtrates hand.

Argum.3. Princes haue no cure nor charge of ſoules: Ergo, they are not to meddle with Eccleſiaſticall lawes, Rhemiſt.annot.1.Corinth.14.ſect.16.

Anſw. Parents haue charge ouer the ſoules of their children, for they are charged to bring them vp in the inſtruction and information of the Lord, Epheſ.6.4. Therefore Princes alſo haue directlie charge of the ſoules of their ſubiects according to their place and calling, by prouiding and making good Eccleſiaſticall lawes, and compelling them to the true ſeruice of God: as the Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters in another kinde, and more properly are ſaid to haue the cure of ſoules, in feeding and inſtructing the people.

Concil.Matiſconenſ.in fine. Guntrannus the King being preſent, ſaith thus to the Biſhops; Licet ſine noſtra admonitione, ad vos ſpecialiter prædicandi cauſa pertineat, &c. Although without our admonition or charge, the dutie of preaching doth eſpecially belong to you: neuertheleſſe, wee, to whom the higheſt King hath giuen authoritie to raigne, ſhall not eſcape his wrath, if we haue no care of our ſubiects, that is, concerning their religion, &c. This godly King taketh himſelfe to be charged with the ſoules of his people. Biſhop Ridley holie Martyr alſo hath ſealed the ſame truth: Both the falſe teacher, and the corrupt gouernour, ſhall be puniſhed for the death of their ſubiect, whom they haue falſely taught, and corruptly led, yea and his blood ſhall be required at his hands, Fox pag.1774.

The Proteſtants.

The ciuill Magiſtrate, by the word of God, hath power to make and conſtitute Eccleſiaſticall lawes, and to eſtabliſh true religion, and ſee that all perſons vnder their gouernment doe faithfully execute their charge: To ſay therefore that the church officers are to deuiſe lawes concerning religion, and the Prince onely to execute them, is to make the Prince their ſeruant, and doth derogate too much from the princely authoritie. Neither doe we giue vnto the prince abſolute power to make Fulk. Heb. 13.9. Eccleſiaſticall lawes: for firſt, the Prince is not to preſcribe what lawes he liſteth to the Church, but ſuch as only may require the true worſhip of God. Secondly, that it is expedient and meete, according to the commendable cuſtome of this land, that the godly learned of the Clergie ſhould be conſulted withall, in eſtabliſhing of Eccleſiaſticall ordinances, vnleſſe it be in ſuch a corrupt time, when the Church gouernours are enemies to religion: for then the Prince, not ſtaying vpon their iudgement, ought to reforme religion according to the word of God, as wee ſee it was lawfully and godly practiſed by King Henry the 8. Thirdly, we doe make exception of all ſuch Eccleſiaſticall canons and ordinances, the making whereof doth properly belong to the office of Biſhops and gouernours of the Church: for our meaning is not, that it is not lawfull for Eccleſiaſticall Miniſters, to make Eccleſiaſticall decrees, which doe properly concerne their office, as concerning the cenſures of the Church, excommunication, ſuſpenſion, abſoluing, binding, looſing, and ſuch like, which things are incident to their paſtorall office: and yet we graunt, that the Prince hath euen in theſe caſes an ouerruling hand, to ſee that none abuſe their paſtorall office: But that any lawes ought to be made without the authoritie of the Prince, which the Prince is bound to execute, we vtterly denie. And ſo wee conclude, that the ciuill Magiſtrate hath power ouer all perſons, and in all cauſes, both temporall and Eccleſiaſticall, in ſuch manner as we haue ſaid.

*Argum.*1. Saint Paul willeth, that prayers ſhould be made for Kings and Princes, that vnder them wee may leade a peaceable life, in all godlineſſe and honeſtie, 1. Tim. 2. 2. Ergo, it is their dutie as well 1. Tim. 2. 2. to procure religion by their authoritie, as ciuill honeſtie. Againe, Hee beareth not the ſword for nought, Rom. 13. 4. He hath power to puniſh all euill doers: therefore alſo to correct euill Miniſters, Rom. 13. 4. and to make Eccleſiaſticall lawes: for otherwiſe he ſhould haue no full power to correct the tranſgreſſors thereof.

*Argum.*2. We reade that Ioſua, Dauid, Salomon, Ioſias, did deale in Eccleſiaſticall matters, which concerned religion and the worſhip of God. Bellarm. They did it by an extraordinarie authoritie, not as Kings, but as Prophets. Nay, it was an ordinarie power: for all the good Kings of Iuda beſide, as Iehoſaphat, Hezekiah, and others, did take care of religion: and this was ſo properly annexed to the kingly office, that idolatrous Kings alſo tooke vpon them to command falſe religion, as Ieroboam ſet vp two golden Calues, and Ahaz king of Iudah commanded Vriah the high Prieſt to make an Altar according to the paterne which he ſent from Damaſcus, 2. King. 16. 11. This power alſo was af- 2. King. 16. 11. terward exerciſed by Chriſtian Kings and Emperours: as Conſtantinus, Theodoſius, Martianus, made lawes for the Church. Iuſtinianus the Emperour decreed many things concerning Church affaires: as how excommunication ſhould be vſed, how Biſhops and Prieſts ſhould bee ordained, concerning the order and manner of funerals: that the holy myſteries ſhould not be done in priuate houſes. Carolus magnus decreed, that only the Canonicall bookes of Scripture ſhould be read in the Church: hee chargeth all Biſhops and Prieſts to preach the word. Lodouicus Pius his ſonne, and Emperour after Fox pag. 7. him, ordained that no entrie ſhould bee made into the Church by Symonie: that Biſhops ſhould bee choſen by the free election of the Clergie and the people. All theſe Emperours did lawfully exerciſe their princely authoritie in Eccleſiaſticall matters: Ergo, other Princes may doe the ſame ſtill.

Now, whereas wee obiect the example and practiſe of Dauid, who appointed Leuites to miniſter 2. Chron. 16. 4. before the Arke: our Doway diſciples tell vs, that this was by ſpeciall priuiledge and diſpenſation: Annot. in but ordinarily all temporall Princes are to receiue the law at the Prieſts hands: as Eleazar was ap- Numb. 27. 21. pointed to conſult with the Lord for Ioſua: and that Ioſua was to goe out and in, that is, to leade and gouerne the people at Eleazars word.

*Contra.*1. Dauid had no more ſpeciall priuiledge, then Aſa, Iehoſaphat, Hezekiah, and other godly Kings of Iudah, who reformed religion, and managed Eccleſiaſticall cauſes: Iehoſaphat appointed both Ciuill Iudges in temporall, and ſpirituall in Eccleſiaſticall cauſes, 2. Chron. 19. though the offices were diſtinguiſhed: as they note vpon that place, yet both kindes were vnder the commandement and at the appointment of the King.

2 Eleazars office was to aske counſell of God, and to giue direction to Ioſua, and according to his (that is Iehouah, not Eleazars) word, he ſhould goe in and out: So now ſpirituall Paſtors are to declare the will of God out of his word vnto the Magiſtrate: they are not to preſcribe what they will themſelues: and the Prince is to obey Gods word: and all both Prieſt and people are to obey the Prince.

3 Auguſtine ſaith, *Epiſtol.*50. Quis mente ſobrius, &c? Who in his right wits would ſay to the King, It pertaineth not to you, who in your kingdome is religious or ſacrilegious; to whom it cannot be ſaid, let it not pertaine vnto you, who in your kingdome will be chaſt or vnchaſt? And in another place, *Ad fratres in erem. ſerm.*14. Tunc iuſtitia dicitur gladius ex vtraque parte acutus, quia hominis defendit corpus ab exterioribus iniurijs, & animam à ſpiritualibus moleſtijs: Then iuſtice is rightly called led a ſword with a double edge, becauſe it doth both defend the bodie from externall and corporall wrongs, and the ſoule from ſpirituall vexation, &c. That is, the ſword of the Magiſtrate ſerueth as well to prune the Church, and to cut off all errors and hereſies in religion, as to deſtroy the vices and corruptions in manners.

The conſent of antiquitie is on our ſide: Bonifacius ad Honorium Imperatorem: Angeretur plurib. Chriſtianiſſime princeps, mater eccleſia, niſi apud te ſuarum eſſet ſecura cauſarum: The Church your mother, moſt Chriſtian Prince, would bee greatly grieued, if ſhe were not ſecure and confident in all her cauſes and matters, which reſt in your hand.

Leo epiſtol.7. ad Theodoſium: Vobis non ſolum regium, ſed ſacerdotalem animum ineſſe gaudemus, ſiquidem præter imperiales & publicas curas, piiſſimam ſollicitudinem Chriſtianæ religionis habetis: Wee doe reioyce to ſee in you not only a kingly, but a prieſtly minde, in that beſide your imperiall cares, you are moſt godly carefull of religion.

Concil.6. Conſtantinop. Quid eſt præſertim Imperatori decibilius, &c. quàm præ omnibus pietate adornare ſubiectos, action.18. What can be more comely, eſpecially for the Emperour, then to adorne his ſubiects with pietie?

Arelatenſ. ſub Carolo, can.26. Hæc Imperatori præſentanda decreuimus, poſcentes eius clementiam, ut ſi quid hic minus eſt, eius prudentia ſuppleatur; ſi quid ſecus, quàm ſe ratio habet, eius iudicio emendetur; ſi quid rationabiliter taxatum eſt, eius adiutorio perficiatur: Theſe things which wee haue decreed, we purpoſe to preſent to the Emperour, that if any thing be wanting, it may be by his prudence ſupplied; if any thing amiſſe, it may be by him amended; if any thing reaſonably enioyned, it may be by his helpe perfited and confirmed. Doe not they now goe againſt all antiquitie, that ſay the Prince ought to haue no voyce in Councell, nor to make Eccleſiaſticall lawes: whereas theſe ancient Canons doe ſhew, that theſe things did principally belong to the Ciuill Magiſtrate?

We haue alſo moſt euident teſtimonies out of the Ciuill and Canon law. Firſt, Cod.lib.1.tit.4. leg.1. A law is made by the Emperours Gratianus, Valentinianus, Theodoſius, as touching the Catholike faith, and the right beleeuing in the Trinitie. Leg.3. Martianus ordaineth, that no man publikely ſhould diſpute of the faith receiued. Tit.6. leg.26. Leo maketh a conſtitution againſt the placing, and carrying about of relikes, &c. It is euident then that theſe Chriſtian Emperours had to doe in the matters of faith.

Likewiſe for their owne Canons: Decret. par.1. diſt.96. Nicholaus thus writeth to Michael the Emperour: Vbi legiſtis, &c. Where haue you read, that any of your predeceſſors were preſent in Synodes, but only where faith was entreated of, which is vniuerſall, and common to all, as well the Laitie as the Clergie? &c. This Canon excludeth not the imperiall preſence and authoritie euen in matters of faith.

Cauſ.16. qu.7.31. Regis auribus, &c. If the Metropolitane take away any thing dedicated to the Church, intimate it into the eares of the King.

Cauſ.23. qu.5. cap.20. Cognoſcant reges ſeculi, &c. Let the Princes of the world know that they muſt render an account vnto God for the Church, which they receiued to defend: Per terrenum regnum ſæpe cæleſte regnum proficit: Oftentimes the heauenly kingdome is encreaſed by the terrene and earthly kingdome. But more euidently, Can.21. Leo: Res humanæ, &c. Humane ſtate cannot ſtand, vnleſſe ſuch things, as belong to the diuine faith, both the prieſtly and kingly authoritie defend, c.34. Iniuria ſacramentorum, &c. The iniurie done to the Sacraments of Chriſt, muſt be reuenged of Kings, c.40. Rex debet adulteria punire: The King muſt puniſh adulterie, &c. Thus wee ſee how that by the ſentence of their owne law, Princes ought to beare ſway euen in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall.

This hath been the practiſe firſt of the Greeke Emperours, to interpoſe themſelues, and to inact lawes in Eccleſiaſticall matters: as the true Catholike faith is eſtabliſhed by the lawes of Theodoſius, and Valentinian: it appeareth in the Cod. tit. de ſumm. Trinitate: They forbid any to follow the wicked opinions of Porphyrius, and Neſtorius: Cod. de epiſcop. leg.14.

Liberat.c.16.

2 This alſo was the practiſe in the South Church: Zeno the Emperour reſtoreth Timotheus of Alexandria to his Biſhoprick: he commanded Petrus of Alexandria to receiue into his communion Proterius. The Emperour of Aethiopia ſtileth himſelfe, columna fidei, the pillar of faith.

AN

AN APPENDIX OR FOVRTH PART OF THE QVEſtion, whether the Prince in any good ſenſe may be called the head of his kingdome, and conſequently of the Church in his kingdome.

The Papiſts.

THey doe appropriate this title, to bee called head of the vniuerſall Church, to the Pope of Rome, moſt blaſphemouſly: for there can be no head of the vniuerſall bodie but Chriſt: But for Princes to be called the head, that is, chiefe gouernours of the Churches in their kingdomes, they doe abhorre it. Wherevpon Bellarmine is ſo ſaucie as to checke and controule King Henrie the 8. becauſe he was called the head of the Engliſh Church. Error 109.

Argum. 1. The Heathen Emperours were not heads of the Church, being not ſo much as members thereof: therefore neither Chriſtian Magiſtrates, which doe ſucceede them in that authoritie, Rhemiſt. annot. 1. Pet. 2. ſect. 6.

Anſ. The argument followeth not: they were no true members of the Church, therefore could not bee heads, that is, haue the ſoueraignitie of the externall gouernment: for wicked Kings and Princes doe keepe their magiſtracie and gouernment ſtill; who though they bee not true members of the Catholike Church, yet ought to be obeyed as Princes. 2. Though the metaphoricall name of head agreed not vnto them, yet were they by Gods ordinance appointed to be heads and gouernours of his people and protectors of his Church, and ſhould haue beene, if they had not abuſed their authoritie. 3. Chriſtian Princes, though they haue the ſame authoritie which they had, yet now exerciſing the ſword according to Gods law, and being nurſes of the Church, may vſe and retaine thoſe princely titles indeede, to be called patrons and defenders of the Faith, and head, that is, chiefe gouernours and protectors of the Church: which by right had beene due vnto the other, if they had vſed their authoritie as they ſhould.

Biſhop Cranmer holy Martyr: Euen Nero was Peters head, and the head of the Church, that is, in worldly reſpect of the temporall bodies of men, of whom the Church conſiſteth; for ſo he beheaded Peter, and the Apoſtles: And ſo the Turke to is head of the Church in Turkey, Fox. 1877.

Argum. 2. Chriſtian Princes are members of the Church: Ergo, not heads; for if they were heads, how could the Church ſtand without them, as it did in the time of perſecution?

Anſ. Firſt, as though the head is not a member and part of the bodie, though a principall one: ſo the Prince is a member of the Church, but a principal and chief member, not of the inuiſible church, for ſo Chriſt is onely head; but of a particular viſible Church. Secondly, we deny not but that the inuiſible and ſpirituall Church may conſiſt without the Magiſtrate: but a viſible, flouriſhing, and welgouerned Church cannot want a head or chiefe gouernour, that is as a wall or hedge vnto it.

The Proteſtants.

TO bee head of the vniuerſall Church is proper onely to Chriſt, and in that ſenſe is not communicable to any creature: for he is to his Church, as the head to the naturall bodie, giuing vnto it influence of grace, ſpirit and life: he is therefore the onely myſticall head of the vniuerſall Church: But in another ſenſe the Prince may bee ſaid to be the head and chiefe gouernour of his kingdome, and of that particular viſible Church, where he is King: Wee make him neither the myſticall head, which is onely Chriſt (farre be that blaſphemie from vs) nor a miniſterial head, as they make the Pope to be as Chriſts Vicegerent in the Church; but a politicall head, to keepe and preſerue the peace of the Church, and to ſee that euery member doe his office and duetie. But this name we confeſſe is vnproperly giuen to the Prince, neither were we the firſt inuentors of it: for the Papiſts firſt gaue it to Henry the 8. And there are other titles which doe ſufficiently expreſſe the office of the Prince, and may be more ſafely vſed. If any man thinke it too high a name for any mortall man, and ſo not to be giuen to any, we will not greatly contend about it: But if any deny it to the Prince, as thereby to abridge him of his power in Eccleſiaſticall matters, we doe ſtand ſtiffely for it; and are bold to affirme that with much better right is this title attributed to the ciuil Magiſtrate then it was to the Pope: yea, and that it hath beene of old giuen in a modeſt and ſober ſenſe to Kings and Princes, and may with a fauourable expoſition be ſtill: and Princes alſo may receiue this honour and title at their ſubiects hands,, with proteſtation of their Chriſtian meaning herein.

Argum. 1. This phraſe, for the King to be called the head, is not vnuſuall in Scripture, 1. Samuel 15. 17. Saul is ſaid to be the head of the tribes. Pſal. 18. 43. Dauid the head of the nations: Iſay 9. 15 The Prince or honourable man the head of the people: yea, Princes are called Gods, Pſal. 82. 2. which is a name of greater ſoueraignitie, then to be called heads.

Bellarmine anſwereth: Princes doe rule ouer their ſubiects as men, not as Chriſtians; and Kings are ſet ouer the people, not as they are Chriſtians, but politik perſons: ſo the Prince is head of the kingdome, not of the Church, De pontif. Rom. lib. 1. cap. 7.

Anſw. Stephen Gardiner taketh away this cauill very ſufficiently, we will ſet one Papiſt againſt another: It is all one (ſaith he) to call the Prince head of the Church of England, and head of the Realme of England; for if all Engliſhmen be his ſubiects, why are they not his ſubiects, as they are Chriſtians? If the wife or ſeruant be ſubiect to the maſter or husband being infidels, doth their conuerſion, or name of Chriſtians make them leſſe ſubiect, then they were before? Hæc ille. Againe, how farre is this, I pray you, from Anabaptiſtrie, to ſay, that ſubiects, onely as men, not as Chriſtians, are in ſubiection to Princes? for doth it not follow hereupon, that as Chriſtians they ought to haue no ſuperiour or Magiſtrate?

Fox.pag.1059.

Panormitane.

Argumen. 2. It is ſufficient for vs, that this title more fitly and properly belongeth to euery Prince in his owne kingdome, then to the Pope: For the Pope can in no wiſe bee head of the Church; he is not the myſticall head, neither dare they ſay ſo; for Chriſt onely is the head in that maner: neither can hee bee the Miniſteriall head of the vniuerſall Church; for the Catholike Church is a bodie myſticall, and muſt needes haue a myſticall head: neither is he the politicall head of any particular Church: for no Biſhop can be a politicall head; becauſe he that is the head and chiefe muſt haue a coactiue power, to binde his ſubiects to obedience: ſo hath not any Biſhop. The Prince onely beareth the ſword, and enforceth obedience. Againe, in a farre diuers ſenſe is the Prince called the head, then the Pope was: for firſt the Pope challenged to be head of the vniuerſall Church; but the Prince is chiefe onely in his owne kingdome. Secondly, the Pope would be an abſolute head, to doe all vpon earth that Chriſt did, yea, and more too, to binde and looſe at his pleaſure, to depoſe Kings, to diſpenſe with the word of God, to conſtitute and make lawes at his pleaſure: inſomuch that one of his clawbacke flatterers is not aſhamed to ſay of him, Chriſtus & Papa vnum faciunt conſiſtorium, & excepto peccato poteſt Papa, quaſi omnia facere, quæ poteſt Deus: Chriſt and the Pope make but one Conſiſtorie, and keepe but one court; and ſinne onely excepted, the Pope in a maner can doe all things that God can doe. But we doe limit the power of the Prince: Who is not to impoſe any lawes vpon the Church, but ſuch as are agreeable to the word of God: neither doe we make him a ſpirituall officer, as the Pope would be, but a ciuill gouernour, who by poſitiue lawes is to prouide for the peace and welfare of the Church.

1. Pet.1.13.

Laſtly, Saint Peter ſaith, Submit your ſelues to the King as the chiefe, ὡς ὑπερέχοντι or moſt excelling what is this elſe, but as to the head? what is it to be chiefe but to be head? But wee will not much contend for the name, ſo they will graunt vs the thing: namely, that the Prince is a commaunder and ought to be obeyed euen in Eccleſiaſticall matters, as Auguſtine ſaith: Quicunq́; legib. Imperatorum, quæ pro Dei veritate feruntur, obtemperare non vult, acquirit grande ſupplicium: He that will not obey the lawes of the Emperours made for the truth, doth procure vnto himſelfe great puniſhment. Epiſtol. 50. As for the title, to be called head, let them ceaſe to call their chiefe Biſhop ſo who hath no right vnto it, and we will promiſe alſo to lay it downe, though in good ſenſe we might vſe it, though the Pope had neuer laid claime thereunto.

Concil. Toletan. 8. Receſiunthus the King thus ſaith in his preface to the Councell: Regendorum membrorum cauſa, ſalus eſt capitis; & felicitas populorum, non niſi manſuetudo eſt principum: the health of the head muſt be ſought, for the better regiment of the members; and the happines of the people, is the lenitie of their Prince &c. Here the Prince is called the head, the people the members.

Biſhop Cranmer holy Martyr: The King is the ſupreame head of all the people of England both Eccleſiaſticall and temporall, which are the viſible Church: but Chriſt onely is head of the Church, that is, of the faith and religion thereof, both of the whole vniuerſall Church, and of euery member thereof, Fox pag. 1881. col.1. And otherwiſe we hold not.

Tom.3. de rect. fide.

Now for further euidence: 1. The opinion of the Greeke Church is, that the Prince is the chiefe, and conſequently head of all: as Agapetus a Deacon of Conſtantinople thus writeth in his booke to Iuſtinian, that the Prince hath not in earth, any higher then himſelfe, and the King is Lord of all, Ieremie Patriarke ſaith: Subiectos eſſe nos oportet, &c. We ought to be ſubiect to euery power, &c. but ſubiection is to the head.

Damianus a Goes.

2 Cyrillus of Alexandria, thus writeth of the Magiſtrate: Vos eſtis ſummarum dignitatem fontes, & ſuper omnem eminentiam humanæ felicitatis principium & origo: You are the fountaines of the chiefeſt dignities, and aboue all eminent thing, the beginning and originall of all humane felicitie, &c. but the head is the fountaine and originall vnto the bodie of theſe things: Dauid Emperour of Æthiopia thus writeth to the Biſhop of Rome, Ego in regnis meis ſum columna fidei, &c. I in my Kingdome am the pillar of faith: what is this elſe, then to be the head.

Harm. ſect. 19. pag. 588.

3 French confeſſ. artic. 39. All men of what dignitie, ſtate or condition ſo euer they be, ought to bee ſubiect to their lawfull magiſtrate, &c. and to obey him in all things: What is hee elſe but the head, to whom all other are ſubiect.

Carerius de poteſtat ſum. Pontif. lib. 2 c. 23, Sanderus lib. 2. de clauib. Dauid. c. 13.

4 The Romaniſts themſelues confeſſe, That Peter was not the Iudge of the heathen, Sed contra in omnib. cauſis ciuilib. non minus quam cæteri homines illis ſubijciebatur: But contrariwiſe in all ciuill cauſes was no leſſe ſubiect vnto them, then others, &c. In all ciuill cauſes then the Emperour was Peters head, then was not Peter, nor conſequently the Pope in ciuill cauſes any way the Emperours head.

THE SECOND QVESTION, CONCERNING THE authoritie of the Prince in puniſhing Heretikes.

WE doe willingly grant, that obſtinate heretikes and peruerters of the faith; if they perſiſt in their damnable opinions, and remaine incorrigible, may & ought to be cut off and puniſhed by death, to make others to feare: So Seruetus at Geneua, and one Valentinus at Berne, both monſtrous heretikes, not amongſt the Papiſts, but by the Proteſtants were worthily put to death. In this therefore we and our aduerſaries agree, that heretikes may be puniſhed by death by the ciuill Magiſtrate. If Luther, or any other haue held any priuate opinion to the contrarie, let them anſwere for themſelues: but although we varie not in the principall, yet there are certaine circumſtances and acceſſaries greatly materiall, wherein they both diſſent from vs and from the truth.

1 They would haue the Magiſtrate onely to be their executioner, the iudgement of hereſie, they ſay, belongeth to the Church: for they cited, examined, iudged, degraded, condemned heretikes; and then gaue them ouer to the ſecular power: this was the common practiſe of their Church. Bellarm. de pontif. lib. 1. cap. 7. Error. 110.

But we hold, that the hearing, iudgement, ſentence, and condemnation of heretikes belongeth to the ciuill Magiſtrate, as well as the execution: becauſe theſe actions are proper to the ciuill ſword, which the Magiſtrate beareth, Rom. 13. and Deuteron. 17.5. The falſe Prophets and Idolaters were brought to the gates of the Citie, where the ciuill Magiſtrate was wont to ſit. Rom. 13.4. Deut. 17.5. Auguſtine is of the ſame minde, Cur in veneficos vigorem legum exerceri iuſte fatentur, in hæreticos & ſchiſmaticos, &c. nolunt fateri? cont. epiſt. Parmen. 1.7. Why doe they grant, that the vigour of the law may iuſtly bee executed vpon witches, and not as well vpon heretikes and ſchiſmatikes, &c. But the cauſes of witches are heard, iudged and handled before the ciuill Magiſtrate: Ergo, alſo the cauſe of heretikes. Auguſtines reaſon is out of the 5. Galath. 20. The workes of the fleſh are manifeſt, which are adulterie, fornication, idolatrie, witchcraft, and hereſies are alſo reckoned vp amongſt them: All theſe are workes of the fleſh: Ergo, the Magiſtrate being appointed to puniſh euill doers, hath as full right to deale againſt them all, as ſome.

Concil. Chalcedon. action. 16. Quoties ſacerdotum ſententia quoſdam indignos ſacerdotio de ſacris ſedibus depoſuit, toties imperium eiuſdem ſententiæ & ordinationis cum ſacerdotum authoritate fuit: As often as any vnworthie perſons by the ſentence of Miniſters were thruſt from their ſeates, ſo often the imperiall power did concurre with the authoritie of the Prieſts in the ſame ſentence, &c: the Emperour was ioyned with Clergie men in the iudgement of hereſie.

Thus teſtifieth M. Philpot holy Martyr, I ſeeke not to be mine owne Iudge, but am content to bee iudged by other, ſo that the order of iudgement in matters of religion be kept, that was in the primitiue Church; which is, firſt, that Gods will by his word was ſought, and thereunto both the ſpiritualtie and temporaltie was gathered together, and gaue their conſents and iudgements, &c. Fox. pag. 1807.

That the iudgement of hereſie belongeth to the Ciuill power; it is euident by the Imperiall lawes: Cod. lib. 1. tit. 8. leg. 2. Gratian Valentinian. Hæreticorum vocabulo continentur, &c. They are to be accounted heretikes, that doe erre neuer ſo little from the Catholike faith. Tit. 12. leg. 11. Theodoſ. Certum eſt, &c. It is certaine, that whatſoeuer doth differ from the Chriſtian faith, is contrarie to the Chriſtian law, therfore Chriſtian lawes do take knowledge of things varying from the faith. Decr. p. 2. cauſ. 23. qu. 8. c. 30. Ne Clerici, quod morte plectendum eſt, propria ſententia iudicare præſumant: That Clergie men ſhould not giue ſentence, where the puniſhment is by death. But hereſie is to be puniſhed by death; Ergo, Clergie men are not to giue ſentence againſt heretikes.

But if it ſhall be anſwered, that they put none to death, but deliuer them ouer to the ſecular power: this cannot excuſe them, but is flat contrarie to their owne Canon, Cauſ. 33. diſtinct. 1. c. 23. Pernicioſe ſe decipiunt, &c. They doe pernicioully deceiue themſelues, that thinke them onely to be manſlayers, that kill with their hands, and not they by whoſe counſell and encouragement men are killed, &c. The Iewes did not kill our Lord with their owne hands; for ſay they, it is not lawfull for vs to put any to death; yet our Lords death is imputed vnto them, becauſe with their tongue and voyce they killed him, crying out, that he ſhould be crucified: Qui ergo hominem tradidit, &c. Hee therefore that deliuereth a man ouer, killeth him. Wherefore the Popiſh Phariſees, or Phariſaicall Papiſts, in that they deliuer innocents ouer to be killed, are the killers themſelues.

Thus it is euident, by the auncient practiſe both of the Greeke and Latine Churches: that Chriſtian Princes haue beene the chiefe in condemning and puniſhing of heretikes: which we ſo maintaine not, as though the Princes peremptorie will ſhould be a rule to diſcerne, who were heretikes: as Baſilius the great Duke of Muſcouia doth arrogate that to himſelfe, who of his owne head-ſtrong minde defineth Rubite a Proteſtant Miniſter, and other Lutheranes to be heretikes: but that the Scriptures being propoſed, as a moſt certaine triall and touchſtone of hereſie, the Ciuill power ſhould beare the greateſt ſtroke both in examining and cenſuring heretikes according to that rule. Religion. Muſcouit. c. 14.

This was the practiſe both of the Greeke and South Church, as may appeare in the foure generall Councels, which were gathered together chiefly of the Eaſterne and Southerne Churches: where the Emperours were Preſidents and chiefe Iudges of the heretikes there condemned: and this yet is more euident in the ſixth generall Synode, where was preſent the Patriarke of Alexandria, by his Vicegerent one Petrus a Presbiter: In the 18. action of that Synode, Conſtantinus the Emperour being preſent, ſubſcribed to the acts of that Councell, and their proceedings againſt diuers Monothelites, whom the Emperour there doth anathematize, and declare to be heretikes by his publike edict.

Hamm. ſect.18. pag.574. So the reformed Churches alſo doe hold: Auſpurg. Artic.15. It belongeth not to the Biſhop onely, but to godly Princes, and eſpecially to the Emperour to vnderſtand the Goſpell purely, to iudge of opinions,&c.

See before. Error.108. The Epiſtle of Leo vnto Theodoſius, wherein he reioyceth that hee had not onely a Kingly but a Prieſtly minde, in taking care for religion. Likewiſe Leo. Epiſt.38. to Martiane the Emperour, and Epiſt.39. to Pulcheria, he giueth them thankes, for that by their carefull defending of the faith, they had deſtroyed the Neſtorian and Eutychian hereſie: and Epiſt.66. hee craueth of Eudocia Auguſta, that ſhee ſhould ſee the hereſies, which ſprung vp among the Monkes to be rooted out,&c. but this could not be done without examination and triall of them.

Error.112. 2 We differ about the way and meanes to trie an heretike by: They affirme that he is an heretike onely that is ſo iudged by a generall Councell, or the ſentence of the chiefe Paſtors of the Church: they would haue an heretike tried by the conſtitutions and Canons of their Church, Annot.tit.3.ſect.2. Rhemiſt.

Wee ſay that an heretike is to be conuicted by the Scriptures, and that hee that holdeth any opinion obſtinately againſt the manifeſt authoritie of Scripture, may bee iudged an heretike without a generall Councell: So Auguſtine writeth, anſwering the Pelagians, who obiected that they were condemned without a Synode. Ac ſi congregatione Synodi opus erat, vt aperta pernicies damnaretur, quaſi nulla hæreſis aliquando niſi Synodi congregatione damnata ſit. As though a Synode neede to be congregate or called, to condemne ſuch open wickedneſſe, as if neuer any hereſie had beene condemned but in a Synode or Councell: Cont.2.epiſtol.Pelag.lib.4.cap.12. This is that hereticall opinion, as they call it, which the Councell of Conſtance condemned in Iohn Huſſe, and him together with it, becauſe hee ſaid, That an heretike, whatſoeuer hee be, ought firſt to be inſtructed, and taught with Chriſtian loue, and gentleneſſe by the holy Scriptures, and by reaſons drawne out of the ſame, before hee ſuffer corporall or bodily puniſhment: Fox.pag.610. articul. 18. Which his ſaying

Matth.18.15. is grounded vpon that rule of the Goſpell, Matth.18.15. That if wee ſee one offend, wee ſhould firſt tell him priuately; then before two or three: laſtly, declare it to the Church: and if hee will not heare the Church, that is, by Scripture conuincing him; then continuing obſtinate, let him bee as a Publicane. This rule the Papiſts kept not in their bloudie perſecutions here in England: They put many hundreds to death, and were not able to conuince any one of hereſie; but in diſputation were themſelues put to ſilence and made aſhamed: Their onely forceable arguments were the fire and fagot.

That hereſie muſt bee tryed out by Scripture, wee haue the iudgement and practiſe of auncient times. Concil. Aquileienſ. contra Palladium Arrianum: Propoſita diuina in medio Scriptura, præſens eſt Apoſtolus, omnes Scripturæ præſtò ſunt, vnde vis, aſtrue, ſi putas non eſſe filium Dei ſempiternum: The diuine Scriptures are ſet foorth in the middeſt, the Apoſtle is preſent, the Scriptures are at hand: fetch thy proofes, where thou wilt, if thou thinkeſt that Chriſt is not the Sonne of God.

Leo epiſtol.44. Quia Euangelica, & Apoſtolica fides omnes expugnat errores, hanc regulam mementote ſeruandam: becauſe the faith or truth of the Goſpel and Apoſtles doth expugne all error, remember to keepe this rule.

M. Philpot putteth his ſeale to this trueth: ſhewing how in the primitiue Church after the iudgement of Gods word declared, with the aſſent of the Biſhops and the people, heretikes were condem-

Pag.1639. 2.10 ned, or abſolued, Fox p.1806.*examinat.6.*col.1.

Concerning the other point, that heretikes ought not raſhly to be condemned without ſufficient triall and examination, and euident conuincing of them, thus it is ſhewed.

The Councell of Baſile for promiſing to the Bohemians free audience, and libertie to diſpute, was therefore reprooued by ſome of the Popes accomplices: The Councell anſwereth thus, in one of their Epiſtles Synodals: Omnis ſchola Theologorum & canoniſtarum, affirmat eam diſputationem,&c. The whole ſchoole of Diuines and Canoniſts denieth not, but ſuch diſputation of faith to be lawfull, which is not the cauſe of tumult, of diſtruſt, or doubting in faith, but for inſtruction, and to open the truth, to conuince heretikes, and confirme the Catholikes: for as Gregory ſaith, as vnaduiſed ſpeech bringeth into error, ſo vndiſcreete ſilence leaueth them in error, which might be inſtructed. To this alſo agreeth the extrauagant, lib.5.tit.8.c.1.Ioann.22. Nolentes ante credere, quam probare: We not willing to beleeue, before we proue, haue appointed inquiſition and ſearch to be made,&c. It is lawfull therefore to diſpute with heretikes: which Wincheſter denieth to Maſter Rogers holy Martyr, who complaineth; that it was not permitted him to trie out the truth by conference, and writing, Fox. pag.1485.

Error.112. 3 Againe, they vſed vnlawfull wayes and vniuſt, in ſifting and examining, by cruell torments the poore innocents brought before them, neither ſhewing accuſers nor witneſſes: Iohn Browne Martyr appearing before Warham and Fiſher, two bloodſuckers, was burned with hot coales, his bare feete being ſet vpon them: *Fox.pag.*1292. Cutbert Symſons fingers were grated with an arrow, and hee himſelfe piteouſly racked, to be made betray his innocent brethren, *Fox.p.*2032. Tomkins hand was burned by Bonner, till the ſinewes ſparkled againe, *Fox.p.*1533. And theſe were the witneſſes and accuſers that were brought againſt them.

Which practiſe of theirs is flat contrarie to the ancient Canons; Calixtus the ſecond, Per ſcripturam nullus accuſare, vel accuſari poteſt, ſed propria voce, & præſente eo, quem accuſare voluerit, ſuam quiſque agat accuſationem: Let no man accuſe or be accuſed by writing, but by his owne voyce, and in the preſence of him, who is accuſed, let the accuſation be made.

Fabianus epiſtol.2. Nullus præſumat accuſator ſimul eſſe & iudex, vel teſtis, quoniam in omni iudicio quatuor perſonas neceſſe eſt ſemper adeſſe: Iudices electos, accuſatores, defenſores, & teſtes: Let no man preſume to be an accuſer, and iudge at the ſame time, or witneſſe: becauſe in euery iudgement there muſt be foure perſons, the Iudges, accuſers, defenders, witneſſes.

Concil.Lateranenſ.ſub Innocentio.3.cap.8. Debet præſens eſſe is, contra quem facienda eſt inquiſitio,&c. He ought to be preſent, againſt whom enquirie is to be made, and the ſeuerall points and ar- “ and by whom euery thing is reported. It ſhall alſo be lawfull for the partie accuſed, to take excepti- “ ons, and make replication: And all this would be done, leſt by ſuppreſſing names men ſhould take “ occaſion to defame others; and by cutting off of exceptions, they ſhould not bee afraid to ſweare “ falſly, &c. “

What clearer teſtimonie can we haue, againſt this Popiſh courſe & manner of proceeding in iudgement, when as without witneſſes a man is condemned, whereas the law, as we ſee, alloweth the accuſed, to vnderſtand the articles whereof he is accuſed, that he may haue time to anſwere, and to his accuſer, that if there be cauſe, he may take exception againſt him.

This was cleane contrarie to the law of Moſes: At the mouth of two or three witneſſes, ſhall hee that is worthie of death die, Deuteron. 17.6. Auguſtine ſaith, Quis iudex accuſantis ſumat perſonam? &c. What Iudge would take vpon him to be an accuſer? Our Lord Chriſt knew Iudas to be a thiefe (ſaith he:) yet becauſe he was not accuſed, he did not caſt him off, &c. He counteth it a very vnnaturall thing for the Iudge to be an accuſer, and to proceede without witneſſes: which although in ſome criminall caſes is more tolerable, yet in the caſes of life and death ought in no wiſe to bee vſed. The ſame iudgement alſo Auguſtine giueth of that cruell cuſtome of tormenting men, to conuince them by their owne mouth, which was inuented by the heathen, but neuer more cruelly practiſed then among the Papiſts: Hoc intolerabile eſt (ſaith hee) & rigandum fontibus lacrymarum, cum propterea torqueat iudex accuſatum, ne occidat neſciens innocentem; & fit per ignorantiam, vt & tortum & innocentem occidat, quem ne innocentem occideret, torſerat: How intolerable a thing is it, and to be much lamented, that while the Iudge tormenteth the partie accuſed, leaſt vnwittingly he ſhould put an innocent man to death; it falleth out that he adiudgeth to death a man both innocent, and beſide tormented; whom, leaſt hee ſhould ſlay as an innocent, hee before put to torment, &c. His meaning is, that when a man is put to the racke, or otherwiſe tortured, that he might confeſſe the truth, and cleere himſelfe; it commeth to paſſe, that through extremitie of the paine, he maketh himſelfe guiltie, and ſo the innocent is both wrongfully tormented, and vniuſtly put to death. Which kinde of forcing men by torture, though in ſome dangerous caſes, as of high treaſon, and ſuch like, where there is great perill in the concealing of the truth, and no other way to ſift it out, may be admitted: yet to vſe it as an ordinarie courſe as the Papiſts did, and in cauſes of religion, it is too ſhamefull, and of all Chriſtians to be abhorred.

Quæſt.ex vtroque mix. 102.

De ciuitat.Dei lib.19.c.6.

Now, as touching theſe three points, to proceede without an accuſer, without witneſſe by the parties oath, and by torments, in matters and cauſes concerning the life of him that is accuſed, I will in order ſhew, how it agreeth, or diſagreeth both with the Ciuill and Canon law.

Concerning the neceſſitie of an accuſer in matters of iudgement, the Ciuill law hath thus determined: Cod.lib 9.tit.2.leg.16. Libellus in criminali, &c. The libell in criminall cauſes muſt containe the name of the accuſer, the Iudge, and of the partie accuſed. Arcadius, leg.7.Honor. Quiſquis crimen intendit in iudicium veniat, &c. Whoſoeuer doth obiect any crime, let him come himſelfe into open iudgement, and declare the matter, and let him be vnder ſafe keeping, as well as the partie accuſed, till the matter be examined. Againe, ibid.leg.14. Arcadii. Iudex in publicis criminibus non debet vti emendicatis ſuffragijs decretorum, &c. The Iudge in publike crimes, muſt not bee ruled by the reports of the acts or decrees, but ſeeke out the truth of the matter. This law chargeth Iudges not to bee carried, no not by the complaints or informations of the Notaries and officers of the Court, without due proofe.

Hereunto their owne decrees giue conſent: Cauſ.11.q.1.c.16. Nicholaus. Reſtituendus, qui nec confeſſus, nec conuictus: He muſt be reſtored, that is neither confeſſed, nor detected. Cap.7. Gregor. Si non alij teſtes, alij accuſatores, &c. iudicium non ordinabiliter factum. If that there be not ſome witneſſes, ſome accuſers, the iudgement is not orderly. Likewiſe, Cauſ.30.q.5.c.11. Eleuther. preſcribeth this forme of iudgement; That the Iudge ſhould giue licence to each party, the one to obiect, the other to anſwere, vt actio ambarum partium illuminata ſit pleniter, that both parties action may bee fully cleered, and inlightened, &c. But this cannot be, whereas there is but one partie. Wherefore both the lawes agree in this, that an accuſer muſt be in euery lawfull iudgement produced: Yet there is a certaine caſe excepted, wherein an accuſer is not needfull: as Cod.lib.9.tit.2.leg.7. Gordian. Niſi in notorio iudex procedit per viam accuſationis: Vnleſſe the matter be notorious, the Iudge muſt proceede by way of accuſation. So alſo ſaith the Canon law: Decret,Greg.lib.3.tit.2.c.8.Innocent.3. In notorijs nec teſtis,&c. In a notorious matter, neither witneſſe, or accuſer is neceſſarie. And what is to bee counted notorious, or manifeſt, is further ſhewed, ibid.lib.5.tit.40.c.24 Innocent.3. That is a manifeſt crime, which is knowne, per confeſſionem, probationem, rei euidentiam, by confeſſion, or due proofe, or the euidence of the thing it ſelfe, &c. If then in caſes onely notoriouſly knowne an accuſer is not neceſſarie, but in all other caſes, he muſt be produced: then haue the Papiſts beene moſt iniurious to many conuented before them for hereſie (as they call it) and other crimes, who were not ſuſpected, much leſſe detected thereof, and ſo farre from being notorious heretikes; and yet they proceeded againſt them, as they called it ex officio, ſhewing no accuſer at all.

" I cannot here omit that notable place of S. Ambroſe to this purpoſe, epiſtol.66. where he reproueth
" one Syagrius the Biſhop of Verona: Quod virginem, quam nullus argueret, &c. For that hee drew a
" certaine Virgin into great hazard and danger of guiltineſſe, without any accuſer: where did he learne
" any ſuch forme of iudgement? if hee aske the lawes, they require an accuſer; if hee referre it to the " Church, there in the mouth of two or three witneſſes euery word is eſtabliſhed, &c. If Syagrius for " proceeding againſt a Virgin for incontinencie without an accuſer, were much blamed by S. Ambroſe,
" what would he haue ſaid, if he had ſeene this practiſe vſuall in the Popiſh Prelacie, euen in the caſes of hereſie, to which belonged the ſentence of death?

Now concerning the ſecond point, whether a man may be vrged to accuſe himſelfe vpon his oath, eſpecially in capitall cauſes, the iudgement of the law is, that, except in certaine caſes, none ſhould bee enforced to teſtifie againſt themſelues. Firſt, Cod lib.4.tit.20.leg.6.Diocleſian. Nemo contra ſe cogitur teſtes producere: No man is compelled to produce witneſſes againſt himſelfe: but he that by his oath maketh himſelfe guiltie, witneſſeth againſt himſelfe. So likewiſe in the Canon law, Cauſ.35.qu.6.c.4.Vrbanus. Si negauerint, ſibi ipſis relinquendi: If inceſt cannot bee proued neither by oath of witneſſes, nor by confeſſion, the partie muſt be charged by their baptiſme, their faith, &c. to confeſſe the truth: but if they denie, they muſt be left to themſelues, &c. This Canon preſcribeth no oath, but an earneſt obteſtation to be miniſtred vnto the ſuſpected partie.

But yet certaine caſes there are aſſigned in the law, wherein the partie accuſed may bee brought to his oath: as firſt, Propter inopiam probationum: If the proofe doe otherwiſe faile: Cod.lib.4.tit.1.leg.3.Diocleſ. So that al other proofes muſt be vſed before the partie be driuen to his oath: that as the law is for torments, and tortures, that they muſt not be miniſtred in the firſt place, but other arguments muſt firſt be vſed: Cod.lib.9.tit.41.leg.8. Diocleſ. ſo likewiſe the oath of the partie muſt not be enforced, but other euidences and preſumptions firſt are to be produced.

Secondly, there muſt by the law a partie be giuen, and an accuſer ſet forth, where the other partie is vrged to his oth: the reaſon is this, becauſe the guiltie partie hath three things put to his choiſe by the law: Reus debet iurare, ſoluere, vel referre iuramentum: He may either ſweare, or be content to bee condemned, or referre the oath to his accuſer: that is, vrge him firſt to ſweare, Cod.lib.4.tit.1.leg.9. Diocleſian. The reaſon is giuen, ibib.leg.12. Iuſtinian: Non debet reſpuere in perſona ſua, quod placuit in perſona aduerſarij: He muſt not refuſe to doe that in his owne perſon, which he was pleaſed with in his aduerſarie, &c. So then where the guiltie partie was vrged to ſweare, the accuſer alſo was by his oath to iuſtifie his accuſation. And this referring or rebounding of an oath is allowed by their law, decret.Greg.lib.2.tit.24.cap.36.Greg.9. Quod in iudicio à parte parti defertur, &c. An oath in iudgement betweene partie and partie may be referred.

Thirdly, where it is agreed by the parties themſelues, that the matter ſhall be decided by the oath of a partie, in that caſe ſuch oath by the law is allowed: as when there ariſeth a queſtion, whether one be right heire; if they, whom it concerneth, be content to put it to his oath, it ſhall ſtand, Cod.lib.4.tit.1.leg.6.

Fourthly, the parties oath by the Ciuill law was vſed for the moſt part in ciuill cauſes, as in queſtions of debt, in matters of truſt, and ſuch like; where an apparant iniurie did ſeeme to bee offered, or intended by the partie ſworne, to the other partie by whom he is impleaded: as Cod.lib.4.tit.1.leg.5. The pupill or ward might put his tutor or guardian to his oath, concerning ſuch things, as were committed to his truſt. Ibid.leg.9. In an action of debt, the debter might be put to his oath: hee muſt either ſweare or pay. Ibid.leg.10. In actione depoſiti, &c. In an action of a thing committed to ones truſt, the partie might be required to take his oath. In theſe and the like caſes ciuill, where the truth is concealed to another mans loſſe and hinderance, the oath of the partie ſued or impleaded, might bee demanded: but in caſes criminall, where the offence redoundeth to the hurt and dammage of the partie, rather then to the reliefe of another, it is thought hard to preſſe him with an oath againſt himſelfe; yet in ſome criminall caſes it is allowed, as now followeth to be ſhewed.

Fifthly, then in ſuch criminall caſes, as where the offence is publike, and the puniſhment extendeth not to death, where other proofe faileth, the partie may be charged with an oath: as by a new law it is conſtituted in the Code, that if a Iudge do receiue a bribe in a cauſe criminall, if it cannot be proued againſt him, he ſhall be put to his oath: which if he refuſe, he is held as guiltie, and ſhall forfeit all his goods, and be ſent into exile, Cod.lib.7.tit.49.leg.1 Authentic. So then in theſe caſes rehearſed, where a partie is giuen, and all other proofes beſide firſt vſed, and in Ciuill matters to relieue others from a wrong, and ſometime in Criminall, where the offence is publike, and not vnto death, it is lawfull to preſſe the defendant with an oath; But in the iudgement of hereſie, and other crimes obiected, the popiſh tyranny proceeded without any regard had of the premiſſes; preſſing the poore innocents with their owne oath in cauſes criminall vnto the execution of death, giuing no partie, nor ſtanding much vpon other euidence: wherefore their proceedings were contrarie to law herein.

The third point followeth to be diſcuſſed, of inquiſition to be made by torments; where I will out of the law briefly declare theſe three points: firſt, in what caſes tortures are to be vſed: ſecondly, in what manner: thirdly, what perſons are priuiledged and exempted from tortures. For the firſt, though that bondſlaues might be put to torture, vpon diuers occaſions, as if they were fugitiues, Cod.lib.6. tit.1.leg.4. to know the right heire to their maſter, Cod.lib.9.tit.41.leg.9. and whether it be a forged will or not, *ibid.leg.*10. Yea, Seruus poteſt de ſuo facto torqueri, A ſlaue may be examined by torture of his owne act in imbeaſelling of his maſters goods, *ibid.leg.*15. Diocleſ. Though I ſay bondſlaues were vpon ſundrie occaſions ſubiect to tortures: yet others but only in graue and waightie matters, were put to torture; as in caſe of treaſon againſt the Prince, Cod.lib.9.tit.8.leg.3. Falſifiers of coyne might be examined by torment, lib.9.tit.24.leg.1. A woman ſuſpected for poyſoning her husband may be tortured, lib.9.tit.41.leg.3. They that are accuſed of witchcraft alſo may bee put to the racke, tit.18.leg.7. Where the woman is ſuſpected of adulterie, the ſeruants may be enforced by torture, tit.9.leg.3. Likewiſe in the murther of the husband or the wife, the ſeruants may likewiſe be vrged, tit.16.leg.9. In theſe and the like waightie and vrgent cauſes, the queſtion by torments hath bin allowed: But the practiſe of Papiſts, in tormenting of men and women, to wreſt from them their faith and conſcience, being perſons of honeſt and innocent life, not guiltie of treaſon, murther, witchcraft, or ſuch like, was neuer heard of in times paſt, but is moſt cruell, and contrarie to law.

Secondly, as touching the manner to bee vſed in inflicting of torments, there are certaine rules ſet downe in the law. Firſt, Cod.lib.9.tit.2.leg.13. Accuſatus non debet torqueri, &c. The guiltie partie muſt not be tortured, vnleſſe the accuſer do bind himſelfe to endure the like, if he proue not his accuſation. So then by this law, where torments are miniſtred, an accuſer ſhould be produced. Secondly, Cod.lib.9.tit.22.leg.17. Non incipiendum a tormentis, &c. The Iudge muſt not begin with torments, but be induced by other argumens to doe it. Thirdly, lib.9.tit.2.leg.17. Honor. Qui torquetur non debet interrogari de ſocijs: He that is tortured, muſt not be vrged to bewray his fellowes. And in their owne law it is thus decreed: Cauſ.5.qu.5.c.4. Nec illi credendi, &c. They muſt not be beleeued that of themſelues doe appeach others, but let the religious tormentor fetch out the truth by putting him to paine, &c. Thus we ſee what moderation the law would haue obſerued in tormenting. But the popiſh tormentors contrarie to theſe rules haue applied torments, without any accuſer, hauing no other euidence to induce them; and only to this end, to cauſe them one to betray an other. See the ſtorie of Anne Askew, apud Foxum.

In the third place, let vs ſee what perſons are exempted from torments by the law. Firſt, lib.9. tit.41.leg.7. Diocleſ. The ſeruant muſt not be tormented againſt his maſter; nor yet ſouldiers, ibid. leg.8. Diocleſ. nor Noblemen, leg.11. nor innocents, leg.17. Honor. Clergie men muſt confeſſe the truth, citra iniuriam quaſtionis, without torture, Cod.lib.1.tit.8.Theodoſ. But the Romiſh tormentors in their crueltie haue violated all good lawes; tormenting not only ſeruants to confeſſe againſt their maſters, but children againſt their parents, as Tyrrell burned Roſe Allins hand with a candle till the ſinewes burſt, Fox p.2006. They haue not ſpared moſt cruelly to handle noblemen, much more ſouldiers: See the ſtorie of Sir Iohn Oldcaſtle Lord Cobham, apud Foxum. They haue vexed with their torments iuſt and innocent men: as Thomas Tomkins a godly and deuout man, well reported of all his neighbours, had his hand ſo ſcorched with a candle by Bonner, that the water ſparkled out of the ſinewes, Fox pag.1534. Laſtly, they haue exerciſed with torments Miniſters and Deacons of the Church: as Adam Damlip at Calice, Fox pag.1229. And Cuthbert Simſon a Deacon of the congregation, was thrice racked in one day, ſtood three houres in an iron engine, had his fingers grated with an arrow, and all to betray the congregation: See the ſtorie, pag.2031. Thus it is euident how cruelly, contrarie to the ancient Imperiall lawes, thoſe cruell perſecutors haue tormented the poore profeſſors of the Goſpell: yea and contrarie to their owne lawes; Cauſ.23.qu.5.c.1. Scelerum confeſſionem non extendente equuleo, non ſulcantibus vngulis, non vrentibus flammis: The confeſſion of faults muſt not be wreſted out, by ſtretching out vpon the racke, or ſlitting or grating with engines, ſcorching with flames, &c. And thus in euery of theſe points in proceeding againſt Chriſtians without witneſſe, or accuſing, in tyrannizing againſt them vnto death euen by their owne oath, in vexing of them with vnſpeakable torments, they haue tranſgreſſed and violated both diuine and humane lawes. But now I will proceed to the reſt.

In the fourth place: Where haue they learned ſo hotly and fiercely to purſue ſimple men and women to death, for none or very ſmall offences, which they notwithſtanding falſely called hereſie? Was it hereſie for Iames Brewſter to heare one Sweeting to reade many good things out of a certaine booke? or for the ſame Sweeting, when as the ſaid Iames ſhould ſay, Now the ſonne of the liuing God like examples might be produced of holy Martyrs,which for theſe and ſuch other great hereſies were put to death. And as the offences were very ſmall,as we ſee,ſo their manner of proceeding was moſt cruell,void of all humanitie. They ſpared not women with childe. We haue not forgotten that famous example of their crueltie, which ſhall be euer remembred to their perpetuall ſhame and infamy:

How they burned three ſimple women in the Iſle of Garnſey,anno 1556.which had ſubmitted themſelues to their mercie, one of the three was great with childe, which braſt out of her wombe in the children. In the towne of Byrbroke, while Rich.Chapman did penance in the Church, being enioyned to kneele barefoot,and bare legged al the ſermon while vpon the cold ſteps of the Church; a little boy for giuing him his hat to kneele vpon, was had into the Veſtrie and piteouſly ſcourged, p.1047.

Pag.955.1. Cruell Bonner burned Richard Mekins a childe of fifteene yeeres, for ſpeaking againſt the ſacrament

Pag.1097.1.60 London, and ſo did, pag.1202. Iohn Fettie his childe being of eight yeeres old, for ſaying to one of the Biſhops Chaplens,that he had Balaams marke,was ſcourged ſo cruelly, that within 14. daies hee died. Nay,ſuch was their crueltie,they condemned to death men that were beſtraught of their wits:
Pag.1033.1 10 as Collins and Cowbridge were burned being both franticke: See their ſtorie,pag.1131.

Where is now that lenitie and compaſſion,which ought to be in the Miniſters of the Goſpell? Such crueltie was not heard of,no not amongſt the Heathen. Yea they breake their owne law: which ſuffereth a man once to abiure his hereſie,but if afterward hee be detected,hee dieth without mercie:
Fox anno 1511. William Carder and Agnes Grebil were condemned,though they ſubmitted themſelues, Pag.1163.1.7. and promiſed to be conformable to their religion,pag.1277. Yet this law of theirs is moſt vniuſt, and contrarie to the Goſpell, which ſaith, that if thy brother ſinne againſt thee ſeuen times in a
Luke 17.4. day,and ſeuen times in a day turne againe, and ſay, It repenteth me, thou ſhalt forgiue him, Luk.17.4.
Tit.3.10. Yet theſe men will forgiue but once,and not that neither. But S.Paul ſaith, An heretike after once or twice admonition reiect. Bellarmine his beſt anſwere is by denying the text,ſaying, that it was not ſo read in former times: but thus,after once admonition. *De laicis cap.*22.

This popiſh rigor is much contrarie to the ancient lenitie,that was vſed in former times. *African.
Concil.can* 33.it was decreed,Vt cum Donatiſtis leniter & pacifice ageretur,Ne forte,ſicut dicit Apoſtolus, nobis in manſuetudine corripientibus diuerſa ſentientes,det Deus illis pœnitentiam,&c. 2.Tim.2.
That the Donatiſts ſhould be gently and peaceably handled,if perhaps,as the Apoſtle ſaith, while we with all gentlenes correct thoſe that are otherwiſe minded,God may giue them repentance.

*Leo epiſt.*13.Sedis Apoſtolicæ moderatio hanc temperantiam obſeruat,vt ſeuerius agat cum obduratis, & veniam cupiat præſtare correctis: This Apoſtolike Sea hath alwaies kept this moderation,to deale more ſeuerely with the obdurate & obſtinate,and to ſhew mercie to the corrigible,&c. This moderation is now quite baniſhed from this Sea,as in theſe former examples is to be ſeene. There was more clemencie vſed in Auguſt. time:for then Biſhops did not prouoke the Magiſtrate to execute whō they had condemned, but did entreate the Magiſtrate to ſhew compaſſion vnto Heretikes,not ſtraightwaies to puniſh them with death: Ne ſic vitam iſtam finiant (ſaith Auguſt.)per ſupplicium,vt ea finita non poſſint finire ſupplicium: Leſt they ſhould ſo end this life by puniſhment,that the life being ended, they ſhould neuer end their puniſhment: *Epiſt.*54. And in another place; *Sic eorum peccata compeſce, vt ſint,quos pœniteat peccaſſe.Epiſt.*159. So reſtraine their ſinnes,that they may yet remaine to repent them of their ſinnes, &c. In thoſe daies therefore,men were not by and by puniſhed with death to preuent their repentance,as in time of poperie,but their repentance was expected, to deliuer them from the ſentence of death.

Certaine notes touching the Spaniſh Inquiſition.

NOw in the laſt place I will briefly ſhew how their cruell proceeding againſt the profeſſors of the Goſpell, and chiefly in their Spaniſh Inquiſition, as it is called, is contrarie to their owne Canons.
First,to extort faith by ſtripes and torments, is termed in their law, Noua & inaudita prædicatio,
A new and ſtrange learning,*diſt.*45.*Gregor.c.*1. yet vſed altogether by them in their Inquiſition.

Secondly, their vſe hath been to intreate for offenders to the ſecular power, Vt citra mortis periculum ſententia moderetur, That the ſentence might bee moderated without the perill or puniſhment of death, decret.Greg.lib.5.tit.40.c.27.Innocent.3. And againe, Sext.decret.lib.5.tit.11.c.1.Innocent.4. Medicinalis ſit excommunicatio non mortalis : Excommunication ſhould be medicinall, not mortall, &c. But their excommunications were vnto death : for whom they did for hereſie (as they falſely called it) excommunicate, the ſecular power did execute to death. Thirdly, their Inquiſition is made in ſecret, the Martyrs were priuily condemned, and neuer publikely produced, till they were brought forth to execution : contrarie to the decree of Innocent.3.decr.Greg.lib.1.tit.29.c.24. Ne eccleſiaſticum iudicium fiat in tenebris quia iuxta teſtimonium veritatis, Qui male agit, odit lucem : That eccleſiaſticall iudgement ſhould not be done in the darke, or in corners : for according to the teſtimonie of the truth it ſelfe, Hee that doth euill, hateth the light, &c. So then it is manifeſt, that their doings were euill, ſeeing they ſought into corners. Fourthly, they in their phariſaicall proceedings ſuppreſſe the names of the accuſers and witneſſes, though there be no danger at all feared in the publiſhing of them : contrarie to the decree of Bonif.8.ſext.decr.lib.5.tit.2.c.20. Ceſſante periculo, publicanda, &c. Where there is no danger, the names both of the accuſer and the witneſſes muſt be publiſhed. Fifthly, diuers conſtitutions haue been made concerning the perſon, qualitie, and condition of accuſers : as Cod.lib.9.tit.1.leg.12. A woman is not admitted to be an accuſer. Likewiſe in their decrees : Cauſ.2. qu.1.c.14. One brother is not to accuſe another. Cod.lib.9.tit.1.leg.13. nor hee that is nouriſhed, his patrone or nouriſher. Ibid.leg.17. nor the ſeruant his maſter, leg.20. No infamous perſon can be receiued to be an accuſer, ibid.leg.15. And in their owne law, Cauſ.2.qu.7.c.23. Yet notwithſtanding they contrarie to theſe ancient prouiſions, haue admitted women to accuſe their husbands, children their parents, ſeruants their maſters ; yea infamous, adulterous and periured perſons haue not been refuſed. I need not giue an inſtance here in particular, their cruell practiſes are full euery where of ſuch examples. Sixthly, concerning the vſage of ſuch, as were impriſoned for religion, the Popes owne decree is this : Clemen.lib.5.tit.3.c.1.Vt fideliter & abſq; diminutione, &c. That ſuch things as are offered to the priſoners by their friends, ſhould faithfully & without diminution be miniſtred vnto them, &c. But their practiſe was contrarie : ſee the ſtorie of Robert Samuel, who was allowed but three mouthfuls of bread, and three ſpoonfuls of water by the day, till his bodie was ſo dried vp, that hee could make no vrine at all, which he oft deſired to drinke, Fox pag.1704.

Thus much of this queſtion, as likewiſe of the whole controuerſie : and thus farre alſo concerning ſuch controuerſies, as are moued about the Church militant here vpon earth ; which we haue hitherto proſecuted by the Lords gracious aſſiſtance : In the next place we are to deale in thoſe controuerſies, which concerne the other part of the Church triumphant in heauen.

The end of the firſt Booke, or Centurie.

Secondly, their vſe hath been to intreate for offenders to the ſecular powers, Vt citra mortis periculum ſententia moderetur, That the ſentence might bee moderated without the perill or puniſhment of death, decret. Greg. lib. 5. tit. 40. c. 27. Innocent. 3. and againe, Sext. decret. lib. 5. tit. 11. c. 1. Innocent. 4. Medicinalis ſit excommunicatio non mortalis: the communication ſhould be medicinall, not mortall, &c. But their excommunications were vnto death: for whom they did for hereſie (as they falſely call it) excommunicate, the ſecular power did execute to death. Thirdly, their Inquiſition is made in ſecret: the Martyrs were priuily condemned, and neuer publikely produced, till they were brought forth to execution: contrarie to the decree of Innocent. 3. decr. Greg. lib. 1. tit. 29. c. 14. Ne eccleſiaſticum iudicium fiat in tenebris quia iuxta teſtimonium veritatis, Qui male agit, odit lucem: That eccleſiaſticall iudgement ſhould not be done in the darke, or in corners: for according to the teſtimonie of the truth it ſelfe, Hee that doth euill, hateth the light, &c. So then it is manifeſt, that their doings were euill, ſeeing they ſought into corners. Fourthly, they in their phariſaicall proceedings ſuppreſſe the names of the accuſers and witneſſes, though there be no danger at all feared in the publiſhing of them: contrarie to the decree of Boniface 8. ſext. decret. lib. 5. tit. 2. c. 20. Ceſſante periculo, publicanda, &c. Where there is no danger, the names both of the accuſer and the witneſſes muſt be publiſhed. Fifthly, diuers conſtitutions haue been made concerning the perſon, qualitie, and condition of accuſers: as Cod. lib. 9. tit. 1. leg. 12. A woman is not admitted to be an accuſer. Likewiſe in their decrees: Cauſ. 2. qu. 1. c. 14. One brother is not to accuſe another, Cod. lib. 9. tit. 1. leg. 13. nor hee that is nouriſhed, his patrone or nouriſher, ibid. leg. 17. nor the ſeruant his maſter, leg. 20. No infamous perſon can be receiued to be an accuſer, ibid. leg. 15. And in their owne law, Cauſ. 2. qu. 7. c. 23. Yet notwithſtanding they contrarie to theſe ancient prouiſions, haue admitted women to accuſe their husbands, children their parents, ſeruants their maſters; yea infamous, adulterous and periured perſons haue not been refuſed. I need not giue an inſtance here in particular, their cruell practiſes are full euery where of ſuch examples. Sixthly, concerning the vſage of ſuch as were impriſoned for religion, the Popes owne decree is this: Clement. lib. 5. tit. 3. c. 1. Prouideant vt abſque diminutione, &c. That ſuch things as are offered to the priſoners by their friends, ſhould faithfully & without diminution be miniſtred vnto them, &c. But their practiſe was contrarie: ſee the ſtorie of Robert Samuel, who was allowed but three mouthfuls of bread, and three ſpoonfuls of water by the day, till his bodie was ſo dried vp, that hee could make no vrine at all, which he oft deſired to drinke, as pag. 1704.

Thus much of this queſtion, as likewiſe of the whole controuerſie: and thus farre alſo concerning ſuch controuerſies as are moued about the Church militant here vpon earth; which we haue hitherto proſecuted by the Lords gracious aſſiſtance: in the next place we are to deale in thoſe controuerſies, which concerne the other part of the Church triumphant in heauen.

eiuſdem in cælis ſempiternum præmium A. W. ex animo precatur.

SAlomon etiamnum puer (nobiliſsime Princeps) Deum ſuppliciter precatus eſt, vt prudentia donaretur: 1.Reg.3.9. Ioſias cum nondum annum decimum ſextum exceſſerat, tanto pietatis exarſit feruore vt Eccleſiam iam tum perpurgare cœperit: Alexander ætate adhuc vigente puerili tantos alebat ſpiritus, vt ἐμοὶ πατὴρ ἀπολεί- ψει οὐδέν. cum de Philippi patris rebus præclarè geſtis accepiſſet, pueris ſocijs dicere ſoleret anxius: pater mihi nihil faciet reliquum. Iſtos verè regios adoleſcentes, & tu imitare (Auguſtiſsime Princeps) vt cum primo tibi prudentiam Plutarch. lib. de iis, qui ſero a numine puniuntur. dari expoſcas, cum altero etiam pietatem ætate iuuenili hac ſapere diſcas, & tertij ingentes & principe dignos imbibas ſpiritus.

Sed quid ego reges terrenos & mortales nomino, puer ille æternus & Rex omnium potentiſsimus Ieſus Chriſtus exemplo eſt, qui duodecim tantum natus annos omnes illas, quæ ſeorſim in reliquis tantum adumbratæ ſunt, in ſe vno plenè expreſsit dotes: verè prudens ille, qui potuit etiam doctoribus os obſtruere: verè pius qui illorum errores redarguebat iam puer, & diuina in illo reſplenduit animi fortitudo, qui annis non maior auſus eſt cum natu grandioribus congredi: Sed quia gradatim ad iſtius exempli faſtigium aſcendendum eſt, nec ad ſummam tanti regis imitationem qui ſcalæ obtinet ſummitatem, niſi per ſaltus & gradus perueniri poſsit. Gen.28.13. En tibi (feliciſsime puer) exemplum proponitur familiare & domeſticum regis Edouardi ſexti, qui nondum vir euaſerat, cum hoc vno facto ſe prudentem, pium, & verè magnanimum oſtendit, cum enim tam per literas Imperatoris & aliorum principum rogatus, quàm duorum grauiſsimorum præſulum Cranmeri & Ridlæi conſilio permotus fuiſſet, vt miſſalis illius idololatrici ſacrificij liberum vſum Mariæ ſorori principi concederet, nullo modo annuere voluit: piè hoc ille fecit, non paſſus religionem pontificijs fæcibus corrumpi, prudenter hoc præſtitum, qui melius ſibi, quàm prudentiſsimi viri dabant, inuenit conſilium, & conſtanter ac magnificè ſe in hoc negotio geſsit, qui Imperatoris & aliorum principum neglexit potentiam, contempſit minas.

Verum non opus eſt, vt ad exempla tam longe petita, & ad retro acta ſæcula reuocem celſitudinem tuam, habes domi in quem oculos conijcias, cuius veſtigijs inſiſtas, & monitis inhæreas, Regiam patris maieſtatem, qui & exemplo te docere poteſt, & præceptis imbuere: ad primum ſi te conuertas in ditiſſimum regiarum virtutum theſaurum, & quoddam veluti ſacrarium te incidiſſe cogita: quem Scotia prudentem multis annis experta eſt, Anglia pium recepit, & ſe diu retenturam ſperat, fortem & magnanimum, adiacentes regiones ſiquando opus erit, ſentient. Paterna ipſius præcepta ſi quæras, habes τὸ δῶρον illud βασιλικὸν, donum verè regium, vnde abundè ad omnia vitæ munera inſtructus accedas. Ex illo limpidiſsimo fonte tres emanant riuuli: primus, pietatis inſtitutis abundat: medius in regni adminiſtratione conſtantiam & magnanimitatem docet: vltimus, in rerum ἀδιαφόρων vſu prudentiam commendat.

Nunc ergo ad hoc exemplum vberrimum te compone (optime ſpei princeps) in curſu incepto perge, literis & artibus ingenuis animum tuum confirmandum & mores fingendos præbe: ad artium cognitionem religionis adiunge curam: ad literarum exterarum peritiam, & ſacrarum notitiam vt comitem perpetuum adhibe, vt Apoſtolicum illud elogium de tua dignitate poſsit 2.Tim.3.15. pronuntiari: Te à puero ſacras literas nouiſſe, quæ te poſſunt ſapientem reddere ad ſalutem per fidem, quæ eſt in Chriſto Ieſu. Pietate tanquam ſale omnia vitæ condiuntur acta, & in principis facie, tanquam Solis iubar, religionis elucet ſtudium.

Leonides Alexandri pædagogus ſæpe cum reprehendit quod liberalius dijs thus adoleret, cui Alexander thurifera regione potitus talenta aliquot thuris miſit, epiſtola eum compellans, vt ſordidus eſſe (inquit) erga Deos deſinas: Idem tu nunc facias (nobiliſſime Adoleſcens) vt largius ſpirituale precum tuarum thus, adhuc Iuuenis corā Deo profundere diſcas: Eccleſiaſtis illius Regij hoc conſiliū eſt: Recordare creatoris diebus Iuuentutis tuæ tantiſper dum non adueniunt dies mali, de quibus dicas non eſt mihi in iſtis delectatio. Multi non recte otio iuuentutem tranſigunt, pretioſiſſimi temporis prodigi, nimis ſerò ad pietatem ſapere incipientes, de quibus optime Seneca: Quemadmodum dum ex amphora, primum, quod eſt ſynceriſſimum, effluit, grauiſſimum quodq; ſubſidit: ſic in ætate noſtra quod eſt optimum, id exhauriri in alijs potius patimur, vt nobis fæces reſeruemus. Atque alio loco: non pudet te reliquias vitæ reſeruare, & illud ſolum tempus bonæ menti reſeruare quod in nullam rem conferri poſſit, quam ſerum eſt tunc viuere incipere eum, cum deſinendum eſt. HERE FOLLOW THE CONTROVERSIES CONCERNING THE CHVRCH TRIVMPHANT.

THey are two in number: The firſt is as touching the condition, office, and miniſterie of Angels: The ſecond of and concerning the Saints departed.

THE EIGHTH CONTROVERSIE concerning Angels.

THis Controuerſie containeth three queſtions. Firſt of the Hierarchie and degrees of Angels. Secondly, of their miniſterie and office. Thirdly, of the worſhip and inuocation of Angels.

THE FIRST QVESTION, CONCERNING THE celeſtiall Hierarchie, or degrees of Angels.

THis queſtion hath likewiſe two parts: Firſt, how many degrees there bee of Angels. Secondly, whether Michael be the Prince of the Angels.

THE FIRST PART, OF THE DIVERS orders and degrees of Angels.

The Papiſts.

THey doe boldly affirme, that there are nine orders of Angels: and thoſe that doe doubt of it, they charge with infidelitie and blaſphemie. There are firſt Principalities, then Poteſtates: thirdly, Powers: fourthly, Dominations, Eph. 1. 21. fifthly, there are Thrones, Coloſſ. 1. 16. vnto theſe adde foure other, Cherubim, Seraphim, Angels, Archangels: ſo haue we nine in all, Rhem. annot. Epheſ. 1. ſect. 4. 1. Error.

All theſe nine orders, they herein following Dionyſius conceite doe diſtinguiſh out three rankes: the firſt containeth Seraphim, Cherubim, and Thrones: the ſecond Powers, Dominions, and Vertues: the third Angels, Archangels, Principalities. The firſt three they call aſſiſting ſpirits, or attendants, which alwaies are in Gods preſence: the other are miniſtring ſpirits, which receiue their direction from the ſuperiour three orders. Thus Clictouens following Damaſcene, and Damaſcene Dionyſius. Clictou. in lib. 2. c. 3. Damaſcen. de Orthodox. fid.

The Proteſtants.

AS of the diuerſitie of names we gather, that there are diuers orders, as Hierome ſaith, Sine cauſa diuerſitas eſt nominum, vbi non eſt diuerſitas meritorum: There is no reaſon to haue diuerſitie of names, where there is no diuerſitie of merit, &c that is, vertue: So to enquire of them more ſubtilly, to define their number, and appoint their degrees: it is a point not onely of fooliſh curioſitie, but alſo of vngodly and dangerous raſhneſſe. Fulk. ibid.

Argum. 1. That the Scripture alloweth no ſuch difference or diſtinction of orders or degrees amongſt the Angels it may thus appeare: firſt, Epheſ. 6. 12. the Apoſtle giueth two of the names of theſe orders to euill Angels, namely, Principalities, and Poteſtates: from which place I reaſon thus: If theſe be names of orders and degrees, then they may be found amongſt the euill Angels as well as amongſt the good: and if ſome of theſe degrees are amongſt the euill Angels, then why not the reſt alſo? and ſo we ſhall haue Seraphim and Cherubim amongſt the euill and reprobate Angels, which were blaſphemie to affirme. Indeede Origene ſeemeth to be of that opinion, Ego arbitror, quod omnia eorundem nominum ſunt apud Diabolum, &c. I thinke all theſe names of Angels to be with the Diuell, as they are with God: Hom. 17. in Matth. But let this goe among other of his Paradoxes. Epheſ. 6. 12.

Againe, they that hold thoſe nine orders of Angels, doe make Cherubim, Seraphim, and Thrones, the three higheſt: ſaying further, that, Superiora agmina ab intimis nunquam recedunt: The ſuperiour orders doe neuer depart from the preſence of God, and that the Angels of the inferiour orders, are ſent in embaſſage from God: Mag. lib. 2 diſtinct. 10. a. But contrarie to this aſſertion, Eſay 6. we reade, that the Seraphims alſo are ſent vpon Gods meſſage: and ſo wee conclude, that Seraphims are not of the higheſt and ſuperiour order. Eſay 6. 6.

Further, Michael and Gabriel are ſpirits of the higheſt nature and office, as appeareth by their names: the firſt, ſignifying one that is equall to God; the other, the ſtrength of God: and yet they are called Angels. Wherefore thoſe orders are confounded in Scripture, and no ſuch preciſe difference amongſt the Angels can there be found: and the Apoſtle ſaith, They are all miniſtring ſpirits, Heb. 1. adminiſtratorij ſpiritus: therefore not commanding ſpirits one ouer another. Heb. 1. 14.

And Gabriel ſaith: I am Gabriel, that ſtoode in the preſence of God, and am ſent to ſpeake vnto thee: therefore the ſame Angels are both attendants, and miniſtring ſpirits.

Auguſtine ſaith, Quid inter ſe diſtent quatuor illa vocabula, (throni, dominationes, principatus, poteſtates) dicant qui poſſunt ſi tamen poſſunt probare quod dicunt, ego me iſta ignorare confiteor: What difference there is betweene theſe foure words, Thrones, Dominations, Principalities, Powers, let them tell vs, that be able, ſo they can proue that they tell vs: for my part, I confeſſe I know it not, Auguſt. Enchirid. cap. 58. With Auguſtine therefore we confeſſe, that as it appeareth by theſe ſeuerall names, there are diſtinct orders of Angels: ſo how many there be, and how they are diſtinguiſhed, the Scripture hath not reuealed vnto vs: and it were curioſitie for vs to enquire: we ſhall then know, when we ſhall be like vnto the Angels.

Irenæus lib. 2. c. 55.

And before Auguſtine Ireneus thus deliuered his opinion, they doe delirare doate, which take vpon them to ſhew, numerum Angelorum, ordinem Archangelorum, thronorum ſacramenta, diuerſitates dominationum, &c. The number of the Angels, order of the Archangels, myſterie of the Thrones, the diuerſitie of Dominions, Principalities, Powers, Vertues, &c.

Lib. 3. de Theolog.

Damaſcen. lib. 2. de fid. Orthod. c. 3.

The ſame is the judgement of other Chriſtian Churches. 1. Of the Greeke Church Gregory Nazianzene, writing of the nature of the Angels, ſaith of them in generall, Diuinæ ſunt voluntatis miniſtra, &c. Hæ obeunt omnia omnib. et vbiq; cum miniſterij ſtudio, &c. præſentes: They are miniſters of the diuine will, thoſe doe goe about all buſineſſe for all men, and are euery where preſent, with a deſire to miniſter, &c. Yea Damaſcene himſelfe ſaith: They are conuerſant in heauen, and haue one office to praiſe God, and to miniſter vnto his will: Their office then is not diſtinguiſhed in ſuch ſort, as is before alleaged.

Maxim. lib. 3. de creation. c. 26.

Athanaſ. lib. de commun. eſſent. patris, filii et ſpirit.

Anton. epiſt. 2.

2 Of the South Church we haue Maximus the Egyptian Philoſopher, who ſaith, Omnis angelica natura in duo diuiſa eſt, in ſanctas et ſceleſtas, &c. All the Angelicall nature is diuided into two, the holy and wicked Angels, &c. Athanaſius ſaith of the Angels in generall, Conditos eſſe in obſequium laudemq; Dei, et hominum miniſteria: That they were created for obedience vnto and praiſe of God, and the miniſterie of men, &c. Antonius ſaith, the Angels differ in this, that ſome are called Archangels, Powers, Dominions, Cherubim, becauſe they kept the will of the Creator: Alij vocantur Diaboli, Dæmones, &c. Other are called Diuels, Spirits, Sathan, &c. for their wicked inuentions, &c.

Harm. ſect. 3. pag. 56. 58.

3 French confeſſ. Artic. 2. The Angels preſerued by the meere grace of God, are miniſters for his glorie, and for the ſaluation of the Elect. Belgia art. 2. He made the Angels, that they might be his Miniſters, and attend vpon the Elect. They neither diſtinguiſh their orders, nor their offices.

Comment. in Heb. 1. numer. 94.

4 Ribera a Ieſuite ſheweth how Gregorie would not reſt vpon the authoritie of Dyoniſius in this matter: And whereas ſome thinke that he receiued it of Paul, Non taciturus authorem in re tam obſcura: He would not haue concealed his author in ſo obſcure a matter, &c.

Iohn 14. 2.

Then to conclude this point: In the Angels there are foure things to be conſidered: 1. their ſtation, place or order. 2. Their degree of illumination. 3. Their nature and ſubſtance. 4. Their office and miniſterie. Damaſcene confeſſeth, that they differ in the two firſt φωτισμῷ καὶ τόπῳ, in their diuers illumination, and ſtation: which may bee yeelded vnto: that as the ſtarres differ in place and light one from another, the like difference may be among the Angels: for there is no doubt, but that the celeſtiall Hierarchie is conſtituted in a moſt heauenly order: and like as there ſhall bee ſuch difference among the Saints, euen in diuerſitie of manſion, Iohn 14. 2. So the like may bee affirmed among the Angels. In generall we acknowledge diuerſitie of degrees and powers among the Angels, but to diſtinguiſh and range them into their diſtinct orders, it is a point of needleſſe curioſitie. In the other two, in nature and their worke, or miniſterie they differ not. Damaſcene affirmeth the one, that they haue all ἓν ἔργον, one and the ſame worke to praiſe God, and miniſter vnto his will. But hee doubteth whether they differ in Eſſence, or not. But Clictoneus is bold to affirme, that the Angels doe differ ſpecie in kinde one from another, and that there is but one Angell of one kinde: and his reaſon is, becauſe an Angel propius accedit ad vnitatem, quam homo, doth come neerer vnto vnitie, then man: but this reaſon is againſt his opinion, for if there be many kindes and ſpecies of Angels, and but one of men; the Angels ſhall bee further from the nature of vnitie then men. But herein the opinion of Haymo is to be preferred, who ſpeaking of ſpirits ſaith, they are greater ſome then others, Non ſubſtantia ſed poteſtate, not in ſubſtance, but in power.

Lib. 6. aduerſ. Celſum.

Chriſtians ſhould ſtay themſelues in theſe curious & ſubtile queſtions; and not exceede the bounds and limits of Scripture. The heretikes called Ophiani, as Celſus obiecteth againſt the Chriſtians, had the like phantaſticall conceite of the ſpirits: The firſt they named Michael in ſhape like vnto a Lion: The ſecond Suriel like an Oxe: The third Raphael like a Dragon: The fourth Gabriel like an Eagle: The fifth Thauthabas like a Beare: The ſixth Erathaoth like a Dogge: The ſeuenth Thaphaoth, like an Aſſe. Origene anſwereth Celſus, that theſe monſtrous fancies are not deprompta ex Chriſtiana doctrina, ſed prorſus aliena: are not taken out of Chriſtian learning, but are altogether contrarie to it. Let Chriſtians then take heede of ſuch curious ſpeculations.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER MICHAEL be the prince of Angels.

The Papiſts.

THey ſay, that in heauen beſide God himſelfe, there is another commander and captaine of the 2. Error. Angels, euen Michael the prince of the Angels: which place the diuell had in the beginning before his fall. For as the Scripture ſaith, the diuell and his angels, meaning, that all euill angels are ſubiect vnto him: ſo by Michael and his angels, we vnderſtand all good angels, that are likewiſe ſubiect to him, Apocal.12.7.Rhemiſt.Bellarm.de pontif lib.1.cap.9.

The Proteſtants.

FIrſt, Michael in that place ſignifieth Chriſt, who is Lord of the angels: for the angels cannot be ſaid to be any other Michaels Angels, but onely the Angels of God and Chriſt, Fulk.ibid. This is alſo proued by the text. v.10, Now is come ſaluation, the kingdome of our God, and the power of his Chriſt, for the accuſer of the brethren is caſt out. Here he is called Chriſt, which before is named Michael. Auguſtine alſo expoundeth it, Michaelem intellige Chriſtũ: By Michael vnderſtand Chriſt: Hom.9 in Apoc.

Secondly, it followeth not, that as there is a chiefe and captaine of the euill Angels, ſo amongſt the good there ſhould be a chiefe Angell aboue the reſt, beſide Chriſt: for it is ſufficient that there is one Lord and prince of the Angels, euen Chriſt. Again, neither is it prooued out of ſcripture, that amongſt the diuels there is one captaine and great diuell to whom the reſt were ſubiects: for whereas the Phariſees obiected, that Chriſt caſt out diuels through Beelzebub the prince of the diuels, Mark.3. if ei- Mark.3.23. ther the Phariſees did then ſo meane, or any ſhall now gather vpon their words, that there is a great maſter diuell that ruleth and commandeth the reſt, it was in them but a phariſaicall dreame, and in the other a popiſh collection. We deny not, but that there may be degrees in power and angelicall gifts, both among the good and bad angels, as there ſhall bee degrees in glorie among the Saints: yet the Saints ſhall not be princes one ouer the other, no more are the Angels now. Thirdly, marke the anſwere of our Sauiour in that place, If Satan caſt out Satan, Marke.3, Here Satan is made a common name to all euill ſpirits. But Apocal.12. where mention is made of the diuell and his angels, the text ſaith, The great dragon, the old ſerpent, called the diuell and Sathanas, verſ.9. Here the name Sathanas, Reuel.12.9. is giuen to the prince of the diuels: ſo there is not one Sathanas, but many. And where our Sauiour calleth the diuell the prince of the world, Ioh.14, S. Paul calleth them all principalities and powers, John 14.30. worldly gouernours, and princes of the darkneſſe of this world, Epheſ.6.12. ſo there is not one prince Epheſ.6.12. of the diuels, but they are all princes. Thus Auguſtine expoundeth that place: Draco pugnauit & angeli eius: id eſt, diabolus & homines voluntati eius obtemperantes: The dragon fought and his angels, that is, wicked men obeying his will, Apocalypſ.Hom.9. So by Auguſtines ſentence the diuels are not ſubiects to the great diuell, but they are all princes and commanders of wicked men.

Argum. If Michael be the Prince of the Angels, then it muſt needes be granted, that he is of the higheſt order of Angels, which are Seraphim, and Cherubim: for ſo theſe Angell-makers doe place them: Theſe three, Seraphim, Cherubim, Thrones, make the higheſt ranke: Dominations, Principalities, Potentates the middle order: Powers, Archangels, Angels the loweſt region, Mag.lib.2.diſtinct.9.a. But Michael being an Archangell is in the loweſt order, and therefore cannot be the chiefe and commander of the reſt.

Further, the Apoſtle ſaith, They are all λειτουργικὰ πνεύματα, miniſtring ſpirits, Hebr.1.14. Ergo, not Heb.1.14. commanding ſpirits one ouer another.

Now for further euidence. 1. Euen Damaſcene, who maketh nine orders of Angels, yet maketh not De fid. Orthodox.lib.2,c.3. one Angell commander of the reſt: but ſaith that the Angels, οἱ ὑπερέχοντες, which are ſuperiour, do communicate their knowledge vnto thoſe which are vnder them, &c. he maketh not one ſuperiour to all the reſt, but one order ſuperiour to another.

2 Origene, who was before produced as of the Greeke and Eaſt Church, becauſe hee was ordained a Presbyter of Cœſarea by Theoctiſtus the Biſhop there; is rather a witneſſe for the doctrine of the * South Church, being borne in Egipt, and brought vp at Alexandria, where he was the gouernour of the famous ſchoole there: he hath this notable teſtimonie of this point now in queſtion: Quis alius Homil.6. in. Ioſua. eſt princeps militiæ virtutis Domini, niſi Dominus noſter Ieſus Chriſtus, &c. Who elſe is the Prince of the Armie of the ſtrength of God, but our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; for all the hoaſt of heauen, whether Angels, Archangels, vertues, dominions, principalities, powers, all theſe were made by him, Et ſub ipſo principe militant, And they warre vnder him, &c. Wee cannot haue a more euident teſtimonie, that there is no other Prince and Captaine of the Angels but Chriſt.

3 See the confeſſion of the reformed Churches in the former queſtion, which make all the Angels indifferently miniſtring ſpirits for the elect ſake: and if they all are miniſtring ſpirits, then is there not a ſoueraigne commander among them.

4 Gregorie is of the ſame opinion with Damaſcene: Quod Angeli à ſuperiorum Angelorum poteſtatib. diſpenſentur: That Angels are diſpoſed of by the power of ſuperiour Angels: hee maketh not one Angell Prince of all the reſt, but one order ſuperiour to another.

THE SECOND QVESTION, OF THE miniſterie and function of Angels.

THis queſtion hath two parts: firſt, of the externall miniſterie of Angels, in the protection, and defence of the Church. Secondly, of their ſpirituall office about the prayers of Gods ſeruants.

THE FIRST PART, CONCERNING THE defence and protection of Angels.

The Papiſts.

3. Error. Dan. 10. 21. MIchael (ſay they) is the protector and keeper of the whole Church of Chriſt, Dan. 10. 21. And as earthly kingdomes haue their ſpeciall Angels for their protectors; ſo alſo haue particular Churches, Dan. 10. Rhemiſt. annot. 1. Apoc. ſect. 9.

Exod. 14. 19. Our Doway Diuines doe proue the ſpeciall deputation of Angels to ſome countrey by that place, Exod. 14. 19. how the Angell of God that went before the campe of Iſrael, remoued behind: Annot. vpon that place.

Anſw. 1. That Angell was Chriſt, who is the perpetuall protector of his Church: for the Lord ſaith of that Angell, Exod. 23. 22. my name is in him. 2. And though it bee admitted, that he was a created Angell, yet, that he had the ſpeciall charge of Iſrael alone, that place proueth not.

The Proteſtants.

THe whole Church hath Chriſt himſelfe, who is the true Michael, for her protector and defender: And ſo is that place in Daniel to be vnderſtood. Auguſtine alſo by Michael vnderſtandeth Chriſt: the name alſo ſignifieth as much: Michael, that is, one like vnto God: ſee more of this before, Controu. 4. queſt. 1. The Scripture ſaith, All power is giuen to Chriſt, and hee is with his Church to the end of the world, Matth. 28. 18. 20. Hee therefore is the chiefe patrone and protector of his Church. Matth. 28. 18.

Secondly, it cannot be proued out of Scripture, that kingdomes haue their ſpeciall Angels protectors, for Dan. 10. the Princes of the Perſians and Grecians, were not Angels but earthly Princes: for Angels doe not reſiſt Chriſt and his Angels defenders of the Church, as the Prince of Perſia did, verſe 13. Fulk ibid. but all the Angels of heauen are readie to ſerue the Lord at his pleaſure, for the defence of his Church, without any limitation of place, Zachar. 1. 10. Theſe are they whom the Lord hath ſent, to goe through the world. The Angels execute their meſſage, not in ſeuerall countries, but in the whole world. Zach. 1. 10.

The Papiſts.

4. Error. Gen. 48. 16 Acts 12. 11. Math. 18. 10. EVery one hath from his natiuitie an Angell for his cuſtodie and patronage againſt the wicked, before the face of God, Geneſ. 48. 16. Iacob ſaith The Angell that hath kept me from my youth vp: Acts 12. 15. It is his angell, Rhemiſt. ibid. Matth. 18. 10. Their Angels behold the face of my Father: Ergo, euery man hath his proper Angell: So alſo the Doway tranſlators, Geneſ. 48. 16.

Gen. 48. 16. Gen. 31. 13. Gen. 32. 1. Anſw. 1. Iacob by the Angell vnderſtandeth Chriſt, to whom it is proper to bleſſe Gods children: the Angell bleſſe thy children, ſaith he, Geneſ. 48. 16. This Angell appeared vnto him in Bethel, and is called the God of Bethel, Geneſ. 31. 13. with this Angell Iacob wreſtled, 32. which was God, as it appeareth by the name of Iacob, he is called Iſrael, becauſe he had preuailed with God, and the place is called Peniel, I haue ſeene God face to face: Other proper Angell Iacob had none, for all the Angels of God were appointed for his defence, Geneſ. 32. 1. Hee met an hoſte of Gods Angels, and accordingly called the place Mahanaim.

2 Neither of the other places proue that men haue proper Angels. Matth. 18. The children of God are ſaid to haue their Angels: not theirs, as euery man his proper Angell, but theirs in common, becauſe they were deputed for their defence: Acts 12. Peter at that time was deliuered by one Angell, but it followeth not, that therefore he was his proper Angel from his natiuitie, for Peter himſelfe ſaith the Lord hath ſent his Angell, not my Angell: and they might ſpeake ex communi conceptione, out of a common opinion, as Maſter Caluin ſaith, Inſtitut. lib. 1. c. 14. 7. as they had the like conceit, that if any had ſeene an Angell, he ſhould die, Iudg. 6. 22. and 13. 12.

The Proteſtants.

WE nothing doubt of the protection of Gods Angels: but that euery one hath a proper Angel appointed for his protection from his natiuitie, out of Scripture it is not proued.

Exod. 23. 20. 1 Sometime one Angell hath the charge of a multitude, as the Angell that ſmote the firſt borne of Egypt, but preſerued the Iſraelites, whoſe doore poſts were ſtricken with the blood of the Paſchall Lambe, Exod. 12. ſo one Angell was appointed to deliuer the Apoſtles that were ſhut vp in priſon: Acts 5. 24.

Gen. 32. 1. Pſal 91. 11. 2 Sometime many Angels are readie for the defence of one man: Gen. 32. 1. an hoſte of Angels met Iacob, Pſal. 91. 11, He ſhall giue his Angels charge ouer thee, to keepe thee in all thy waies: Ergo, euery man hath not his particular proper Angell.

3 Luke 16.22. The poore man is ſaid, being dead, to be carried not by one Angell, but by the Angels, into the boſome of Abraham. But if he had one Angell appointed to be the preſident of his life from his natiuitie, it had been alſo part of that Angels charge, to haue conueied his ſoule into heauen. So Auguſtine writeth: *Si bene vixerimus, vbi a carnis vinculo anima liberata fuerit, mox in occurſum noſtrum Angelorum chorus occurret. De ſalutaribus, document. cap.*40. If we liued well here, when as the ſoule is gone from the bodie, the holy companie of the Angels are ready to meete vs: he ſaith not one Angell, but the whole chore or companie. Luke 16,22.

Laſtly, they that hold, that euery man hath a good Angell appointed for his cuſtodie at his natiuitie, doe alſo affirme, that euery wicked man hath alſo an euill Angell waiting vpon him. But this cannot be, for ſeeing it is confeſſed that the good Angels are more in number then the bad, *Magiſt. lib.2.diſt.*11.k. but wicked men doe contrariwiſe exceed the good in number, it muſt needes follow, that there is not for euery euill man an euill Angell, or elſe that there are more good Angels, then for euerie man one: the Maſter of the Sentences anſwereth, that one Angell may ſerue diuers men ſucceſſiuelie, for men die, but Angels die not, and ſo notwithſtanding euerie man ſhall haue his Angell.

*Anſ.*1. Yet the obiection is not anſwered, for in euery age the good men are feweſt, and the euill men moſt, and not onely in reſpect of the whole age of the world, and yet the good Angels are more then the bad. 2. To admit this diſtinction, yet ſeeing the number of good men is ſometime more, ſometime leſſe, as toward the end of the world, when faith ſhall faile, but the number of the Angels is alwaies the ſame, it cannot be that euery man ſhould haue his Angell, and euery Angell his particular charge of ſome one man.

There remaineth here no more to be anſwered, then, that euery Angel hath not a particular charge of ſome one of the elect, though euery one of the elect hath his particular Angell: but this ſhould make a difference in the miniſterie and diſpenſation of the Angels, whereas the Apoſtle ſaith of them all equally, Are they not all miniſtring ſpirits ſent foorth to miniſter for their ſake, that ſhall be heires of ſaluation. Heb.1.14.

Now further: 1. Chryſoſtome of the Greeke Church thus ſaith, Ad tutelam noſtram conſtituit exercitus Angelorum, vt eorum præſentia dæmonum conſtringatur audacia: God appointeth for our cuſtodie armies of Angels, that by their preſence, the inſolencie of the diuels may be ſuppreſſed. Hence may be gathered this argument, that ſeeing not one euill ſpirit, but many doe aſſault men: as Mary had ſeuen diuels caſt out of her, Luke 8.2. and another was poſſeſſed with a legion of diuels, Mark.5.9. we are to thinke that God hath ſet as ſtrong a guard of good Angels to defend, as there is of euill to offend: and therefore it is probable, that more then one Angell are appointed for the cuſtodie of the faithfull. Hom. de aſcenſion. Domini.

2 Origen, who ſeemeth moſt to fauour this opinion of the ſingular cuſtodie of Angels, yet is doubtfull when the Angels ſhould receiue this particular charge: ſome thinke (ſaith hee) that euery one of thoſe which are foreknowne of God as ſoone as he is borne, doth accipere Angelum præpoſitum, receiue the Angell ſet ouer him: Others thinke it is, cum fuerint per regenerationem renati, when they are borne againe by regeneration: in tempore enim infidelitatis eſt homo ſub Angelis Satanæ: for in the time of vnbeliefe man is vnder the Angels of Satan. Here then is a great difficultie: for if at the birth the Angell is giuen, then the Angels know who are elected, for they are protectors onely of the elect: but the Apoſtle ſaith, the Lord knoweth who are his: the Angels know it not: if onely at the time of their conuerſion: then the elect ſhall be without the protection of Angels ſometime, vntill they goe out of the world, as the theefe was conuerted vpon the croſſe. Tract.5.in Matth. 2.Timoth.2.19.

Yet Origen himſelfe ſometime leaueth that conceit of the particular deputation of Angels: Vbicunq; ſunt timentes Deum, ibi ſunt caſtra Angelorum, &c. Whereſoeuer are men fearing God, there are armies of Angels, as Iacob called a certaine place, the houſe of God, ſo the Angels pitched their tents about Eliſeus, ſo Chriſt could haue obtained of his father legions of Angels, &c. Tract.35.in Matth.

3 Confeſſion of Belgia, artic.12: He made the Angels all good by nature, that they might be his miniſters, and might alſo attend vpon the elect, &c. They in generall hold the Angels to be miniſters for the elect ſake, and not otherwiſe. And ſo Caluin reſolueth well, hoc pro certo habendum, &c. This is to be held for a certaintie, that not onely one Angell hath care for euery one of vs, but that all of them with a common conſent doe watch ouer our ſaluation. Lib.1.Inſtit. cap.14.ſect.7.

4 Haymo, whom the Romaniſts do challenge for theirs, ſaith, An vnuſquiſq; homo habeat angelum, non eſt certum nobis: Whether euery one of vs haue his Angell, it is not knowne certainly to vs, &c. And indeed there are here diuers vncertainties: for the Romaniſts hold that euery one hath an Angel giuen him for his protection, as the Rhemiſts before alleaged, and ſo our Doway men, Geneſ.18.v.16. and before them Clictoueus: Cuiq; hominum ſigillatim deſignatus eſt Angelus: To euery man ſeuerally is aſſigned his Angell. But Origen ſaith, that they only receiue their Angels, qui præcogniti à Deo, which are foreknowne of God. The Rhemiſts will haue this charge of the Angels to begin from the natiuitie: but Origen ſaith, tutores dati ſunt conuerſis, they are giuen as tutors vnto thoſe that are conuerted &c. Wherefore leauing ſuch curious points, it is more ſafe to hold, that not only one, but many Angels are appointed for the defence of the faithfull. Super Cantic. Moyſi. Annot. in Damaſcen. lib.2. cap.3. Tract.5.in Matth. Homil.2.in Cantic.

THE SECOND PART, WHAT OFFICE the Angels haue about our prayers.

The Papiſts.

Hæreſ.5. Reuel.8.2. THeir opinion is,that the Angels doe offer vp our prayers vnto God.And they would proue it by that place,Apoc.8.2.An Angell ſtood by the Altar,with a golden cenſer, and much incenſe was giuen vnto him to offer with the prayers of the Saints,Rhemiſt.in hunc locum.

Anſw. Auguſtine vpon this place ſaith, that this Angell is Chriſt: *Thuribulum aureum eſt corpus eius ſanctum,*the golden cenſer is his bodie, ex quo Deus odorem ſuauitatis accepit, out of the which God ſmelt a ſweete ſauour, Homil.in Apocalyp.6. And in another place he ſaith, *Vt altare ſanctificat dona,ſic Chriſtus preces noſtras,*as the altar ſanctifieth the gift,ſo Chriſt doth our praiers, qu. in Euangel.34. Firſt therefore this place is vnderſtood of Chriſt,not of any Angell.

2. If this place might be vnderſtood of Angels, that they haue ſome miniſterie about our prayers, it maketh nothing notwithſtanding for popiſh inuocation of Angels: for the Angell heere commendeth not the prayers of the Saints by his merit, but by the much incenſe giuen vnto him,to adde to the prayers of the Saints to make them acceptable,which is the ſweete ſmell and ſauour of the precious death and merits of Chriſt, Fulk in hunc locum. Auguſtine indeed ſometime aſcribeth ſuch an office vnto the Angels to carrie vp our prayers to heauen, as their charge is to carrie vp our ſoules: not as mediators or interceſſors,but as the Lords meſſengers and agents heere vpon earth, to report vnto him our affaires: Dicuntur Angeli preces noſtras, & vota Deo offerre,non quia Deum doceant, qui omnia antequam fiant,&c.nouit,ſed quia ſuper his eius voluntatem conſulunt: The Angels are ſaid to offer vp our prayers and vowes vnto God,not to informe or inſtruct the Lord, but only to conſult and know his pleaſure: tom.9.de diligendo Deo,cap.3.& in Pſal.74. for the Angels haue two offices, the one,to execute the commandement of God in the world,and to attend vpon him to receiue their Math.18.10. charge,Matth.18.10. the other,to returne vnto God as faithfull meſſengers the ſucceſſe of their buFulk Zach.1.10 ſineſſe in the world, Zach.1.10. Now whether the Angels be appointed of God to report vnto him our ſayings and doings,as other affaires of our life, the Scripture no where euidently ſheweth. Neither,if it were granted,would it any thing helpe their popiſh inuocation of Angels.

Rhemiſts alleage Tob.12.12. to proue the offering of our prayers by Angels.

Anſw. It is neither Canonicall Scripture,nor agreeable vnto it: Fulk annot.Coloſſ.2.ſect.3.

Our Doway tranſlators vpon that place Exod.19.9. *Moſes had told the words of the people to the Lord,*thus inferre: So Angels and Saints offer our prayers and other good workes to God,&c.

*Anſw.*1. It followeth not,becauſe Moſes now liuing reported vnto God the words of the people; that the Saints departed doe it,that heare vs not: or the Angels to whom we find no ſuch thing giuen in charge,as here was vnto Moſes. 2. And yet,though it be granted, as it may be without inconuenience,that Angels report vnto God our prayers as other our workes, not as mediators, but as meſſengers,yet this will make nothing for inuocation,as ſhall be afterward ſeene.

The Proteſtants.

THe Scripture alwaies maketh Chriſt our onely Mediatour, neither Angels nor Saints, by whom our prayers and all other ſpirituall ſacrifices are offered vnto God.

Heb.13.15. 1.Pet.2.5. 1. Hebr.13.15.Let vs by him offer the ſacrifice of praiſe alwaies to God: 1.Pet.2.5. You are an holy Prieſthood,to offer vp ſpirituall ſacrifices acceptable to God,by Ieſus Chriſt: *Ergo,*Chriſt Ieſus is our onely Mediator.

Galath.3.19. 2. Galath.3.19. The law was ordained by Angels in the hand of a Mediator: Ergo, the Angels Lib.3.de Trinitat.c.18. 1.Tim.2. are one office, and the Mediator another. Auguſtine ſaith, Quòd non aliquem ex Angelis dicit Mediatorem,ſed ipſum Dominum noſtrum Ieſum Chriſtum in quantum homo fieri dignatus eſt,habes alio loco: Vnus (inquit) Deus,& vnus Mediator Dei & hominum, homo Chriſtus Ieſus: That the Apoſtle calleth not any of the Angels,but only Ieſus Chriſt our Lord,Mediator,in that he vouchſafed to be made man,we haue in another place: There is one God(ſaith he)and one Mediator of God and man,the Man Ieſus Chriſt.

Now,whereas theſe three things are queſtioned concerning the miniſterie of Angels about our prayers: firſt,whether they preſent our prayers to God: ſecondly, whether they pray for vs: thirdly, whether they are to bee prayed vnto. The laſt is ſimply denied, as afterward followeth to be ſhewed. Lib.de ſpiritual.luctamin. For the two firſt: 1. Of the Greeke Church, Ephrem ſaith, Angelos piorum orationibus cum gaudio occurrere,illiſque ineffabilem lætitiam eſſe ſanctorum orationes puriſſimas Deo afferre, That the Angels doe meete with the prayers of the godly,and that it is a great ioy vnto them to bring their pure prayers vnto God,&c. They do afferre, bring them as meſſengers,not *offerre,*offer or preſent them as Me-In 19.c.Matth. diators. Theophylact ſaith, forte pro nobis orant, perhaps they doe pray for vs,&c. he affirmeth it not certainly. They pray for vs in generall as wiſhing well vnto the elect, as their fellow ſeruants: as in Luke 2.14. their heauenly ſong they wiſh peace in the earth,and good will vnto men: but in particular that they offer vp our requeſts,we haue no warrant in Scripture.

2 Auguſtine of the Africane Church ſheweth, how the Angels carrie vp our prayers, as is before alleaged,to conſult or know his pleaſure about them. Origene of the Church of Alexandria granteth, that the Angels aſcend, vt hominum vota & preces perferant, &c. to carrie vp mens prayers and deſires: but they doe it not as Mediators: as he a little after ſaith, Vota & preces omnes & gratiarum actiones, ad Deum ſunt per angelum tranſmittenda, qui per pontificem, viuens verbum, & Deum, angelis eſt præfectus cæteris: id vero verbum ſumus deprecaturi: All our prayers, vowes, and thankſgiuings muſt be ſent vnto God by that Angell, which by the high Prieſt, by the liuing word, and God, is ſet ouer the reſt of the Angels: to this word will wee pray, &c. Hee maketh Chriſt the word, the chiefe of the Angels, the only Mediator of our prayers.

Lib.5.cont. Celſum.in initio.

3 Confeſſion of Wittemberg, chap.23. We confeſſe, that the Saints in heauen doe after their certaine manner pray for vs before God, as the Angels alſo are ioyfull for vs, and all the creatures doe after a certaine heauenly manner grone for our ſaluation: but as the worſhip or inuocation of creatures is not to be inſtituted vpon their gronings, ſo vpon the prayer of the Saints in heauen we may not allow the adoration of Saints, &c. They grant a generall deſire and care in the Angels and Saints, no particular mediation about our prayers.

Harm.ſect.1.45

4 And in this ſenſe ſaith Albinus of the Latine Church: that the Angels ad inſtar auium verba noſtra perferunt, like vnto birds doe carrie vp our words. And againe, hee would not haue one promiſe that which he cannot performe, non enim in ventum dicta tranſeunt, ſed à præſenti angelo ſtatim perferuntur ad Dominum: for our words are not vttered in the winde, but they are preſently carried by the Angell, that is preſent, vnto God, &c. The Angels then ſo report our prayers and good words, as they doe raſh and idle words, that is as meſſengers, not as Mediators.

In 10.cap.Eccleſ.

In 5.cap.Eccleſ.

AN APPENDIX OR THIRD PART OF THIS Queſtion, whether Angels or Saints know our hearts.

The Papiſts.

THe Angels and other celeſtiall ſpirits doe know our hearts and inward repentance: And betweene the Angels and the bleſſed ſoules of Saints, there is no difference in this caſe, the one being as highly exalted, and neere God, as the other, in whom and by whom onely they ſee and know our affaires: Luke 15.10. There is ioy in heauen, in the preſence of the Angels ouer one ſinner that repenteth: Ergo, they know our repentance: Rhemiſt. Luk. 15. ſect. 2.

*Anſw.*1. Our hearts and inward repentance are not knowne to the Angels, but by the fruits, and the true effects thereof.

2 Although the elect, after the reſurrection ſhall bee like in glorie to the Angels, yet it followeth not, that they ſhall be like in all things, much leſſe that their ſoules now in heauen, be in all things like vnto the Angels, whoſe preſence and miniſterie God vſeth in the preſeruation of his choſen.

3 That all things done in the world may be ſeene in God, as in a glaſſe, is but a prophane ſpeculation, and the deuice of an idle braine, Fulk. ibid.

*Argum.*2. Abraham had knowledge of things in earth, which were not in his time, as that they had Moſes and the Prophets bookes, which he neuer ſaw, Luke 16. verſ. 29. Rhemiſt.

Anſw. Firſt, in this narration many things are ſpoken parabolically, out of the which we muſt not ground any doctrine not taught elſewhere in Scripture: for you may as well ſay, that ſoules haue fingers and tongues, and that elemental water will quench hell fire, as that Abraham knew what bookes were written after his death.

Secondly, albeit that the doctrine of the Church comprehended in the Scriptures, might be reuealed to Abraham after his death, yet it followeth not, that he knew all things, as you affirme the Saints doe, by beholding the maieſtie of God.

The Saints therfore in heauen know ſo much as the Lord thinketh good to reueale vnto them, they know not all things.

The Proteſtants.

WE denie not, but that as Prophets and holy men in this life, may know many ſecret things reuealed vnto them by the ſpirit of God, as Peter found out the ſecret fraud of Ananias and Saphira: Elizeus being abſent found out Gehezi his corruption: yea, hee could tell what was done in the King of Syria his chamber: ſo the Lord may reueale vnto the Saints in heauen at his pleaſure, ſome things done vpon earth. But that they receiued any ſuch gift of God, to know all things done vpon earth, it is a great vntruth, and cleane contrarie to the Scriptures.

Firſt, Salomon ſaith in his prayer vnto God: Heare thou in heauen in thy dwelling place, and giue vnto euery man according to his waies, as thou knoweſt his heart: for thou onely knoweſt the hearts of all the children of men, 1. King. 8. 29. Out of this place we thus reaſon: He onely knoweth the heart, that is the iudge of all men, and a rewarder of them according to their waies: But the Lord only is iudge: Ergo. Againe, the words themſelues be plaine, that God only knoweth the heart: ſo that what knowledge of ſecrets the Saints haue, it is by reuelation, not by ſearching the heart.

1.King.8.29.

Againe, S. Paul ſaith, No man knoweth the things of man ſaue the ſpirit of man which is in him: ſo the things of God knoweth no man, but the ſpirit of God, 1. Cor. 1. 11. The Rhemiſts anſwere, that no man knoweth the ſecrets of the heart naturally, but by extraordinarie gift he may, as the Prophets did.

1.Cor.1.11.

Anſw. No man euer had or can haue a generall gift to know the heart,but when God ſeeth it good to reueale it: for otherwiſe the compariſon holdeth not. The ſpirit of God only knoweth the things of God: which alſo is giuen to men to know, but not by receiuing any gift to ſearch and looke into the nature and heart as it were of God (for then ſhould they know all the ſecrets of God, which neuer any did:) but only by reuelation of the ſpirit, which openeth Gods ſecrets vnto them, ſo farre as it is conuenient and needfull.

Euen after the ſame manner the ſpirit of God may reueale the ſecrets of the heart of man, not by giuing them a generall gift themſelues to looke into the heart, as into a glaſſe,but by reuealing ſuch things,when the Lord ſeeth it expedient.

Neither had the Prophets an inherent gift and dwelling in them,to know ſecrets, but the word of God was inſpired into them at times,as they had neede,as wee ſee in Nathan, 2.Sam.7.3.4. in Eliſha,2.King.2.15. in Iſaiah, 2.King.20.4. And though Paul was taken vp into heauen,and ſaw many ſecrets,yet he knew not all: for thus he ſaith of himſelfe, If I knew all ſecrets, 1.Cor.13.2. Ergo,no
1.Cor.13.2. man euer receiued this gift,to ſearch the heart: but it is proper vnto God, who will not giue his honour to another.

2. Auguſtine ſaith, Neſcire mortuos quid hic agatur dum hic agitur: That the dead know not what is done here, while it is in doing. But they vnderſtand either by relation of thoſe that depart this world,or elſe by the Angels; Non quidem omnia, ſed quæ ſinuntur indicare,&c. ſicut Prophetæ,&c. nec hic omnia cognoſcebant, ſed quæ illis eſſe reuelanda dei prouidentia iudicarat. de cura pro mort.c.15. Neither doe they know all things,but what God ſuffereth to be knowne; as neither did the Prophets know all things while they liued, but what God in his diuine prouidence thought good to reueale vnto them. I note out of this ſaying of Auguſtine three things.

Firſt,what great vncertaintie of opinion here is: How the dead ſhould come by the knowledge of humane affaires,the Papiſts think they haue it by Gods gift: otherwhile they ſay,they ſee all things in God, as in a cleere glaſſe. Auguſtine ſaith, they know them by the Angels, or by men newly departed this life: ſo that it appeareth to be but a meere conceit and imagination, that they haue any ſuch knowledge, whereof there is no ſurer ground. Secondly, Auguſtine ſaith,they know not things preſently done,but afterward,contrarie to the Papiſts. Thirdly,they know not all things,as the Prophets alſo did not, but what the Lord reuealeth vnto them; wherein alſo he is contrarie to our aduerſaries.

The holy Martyrs haue ſealed this truth: that God onely is the knower of the hearts, and that hee hath not giuen this honour to any other.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr: God knew all things before the beginning of the world,and is euery where to ſee,not only our outward dealing,but alſo all the ſecrets of all mens hearts,ſo that hee needeth no me-
Pag.1013.1.45. diator,to informe him of our deſires, pag.1109. But Angels and Saints were not from the beginning, neither are they euery where: Ergo,they know not our thoughts.

Paul Luther Confeſſor: Saints in heauen cannot helpe vs, neither know no more what men doe in Pag.949.2.45. this world, then a man in the North countrey knoweth what is done in the South countrey: pag.1040. col.2.

And further: 1. Chryſoſtome thinketh,that the Angels were ignorant of many things concerning the myſterie of the Goſpell,which they learned by the preaching of Iohn: for thus hee ſaith, He vtte-
Prologom in Ioan.Euang. reth no humane thing,but ſpeaketh out of the hid treaſure of the ſpirit: quæ neque Angeli, prinſquam hic diceret, nouerunt, which no not the Angels knew, before he ſpake them,&c. And to that purpoſe
Epheſ.3.10. he alleageth that place,Epheſ.3.10. That vnto principalities and powers may be knowne by the Church the manifold wiſedome of God: whereupon hee thus inferreth; Idcirco non parum honoris conſequimur quod nobiſcum Angeli diſcunt,quæ neſciunt: Wherefore it is no ſmall honour vnto vs, that the Angels together with vs doe learne the things which they know not.

Hom.8. in Geneſ. 2 Origen ſaith, Deo ſoli cognitum eſt propoſitum mentis, Angelis vero non: To God only is knowne the purpoſe of the heart,not vnto Angels.

3 Haymo of the Latine Church ſaith: Certum eſt quoſdam Angelos ignoraſſe aſcenſionem Christi
Super Pſal.23. donec viderent: It is certaine that ſome Angels were ignorant of the aſcenſion of Chriſt,vntill they ſaw it,&c.

If the Angels then were ignorant of many things belonging to the myſterie of mans redemption:
Annot. in 1.Sam.16.7. how is it like to be true, that they,or the glorified Saints ſhould know our cogitations by ſeeing God, in whom all things appeare? as our Doway Diuines note: for how could they be ignorant, if all things are to bee ſeene in God,of thoſe more neceſſarie things,which concerned mans ſaluation?

Harm.ſect.2. pag.37. 4 Confeſſion of Auſpurge,artic.21. This cuſtome aſcribeth vnto the dead an omnipotencie,in that the Saints ſhould ſee the motions of the heart: The ſame reaſon alſo may be giuen for the Angels not knowing of our thoughts.

THE

THE THIRD QVESTION CONCERNING THE worſhip of Angels, firſt in generall, then in particular, of Inuocation.

The Papiſts.

THey ſay that the diuine honour and adoration due vnto God alone, is not to be giuen to Angels: But there is a religious reuerence, honour and adoration, which is not to be denied to Angels and Saints, Rhem. annot. Apocalip. 19. ſect. 4. Hæreſ.7.

Argum. 1. Ioſua fell downe before the Angell and worſhipped, Ioſ. 5. Rhemiſt. ſo alſo they of Doway in their annot. there. Ioſ.5.14.

Anſw. Hee worſhipped not an Angell, but the Lord Chriſt himſelfe the captaine of the Lords armie; for it was a diuine worſhip: He is bid to put off his ſhooes, as Moſes was, when God appeared out of the firie buſh, Exod. 3. But a diuine worſhip (by your owne confeſſion) is due onely to God, Fulk. annot. Coloſſ. 2. 3. And thus Origen expoundeth this viſion: Homil. 6. in Ioſ. Ioſua non adoraſſet, niſi agnouiſſet Deum: &c. Ioſua would not haue adored him, if he had not knowne him to be God, for who elſe is the Prince of the armie of the power of God, but our Lord Ieſus Chriſt?

Argum. 2. 1. Timoth. 2. 21. I charge thee before God and the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and his elect Angels, that thou obſerue theſe things: Ergo, Angels may be adored and reuerenced, Rhemiſt. 1.Tim.2.21.

Anſw. Saint Paul maketh heere the Angels witneſſes of his waightie charge: ſo Moſes calleth heauen and earth to witneſſe, Deut. 30. 19. may we therefore conclude, that hee yeelded any religious worſhip to heauen and earth? Deut.30.19.

Our Doway men doe obiect the example of Balaam, Numb. 22. 31. how Balaam adored the Angell: He adored him, neither with diuine honour as God, nor ciuill, as a mortall man, but with a religious honour leſſe then the diuine, and more then ciuill: annot. vpon that place. Num.22.31.

Anſwere. 1. It is but a weake argument that is taken from the example of a ſuperſtitious man, a falſe Prophet, and Sorcerer, that was accuſtomed to proſtrate himſelfe vnto his ſpirits, whom hee inuocated: 2. But it may bee better anſwered, that this was no religious adoration, but an exceeding great reuerence, which hee yeeldeth to the Angell, ſuch as was that, which Nathan gaue vnto Dauid, hee bowed himſelfe vpon his face to the ground: where the ſame word in the Hebrew Shacab is vſed, which the Septuagint expreſſe by the word προσκυνεῖν, which ſignifieth as well ciuill as religious adoration. 1. King. 1. 23.

The Proteſtants.

AS for due reuerence, which is of loue, not of any ſeruice, there is no queſtion, but we ought to yeeld it vnto the Angels. But all religious ſeruice or worſhip is due onely to God, and whoſoeuer man or Angell, requireth, or receiueth any religious worſhip or ſeruice, vſurpeth that which is due vnto God. Fulk. Apocal. 19. ſect. 4.

Argum. 1. Apocal. 19. 10. and 22. 9. Iohn fell downe to worſhip the Angell: but the Angell ſuffered him not: See thou doe it not, (ſaith he) for I am thy fellow ſeruant, and of thy brethren, worſhip God: Ergo, Angels are not to be adored with any religious worſhip. Reuel.19,10. 22. 9.

Rhemiſt. Firſt, he forbiddeth him onely to worſhip him with diuine adoration.

Anſw. The words are generall: he ſaith not, worſhip God, with this kinde of ſeruice; but worſhip God: and the word there vſed, προσκυνεῖν properly ſignifieth in falling downe to worſhippe: by which word alſo Act. 10. 15. Cornelius manner of worſhipping Peter is expreſſed: vpon which place the Rhemiſts doe note, that euery falling downe to worſhip, is not diuine, or proper onely to God, and that Peter did refuſe it for humilitie ſake: the Angell then in this place refuſeth that falling downe, or worſhipping, which they ſay was giuen to Peter, and is not onely dew to God; and ſo doth Peter in the other place, not for humilitie, but alleaging he was a man, and therefore of pietie, becauſe he would not haue God robbed of his honour. Act. 10. 25.

Rhemiſt. Secondly, you ſay, that Iohn ſo worthie an Apoſtle was not ignorant of that point, that Angels were not to be worſhipped as God: we may reply alſo, that if Iohn had knowne that this other kinde of ſeruice was vnlawfull, he would not haue done it.

Anſw. Iohn ſinned not of ignorance, but of forgetfulneſſe, in this ecſtacie of his minde, while hee beheld the glory of the Angell, as likewiſe through his frailnes and forgetfulnes he committeth the like againe, cap. 22. which Iohn would not haue done, being once before admoniſhed, had hee not preſently forgotten himſelfe. But the other error of worſhipping the creature for the Creator, was too groſſe an error for the Apoſtle.

Rhemiſt. Thirdly, hee was deceiued in the perſon, taking the Angell for Chriſt, and therefore was not culpable at all in this fact, in giuing diuine honour to the Angell; for he ſinned onely materially not formally.

Anſw. Firſt, Iohn was not ignorant, that he was an Angell, and not Chriſt; for he ſaith, he was one of the ſeuen Angels that had the ſeuen vials. Secondly, though he ſinned of ignorance, yet was it a ſinne: for the Prophet, which beleeued the olde Prophet, ſinned grieuouſly, as it appeared by his puniſhment, though hee did it ignorantly, 1. King. 13. Wherefore it is a groſſe error of your

Schools-

Schoolemen that ſay, a man ſinneth not, if hee worſhippe the the deuill in ſhape of an Angell ignorantly.

Rhemiſt. Fourthly, the Angel would not receiue this worſhip at Iohns hand, whom he knew to be in great fauour with God, and greater then ſome Angell.

Anſw. Firſt, though hereafter the children of God ſhall be made equall to the Angels in glory, yet in this mortal life they muſt needs be inferiour, ſeeing Chriſt himſelf, in reſpect of his paſſion, was inferiour to the Angels, Heb. 2. 9. Secondly, the Angel would not haue taken this homage at any other mans hands beſide Iohns: for he giueth a reaſon, that hee is not onely his fellow ſeruant, but alſo of his brethren. So for all their ſhifts and cauils, we ſtrongly conclude by this example, that no religious honour ought to be giuen to Angels.

Seeing then none of theſe anſweres will ſerue their turne, Ioannes Baſilius the great peremptorie Duke of Muſcouia, ſhall helpe them with another, that propter humilitatem factum, it was done for humilitie ſake, that the Angell refuſed to be worſhipped, as Chriſt for the ſame cauſe, when hee was transfigured forbad his Apoſtles to tell it abroad, till he was riſen againe: Theolog. Muſco. c. 13.

Anſwere. 1. The Angell refuſeth to be worſhipped, as a thing due vnto him, as appeareth by his reaſon, worſhip thou God, &c. I am thy fellow ſeruant, he did not refuſe it then for humilitie, but of dutie, becauſe it belonged vnto God. 2. The other prohibition of Chriſts is not like: let them ſhew, where Chriſt for humilitie ſake refuſed to be worſhipped, as he was of many in the dayes of his fleſh, and they ſhall ſay ſomewhat.

Lib. 6. in Cant. Canticorum.

Here I will not conceale that priuate opinion of Beda, who writeth to this effect, that after the Angels perceiued that there God and Lord ſo loued mankinde, as that he became man for them, Hinc eſt, quod ante incarnationem eius, adorari ſe ab omnib. patienter ferrent, &c. Hereof it is, that before the incarnation of Chriſt they endured to be adored of men, but the Angell forbiddeth Iohn going about to worſhip him: But if adoration had beene due vnto them before, it ſhould not haue beene denied them after the comming of Chriſt, by whom the Angelicall order was eſtabliſhed and confirmed, not any way impaired: as the Apoſtle ſaith, that Chriſt by the blood of his croſſe hath ſet at peace the things in heauen and in earth: but let vs proceede to ſee the iudgement of more auncient times.

Colloſſ. 2. 20.

Honoramus Angelos, charitate non ſeruitute (ſaith Auguſtine) nec eis templa conſtruimus: We honour Angels with the duetie of loue, not of ſeruice, neither doe we build temples vnto them. And a litle before, Quod ergo colit ſummus Angelus, id colendum etiam eſt ab homine vltimo. That therefore which is worſhipped of the higheſt Angell, the man of loweſt degree ought alſo to worſhip, De vera religion. cap. 55. Ergo, no worſhip due to Angels, but all vnto God.

Adrian. 1. Epiſt. ad Conſtantin. Imperator. Qualis eſt iſte adorationis honor? profecto non alius, quam is, quo nos peccatores quoſque inuicem proſequimur, ſalutantes nos inter nos per honorationem & dilectionem: What maner of worſhippe is this (hee meaneth the reuerence to bee giuen to Angels and Saints) ſurely no other, then that, which we ſinners amongſt our ſelues doe giue to one another, by a mutuall ſalutation of honour and loue. The argument out of theſe words may be framed thus: No other worſhip is due to Angels and Saints, but that which we giue one to another: but that is no religious worſhip: Ergo, Your owne decrees alſo doe reckon the heretikes called Angelici in the number, becauſe they worſhippe Angels: decret. p. 2. cauſ. 24. qu. 3. c. 39. wherefore it is hereſie euen by your owne law to worſhip Angels.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr, ſheweth out of Auguſtine, that we ſhould worſhip no men departed, be they neuer ſo good, or holy, no nor yet no Angell, ne honour the ſame, but onely the imitation of them, following their good acts in our liuing: the Angels refuſe all honour, ſauing that which is called honor charitatis, that is to be loued, &c. Fox p. 1108. reſponſ. ad articul. 14.

And further. 1. Theodoret thus writeth vpon theſe words of Saint Paul, Coloſſians 2. 18. Let no man ſeduce you, &c. by the worſhipping of Angels: that they which defended the law, ad Angelos colendos inducebant, did induce men to worſhip Angels, &c. and therefore the Synode of Laodicea lege prohibuit, ne precarentur Angelos, did forbid by a law, that they ſhould not pray to Angels, &c.

Lib. 8. contra Celſum in principio.

1 Origene is very earneſt in this point againſt the adoration of Angels, writing againſt Celſus, who obiected thus: Qui dijs plurimis ſeruiat, &c. He that ſerueth many Gods, doth a thing acceptable vnto the great God, for honour cannot be giuen vnto any, Cui non ſit ab illo permiſſum, To whom he hath not permitted the ſame, &c. Hereunto Origene maketh this anſwere, that as the Lacedemonian Orators refuſed to adore the Perſian King, Vnum Dominum veriti, Lycurgi legem, worſhipping but one Lord, Lycurgus law, &c. Sic eorum qui pro Chriſto legantur, Chriſtus eſt Dominus, ſo Chriſt is their Lord, who are his Embaſſadors, &c. And againe, Vndenam tu id pateſeceris permiſiſſe Deum, vt honorib. iſti augeantur? Where can you ſhew, that God hath permitted, that theſe ſhould be honoured?

And further, he ſaith, Vnus nobis eſt placandus Deus, &c. There is but one God to be appeaſed and pacified of vs, if he will haue any beſide God to be appeaſed, let him know, that as the ſhadow followeth the body: ſo he which pacifieth the higheſt God, & eius amicos Angelos propitios habet, Hath alſo the Angels his friends fauourable.

Zaga Zabo the Æthiopian Biſhop profeſſeth thus: The Prophets, Apoſtles, Martyrs, Confeſſors, Cum ſanctiſſimis Dei Angelis veneror et honoro, pariq; modo omnes illorum ſectatores amplector et oſculor, Together with the holy Angels I worſhip and honour, and in like manner I embrace and kiſſe all their followers, &c. Hee giueth no other worſhip vnto Angels and Saints, then to their imitators and followers here in earth. Damianus a Goes.

3 Heluetia, latter confeſſion, c.5. We teach men to adore the true God alone, according to the commandement of our Lord, Thou ſhalt adore the Lord thy God, and him onely ſhalt thou ſerue. Harm. ſect.2. Math.4.10.

4 See before for the Latine Church, the teſtimonie of Adriane, and of the decrees.

THE SECOND PART, OF THE INVOcation of Angels.

The Papiſts.

THey hold, that is lawfull to direct our prayers vnto Angels, and that they can helpe and heare vs. Rhemiſt.Coloſſ.2.ſect.3. Hæreſ.8.

Angels are deputed for our protection (which is nothing, but aduocation.) Dan.10.13. Matth.18.10. Rhemiſt.annot.1.Iohn 2.ſect.5. Dan.10.13. Matth.18.10.

Anſwere. Firſt, the argument followeth not: for the Angels at the appointment of God, may ſerue for our protection and defence, though they bee not aduocates for vs, to obtaine remiſſion of our ſinnes. Secondly, the places alleaged proue no ſuch aduocation of Angels, but onely defence and protection. Dan.10.13. The Angell was readie at the firſt prayers of Daniel, but hee was letted a while. Thisproueth, that Angels may know our prayers when it pleaſeth God, and bee miniſters of his helpe vnto vs, which wee denie not: not that they are our aduocates. And concerning the other place in Matthew our Sauiour onely ſaith, That their Angels doe behold the face of his father; That is to know his pleaſure, and what ſeruice God will command them for the good of his Church: this text maketh nothing for the aduocation of Angels, So then theſe two Scriptures doe ſet forth two offices of the Angels: the one their deſcending from heauen, Dan.10.13. the other their aſcending to heauen: Matth.18.10. Like as Iacob ſaw the Angels deſcending and aſcending vpon the ladder, Geneſ.28. which ſignifieth their miniſteriall protection of vs, not an Imperiall aduocation: vnleſſe they will ſay, that the Angels alſo are Chriſtes aduocates, for vpon him they are ſaid to aſcend and deſcend, Iohn 1.51. And further, what is ſignified by the aſcending and deſcending of the Angels, Bernard hath very well expreſſed in this ſentence: Aſcenſio & deſcenſio via Angelorum, &c. Aſcending and deſcending is the way of the Angels: They aſcend for themſelues, and deſcend for vs; they aſcend for contemplation, they deſcend vnto vs for compaſſion; they aſcend to behold his face, deſcend at his becke: in Pſalm.90.Serm.11. Wherefore they aſcend to know Gods pleaſure, they deſcend to doe Gods pleaſure, this ſheweth their ſeruice and miniſtrie, not their aduocation or maieſtie: the argument then followeth not at all, they are our protectors, Ergo, our aduocates. Iohn 1.51.

And whereas the Rhemiſts in the ſame place would proue the aduocation of Angels by the Collect vſed in our Church vpon S. Michaels day, which is this: That they which doe thee alwaies ſeruice in heauen, may by thy appointment ſuccour and defend vs in earth: Who ſeeth not, what beggerly ſhifts they are driuen to vſe, ſeeing that this prayer maketh nothing at all for the aduocation or inuocation of Angels, but onely their protection and preſeruation.

Argum.2. Apoc.8.verſ.3. I ſaw another Angell, that came and ſtoode before the altar hauing a golden cenſer, and much odours were giuen vnto him, to offer with the praiers of the Saints vpon the golden altar, &c. From this place the Rhemiſts conclude that Angels doe offer our praiers to God, Rhemiſt. in hunc locum.

Anſwere. Firſt, though the Angels ſhould report vnto God our praiers, as the reſt of our affaires, which they ſee done (which miniſterie of theirs notwithſtanding in preſenting of our praiers, hath no direct warrant out of Scripture) yet it followeth not that we ſhould inuocate them, for the Saints in earth doe inuocate God for vs, yet are not to bee inuocated by vs. Secondly, if in this place wee ſhould vnderſtand any of the Angels to bee the preferrer of our praiers, yet they doe it not by their owne merite, but by the merite and ſweet ſauour of the death of Chriſt, which are the ſweet odours added to the praiers of the Saints: Thirdly, this place is better expounded of Chriſt himſelfe, who is the Angell, that offereth vp our praiers, as S. Auguſtine in his Commentarie vpon this text.

Argum.3. Our Doway diſputers, proue the protection and inuocation of Angels out of that place, Gen.48.16. The Angel, &c.

Anſwere. See before Error 4. where it is anſwered, that this Angell was Chriſt, with whom Iacob wreſtled, Gen.32.

The Proteſtants.

THat Angels are not to be worſhipped, nor inuocated, as mediators, interceſſors, or aduocates, the Scripture ſpeaketh euidently.

Argum.1. Coloſſ.2.18. Let no man beguile you in the humbleneſſe and worſhipping of Angels: Ergo, it is not lawfull to pray vnto them, or to worſhip them. Coloſſ.2.18.

Rhemiſt. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh here againſt the wicked doctrine of Simon Magus, that affirmed that the Angels both ill and good, were mediators for vs vnto God; and againſt the ſuperſtition of the Iewes, that worſhipped the Angels by whom the law was giuen.

Anſw. The Apoſtle condemneth both theſe ſuperſtitions, as likewiſe the popiſh inuocation of Angels: becauſe all will-worſhip is forbidden, which is not after the preſcript of Gods word, Coloſ. 2.23. Out of which place we reaſon thus, all will-worſhip is forbidden: but all worſhip of Angels is a will-worſhip, Ergo, all worſhip of Angels is forbidden: that which the Apoſtle calleth, verſ.18. θρησκείαν, the worſhip of Angels, verſ.23. he termeth ἐθελοθρησκείαν, will-worſhip, which is inuented by man, and not warranted by the word. Coloſ.2.23.

And that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh againſt the adoration euen of good Angels, Theodoret vpon that place ſheweth, making mention of their Oratories, dedicated vnto S. Michael, which were to be ſeene vnto that day: and their opinion was, Per Angelos diuinam beneuolentiam conciliari, That the diuine fauour muſt be obtained by Angels.

*Argum.*2. If any man ſinne (ſaith the Apoſtle) wee haue an aduocate with the Father Ieſus Chriſt the iuſt, he is the propitiation for our ſinnes, Iohn.2.2. Ergo, Chriſt onely is our aduocate. Iohn 2.2.

Rhemiſt. Chriſt is our aduocate in the higheſt degree, becauſe by himſelfe, and his owne merits, without the aſſiſtance of any other, hee obtaineth pardon for vs. The other, as Angels and Saints, are as ſecondarie interceſſors, that obtaine not any thing by their owne merits, but onely through Chriſt.

Anſw. Firſt, he onely and properly is an aduocate that can pleade the iuſtice of his Clients cauſe, which euery one that prayeth for vs cannot doe: for though the Angels and Saints departed ſhould pray for vs (which we know not by the Scriptures) as our brethren vpon earth doe, yet ſhould they not be mediators and aduocates, but petitioners and intreators for vs.

Secondly, we gather many ſtrong arguments out of this place, for the ſole ſufficient aduocation of Chriſt. Firſt, the ſonne is the beſt and onely ſufficient aduocate with the father; therefore where wee may haue free and bold acceſſe to the Sonne, Heb.4.16. what neede haue wee of the ſeruants helpe? Secondly, he is the onely aduocate that is iuſt and righteous before God: ſo onely is Chriſt, the Angels are imperfect in his ſight, Iob 4.18. Ergo. Thirdly, he muſt be our aduocate that is alſo the propitiation for our ſinnes; Ergo, onely Chriſt. Heb 4.16. Iob.4.18.

Auguſtine ſaith, Angelos quos nos colimus dicitis, &c. utinam illos coleretis, facile ab illis disceretis illos non colere: But yee will ſay yee worſhip not images but Angels as we call them: I would you did truly worſhip and reuerence them: for you ſhould ſoone learne of the Angels, not to worſhip the Angels. In Pſal. 96. And Bernard alſo thus writeth vpon theſe words of the Apoſtle, Heb.1. are they not all miniſtring ſpirits? Plane miniſtri noſtri, non Domini noſtri: They are our miniſters, not our Maſters or Lords: *In Pſal.*90.*ſerm.*11. If not our Lords, then not to be worſhipped.

*Synod. Moguntin. cap.*45. Sancti &c. Velut corporis Chriſti nobiliſſima membra, eo ſocietatis & dilectionis cultu a nobis honorari debent; quo in hac vita a nobis ſancti homines coli poſſunt: Saints, which haue happily ended this life, as the moſt noble members of Chriſts body, muſt be honoured with the worſhip of loue and brotherly fellowſhip, as holy men in this life may be honoured, &c. But wee doe not make our prayers vnto men, though neuer ſo holy vpon earth: Ergo, neither ought we to pray to Angels or Saints in heauen.

We will adde the ſeale of the holy Confeſſors and Martyrs: Certaine godly Chriſtians were perſecuted in the dioceſſe of Lincolne, for denying to pray to Saints, ſaying; What neede wee goe to the feete, when we may goe to the head? anno.1521. Fox pag.826.col.2.

Claudius Monerius, who ſuffered for the truth at Lyons, anno 1551. being asked whether Saints were not to be inuocated, anſwered, They cannot pray without faith, and therefore it is in vaine to call vnto them, pag.905. col.1. The reaſon ſtandeth thus, It is in vaine to pray to them, that cannot pray for vs (ſeeing by our aduerſaries confeſſion, Saints onely helpe vs by their prayer, and mediation to God, not by any helpfull power in themſelues) but neither the Angels nor Saints can pray for vs, becauſe they haue no faith (which gift is now with them ceaſed) and without faith no prayer is acceptable; Ergo, it is needleſſe to pray to them. Pag.826.1.20.

Francis Rebezies martyred at Paris, anno 1558. thus reaſoneth againſt inuocation of Angels and Saints; Saint Iohn ſaith, 1.Epiſt.5.verſ.14. This is the truſt wee haue in him, that if wee demand any thing after his will, hee will heare us: We muſt doe and pray therefore according to Gods will, not after our owne: But it is not Gods will that wee ſhould pray vnto any ſuch, either Angell or Saint; for no ſuch commandement is giuen in his word, where his will onely is to be ſeene, Ergo. 1.Iohn 5.14. Pag.842.1.2.

1 Further, it ſeemeth not to haue beene the vſe of the Greeke Church in Damaſcenes time to inuocate Angels: for hee ſaith, Let vs proceede to handle ſome few things deliuered out of the Scriptures, ἐπικαλεσάμενοι, hauing called vpon the Father, Saints, and holy Ghoſt: Hee calleth vpon no other, and afterward he ſeemeth to giue a reaſon thereof, becauſe euen the Angels are ſubiect to alteration and change, and diuers waies to be moued. Damaſcen. lib 1. de fid. c. [illegible] him, which is ſufficient for all things, and ruleth all, by him, who is our ſaluation, euen the Sonne of God and the word, &c. And a little after: we will ſhew, Non eſſe Iudaicæ conſuetudinis cœlum colere, vel qui in eo ſunt Angelos, ſed quorundam Iudaicos ritus præuaricantium: That it is not the Iewes cuſtome to worſhip the heauen, or the Angels therein, but of certaine tranſgreſſing the Iewiſh rights, &c. And in another place: Deo omnib. præſidenti per vnigenitum filium ſupplices vota offerimus, &c. quando quidem noſtrorum ſit ille delictorum propitiatio, vt tanquam pontifex, &c. circa Deum igitur omnis noſtra fides: Wee humbly offer our prayers to GOD the ruler of all by his onely begotten Sonne, &c. Seeing hee is the propitiation of our ſinnes, that as our high Prieſt hee may offer vp our prayers: therefore all our faith is toward God, &c. His reaſons are theſe: becauſe Chriſt is the propitiation for our ſinnes, our onely high Prieſt, and God is the obiect onely of our faith, prayer being a worke of faith, muſt onely be directed toward him. The ſame author bringeth to light the groſſe fancies of the heretikes called Ophiani, that made ſeuen Angels as the Porters and keepers of ſeuen gates, whom they called Oræus, Elabion, Aſtaphaon, Sabaoth, Iabo, Ialdabaoth, Iadim: And they pray to euery of them, Tu interceſſor adeſto, You (the keeper of ſuch a gate) be my interceſſour, but theſe things he ſaith, were à Chriſtiana doctrina aliena contrarie to Chriſtian doctrine, &c. Behold then this ſuperſtitious inuocation of Angels came from the Ophiane heretikes.

3 Confeſſ. of Heluetia the latter. c. 5. Seeing it is written how ſhall they call on him, vpon whom they haue not beleeued, and wee doe beleeue in God alone, therefore wee call vpon him onely, and that through Chriſt.

Harm. ſect. 2. pag. 21.

4 Whereas the Rhemiſts, as before is ſhewed, doe vrge that place, Apocal. 8. 3. How much odours were giuen to the Angell, to offer with the prayers of the Saints. Viega a Ieſuite, ſaith the Angell, is interpreted to be Chriſt, and the Incenſe is the prayers of the Elect: Nam per Chriſtum Mediatorem omnia munera noſtra Deo patri mittimus, For through Chriſt our Mediator wee ſend all our gifts to God the father.

Viega commentar. in Apocal. 8.

THE NINTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING SAINTS DEPARTED.

THis Controuerſie hath two parts: firſt, of thoſe that being departed ſuffer ſome puniſhment after this life. Secondly, of thoſe that are ſtraight receiued to ioy in heauen. The firſt part hath two queſtions: firſt, of the place of darkneſſe, where the faithfull remained till the comming of Chriſt, as the Papiſts imagine. Secondly, of Purgatorie.

THE FIRST QVESTION OF LIMBVS PATRVM, where the Patriarkes were imagined to be.

The Papiſts.

THey haue deuiſed and imagined in their wandring conceit foure infernall and ſubterreſtriall places, Hell, Purgatorie, Limbus infantium, where children remaine dying without Baptiſme, and Limbus Patrum, where the Fathers were before Chriſts comming. Theſe places they diſtinguiſh three waies: Firſt, by the ſituation: Hell is loweſt, Purgatorie is next, Limbus infantium in the third place, Limbus Patrum vppermoſt. Secondly, they differ in meaſure of puniſhment, ſome of them haue pœnam damni, and pœnam ſenſus, a double puniſhment, both of loſſe, in that they are excluded heauen, and of paine alſo, as Hell, and Purgatorie: the other two Limbi, are but dungeons of darkneſſe onely, where they ſuffer no other ſmart or paine, but are onely abſent from God. Thirdly, they differ in time and continuance, ſay they, Hell and the dungeon of children ſhall abide for euer: but Purgatorie and the dungeon of the Fathers are temporall: the one, that is, Limbus Patrum, is many yeeres agoe diſſolued, and Purgatorie alſo ſhall ceaſe, ſay they, at the comming of Chriſt, Bellarm. de Purgat. lib. 2. cap. 6.

Hæreſ. 9.

This then is their opinion, that the Patriarkes and Prophets before Chriſts comming were not in heauen, but were kept in an infernall place of darkneſſe, yet without paine, and were deliuered by Chriſts deſcending into hell, Bellarm. de Chriſti anima, lib. 4. cap. 11. Rhemiſt. Heb. 9. 8.

Argum. 1. Heb. 11. 40. God prouiding a better thing for vs, that they without vs ſhould not be perfect. That is, (ſay the Rhemiſts) the Fathers of the law could not be admitted to the ioyes of heauen, till the Apoſtles and other of the new law, were aſſociate with them, and a way made into heauen by the death and aſcenſion of Chriſt, Rhemiſt.ibid. the ſame place is vrged by the Doway Tranſlaters, in their annotations vpon Geneſis, cap.7 pag.31.

Anſ. Firſt, by this reaſon the Patriarkes could not enter into heauen before the death of the Apoſtles, if there were no entrance found, vnleſſe they were aſſociate with them. Secondly, if the way were not opened before Chriſts aſcenſion, then the Patriarkes could not aſcend before, where were they then all thoſe 40.daies? for they were deliuered out of Limbus Patrum before Chriſts reſurrection. Thirdly, there is therefore no ſuch meaning of this place: but it is to bee vnderſtood of the reſurrection, when as all the elect ſhall be conſummate together, and enter bodie and ſoule into heauen. Fulk.

Thus doth Bernard expound this place, Acceperunt iam ſinguli ſtolas, ſed non veſtientur duplicibus donec veſtiamur & nos, Deo melius aliquid prouidente pro nobis, vt non ſine nobis conſummarentur: All of them that are departed, (he meaneth the Saints) haue receiued their ſtoles or ſingle garments, but they ſhall not be cloathed with double, vntill we alſo be apparrelled, God prouiding better things for vs: that is, in the reſurrection we ſhall all receiue this double rayment, we ſhall be perfited in bodie and ſoule.

After the ſame manner doth this Father expound that place, Apocal.6.9. how the ſoules cried vnder the Altar: A labore requieſcunt, qui in Domino moriuntur; ſed non requieſcunt interim à clamore, ſub throno Dei clamant animæ occiſorum, quia nihil etſi habent, quod moleſtet, nondum habent totum tamen, quod delectet: In die Palmar.ſerm.3. They reſt from their labour that die in the Lord: but they reſt not from crying: The ſoules of the ſlaine crie vnder the throne of God, becauſe though they haue nothing that doth moleſt them; yet they haue not all, that may delight them, &c. Neither of theſe places then can be vnderſtood of the Patriarkes in Limbo: for they could not be without ſome moleſtation in that dungeon of darkeneſſe. In ſolennitat. Sanct.Ser.3.

Biſhop Ridley agreeth with Bernard in the expoſition of the former place: God did prouide better for vs, that they without vs, &c. They tarrie now for vs vndoubtedly, longing for the day: but they are commanded yet to haue patience, vntill the number of their fellow ſeruants be fulfilled: Fox page 1784. He vnderſtandeth the glorious conſummation of the Saints in the reſurrection.

Zach.9.11. Argum.2. Zacharie 9.11. I haue looſed thy priſoners out of the pit, where there is no water: That is out of Limbus Patrum, Bellarm.de Chriſti anima.lib.4.cap.11.

De ciuitat.Dei lib.18.cap.35. Anſw. Auguſtine giueth a cleane contrarie ſenſe of the place, by the pit without water he vnderſtandeth, Humanæ miſeriæ ſiccam profunditatem & ſterilem, vbi non ſunt fluenta iuſtitiæ, ſed iniquitatis lutum: The drie and barren dungeon of humane miſerie, where there are no ſprings of iuſtice, but the puddle and mire of iniquitie: That is, the Prophet ſpeaketh of the deliuerance of the people from their cruell and vniuſt bondage and captiuitie.

1.Pet.3.19. Argum.3. 1.Pet.3.19. In the which ſpirit he alſo went and preached vnto the ſpirits that were in priſon, which ſometime had been diſobedient in the daies of Noah. This place prooueth euidently (ſaith Bellarmine) that Chriſt deſcended in ſoule into hell: and deliuered the fathers from thence, De Chriſti anima.lib.4.13.

Anſw. The place can haue no ſuch meaning: Firſt, by the ſpirit here the humane ſoule of Chriſt cannot be vnderſtood, but his diuine power: For Chriſt went and preached in that ſpirit, by the which he was quickned, as the text is: but he was not quickned or reſtored to life by his humane ſoule, but by his diuine power his ſoule was ioyned againe to his bodie. Auguſtine alſo giueth another reaſon, why he cannot be ſaid to be quickned or made aliue in ſpirit, that is, in his ſoule: for then hee muſt haue died before in ſoule. But, Mors animæ peccatum eſt, à quo ille immunis fuit: But the death of the ſoule is ſinne, from the which Chriſt was free.

Bellarmine ſaith, that by the ſpirit not Chriſts diuinity but his ſoule muſt be vnderſtood, becauſe it cannot bee ſaid properly of his diuine nature, that it went or came to a place, as it may be ſaid of his ſoule: Bellarm.ibid.

Contra. 1. If the Ieſuite will ſtand ſo much vpon proper ſpeaking, neither can the ſoule be ſaid properly to goe, or come, which betoken an action and geſture of the bodie. 2. But to ſpeake according to the phraſe of Scripture, he cannot bee ignorant, how that the Scripture ſpeaking to our capacitie, doth aſcribe ſuch humane actions vnto God: as the ſpirit is ſaid to mooue vpon the waters, Gen.1.1. God is ſaid to walke in Paradiſe, Geneſ.3.3. Yet more vſually in the Goſpell the actions of the humanitie are ſometimes attributed to the Godhead of Chriſt, becauſe of the neere vniting and coniunction of them in one perſon: as Iohn 3.13. Chriſt is ſaid to deſcend from heauen, which was his Godhead onely, for his fleſh as yet had not aſcended. 4. This phraſe is neither ſtrange nor vnuſuall, to ſay that Chriſt went in ſpirit, or the ſpirit of Chriſt went, ſeeing Noah went in the ſpirit of Chriſt: that is attributed to the worker, which was done by the inſtrument: as whatſoeuer the Prophets did in times paſt, the Lord is ſaid to doe it, &c. Geneſ 1.1. Geneſ.3.8. Iohn 3.13.

2.Sam.8.2. Act.7.19. Againſt Bellarmine anſwereth, that it is not vnuſuall in Scripture, to ſay that is quickened, which died not, as 2.Samuel 8.2. Dauid is ſaid to meaſure Moab with two coards, one to kill them by, another to quicken them: and Acts 7.19. Pharao is ſaid to caſt out their infants, ne viuificarentur, that they ſhould not bee quickened; that is, remaine aliue: ſo in this place the ſpirit, that is, the ſoule of Chriſt is ſaide to bee quickened, becauſe it remained aliue, and could not bee killed.

Contra. Firſt, the ſame word is not read in the places alleaged, which Saint Peter vſeth here: in the firſt place, the word is ζωγρεῖν, as the Septuagint tranſlate, which ſignifieth, to raiſe or reſtore to life: in the other place the word is ζωογονεῖν, which betokeneth to grow vp or proſper, as plants doe; but the word vſed by Saint Peter is deriued from the word ζωοποιεῖν, which is to make aliue, and the right Latine thereof is viuifico, I doe reuiue, and I am reuiued, which is more then to reſtore one to the hope of life, as Dauid did the Moabites, which otherwiſe were as dead men, or to remaine aliue, which Pharao would not ſuffer the infants to doe. Secondly, the examples are not alike, for they are ſaid to be reuiued, becauſe they might die, though they died not; but the ſoule cannot die: wherefore vnleſſe he can ſhew out of Scripture, that ſome thing is ſaid to be reuiued or quickned, that neither doth nor can die, hee ſaith nothing; but neither hath hee, nor yet can produce any ſuch example out of Scripture.

Secondly, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh only of thoſe which were incredulous and diſobedient, not of the faithfull, ſuch as the Patriarkes were and Prophets. Yea (ſaith Bellarmine) they might be vnbeleeuers at the firſt, but after repented before they dyed.

Anſwere. 1. Neither doe we thinke, that all periſhed euerlaſtingly that died in the waters, as namely Infants, which were not capable of Noahs preaching, and ſo were not diſobedient to it: but for the reſt, ſo many as were diſobedient, were depriued of life and ſaluation, as S. Peter ſaith: God ſpared not the olde world. 2.Pet.2.5. 2. Neither is it like that any called incredulous or diſobedient repented before they died: for then they ſhould not haue beene numbred among incredulous perſons: God doth diſcerne euery man according to that ſtate wherein hee endeth his life, and the Lord findeth him. His tranſgreſſions that he hath done ſhall not be mentioned. Ezech.18.22. 3. And if any had a kinde of repentance, it was not in truth, as Chryſoſtome ſaith of the rich man: Tormenta cogunt agere pænitentiam non mentis affectus: Torments made them repent, not the affection of their minde. Hom.de Lazar.in Luc.16. 4. They then which were incredulous and died in the waters, periſhed in their ſinne, as Auguſtine ſaith: ſicut modo qui non crediderunt Euangelio, &c. Epiſt.99. They which haue not beleeued the Goſpell now, are like vnto them, which beleeued not then, while the Arke was preparing: and they which now beleeue and are baptized, are like to thoſe which then were ſaued in the Arke, &c.

Thirdly, the text ſaith not, he went and deliuered, but went & preached: for Auguſtine calleth it an abſurd thing to thinke, that the Goſpell was preached to them that were dead, which in their life time were incredulous: for if the Goſpell be preached in hell (ſaith he) it would follow that it is not neceſſarie it ſhould be preached here in the world, if men when they are dead, may heare it, and be conuerted. And againe, it would enſue (ſaith he) that there ſhould be a Church in hell: for where the word is preached, there is a Church. Wherefore he concludeth, that it muſt needs be vnderſtood of Noah his preaching in the ſpirit and power of Chriſt: Arcæ fabricatio, prædicatio quædã fuit: The building of the Arke was a kinde of preaching. Epiſtol.99. So alſo Beza well expoundeth that place. 1.Pet.4.6. The Goſpell was preached to the dead, Intelligimus eos, qui tum quidem, cum illis prædicaretur Euangelium, viuiſrant, nunc vero cum iſtud dicitur mortui, &c. We vnderſtand thoſe which then were aliue, when the Goſpell was preached, but now, when this was ſpoken, were dead: annot. in hunc locum. And theſe two reaſons he giueth of this interpretation. 1. Becauſe in the ſame ſenſe, in the verſe before going the Lord is ſaid, to be readie to iudge both the quicke and the dead, which are now dead, but then ſhall be aliue, as thoſe are ſaid to be dead, which ſometime were aliue. 2. The preaching which they imagine is not to their bodies, for they are ſenſeleſſe, but to their ſoules, which are aliue and not dead. 3. Hereunto may the third reaſon be added, becauſe the Apoſtle ſheweth the end of this preaching to be the mortification of the fleſh, as it followeth, That they might be iudged according to men in the fleſh, but might liue according to God in the ſpirit: but this mortification of the fleſh and ſanctification of the ſpirit, cannot be wrought when men are dead.

Bellarmine vnderſtandeth, by iudging in the fleſh, their outward periſhing in the water, which was as their condemnation in mans iudgement, yet they ſhould liue in the ſpirit, their ſoules ſhould bee ſaued. Lib.4.de Chriſt.anim. c.13.dico præterea.

Contra. 1. But when the fleſh and ſpirit are oppoſed in Scripture, the one ſignifieth the corrupt nature of man, which muſt be mortified; the other the regenerate part, which is quickened and ſanctified. And ſo the two parts of our regeneration are here ſignified, as it may be explaned by the like place, 1. Corinth. 5.5. That hee be deliuered to Sathan for the deſtruction of the fleſh, that the ſpirit may be ſaued in the day of the Lord Ieſus. Thus Beza, and before him Beda interpret this place: So great deſire (ſaith Beda here) hath God to mortifie vs in the fleſh, and to quicken vs in the ſpirit, that hee commanded to preach the word of faith to them alſo, which haue beene wrapped in great crimes, and are worthie to be named among the dead. Where although by the dead he vnderſtand thoſe, which were dead in ſinne, yet he will haue this preaching made to men while they liued, to teach them mortification, and therein agreeth with Beza and vs.

Fourthly, the text is not, that were in priſon, but doth better beare this ſenſe, that are: The words in the originall are theſe: τοῖς ἐν φυλακῇ πνεύμασι, ſpiritibus in carcere, to the ſpirits in priſon: the participle here to be ſupplied in the Greeke οὖσι, in Latine exiſtentibus, is properly of the preſent tenſe, and ſignifieth being: and common vſe of ſpeech will giue it rather to be vnderſtood of the preſent time, then of the time paſt: as if I ſhould ſay, the man in the houſe, or in the priſon, who would not thinke that I meane one now being in the houſe, rather then one that was in the houſe and now is not? So the Apoſtles meaning is this, that they which were incredulous & diſobedient in time paſt, when Noah in the ſpirit of Chriſt, or Chriſt by his ſpirit in Noah preached to the world, were then deſtroyed in the flood, and now for their incredulitie are puniſhed in the priſon of hell. And thus Auguſtine in euery point vnderſtandeth this text, of Noah his preaching to the olde world in the ſpirit of Chriſt, ſaying that by the priſon he vnderſtandeth their mortall bodies, while they liued. Bellarmine taketh paines at large to confute Auguſtines expoſition, becauſe it commeth neere vnto ours: ſo well theſe men agree with antiquitie, whereof notwithſtanding they make great boaſt. And not onely Auguſtine ſo vnderſtands this place of Peter, but Beda alſo ioyneth with him: He which in our time comming in the fleſh, preached the way of life to the world, euen he himſelfe alſo came before the flood, and preached vnto them, which then were vnbeleeuers, and liued carnally: for euen by his holy ſpirit was in it Noe, &c.

Argum. 4. I will for a ſupply to the Romaniſts weake arguments, adde our Doway tranſlators reaſons for their ſuppoſed Limbus.

Gen.37.35. 1 Iacob ſaith, I will deſcend vnto my ſonne into hell mourning, Geneſ. 37. 35. Iacob meant not the graue, for he ſuppoſed his ſonne to be deuoured by a wilde beaſt, and not buried in a graue, &c. annot. vpon that place.

Numb.35.25. 2 He that fled to the Citie of refuge, was to tarie there, vntill the high Prieſt, &c. doe die: Numb. 35. 25. Miſtically this ſignified, that the way to true life was not opened before Chriſts death.

Iohn 24.30. 3 Ioſua is ſaid to be buried, Iohn. 24. 30. but not to bee mourned for, as was Aaron and Moſes; that is, in the law was deſcent to hell, called Limbus, in the Goſpell is paſſage to Paradiſe: annotat. ibid.

Pſal.16. 4. Dauid expreſly ſignifieth an higher place called Hell, ſaying, Pſalme 15. in the perſon of Chriſt to his father: Thou ſhalt not leaue my ſoule in hell, from whence Chriſt deliuered the holy Patriarkes, &c. reſting without ſenſible paine, and brought them to heauen, whether none before him could: annot. p. 7 11.

5 I am the onely childe of my parents, I may bring their olde age with ſorrow to hell, ſaith young Tobie, chap. 6. 15. that is, ſay our Doway Commentors, into the place where good ſoules reſted, none hauing acceſſe then into heauen: annot. ibid.

Iob.17.13. 6 Iob 17. 13. Hell is my houſe, and in darkneſſe haue I made my bed, &c. This place alſo they vnderſtand of Limbus, the higheſt place of hell, p. 203.

Hebr.9.8. 7 Heauen was not open to any Saint before Chriſts paſſion: Heb. 9. 8. annot. Leuit. 16. verſ. 2. in the margen.

Gen.42.38. Anſwere. 1. Iacob meaneth the graue, for ſo the word Sheol alſo ſignifieth: as he ſaith Geneſ. 42. verſ. 38. You ſhall bring my hoarie haires with ſorrow to the graue, not to hell, as they tranſlate: for hell is no place for hoarie haires: To helpe out here, they giue this ſenſe, mine hoarie haires, that is, Mine olde age, or me an olde man: but hell is the place onely of ſoules, which are neither young nor olde: and we muſt make Iacobs words true, that his hoarie haires went to that place indeede: but to hell no bodies yet goe. The reſt is a meere cauill, for though Iacob ſuppoſed his ſonne to be deuoured of wilde beaſts, yet he knew he was corrupted: And what is the graue elſe but the place of corruption:

Iob.17.13. as Iob ſaith, I ſhall make the graue my houſe: And then he addeth: I ſhall ſay to corruption, thou art my father: Neither was Iacob ſure his owne body ſhould be buried: but hee knew it ſhould fall to corruption.

2 Such deuiſed Allegories proue not: and the true myſticall ſenſe is, that as the partie that had offended was ſet at libertie after the high Prieſts death: ſo by the death of Chriſt our true high Prieſt, we haue deliuerance from our ſinnes.

3 Neither is mention made in the ſame place, verſ. 33. that they mourned for Eleazar, whoſe death and buriall is there expreſſed: therefore by the omitting to ſpeake of mourning for Ieſua, no ſuch thing is inſinuated: and thinke you then, that Moſes, whom the Iſraelites mourned for, went to hell to a place of darkneſſe? Whence came he then, when he appeared in ſuch ſhining brightneſſe and great glorie with Chriſt in mount Tabor: was hee ſuddenly drawne out of that darke dungeon, and by and by plunged there againe? What groſſe and abſurd conceites are theſe of thoſe bleſſed Saints? is it to be thought, that he whoſe face ſhined while hee liued like the Sunne, was as darke as pitch in his ſoule, when he was dead.

4 Saint Peter knew Dauids minde better, then ſuch giddie Gloſſe-makers: he ſaith, verſ. 31. That Dauid ſpake of Chriſts reſurrection, which is out of the graue, not from hell: And verſ. 24. He looſed the ſorrowes of hell, as their vulgar tranſlation readeth. The hell that Chriſt went to, hee looſed the ſorrowes of by their owne Text: but in this hell, they ſay, there is no ſenſible paine, and therefore no ſorrow to be looſed.

5 They muſt bring better Scripture, then Tobies booke, to proue a point of beleefe, as they make this to be: yet the place may receiue the ſame anſwere, which was made to the firſt: ſoules haue no old age, that goe to hell, but bodies.

6 There was corruption, and wormes in the hell, that Iob went vnto: I ſhall ſay to corruption (ſaith he)

he) thou art my father, and to the wormes, ye are my mother and ſiſters: wormes are in the graue, not in hell. How blinde are thoſe Doway deuiſers, that they can ſee nothing?

The words of the Apoſtle are theſe: Whereby the holy Ghoſt this ſignified, that the way to the holieſt of all was not yet opened, while as yet the firſt Tabernacle was ſtanding, &c. The meaning of the Apoſtle is, that by force and vertue of the ſacrifices offered vnder the law, the Tabernacle yet ſtanding, the way to heauen was not opened: but by the blood of Chriſt, which hath made a way vnto all beleeuers into the kingdome of heauen, ſince the world began: and this appeareth to be the meaning by the words following, which only ſtood in meats and drinks, and diuers waſhings & carnall rites: the compariſon is not then of the times, but of the things: a way was opened the, but not by the things then in vſe, which were not able to purge the conſcience. And yet it is true alſo comparatiuely, in reſpect of the times, that the way was not opened for actuall entrance into perfect glorie both in bodie and ſoule, vntill Chriſt came, who was the firſt, that in bodie and ſoule tooke poſſeſſion of perfect glorie in heauen.

The Proteſtants.

THat the holy Patriarkes, Fathers and Prophets died in the ſame faith before the comming of Chriſt, which all true Chriſtians doe not hold, and were preſently receiued into the ioyes of heauen, and not kept in any infernall place or dungeon of darknes: thus it is proued.

*Argum.*1. They had all faith, and beleeued in Chriſt: yea, the ſame faith that is now preached, as it is defined by the Apoſtle, Heb.11.1. They alſo by this faith obtained remiſſion of ſinnes, Roman.4.7. Bleſſed are they whoſe iniquities are forgiuen, as it is alleaged out of the Pſalme: Ergo, they were bleſſed: but out of the kingdome of God there was no bleſſedneſſe to be found; therefore they alſo went to heauen.

Your owne Maſter of ſentences alſo here witneſſeth with vs: Eadem fides ſaluatoris, quæ nos ſaluat, ſaluos iuſtos faciebat antiquos, &c. The ſame faith, which ſaueth vs, did alſo ſaue the ancient righteous, the great with the ſmall. For as we beleeue that Chriſt is come in the fleſh, ſo they, that he was to come: as we beleeue that he died and roſe againe, ſo they, that he ſhould die and riſe againe. And Gregorie compareth both, to thoſe that went before, and followed Chriſt riding to Ieruſalem, crying, *Oſanna, &c. lib.*3. *diſtinct.*25.a. From this place wee may further reaſon thus: The ſame faith hath the ſame effects and fruits; the Patriarkes had the ſame faith with vs: Ergo, they were ſaued and went to heauen, as all beleeuers now doe. Againe, they that went before Chriſt entred into Ieruſalem, as well as they that followed: wherefore the forerunners of Chriſt, that beleeued in him, by the ſame faith entred into heauen.

*Argum.*2. If the heauens were not opened before Chriſts aſcenſion, as the Rhemiſts affirme: then none went to heauen before Chriſt aſcended. But that is falſe: Henoch and Elias by their owne confeſſion were taken vp into Paradiſe: ſo was the ſoule of the theeſe vpon the Croſſe. But Paradiſe is in heauen, yea the third and higheſt heauen, as S. Paul calleth it, 2. Cor.12.4. And ſo Auguſtine expoundeth that place, Voluit Deus Apoſtolo demonſtrare vitam, in qua poſt hanc vitam viuendum eſt in æternum: The Lord would ſhew vnto the Apoſtle that life, wherein, after this life, wee ſhall liue and remaine for euer: *De Gen. lib.*12.28. Theſe three therefore went to Paradiſe, which is no infernall or place of darkneſſe, but a celeſtiall habitation of ioy, light and felicitie. They were not then in Limbo Patrum, in the dungeon of the Fathers. Wherefore wee conclude, there was acceſſe to heauen before the aſcenſion of Chriſt. 2.Cor.12.4.

*Argum.*3. Beſide out of Scripture many ſtrong arguments may be gathered, to proue that the Fathers and Patriarkes were in heauen, a place of ioy, not in the imagined Limbus, a dungeon of darkneſſe, before the comming of Chriſt.

Firſt, Euery one that beleeueth, hath euerlaſting life, Iohn 5.24. Abraham beleeued, Rom.4.3. Ergo, Abraham had and was in euerlaſting life: Ergo, not in Limbus, which is a place of paine, as they confeſſe: but in euerlaſting life is no paine. Iohn 5.24. Rom.4.3.

Secondly, the ſoules of the faithfull before Chriſt were in celeſtiall Ieruſalem, for they are the congregation of the firſt borne, whoſe names are written in heauen, Heb.12.23. they were the firſt borne vnto Chriſt in the world: Ergo, their names were written in heauen. Heb.12.23.

Thirdly, where the holy Angels were, there alſo were the ſoules of the ancient faithful, Heb.12.22. The companie of the Angels and the congregation of the firſt borne belong all to one place; ſo alſo Lazarus ſoule was carried by the Angels: but the Angels are in no other place but heauen. Ergo. Heb.12.22.

Further, as out of theſe words, I am the God of Abraham, Iſaac and Iacob, our Sauiour proueth the reſurrection, becauſe he is not God of the dead but of the liuing; ſo by the ſame reaſon wee may conclude they were in heauen: for if it be inglorious for God to be named of the dead, euen ſo alſo it is to call himſelfe by them, that are in paine, in darkneſſe, abſent from God, as all they are which are imagined to be in Limbo: Ergo.

*Argum.*4. The Fathers and Patriarkes, before Chriſts comming, were in Abrahams boſome: but that was no infernall place or priſon, ſuch as they imagine Limbus Patrum to be. Auguſtine proueth that it could not be membrum, or pars inferorum, a member or part of Hell, or any infernall place, as the Ieſuites hold: Firſt, the text ſaith, there is magnum chaos, a great gulfe, a great diſtance betweene, Luke 16.26. and verſe 23. The rich man ſaw Abraham a farre off: wherefore it is not like, that both thoſe Luke 16.26.

thoſe places ſhould be infernall. Secondly, Abrahams boſome, was quietis habitatio, & felicitatis ſinus, a place of reſt and bliſſe: but ſo is not any infernall place, where there is horror, and darkneſſe. Thirdly, the place where the rich man was, is called Hell, or infernall: there is no ſuch thing ſaid of Lazarus, that he was in any lower place; but aboue in ſome high and farre diſtant place: for the rich man is ſaid to lift vp his eyes. Auguſtine then concludeth: Ne ipſos quidem inferos vſpiam ſcripturarum locis in bono appellatos reperire potui. Epiſtol. 99. I doe not finde that this word infernall, is taken any where in the Scriptures in the good part. And therefore the boſome of Abraham, being a place of reſt, ſaith he, cannot be any infernall place. One of your owne writers maketh Abrahams boſome to be the ſame place, where the Saints now are in happineſſe and ioy, and Ieſus Chriſt himſelfe: Intrepidè pergamus ad redemptorem noſtrum, &c. Let vs therefore goe without feare to our Redeemer Ieſus, to the aſſemblie of the Saints, &c. and to the boſome of Abraham with Lazarus. Eſpenc. in 2. Timoth. cap. 4. p. 167. d.

Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. lib. 3. cap. 3. Confuſiones duas eſſe legimus, vnam temporalem, per quam omnis peccator pœnitendo peccaſſe confunditur: alteram æternalem, & ſine fine manſuram, quam hi, qui à ſiniſtris ſunt, audituri ſunt, quibus dicetur, ite maledicti, &c. We reade of two confuſions, one temporall, by the which a ſinner in repenting for his ſinne is confounded or aſhamed: another eternall, to endure without end, which they that are on the left hand ſhall heare, to whom it ſhall be ſaid, Goe ye curſed, &c. If then according to the ſentence of this Councell there bee two confuſions or abaſhments, one temporall in this life, another eternall afterward: then was there neuer any ſuch Limbus Patrum, a dungeon of darkneſſe, for the Fathers: vnleſſe they will ſay, that when the Fathers were thruſt into ſuch a darke dungeon or priſon, it was no confuſion or abaſhment vnto them.

And becauſe our aduerſaries doe here accumulate and heape vp many teſtimonies of the Fathers, whom we confeſſe for the moſt part of them, eſpecially the latter ſort of them, to haue been in this error; yet that it may appeare, that the truth is yet more ancient, I will alleage the ſentence of a moſt ancient father, namely Origen, vpon theſe words of Iob, Naked ſhall I returne, &c. Nudus ibo illac, &c. I ſhall returne naked thither; whither? euen where Adam and the reſt of my Elders are gone, where the tabernacles of the righteous are, the reſt of the faithfull, the conſolation of the godly: where is Abrahams boſome, the companie of Angels, the kingdome of Chriſt, life and light, and glorie, and ſight of God: Orig. in 1. cap. Iob. But where elſe are all theſe to be found, but in heauen, for in Limbus is neither light, nor comfort, nor Angell, nor Chriſt, nor the glorie of God to be ſeene? What cleerer euidence of antiquitie can be required?

See this truth ſealed by the blood of Martyrs: Richardus Feurus who ſuffered for the truth at Lions anno 1554. being asked where the old Fathers were before the death of Chriſt, anſwered; They were in life eternall, which they looked for, being promiſed before to Adam, Abraham, and the Patriarks in the ſeed to come: Fox pag. 913.

Pag. 833. 1. 40.

The ſincere iudgement of Biſhop Ridley holy Martyr we haue ſeene before.

Homil. de Diuite in Luc. 16.

Now for further euidence herein: 1. Chryſoſtome vpon thoſe words of the rich man, Luke 16. 24. Father Abraham haue mercie on me, &c. thus writeth: Sanctus quidem Abraham, ſanctus & beatus eſt, & omnes in iſtius ſinum, ire feſtinemus, &c. Abraham is holy, holy and bleſſed is Abraham, let vs make haſte to goe into his boſome: but whoſoeuer is either in hell, or in the kingdome of heauen, I cannot tell whether he can ſhew pitie, &c. Here Chryſoſtome, though he thinke that Abraham yet is not in the perfect ſtate of bleſſedneſſe in the kingdome of God, which ſhall not bee till the reſurrection: yet he taketh Abrahams boſome to be the receptacle of the ſoules of the faithfull ſtill. Contrarie to the opinion of the Romaniſts, who think that their Limbus had an end at the death of Chriſt. Nilus ſaith, that by the boſome of Abraham our Lord did vnderſtand that high ſtate in the bleſſed reſt of the godly: and by hell euerlaſting damnation and puniſhment, he left no middle place betweene thoſe, &c. If the boſome of Abraham be the higheſt place of bleſſed reſt, then can it not be any part of hell.

2. Tertullian of the Africane and South Church ſaith, Eam regionem ſinum Abrahæ dico, & non cœleſtem, ſublimiorem tamen inferis, interim, refrigerium animabus iuſtorũ donec conſummatio rerum reſurrectionem omnium, &c. That place (of the ſoules departed) I ſay is the boſome of Abraham, not in heauen, yet higher then hell, a refreſhing to the ſoules of the iuſt, vntill the conſummation of al things at the reſurrection, &c. Though he thinketh, that the ſoules departed haue not their perfect conſummation in heauen, yet he differeth in two points from the Romaniſts, that the boſome of Abraham is no part of hell, and that it is the receptacle of the ſoules of the iuſt vntill the reſurrection. Origens opinion we haue ſeene before.

3. Latter Confeſſion of Heluetia, chap. 12. The Fathers had the Goſpell in the writing of the Prophets, by which they attained ſaluation in Chriſt through faith. They beleeue the Fathers were ſaued in Chriſt, then they went not to hell.

Comment. in 1. Cor. 15. diſput. 26.

Maldonat. in eum locum.

4. Diuers of the Romaniſts themſelues wreſt thoſe places of the Scriptures, by the which commonly they proue their Limbus: as Salmeron ſaith of that place Zach. 9. 11. Hæc verba non ad Limbum ſpectare videntur, &c. Theſe words ſeeme not to belong vnto Limbus, becauſe this is ſaid to be a place without water: but the Patriarkes wanted not the water of refreſhing, &c. Likewiſe concerning that place of the boſome of Abraham, Luke 16. Maldonate the Ieſuite ſaith, Valde ſuſpicor per ſinum Abrahæ ſummum cœlum deſignari, I doe greatly ſuſpect, that by the boſome of Abraham, the higheſt heauen is aſſigned, &c. and that place Hebr. 11. 40. Ribera another Ieſuite thus interpreteth, Apoſtolus loquitur de conſummata beatitudine corporis et animæ in die extremi iudicij: The Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the perfect bleſſedneſſe of body and ſoule in the day of the laſt iudgement, &c.

Riber. in eum locum.

Thus theſe patrones of Limbus doe croſſe themſelues in their owne erroneous conceits: but it will be here obiected, that the current opinion of the auncient writers is, that the fathers were not in heauen before the aſcenſion of Chriſt, as Bellarmine to that purpoſe citeth 14. fathers, but he nameth them onely, he produceth not their teſtimonies.

Lib. 4. de Chriſt. anim. c. 12.

To this wee anſwere. 1. That all the fathers concurre not with them, as hath beene ſufficiently ſhewed before, as Chryſoſtome, Origene, Tertullian, Auguſtine. 2. Concerning the reſt, they might haue this meaning, that the fathers of the law, had not ſuch fulneſſe of ioy before, as at the comming of Chriſt. And this we denie not, but that thoſe bleſſed ſpirits might haue ſome occaſion of ioy, as Calvine ſaith: I willingly confeſſe, Chriſtum ipſis illuxiſſe virtute ſui ſpiritus, &c. That Chriſt did ſhine vpon them by the vertue of his ſpirit, that they might know that the grace which they onely taſted of in hope, was then exhibited to the world, &c. Euen as the Angels alſo reioyced in the contemplation of this myſterie, as Saint Peter ſaith, Which things the Angels deſire to behold. 3. But if the fathers opinion be, that their ſoules were not at all in heauen, but kept out till Chriſts comming thither, Herein, we craue but that libertie, which the Papiſts themſelues vſe in reiecting the fathers current opinions, in other like points: as Sixtus Sarenſis confeſſeth, that all theſe fathers, Papias, Apollinarius, Tertullian, Victorinus, Lactantius, Seuerus, Iuſtinus Martyr, doe hold, that the ſoules ſhall raigne in the earth a thouſand yeeres before the comming of Chriſt. Likewiſe Stapleton ſaith, that all theſe fathers, Clemens B. of Rome, Origene, Tertullian, Chryſoſtome, Theodoret, Oecumenius, Theophil. Ambroſ. Bernard, doe thinke, that the ſoules of the righteous doe not enioy the ſight and preſence of God, till the day of iudgement: and yet they refuſe them herein, and vpon good reaſon: And ſo may we in this their conceit touching the fathers of the olde law.

AN APPENDIX OR APPERTINANCE OF THIS question, concerning the apparition of Samuel.

The Papiſts.

THey hold opinion, that it was the very ſoule of Samuel that appeared at the witches houſe at Endor vnto Saul: and vſe it as an argument, to proue that the ſoules of the Patriarkes were not in heauen, but in ſome infernall place, before Chriſts comming, becauſe Samuel aſcended out of the earth, Bellarm. de Chriſt. anim. lib. 4. 11.

10. Error.

Argum. 1. Becauſe he that appeared to Saul, is called Samuel in the text. Auguſtine anſwereth, that the images of things, are called by the names of the things themſelues: as Geneſ. 41. Pharao ſaid, hee ſaw eares of corne, and fat and leane kine in his dreame, when they were but the images of ſuch things: So the diuell becauſe he appeared in the ſhape of Samuel, Samuel himſelfe is ſaid to bee ſeene: Ad Simplicianum lib. 2. quæſt. 3.

1. Sam. 28. v. 11. to ver. 16.

And againe, Hiſtoricus mentem Saulis et habitum Samuelis deſcripſit, et quæ dicta et viſa ſunt exprimens, &c. The Hiſtorian did deſcribe the minde of Saul and habite of Samuel, expreſſing what was ſaid and done, omitting to ſay, whether they were true or falſe, &c. The text ſaith, that Saul vnderſtoode it was Samuel, not that it was Samuel, Sed male intellexit, but he vnderſtoode amiſſe, and ſo receiued a reward of his error.

Argum. 2. Eccleſiaſtic. 46. It is ſet downe as a commendation of Samuel, that he propheſied being dead: Ergo, it was Samuel indeede, Bellarm. de Purgat. lib. 2. cap. 6.

Eccleſi. 46. 20.

Auguſtine, anſwereth, that this booke was not receiued into the Canon of the Scriptures: It is not Canonicall. De cura pro mortuis, cap. 15.

Argum. 3. He telleth Saul things to come, as how the next day he ſhould be ouercome, and ſlaine. But the diuell knoweth not things to come, Bellarm. ibid.

Auguſtine anſwereth, Facile eſt & non incongruum: It is an eaſie matter with God, and not vnlikely, that ſome things ſhould be reuealed to euill ſpirits, for the greater puniſhment of the wicked: for otherwiſe wee might meruaile; Quomodo dæmones agnouerint Chriſtum, quem Iudæi non agnoſcebant: How the diuels knew Chriſt, whom the Iewes did not acknowledge: Ad Simplician. lib. 2. quæſt. 3.

Further, he ſaith, it was no great matter to fore-ſee the death of Samuel a little before; Cum ſigna quædam ſoleant apparere morituris, &c. When as ſome ſignes vſe to appeare to men themſelues, that are forſaken of God, Quanto magis diabolo, How much more vnto the diuell? &c.

The Proteſtants.

THat it was not the ſoule of Samuel which appeared, who was now at reſt; but the diuell in the likeneſſe of Samuel, who alſo can transforme himſelfe into an Angell of light: Auguſtine proueth by theſe foure arguments.

Argum. 1. Becauſe the Witch or Pythoniſt vſed enchauntments, vnto the which the ſoule of ſo holy a Prophet was not ſubiect, Dæmoniacis incantationibus vel viderit. De mirabilibus ſcriptur. 2. cap. 11.

Bellarmine anſwereth that Samuel preuented her inchantment, and came vp voluntarily.

Anſw. The text is contrarie, verſ.11. for the woman firſt asked Saul, whom ſhe ſhould bring vp, that is, by her charmes and incantations: and he ſaid, bring me vp Samuel.

*Argum.*2. Quomodo Saul,&c. How could Saul obtaine to heare a Prophet ſpeake from the dead, whom God vouchſafed not to anſwere by Prophets aliue? The text is, that God gaue him no anſwere neither by Prophets, nor by dreames: therefore I haue called for thee, verſ.15. Ergo, it was not Samuel, for then God ſhould haue giuen him anſwere by Prophets.

*Argum.*3. If it had been Samuel, he would not haue told a lie vnto Saul, ſaying, to morrow thou ſhalt be with me: Magno quippe interuallo ſeparari bonos à malis legimus: For wee reade that the good are ſeparated from the bad by a great diſtance after this life, as it appeareth in the ſtorie of Diues and Lazarus. Auguſt.ad Simplician.lib.2.qu.3.

Bellarm. He ſaith as much, as you ſhall be dead: noting the generall condition, not the particular ſtate of the dead: and he ſaith further, Thou and thy ſonnes ſhall be with me to morrow, but Ionathan being a righteous man, went not to the ſame place that Saul did: wherefore, ye ſhall be with me, is as much to ſay, Ye ſhall be dead.

Luk.23.43.

Anſw. This phraſe in Scripture importeth, and implieth alſo the particular ſtate of thoſe that are departed, as 2.Sam.12.23. Dauid ſaith of his childe, I ſhall goe to him, he ſhall not come to me: And Luke 23.43. Chriſt ſaith, This day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe: In both places it ſignifieth to be in reſt and ioy, in the ſame place, where they are, with whom they are ſaid, they ſhall be: Ergo, it ſhould be ſo taken here. Neither is it neceſſarie to vnderſtand Ionathan in this ſpeech, ſeeing that hee ſaith not all his ſonnes: and there were two other of his ſonnes beſide Ionathan ſlaine, namely, Abinadab, and Malchiſhuah, 1.Sam.31.2,6. So that the ſpeech is true, thou and thy ſonnes, though Ionathan be excluded.

1.Sam.31.2.6.

*Argum.*4. If it had been Samuel: Vtique vir iuſtus non permiſiſſet ſe adorari: The iuſt man would not haue ſuffered himſelfe to be adored and worſhipped: as the diuell doth take it at Sauls hands, to be worſhipped of him. For the text ſaith, he enclined his face toward the ground, and bowed himſelf, or worſhipped: *Auguſt.quaſt.ex veteri teſtam.*27.

Bellarmine ſaith, that he did giue no other worſhip vnto him, then was due vnto the ſoule of Samuel ſo great a Prophet.

Apoc.22.9.

Anſw. Cornelius did no otherwiſe worſhip Peter, then by falling downe as Saul here doth, nor Iohn the Angell, Apocal.22. yet neither of them are permitted to doe it: Wherefore, if this had been true Samuel, he would not haue arrogated more to himſelfe, then either Peter, or the Angell. Whereforte as S. Auguſtine ſaith, Hoc nititur, vt adoretur, quaſi Deus, He goeth about to be worſhipped as God, and therefore it was ſurely Satan, not Samuel. Thoſe foure effectuall reaſons of S. Auguſtine are confirmed by their owne decrees, Cauſ.26.qu.5.c.14. howſoeuer Bellarmine at his pleaſure reiecteth both the one and the other.

Concion.2. de Lazaro,

1. Chryſoſtome thus deliuereth his opinion touching the apparitions of the dead: Quid eſt, quod dæmones dicunt, Monachi illius ſum anima,&c. What is it then, that the diuels ſay, I am the ſoule of ſuch a Monke? truly I therefore beleeue it not, becauſe the diuels ſay it, decipiunt enim auditores, for they deceiue their hearers, &c. And ſo alſo the diuell was a deceiuer in this apparition of Samuel.

Lib.de anima.

2. Tertullian ſaith of this matter: Abſit vt animam cuiuſlibet ſancti, nedum Prophetæ à dæmonio credamus extractam,&c. Farre be it from vs to thinke, that the ſoule of any Saint, much leſſe of a Prophet, can be fetcht vp by the diuell, being taught, that Satan can transforme himſelfe into an Angell of light, much more in hominem lucis, into a man of light.

Harm.ſect.16. pag.484.

3. Latter Confeſſion of Heluetia, chap.25. Now that which is recorded of the ſpirits or ſoules of the dead ſometime appearing to them that are aliue,&c. wee count thoſe apparitions among the deluſions and deceits of the diuell,&c.

4. See before for the Latine Church the decree of Gratian, collected by Rabanus, out of Auguſtine, Iſidore and others: cited before, Cauſ.26.qu.5.c.14.

THE SECOND QVESTION, CONCERning Purgatorie.

THe queſtion hath three parts: firſt, whether there be any Purgatorie for ſoules to be purged and cleanſed in after this life. Secondly, of other circumſtances and matters that doe belong thereunto. Thirdly, of prayer for the dead.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THERE BE any Purgatorie after this life.

Hæreſ.11.

THere is (they ſay) a certaine infernall place in the earth, called Purgatorie, in the which, as in a priſon houſe, the ſoules which were not fully purged in this life, are there cleanſed and purged by fire, before they can be receiued into heauen: Bellarm. de Purgat. lib. 1. c. 1. lib. 2. c. 6. Rhemiſt. Mat. 12. ſect. 6.

Argum. 1. Zachar. 9.11. Thou haſt looſed thy priſoners out of the pit where was no water, Pſal. 66.12. We went through fire and water. Theſe and ſuch like places the Ieſuite vnderſtandeth of Purgatorie, Lib. 1. de Purgator. cap. 3. Zachar.9.11. Pſal.66.12.

Anſw. Firſt, the Ieſuite brought this place before, to proue that there was Limbus Patrum, and now hee maketh it ſerue for Purgatorie: thus they can make the Scriptures to ſpeake what they liſt themſelues. But Purgatorie and Limbus Patrum, are two diuers, yea and contrary things: for the Limbus was onely for thoſe that liued before Chriſt; Purgatorie began ſince: the Limbus was voide of paine and puniſhment; ſo is not Purgatory: wherefore if the Lake or pit in Zacharie ſignifie Purgatory, it maketh nothing for Limbus: and if it ſerue for Limbus, then they miſſe of a place for Purgatory. But indeed it ſignifieth no ſuch thing: but is taken onely in that place for the affliction and miſery of this life, and ſpecially ſuch as the Iewes ſuſtained in the captiuity of Ieruſalem, as wee ſhewed out of Auguſtine And ſo doth he alſo expound ſuch and the like places out of the Pſalmes, as Pſal. 86.13. Thou haſt deliuered my ſoule from the loweſt graue. Quid (ſaith he) eſt lacus infimus, niſi profundiſſima miſeria, qua non ſit profundior? What elſe (ſaith he) is the loweſt pit or graue, but the loweſt degree of miſerie, then the which there can be no greater? Pſal.86.13.

Argum. 2. Matth 12.32. Blaſphemie againſt the ſpirit ſhall not bee forgiuen, neither in this world nor the world to come: Ergo, ſome ſinnes ſhall be forgiuen in the next world; and therefore there is a Purgatorie, for in hell there is no forgiueneſſe: Bellarm. loc. 1. ex nouo teſtamento. Matth.12.32.

Anſw. Firſt, by the world to come, is vnderſtood the world ſucceeding this, and ſo it anſwereth to the world preſent: as Marke 10.30. They ſhall at this preſent receiue an hundred folde, and in the world to come life euerlaſting. Wherefore Purgatorie being imagined to be now preſent, it cannot be taken to belong to the world to come: ſo alſo muſt we vnderſtand that place, that Chriſt is exalted aboue euery name, that is named in the world, or the world to come: that is, in the world which ſhall bee after this, I thinke they will not by the world to come, in this place, inferre Purgatorie; nor yet, where the Apoſtle ſaith, The powers of the world to come. Mark.10.30. Epheſ.1.21. Hebr.6.5.

Secondly, it followeth not, ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt ſhal not be remitted in the next world, Ergo, other ſins ſhall: no more, then it followeth, that where Chriſt ſaith, I will not drinke henceforth of the fruit of this vine, vntill I drinke it with you in my fathers kingdome, Mat. 26.29. that therefore hee did drinke of other things; becauſe he did not drinke of the Vine, &c. And whereas Bellarmine would iuſtifie this argument, by that example, where Chriſt ſaith, My kingdome is not of this world, and Pilate inferreth thereupon, Art thou a King then? where an affirmatiue is concluded out of the negatiue; the reaſon is not alike, vnleſſe he will reaſon as Pilate did: Thy kingdome is not of this world: Ergo, thou haſt a kingdome: ſo blaſphemie ſhall not be forgiuen in the next world: Ergo, there ſhall be blaſphemie then. Thus he might conclude truely, for in hell there ſhall be blaſphemie. Mat.26.29. Iohn 18.37.

Thirdly, S. Marke doth beſt expound S. Matthew, He that blaſphemeth, ſhall neuer be forgiuen: ſo that to be forgiuen neither in this world, nor the next, is neuer to be forgiuen. Bellarm. But Marke is rather to be expounded by Matthew. Anſw. Yea, let Matthew expound himſelfe: for verſe 31. hee ſaith, Blaſphemie ſhall not be forgiuen, that is, at all: and then he addeth in the verſe following, neither in this world, nor the world to come: ſo that not to be forgiuen in this world, or the next, is not to bee forgiuen at all. Mat 3.29. Mat.12.31.

Fourthly, that there is no remiſſion of ſinne after this life, the Scripture is euident, Hee that beleeueth is not condemned, but hee that beleeueth not, is condemned alreadie. Vpon which place the Rhemiſts giue this note, That he that beleeueth, ſhall not be condemned either at the houre of death, or day of iudgement: from which place I reaſon thus, Euery man either dying in faith, or without faith: if he die in incredulity, he is condemned, and there is afterward no hope; if in faith, hee is freed from condemnation, and entred into life, and ſo conſequently deliuered from his ſinnes: therefore in this life wee onely obtaine remiſſion of ſinnes, becauſe faith is onely of this life, whereby our ſinnes are remitted. Ambroſe alſo ſaith, Qui hic non acceperit remiſſionem peccatorum, illic non erit: Hee that receiueth not heere remiſſion of ſinnes, ſhall not bee there, that is, in heauen, de bono mort. cap. 2. Iohn.3.18.

Argum. 3. Luke 8.55. Her ſpirit came againe and ſhee roſe Chriſt raiſed the Rulers daughter to life This euidently ſheweth that there is a third place beſide Heauen and Hell: for the ſoules that are there cannot returne againe, Rhemiſt. Luk.8.55.

Anſw. Surely, a goodly argument, the ſpirits of Lazarus and of the Maide returned: Ergo, there is a third place: and why may you not thinke, that their ſoules were, whereas the ſoules of other righteous are? And why may not the Lord bring at his pleaſure, if it pleaſeth him, the ſoules at reſt, into their bodies againe? And this further may be thus ſhewed: after the reſurrection of Chriſt, the bodies of many that were dead, appeared out of their graues, Matth. 27.53. If Chriſt then by his power be able to call the body out of his place, which is the graue, euen ſo the ſoule alſo. Againe, S. Paul ſaith, Hee was taken vp into the third heauen, whether in his bodie or not, hee knoweth not, but in his ſpirit and ſoule, he was ſure he was there: therefore it is poſſible with God, to call the ſoules from heauen vnto the body, the more to manifeſt his glory. Further I aske, where the ſoule of Dorcas was Mat.27.53. 2.Cor.12.3.

after her departure: I thinke they will not ſay in Purgatorie, ſhe being a woman full of good workes and almes while ſhe liued: if ſhe were then in heauen, and Peter called her ſoule into her bodie againe; ſhall the Maſter be able to doe leſſe, then the diſciple? Saint Gregorie alſo reporteth, lib.1.dialog.c.9. how S. Fortunatus raiſed againe one Marcellus an holy man, which was carried by the Angels into a bleſſed place: this ſtorie is receiued by Bellarmine, who alſo granteth that holy men may returne from other places then Purgatorie, lib.2.de Purg.c.8. Wherefore this example of Lazarus concludeth not.

Argum.4. Of all other they moſt inſult, and beare themſelues bolde vpon that place of S. Paul, 1.Corinth.3. which being rightly vnderſtood, doth not helpe them any thing at all: verſ.13. The fire ſhall trie euery mans worke: verſ.15. If any mans worke burne, he ſhall ſuffer loſſe, but he ſhall be ſafe himſelfe, yet as it were through the fire. Bellarm.& Rhemiſt. by fire here vnderſtand the flames of Purgatorie: by wood, ſtubble, ſtraw; veniall ſinnes, which muſt be purged by that fire, Rhemiſt. 1.Cor.3 ſect.3. 1.Cor.3.13.15

Anſw. Firſt, by the precious matter here, as of gold, ſiluer, are not the workes of charitie vnderſtood, but the preaching of ſound doctrine: by ſtraw, and ſtubble, and wood, and other combuſtible matter, the affectation of eloquence, and corrupt teaching of the truth, yet holding the foundation; not veniall ſinnes, as the Rhemiſts affirme: and this Bellarmine alſo granteth. And ſo S. Ambroſe expoundeth, Opus quod ardere dicitur, mala doctrina eſt, &c. The worke that ſhall burne is euill doctrine, &c. in 3.1 ad Corinth. Doth then their purgatorie fire diſcerne betweene ſound and corrupt doctrine? but that they imagine to be a puniſhing and purging fire, not a trying and diſcerning fire, as this is, whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh.

Secondly, fire is here taken allegorically, as the reſt of the words are, of gold, ſiluer, ſtubble: neither can it be taken for their Purgatorie fire; becauſe it trieth the workes only, not the perſons, and all muſt be tried by this fire, as well thoſe that build gold and ſiluer, as the other: but all ſhall not paſſe through Purgatorie, by their owne confeſſion. They are driuen to this ſhift, to graunt, that verſ.13. the fire is taken in one ſenſe, namely, for the ſentence and iudgement of God, and verſe 15. in another, that is, for the flames of Purgatorie. But who ſeeth not how abſurd a thing this is, that in an allegorie the ſame word, and in the ſame place, ſhould be ſo diuerſly taken? It is apparant then that this is the meaning, that the day, that is, the time, ſhall declare it: for God hath appointed a time to examine euery mans doctrine by fire: which is nothing elſe but the iudgement of God by the fire of his word, whereby euery man, in the day of his calling and conuerſion, ſhall know whether he hath preached aright or not.

Firſt, I will proue this expoſition to be ſound, and then ſhew how it is impugned. Firſt, this fire muſt needs be either a materiall fire, or a ſpirituall: if materiall, then either euerlaſting fire, or purgatorie fire, or the fire of the iudgement day: not the firſt, becauſe that is only for the wicked; not the ſecond, nor the third, becauſe they doe not trie works, but the perſons; but this fire trieth euery mans worke: Ergo, it is not a materiall, but a ſpirituall fire.

Secondly, this fire is a triall of euery mans doctrine, how he hath preached and taught; but no materiall fire can make triall of doctrine: Ergo, a ſpirituall fire.

Thirdly, as is the gold and ſiluer, ſtubble, wood, &c. ſo is the fire; but they muſt be vnderſtood ſpiritually: Ergo, ſo muſt the fire.

And thus much Bellarmine granteth, that in the two firſt places the fire of Gods iudgement muſt be vnderſtood, but not in the third, in the 15. verſe.

Contra. Firſt, that fire, whereby a man ſuffereth loſſe in his worke, is the fire hee ſhall be ſaued through, verſ.15. but the firſt fire is ſpirituall, becauſe it examineth the worke it ſelfe: Ergo, the other is the ſame ſpirituall fire.

Againe, by the ſame fire is as well the ſaluation of the worker, as the probation of the worke: for the probation of the worke tendeth to the ſauing of the worker: but the worke is proued and tried by a ſpirituall fire. Ergo, &c.

Further, Bellarmines owne application of the ſimilitude ſheweth as much: for he thus expoundeth it, as if two workmen ſhould make two houſes, one of hewed ſtone, the other of timber and ſtraw: fire is ſet to both houſes; the workman in the ſtone houſe is vntouched of the fire, and his houſe ſafe: but the other houſe burneth, and the builder within is in danger, and cannot eſcape, but by paſſing thorough the fire, cap.4.loc.2. Doth he not euidently graunt, that it is one and the ſelfeſame fire, wherewith the houſe is burned, and through the which the builder eſcapeth? So then theſe foure properties named by the Apoſtle, of reuealing, trying, burning, ſauing, muſt be referred to one and the ſelfeſame fire, which is a ſpirituall fire, and not a materiall: therefore no purgatorie fire.

Now Bellarmine goeth about to infringe this our expoſition of the ſpirituall fire of truth, whereby euery mans worke is tried in this life, by theſe reaſons:

Firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith, The day of the Lord ſhall declare it, verſ.13. which is in Scripture taken for the day of iudgement; and therefore it ſhall not declare it in this life.

Anſw. In the Originall Greeke we reade onely the day, and not the day of the Lord: ſo that word ſeemeth to be added in the vulgar Latine. And againe, there ſhall be no purgatorie fire after the day of iudgement: wherefore herein they doe contradict themſelues.

Secondly, The day which ſhall be reuealed by fire, ſaith the Apoſtle; what day is this elſe but the day of iudgement, which the preciſe ſignifying of fire declareth? Rhemiſt.

Anſwere. I will oppoſe againſt them the iudgement of Bellarmine, who ſaith, That the fire of the day of iudgement cannot here be vnderſtood: firſt, becauſe that fire ſhall worke onely vpon the wicked, but S. Pauls fire ſhall trie all. Secondly, that fire maketh not triall of workes, as S. Pauls fire doth. Thirdly, it would follow that they which build hay, ſtubble, &c. ſhould not enter into heauen before the day of iudgement: ſo are they anſwered with their owne.

Thirdly, this fire ſhall try euery mans worke what it is: but this difference of mens working is not alwaies ſeene in this life, Ergo, ſic Rhemiſt. Bellarm.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Apoſtle meaneth not euery worke whatſoeuer ſhall bee made manifeſt here, but he ſpeaketh onely of the worke of the Miniſterie, which is publike, and to be diſcerned of all. Secondly, neither is it neceſſarie to vnderſtand the manifeſtation of theſe workes to the ſight of others, but the reuealing thereof to their owne conſcience, which alwaies falleth out in this life to thoſe that ſhall be ſaued.

Fourthly, they, whoſe errors are reuealed by the word of God, and their mindes lightened, doe ſuffer no loſſe, but rather haue gaine by it: but the Apoſtle ſaith, that they whoſe worke burneth doe ſuffer loſſe by it, Bellarm.

Anſwere. They whoſe erroneous preaching is reuealed by the ſpirit in the word, ſuffer no loſſe, in reſpect that they themſelues vpon their repentance are ſaued: but yet they haue loſſe in regard of their labour, which is loſt, and of the greatneſſe of reward, which they ſhall haue, that preach ſincerely: and ſo is S. Paul to be vnderſtood, ſaying, They ſuffer loſſe, &c. yet are ſaued.

So then, notwithſtanding theſe obiections to the contrarie, our expoſition of the Reuelation and triall to be had in this life by the ſpiritual fire of truth in euery mans conſcience, as touching the worke of the Miniſterie, remaineth ſound, and agreeable to Scripture. To this conſenteth Origen: Habuit Petrus aliquid plumbi, &c. Peter had a little Lead, for our Sauiour ſaith vnto him, O thou of little faith. He therefore that is ſafe, is ſafe, as it were through fire: as the furnace trieth the gold, ſo tentation the righteous: Veniendum eſt ergo omnibus, &c. Wherefore euery one muſt come to the fire, muſt come to the conflatorie or fining pot, Hom.6. in Exod. Likewiſe S. Hierome: Cum viderit Satanas nos ſuper fundamentum Chriſti, &c. When Satan ſeeth vs vpon the foundation of Chriſt to build hay, or ſtubble; ſupponit incendium, hee ſetteth to the fire: wherefore let vs build gold, &c. and hee ſhall not dare to tempt vs, lib. 2. aduerſ. Iouinian. Both theſe fathers by this fire vnderſtand, the tentation in this life, whereby a man is tried, and brought to acknowledge his infirmitie: which is a preparation to the more excellent worke of the ſpirit, whereby they are further lightened.

I will alſo produce Bernard for the expoſition of this place, though I denie not, but that hee ſomewhat ſauoured of this Purgatorie inuention: theſe words, He ſhall be ſafe, yet as thorough fire, he thus interpreteth: Ignis tria habet, fumum, lucem, ardorem, &c. Fire hath three things, ſmoake, light, heate: the ſmoake, that is the bitterneſſe of ſoule: the light, is the confeſſion of the mouth: the heate is in the bodie the tribulation or puniſhment of repentance. The bitterneſſe then of the ſoule, the confeſſion of the mouth, the puniſhment of the bodie, are that fire, whereby the looſe and negligent builder ſhall be ſaued, Serm. de lig. fœn. ſtipul. But all theſe are in this life. Ergo, &c.

Argum.5. Matth.5.25. Agree with thine aduerſarie while thou art in the way with him, leſt he deliuer thee to the Iudge, the Iudge to the Miniſter, and thou be caſt into priſon: Verely I ſay vnto thee, thou ſhalt not come out thence, till thou haſt paied the vtmoſt farthing. Matth.5.25. This priſon, ſaith Bellarmine, is Purgatorie, out of which, after the debt is paied, the debter ſhall goe forth.

Anſwere. Firſt, this ſaying of our Sauiour may ſafely be expounded according to the letter of the affaires of this life, as S. Chryſoſtome doth expound it, that men to preuent their further danger, ſhould be readie to compound their controuerſies betime. And ſuch counſell alſo the Wiſeman giueth, That Prou.6.3. if a man haue giuen his word, and is become a ſuretie for another, he ſhould not ſleepe before hee had deliuered himſelfe. And this expoſition is moſt agreeable to the text: for the word is ἀντίδικος, an aduerſarie at the law. And Luke 12.58. where the ſame ſentence of our Sauiour is repeated, there is menti- Luk.12.58. on made of the Magiſtrate, and of the Iaylor, which are termes and offices properly fitting the buſineſſe of this life. Bellarmine hath not any thing worth the anſwering, contrarie to this ſenſe.

Secondly, if we draw theſe words to a ſpirituall vnderſtanding, by the priſon hell muſt be ſignified, a place of euerlaſting torment, and not Purgatorie.

Firſt, becauſe the word φυλακή, a priſon, is ſo taken, 1.Pet.3.19. for the place of the diſobedient, which 1.Pet.3.19. is hell: for I thinke, they will not ſend obſtinate ſinners to Purgatorie.

Secondly, he ſhall not come foorth, till he hath paied the vtmoſt farthing: or as S. Luke ſaith, the vtmoſt mite; that is neuer: vnleſſe hee dare ſay, that a ſinner is able by his puniſhment to ſatisfie the vtmoſt mite of his debt, that is, his ſinne vnto God, which is great blaſphemie to affirme, and contrary to the Scriptures: for we cannot anſwere God one thing of a thouſand. Iob.9.3.

Thirdly, this place may be expounded by that parable, Matth.18. where the vnkinde ſeruant is caſt Matth.18.34. into priſon, till hee ſhould pay all that was due, verſe 34. that is, he ſhould lie there for euer; for the 32. debt was ten thouſand talents, too much for a Prince, much leſſe for a ſeruant, to pay: and verſe 25. he had nothing to pay: and therefore his maſter forgaue him the debt, verſ.32. Wherefore we ſee our debt is not paied vnto God by vs, but forgiuen; and where it is not pardoned, it can neuer be paied. Againe, it followeth, verſ.35. So ſhall my heauenly father doe vnto you, if you forgiue not from your hearts one another your treſpaſſes: What is this, ſo ſhall my father doe vnto you? ſend them to Purgatorie? No, but vnto hell: for vncharitable and malicious men, which will not forgiue others, I truſt they will not ordaine vnto a place of temporall puniſhment: for as S. Iohn ſaith, He that hateth his brother, and 1.Ioh.3.15. ſo is a manſlayer, cannot haue eternall life.

Fourthly, thus S. Ambroſe expoundeth this place, lib.7.in Luc.c.12. Redde promiſſum, dum in hoc corpore es,&c. Render thy vow or promiſe, while thou art in the body, before the exactor commeth, and caſteth thee into priſon, &c. Hence it followeth, that being in priſon, the promiſe, or debt, cannot be paied.

But S. Auguſtine more plainly: Conſenti cum aduerſario,&c. Conſent with thy aduerſarie in the way, &c. for afterward, when we are paſſed out of this world, nulla compunctio, vel ſatisfactio remanebit, There remaineth no compunction or ſatisfaction for ſinne, tom.10 hom.5. ſuper illa. Conſenti cum aduerſar.&c.

Math.5.22. Argum.6. Matth.5.verſ.22. Hee that is angrie with his brother vnaduiſedly, is culpable of iudgement: he that ſaith, Racha, ſhall be puniſhed by a councell: but he that ſaith, thou foole: is guiltie of hell fire. Ergo, all ſinnes are not puniſhed with hell fire, but ſome haue onely temporall chaſtiſement after this life: therefore in Purgatorie, Bellarm.

Anſwere. Theſe three degrees of puniſhment doe not ſhew diuers and differing places of puniſhment after this life, but a difference of puniſhment in hell; as it may be thus ſhewed:

1.Ioh.3.4. Rom.6.23. Firſt, euery tranſgreſſion of the law is ſinne, and the wages of euery ſinne is death: but to bee angrie raſhly, and to raile, are tranſgreſſions, and conſequently ſinnes, and ſo in themſelues worthie of euerlaſting death.

1.Ioh.3.14.15. Againe, He that loueth not his brother, abideth in death, that is, hath not eternall life, but he that is angrie vniuſtly with his brother, loueth him not. Ergo.

1.Cor.6.10. Further, no railers ſhall inherite Gods kingdome, that is, without repentance: but he that ſaith to his brother racha, that is, idlebraine, or lighthead, raileth: Ergo, this ſinne excludeth from heauen; and conſequently in it ſelfe is worthie of hell. Wherefore it is great boldneſſe in the Ieſuite to exempt thoſe ſinnes from hell fire, which the Scripture iudgeth worthie thereof.

And that theſe be three degrees of the ſame euerlaſting puniſhment, wherein Chriſt alludeth to the formes of iudgement amongſt men, S. Auguſtine ſheweth: Iudicium dicitur,&c. That is called Iudgement where the ſentence is not pronounced; that is a councell, where the puniſhment is yet conſulted of: but Gehenna or Hell is that, which hath certaine damnation, &c. lib.1.de ſerm.in monte,cap.19. Like as then, the pronouncing, conſulting, execution of ſentence, are all tending to the ſame puniſhment, yet in diuers degrees: ſo is it here, &c.

1.Cor.15.29. Argum.7. Why are they then baptized for the dead, if the dead riſe not againe? The Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the Baptiſme of teares, faſting, and prayer, which they did in behalfe of the dead, to eaſe them in the paines of Purgatorie: And that Baptiſme is taken for affliction, our Sauiour Chriſt ſheweth, Luk.12.50. ſaying, I haue a baptiſme to be baptized with, Sic Bellarm.cap.4.loc.3.

Anſwere. Firſt, this is a forced and vnreaſonable expoſition of this Scripture: firſt, becauſe that in Scripture we reade of no ſuch Baptiſme by teares and faſting: the Scripture maketh mention of three Math 3.11. Baptiſmes, flaminis, fluminis, ſanguinis: of the ſpirit. Chriſt is ſaid to baptize with the ſpirit: of water, as Iohn is ſaid to baptize with water: of blood, or of death, of which Baptiſme our Sauiour ſpeaketh: but to apply Baptiſme vnto teares, is improper; and they rather are ſaid to baptize themſelues, then to be baptized. Secondly, if the Apoſtles meaning were ſuch, why ſaith he not, Why are we baptized, rather then they, ſeeing that he himſelfe vſed, as they ſay, to pray for the dead? And whereas he ſaith, the Apoſtle doth vrge rather the ancient cuſtome of the Iewes, that praied for the dead, then the vſe of the Church, and therefore, ſaith, they, not we: it is falſe that the Iewes had any ſuch cuſtome, but rather the contrary, for Dauid praied for his childe, while he liued; but ceaſed to pray for him being dead. Thirdly, it is more agreeable to the text, to vnderſtand Baptiſme properly, for the Baptiſme of water, then coactly for the Baptiſme of teares: and ſo S. Ambroſe ſaith, that the Apoſtle alludeth to the erroneous vſe of ſome, that did either baptize the dead, or were baptized for the dead, in hope of the reſurrection. And whereas Bellarmine obiecteth, that the Apoſtle then would haue giuen ſome ſignification of this error, and not ſo lightly haue touched it: S. Ambroſe anſwereth, that the Apoſtle adding further, And why are we in ieopardie? but ſaith not, Why are we baptized? Diſcreuit perſonas, oſtendens non catholicos eſſe,&c. Hee doth diſcerne the perſons, ſhewing, that they were not Catholikes, that were thus baptized for the dead, Ambroſ. in hunc locum. This expoſition is better, and more agreeable, then Bellarmines: Firſt, becauſe in this ſenſe, we are not forced to take Baptiſme, for any ſuch new found Baptiſme, but properly for Baptiſme indeede. Secondly, becauſe in the Baptiſme of water there is a ſignification of the reſurrection, and a profeſſion of the hope thereof, which is agreeable to the Apoſtles purpoſe: but in the Baptiſme of teares there is no ſuch ſignification or repreſentation. Thirdly, becauſe that in the Baptiſme of water, the Baptiſme of teares is included, for prayer is made for the partie baptized: ſo that if Baptiſme of water bee applied to the dead, they haue alſo benefite by the Baptiſme of teares. Fourthly, this expoſition is more reaſonable, becauſe of S. Ambroſe authoritie: yet it is no fit or proper interpretation of this place; as S. Chryſoſtome in his commentarie ſheweth by theſe reaſons:

Firſt, becauſe that Marcion that wicked heretike, whoſe followers did vſe to put one in the dead mans bed, after he was departed, and ſo baptized him for the dead, did alleage this place for that ſuperſtitious vſe, which might ſerue his turne very well; the Apoſtle giuing approbation thereof, without any word of reprehenſion at all, if this place were ſo to be vnderſtood.

Secondly, as theſe words of Chriſt, Vnleſſe you eate my fleſh and drinke my blood, &c. are ſpoken to the liuing, and not to the dead: ſo likewiſe, where he ſaith, Except a man be borne of water and the ſpirit, muſt be taken as ſpoken to the liuing.

Thirdly, if this were ſufficient for a man to be baptized when he is dead; then there might be hope for Pagans, Infidels, Iewes, when they are dead: vpon theſe reaſons Chryſoſtome infringeth this interpretation allowed by Ambroſe, which comming neerer the Apoſtles ſcope then Bellarmines, yet miſſing the marke, ſheweth his expoſition to be abſurd and vnreaſonable.

Secondly, then let vs ſee how this place is truely expounded: ſome therefore doe vnderſtand it of thoſe, who either deferring their Baptiſme, or not being before admitted to it of the Church, becauſe they were lately conuerted from Paganiſme, did deſire Baptiſme vpon their death-bed, being in a manner dead: and ſo were baptized for dead, that is, as dead. But this expoſition is not ſufficient: firſt, becauſe the Apoſtle ſhould haue ſeemed to approue their negligence, that did driue Baptiſme to ſuch a ſtreight, as to the point of death. Secondly, the argument of the Apoſtle being drawne from a particular cuſtome of ſome, and not from the generall vſe of the Church, could not ſo ſtrongly conclude. Thirdly, becauſe the force of the Apoſtles reaſon is drawne from Baptiſme, and being baptized, the firſt part of the propoſition, and not from the latter, for dead: for it followeth not, they that are deadly ſicke deſire to bee baptized: Ergo, they expect a reſurrection: vnleſſe that the reſurrection were ſhadowed forth in Baptiſme.

Wherefore leauing all by-expoſitions, I take none more fully to expreſſe the Apoſtles meaning, then that of Saint Chryſoſtome; who draweth the Apoſtles argument from the end and ſcope of Baptiſme, wherein whether wee conſider the confeſſion vttered in Baptiſme, the repreſentation of Baptiſme, or the efficacie thereof, whether theſe all together, or by themſelues; wee ſhall finde the argument to conclude: For the confeſſion, he ſaith, Hoc ad finem cum baptizaturi ſumus, &c. In the end, being about to baptize, we bid them ſay, I beleeue the reſurrection of the dead: For the repreſentation, Aquam ſubire & hinc remeare, &c. To goe into the water, and returne out of the water, are ſymboles, the one of deſcending, ad inferos, to the dead; the other, of riſing againe: and therefore S. Paul calleth Baptiſme the graue, Ye are buried then by Baptiſme into his death. And the Apoſtle further ſaith, That by Baptiſme we are graft into the ſimilitude of his death, and into the ſimilitude of his reſurrection, verſ. 6. For the third, the efficacie of Baptiſme, he ſaith, Spiritus ſanctus, &c. The ſpirit in Baptiſme conſumeth ſinne, as in a furnace, &c. and therefore the cauſe of death, which is ſinne, being extinct, death it ſelfe ſhall ceaſe, and the reſurrection follow. Thus then the Apoſtle ſaith, They are baptized for dead, that is, to die vnto ſinne, that they alſo may be partakers of Chriſts reſurrection. This expoſition is both ſound, and good, and moſt agreeable to the Apoſtles purpoſe: neither are the contrarie obiections of any moment. Rom. 6. 6.

First, Bellarmine obiecteth, that if the Apoſtle had ſpoken ſimply of Baptiſme, hee would haue ſaid, why are we baptized, as afterward, Why are we alſo in ieopardie? for the Apoſtle was baptized into the death of Chriſt as well as the reſt.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith, We are in ieopardie, as giuing a ſpeciall inſtance of himſelfe: as afterward, verſ. 32. he maketh mention of his fighting with beaſts at Epheſus, after the faſhion of the Gentiles, which was a caſe peculiar to himſelfe. Secondly, the Apoſtle is not excluded, though hee ſpeake ſometime in the ſecond perſon, as verſ. 17. If Chriſt be not raiſed, your faith is in vaine; and ſo ſhould S. Pauls faith be in vaine alſo: ſometime in the third, as they that vſe this world muſt be as though they vſed it not, which ſaying extendeth alſo to the Apoſtle. Thirdly, this obiection maketh as much againſt Bellarmines expoſition, ſeeing that hee thinketh that the Apoſtle did baptize himſelfe with teares for the dead: and yet he ſaith not, Why are we baptized? 1. Cor. 15. 32. 1. Cor. 7. 31.

Secondly, the ſentence is repeated againe, Why are they baptiſed for the dead? And againe, Why are they baptized for them? that is the dead, which muſt be vnderſtood of thoſe that are dead; for otherwiſe they are baptized not for them, but for themſelues. Bellarm.

Anſw. The Latine text ſo readeth, as the Ieſuite alleageth: But the originall Greeke, repeateth the ſame ſentence, Why are they baptized for the dead? So then this obiection is nothing.

Wherefore all this notwithſtanding, our expoſition remaineth ſound, and inuiolable: firſt, becauſe it is authorized by collation of Scripture, Rom. 6. 6. as we haue ſeene. Secondly, the argument doth conclude more ſtrongly from the generall cuſtome of the Church in Baptiſme, then from any ſpeciall vſe. Thirdly, Saint Chryſoſtome, the beſt of the fathers, without compariſon, for the right interpreting of Scripture, ſo expoundeth it. Wherefore this ſentence of the Apoſtle, Why are they baptized for the dead? doth ſet forth the fruite and efficacie of Baptiſme, whereby wee are made partakers of Chriſts death, and are nouriſhed into the hope of his reſurrection: and ſo conſequently maketh nothing at all for Purgatorie.

Doway Bible. pag.33. Math.5.26. Our Doway Collegials would proue purgatorie, both by the iuſtice of God: for when anie dieth penitent, and yet haue not made full ſatisfaction, they muſt ſuffer for that remaineth after death, and be purged before they can enter into reſt, which remnant of debt our Sauiour calleth the laſt farthing, and ſaith, it muſt be payed, &c. as alſo by the Iewes, who at this day hold the doctrine of purgatorie by tradition, and conſequently pray for the ſoules departed.

Ezech.18.22. Anſwere.1. If a man die truly penitent, all his ſinnes are forgiuen him in Chriſt, none of his tranſgreſſions ſhall be mentioned: as the thiefe was receiued to mercie vpon the Croſſe, there was no further ſatisfaction required. 2. The ſatisfaction to Gods iuſtice is not paide by vs, but by Chriſt, who hath ſufficiently ſatisfied for our ſinnes: toward the remiſſion of ſinnes onely a liuely faith in Chriſt is required of vs: to ſay then, that a man by his owne ſatisfaction muſt pay the vttmoſt farthing of his debt vnto God, is a blaſphemous aſſertion and derogatorie to the value of Chriſts death: yet that place in Matthew is not for their turne, as is ſhewed before in the anſwere to the fifth argument. 3 The ſuperſtitious Iewes are fit patrones of ſuch blinde doctrine: and what warrant haue the Iewes? Gregor. de Valent. Anal. fid. lib.8. c.6. They doe well to ſay, they hold Purgatorie by tradition: for as one of their Ieſuites ſaith, Nihil ea de re in lege ſcriptum ſit, Nothing is written thereof in the law, &c. And it may well goe among the traditions of the Elders, Mark.7.9. which our Sauiour Chriſt reproueth them for: Yee lay aſide the commandements of God, to obſerue your owne traditions: 2.Macchab.12.40. For a tradition was that to offer ſacrifice, for thoſe which died in mortall ſinne, namely idolatrie, for when they were dead, the idolatrous iewels were found vnder Buxdorfius Synog. Iudaic. c.11. their coates: and that, which is yet in practiſe among the Iewes, in the celebration of their Sabbath to poure wine vpon the ground, thinking that thoſe which were ſwallowed vp with rebellious Corah, doe finde refreſhing thereby: I thinke their coſin germanes the Papiſts will hardly allow of ſuch traditions.

The Proteſtants.

THat there is no ſuch place of Purgatorie after this life, but that here onely is the place of repentance, and to be reconciled vnto God; and that the ſoules departed are preſently either receiued vp to heauen, or thruſt downe to hell: thus it is proued out of the Scriptures.

Eccleſi.12.14. Mark.16.16. Matth.25. Argum.1. The Scripture maketh but two kindes of workes, either good or euill: But two ſorts of men, he that beleeueth ſhall be ſaued, hee that beleeueth not, ſhall be condemned: But two places, heauen and hell. Chriſt hath but two flockes, one of ſheepe, at the right hand; another of goates at the left: and hee ſaith to the one, Come ye bleſſed: to the other, Goe ye curſed. There are but two ſorts of men, therefore but two places: Ergo, no Purgatorie.

Bellarm. There ſhall be indeede at the comming of Chriſt but two places, Heauen and Hell: Purgatorie ſhall haue an end.

Anſw. Firſt, you ſay your ſelues that there ſhall be two infernall places for euer, Hell for the wicked, and a Limbus for infants that die vnbaptized, and Heauen that maketh three; and now you ſay there ſhall be but two. Secondly, there are but two places now, because there are but two ſorts of men: Iohn 5.24. for the beleeuers are alreadie paſſed from death to life, Iohn 3.18. The vnbeleeuers are alreadie condemned. Thirdly, Auguſtine conſenteth with vs, Non eſt vlli vllus medius locus, vt poſſit eſſe niſi cum diabolo, qui non eſt cum Chriſto: There is no middle or third place, but he muſt needes be with the diuell, that is not with Chriſt, De peccator. remiſſ. & merit. lib.1. cap.28. And againe, Tertium locum penitus ignoramus, imo nec eſſe in ſcripturis ſanctis inuenimus: The third place beſide heauen and hell, wee are vtterly ignorant of; nay we finde not in Scripture that there is any.

Eccleſ.11.3. Argum.2. Whether the tree fall toward the South, or the North, where it falleth there it ſhall be. This place our aduerſaries grant to be vnderſtood of the ſtate of the dead, which are diſpoſed of to two places; there is not then a third, and ſo conſequently no Purgatorie.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, by the South the ſtate of ſaluation is vnderſtood, which alſo comprehendeth Purgatorie.

Contra. Firſt, if to fall to the South, be to enter into the ſtate of ſaluation, then the Patriarches that died before Chriſt, preſently had poſſeſſion of euerlaſting ſaluation, and ſo they haue loſt their Limbus. Secondly, it is ſtrange, ſeeing they make Purgatorie a part and member of hell, that they will comprehend in one word, heauen and hell together.

Secondly, ſaith hee, we may by the South vnderſtand heauen, and by the North hell, but then euery tree falleth not either North or South.

Contra. Firſt, this Scripture maketh mention but of theſe two places of the dead, and ſo you grant your Purgatorie to be deuiſed beſide Scripture, as it is indeede. Secondly, the text ſaith, in quocunque loco, in what place ſoeuer it falleth; ſo that to fall to the South or North, is what place ſoeuer, that is, all and euery place toward the which the tree falleth.

Thirdly, if this place ouerthrow Purgatorie, it ouerthroweth as well alſo Limbus Patrum, whither the Fathers went before Chriſt. Bellarm.

Contra. We grant all, that this place maketh againſt both the one and the other: for as there is not now a third place of Purgatorie beſide Heauen and Hell, ſo neither was there then of Limbus.

Rom.8.1. Argum.3. There is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Ieſus: but all ordained to ſaluation are in Chriſt Ieſus, therefore to ſuch there is no condemnation: Ergo, no Purgatorie: for to be caſt in- Matth.5.25. to priſon, which they ſay is Purgatorie, is a condemnation.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that S. Paul by condemnation vnderſtandeth the contagion of ſinne, that commeth bp the concupiſcence of the fleſh, which they haue not that are in Chriſt Ieſus.

Contra. Firſt, ſinne is one thing, and the wages of ſinne is another, which is death or condemnation, Rom. 6.25. therefore by condemnation the Apoſtle vnderſtandeth not ſinne. Secondly, if they that are in Chriſt haue no ſinne, much leſſe doth the puniſhment of ſinne, which they ſay is in Purgatorie, abide them.

Rom.6.25.

Argum.4. 2. Cor. 5.1. We know, that if our earthly houſe be diſſolued, we haue an houſe in heauen not made with hands, &c. Wherefore it followeth, that the ſeruants of Chriſt preſently after their diſſolution enter into heauen.

2.Cor.5.1.

Bellarmine: The Apoſtle ſaith not, that all the godly preſently after death goe vnto their heauenly houſe, but onely thoſe that are clothed with righteouſneſſe, as it followeth, verſ. 3. If ſo wee be found clothed, not naked.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtle meaneth no ſuch clothing: but the clothing, whereof hee ſpeaketh, is to be clothed with our houſe from heauen, verſ. 2. and then hee addeth, not preſcribing a condition, but rendring a reaſon, why wee deſire to bee clothed with our heauenly houſe, verſ. 2. becauſe being clothed (that is with our heauenly houſe, Wee ſhall not bee found naked. Secondly, that all the godly ſtraight after their diſſolution are clothed with the heauenly houſe; it followeth, verſ. 4. That we may not be vnclothed, but clothed vpon. But if any godly being vnclothed of their fleſh by death, ſhould not preſently be clothed with immortalitie, then ſhould they be vnclothed, which the Apoſtle denieth.

Argum.5. Saint Paul ſaith, that euery man ſhall receiue the workes of his bodie, according to that which hee hath done either good or euill. Therefore there is no place to cleanſe and purge the ſoules of men after this life: for then they ſhould not receiue according to the workes done in their fleſh.

2.Cor.5.10.

Bellarmine ſaith, that euen they whoſe ſinnes are remitted after death, doe receiue nothing but that which was done in the fleſh, for they deſerued in their life time to be helped after death.

Anſwere. Firſt, as for deſert, wee will ſhew elſe where, that it hath no place before God neither in this life, nor the life to come; for the Scripture ſaith, Bleſſed is hee to whom the Lord imputeth no ſinne: not who deſerueth remiſſion of ſinnes, Rom. 4. 6. Secondly, this deuiſed and friuolous diſtinction, doth not ſtand with the Apoſtles meaning: for hee ſpeaketh of things actually done in the fleſh, not deſerued to bee done, and of the workes of the body, not of the ſoule, and of things perfectly done, not begun onely or inchoate: and hee vſeth it as a reaſon to perſwade men, euen while they liue, to bee accepted of God, verſ 9. 11. But if there might bee any ſuch helpe after death, there needeth no ſuch haſt preſently to bee conuerted vnto God. Thirdly, if they deſerued any thing in their life, why deſerued they not preſently to haue forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, as well as afterward?

Argum.6. Apocal. 14.13. Bleſſed are the dead from henceforth that die in the Lord, for they reſt from their labours: Ergo, there is no Purgatorie: for all the godly departed are at reſt.

Apoc.14.13.

Bellarmine. Firſt, it is not meant of all the godly, but onely of Martyrs, which die for the name of Chriſt.

Anſwere. As to liue in Chriſt Ieſus, is a phraſe of Scripture, and ſignifieth to liue godly in Chriſt, 2. Tim. 3. 12. ſo to die in the Lord, ſignifieth to die in the faith of Chriſt, 1. Theſſ. 4. 16. Therefore this place is vnderſtood of all the godly.

1.Tim.3.12.
1.Theſſ.4.16.

Bellarm.2. This word (amodo) from henceforth, is not to be vnderſtood ſtraight after their death, but ſtraight after the day of iudgement, then they ſhall be bleſſed.

Anſwere. Firſt, by this reaſon none that are dead in Chriſt ſhould be happie before that time. And yet by your owne confeſſion, Martyrs are ſtraightway receiued vp to heauen. Secondly, S. Iohn vſeth this word elſewhere, to ſignifie from this time forward, as Ioh. 1. 51. Chriſt ſaith to Nathanael, From henceforth you ſhall ſee heauen open.

Iohn 1.51.

Rhemiſt. Thirdly, it may be alſo vnderſtood of the ſoules in Purgatorie, that are without danger of ſinne and damnation, and are put in vnfallible ſecuritie of their ſaluation, with vnſpeakeable comfort.

Anſwere. Firſt, ſo the Saints liuing are bleſſed, being as well without feare of damnation, and are aſſured of their ſaluation. Secondly, I pray you what reſt or comfort can they haue, that endure greater paine then any in this life? And how can their conſciences be quieted, ſeeing their ſoules are ſo afflicted? for bodies they haue none, whatſoeuer they ſuffer is in ſoule: how then can ioy and paine, comfort and horror be together in the ſoule?

Rom.8.16.

Let vs ſee the iudgement of former times: Concil. Aquiſgranenſ. lib. 1. cap. 1. Tribus modis peccata mortalium vindicantur, &c. The ſinnes of mortall men are three wayes puniſhed, two wayes in this life, and one in the next: Of the two wayes the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, if wee would iudge our ſelues, &c. This is the puniſhment wherein euery ſinner taketh reuenge in himſelfe: Afterward hee ſaith, but when wee are iudged of God, wee are chaſtiſed, &c. This is the puniſhment, which God in mercy doth lay vpon ſinners: The third is moſt fearefull and terrible, not in this but the next world, when the iuſt Iudge ſhal ſay, Depart from me ye curſed, &c. We ſee then that Purgatorie by the ſentence of this Councell is excluded, for it is none of theſe three kindes of puniſhments here expreſſed.

And yet we haue more euident teſtimonie out of their owne Canons, Gelaſius epiſtol. ad Anaſtaſium; Quę ſolueris ſuper terram,&c. That which thou bindeſt vpon earth: vpon the earth, for hee that dieth being thus bound, can no where be abſolued: Therefore he that is not abſolued in this life, cannot be afterwards: Ergo, no Purgatorie.

Againe, the ſame Gelaſ. decret. 2. de eo, qui in diuino iudicio eſt conſtitutus,&c. Concerning him that is committed to the diuine iudgement, it is not lawfull to iudge any other thing, then that, wherein he died.

Decret. part. 2. cauſ. 33. diſtinct. 1. c. 39. Non meretur iuſtificari: Hee is not worthie to be iuſtified, which did not confeſſe his ſinnes, while he liued.

Ibid. c. 49. Leo; Quod manens in corpore non recepit: That which a man in his bodie receiued not, being vncloathed of his fleſh, he cannot obtaine,&c. If then there be no remiſſion of ſinnes after this life, then conſequently no Purgatorie.

And as touching the word purifying or purging, whereof Purgatorie is deriued, their owne Canons call repentance, Purificatorium ignem pœnitudinis, the purifying fire, decret. p. 2. cauſ. 24. qu. 1. c. 11. If Repentance be a Purgatorie fire, what neede another Purgatorie fire afterward.

Let them heare alſo the iudgement of one of their owne writers, Animarum poſt diſſolutionem carnis ſuum quaq; ſtatum immutabilem ſortiuntur: Euery ſoule after the diſſolution of the fleſh, doe enter into their immutable ſtate, Eſpenc. in 2. Timoth. p. 144. d If the ſtate of euery ſoule after death be immutable, then there is no Purgatorie; for that ſtate is mutable and temporall by their owne confeſſion.

Let vs adioyne the teſtimonie of the holy Martyrs, Richard Feurus, French Martyr, being asked if he beleeued any Purgatorie, anſwered: I beleeue that Chriſt with his precious bloud hath made an
Pag. 833. 1. 20. end of all Purgatorie, and purgation of our ſinnes, Fox pag. 913. col. 1. Francis Rebezies holy Martyr, Pag. 841. 1. 30. I doe acknowledge that Purgatorie, which is the death an d paſſion of Chriſt. Fox pag. 922. col. 1.

Iohn Frith holy Martyr, I beleeue there is no ſuch place to purge the ſpots and filth of the ſoule after this life: for man conſiſteth of two parts, that is of body and ſoule, whereof the one is purged here in this world, by affliction, perſecution, impriſonment, and laſt of all by death it ſelfe, and the ſoule is purged by the word of God, which wee receiue through faith,&c. Now, if you can ſhew mee a third part of man beſide the body and the ſoule, I will alſo grant vnto you the third place which is Purga-

Maſter Latimer Martyr thinketh the deuiſe of Purgatorie, to be a meere imagination & fancie, and ſaith vpon this ground, that he would rather chuſe to be in Purgatorie, then in the Lollars tower: And
Pag. 1580. 2. 50. of this his ſpeech he rendreth many ſufficient reaſons: See more, Fox. pag. 1741. col. 2.

Of the Greeke Church we haue Chryſoſtome, who doth otherwiſe interprete that place. 1. Cor. 3. Whereupon the Romaniſts chiefely ground their Purgatorie: by hay and ſtubble hee vnderſtandeth euill workes: and where the Apoſtle ſaith, He ſhall ſuffer yet as it were by the fire: Hee vnderſtandeth it of euerlaſting puniſhment: In perpetuo ſupplicio manebit, Hee ſhall remaine in perpetuall puniſh-
Nilus lib. de purgator. ment, and ſo ſhall be preſerued in the fire. This ſenſe the Greeke Church followeth at this day, as Nilus ſaith, that properly in the Greeke tongue this word τὸ σωθῆναι, ſignifieth to remaine and haue a being: and he alleageth Chryſoſtome for this expoſition inſerting alſo this narration, that while Chryſoſtome was perplexed in finding out the meaning of that place, he prayed vnto S. Paul, who appeared Nilus. ibid. vnto him and ſtood at his elbow three euenings together, not ſeene of Chryſoſtome himſelfe, but of Proclus one of his ſchollers, that attended on him, who tolde ſo much vnto Chryſoſtome, who by the deſcription of the man which Proclus ſaw ſtanding by him, one with a balde head, and like in all reſpects to the picture of Paul, which Chryſoſtome had before him, iudged him to bee Saint Paul, who directed him to this interpretation. But if any ſuch thing had beene, it is like that Chryſoſtome in his commentarie vpon this place, would not haue omitted it. But to leaue this vncertaine, and fabulous report, Nilus proceedeth to confirme this interpretation, vnderſtanding by the day, the day of iudgement: and ſheweth out of Baſile, how the fire hath two properties, the one is καυστική, conſuming, burning; the other φωτιστική, illuminating: that propertie ſhall be exerciſed by the fire vpon the wicked, other vpon the righteous: and ſo euerie one ſhall be tried by the fire of the day of iudgement. But it ſhall not neede, to proſecute this interpretation more at large, ſeeing it is refuſed before, as not agreeable to the meaning of the Apoſtle in this place: onely thus much I haue inſerted to ſhew the diuers interpretation of the Greekes from the Latines: I will now proceede, to ſhew, that as they differ in the expoſition of this place, ſo they diſſent in the opinion of Purgatorie it ſelfe.

Nilus vrgeth theſe arguments againſt Purgatorie fire. 1. The Scripture maketh not mention of αἰώνιον πῦρ, πρόσκαιρον πῦρ. two puniſhments after this life, nor two fires: wee there finde euerlaſting fire prepared for the diuell and his Angels, but no temporarie fire.

2. There is no neceſſitie of deuiſing Purgatorie, in reſpect of Gods iuſtice, for the puniſhing of ſmall and veniall ſinnes: for it is more agreeable to Gods goodnes to reward a ſmall good, then to puniſh a ſmall euill. Now then as a little good in the wicked ſhall not procure vnto them a reward: ſo neither a little euill among many good vertues, ſhall procure puniſhment: the difference of reward and puniſhment will helpe this matter: a new place of puniſhment is not neceſſarie.

3. He alleageth Gregorie to this purpoſe; that after this life, it is a time of punition, not of purgation: and writing vpon the Paſch, which was not to be left any part of it till the morning, he ſaith, that after the preſent night of this life, there is no purgation. κόλασεως καιρὸς ὁ καθάρσεως μὴ ὄντος καθαρσις.

4. It is againſt the nature of the ſoule, which is incorporall, to be puniſhed with corporall fire.

5. The doctrine of purgatorie fire, which ſhall haue an end, giueth occaſion of reuiuing the error of Origen, concerning the reſtoring of all things in the end, and of the waſting of hell fire. εἰς ῥαθυμίαν ἐμποιεῖν.

6. This doctrine is to bee baniſhed out of the Church, as breeding ſecuritie in mens mindes, that they ſhould not endeuour by all diligence to be purged in this life. To this purpoſe Nilus. Sacranus, err.33.

The Muſcouites to this day herein concurre and conſent with the Greeke Church: aſſerunt non eſſe purgatorium: they ſay there is no purgatorie, but only two receptacles of ſoules after this life, heauen and hell. Againe, another ſaith, Purgatorium Græci & Rutheni negant: The Greekes and Ruſſians denie Purgatorie, but ſay, that euery one after this life receiueth according to his workes the place appointed for him, where he expecteth the day of iudgement, &c. Guagnin.de relig.Muſcouit.

2. The ſame hath been the opinion of the South Church of Africa. Cyprian ſaith, Ad refrigerium iuſti vocantur, ad ſupplicium rapiuntur iniuſti: The righteous are called to their refreſhing, the vnrighteous are carried to puniſhment. Serm.de mortalit. Fulgentius, when he lay a dying, did often repeate theſe words: Domine hic da mihi pœnitentiam, poſtea indulgentiam: Lord grant me repentance here, and afterward forgiuenes. He beleeued that after death no comfort was to bee found, which was not ſought for in this life by repentance: Vuirantius, lib. 20.c.107. what the doctrine is now of the South Church in Aethiopia is not ſo certaine. Damianus a Goes ſetteth downe in the confeſſion of Zaga Zabo an Aethiopike Biſhop, that ſoules are tormented in Purgatorie, and that two daies euery weeke, the Sabbath and Lords day, (which both they keepe holy, the one out of the Law, the other for the Goſpell) the ſoules in Purgatorie haue reſt: and that they had eaſe by the almes-deeds of the liuing: but their Patriarke can grant no indulgence, to ſhorten their time of puniſhment, that belongeth (they ſay) to God onely. Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop. But Aluares, who dwelt a long time among them, whereas Damianus ſpeaketh vpon report, ſaith that they vſe no prayers for the dead, but onely read at their buriall the Goſpell of S. Iohn: which ſheweth that they hold no Purgatorie: for then conſequently they would pray for them. Deſcript. Æthiop.c.5.

3. Heluetia, latter confeſſion, cap.232. We beleeue that the faithfull after their bodily death, goe directly vnto Chriſt. Harm.ſect.16. pag.483. Wittemberge, artic.25. Neither the Prophets nor Apoſtles haue in their writings deliuered vs any thing (concerning Purgatorie) certainly, but rather the contrarie, &c. he that dieth in the faith of Chriſt, &c. wanteth nothing toward the obtaining of euerlaſting life: but he which departeth hence without Chriſt, goeth into eternall darknes. Sect.16.p.508.

4. Moſt of the places alleaged before by Bellarmine and the Rhemiſts for the proofe of Purgatorie, are refuſed by their fellowes: as that place Pſal.66. reiected by Prutus vpon Eſay 43. Matth. 5.22. by Suarez, tom.4. in Thom. diſput.45. Matth.5.25. by Ianſenius vpon that place, 1.Cor.3.11. by Pererius in Geneſ.6.13. See further before the decrees of Gelaſius and other Canons againſt Purgatorie.

THE SECOND PART, OF THE CIRCVMSTANCES and other matters belonging to Purgatorie.

The Papiſts.

1. They ſay it is an article of faith, to beleeue that there is a Purgatorie, and that he, which beleeueth it not, is ſure to goe to hell, Bellarm.lib.1.de Purgatorio, cap.11.

The Proteſtants.

We hold, that it is not onely an article belonging to the faith, but contrarie to it: and that though there were a Purgatorie, yet it ſhould not bee neceſſarie to ſaluation to beleeue it. 11.Error. Firſt, becauſe the Scripture hath not determined it, which containeth all things neceſſarie to ſaluation. Secondly, the Greeke Church holdeth it not to this day: they confeſſe no Purgatorie fire, though they pray for the dead: as may bee ſeene in the Florentine Councell, ſeſſ.25. it were a hard matter therefore to pronounce them damned. Thirdly, Auguſtine doubted of it: He ſaith, that there ſhould be ſome ſuch place after death, non incredibile eſt, it is not incredible, & vtrum ita ſit, quæri poteſt; & aut inueniri aut latere fideles poteſt: whether it be ſo or not, it may be enquired, and it may either be ſafely found out, or remaine hid and vnknowne to the faithfull: Enchirid.69. Auguſtine ſaith, A faithfull man may ſafely be ignorant of Purgatorie.

The Papiſts.

2. They ſay they, onely goe to Purgatorie, that die in their veniall and light tranſgreſſions, or which haue their ſinnes remitted, but not ſatisfied for the puniſhment, Bellarm, lib.2.de Purgat.cap.1. 12.Error.

The Proteſtants.

Rom.6.23. FIrſt, we denie that any ſinnes are of their owne nature veniall, as they affirme, for the wages of all ſinne, without the mercie of God, is death. Secondly, what equitie ſhould there be in this, that veniall ſinnes ſhould be puniſhed with the helliſh fire of Purgatorie, that exceedeth all the afflictions of this life, yea and a longer time then any man liueth vpon earth; for the Pope taketh vpon him to pardon for thouſands of yeeres: and yet mortall and deadly ſinnes (as they call them) may be ſatisfied for here, where neither the penance can be ſo grieuous, nor ſo long? Thirdly, the ſinne once remitted, Mark.2.5.10. there remaineth no puniſhment: Mark.2.5 Chriſt ſaith to the ſicke of the palſie, Thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee: and verſ.10. That ye may know that the Sonne of man hath authoritie on earth to forgiue ſinnes, I ſay vnto thee, ariſe, take vp thy bed and walke. The releaſing him of the puniſhment of his bodie, was a ſigne that his ſinnes alſo were forgiuen, and the ſinne being remitted, the puniſhment alſo ceaſeth. Wherefore who ſo leaueth the world without ſin, is no more guiltie of any puniſhment.

The Papiſts.

13.Error. Eccleſ.9.5. 3. THe ſoules in Purgatorie doe neither ſinne any more, neither can they merit. Eccleſ.9.5. The dead know nothing at all: verſ.10. there is neither worke, knowledge, nor wiſedome in the graue, *Bellarm.cap.*2.

The Proteſtants.

WE ſay, that if there were any ſuch place as Purgatorie, the ſoules there tormented, muſt needes both increaſe in charitie and righteouſnes, becauſe the more they are purged the more pure they are, and the leſſe droſſe is in them: and being in vnſpeakable torments, they cannot chuſe but tremble and feare; yea and alſo be diſquieted in their ſoules, as the Saints were ſometime in their afflictions here vpon earth; and therefore cannot be without ſinne: for feare hath painfulnes, as the A- 1.Ioh.4.18. poſtle ſaith, and he that feareth is not perfect in loue: Ergo, a ſeruile or ſlauiſh feare is ſinne. That place alleaged doth not only take away meriting or working from the dead, but all knowledge and vnderſtanding. And it is ſpoken in the perſon of the Epicure and ſenſuall man, that thinketh that the dead know nothing.

The Papiſts.

14.Error. 4. THey affirme, that the ſoules in Purgatorie are certaine of their ſaluation in the midſt of their torments: for euery ſoule departed, ſtraight after death receiueth ſentence of life or death, *Bellarm.cap.*4.

The Proteſtants.

Anſw. FIrſt, that euery ſoule is iudged preſently after death, we grant: and it maketh ſtrongly againſt your Purgatorie: for the ſentence giuen is either of death or life; and the ſentence being giuen is accordingly executed: ſo that they which receiue ſentence of life goe preſently to heauen, the other to hell. For to what purpoſe elſe ſhould the ſentence be giuen, if it be not ſtraight- 2.Cor.5.1.3.4. waies in force? So S.Paul ſaith, that they which looke to be cloathed with their houſe from heauen, ſhall not bee left naked or vncloathed. But if ſome ſoules ordained to life eternall, ſhould pauſe a while in Purgatorie, being vncloathed of their fleſh, they ſhould be left altogether naked, hauing not yet receiued their cloathing from heauen. Secondly, where there is ſecuritie of ſaluation, there is the greateſt comfort and ioy that can be: how then can the ſoules in Purgatory be ſo grieuouſly tormented, which cannot be elſewhere then in their conſcience? for as for the whipping, ſcalding, freezing of ſoules in Purgatorie, they are but old wiues fables: the ioy then of the ſoule is in the conſcience, ſo is the ſorrow: how then can both theſe be matched in the ſoule together, to haue vnſpeakable ioy, as alſo to feele moſt horrible paine?

5. In theſe points alreadie ſet downe, our aduerſaries wee ſee are bold to define certainly of Purgatorie: but there are as many points, and ſomewhat more, which they leaue in doubt and vncertaine. Firſt, where Purgatorie ſhould be: Bellarmine geſſeth it is in the bowels of the earth next to hell, *cap.*6. ſo doe the Rhemiſts, Luke 16.*ſect.*8. But they doe not all agree, neither hath their Church defined it. Secondly, they cannot tell how many yeeres Purgatorie endureth, whether an hundred, or two hundred, or a thouſand yeeres. Thirdly, they cannot tell certainly whether it be materiall fire which burneth in Purgatorie, but they ſay it is probable. Fourthly, neither can they ſhew how corporall fire ſhould worke vpon the ſoules in Purgatorie, being ſpirituall and incorporall, *Bellar.cap.*12. Fifthly, they are vncertaine, whether the diuels or Angels be the tormentors in Purgatorie, *cap.*13. Sixthly, whether the paine of Purgatorie be at all times alike, or by little and little ſlacked toward the end; and whether it doe exceed all the paines and ſorrowes of this life, they yet remaine vncertaine, and are not able to determine, *Bellarm.lib.*2.*de purgat.cap.*14. Let vs leaue them therefore with their vncertainties, and brainſicke phanſies: for the vaine inuentions and imaginations of men haue no end, but are fitly by the Prophet compared to ſparkles, that leape out thicke out of the fire, but are Iſa.50.11. ſoone extinguiſhed. Walke, ſaith the Prophet, in the light of your fire, and ſparkes that you haue kindled: that is, as the ſparkles giue but a dimme light for a man to walke by, hee may ſtumble and grope about ſtill for all that light: euen ſo, no maruelle if the Papiſts doe wander vp and downe in their imaginations, walking by the light and ſparkles of their phantaſticall and mathematicall fire of Purgatorie.

THE THIRD PART, WHETHER THE PRAYERS OF the liuing, or any other workes of theirs doe profit the dead.

The Papiſts.

THeir opinion is, that the prayers of the liuing are neither auailable for the Saints in heauen, for they need them not, nor for the damned in hell, for they cannot be helped; but only for the ſoules tormented in Purgatorie, who doe finde great eaſe, ſay they, by the prayers of the liuing, and therefore we ought to pray for them, Bellarm.lib.2.de purg.c.15.18. Rhem.annot.2.Theſſ.2.ſect.19.

Hæreſ.15.

*Argum.*1. Chriſt while hee liued, profited the dead, for hee raiſed to life the rulers daughter, Matth.9.the widowes ſonne, Luke 7.and Lazarus, which were dead: therefore euen ſo the members of Chriſt ought one to helpe another, the liuing the dead, Bellarm.cap.15.

Anſw. Firſt, is not heere a ſtrong argument, thinke you, Chriſt raiſed Lazarus, and ſome others from death to life: Ergo, we ought to pray for the dead? for it followeth not that vpon the miraculous workes of Chriſt, wee ſhould build the ordinarie duties of Chriſtians: Auguſtine would haue told you that Chriſt is not to be imitated in ſuch workes: Non hæc tibi dicit, non eris diſcipulus meus, niſi ambulaueris ſupra mare, aut niſi ſuſcitaueris quatriduanum mortuum: Hee ſaith not vnto thee, Thou ſhalt not bee my diſciple, vnleſſe thou walke vpon the ſea, and raiſe one that hath been dead foure daies: But, Learne of me, for I am humble and meeke, &c. Secondly, if prayer for the dead be vnto vs, as the raiſing of the dead was to Chriſt: then, as all the dead are to bee praied for, ſo Chriſt ſhould haue raiſed againe all that went then to Purgatorie; or elſe, by your concluſion, hee failed in charitie, as wee doe now, if wee pray not for the dead, as you beare vs in hand. Thirdly, though the Saints departed, and the faithfull liuing are members of the ſame bodie, and ſo are bound in loue one to the other, yet it followeth not, that one ſhould pray for the other. They with vs, and we with them doe wiſh and long to ſee the redemption of the ſonnes of God accompliſhed. But charitie bindeth vs not one to pray for another, becauſe we know not one the particular needs of another. Nay, to pray for any departed, is againſt the rule of charitie: for loue beleeueth all things, and hopeth all things. We ought to hope the beſt of the dead, that they are at reſt: but in praying for them, wee preſuppoſe they are in miſerie, and ſo need our prayers: therefore we hope not the beſt of them, as charitie willeth vs.

Reuel.6.10. chap.22.20.
1.Cor.13.7.

*Argum.*2. There is a mutuall communication of all the members of Chriſts bodie; Saint Paul ſaith, if one member ſuffer, all ſuffer with it: but the righteous departed are members of the ſame bodie: Ergo, the liuing ought to be touched with compaſſion toward them, and aſſiſt them with their prayers, Bellarm.lib.2.de purg.c.15.

1.Cor.12.26.

Anſw. Firſt, though it cannot be denied, but that the Church of God in heauen and earth make but one familie, yet it is euident, that in this place the Apoſtle only ſpeaketh of that part of the Church, which is on earth, wherein Chriſt hath ordained ſome to bee Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, &c. verſ.28. which diſtinction of offices belongeth to the militant Church on earth. Secondly, yet wee graunt that there is a mutuall communication betweene both members, ſuch as is agreeable with their eſtate; namely that the Saints in heauen doe long for a conſummation of our and their happineſſe; and doe wiſh vnto the Church militant, the like happie end of their afflictions, as they haue attained vnto, and the members yet liuing doe giue thankes for the glorious victorie of the Saints in heauen, according as the Apoſtle ſaith, if one member be had in honour, all the members reioyce with it: but the members liuing ſuffer not with the members departed, for as much as they ſuffer not at all, all teares being wiped from their eyes, Apocal.7.17.and therefore they haue no need of our prayers.

Epheſ.3.15.
Reuel.6.10.
1.Cor.12.26.
Apoc.7.17.

*Argum.*3. The Apoſtle ſaith, There is a ſinne vnto death, for the which a man ought not to pray: that is, deadly ſinne, wherein a man dieth without repentance: but for other ſinnes not vnto death, whereof men repent themſelues, it is lawfull to pray: Ergo, wee may pray for thoſe that are departed not in deadly ſinne: for this place is properly to be vnderſtood of praying or not praying for the dead: becauſe ſo long as a man liueth he may be prayed for, becauſe all ſins are pardonable in this life, Rhemiſt.ibid.

1.Ioh.5.16.

Anſw. Firſt, a ſinne vnto death is not onely finall impenitencie, but ſinne alſo againſt the holie Ghoſt, ſuch as was the ſinne of Iudas, and of the Phariſes. Secondly, though we ſhould vnderſtand it of finall impenitencie, yet it is but a ſorrie argument: Some of the dead ought not to be prayed for: Ergo, the reſt may. Thirdly, the text cannot be vnderſtood of praying for the dead: for the text ſaith not, If any man ſee that his brother hath ſinned not vnto death, but, If he ſee him ſinning: but the dead doe neither ſinne, nor are ſeene to ſinne. Fourthly, whereas you ſay, that all ſinnes are pardonable in this life, our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith contrarie, that the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt can neuer bee forgiuen, neither in this world, nor in the world to come. See more of their arguments in the queſtion before of Purgatorie, *Argum.*2.& 7.

Our Doway men doe thus argue vpon theſe words of Iob, Spare me, for my daies are nothing: as Iob prayed God to ſpare him, or to ceaſe to puniſh him more, and to accept of that affliction which he had alreadie ſuffered: ſo the Church in the behalfe of the ſoules departed in ſtate of grace, prayeth God to ſpare, and ceaſe from further puniſhing them, and to giue them eternall reſt, &c. annot.ibid.

Iob 7.16.

Anſw. Is not here now a goodly argument: Iob being aliue prayed for the mitigating of his afflictions: Ergo, in like manner wee may pray for the eaſing of the puniſhment of the ſoules departed: Iob was aliue, thoſe ſoules are departed: Iob felt his affliction, the ſtate of thoſe ſoules is vnknowne to vs: Iob had time and ſpace to repent: but no repentance profiteth after this life: Iob had Gods word and warrant for his prayer: but of praying for the dead the Scripture maketh no mention.

The Proteſtants.

TO pray for the dead, is a worke neither pleaſing before God, becauſe he hath no where commanded it, nor auaileable for them that are departed, becauſe they haue their iudgement alreadie. While wee liue, let vs one pray for another, but when wee are gone, the prayers of the liuing helpe vs not.

Argum. 1. The ground of this popiſh opinion of prayer for the dead, is their ſuperſtitious deuice of Purgatorie: for none elſe doe they hold it lawfull to pray for, but for the ſoules only in Purgatorie. But there is no Purgatorie, as we haue ſhewed before after this life: our purging is onely in this
Heb.1.3. life: Chriſt hath by himſelfe purged our ſinnes: Chriſt his blood is the chiefe and only purgation of our ſinnes: there are alſo other inferiour and miniſteriall purgings, whereby that only ſoueraigne
Math.3.11. purging is made beneficiall, and applied vnto vs: as the inward operation and worke of the ſpirit is

Malach.3.3. There alſo ſhall be a third purging fire in the day of the Lord, when as the corruption and mortali-

1.Cor.15.53. Purgatorie after this life we acknowledge none. Seeing then that there are no ſoules in Purgatorie, and for none elſe it is lawfull to pray but for the ſoules tormented in Purgatorie: it followeth that we are to pray for none at all that are dead.

Iames 1.6. Argum. 2. No prayer is acceptable to God without faith. Wee muſt pray without wauering and doubting. But ſo can we not pray for the dead: for we cannot tell in what caſe they are for whom we pray, whether they be in heauen, hell, or Purgatorie, and therefore we cannot aſſure our ſelues that our Iames 1.7. prayers are heard, but muſt needs pray with great doubting and wauering of the mind: Ergo, ſuch prayers are in vaine, Iames 1.7.

Bellarmine anſwereth, First, it is better, that they ſometime ſhould haue our prayers, that need them not, as the Saints in heauen, then they to want them, that neede them, namely the ſoules in Purgatorie: as wee giue almes many times to the wicked, leſt wee ſhould bee wanting to the righteous.

Contra. Firſt, hee very vnskilfully ſtill beggeth the thing in queſtion, that the ſoules in Purgatorie need our prayers, which wee doe inſtantly denie: ſo that our prayers are not ſuperfluous onely to ſome of the dead, but to all. Secondly, hee would haue men make their prayers, as the blind man ſhooteth at the Crow, that as he ſhooteth many arrowes, that at the leaſt ſome may hit; ſo they to make many prayers, that ſome may preuaile; but the Scripture forbiddeth vs to pray ſo vncertain-
Math.11.24. ly ſaying, whatſoeuer you deſire, when you pray, beleeue, that you ſhall haue it, and it ſhall bee done vnto you. So then, if it were lawfull to pray for the dead, then we ſhould be ſure to helpe all with our prayers, yea euen thoſe, which are in hell, which they themſelues denie. This rule then, it is better to be ſuperfluous in neceſſaries, then to bee defectiue; to abound, rather then to lacke; taketh place in matters arbitrarie, and ſubiect to our will: but where Gods pleaſure is otherwiſe, as in this caſe of praying for the dead, it hath no place at all. Thirdly, the inſtance of almes is not alike, for wee are commanded to doe good vnto all, and ſo to the vniuſt, though chiefly to the houſhold of faith; but there is no commandement to pray for the dead: and againe, almes doe profit all the receiuers, ſo are not prayers profitable to all, that are dead.

Secondly, ſaith he, a good worke is neuer in vaine, it is meritorious to the doer, though it profit not the receiuer. Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, wee denie that any good worke is meritorious. Secondly, that it is no good worke which is not of faith, nor commanded by the Lord: and therefore prayer for the dead, being not warranted by the word, is no good worke, but meere ſuperſtition.

Argum. 3. Our prayers profit not the dead, becauſe there is no place after this life for repentance or remiſſion of ſinnes: for this ſhould be the end and intendment of our prayer, that they might be releaſed of their ſinnes, and eaſed of their paine. There is no remiſſion of ſinnes after death, becauſe there is no true repentance: repentance there is none, becauſe there can be no amendment of life, which al-
Math.3.2.8. waies followeth repentance: for Iohn Baptiſt that was a preacher of repentance, bid not only the peo-
Ezech.18.21. ple to repent, but to bring forth fruits worthie repentance. So ſaith the Prophet Ezechiel, If the wic-
Iſai.1.16.17. ked will returne from his ſinnes, and doe the thing that is lawfull, he ſhall liue and not die. There are two parts then of repentance, as Iſay ſaith, Ceaſe to doe euill, learne to doe well. But there is no place of working out of the body: Ergo then no repentance.

To this Auguſtine agreeth: Non eſt apud inferos pœnitentia ad ſalutem proficiens, ecce nunc tempus eſt ſalutis, nunc tempus remiſſionis, &c. In hac vita pœnitentiæ tantum patet libertas, poſt mortem nulla correctionis eſt licentia: De tempor. ſerm. 66. In hell, or among the dead there is no repentance vnto ſaluation, behold now is the time of ſaluation, the time of forgiueneſſe, &c. In this life only haue men liberty to repent, after death there is no place for amendment, &c. What is become now (I pray you)

you) of your Purgatorie repentance? after this life there is no ſaluation to be had, becauſe there is no remiſſion of ſinnes: no remiſſion of ſinnes, becauſe there is no repentance: there is no repentance, becauſe there is no amendment.

See the conſent of antiquitie againſt prayer to be made for the dead: Gelaſius epiſtol. ad Anaſtaſium Imperator. Quæ ſolueris ſuper terram, &c. ſuper terram (inquit:) nam in hac ligatione defunctum nuſquam dicit abſolui: Whatſoeuer thou looſeſt vpon earth (ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt:) he ſaith, vpon earth; for he that dieth being bound, is no where ſaid to be looſed, &c. If the dead then cannot be looſed from their ſinnes, in vaine are they prayed for. Cenſur.Oriental.cap.12. Lib.2.de Purgat. Serm.17.de verb.Apoſtol.

Concil.Toletan.3.can.22. Qui diuina vocatione ab hac vita recedunt, cum pſalmis tantummodo & pſallentium vocibus debere ad ſepulchra deferri: nam funebre carmen, quod vulgo defunctis cantare ſolet, &c. prohibemus: They which are called by God out of this life, are to be brought to the graue onely with Pſalmes and the voyce of ſingers: for that funerall verſe, which they are woont to ſing to the dead, we doe forbid to be vſed, &c. Here ſinging only and thankſgiuing for the departure of the dead is permitted: and all verſes and whatſoeuer enditings directed to the dead are forbidden: therefore alſo prayers for the dead are vnlawfull by this decree.

Further, prayer for the dead is contrarie to their owne rule: Iniuriam facit Martyri, qui orat pro Martyre: He doth wrong to a Martyr, that prayeth for a Martyr; and therefore whereas in their old Maſſebookes they prayed thus, Annue nobis Domine, vt anima famuli tui Leonis, &c. Grant Lord, this oblation may bee profitable to the ſoule of thy ſeruant Leo; they haue changed the forme thus; Quæſumus domine, vt interceſſione, &c. We beſeech thee Lord, that by the interceſſion of bleſſed Leo, this oblation may bee profitable to vs, Decret.Gregor.lib.3.tit.41.c.6. Wherefore their prayers for the dead muſt needes bee iniurious, ſeeing amongſt others, they pray alſo for many Saints in heauen. De obit. Valentinian.

Thomas Hawkes holy Martyr, hath ſealed this truth: The prayer of the righteous man is auaileable for the liuing, but not for the dead: for Dauid ſaith, no man can deliuer his brother from death, nor make agreement vnto God for him: Pſal.49. Fox pag.1587.col.2. Pag.1442.1.70

1. Chryſoſtome thus ſheweth how all endeuour is in vaine for the dead: Quouſq; nobis tempus conceditur, recte viuamus, &c. neq; gubernator poſtquam nauis ſubmerſa eſt, neq; medicus poſtquam ægrotus obijt, quicquam prodeſſe poteſt: Let vs liue well as long as wee haue time, neither the Pilot when the ſhip is drowned, nor the Phyſition when the ſick man is dead profiteth any thing, &c. Prayer then for the dead is as a Phyſition after death. Ieremie the Patriarke, though in ſome places he ſeemeth to fauour making of prayer and giuing of almes for the dead, hath this ſaying, Tunc demum deſperationis tempus erit, &c. Then is the time of deſpaire, when the nuptiall bed ſhall be ſhut, and they which haue liued well, Abrahæ potientur ſinu, ſhall enioy Abrahams boſome; but yet this time is not come, nondum ſolutum theatrum, necdum curſus confectus eſt, &c. but yet the theater is not diſſolued, the race is not ended, &c. His opinion here is, that after the righteous ſoules are receiued into Abrahams boſome, then the reſt haue no more hope: but this is immediatly after the departure of the ſoules, as Nilus ſheweth out of that parable of Lazarus and the rich man, the one went to Abrahams boſome, a place of happineſſe, the other to a place of torment: there is no middle place (ſaith hee) betweene both. Hom.75. ſuper Matth. Cenſur.Oriental,cap.5. Nil.lib.de Purgator.

And at this day the Greekes vſe a kinde of prayer for the dead, but it is they ſay to this end, that God would put them in a more glorious place, and that they are in a manſion, where the Angels viſite them often, &c. Villamont voiages.lib.2. cap.25.

2. Zaga Zabo an Aethiopian Biſhop, ſaith, Nullum pro remiſſione animarum facimus miſſam, &c. Wee celebrate no Maſſe for the eaſe of ſoules. It is like they vſe ſome kinde of prayer for the dead, but not to eaſe them of any paine, as the Papiſts doe. Damianus a Goes de morib.Æthiop.

3. Heluetia, latter confeſſion, chap.25. We beleeue that the faithfull, after their bodily death goe directly vnto Chriſt, and therefore doe not ſtand in need of the helpe of prayers. Wittemberg, chap.24. He that departeth out of this life in the faith of Chriſt, hath all the merit of Chriſt, and needeth no other: for God that gaue his Sonne doth giue all things with him: But he that departeth hence without Chriſt, cannot be helped by any merits of men, &c. Harm.ſect.16. pag.483. Ibid.ſect.16. pag.507.

4. Whereas diuers of the ancient Fathers are produced as witneſſes of prayer for the dead, as Cyprian, Nazianzene, Chryſoſtome, Auguſtine, Ambroſe, who prayed for the two Emperours Theodoſius and Valentinian being dead, and in the ancient Miſſals, they prayed for Leo, that that oblation might profit his ſoule: wee can haue no better anſwere, then of ſome of the Romaniſts themſelues: as Caſſander, they did it, either to ſhew their loue and affection to the dead, or their hope of the reſurrection, or gratiæ agebantur, &c. they gaue thankes for the glorious victorie of the Martyrs. Yet Bellarmine himſelfe ſaith, Fortaſſe petunt gloriam corporis, in die reſurrectionis: It may be they pray for the glorie of the bodie in the reſurrection, &c. Their manner of praying then for the eaſing of ſoules in Purgatorie ſauoureth not of antiquitie. Caſſander. conſultat. artic.24. Lib.2.de Purgator.c.18.

Now then to conclude this point; whereas there are foure ſtates and conditions held of the ſoules departed, either to be in heauen or hell, as we all beleeue, or elſe ſome to be in a place of ioy, yet inferiour to heauen, as the Greekes, or in Purgatorie a place of torment beſide hell, as the Papiſts: hereupon alſo foure kinde of prayers haue been vſed for the dead: 1. Some haue thought, that euen the damned may finde ſome eaſe by the prayers of the liuing: as Damaſcene, Oration, pro defunctis maketh mention, how the ſoule of Traiane by the prayers of Gregorie, and of Falernilla by the prayers of Tecla were deliuered out of hell: the ſame tales are alſo receiued by Ierome the Patriarke as currant: but Bellarmine reiecteth them as fables, and ſo doe we, for out of hell is no redemption.

Serm.17.de verb.Apoſtoli.

2. The Greekes holding that the ſoules doe not preſently enioy the ſight of God, doe pray that they may be taken into a more glorious place, as is ſhewed before; but this is reiected on both ſides: for as Auguſtine ſaith, Iniuriam facit Martyri, qui orat pro Martyre: He doth wrong to a Martyr, that prayeth for a Martyr.

3. The third kinde is to pray for the ſoules in Purgatorie; but this faſhion no Chriſtian Church either in the Eaſt, South, or Weſt, hath taken vp, but only the Church of Rome; neither is it warranted either by Scripture or antiquitie.

4. The laſt kinde, is to remember in our prayers thoſe which are at reſt and ioy in heauen: which in ſome ſort may be allowed: and that firſt either to giue thankes vnto God for them, being deliuered out of the miſeries of this life; or to ſhew the hope of our reſurrection together with them, as in the Liturgie of S.Baſil, Memento Domine omnium dormientium in ſpe reſurrectionis vitæ æternæ: Remember Lord all ſuch as ſleepe in the hope of the reſurrection to eternall life: and ſo we may ſay of the dead, God ſend him a ioyfull reſurrection: or wee doe wiſh well vnto the dead only to ſhew our loue and affection: as Ambroſe ſaith of Gratian and Valentinian: Beati ambo, ſiquid meæ orationes valebunt, nulla dies vos ſilentio præteribit: Ye two bleſſed ones, if my prayers can auaile ought, no day ſhall paſſe you ouer in ſilence, &c. And ſo the confeſſion of Wittemberg ſaith, Charitie requireth that we ſhould wiſh all peace and happineſſe to them that are dead in the Lord: artic.24.

De obit. Valentiniani.

AN APPENDIX OR AN APPERTINENCE TO this part, concerning the burials and funerals of the dead.

THere are certaine points wherein there is no great variance or diſſenſion betweene vs. Firſt, wee confeſſe, that it is meete and conuenient, that the bodies of Chriſtians, being departed, ſhould after a ſeemely and comely manner be brought to the graue: as Dauid commendeth the men of Iabeſh Gilead, for burying the bodie of Saul, 2.Sam.2.5. The brethren alſo tooke the bodie of Stephen and buried it, Act.8.2. Secondly, it is not to bee denied but that lamentation and ſorrow may be made for the dead, obſeruing S.Pauls rule, that wee mourne not as thoſe that haue no hope, that is, exceſſiuely: where S.Paul doth not ſimply forbid Chriſtians to ſorrow, but not as the Gentiles. The brethren alſo made great lamentation for Stephen, Act.8.2. Thirdly, we doe alſo graunt, that according to the diuers cuſtomes of countries, it is not vnlawfull to vſe ſome comely rites and ceremonies in the buriall of the dead; not for religion, but for orders ſake: as among the Iſraelites, the mourners were wont to goe about in the ſtreetes, Eccleſiaſt.12.5. And Chriſt commended the woman in the Goſpell, for anointing of him againſt his buriall, Mark.14.

1.Theſſ.4.15.

But beſide theſe points by vs confeſſed, and acknowledged, there are other more waightie matters, as touching the order of funerals, wherein wee worthilie and iuſtlie diſſent from our aduerſaries.

26.Error.

1. They doe attribute much to the places where men are buried, as in Churches, and Churchyards, but eſpecially vnder the Altar, Rhemiſt. As the ſoules of the righteous doe reſt in Chriſt, who is that Altar, vnder the which the Apoſtle ſaw the ſoules of Martyrs: ſo for the correſpondence to the place in heauen, their bodies are commonly laid vnder the Altar, where the ſacrifice of the bodie of Chriſt is daily offered, Annot. Apocal.6.verſ.9.

Anſw. The altar of the Croſſe was the only place where the bodie of Chriſt was ſacrificed: neither neede it to bee often offered in ſacrifice, but it ſufficed once onely to haue been done. And in the Communion, we acknowledge no ſacrifice, but of praiſe and thankſgiuing. It is kept only in remembrance of the death of Chriſt. And how ſhould it be auaileable for the dead, ſeeing it profiteth not all the liuing, but only thoſe that are preſent, which doe eate and drinke the holie elements of bread and wine in remembrance of the bodie and blood of Chriſt giuen and ſhed for them? So ſaith the Scripture, Doe this, as oft as you doe it, in remembrance of me. The doers therefore, agents and receiuers, haue the preſent benefit, not they which are abſent: how then can the dead receiue any ſolace by it? It profiteth them not a whit to be laid in Churches, or Churchyards, or other hallowed places, as they call them; for all places are alike: neither helpeth it the dead to be buried in one place more then another: for God ſhall commaund the ſea, and all other places to giue vp their dead. The very Heathen did confeſſe as much: one ſaith, It skilleth not, humine, an ſublimè putreſcam, whether I rot vnder, or aboue the ground. And another thus writeth, Cœlo tegitur, qui non habet vrnam: Heauen is a couering to him that hath no other coffin. It were a foule ſhame then for Chriſtians, to exceede the very Gentiles in their ſuperſtitious conceits. Auguſtine ſaith, Si aliquid prodeſt impio ſepultura precioſa, oberit pio vilis, aut nulla: If ſumptuous funerals profit the wicked, then homely or no burials doe hurt the godly. Therefore as it helpeth not a wicked man to be buried in one place more then another; ſo it doth not hinder or hurt the godly and righteous man.

De cura pro mortuis cap.3.

Bellarmine obiecteth the example of the Patriarkes, who dying in Egypt, gaue charge for their bodies to be buried in the land of promiſe: from whence he concludeth, that it is auaileable to be buried in holy places: And afterward in the times of the Chriſtians, they vſed to burie their bodies in Churches, Bellarm.cap.19.

Contra. Firſt, the Patriarches deſired to be buried in the land of promiſe, not for the holineſſe of the place, but partly to be ioyned to the ſepulchres of their fathers, as Iacob alleageth, partly to ſhew their faith and aſſurance of Gods promiſes as touching the deliuerance of the Iſraelites out of Egypt, as Ioſeph confeſſeth: for afterwards, when the people were come out of Egypt, they had no ſuch deſire for their buriall: for Miriam was buried in Kadeſh, and Aaron in the mount Hor in the wilderneſſe, Numb.20. Gen.49.31. Gen.50.26.

Secondly, it is vntrue that it was practiſed of ancient time among the Chriſtians to burie their dead in Churches, but this vſe was taken vp afterward, as ſuperſtition encreaſed: for this was forbidden both by the Imperiall, and Eccleſiaſticall lawes: as Cod.lib.3.tit.43.leg.12. Mortuorum corpora non debent in ciuitatibus ſepeliri: The bodies of the dead muſt not be buried in Cities: Ergo, much leſſe in Churches. And lib.1.tit.5.leg.2. Theodoſ. Nemo martyrum, &c. Let no man thinke, that the ſeate of the Martyrs and Apoſtles is granted for humane bodies: that is, to be buried in.

Likewiſe, Decret.part.2.cauſ.13.quæ.2.c.15. Prohibendum eſt ſecundum maiorum ſtatuta: We prohibite, according to the decrees of our elders, that they be not buried in the Church, but in the porch, or the limits without the Church: but within the Church, & prope altare, and neere to the altar, where the body and blood of Chriſt is made, let them be buried by no meanes, &c. This Canon ouerthroweth the Rhemiſts collection for burials vnder the altar.

Concil.Auernenſ.can.5. De opertorio altaris non ſacerdotis corpus, dum ad tumulum euehitur, obtegatur, quia ſacro velamine dum honorantur corpora, altaria polluuntur: The Prieſts body muſt not be couered with the Altar-cloth, while it is caried to the graue, for while the bodies are honoured with the holy vaile, the Altar is defiled, &c. If it be not lawfull for the Altar-cloth to couer the dead, much leſſe for the Altar it ſelfe, which is greater then the couering?

Concil.Bracarenſ.1.cap.36. Vt defunctorum corpora nullo modo intra Baſilicam ſanctorum ſepeliantur, quia & hoc moris ciuitatum eſt, vt nullius defuncti corpus intra ambitum murorum ſit humatum: That the bodies of the dead ſhould not in any caſe be buried within the Churches of the Saints, becauſe, that it is the cuſtome alſo of Cities, not to burie their dead within the walles, &c. But if it had beene ſo great a priuiledge to the dead to be buried in the Church, and neere vnto the Altar, I thinke this Councell would not haue forbidden it.

This alſo hath beene the confeſſion of thoſe that haue beene perſecuted for the truth: William Tracie, As touching the burying of my body, it auaileth mee not whatſoeuer be done thereto, Fox pag.1043.col.1. Thomas Putmore: That he regarded not the place, whether it were hallowed, or no, where he ſhould be buried, after he was dead, pag.1044.col.2.

2 We condemne alſo their ſuperſtitious ceremonies which they vſe at their funerals; as the burning of Tapers, which ſignifieth, ſay they, that the ſoules of the dead are aliue, Bellarm. de Purgator. lib.2.cap.19. 27.Error.

Anſwere. Firſt, this ſuperſtitious vſe of ſetting vp candles, was directly forbidden in the Eliberine Councell, Canon.34.2. Cereos per diem in cœmiterijs placuit non incendi: Wee thinke it good that no waxe candles be burned by day in the Churchyards.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Councell doth onely forbid the ſuperſtitious vſe of the Gentiles in burning of candles: but this notwithſtanding, candles may be vſed to betoken the life of the ſoules departed.

Anſwere. The words of the Councell are generall, as in the 37. Canon likewiſe it is forbidden, Ne lucernæ publicè accendantur: That they ſhould in no wiſe ſet vp candles publikely: and ſo abſolutely it condemneth the vſe of candle light by day.

Of the like ſort alſo were other ſuperſtitious vſages, as the going about of the Belman to will the people to pray for their ſoules, the ringing or iangling of bels to bring their ſoules to heauen, with queere-ſongs and other melodie to commit the bodies to the ground, and commending their ſoules to the protection of Saints. We denie not, but comely and decent orders, voide of ſuperſtition, may be vſed, according to the faſhion of the Countrie: as Iacobs bodie was embaulmed after the manner of the Egyptians, Geneſ.50.2. At the buriall of their Kings, the Iſraelites vſed to burne odours, Iere.34.5. The Iewes manner was to waſh the bodies of the dead, to winde it vp in a linnen cloth, and burie it with ſpices and odours: So our Sauiours body was buried after the manner of the Iewes, Iohn 19.40. We reade alſo that Ioſeph was put into a Coffin or Cheſt, Gen.50.26. Of theſe and the like cuſtomes, Auguſtine giueth a rule, writing vpon thoſe words in the Goſpell, Iohn 19.40. As it was the manner of the Iewes to burie: Non mihi videtur Euangeliſta ſic fruſtra dicere voluiſſe: ita quippe admonuit, in huiuſmodi officijs, quæ mortuis exhibentur, morem cuiuſque gentis eſſe ſeruandum: in Iohann.tract.120. Me thinketh the Euangeliſt ſaid not thus without cauſe: hereby letting vs to vnderſtand, that in performing ſuch duties of buriall to the dead, the manner & cuſtome of euery Countrie is to be kept.

The Iewes alſo had a cuſtome, with ſome companie or frequencie of people, to bring their dead to the ground, Eccleſ.12.5. And in the while, to vſe ſome admonition to the people concerning death and mortalitie which came in by ſinne, and of the wrath and mercie of God. Serm. interp. in c.Mark. 14.3. Neither doe we ſee, why it is not lawfull now among Chriſtians, at funerals and burials to haue ſome godly Sermon and exhortation, to put the people in minde of their end, and to comfort them with the hope of the reſurrection, as alſo to giue God thankes, for thoſe his faithfull ſeruants, that did glorifie him by their life, and by their godly departure. This ſeemeth alſo to haue beene the commendable cuſtome of the Church in ancient time; as Auguſtine writeth thus, Expoſit. in Pſal. 103. part. 3. Paucis vos capit vocare temporis anguſtia, quod & nouit charitas veſtra debere nos exequijs fidelis corporis ſolenne obſequium: The ſhortneſſe of the time cauſeth me to be briefe, and you know, that we are to performe a ſolemne dutie to the body of our faithfull brother, &c. The Sermon ſeemeth to haue beene made at ſome funerall.

Concil. Colonienſ. part. 7. cap. 52. In ſepulturis & exequijs mortalitatis admonitio diligens fiat, & excitandi inter alia præſentes, vt recogitent ſibi eodem modo hinc excedendum eſſe: In burials and funerals, the people muſt carefully be admoniſhed of mortalitie, and they which are preſent ſhould be ſtirred vp to conſider that they alſo are mortall.

Ierem.16.7. Iohn 11.31. The Iewes alſo, the buriall being ended, did comfort thoſe that mourned, and ate and dranke with them, and gaue them the cup of conſolation: Both which cuſtomes may bee kept and retained without any ſuperſtition. But other cuſtomes and ceremonies, that doe ſauour of impietie, and doe any way imply prayer or commendation of the ſoules of the dead, ought to be left and aboliſhed.

18.Error. 3 Another abuſe in Popiſh funerals, is their ſuperſtitious and often remembrance of the dead: for they haue their weekes minde for the dead the ſeuenth day, nay their halfe weekes minde the third day, their moneths minde the thirtieth day: and beſide, their anniuerſarie or yeeres minde. I pray you what neede all this? Where doe they finde, that wee ſhould mourne for the dead many daies, yea moneths, yea a whole yeere, as they vſe to doe? Gen.50.20. 1.Sam.31.13. Ioſeph mourned but ſeuen daies for his father: So did the Gileadites for Saul. The Egyptians indeede mourned threeſcore and tenne daies, when Ioſeph mourned but ſeuen: that we may ſee a manifeſt difference betweene the moderate mourning of the faithfull, and the exceſſiue lamentation of Infidels. But the Popiſh yeeres mindes doe farre exceede the Egyptians ſtinted mourning: there being fiue times 70. daies in a yeere. Yet yeerely ſtipends, erected for weekely, monethly, quarterly, or yeerely Sermons we miſlike not: being ordained for the inſtruction of the people, without any relation to the ſoules of the dead, otherwiſe, then to giue God thanks for them, and thoſe good things which the Lord wrought by them.

Let vs ſee their owne Canons: Decret. part. 2. cauſ. 13. qu. 2. c. 24. Et luxit eum Iſrael, &c. And Iſrael mourned for Iacob ſeuen daies: Hæc ergo ſequenda ſolennitas, quam præſcribit lectio: This ſolemnitie is then to be obſerued, which the Scripture preſcribeth. And againe, Planxerunt filij Iſrael Moſen, &c. The children of Iſrael bewailed Moſes thirtie daies. Both theſe obſeruations are grounded vpon authoritie, &c. for Iacob they mourned but ſeuen, for Moſes thirtie, who was ſuch a Prophet, as Iſrael in all reſpects had not the like. This was not a yeeres minde: and beſide, the Iſraelites in this mourning made not prayers for the dead, as they vſe to doe, but mourned for the loſſe of ſuch excellent men.

19. Error. 4 They doe greatly erre and are deceiued, in holding it to be a meritorious worke, which is performed in the buriall of the dead: alleaging to this purpoſe that place, where Dauid ſent meſſengers to the men of Iabeſh Gilead, ſaying; 2.Sam.2.4. Bleſſed are ye of the Lord, that you haue ſhewed ſuch kindneſſe vnto your Lord Saul, and haue buried him: therefore now the Lord ſhew mercie and truth vnto you. Bellarmine cap. 19.

Anſw. There can be no ſuch concluſion gathered out of theſe words: The Lord will ſhew mercie, according to his truth and promiſe, to thoſe that are mercifull: Ergo, it is meritorious to be mercifull: for here the reward dependeth of Gods promiſe and truth, not vpon the worthineſſe of the worke: Indeede Dauid ſaith, as it followeth in that place, I will recompence this benefit, becauſe you haue done this thing. They might deſerue kindneſſe at the hands of Dauid, becauſe one good turne requireth another: but before the Lord there is no merit or deſert. Secondly, to burie the dead is a worke of charitie, and therefore commanded, as all other duties of charitie are. The things then commanded, wee doe of dutie, wee are bound to doe them: Ergo, they are not meritorious. So ſaith our Sauiour Luk.17.9. Chriſt, Doth the maſter thanke his ſeruant for doing that which he was commanded? I trow not.

20. Error. 5 In their funerals and ſuffrages for the dead, they doe make great difference betweene the rich and the poore: for they ſay, it is poſſible that ſo many prayers and ſuffrages may be made at once for the dead, that their ſoules may at once be deliuered out of Purgatorie. Et ideo in hoc ſolo caſu melior eſt conditio diuitis, quam pauperis, quia habet vnde ſuffragia fiant pro ipſo. And therefore in this caſe onely the eſtate of the rich is better then the poore, becauſe he hath wherewithall ſuffrages ſhould be made: that is, is able to giue great legacies, and bequeſts to that end: Albert. mag. de officio miſſ. tract. 3. Againe, they haue greater reſpect vnto the Pope departed, then any other: for the firſt day, there muſt be 200. Maſſes read for his ſoule, and for nine daies after 100. Maſſes euery day, Tilemann. de primat. pontif. error. 86.

Anſwere. Where doe they reade in all the Scriptures, that the rich in matters of the ſoule ſhould be preferred before the poore? nay, the Scripture ſaith plainely, that God is no accepter of perſons: Act.10.34. And S. Iames ſaith, Wee ought not to regard a rich man that weareth goodly apparell, hauing a gold ring, before a poore man in vile apparell. Where alſo doe they learne to pray for none, but for thoſe for whom they are hired to pray? And if prayer bee a worke of charitie, and if by their prayers they can deliuer them ſoules out of Purgatorie, why doe they not extend their charitie to all in praying for them? Iam.2.2.

What if the rich Glutton, and poore Lazarus were aliue now, or theſe Popiſh Maſſe-mongers had liued then; would they haue beene bought for money to haue praied for the rich mans ſoule, and let Lazarus alone? It is like, they would. But ſurely all their Maſſes ſhould neither haue profited the one, nor the want of them haue hindered the other. Marke, I pray you, what Auguſtine ſaith, Preclaras exequias in conſpectu hominum purpurato illi diuiti turba exhibuit famulorum: ſed multo clariores in conſpectu domini vlceroſo illi pauperi miniſterium prebuit Angelorum: A goodly funerall did the friends and ſeruants make for the rich man araied in ſkarlet in the ſight of the world; but a more bleſſed buriall had the poore man in the ſight of God, by the miniſterie of the Angels, &c. Therefore there is no reſpect of perſons to be had among the dead: neither haue the rich any greater priuiledge for the multitude of ſuffrages, then the poore that wanteth them: for no doubt the rich mans executors ſpared for no coſt; Maſſes, Trentals, Dirges they had enough, if they were then to bee had: yet for all this ſtirre his ſoule went to hell, and Lazarus ſoule was by the Angels carried to heauen, that had none of this geare. De cura pro mortuis cap.9.

6 Laſtly, if there were no other thing to be miſliked in their funerals, this were ſufficient to condemne them as abominable; that they thinke, their ſinging, chaunting, ringing, giuing of dole and almes to the poore, and all other their ſuperſtitious cuſtomes, doe helpe and profit the dead. Bellarm. ibid. 21. Error.

Auguſtine giueth two reaſons of this dutie to be ſhewed in the burying of the dead. First, Corpori humano quicquid impenditur, non eſt preſidium ſalutis, ſed humanitatis officium: What dutie is performed in entering the body, is an officious worke of humanitie, not any reliefe for the health of the ſoule. Secondly, ſaith he, Corpori mortuo, ſed tamen reſurrecturo, &c. impenſum huiuſmodi officium, ſit quodammodo eiuſdem fidei teſtimonium: This Chriſtian dutie beſtowed in burying the dead bodies, which ſhall notwithſtanding riſe againe, is a liuely teſtimonie in vs of the ſame faith. That is, we doe carefully commit the bodies of Chriſtians to the ground, knowing that they are not loſt, but ſhall riſe againe: but as for the dead themſelues, they receiue no benefit at all. Curatio funeris, conditio ſepulturæ, pompe exequiarum, viuorum ſunt ſolatia magis, quam ſubſidia mortuorum: This great prouiſion for funerals, this great pompe of burials, they are comforts for the liuing, not helps to the dead. De cura pro mortuis epilog. c.18. De cura pro mortuis cap.2.

THE SECOND PART OF THIS CONTROVERſie, of the Saints departed that are in ioy and bliſſe.

THis controuerſie ſtandeth of theſe ſeuerall queſtions.

1 Of the bleſſed eſtate of the Saints in heauen, and of the canonizing of them vpon earth.

2 Of the adoration of Saints: Firſt, whether they be to be adored or not, and whether it be lawfull to ſweare by them. Secondly, of the diuers kindes of worſhip. Thirdly, of the worſhip of Saints vpon earth.

3 Of the inuocation of Saints; whether they pray for vs and vnderſtand our prayers.

4 Of the adoration, tranſlation, keeping of reliques, and of the miracles wrought by them.

5 Of Images, and the ſigne of the Croſſe, and other matters thereto belonging more particularly handled.

6 Of Churches: the forme, vſe, ornaments, dedication of them, and ſuch like.

7 Of Pilgrimages and Proceſſions.

8 Of holy and feſtiuall daies, the Lords day, and Saints daies.

9 Of the Virgin Mary, her conception, vowes, aſſumption, worſhip, merits. Of theſe now in order.

THE FIRST QVESTION, CONCERNING THE bleſſed and happie eſtate of the Saints departed.

THis queſtion hath two parts: Firſt, of their bleſſedneſſe which they haue before God in heauen. Secondly, of the publiſhing or making knowne their bleſſedneſſe before men, which they call the canonizing of Saints.

THE FIRST PART, OF THE BLESSED eſtate of the Saints before God in heauen.

The Papiſts.

BEllarmine taketh great paines, Lib.1.de Sanctis, in ſixe long chapters together, to proue, that the Saints departed doe preſently enioy the ſight of God, and doe enter into bliſſe; and that their ſoules forthwith are receiued into heauen, and are not kept in any ſecret by-places till the day of iudgement. But all this while he fighteth with his owne ſhadow: for we grant as much as he proueth, Luk.23.43. Philip.1.23. 2.Cor.5.1. Heb.12.22. that the righteous are with Chriſt ſo ſoone as they are looſed from their bodies, as Chriſt ſaid to the theefe vpon the Croſſe, This day thou ſhalt bee with mee in Paradiſe. See alſo to this purpoſe, Philip.1.23. 2.Corinth.5.1. Heb.12.22. All theſe places doe euidently proue, that preſently after their departure, the ſoules of the faithfull doe enioy the preſence of Chriſt, and the celeſtiall companie of the Angels in heauen. 22.Error. Yet our aduerſaries ſtay not here, neither are contented with this, that the Saints are bleſſed: but proceede further, and giue them a full poſſeſſion of bleſſedneſſe, making no difference betweene them and the Angels in glorie, but affirme that they are as highly exalted as the Angels are, Rhemiſt. annot. Luk.15. ſect.2. And Bellarmine therefore taketh vp Caluine, becauſe he ſaith, the Saints are yet in hope and expectation of the perfect fruition of glorie, cap.5. lib.1. de Sanctis.

The Proteſtants.

Apocal.14.13. WE confeſſe, that the Saints in heauen are alreadie bleſſed: yet they looke for the full accompliſhment and perfection of their glorie, when as their bodies ſhall be glorified in the reſurrection: Then it is ſaid, they ſhall bee like the Angels, and yet not in all things: much leſſe are their ſoules now equall to the Angels in glorie.

Math.22.30. Argum.1. The Saints ſhall bee as the Angels, but not before the reſurrection. Neither can it be proued out of that text, that they ſhall then be equall to the Angels in all things: for it is not all one to ſay; They ſhall bee as the Angels, becauſe they ſhall then neede no mariage, as to ſay, they ſhall be equall to the Angels in all things. Apoc.6.10. The ſoules vnder the altar doe crie, Lord, how long! Ergo, they are in expectation of greater glorie. And reaſon alſo giueth as much, that the body and the ſoule being ioyned together in the kingdome of God, ſhall make a fuller weight and meaſure of ioy.

2.Pet.2.4. Iud.6. Math.25.41. Math.8.29. Luk.8.31. Argum.2. The wicked ſpirits and damned ſoules, haue not yet their full and perfect torment: Ergo, neither the Saints their perfect ioy. The diuels are now tormented, and kept in chaines of darkneſſe: But their full damnation is reſerued for the day of the Lord: They are not yet tormented in ſuch meaſure, as they ſhall be, and themſelues make account for.

1.Iohn.3.2. Argum.3. 1.Iohn.3.2. Wee know, that when hee ſhall appeare, wee ſhall be like him. This Scripture ſheweth, that wee ſhall not haue a perfect conſummation of glorie before the day of iudgement.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the text is not When he ſhall appeare, but as before the Apoſtle ſaid, It doth not appeare, what we ſhall be, ſo here, when it (not he) ſhall appeare, what we ſhall be: ſo that this place ſheweth onely that the glorie of the Saints ſhall not be manifeſted to the world before that day, not that they ſhall not haue their glory before. Bellarm. lib. de ſanctis c.3.

Contra. Who ſeeth not how hee corrupteth this text: for what elſe can be the ſenſe of this place, Cum apparuerit, ſimiles ei erimus: then this, when hee, (not it) ſhall appeare, wee ſhall be like him: what him, ſhall wee be like, but the ſame that is vnderſtoode to appeare? Againe, that Chriſt is here Coloſſ.3.4. implied to appeare, it is manifeſt by the like place: When Chriſt, which is our life, ſhall appeare, then ſhall wee appeare with him in glorie: So then, the perfection of our glorie is deferred till Chriſts comming.

Laſtly, if now the Saints are equall to the Angels in ioy, their ſoules onely being in heauen: it then followeth, that in their reſurrection, when their bodies ſhall bee reſtored to their ſoules, their happineſſe ſhall farre * exceede the Angels: which no where the Scripture teacheth vs, vnleſſe they will thus reaſon, Heb.2.16. Chriſt tooke not the Angels, but the ſeede of Abraham: Ergo, we are better then the Angels. Tractat. in Iohan.110. But to this Auguſtine anſwereth very well: Some perhaps will ſay, that wee are better then the Angels, becauſe Chriſt died for vs, and not for the Angels. Quale eſt (ſaith hee) ideo ſe velle (ægrotum) laudari, quia vitio ſuo tam deteſtabiliter ægrotauit, vt non poſſet aliter, quàm medici morte ſanari. As if a ſicke man deſerued commendation, becauſe by his owne fault, he was ſo dangerouſly ſicke, that hee could not be healed, but by the death of the Phiſitian. Quid hoc aliud eſt, quàm de impietate gloriari? Chriſtus enim, &c. pro impijs mortuus eſt: What is this elſe but for man to boaſt of his wickedneſſe? Chriſt died not for Angels, but for men, becauſe they were wicked.

* Rhemiſt. Luk.20. ſect.3. affirme that ſome Saints ſhall be aboue the Angels.

Now, whereas Bellarmine reproueth Caluine for thus writing, Animas piorum militiæ labore perfunctas in beatam quietem concedere, vbi cum fœlici lætitia fruitionem promiſſæ gloriæ expectant: That the ſoules of the godly hauing ended their warfare, are gone vnto bleſſed reſt, where moſt ioyfully they doe expect the full fruition of the promiſed glory. And the Ieſuite further giueth this vncharitable cenſure: Nota miram ſtultitiam hominis: See the great fooliſhneſſe of the man. Now it ſhall eaſily appeare, that Caluine ſaith none other thing, then was concluded by the Greeke and Latine Church in the Florentine Councell: in proœmio. Animas iuſtorum perfectam ſuam fælicitatem, quatenus animæ, conſecutas cenſemus; ita tamen vt aliam cum corporibus ſuis perfectionem expectent, qua perpetuò fruantur: We doe thinke that the ſoules of the righteous haue alreadie obtained their perfect felicitie, as they are ſoules; yet ſo, that they looke for a more perfect ſtate with their bodies, for euer to enioy. Thus Bellarmine either of malice or ignorance, chargeth a generall Councell with fooliſhneſſe, ſeeing he raileth vpon Caluine, for ſpeaking or writing, as it was by this generall Councell decreed.

Their owne Canons conſent hereunto: Decret. Greg. lib.3. tit.41. c.6. It is confeſſed by Innocent.3. Sanctorum gloriam vſque ad iudicium augmentari: That the glory of the Saints doth encreaſe till the day of iudgement. And the Maſter alloweth their opinion as more probable, that hold, that Angeli vſque ad diem iudicij ſcientia & alijs proficiant, Angels doe encreaſe in knowledge and other things till the day of iudgement, *lib.2.diſtinct.*11.g. If the glory of Angels is not yet perfect, much leſſe of the Saints, who yet expect the redemption of their bodies.

1 In the Greeke Liturgie, which goeth vnder the name of S.Baſile, they thus vſe to pray, Lord remember the Saints, which haue pleaſed thee from the beginning, our holy Fathers, the Patriarkes, Prophets, Apoſtles, Martyrs, Confeſſors, Euangeliſts, Preachers, and all the righteous, which are dead in the faith, and ſpecially the bleſſed and euer liuing virgine, Marie, S.Iohn Baptiſt, S.Stephen,&c. If they did hold, that there could be no acceſſion of glory to theſe bleſſed Saints, they would not thus pray: they haue relation to the perfect glory, which ſhall bee in the reſurrection: for thus alſo it ſtandeth in the ſame Liturgie: Memento Domine omnium dormientium in ſpe reſurrectionis æternæ: Remember all them, O Lord, which ſleepe in the hope of eternall reſurrection.

2 So the Liturgie of Cyrill of Alexandria: O Lord, haue pitie vpon our fathers and brethren, whoſe ſoules thou haſt receiued, giue them reſt: and then they name the Patriarkes, Prophets, the virgine Marie, S.Iohn Baptiſt, S.Stephen: grant that all their ſoules may reſt in the boſome of Abraham,&c. Raiſe their bodies in the day which thou haſt ordained, according to thy true promiſes.

3 Wittemberg.c.24. The ſtate is all one of a Saint, which is at reſt in Chriſt, and a faithfull man that dieth, for he that dieth in the faith is a Saint,&c. Charitie wiſheth, that wee deſire to the dead, all tranquillitie and felicitie in Chriſt,&c. but the dead are not helped by our prayers,&c.

4 See their owne decrees alleaged before.

THE SECOND PART, OF THE Canonizing of Saints.

The Papiſts.

THe canonizing of Saints, is nothing elſe but the publike determination and ſentence of the Church, whereby men that are dead, are iudged to be Saints, and worthie of honour and worſhip, as to be praied vnto, Temples and Altars to be ſet vp in their names, holy dayes to bee appointed for them, and their reliques to be adored. And thus it is lawfull, profitable, and expedient for the Church to canonize Saints, Bellarm.cap.7. 23.Error.

*Arg.*1. The Patriarkes and Prophets were canonized for Saints in the old law, Heb.11. So Act.7. Stephen and other were canonized: therefore it is credible, that the Lord would haue the ſame order ſtill continued in his Church, Bellarm.cap.7.

Anſwere. Firſt, neither in the olde nor the new law, were any ſet vp to be Saints, with intent to bee worſhipped, called vpon, Temples to bee conſecrated in their names; but onely the Scripture giueth teſtimonie of them, as of holy and faithfull men: and ſo may wee alſo honour the bleſſed Martyrs, whom the cruell Emperours of Rome, and ſince them the Popes of Rome haue ſent through fire and other torments to heauen. Secondly, when they haue as good teſtimonie for their Saints, as we haue for the holy Patriarkes & Prophets, they may be bold to pronounce them to be holy, bleſſed. Thirdly, your argument followeth not, vnleſſe you will ſay, that the Church may doe all things now, which the Prophets and Apoſtles did then: They may as well make Scripture, and more Canonicall bookes by the ſame reaſon, as make and canonize new Saints.

*Arg.*2. The Saints are vnto vs examples of vertue & to be imitated, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Remember your ouerſeers, which haue ſpoken to you the word of God, the end of whoſe conuerſation beholding, imitate their faith. But how can we imitate them, vnleſſe we know in particular who are to be imitated? Bellar. Heb.13.7.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Apoſtle propoundeth the example of their Paſtors then liuing, to be imitated of them, whoſe conuerſation they did behold. This place maketh nothing for the imitation of canonized Saints, dead many yeeres agoe: whoſe life and conuerſation is not certainly knowne. Secondly, we neede not runne to Popiſh fables, to ſeeke patternes to follow, wee may ſet before vs the example of godly men liuing; or if they faile vs, wee haue moſt perfect examples in Scripture: as S.Paul ſaith, Be followers of me, as I am of Chriſt, and obſerue them, as you haue vs for an example. Thirdly, if Popiſh Saints ſhould be imitated, then Thomas Becket muſt bee followed in his rebellion to the King; Bonauenture in his blaſphemie againſt Chriſt, aſcribing the worke of our ſaluation to the Virgin Marie, as may be ſeene in his Ladie Pſalter, compiled to the honour of her; and many ſuch goodly examples ſhall we finde in the liues and acts of Popiſh Saints. 1.Cor.11.1. Philip.3.17.

The Proteſtants.

THat none of the Saints are to be adored or worſhipped, their images, or reliques, or prayers to be made vnto them, or any ſuch honour to be giuen them, it ſhall afterward appeare more at large: and therefore they ought not be canonized to any ſuch end or purpoſe. We alſo grant, that the number of Gods Saints and elect is increaſed daily: and we are ſure in generall, as the Scripture teſtifieth, that the death of his Saints is precious in the ſight of God, and that all are bleſſed that die in the Lord: But particularly wee are not able certainly to determine of any; the matter is to be left wholly vnto God, and we in the meane time to hope the beſt. Pſal.116.15.

*Argum.*1. If the Church haue authoritie to canonize Saints, and determine of the election or ſaluation of men, then may wee as well iudge of the condemnation of thoſe that are loſt: for if it bee

Rom.14.4. knowne to the Church who are Saints in heauen, they alſo may as well define who are damned in hell. But this none can doe: nay, It were great raſhneſſe and want of charitie for any ſo to take vpon them. S. Paul ſaith, Why condemneſt thou another mans ſeruant? hee ſtandeth or falleth to his owne maſter. No man can iudge whether the ſeruant ſtand or fall, but his maſter: Ergo, if the Church preſume to determine of the election or damnation of thoſe that are departed, ſhe is now a Miſtris and Ladie rather of the Saints, then they Lords or patrones to her, as the Papiſts hold they are.

1.Cor.4.5. Matth.20.23. Argum. 2. Iudge not (ſaith S. Paul) before the time vntill the Lord come. The iudgement then of men, who are ſaued, and who are condemned, is reſerued for the comming of Chriſt: Therefore it is great preſumption for men to preuent the time, and to take vpon them to bee Iudges in Gods place. Againe, our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, that to ſit at his right hand or left, in his kingdome, was not his to giue (meaning as he was man) but it ſhall be giuen to them for whom it is prepared of my father. How then is it in the power of any ſinfull man, to giue vnto any a ſeat, either at the right hand, or left hand of Chriſt, in the kingdome of God? Argument. Gualter. Bruti. Fox. pag. 487.

Auguſtine alſo conſenteth, Non ſeparatio iam cuiq; tuta eſt, &c. It is not ſafe for men now to make ſeparation (of the good and bad) it belongeth to him, that cannot erre: Wee in this life doe hardly know our ſelues, how much leſſe ought we to iudge raſhly of others? expoſit. in Pſal. 139. in praefat. Here are two reaſons giuen, why it is not lawfull for men to iudge of the election or reprobation of men: firſt, their iudgement is ſubiect to error, and therefore the matter muſt be referred to God, who erreth not. Secondly, we cannot iudge our ſelues, much leſſe can we iudge of others: Ergo, no man liuing ought, or is able to define either who are Saints in heauen, or who are damned in hell.

Anaſtaſius decret. 2. Monente nos beatiſſimo Paulo Apoſtolo, &c. Know ye, that as the Apoſtle Paul doth admoniſh vs, wee muſt obſerue, and take heede, that there ariſe no offence in the Church, while we take vpon vs to doe that which we cannot, that is, to iudge thoſe which are gone out of the world: for none of vs liueth or dieth to himſelfe, but whether wee liue or die, we are the Lords? wherefore, why iudgeſt thou another mans ſeruant, &c. Here we haue the iudgemenr of a Pope himſelfe, grounded vpon S. Pauls iudgement, that it is not in the power of the liuing to iudge the dead, either in condemning or acquiting them.

Theuet. Coſmogr. lib.10. c.15. 1 The Greekes acknowledge none of the Saints of the Latine Church, nor the Indians, except the Apoſtles and Prophets.

Theuet. lib.10. c.15. 2 The Æthiopians or Abyſines doe acknowledge but very few of the Saints honoured in the Latine Church, except S. Catharine, by reaſon her body is in Mount Sinai, S. Anthonie the Egyptian, and S. Helen, and the virgine Marie: it ſeemeth that they hold no ſuch canonization of Saints neceſſarie.

Harm. ſect.2. pag.28. 2.Cor.13.12. 3 Confeſſ. of Bohemia: c.17. Wee call ſuch beleeuers in Chriſt (as yet are conuerſant here in earth) Saints, as S. Paul ſaith, all the Saints greete you: See alſo to this purpoſe, the confeſſion of Wittemberg in the former queſtion. If the faithfull in earth are Saints alreadie, they neede not to be canonized afterward.

Lib.1. de adorat. diſp.5. c.3. 4 Vaſques the Ieſuite ſaith: Aliqui Catholici probant, non eſſe certum de fide, &c. Some Catholikes proue that it is not certaine, as of faith, that the Saints, which we worſhip, are to be worſhipped, Quia non eſt ex fide eos eſſe ſanctos: becauſe it is not of faith, that they are Saints.

AN APPENDIX OR THIRD PART, OF OTHER circumſtances, which belong to the canonizing of Saints.

The Papiſts.

24. Error. THey ſay, that it doth appertaine onely to the Pope, to canonize a Saint for the whole Church: and that none ought to be acknowledged for Saints, but they that are ſo canonized by him: And that herein the Pope is of ſo infallible a iudgement, that hee cannot erre in canonizing of Saints: becauſe that ordinarily none are canonized by the Pope for Saints, which haue not beene knowne to worke miracles, *Bellarm. lib.*1. cap. 8.9.10.

Argum. 1. That it belongeth to the Pope to canonize Saints, Bellarmine thus proueth: to define and declare who are heretikes, appertaineth to the Pope: Ergo, the contrarie alſo, to determine who are Saints in heauen.

1.Tim.1.20. Anſwere. Firſt, the argument followeth not, the Pope may iudge of men according to their preſent ſtate in this life: Ergo, of their ſtate afterward. For an heretike is diſcerned according to that hee preſently holdeth and teacheth, who may afterwards be conuerted from his hereſie: as S. Paul ſaith, He had deliuered Hymenaeus and Alexander to Sathan, that they might learne not to blaſpheme. Though the Apoſtle for the preſent caſteth them out as heretikes, yet hee deſpaireth not of their conuerſion: wherefore to be an heretike and a reprobate doe not alwaies concurre, and therefore the argument followeth not: For to be an heretike and a Saint are not contraries: he that is firſt an heretike, being conuerted, may become a Saint, as S. Paul of a perſecuter was made a Preacher.

1.Cor.16.22. Secondly, it belongeth not to the Pope to determine, who are heretikes; but euery Church hath power to declare by the Scriptures what hereſie is, and who are heretikes; the Apoſtles haue giuen vs rules to know heretikes by; as If any man loue not the Lord Ieſus, let him be anathema; according to this rule, all that detract from the humanitie of Chriſt, as the Anabaptiſts; or from his diuinitie, as the Arrians; or from his offices, as the Papiſts, are heretikes. Againe, If any man obey not our doctrine, note him. 2.Theſſ.3.14. And, Euery ſpirit that confeſſeth not that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is not of God. 1.Ioh.4.3. According to theſe and ſuch like rules in Scripture, it is lawfull for euery Church to define an heretike, and for euery man to auoid him. An heretike, after the firſt and ſecond admonition, auoid. Tit.3.10. It is but a ridiculous toy, that wee muſt ſend vp to Rome firſt, to know the Popes pleaſure, who ſhould be counted an heretike.

Thirdly, the Popes are no fit men to iudge of hereſie, ſeeing many of them haue been heretikes: as Marcellinus an Idolater, Liberius an Arrian, Honorius a Monothelite, with many more, as wee haue ſeene before in the controuerſie of the Pope.

*Argum.*2. Now that the Pope cannot erre in canonizing of Saints, hee would make vs beleeue, becauſe there hath yet been no error detected that way: the Pope hath Sainted none which were not Saints indeed.

Anſw. The contrarie is true, that hee hath canonized many notorious rebels, and other wicked perſons, as Thomas Becket of Canturburie, Hugh of Lincolne, both rebels to their Prince, with many more, as further followeth preſently to be ſhewed *Argum.*3. and therefore, becauſe the Pope is and hath been ſo groſſie deceiued in canonizing of Saints, he may bee aſhamed to iuſtifie his palpable errors.

The Proteſtants.

First, if Saints were to be regiſtred and canonized, as they ſay; yet it ſhould not belong to the Pope, but to the whole Church.

*Argum.*1. The Pope hath no authoritie ouer the whole Church; no nor yet in any other Biſhops dioceſſe, no more then they haue in his: Let him be content with his owne dioceſſe (and it were to be wiſhed, that he could rule that well) the whole world is too large a prouince for him. Secondly, the whole Church hath power to excommunicate and deliuer vp to Satan, and to cut off the pro- 1.Cor.5.4. phane and wicked from the Church of God, as Heathen and Publicanes: Ergo, to iudge who are Math.18.17. members of the Church, and Saints of God, is a matter which appertaineth to the whole Church. Thirdly, before anno 800. in the time of Carolus Magnus there was no Saint publikely canonized by the Pope, as Bellarmine confeſſeth: but the truth is, this cuſtome of ordinarie canonizing Saints began not till more then 1000. yeeres after Chriſt, till Alexander the 3. his time, and Gregorie the 7. I pray you then, were there no Saints before? if there were, who canonized them?

*Argum.*2. So much as is to bee knowne of Saints and holie men, euery Chriſtian is to acknowledge, without any publike decree or determination of the Pope or any other: for the word of God giueth rules, whereby we may diſcerne the righteous from the vnrighteous. Chriſt ſpeaking of falſe prophets, ſaith, By their fruites ye ſhall know them. Math.7.16. And againe, he ſaith thus to his Apoſtles, By this ſhall men know that you are my diſciples, if you loue one another. Ioh.13.35. By theſe rules, it is eaſie for euery Chriſtian to iudge who for the preſent time are the true diſciples of Chriſt, who otherwiſe.

*Argum.*3. It is a moſt impudent and ſhameleſſe ſaying, that the Pope cannot erre in canonizing of Saints: Firſt, Miracles are no ſufficient proofe of a Saint: for many, that ſhall be condemned in the Math.7.22.23 day of iudgement, haue had power to doe ſtrange workes. Secondly, what better argument can wee haue of this, then common experience? For the Popes haue regiſtred in their Calendars notorious wicked men, and traitors to their Princes, as Saints and holy men: Such an one was Thomas Becket, who ſome hundreth yeeres was worſhipped as a Saint, by the name of Saint Thomas of Canturburie, and yet was a plaine traitor to his Prince, Fox pag.225. And therfore his ſhrine was iuſtly put downe in King Henry the 8. daies. Fox pag.779. Richard Scroope of Yorke was openly in armes againſt Henry the 4. Thomas Earle of Lancaſter a rebell againſt Edward the 2. yet both are the Popes canonized Saints.

Elizabeth Barton was called the holy Maid of Kent, and fained that ſhe had many reuelations: yet was found to be a traitor, and executed: Fox pag.1054. Theſe are the Popes Saints. And on the other ſide, they haue condemned the true Saints and Martyrs of God, and accurſed them to the bottomleſſe pit of hell: as they dealt moſt wickedly with Iohn Huſſe that zealous ſeruant of God, vpon whoſe head they ſet a crowne of paper pictured with diuels, as if he were giuen vnto the power of Satan. But we doe iudge of theſe holy men, as the Scripture teacheth, which ſaith, that they are bleſſed which die in the Lord. Apoc.14.13. Their good life, holy profeſſion, and conſtant death and martyrdome declared no leſſe; and that aſſurance, which God gaue them of their election: as it appeared in that worthie Martyr Doctor Barnes, who being brought to the ſtake, ſaith thus vnto the people; If Saints doe pray for vs, I truſt to pray for you within this halfe houre; who at the ſame time vttered his opinion, that notwithſtanding to pray vnto Saints was againſt the word of God, although it ſhould bee granted that they pray Fox pag.1139. for vs.

Let them now be aſhamed to ſay ſtill, that the Pope cannot erre in canonizing Saints, who condemneth good men, and iuſtifieth the wicked, according to the common ſaying, Many are worſhipped for Saints in heauen, whoſe ſoules doe burne in hell.

If the Pope herein be of ſo infallible a iudgement, how came it to paſſe, that Bonifacius the 8. did cauſe Hermannus Ferrarienſ. who had been canonized for a Saint, after 30. yeeres to be taken out of his graue, and burned, anno 1300. Either he, by whom he was firſt canonized, or elſe Bonifacius, by whom he was vncanonized or vnſainted, muſt needs haue groſly erred. And is it not as poſſible for the Pope to be deceiued in iudging who are Saints, as Tertullian and Origen erred in commending of Pilate and his wife for good Chriſtians? Tertull. apologet. cap. 21. by which authorities ſome were moued to canonize them for Saints. And Decret. Greg. lib. 3. tit. 45. cap. 1. mention is made of one, that was ſlaine in his drunkennes, whom they worſhipped for a Saint. But it will be anſwered, that Alexander the 3. reproueth that abuſe in the ſame decree. But what will they ſay concerning the Saints of Rome, that are worſhipped vnder the Popes noſe, and by his allowance; ſhall they all goe for currant, and true Saints indeed? Let them heare what Lindanus an archpapiſt complaineth of this matter: Breuiaria etiam Romanum nouum feſta quadam habent ſanctorum, quorum nomina, neſcio an ſatis ſint vindicata, &c. The Breuiaries or Maſſe-bookes, yea the new Romane Breuiarie hath many feſtiuals of Saints, whoſe names, I know not whether they are ſufficiently tried and purged, &c. He affirmeth, that euen in Rome many obſcure and vnknowne Saints were worſhipped.

Fourthly, Auguſt. thus writeth of this matter; Mutabilis eſt mens noſtra, quæ percipit diſcendo, quod neſciebat, &c. & veriſimilitudine fallitur, &c. Mans minde is mutable, learning that which it knew not, and loſing that by forgetfulnes, which it knew: and is deceiued by a certaine likenes of truth, to approue that which is falſe for true, &c. Tractat. 99. in Ioann. Ergo, the iudgement of men is vncertaine, and the beſt may be deceiued in iudging of others, who are bad, and who good.

If all the Popes canonized Saints are to be worſhipped, prayers to be made vnto them, holie daies, and Churches to bee conſecrate to their memorie, wherein (as the Ieſuite telleth vs) conſiſteth the canonization of Saints: hereby it may appeare what ſmall diſcretion the Popes haue ſhewed in their canonizing, in bringing ſuch an idle and ſuperfluous multitude into the Saints Calendar: that it were impoſſible for a man to remember all ſuch Saints names, that are to be prayed to. Alexander anno 1180. did canonize Bernard Clareuallenſ. and Thomas of Canturburie: Innocentius 4. anno 1250. Edmund of Canturburie, Staniſlaus Biſhop of Cracouia, and Peter Ueronenſ. a Dominicane: Alexander 4. anno 1260. did canonize Clara, Francis his ſiſter, the father of the Franciſcanes: Nicholaus 4. Lodouik Toloſan a Minorite: Bonifacius 8. Lodouike the French King: Clement 6. did canonize Iue a Prieſt anno 1350. Nicholaus 5. did make Bernardine Senenſ. a Franciſcane, a Saint: anno 1455. Calixtus 3. did adde to the Calendar Vincentius Valentinenſ. a Dominicane, Albert. Depranenſ. a Carmelite: Pius 2. did magnifie one Angelus a Carmelite, and Katharine Senenſ. anno 1464. Sixtus 4. Bonauenture: anno 1484. Innocentius 8. Heliopoldus Duke of Auſtria: And many hundreds more haue been by the Popes aduanced to the dignitie of Saints, ſome Kings, ſome Dukes, ſome Biſhops, ſome Prieſts, ſome Friers, ſome Widowes, ſome Virgins: ſo that the daies of the yeere are not enough for euery Saint to haue his day. Now let it be conſidered, whether the Pope hath not good skill in ſainting of men, thus multiplying without end the number of his houſe-gods.

Sacran. & Guagnin. de relig. Muſcouit. Titleman. de fid. Æthiop.

1. The Muſcouites following the Greeke Church condemne and reiect the Saints of the Romane Church.

2. Among the Aethiopians, their Biſhops doe canonize for Saints, thoſe, who while they liued did giue euident teſtimonies of their holineſſe. Thoſe Chriſtian Churches depend not vpon the Popes iudgement, for canonizing of Saints.

3. Wittemberg, artic. 24. There is no difference indeed, betweene a Saint reſting in Chriſt, and a faithfull man departed: for euery one which dieth in the faith of Chriſt is a Saint. Euery Church then may better determine who are Saints, then the Pope, becauſe it is better knowne to them, who both liue and die well.

Agrip. de vanit. ſcient.

4. Agrippa ſaith, there are many that hold hereticall opinions, tamen cenſentur in canone ſanctorum, yet are counted in the canon of Saints. Cardinall Beſſarius ſaith, that he ſaw many canonized at Rome, quorum vitam improbauit, whoſe life he miſliked. The Pope then may erre in canonizing of Saints.

THE SECOND QVESTION, CONCERNING THE ADORATION OF SAINTS.

THis queſtion hath three parts: Firſt, whether Saints are to bee adored. Secondly, of the diuers kindes of adoration. Thirdly, concerning the worſhip due vnto holy men liuing, as the kiſſing of feete, and ſuchlike.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER SAINTS ARE TO BE ADORED AND WORSHIPPED.

The Papiſts.

85. Error.

THey doubt not to affirme, that there is a kind of religious worſhip due vnto Saints, not that great religious worſhip which is proper vnto God, but a kinde ſomewhat leſſe and inferiour to that; yet a religious adoration, which is the meane or middeſt betweene that higheſt worſhip due vnto God, and ciuill honour which is giuen vnto men. So this is their ſentence, that religious worſhip is due both to God and to the Saints: herein only (ſay they) the difference is, the more religious worſhip belongeth only to God, the leſſe vnto the Saints, Bellarm. cap. 12. lib. 1. de Sanctor. beatit.

Argum.1. Bellarmine obiecteth certaine examples out of Scripture of the adoration of Angels, as how Abraham adored the Angels, and Lot, and Ioſua alſo adored the Angell that appeared vnto him: therefore Angels, and ſo conſequently Saints, may ſafely be adored and worſhipped.

Ioſua 5.14.

Anſw. Firſt, it is certaine that the Angell whom Abraham worſhippeth, was God himſelfe, euen Chriſt that appeared in the ſhape of an Angell; for verſ.17. he is called Iehouah, which name is neuer in Scripture giuen to any Angell: and verſ.25. Abraham calleth him Iudge of the world, which is Chriſts office onely; ſo alſo the Angell that appeared to Ioſua, was Chriſt himſelfe; for Ioſua calleth him Lord, and himſelfe his ſeruant: But the Angels doe not preſume to take vs as their ſeruants, but acknowledge themſelues to be our fellow ſeruants vnto the ſame Lord, theirs and ours. And this is the iudgement of diuers of the ancient Fathers, and namely Origen; Ioſua non adoraſſet eum, niſi agnouiſſet Deum, &c. Ioſua would not haue worſhipped him, if he had not knowne him to be God, for who elſe is the Prince of the Lords warfare, but the Lord Ieſus Chriſt? hom.6. in Ioſu.

Reuel.22.9.

Secondly, it cannot bee ſhewed out of the text, that Lot did worſhip the two Angels that came to Sodome, but did only make obeiſance, and bow himſelfe vnto them, as excellent and heauenly perſons: for the word nwyſhacah ſignifieth an inclination and bowing of the bodie, as Iacob is ſaid to bow himſelfe to his brother Eſau: this therefore was no religious adoration, but a ſeemely reuerence, which might be giuen to thoſe glorious ſpirits.

Gen.33.3.

Thirdly, the Angels of the old Teſtament, and the Angels of the new are all one; but in the new Teſtament, the Angels refuſe to bee adored: Ergo, the Angels of the old Teſtament did not receiue it.

Reuel.22.9.

Argum.2. The Pſalmiſt ſaith, Adore his footſtoole; and Iacob adored the top of his rod: Ergo, it is lawfull to adore creatures: *Bellarm.cap.*13. *Rhemiſt.annot.*11. *Heb.ſect.*9.

Heb.11.21.

Anſw. In the firſt place by the footſtoole is vnderſtood the Tabernacle with the Arke: the Prophet ſaith not, Adore his footſtoole, but, At or before his footſtoole: for we denie not, but that we may kneele downe, and fall proſtrate in adoring of God before ſuch things, but none is to be adored but God. In the ſame place the Apoſtle ſaith, that Iacob worſhipped toward the end of his ſtaffe, that is, leaning vpon his ſtaffe. The vulgar Latine readeth corruptly, adorauit faſtigium baculi, He worſhipped the end of his ſtaffe: for then the Greeke prepoſition ἐπὶ were ſuperfluous. And Auguſtine expoundeth it aright, ſaying, that Iacob by faith worſhipped God vpon the end of his ſtaffe: *queſt. in Gen.*162. *Fulk.annot.Heb.*11.*ſect.*9.

Argum.3. Nabuchadnezzar bowed himſelfe to Daniel, and cauſed odours to be offered vnto him, and worſhipped him, who for ſo doing was not reproued of the Prophet: Ergo, Saints are to be worſhipped: *Bellarm.ibid. Rhemenſ.annot.Apocal.*19.*ſect.*5.

Anſw. Firſt, your owne vulgar text thus readeth, The King commanded, vt ſacrificarent ei hoſtiam, to ſacrifice an hoſt vnto him: and Arias Montanus tranſlateth Sacrificium, to offer a ſacrifice vnto him; but to offer ſacrifice, is a part of the diuine and godly worſhip; ſo that the King commanding ſacrifice to be made to Daniel, doth attribute vnto him ſuperſtitiouſly diuine worſhip. Bellarmine anſwereth, that the ſacrifice of beaſts, is that ſacrifice, which is peculiar vnto God; but as for odors and other gifts, they may be yeelded vnto men: as 1.King.10. certaine of the Iſraelites refuſed to bring gifts vnto Saul, the ſame word (מנחה) is there vſed: and we (ſaith he) doe cenſe vp odors before the images of Saints, though we grant that ſacrifice is only due vnto God: *Bellar.cap.*13.*argum.*3.

Contra. Firſt, that the Hebrew word (מנחה) here vſed, is ſometime taken for a ciuill gift, we grant, as in the place alleaged, and Gen.32.13. where Iacob ſent a gift or preſent to Eſau: but in this place it ſignifieth a religious oblation, in which ſenſe hee cannot finde in all Scripture, that it was giuen to any mortall man, but only was due vnto God, as Ierem.41.5. they had offrings and incenſe in their hands to offer in the houſe of God: And this word, when it is vſed in a religious ſenſe, is taken only for ſacrifice due vnto God; as 1.King.18.29. when they had prophecied till the time of the euening Sacrifice; and 2.King.3.20. in the morning, when the Sacrifice vſeth to bee offered: in both theſe places the word מנחה is vſed. Secondly, whereas he granteth, Sacrificium non deberi niſi ſoli Deo: That ſacrifice is not due but vnto God, it followeth, that the King committed Idolatrie, in ſacrificing to Daniel, as your owne vulgar readeth. Thirdly, it is great impietie in him to allow the cenſing of odors to Saints, or Saints images, whereas in the old Law it was a part of the worſhip of God; as may appeare Ierem.41.5. they brought odors and incenſe: And it may be gathered, that the offering of incenſe was the more principall part of the ſacrifice; as it followeth euen now to be ſhewed.

Ierem.41.5.
2.King.3.20.

Secondly, it is vntrue, that Daniel accepted of this worſhip and reproued it not: Firſt, though it be not mentioned, it followeth not, that he miſliketh it not: for neither is the inceſt of Lot, Geneſ.19. nor of Iudah, Geneſ.38. cenſured in the ſtorie, doth it follow therefore that they were iuſtified? Secondly, it may be diuerſly gathered that Daniel miſliked the Kings purpoſe: Firſt, becauſe from the beginning, hee giueth the glorie vnto God, and telleth the King, that it was the God in heauen that was the only Reuealer of ſecrets, verſ.27. and therefore it is not like, that Daniel would take the honor vnto himſelfe. Secondly, becauſe the King afterward, verſ.47. being better inſtructed by Daniel, giueth God the honour, ſaying he was God of Gods, and ſo only to be worſhipped. Thirdly, verſ.48. he magnifieth Daniel now as Gods inſtrument, and beſtoweth great gifts vpon him, whereas he offered ſacrifice before.

Dan.2.27.47.

In the laſt place we will examine our Doway diſciples arguments for the adoration of Saints.

1. The honour of Saints redoundeth to the honour of Chriſt: as Baſil ſaith, Honor ſeruorum redundat in communem Dominum: The honour of the ſeruants redoundeth to the common Lord; pag. 8.

2. Adoration of God and creatures is not repugnant, proued by Iacobs adoring of Ioſephs rod, prefiguring Chriſts kingdome: pag. 144. in the margent.

2.King.2.15. 3. They adored Eliſeus flat to the ground, they adored him for his holineſſe, &c. therefore not with ciuill, but religious honour: pag. 763.

Anſw. 1. The honouring of Gods ſeruants, as his Miniſters, doth redound to the Lord: as our Math.10.40. bleſſed Sauiour ſaith, He that receiueth you, receiueth me: but to giue part of that honour, which is due vnto God, as all religious worſhip is, vnto his ſeruants, is a diſhonouring of the Lord himſelfe: Iſai.42.8. for he will not giue his glorie to another.

2. Concerning Iacobs adoration of the rod, ſee before our anſwere to the ſecond argument.

3. The children of the Prophets gaue but a ciuill kinde of honour and reuerence vnto Eliſha the Prophet: as may appeare in that they call Elias the Prophet his maſter, verſ. 16. Let them goe and ſeeke thy maſter. I hope they whom they giue religious worſhip vnto, haue no other maſter but Chriſt. And the word ſhacah ſignifieth the inclination and bowing of the bodie, which is vſed as well in ciuill as religious adoration: ſee before the anſwere to the firſt argument. But I will further oppoſe our Do- 2.King.18.4. way ſtudents with that example of Heſekiah, who brake downe the braſen Serpent, becauſe the people burnt incenſe to it: yet this was not the diuine worſhip, but only the inferiour kinde of religious Lib.2.de Sanct. cap.13. sect. Neque obſtat. worſhip in their opinion: for Bellarmine himſelfe ſaith, Porro ſuaues odores nos etiam in ipſa eccleſia offerimus imaginibus: We our ſelues in the Church offer ſweet odors vnto images, &c. Heſekiah, then in forbidding incenſe to be offered, denied all religious worſhip vnto the braſen Serpent. Our Doway men ſay they offered ſacrifice which is prayer to God only: but the text here maketh mention onely of burning of incenſe.

The Proteſtants.

VVE can find in the word of God but two kindes of worſhip or adoration: a religious worſhip onely due vnto God; and a ciuill honour vſed amongſt men: As for the Angels and Saints, we doe honour them with loue, not with ſeruice. Wee doe alſo reuerence the holy men vpon earth, as the Prophets and Apoſtles were in times paſt, with a ciuill adoration or worſhip of loue, not with a religious ſeruice. There is alſo a due reuerence and eſtimation of ſuch things as are ſanctified to holy vſes, as of the Tabernacle, Arke, Altar, Sacrifice in the law: ſuch now are the Sacraments, which are duely to be reuerenced, yet not to be adored, or kneeled vnto. So we conclude, that all religious ſeruice and worſhip belongeth onely vnto God, and it were great idolatry to giue it to any other, Fulk. annot. Apocal. 19. ſect. 5.

Math.4.10. 1.Tim.1.17. Argum. 1. The Scripture is plaine: Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him onely ſhalt thou ſerue. To God onely wiſe, immortall, inuiſible, bee all honour and glory: Ergo, all religious worſhip is onely due vnto God. Bellarmine anſwereth, that theſe places are to be vnderſtood of a certaine kind of religious worſhip, which is onely proper to God. Anſw. All religious worſhip is forbidden in theſe places to bee giuen to any but vnto God: for Satan did not tempt Chriſt to worſhip him as God, but onely to fall downe and worſhip him: he asked onely of him, [illegible] a certaine inclination of the body, which Chriſt denieth, as being onely proper to God, Caluini Argum.

Acts 10.25. Apoc.22.9. Acts 14.14. Argum. 2. When Cornelius fell downe at Peters feet and would haue worſhipped him, he was forbidden by Peter. So the Angell would not ſuffer Iohn to worſhip him. Paul and Barnabas ſtayed the people that would haue offered ſacrifice vnto them.

Bellarm. anſwereth to the firſt, that Peter of modeſty refuſed the homage of Cornelius.

Anſw. Peter giueth this reaſon, why hee would not haue Cornelius ſo to doe, I alſo am a man (ſaith hee:) thereby letting him to vnderſtand, that ſuch kind of worſhip ought not to bee giuen to any man. The ſame reaſon is rendred, Acts 14. by Paul and Barnabas, why they refuſed ſacrifice: Wee alſo (ſay they) are men. If Peter did of modeſtie refuſe Cornelius worſhip, then Paul and Barnabas did for modeſty ſake onely likewiſe refuſe to bee ſacrificed vnto, which I am ſure they will not grant.

Bellarmine to the ſecond ſaith, that Iohn did well in worſhipping the Angell, and the Angell did well in refuſing to be worſhipped: for though the Angels of right are to be worſhipped, yet they doe well to refuſe it, for reuerence to the humanity and manhood of Chriſt: Before the comming of Chriſt, Angels ſuffered themſelues to be adored; but ſince that the Angels after Chriſts incarnation did worſhip man in him, they would not be worſhipped of men, eſpecially of the Apoſtles: who although they refuſe to be worſhipped, yet we doe well to worſhip them.

Anſw. Firſt, let it be noted that Bellarmine ſhapeth a cleane contrarie anſwere to our Rhemiſts, as appeareth before, Cont. 8. queſt. 3. part 1. For they ſay, that Iohn was deceiued in the perſon of the Angell, taking him for Chriſt, and is forbidden by the Angell to worſhip him as God: but Bellarmine altogether freeth Iohn from all error, and commendeth his doing: whereas it is certaine, that Iohn knew well enough that hee was an Angell, but being carried away in the extaſie of his minde, did for the preſent time forget himſelfe. Secondly, that the Angell did not of modeſtie refuſe to be worſhipped, but abſolutely and ſimply, it is made manifeſt by his anſwere to Iohn; worſhip thou God: he would not haue the Apoſtle to worſhip him, but God. And againe the Angell ſaith; I am thy fellow ſeruant, &c. but it is vnmeete for one fellow ſeruant to worſhip another, they both haue but one Lord to worſhip: wherefore the Angell meaneth indeed, that hee ought not to be worſhipped, and doth not of modeſtie refuſe it. This alſo is Auguſtines iudgement, Recte ſcriptum eſt hominem ab angelo prohibitum ne ſe adoraret, &c. It is therefore truly written, that man was forbidden by the Angell to worſhip him, but only God, vnder whom he was his fellow ſeruant: De vera relig. cap. 55.

Thirdly, where findeth he that Angels in all the old Teſtament ſuffered themſelues to bee adored? hee can ſhew neither precept nor practiſe for the adoration of Angels: And that the Angels ſince Chriſts comming did depart from their right, it is a prophane conceit, and derogatorie to Chriſt, as though he by his comming empaired the ſtate of Angels, which by him is made glorious: And if our Sauiour would haue the chaire of Moſes reuerenced, though euill men ſate in it, it was not his pleaſure, Math.23.2. that the dignitie of thoſe holy Spirits ſhould be abated.

Bellarmine to the third ſaith, that the Apoſtles did well in refuſing to be ſacrificed vnto: becauſe to offer ſacrifice is an externall act of worſhip to be performed only to God, cap. 14.

*Anſw.*1. What reaſon haue they to burne incenſe vnto Saints and their images, rather then to offer ſacrifice? For it appeareth in the law, that the burning of incenſe was more precious, and a more high point of the Leuiticall ſeruice, then was the offering of ſacrifice. First, the Altar of incenſe was more curiouſly made, being ouerlaid with fine gold, and was called the golden Altar; the other for Exod.40.26. burnt offerings, the brazen Altar. Secondly, the Altar of incenſe was placed in the Tabernacle neere vnto the moſt holy place; the other Altar ſtood at the doore without. Exod.40.26.29 Thirdly, the miniſters were diuers: the Prieſts offered ſacrifice in their courſes; Exod.30.7. but Aaron only, and his ſucceſſors the high Prieſts burned incenſe. Fourthly, vpon the brazen Altar incenſe was offered with other ſacrifices, Leuit. 2. but vpon the golden Altar no burnt ſacrifice or any oblation, but only incenſe was offered vnto God. Fifthly, of all offerings and oblations, it moſt liuely prefigureth the ſacrifice of attonement wrought by Chriſt vpon the croſſe, who therefore is called by the Apoſtle, A ſacrifice of ſweete ſmelling ſauour Ephes.5.2. vnto God. Seeing then that the offering of incenſe was a more ſoueraigne thing in the Law, then was the oblation of ſacrifices: there is ſmall reaſon for it, that our aduerſaries ſhould reſerue the leſſe, that is, the offering of ſacrifices for the Lord, and participate the greater and more worthie ſeruice, that is, cenſing of odors and perfumes vnto Saints, as Bellarmine doth, cap. 13.

*Anſw.*2. If ſacrifice were not then to be offered to Saints, much leſſe are prayers to be made now vnto them: Pſal.50.8.14. for to call vpon God is a greater thing, then to offer ſacrifice. If Saints cannot challenge the leſſe, that is, to haue ſacrifices, they haue no right to the greater, namely, to bee called vpon and prayed vnto.

Laſtly, Auguſtine ſaith, Non ſit nobis religio cultus hominum mortuorum, &c. Let vs not make it any part of religion to worſhip men that are dead: for if they liued well, they are now in that ſtate, that they need not, neither doe require any honour at our hands: but they would haue vs to worſhip God, &c. They are then to be honoured for imitation, not to be adored for Religion: Hæc Auguſt. de vera Religion. cap. 55.

Bellarmines anſwere here to S. Auguſtine is very meane, that hee ſpeaketh againſt the error of the Gentiles, who made wicked men departed their Gods: Lib. 1. de Sanct. cap. 14. Contra. But Auguſtine ſpeaketh not of wicked men, but of ſuch, as, pie vixerunt, liued a godly life, and are to be imitated, but ſo are not the wicked. Therefore his meaning is, that no men, though neuer ſo godly, or worthie of imitation in their life, are to be adored, or worſhipped. The Ieſuite we ſee then faileth in his anſwere.

Synod. Moguntin. cap. 45. Sancti, qui vitæ huius curſum beato fine clauſerunt, &c. The Saints, who haue happily ended this life, as the moſt noble members of Chriſts body, are worthily of vs to be honoured, not with that worſhip, which is due vnto God, but with the worſhip of loue and brotherlie fellowſhip, as we worſhip or reuerence holy men in this life, &c. The argument from hence is framed thus: As holy men are to be worſhipped in this life, ſo are the Saints in heauen: but no religious worſhip is due vnto them here, but only of loue, &c. Ergo.

A ciuill adoration then we denie not to be due vnto holy men, ſuch as the Ciuill law aſcribeth to Princes: Cod. lib. 2. tit. 9. l. 6. Noſtram adoraturos purpuream: They are ſaid to adore the Kings robes, that is, the kingly Maieſtie: but this is farre from religious adoration.

I will in the laſt place alleage the ſentence of a learned Papiſt againſt the adoration of Saints, namely Driedo, who thus writeth: There be certaine ſtories of the Saints to be ſuſpected, &c. Vt cum narrantur ſancti in mortis agone conſtituti, aut monuiſſe aut exegiſſe, vt ex hoc mundo tranſlati colerentur, &c. As when the Saints are reported in the agonie of death, to haue warned or required, that after they were gone out of this world, they ſhould be worſhipped, and in diſeaſes and other dangers to be called vpon: for it is not like, that they paſſing out of the world were carefull for their honour, but would pray rather with David, Lord enter not into iudgement with thy ſeruant: De libris Apocryph. lib. 4. c. 1. Thus farre one of their owne, miſliking the adoration of Saints.

Maſter Lambert holy Martyr hath ſealed this truth: who out of Auguſtine here before alleaged doth thus inferre, that we ſhould worſhip no men departed, bee they neuer ſo good or holy, for they ſeeke no ſuch honour, but that wee ſhould worſhip God alone: Honoramus eos (ſaith Auguſtine) charitate non ſeruitute: We honour them with loue, not with any worſhip or ſeruice; Fox pag.1108. Pag.1013.141

Contr.80.hæreſ. Epiphanius ſaith: Pater, filius & ſpiritus ſanctus adoretur, Mariam nemo adoret, non dico mulierem, imo nec virum. Deo debetur hoc myſterium, nec angeli capiunt talem glorificationem, &c. Let the Father, Sonne and holy Ghoſt be honoured: let none adore Mary, I ſay not a woman, but no not any man, this myſterie is due to God, no not the Angels are capable of this glorie.

2. Of the South Africane Church, we haue ſeene the iudgement of Auguſtine before. Fulgentius ſerm.3. cont. Arrian. teacheth that neither man nor Angels adoratione extollendos, to bee worſhipped with adoration.

3. Latter confeſſion of Heluetia, chap. 5. We loue them as brethren, and honour them alſo, yet not with any worſhip, but with an honourable opinion of them, and doe conclude with their iuſt praiſes, we alſo doe imitate them.

Comment.in 2.Tim.p.118. 4. The Romaniſts themſelues complaine of the groſſe idolatrous worſhip of Saints among them. Eſpenceus, Many Chriſtians offend in a good thing, quod diuos diuaſq; non aliter venerantur, quam Deum, that they worſhip Saints no otherwiſe then God himſelfe. Conſult.art.21 Caſſander: The matter is come to this paſſe, that Chriſt raigning now in heauen, beatæ Virgini, &c. by nature is made ſubiect to the bleſſed Virgin.

AN APPENDIX TO THIS FIRST PART, CONcerning vowes and oathes made to or by Saints.

The Papiſts.

26. Error. First, vowes may be made to Saints (ſay they) properly as vnto God, though not altogether in the ſame manner: Prayer may be made to Saints, therefore vowes alſo: A vow in the Greeke tongue is called εὐχὴ votum, prayer προσευχὴ oratio. As they differ not in name, ſo neither indeed are they to be ſeuered: Bellarm.lib.3.de cult. Sanctor.c.9.

Pſal.50.15. *Anſw.*1. He taketh that for granted, which is chiefly in queſtion: for it is idolatrie to pray to any other but vnto God: Call vpon me in the day of trouble. It is not lawfull to pray vnto Saints, therefore not to vow.

2. To make vowes is a more ſtrict and binding act of religion, then prayer is; for in euery vow there is a prayer; we pray God to giue vs grace to performe the thing vowed: and there is beſide a full purpoſe of the heart with a ſolemne promiſe, whereby wee binde our ſelues to the performing. Againe, wee may make petition and requeſt vnto mortall men, but vowes wee can make none vnto them: It would not therefore follow, though Saints might be prayed vnto, that they are alſo capeable of our vowes.

Secondly, it is alſo lawfull (they ſay) to ſweare by the name of Saints, becauſe all is referred to the honour of God; as he that ſweareth by the Temple, ſweareth alſo by him that dwelleth therein; Rhemiſt. Matth.21.ſect.8.

*Anſw.*1. In this place Chriſt reproueth the Phariſies for their ſwearing, and condemneth it by this argument; that howſoeuer they thought it a ſmall matter to ſweare by the Temple, yet in effect they did ſweare by God himſelfe. See then the boldnes of theſe men, that dare iuſtifie ſwearing by creatures by the ſame reaſon, that Chriſt condemneth it. Ambroſe much better: Iurare mihi per cœlum non licet, iudicare de dei filio licet? It is not lawful for me to ſweare by heauen, and is it lawfull to iudge the Sonne, &c. Lib.5.de fid.c.9. 2. Our Sauiour ſaith nothing but this, that in euery oath there is an inuocation of the diuine power, and therefore whoſoeuer ſweareth by a creature, committeth idolatrie, in making it his God.

In their Annotation vpon Geneſ.cap.42. Our Doway Diuines doe here alſo helpe out at a pinch: by the practiſe of Ioſeph ſwearing by the health of Pharaoh, they inferre that it is lawfull to ſweare by creatures: ſo it be with requiſite conditions, as in iudgement, equitie and truth, as Hierome ſaith, *cap.4.p.*131. Yea, they are bold to ſay: that it is not only lawfull to ſweare by creatures, but ſometime more conuenient, then immediatly by God himſelfe, pag.202.

1.Sam.1.20. *Anſw.*1. What if Ioſeph did not ſweare, but only vſed a conſtant and earneſt aſſeueration, as Anna did, ſaying to Elie, as thy ſoule liueth. 2. Or what if this were an infirmitie in Ioſeph, which he learned in Pharaohs Court, to ſpeake as they did, though he intended not to ſweare directly. Either of theſe doth ſatiſfie this obiection. 3. But if this were an oath and that lawfull, then not onely by Saints, but euen by mortall men and idolaters, ſuch as Pharaoh was, ſhould it bee lawfull to ſweare. 4. And it is a preſumptuous ſpeech to ſay it is more conuenient to ſweare by creatures, then by God, Ierem.4.4. and vttered without iudgement. Ieremie ſaith, we muſt ſweare in iudgement; but how? the Lord liueth: this part of the ſentence they of purpoſe left out. 5. And Moſes ſaith directly, Deut.10.20. Thou ſhalt feare the Lord, and ſhalt ſerue him (only, as the Latine tranſlator readeth) and ſhalt ſweare by his name, he is thy praiſe, and he is thy God: they vpon this text giue this note, an oath muſt be made in the name of God, not of falſe gods: but indeed it excludeth all creatures beſide God, as he onely is to be ſerued, ſo his name onely to be ſworne by, as the reaſon is giuen, he is thy God.

The Protestants.

1. That it is great impietie to make vowes vnto Saints, it is thus proued, Esay 19.21. In that day the Egyptians ſhall know the Lord, and ſhall doe ſacrifices, and vowe vowes vnto the Lord. But ſacrifices are not due vnto Saints, but onely to God: therefore neither vowes.

Esay 19.21.

Againe, the vowes of Christians are not to binde themſelues to goe in pilgrimage, or to offer vnto this Saint or that, this Image or that, as Augustine ſaith, Alius pallium, alius oleum, alius ceram, &c. One voweth a cloke, another oyle, a third a wax candle: God careth not for theſe vowes, ſaith hee, Sed hoc quod hodie redemit, ipſum offer, hoc eſt, Animam tuam. But offer and vowe vnto God, that which as this day he hath redeemed, that is, thy ſoule. The vowes therefore of obedience and repentance and all Christian duties are the true vowes, the vowing of body and ſoule to the ſeruice of God: But this cannot be vowed vnto any but to him that redeemed vs: Ergo, not to any Saint.

De tempor. ſerm. 3.

Rom.12.1.

2 That we ought onely to ſweare by the name of God, the Scripture is plaine: Thou ſhalt feare the Lord thy God and ſerue him, and ſhalt ſweare by his name; and by no other. But Saints are not to be feared or ſerued, for the Septuagint tranſlateth προσκυνήσεις, Thou ſhalt worſhip God, which kinde of worſhip the Papiſts themſelues dare not attribute to Saints: Ergo, neither are we to ſweare by them.

Deut 6.13.
Exod.23.13.

Againe, to ſweare, is to call him to witneſſe by whom we ſweare, and ſo to make him our God: for whom we ſweare by, wee confeſſe to be a ſearcher and knower of our hearts, and a reuenger of falſe ſwearers. To ſweare then, is to call God to witneſſe. Quid tu facis, cum iuras? Deum teſtem adhibes. Auguſtine. What doeſt thou, when thou ſweareſt? Thou calleſt God to witneſſe. But they that ſweare by Saints, call them to witneſſe, and none elſe are called to witneſſe, but they by whom they ſweare: Ergo, they make Saints their Gods, ſeeing God is called vpon in euery oath.

Serm.10. Sermonum 17.

Concil. Carthaginenſ. 4. can. 61. Clericum per creaturas iurantem, acerrime obiurgandum; ſi perſtiterit in vitio, excommunicandum: That a Clergie man ſwearing by creatures ſhould ſharply be reproued; and if he continue in that vice, to be excommunicate, &c. But he that ſweareth by Saints, ſweareth by creatures. This Canon is alſo confirmed in the decrees: cauſ.22. queſt.1.c.9.

See alſo to this purpoſe the decree of Pope Pius; ibid.10. Si quis per capillum Dei, vel caput iurauerit, &c. If any man doe ſweare by the haire or head of God, if hee be an Eccleſiaſticall perſon, let him be depoſed; if a lay-man, let him be anathematized, &c. If it be not lawfull to ſweare by the body of Chriſt, or any part thereof, which is vnited to his Godhead in one perſon, much leſſe by this Canon is it lawfull to ſweare by any other creatures. Let vs ſee alſo to this purpoſe the determination of their Maſter: Quæritur vtrum liceat iurare, &c. A queſtion is made, whether it be lawfull to ſweare by the creatures? and it ſeemeth we ought not, becauſe it is written in the Law, Thou ſhalt render thy oathes vnto the Lord: and a little after, The Iewes were commanded, if they did ſweare, they ſhould ſweare onely by the Creator, not by the creature; for ſwearing by the Angels, &c. they did worſhip the creatures, which honour was more ſafe to be giuen vnto God, then to the creatures, lib.3. diſtinct. 39.d.

William Thorpe, holy confeſſour of Gods truth, about anno 1400. ſaith thus, To ſweare by any creature, both Gods law and mans law is againſt it: And thereupon inferreth, that it is vnlawfull to ſweare by a booke, becauſe it is a thing compact of diuers creatures, *Fox.*pag.529.col.2. Wherefore a booke is brought forth, when an oath is miniſtred, not to ſweare by; but it is vſed as an externall rite, and teſtifying ſigne or witneſſe, for the better aduiſement to bee had in the oath: As Abrahams ſeruant laid his hand vpon his Maſters thigh, ſwearing vnto him: and as Iacob and Laban made the heape of ſtones a witneſſe of the couenant betweene them, yet neither did the one ſweare by his maſters thigh, nor the other by the ſtones.

1 It ſeemeth that in Chryſoſtomes time this vſe was not taken vp to ſweare by Saints in the Greeke Church: for he reproueth the common vſe of ſwearing, euen by the name of God, Vt etiam caſtigatus puer Deum ac Chriſtum iurare non vereatur, That a childe being chaſtiſed is not afraid to ſweare by God and Chriſt: children imitated the common vſe, which was to ſweare by Chriſt.

2 Dauid, Emperour of Æthiopia, in the end of his Epiſtle to Emmanuel King of Portugall, deſiring him to ſend him ſome cunning Artificers to worke in ſiluer and gold, ſaith, Iuro per Deum Ieſum Chriſtum Dei filium: I ſweare by Ieſus Chriſt the ſonne of God, that I will diſmiſſe them frankly and freely when they will, &c. This great Prince ſweareth only by Ieſus Chriſt: See alſo the Councell of Carthage before.

Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop.

3 Latter confeſſ. of Heluetia.c.5. Thoſe ancient men did not ſweare but by the name of the onely Iehouah, &c. therefore we doe not ſweare by Saints, although we be requeſted thereunto.

4 See the Maſter of Sentences, and the decrees of Gratian before alleaged: So then make the beſt of it they can, this Popiſh faſhion of ſwearing by Saints, is but an imitation of the Pagans ſuperſtition, who vſed to ſweare by their Gods: as Libanius doth often times in his bookes ſweare by Hercules, Bacchus, Aſclepius, as witneſſeth Socrates lib.3.c.23.

THE SECOND PART OF THE DISTINCTION of the two kindes of worſhip λατρεία and δουλεία.

The Papiſts.

27. Error. THat kinde of worſhip which is proper to God, they ſay, is fitly expreſſed by the Greeke word λατρεία, neither is this word vſed, but for the worſhip of God: the other word δουλεία, is taken for all kinde of ſeruice both of God and men: ſo that the religious worſhip, which is called λατρεία, is onely to be giuen to God: the other called δουλεία, may be attributed to Angels & Saints, Bellarmine, cap. 12.

August. lib. 20. Our Doway tranſlators doe here alſo come in with their part, as out of Auguſtine they prooue, that the worſhip, in the Greeke called Latria, is a ſeruice proper vnto God, Pag. 219. They inferre as much out of that place, Deut. 6. 13. Him onely ſhalt thou ſerue: Some adoration agreeth to creatures, but ſeruice of (Latria) to God onely: Pag. 413. in the margen: So, where it is ſaide, that Abdias meeting Elias, fell vpon his face: They giue this note, it was no ciuill honour, for in the world Abdias was the greater perſon, neither was it diuine honour, that had beene idolatrie, it was therefore religious honour called Dulia, due to ſpirituall excellencie: pag. 746. 1.King.18.7.

Anſwere. 1. Auguſtine ſaith no more but this, that the word λατρεία (if it bee taken in his proper ſenſe) ſignifieth a worſhip peculiar to God: but it is found, that the word ſometime is more largely taken, as ſhall be ſhewed afterward: but hee maketh not two kindes of religious worſhip: as in the ſame place, he ſaith thus: Wee honour Martyrs with that worſhip of loue and ſocietie, wherewith holy men are worſhipped in this life, &c. Theſe words are by themſelues recited, but it ſeemeth they had not their ſpectacles on, when they ſet them downe: a worſhip of loue and ſocietie or fellowſhip, is no religious, but a ciuill and ſociable reuerence.

2. In that place giuen in inſtance, the word λατρεία is vſed, but in diuers other places, the ſame word is vſed to ſignifie ciuill ſeruice, and the other word δουλεύειν is giuen vnto God, as ſhall bee preſently ſhewed.

3. It was a ciuill adoration, which Obadiah gaue vnto Elias: who though he were greater in the world, in ciuill reſpects, yet Elias was his ſuperiour in ſpirituall: in that reſpect he doth reuerence him; ſo wee reade that Nathan the Prophet made obeiſance to King Dauid downe to the ground: 1.King.1.23. though Nathan were in ſpirituall things Dauids directour, yet in temporall Dauid was his ſuperiour, and therefore Nathan honoured him: neither is it like that Dauid, though he reuerenced Nathan as the Lords Prophet, would haue yeelded religious worſhip to him, of whom he receiued ciuile: the reuerence which Obadiah gaue vnto Elias, was of the ſame kinde with this, that Nathan yeeldeth to Dauid.

The Proteſtants.

THis diſtinction is but of late inuented and coyned of our aduerſaries, ſomewhat to countenance them out in their Idolatrous and ſuperſtitious worſhip of Saints: We thus doe refell it.

Argum. 1. This diſtinction helpeth them not: for here are onely two words which doe betoken two kinds of worſhip, λατρεία, is the religious honour: δουλεία, is the ciuill dutie, ſuch as ſeruants performe to their maſters. They ſhould haue found out three names for their three kindes of worſhip: they haue gained nothing by this diſtinction, but that ciuill adoration is due vnto Saints, ſuch as is giuen to men vpon earth. As for their fained word ὑπερδουλεία, which may be called a ſuperſeruice, when they can find it in Scripture, they ſhall know more of our minde: and yet receiuing this tearme, it ſignifieth but a more ciuill ſeruice, it betokeneth not a new kind of religious worſhip.

Argum. 2. Neither are the words ſo vſed, as they make vs beleeue: for the word λατρεία, which they make proper for the ſeruice of God, is applied to men, as Leuit. 23. Opus ſeruile non facietis. Leuit.23.7. You ſhall doe no ſeruile worke: the word is ἔργον λατρευτὸν: Ladouic Vives alſo ſheweth out of prophane authors, that ſometime the word λατρεύειν is taken for the ſeruice of men or maides to their maſters: In 10. lib. Aug. de ciuit. Dei. cap. 1. So likewiſe Laurentius Valla ſheweth the ſame vſe of the word.

Gal.4.8. So contrariwiſe, the word δουλεύειν is taken in Scripture for the proper ſeruice of God, as Gala. 4.8. Yee did ſeruice to them that by nature were no Gods: the word is, ἐδουλεύσατε: Ergo, religious ſeruice is onely due vnto God, not vnto Angels or Saints, for they are not by nature Gods. So wee ſee that theſe two words, not onely in prophane authors, but in Scripture alſo are confounded.

Auguſtine ſaith, δουλεία debetur Deo, tanquam Domino: λατρεία verò, non niſi Deo, tanquam Deo: quæſt. in Exod. 94. Religious ſeruice is due vnto God as Lord; religious worſhip is onely due vnto God, as he is God.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that this place of Auguſtine maketh for him; for hence it followeth, that the worſhip called λατρεία, being due vnto God, as God, is not communicable vnto any, becauſe there is but one God; but the other, called δουλεία, ſeruice, being attributed to God as Lord, may be communicated, becauſe there are many truely and properly called Lords, Bellar. cap. 16.

1.Cor.8.6. Contra. Firſt, he directly oppugneth the Scripture, for the Apoſtle ſaith, Vnto vs there is but one God, & one Lord Ieſus Chriſt. 1. Cor. 8.6. The Apoſtle ſaith, that there is but one Lord that is properly and verily, he ſaith, there are many. Secondly, the Apoſtle ſaith, There are many Gods & many lords in the world, ver. 5. that is, improperly ſo called; ſo then, as many are called Lords, ſo alſo they are named in ſome ſort gods in the earth, and that in Scripture, I haue ſaid ye are Gods,&c. Wherefore hee hath anſwered iuſt nothing. Pſal.82.6.

That there is but one kinde of religious worſhip, and that onely due vnto God, and that whatſoeuer reuerence beſide, is but a ciuill kinde of adoration, we haue the euident teſtimonie of antiquitie: Concil.Nicen.2.action.4.Quid aliud eſt, quam honoris alicubi exhibiti emphaſis, adoratio? What elſe is adoration or worſhip, but a more emphaticall or earneſt yeelding of honour? It is then no new kind of honour, but a further degree onely of ciuill worſhip.

Likewiſe in the ſame Councell, action.7. Tharaſius entreating of the worſhip of Saints, doth notably handle this point: προσκυνεῖν. i.adorare,& ἀσπάζεσθαι. i.ſalutare,& φιλεῖν, i.amare,ſignificat: nam quod quis amat, id etiam adorat, & quod adorat, id etiam amat: To adore, or worſhip, is all one, as to ſalute, or loue; for that which a man loueth, he adoreth: and what he adoreth, he loueth. Then he goeth forward: Of the Phariſies our Sauiour ſaith, that they loue the firſt places at feaſts, and ſalutations in the Markets: Certum eſt: ἀσπασμοὺς, ſalutationem hoc loco à domino appellari προσκύνησιν, adorationem: It is certaine, that by ſalutation here is vnderſtood adoration, or worſhip. Againe, hee giueth another inſtance out of the 21. of the Acts, verſ.19. how Paul ſaluted or embraced the Elders aſſembled with Acts 21.19. Iames: Hic ſalutationem honorificam, adorationem mutuo factam Apoſtolica ſententia ſignificat: Here the Apoſtle, by his honourable ſalutation, ſignifieth their mutuall adoration one of another. Further (ſaith he) Eſt adoratio, quæ venerationem & deſiderium ſignificat: There is an adoration, which ſignifieth a reuerent kind of deſire, as we adore the Emperour: Eſt quæ timorem tantum ſignificat: There is an adoration that ſignifieth feare, as Iacob adored Eſau: Eſt quæ gratiam notat: There is an adoration which betokeneth thankfulneſſe, as Abraham adored the ſonnes of Heth of whom hee bought the field: Qui ſperant beneficium, adorant: They that hope for a benefit, adore, as Iacob adored Pharao. And all theſe are but diuers kindes of ciuill adoration, ſuch, and no other, as are due vnto the Saints, as more plainely writeth Adrian.1.epiſtol.ad Conſtantin. about the time of this 2. Nicen Councell: Qualis eſt iſte adorationis honor? profecto non alius, quam is, quo nos inuicem proſequimur, ſalutantes nos inter nos per honorationem, & dilectionem: What manner of worſhip is this, (which is to be giuen to the Saints?) ſurely none other, then that, which we giue one to another, ſaluting our ſelues by honour and loue, &c. Thus this Popiſh diſtinction of religious worſhip, is found to be cleane contrarie to antiquitie.

1 Epiphanius is a cleare witneſſe, that there is but one kind of religious worſhip, and that due vnto God, and that no religious worſhip is to be giuen to any creature, no not that inferiour kind, which they make leſſe then the diuine: Virgo erat Maria, et honorata; ſed non ad adorationem data, &c. Marie was an honourable Virgine, but not giuen vnto vs to be worſhipped, &c. Neq; Helias nobis adorandus, &c. neq; Ioannes, &c. neq; quiſquam ſanctorum adoratur, &c. Neither Helias is to be adored of vs, nor Iohn, &c. nor any of the Saints, &c. And that he ſpeaketh of a religious worſhip inferiour to the diuine, is euident; alluding to that place in Ieremy: Let them not ſay, Honoramus reginam cœli, Let vs honour the Queene of heauen: but theſe idolatrous women did not make the ſtarres, and works of heauen their Gods. And againe, Imagines adorandas intraducunt adulterante mente ab vno ſolo Deo: They bring in Images to be adored, with a minde adulterate from the one and onely God, &c. But none are now ſo abſurd, no not the Heathen, as to make Images their gods. Therefore Ieremie the Greeke Patriarke ſaith well: Neq; in ſanctis eorumq; imaginibus colendis nimij ſumus: We are not too exceeding in the veneration of Saints, and their Images, but in meaſure, fearing, leſt that honour which is proper vnto God, we ſhould giue vnto them, &c. But the Papiſts were exceſſiue herein, worſhipping their Saints no otherwiſe then God himſelfe, as ſome of their owne ſect complaines. See before, Err.25.in fine.

2. Cyrill of Alexandria: Sanctos Martyres neque Deos eſſe dicimus, neque adorari conſueuimus, laudamus eos potius ſummis honoribus, &c. We neither call the holy Martyrs our gods, neither vſe we to adore them: but we ſet them foorth with praiſe and high honour, becauſe they ſtriued valiantly for the truth, &c. Here is no religious worſhip giuen at all vnto them, but only praiſe and honour. Auguſtine alſo of the Africane Church ſaith, Honorandi ſunt propter imitationem, non adorandi propter religionem: They are to be honoured for imitation, not to be adored for religion.

3. David Pareus, to diſproue this diſtinction betweene λατρεία and δουλεία, hath taken paines, to ſhew the vſe of theſe words in the Scriptures: firſt, that the worſhip of God is oftner ſignified by dulia, then by latria: the firſt is found 39. times ſo vſed in the old Teſtament, the other about 30. times, as he hath ſummed and ſet downe the places. Secondly he ſheweth, that the other word latria is giuen to the creatures: as in tenne ſeuerall places it is found, thou ſhalt not doe ἔργον λατρευτὸν, any ſeruile worke. Thirdly, the worſhip of Images is forbidden vnder the terme latria, 34. times in the old Teſtament, and more in the new, Rom. 1.23. and 23. times vnder the other terme dulia. See Pareus, dub. 9.in 12.ad Rom.

THE THIRD PART, CONCERNING the kiſſing of holy mens feete.

The Papiſts.

29. Error. It is a ſigne of reuerence done both to Chriſt and other ſacred perſons, as Prophets, Apoſtles, Popes, or others repreſenting his perſon here vpon earth. Rhemiſt. Act.4.ſect.3.

2.King.4.17. *Argum.*1. The Shunamite fell downe and embraced Eliſeus feete, Ergo, the Popes feete ought to be kiſſed.

Anſwere. 1. Your Popes muſt be firſt as holy as this Prophet was, who was thus reuerenced for his holineſſe, before they can chalenge the like honour.

2. This reuerence to the Prophet was voluntarie in the woman, not looked for or exacted by the Prophet, as the Pope looketh for it of dutie.

3. Here is no mention made of kiſſing of feete, but onely that ſhe caught him by the feete, which was partly a ſigne of her ioy, that ſhe had met with the Prophet, partly by this ſudden and diſordered geſture, the Prophet perceiued that ſhe was troubled in minde: for Gehazi would haue thruſt her away, but he ſaid, Let her alone, for her ſpirit is troubled within her.

4. This is no warrant for the Pope to offer his feete to be kiſſed of Kings and Emperours, becauſe the woman fell downe at the Prophets feete, thinke you, that if the King of Iſrael had ſo done, the Prophet would haue ſuffered it?

*Argum.*2. Mary kiſſed Chriſts feete: Ergo, the Popes feete ought to be kiſſed.

Anſwere. What arrogancie is this, that the Pope, a mortall and ſinfull man, ſhould chalenge that honour which was done to Chriſt, being God in the fleſh, and voide of ſinne? He might alſo with the like blaſphemie chalenge to be worſhipped: becauſe the women in the Goſpell caught Chriſt by the feete, and worſhipped him. We may ſee by this, of what ſpirit he is, and whether he be not that Antichriſt, that ſhall make himſelfe as God.

2.Theſſ.2.4.

The Proteſtants.

The kiſſing of the feete, was an humble and lowly geſture, which was worthily vſed toward our Sauiour Chriſt, who was God in the fleſh, and in his body and humanitie annexed to his Godhead, as God to be worſhipped: but it is too diuine, and too lowly an homage to bee offered to any mortall man: And holy men in times paſt refuſed it, when any caried away with immoderate zeale and admiration of their perſon, were readie to giue it vnto them.

*Argum.*1. When Cornelius fell downe at Peters feete, the holy Apoſtle would not ſuffer him to doe it. The Pope is of a cleane contrarie ſpirit to S. Peter: for he refuſed it being offered; the Pope holdeth out his toe, and offereth it to be kiſſed, and vrgeth men thereunto.

*Argum.*2. If ſuch kiſſing of feete be commendable, how commeth it to paſſe that the Pope onely hath holy feete to kiſſe; and not other Biſhops and Clergie men, as well as he?

Auguſtine thus writeth vpon thoſe words of the Pſalme, Worſhip his footſtoole, reading according to the Septuagint, ſaith he, the earth is his footſtoole, but wee muſt not worſhip the earth: *Conuerto me ad Chriſtum, & inuenio, quomodo ſine impietate adoretur terra, &c. ſuſcepit enim de terra terram, quia caro terra eſt in Pſal.*98. I turne me (ſaith he) vnto Chriſt, and I finde how the earth may without any impietie bee worſhipped: for hee tooke earth of earth, fleſh of the fleſh of the Virgin, the fleſh is earth, &c. Out of theſe words I conclude, that the fleſh, the body, the humanitie ought not in any to be worſhipped, but onely in Chriſt, for the neere coniunction of the Godhead and humane nature together: and therefore conſequently no kiſſing of feete, which is an externall act of diuine worſhip, is ſeemely for any mortall man.

The Ieſuite might as well defend other inſolent parts of the Popes, as the kiſſing of their feete, as that they take vpon them to be caried vpon mens ſhoulders, as Stephanus 2. was anno 757. Alexander 3. did tread in the Emperour Fredericks necke: Adrianus 4. found fault with the Emperour for holding his ſtirrup on the left ſide: to whom the Emperour made this ſober anſwere: Scire velim ex te, hoc officij genus ex debito ne ſit, an beneplacito &c. I would know of thee, whether this ſeruice be of dutie, or good will; if of good will, it ſkilleth not on which ſide he commeth, that ſheweth his good will, &c. So then it ſeemeth, that this great reuerence ſhewed to the Popes, as in kiſſing their feete and ſuch like, proceeded rather from the good will, and lowlineſſe of others, then of any dutie belonging to their perſons. But concerning this and other proud parts of the Pope, the ſaid Fredericke the Emperour writing to Adriane, ſaith, as the truth was: Superbia deteſtabilem beſtiam vſque ad ſedem Petri repaſſe videmus: We ſee that the deteſtable beaſt of pride, is crept euen into Peters chaire.

This proud and inſolent faſhion of kiſſing the feete, one Pope learned of another: as Eugenius the fourth offered his feete to be kiſſed of both the Emperors of the Eaſt and Weſt, as was ſet vp in his Epitaph: Iſtius ante ſacros ſe prabuit alter ab ortu, alter ab occaſu Cæſar vterq; pedes: Fredericus the third kiſſed the feete of Nicholas the fifth ſitting in an Iuorie chaire, and offered him a great maſſe of gold. Ladiſlaus alſo King of Bohemia, and Hungarie, Albertus Duke of Auſtria, and Leonora the Empreſſe did likewiſe kiſſe his feete. The Emperour Sigiſmund kiſſed Pope Martines the fifth his feete.

Sabellic. ennead.9. in fine.

But this Popelike pompous pride is of ſmall antiquitie. 1. The Emperours, when it pleaſed them to ſhew their exceeding loue to godly Biſhops, would embrace them, and kiſſe their eyes, lips and breaſt, as Theodoſius did to Miletius: Gainas the Goth did reuerence Chryſoſtome, Et liberos eius genib. admonuit, And ſet his children to his knee Here is no kiſſing of feete. Nay the Biſhops themſelues did bow vnto the Emperors, and reuerence them with bare heads: as the Biſhops being aſſembled at Conſtantinople vnder the Emperour Gratian, Capitib. detectis, religioſe palatium ingrediuntur, et pie ſuauiterq́ ſalutant, &c. Vncouering their heads, doe deuoutly enter the Palace, and reuerently and louingly ſalute him, &c. This was the vſe of the Greeke Church. Theodoret. lib.5.7. Ibid.c.33. Sozomen.lib. 7.c.6.

2 And in the South Church, as in Egypt, in Athanaſius time, they vſed to waſh the ſtrangers feete: as he reporteth how one Hermias was taken of the Armie which had waſted Alexandria, waſhing ſtrangers feete, and caſt into priſon: Kiſſing of feete was not yet knowne. Indeede the Emperour of Æthiopia writing to the Pope (not to conceale that which I finde) ſaith, Mitto ad deoſculandos ſanctitatis tuæ pedes, more cæterorum, &c. I ſend to kiſſe the feete of your holineſſe, after the manner of other Chriſtian Kings, vnto whom neither in religion nor power, I am inferiour, &c. This great King, was content his meſſenger ſhould doe, as other Princes did, leaſt it might ſeeme to bee ſoone want of dutie in him: hee ſpeaketh this as a ſtranger, not knowing the pride and inſolencie of the Pope, and letting it paſſe as an ordinarie ſalutation. But at another time, when Ouiedo a Spaniard was ſent by the Pope to draw the Abyſſines to acknowledge the Romane Church, the Emperour Claudius chaſed him away, and Ouiedo was compelled to hide himſelfe. Here is no more talke of kiſſing of feete, after his pride was diſcouered. Epiſtol. ad vitam ſolitar. agentes. Epiſt.a. ad pontif. et Dam. Vniuerſall hiſtory of Indies, in chap. of Æthiop.

3 The reformed Churches affirme, that the Magiſtrate ought to haue the chiefeſt place in the world, Heluetia latter confeſſ. c. 30. Whom next vnto God we chiefely honour and reuerence. Confeſſ. of Sweueland, in the concluſion: If any kiſſing of feete then were due to ſuperiours, it belongeth rather to the Prince then to the Pope, or any other Biſhop. Harm.ſect.18. pag.578. Sect.19.p.601.

4 Some of their owne writers haue complained of this inſolent behauiour, as Polydor Virgill, Voluit Cornelius Centurio pedes Petri oſculari, &c. Cornelius the Centurion would haue kiſſed Peters feete, but hee being a father of humanitie would not ſuffer him, &c. ſaying, I my ſelfe alſo am a man: If our Biſhops did now a dayes well conſider they were men, they would not ſhew themſelues tam imperioſos Dominos, ſuch imperious Lords, &c. So alſo Maſſonius citeth out of Faber, how hee did condemne their cuſtome, Qui demiſſiſſime procumbunt ad pedes pontificios, &c. Which doe demiſſely fall downe at the Popes feete, to kiſſe the ſigne of the croſſe in the vpper part of his veluet ſhooe, &c. Lib.4. de inuention.c.13. Lib.6. in vit. Benedict.12.

THE THIRD QVESTION, CONCERNING the inuocation of Saints.

THis queſtion hath three parts: firſt, whether prayers are to be made vnto Saints. Secondly, whether they doe pray for vs. Thirdly, whether they vnderſtand our prayers.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER prayers are to be made to Saints.

The Papiſts.

THeir aſſertion is this, Sanctos defunctos piè & vtiliter à viuentibus inuocari: That Saints departed are with great profit and pietie called vpon, and prayed vnto: and that it is not onely lawfull but godly, ſo to doe, Rhemiſt. 1. Tim. 2. ſect. 4. Bellarm. cap. 19. lib. 1. de Sanctor. beatit. 30. Error.

Argum. 1. They ſay, they doe not pray vnto Saints, as authors of any benefit or grace, but as interceſſors only: Neither doe they make them immediate interceſſors but onely through Chriſt, concluding all their prayers, Per Chriſtum Dominum noſtrum. Bellarm.

Anſwere. 1. It is falſe, that you pray vnto them as interceſſors onely, for you deſire them not onely to pray for you, but to haue mercie on you: for thus they pray, O bleſſed Ladie haue mercie vpon vs, preſerue thy ſeruants, let the merits of S. Marie bring vs to the kingdome of heauen. Fulk. 1. Timoth. 2. ſect. 4.

2 It is alſo falſe, that they make them not immediate interceſſors, but conclude their prayers, Per Chriſtum Dominum noſtrum: For in that blaſphemous prayer, Tu per Thomæ ſanguinem quem pro nobis impendit, fac nos Chriſte ſcandere, quò Thomas aſcendit: Here they aske life eternall of Chriſt by the bloud of Thomas of Canterburie. How then is it true which the Rhemiſts affirme in word, that Chriſt alone by his merits procureth all grace and mercie toward mankinde, ibid. when they hope to obtaine their requeſts by the merits of Saints? See Fulk. annot. Ioh. 16. ſect. 3. where diuers prayers to Saints, as to S. Marie, S. Oſmond, S. Anne, S. Katherine, are reckoned vp, and none of them concludeth, Per Chriſtum Dominum noſtrum.

Fox.pag.1274. Likewiſe anno 1551. in Scotland it was taught as good doctrine among the Papiſts, that it was lawfull to ſay the Pater noſter to Saints, that we may call them our fathers, and ſay Hallowed be your names, becauſe God hath made their names holy, And that their kingdome may come, becauſe the kingdome of heauen is theirs by poſſeſſion: and further, That their will may be done, ſeeing their will is Gods will: and ſo of the other petitions. Whereby it appeareth, that they would haue prayers made vnto Saints properly, euen as vnto God.

Exod.32,13. *Argum.*2. Moſes thus prayeth, Remember Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob thy ſeruants. Moſes here hopeth to haue his prayers heard by the merits of theſe holy men. Bellarmine obiected alſo by our Doway tranſlators, pag.700.

Anſwere. Moſes rehearſeth onely the couenant, which the Lord made with theſe holy men and their ſeede, as the words following doe ſhew, To whom thou ſwareſt by thine owne ſelfe and ſaideſt vnto them, I will multiply your ſeede: Moſes therefore pleadeth not the merits of Abraham, Iſaac, Iacob; but vrgeth and preſſeth the promiſe of God, and couenant made with them: as wee may reade, Geneſis 17.7. where the Lord ſaith to Abraham, I will be God vnto thee, and thy ſeede after thee. Gen.17.7.

1.King.15.4. Bellarmine replieth, that mention is not onely made of the couenant, but of their merits alſo: For Dauids ſake did the Lord giue him a light in Ieruſalem, &c. becauſe Dauid did that, which was right in the ſight of the Lord, &c. obiected likewiſe by the Doway profeſſors. pag.935.

Contra. Firſt, here is no mention of Dauids merits: for in the ſame place Dauids ſinne againſt Vrias is remembred, which was ſufficient to ſtaine all Dauids merites with God. Secondly, God doth many times crowne the righteouſneſſe of the parents with temporall bleſſings in their poſteritie, according as the Lord promiſeth in the ſecond commandement, I will ſhew mercie vpon thouſands to them that loue mee: So that all this dependeth vpon Gods mercie and promiſe. Thirdly, compare this place with chap.11.32.34. there we ſhall finde this reaſon giuen, becauſe I haue choſen Dauid, &c. therefore God would not rent all the kingdome from Salomons poſteritie: wherefore this mercie to Dauids ſeede, did firſt of all iſſue from the free election of God. Fourthly, this place maketh nothing at all for the inuocation of Saints, though God reſpecting the obedience of Dauid, ſhould ſhew mercie vnto his ſeede. 1.King.11.32.

*Argum.*3. The Saints doe pray one for another here vpon earth, and doe one deſire anothers prayers: S. Paul, Rom.15. Epheſ.6. Coloſſ.4. and in other places deſireth to to be aſſiſted by their prayers: Ergo, much more may we deſire the prayers, of Saints departed, Bellarm. Rhemiſt. Rom.15.30. Epheſ.6.19. Coloſſ.4.3.

Anſwere. Firſt, to pray one for another while we liue, is a dutie of charitie, and commanded in Scripture: but to requeſt the prayers of Saints departed, hath no warrant in the word. Secondly, we doe not deſire the godly liuing to pray for vs, as our Mediatours, or as though by their worthineſſe we are brought into the fauour of God, as you ſay the Saints doe: and therefore your argument followeth not, from the prayer of the liuing to the prayer of the dead. Thirdly, we may one pray for another, and one requeſt the prayers of another, while we liue, becauſe we know our mutuall neceſſities: but the Saints departed, know not what things are done vpon earth, neither are euery where preſent to heare our prayers. Thus is their argument anſwered, whereof Bellarmine ſo boaſteth, that he ſaith, it was vnanſwerable, *cap.*19.

*Argum.*4. Bellarmine produceth diuers teſtimonies of the Fathers, and certaine Canons of Councels to prooue the inuocation of Saints; as namely, Synod. 7. act. 6. in fine: Cum timore, &c. Let vs doe all with feare, entreating the interceſſion of the vndefiled Virgin, of the Angels, and all Saints, &c.

Anſwere. Firſt, this 7. Synode, which was the Nicene 2. is not worthie to bee counted among the generall Councels, wherein it was concluded that images of Saints were to be worſhipped, and it was aſſembled againſt, Iconoclaſtas, the breakers of Images: but the 4. Conſtantin. rather is to be held the 7. generall, which was gathered againſt, Iconolatras, the worſhippers of Images: wherein it was concluded, that it was neither lawfull to haue the images of Saints, nor to worſhip them. And that this deſerueth rather the name of a generall Councell, it may appeare, both becauſe it had the preſence and conſent of two Emperours, Leo and Conſtantinus; whereas the other had but the conſent of Irene the Empreſſe, Conſtantinus her ſonne being yet vnder her gouernment, who afterward comming to yeeres of diſcretion, did abrogate the conſtitutions of this Councell: as alſo for that the one was moderated by the reuerend Patriarke of Conſtanſtin. Paulus and Theodoſius Biſhop of Epheſus; but the other was ouerruled by Thataſius that vnlearned Prelate of Conſtantinople, of a lay man ſuddenly made a Patriarke, contrarie to the Canons, whoſe election Charles the great did take exception againſt.

Secondly, that it may appeare what reſpect is to be had to this Councell, let vs ſee ſome of their beſt ſtuffe: Action. 4. One Iohannes ſtepped vp, and ſaid, Maior eſt imago quàm oratio: An Image is greater then prayer. Action. 1. Tharaſius the Preſident ſaid: Malum perpetuo idem eſt & æquale: Euill or ſinne is alwaies equall and the very ſame: & idem eſt errare in magnis & paruis, and to erre in great matters or ſmall, concerning the faith, is all one. Such blaſphemous and erroneous concluſions, may very well beſeeme ſuch a blinde Councell. Of the ſame kinde is their reſolution for the inuocation of Saints.

Thirdly, this Synode is of no great antiquitie, being celebrate about anno 780. and therefore not much to be regarded. Almoſt foure hundred yeeres before this the doctrine of the Church was otherwiſe, as out of Ambroſe is moſt euident, whereas he thus writeth in 1.cap.ad Roman. Dicunt per iſtos ire ſe poſſe ad Deum,&c. They ſay that by theſe (that is by Saints) they may haue acceſſe vnto God, as by Courtiers we come vnto the King: Goe to, is any man ſo mad, or ſo forgetfull of himſelfe, as to giue the honour of the King to a Courtier? and doe they thinke they doe well, that giue the honour of God to a creature, & relicto Domino conſeruos adorant, and leauing the Lord, to adore their fellow ſeruants? And therefore we come vnto the King by Courtiers, becauſe the King is a man, and knoweth not to whom he ſhould commit the affaires of the kingdome; but vnto God, from whom nothing is hid, who knoweth euery mans merits (that is, workes) ſuffragatore non eſt opus, ſed mente deuota, we need no ſpeaker, but a deuout minde, &c. No doubt this ſaying of S. Ambroſe was agreeable to the doctrine of the Church in thoſe daies: out of the which we may gather theſe three reaſons againſt the inuocation of Saints: firſt, becauſe this were to giue the honour of the King to his ſubiects, of God to a creature. Secondly, Angels and Saints are our fellow ſeruants, and therefore not to bee worſhipped, with our inuocation. Thirdly, it is not ſo with God as with Princes: to them wee muſt haue acceſſe by others, becauſe they otherwiſe know not our neceſſities, but God knoweth our hearts.

See further of the exceptions taken to this Synod. Cont.3 of generall Councels.q.9.

Bellarmines anſwere, to this ſo euident a teſtimonie, is very ridiculous: firſt, ſaith he, Saint Ambroſe ſpeaketh againſt the Ethnicks, that did worſhip the ſtarres, and calleth them our fellow ſeruants, that is, creatures.

Contra. Firſt, it is a very improper and vnuſuall ſpeech, to call the ſenſeleſſe creatures our fellowe ſeruants, and this beggerly ſhift bewraieth the nakednes of their cauſe. Secondly, S. Ambroſe ſpeaketh of ſuch fellow ſeruants, as ſhould admit vs into Gods preſence; but I thinke he is not ſo fooliſh to thinke, that the ſtarres are mediatours vnto God for vs: wherefore it is euident he ſpeaketh of the mediation of Saints.

Secondly, ſaith he, on Gods behalfe, ſuffragatore non eſt opus, we need no ſpokeſman, but in reſpect of our ſelues, we haue need, &c.

Contra. A ſimple and weake diſtinction: for firſt S. Ambroſe maketh this compariſon: We need a ſpokeſman to the King, becauſe he knoweth not our wants; but to God we neede none, becauſe of himſelfe, he vnderſtandeth our prayers: wherefore there is no need at all of a ſpokeſman to God. Secondly hee ſheweth, that on our behalfe alſo wee neede no ſpokeſman, but a deuout minde: a deuout minde, I thinke is not required on Gods behalfe, but on ours. Thus this ſophiſticall popeling wraſtleth by his ſubtiltie with the cleere euidence and light of truth, but euery where proclaimeth the weaknes of his cauſe. And as he anſwereth this place of S. Ambroſe, ſo hee dealeth with the reſt: but fully now to anſwere the obiections out of the Fathers, would inlarge this volume too much, of purpoſe therefore I doe forbeare: yet here and there in the more waightie controuerſies, I thinke it not amiſſe to giue a taſte.

Our Doway diſciples doe here alſo put in their verdict: Honour was religiouſly giuen vnto Saints, while they liued, as a Nobleman adored Elias, and Eliſeus was adored by his diſciples: hence they would proue à maiori, the honour and interceſſion of Saints: pag.935.

This was no religious, but a ciuill kind of higher reuerence giuen vnto theſe holie men, as is ſhewed before, error 25.26. in the anſwere to the Doway obiections: neither doth the argument follow from the liuing to the dead: as likewiſe ſee before in the anſwere to the third argument.

But, if it be further obiected, that many haue prayed to the Saints, and namely to the Virgin Mary, and haue obtained their requeſts, and therefore ſuch prayers are auaileable. We anſwere, that this is no good argument, that is taken from the euent: for ſo Liuie writeth, that Romulus prayed to Iupiter, that he would ſtay the flight of the Romanes, that he might keepe off the Sabines, and it was effected. Plinie alſo reporteth, that one Helpis ſeeing a ramping lion come againſt him, prayed to Bacchus and was deliuered: like as the praying to heathen gods is not iuſtified by the ſubſequent effects, no more is the inuocating of Saints, &c.

Plin.lib.8.c.16

The Proteſtants.

THat prayer is onely to be made vnto God, and to no other creature beſide, as being an eſpeciall part of the worſhip of God, which we ought not to giue to any other: thus it is proued out of the word of God.

Argum.1. How ſhall they call vpon him, in whom they haue not beleeued? But wee muſt beleeue onely in God, and therefore onely pray to God. Rhemiſt. anſwere: It is true, no more can wee pray vnto our Ladie, nor any Saint in heauen, vnleſſe we beleeue they can helpe vs. So doth Bellarmine anſwere likewiſe.

Anſw. The Scripture euery where teacheth that we muſt beleeue in God, and that they are curſed that put any confidence in man. Againe, they can haue no aſſurance to ſettle their conſcience, but out of the Scriptures: They haue a vaine perſwaſion of the abilitie of Saints to helpe them, but they haue no ground of any ſuch beleefe out of the Scripture.

Ierem.17.5.

Boner, as great a patrone of poperie in his time, as any of the Rhemiſts now, he ſaith thus: To truſt to any wee bid you not; but to call vpon them, and pray to them, wee bid you, Fox pag.1587. He thought it a groſſe thing, that wee ſhould truſt to Saints, which the new Papiſts ſet downe for good holeſome doctrine.

Heb.4.16.

Argum.2. Heb.4.16. Let vs come with boldnes to the throne of grace: Ergo, we haue no neede of the inuocation of Saints, ſeeing we haue free and bold acceſſe through Chriſt.

Rhemiſt. By this reaſon we ſhould not pray one for another, while we are aliue.

Anſw. We doe not put our confidence in the merit and worthines of other mens prayers, as you doe in the interceſſion of Saints. Againe, this mutuall dutie of prayer one for another, is commanded and required of God, as the other is not: wherefore to runne vnto Saints, and not vnto Chriſt, is to doubt either of his readines, or abilitie to helpe vs.

Iohn 16.26.

Argum.3. Chriſt ſaith, that after he hath by his mediation and interceſſion brought vs into the fauour of God, In that day ſhall you aske the Father in my name, and I ſay not that I will pray to the Father for you, for the Father himſelfe loueth you. If then the prayer of Chriſt to God his Father, ſhall not then be needfull, what vſe is there of the prayer of other creatures? Fulk.1.Tim.2.ſect.4.

Math.6.9.

Argum.4. Our Sauiour Chriſt hath taught vs in the Goſpell, to whom we ſhould direct our prayers, ſaying, Our Father, which art in heauen, &c. Matth.6. This prayer cannot be ſaid either to Angell, or Saint: Ergo, it is contrarie to Chriſts rule to pray vnto them.

Bellarmine anſwereth, by the ſame reaſon, only God the Father ſhould be prayed vnto, neither God the Sonne, nor the holy Ghoſt; for he teacheth vs only to ſay, Our Father, &c.

Iſai 9.6.
Iames 1.17.
Matth.28.22.
Rom.14.17.
Iohn 20.22.

Contra. Firſt, here he ſheweth his wilfull ignorance: as though the whole Trinitie in reſpect of vs, and euery one of the perſons, is not our Father; though in the reſpect that they haue one to another, there is but one Father, and one Sonne: for Chriſt is called the euerlaſting Father, Eſay 9. and the holy Ghoſt, Iames 1.17. is named by the Apoſtle, Pater luminum, the father of lights. Secondly, there is not a petition in the Lords prayer but agreeth to the whole Trinitie: as where wee pray, Hallowed be thy name, for there is one name of the whole Trinitie, as Matth.28. Goe and baptize in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt: as S. Ambroſe ſheweth, lib.1. de ſpiritu. cap.14. Let thy kingdome come: this alſo concerneth the whole Trinitie, which hath but one kingdome: as S. Ambroſe proueth out of that place, Rom.14. The kingdome of God is not meate, but righteouſneſſe, and peace, and ioy in the ſpirit: the kingdome of God, and of the ſpirit, is all one. So likewiſe, they haue all one will: they all doe together forgiue vs our ſinnes, as Ioh.20. Receiue ye the holy Ghoſt, whoſe ſinnes yee remit, they are remitted. The holy Ghoſt therefore forgiueth ſins, as well as the Father, or the Sonne: wherefore it is euident, that the Lords prayer is directed to the whole Trinitie in the name of Father. Thirdly, yet Bellarmine is not altogether ſo abſurd, as ſome popiſh Scottiſh Diuines haue been, who were not aſhamed to grant, that the Lords prayer might be ſaid to the Saints. See Fox pag.1274.

Auguſtine ſaith, *Pro quo nullus interpellat, & ipſe pro omnibus; hic vnus verúſq; Mediator eſt. lib.2. cont. Parmenian.cap.*8. He for whom no man prayeth, but himſelfe entreateth for all men, he is the only true Mediatour: Ergo, Saints no Mediatours, and therefore not to be prayed vnto.

Rom.10.

Let vs ſee the teſtimonie of holy Martyrs: Thomas Haukes, It is an abominable blaſphemie againſt God, and his ſonne Chriſt, to call vpon any, to truſt to any, or to pray to any, ſaue only to Chriſt Ieſus. His reaſon is out of S. Paul, Rom.10. that we cannot call vpon any, vpon whom we beleeue not: But our beliefe, faith and truſt muſt only be fixed vpon God. To this agreeth the concluſion of a generall Councell, Nicen.2.action.2. Tharaſius Preſident of the Councell thus ſaith: Apertis verbis teſtamur, nos duntaxat in vnum Deum veram latreiam, id eſt, cultum, & fidem noſtram referre & reponere: We doe plainly teſtifie, that we repoſe and referre our faith and truſt only vnto God.

Pag.113.1.40.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr: Whereas the Papiſts commonly obiect, that as wee cannot be admitted into the preſence of the Prince, but by mediatours, and friends going betweene; ſo is it betweene God and vs: he anſwereth, that there is great difference betweene God, and a mortall Prince: For neither hath the Prince the knowledge that God hath, who knoweth & ſeeth all things euery where, &c. neither is he in mercie and gracious dealing like to God: who is of that infinit mercie, that I may as ſoone obtaine of him, that is needfull, as I ſhould by praying to Saints to be Mediatours, &c. And ſo he concludeth, I will pray vnto Saints, when I thinke that God either cannot or will not giue my petition; but that ſhall neuer be: Ergo, &c. pag.1109. reſponſ. ad articul.14.

Cenſur. Oriental.c.22.
Rom.10.14.

1 Ieremie Patriark ſaith: Nos dicimus inuocationem vere & properie ſoli Deo conuenire, &c. eam autem, quæ ſanctorum eſt inuocationem, non proprie dici, ſed ex accidenti, &c. We ſay, that inuocation truly and properly belongeth only vnto God, and that inuocation, which is of the Saints, is not properly ſo called, but accidentally, as it were by grace and priuiledge, &c. And a little after, De ea inuocatione, &c. Of that inuocation, which is due vnto God himſelfe, Paul writeth to the Romanes, how ſhall they call vpon him, on whom they haue not beleeued? Deum ſine omni dubio intelligens, vnderſtanding God without all doubt, &c. He denieth any truſt to be repoſed, but only in God, and ſo conſequently inuocation to belong properly only to God.

Liturg. of S.Cyril.

2. In ancient time the South Church vſed thus to pray in their Liturgie, Call to remembrance O Lord our holy fathers, the Patriarkes, Prophets, Apoſtles, and aboue all the reſt, the holy and glorious Virgin Mary, S.Iohn, S.Stephen, graunt them all to reſt in the boſome of our holy fathers, Abraham, Iſaak, Iacob, &c. raiſe their bodies, &c. It ſeemeth then that in thoſe daies, they prayed rather for, then to the Saints, that God would giue them a glorious reſurrection. Athanaſius, though many things are found in his writings touching the inuocation of Saints : yet hee ſomewhere thus affirmeth : The words of the Pſalmes are not to be changed, but as they are written be recited : vt ſancti qui iſta verba ſuppeditarunt, ſua eſſe agnoſcentes, comprecentur nobiſcum : That the Saints, which ſupplied theſe words, acknowledging their owne, may pray together with vs, &c. Here hee maketh the Saints ioynt intreaters with vs, not mediators for vs. What is the iudgement and practiſe of the now Aethiopike Church, is not ſo certaine : for in the Aethiopian Liturgie thus they pray: Reioyce O Ladie, we will pray for thy health, O Virgin carrie our prayers vp on high to the eares of thy Saints, &c. Heere they ſeeme both to pray for, and to the Virgin Mary : but theſe ſpeeches ſeeme rather to be Apoſtrophees and Proſopopaes, to ſtirre them vp to deuotion : for Hondius ſaith, that they in no wiſe call vpon Saints. And it may be thought rather to bee ſo, then otherwiſe : for their Emperour Dauid in his Epiſtle to Emmanuel King of Portugall vſeth theſe formes of prayer : Deo agenda ſunt gratiæ, is eſt qui vobis mundum dedit : Thankes muſt be giuen vnto God, it is he that hath giuen you the world, &c. And againe : Rex vnus Deus te ſeruet, qui eſt Deus cœli: The one God keepe thee, hee which is God of heauen, of one ſubſtance, &c. He bleſſeth here in the name of God only : he ſeemeth alſo to aſcribe ſomewhat to the prayers of Saints, but in generall only he prayeth not vnto them. See error 31.

Yea he goeth further and ſaith, Non eſt expreſſum in nouo Teſtamento, &c. It is not expreſſed in the new Teſtament, but by tradition, leſt the Gentiles might haue thought that a multitude of Gods had been put vpon them, &c. So then inuocation of Saints, by their owne confeſſion, is warranted neither by the old nor new Teſtament.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER THE Saints departed doe pray for vs.

The Papiſts.

THat the Saints in heauen doe not onely pray in generall, but particularly for vs, readie in all our needes by their prayer and mediation to aſſiſt vs : thus they would proue it.

31. Error.

Argum. 1. I will endeuour (ſaith the Apoſtle) that you may haue remembrance of theſe things after my departure. Peter promiſeth to be carefull of them, and to pray for them after his departure. Rhemiſt. ibid. Bellarm. cap. 18.

1. Pet. 1. 15.

Anſw. This which heere the Apoſtle promiſeth, hee performeth in writing this Epiſtle, whereby they might bee put in remembrance, when hee was gone. And therefore he ſaith, verſ. 13. I thinke it meete, ſo long as I am in this tabernacle, to ſtirre you vp by putting you in remembrance : hee acknowledgeth now onely to bee the time wherein hee may doe them good, and therefore deferreth it not. There is no ſillable, which ſoundeth that way, that hee would pray for them after his diſſolution.

Argum. 2. Apocal. 5. 8. The 24. Elders are ſaid to haue golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of the Saints, Rhemiſt. in hunc locum. Ergo, the Saints in heauen doe pray for vs.

Apoc. 5. 8.

Anſw. The 24. Elders doe repreſent the Church Militant vpon earth, whoſe conuerſation is in heauen, and they doe continually offer vp their prayers. And that the place is ſo to be vnderſtood, it appeareth verſ. 10. Thou haſt made vs Kings and Prieſts, and wee ſhall raigne vpon the earth : that is, their kingdome is ſpirituall, in fighting againſt, and ouercomming the concupiſcence of the fleſh, and all carnall deſires.

Argum. 3. Ierem. 15. 1. If Moſes and Samuel ſtood before me, my affection could not be toward this people : therefore Moſes and Samuel being dead, did vſe to pray for the people. Bellarm.

Ierem. 15. 1.

Anſw. Firſt, the contrarie rather may bee gathered, that Moſes and Samuel did not pray for the people being dead : becauſe the Lord ſaith, if they did, &c. but it is not like, that their charitie is leſſe in heauen to ceaſe praying for the people, if the Saints had any ſuch office, ſeeing that Samuel yet liuing ſaid, God forbid, that I ſhould ceaſe praying for this people. Secondly, this place may bee expounded by that Ezech. 14. 20. Though Noah, Iob, Daniel, were in the middeſt of the citie, they ſhould but deliuer their owne ſoules : So here, if Moſes and Samuel were liuing to pray for the people, as they vſed to doe, God will not heare them.

1. Sam. 12. 23.

Ezech. 14. 20.

Argum. 4. Luke 16. in the parable, the rich man prayeth for his brethren, much more doe the righteous pray for the whole Church : as Reuel. 6. The ſoules vnder the altar, crie, Lord how long doeſt thou not iudge and auenge our blood, &c? Bellarm. cap. 18.

Luke 16. 27.

Reuel. 6. 10.

Anſw. Firſt, to the firſt place I anſwere, that it is a parable, or admitting it to be a ſtorie, wee muſt needs acknowledge many things to be ſpoken in parable and allegorie, as that he deſireth a drop of water to coole his tongue, whereas he neither had any tongue, his bodie being left in the graue, neither is water able to aſſwage the paines of hell. Againe, to take the conference betweene Abraham and the rich man literally, may be occaſion of many doubts: as how they could one heare anothers talke, there being a great gulfe betweene them: neither had Abraham any ſuch power to ſend Lazarus to the liuing: wherefore it is hard vpon euery part of this parable to ground an argument. Secondly, there is no charitie in hell, how then can there be any prayer there, which proceedeth of charitie? Thirdly, be it granted that the prayer of the rich man is hiſtoricall: it onely ſheweth a generall deſire and wiſh that he hath to his kinred: and ſo we denie not, but that the Saints in generall doe deſire the conſummation of Chriſts bodie, and the eternall reſt of the reſt of his members yet militant in earth.

To the ſecond place we likewiſe anſwere: firſt, if that prayer or complaint, which the ſoules vnder the Altar make, be ſtrictly according to the letter taken, is it to be thought, that the Saints haue leſſe charitie in heauen, then they had in earth? for Stephen prayed that his perſecutors might be forgiuen at his death, and doth the ſoule of Stephen now being vnder the Altar call for vengeance? This is Hieromes reaſon: They doe not deſire their blood, which perſecuted them, pro eis enim precatio fuſa eſt, &c. for they prayed for them, that the ſinne ſhould not be laid to their charge. Secondly, they pray not therefore particularly for the deſtruction of any, but generally, that an end may bee made of the tyrannie of Satan: as Hierome expoundeth, Spirituales nequitiæ hic intelliguntur: Spirituall enemies are heere vnderſtood, De vir. perfecto. And it is in effect the ſame with the prayer of the Church, Apocal. 22.17. The ſpirit, and the bride ſay come: that is, they doe all waite for the finall accompliſhing of Chriſts kingdome. Thirdly, we grant then that the Saints in heauen doe long both for the conſummation of their owne glorie, and wiſh generally vnto the Church militant the like triumphant end and victorie of their labours: and we confeſſe as much, as S. Cyprian ſaith: Magnus illic charorum numerus nos expectat, &c. parentum, fratrum, filiorum de ſalute ſua ſecuri, de noſtra ſolliciti: A great number of our friends doe there waite for vs, &c. being ſecure of their owne ſaluation, carefull for vs: Serm. 4. de mortalit. But hence it followeth not, that they haue particular knowledge of our manifold neceſſities, and ſo make their particular requeſts vnto God for vs.

Apoc. 22.17.

The Doway tranſlators would prooue, that the Saints haue care of the affaires of the Church, and pray for the ſame, by the example of Elias: who ſeuen yeeres after he was tranſlated, had care of Ieboram and his kingdome, admoniſhing by letters of Gods wrath againſt him and his people for their ſinnes: 2. Chron. 21.11. pag. 903. and 935.

Anſw. To this obiection diuers anſweres are made: Firſt, ſome thinke, that Elias is there taken for Eliſha, who ſucceeded him, and heired his propheticall gifts: Engliſh annotat. Secondly, Iunius thinketh, that Elias before he was taken vp, did leaue this propheticall letter, therein foretelling of Iehorams wicked gouernment, and of the iudgement of God againſt him, as Iſaiah prophecieth of Cyrus long before: and the man of Iudah of Ioſiah: to this may bee added, that Iehoram began to raigne vnder his father, in his eighteenth yeere, and had gouerned two yeeres vnder his father, before Eliah was taken vp: ſo that euen then the Prophet had experience of his euill diſpoſition. This anſwere is without exception the beſt: we need not imagine any letters to be ſent from heauen or Paradiſe written by Elias: we reade not in Scripture of any writing ſent from heauen, but of the tenne Commandements giuen by Gods owne finger deliuered to Moſes.

The Proteſtants.

THat the bleſſed Saints doe ſing vnto the praiſe of God in heauen, and doe magnifie the Lord, and praiſe him with a new ſong of thankſgiuing, which is a kinde of prayer, we denie not, Apoc. 5.9. and that they haue a generall deſire and longing, both for vs, for themſelues, and all the elect of God, that the day of our refreſhing were come, and that all the people of God were ioyned in one, and their enemies vanquiſhed and deſtroyed, we learne alſo out of the Scripture, Apoc. 6.9. But that they ſhould offer vp our ſpeciall prayers, and make particular requeſt for vs to God, it no where in the Scripture is found, but rather the contrarie.

Apoc. 5.9.
Apoc. 6.9.

Argum. 1. The Scripture no where teſtifieth, that the Saints in ſuch manner doe pray for vs: Ergo, wee may ſafelie bee ignorant of it: nay it were great preſumption, without Scripture to beleeue it.

Argum. 2. The Saints departed know not our wants, nor what is done in the earth. The liuing know that they ſhall die, but the dead know nothing at all, Eccleſ. 9.5. But of this more ſhall be ſaid in the next part. See Auguſtine of this matter, Contro. 8. queſt. 2. part 3.

Eccleſ. 9.5.

Argum. 3. Saint Paul ſaith, There is one mediatour of God and man, the man Ieſus Chriſt, 1. Timoth. 2.5. Ergo, Saints are not our mediatours, and ſo conſequently they doe not pray for vs.

1. Tim. 2.5.

Bellarmine anſwereth, Chriſt is ſaid onely to be our mediatour for three cauſes: firſt, becauſe hee is the onely mediatour of our redemption. Secondly, he is a mediatour not by his office only, but in reſpect of his nature alſo, being both God and man. Thirdly, becauſe he is ſo a mediatour, that he needeth not any other mediatour, as the Saints doe, who are mediatours, but not in the foreſaid reſpects: Bellarmine cap. 20.

Anſw. Bellarmine hath ſtrengthened our argument well, and giuen three reaſons why the Saints cannot be mediatours in any reſpect at all. Firſt, there can be no aduocate or mediatour, but the ſame muſt be the propitiation for our ſinnes, as S. Iohn ſheweth, The Saints are not a propitiation for our ſins, 1.Ioh.2.2. Ergo. Secondly, the Apoſtle ſaith, A mediatour is not of one, Galath.3.20. So then he that is the mediatour betweene God and man, muſt not be of one nature: hee muſt be both God and man: Ergo, Galath.3.20. Saints are no mediatours. Thirdly, hee cannot be a mediatour, that hath himſelfe need of a mediatour, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, that they could not bee our high Prieſt, that had neede firſt to offer for their owne ſinnes, and then for the ſinnes of the people, and to offer vp our prayers is belonging to Heb.7.27. the prieſthood. Saints cannot be our prieſts: Ergo, neither our mediatours. Thus hath Bellarmine reaſoned well for vs againſt himſelfe.

Francis Rebezies holy Martyr, ſheweth in what manner Saints doe pray for vs; who, when a Doctor had put foorth this reaſon, The Apoſtles made interceſſion to Chriſt when as hee was vpon the earth, why may they not doe ſo now? ſeeing Chriſt then was the interceſſor of the world, as now. He thus anſwereth: So long as they were in the world, they exerciſed their miniſterie, and prayed one for another, as needing humane ſuccours together: but now being in paradiſe, all the prayer they make is this, that they wiſh, that they which be vpon earth may attaine to their felicitie: but to obtaine any thing at the Fathers hand, wee muſt haue our recourſe onely to his ſonne. Fox pag.922. Pag.841.2.68. col.2.

Although not long after the Apoſtles time ſuperſtition began by little and little to creepe into the Church; and the Saints and Martyrs began to be more then deuoutly honoured, yet the Lord left not his truth without witneſſe both in the Eaſt and South Churches. 1. Chryſoſtome, though hee ſometime after his orationall manner ſet foorth the praiſes of the Saints, and turne himſelfe vnto them: yet he thus alſo as more aduiſedly writeth: Clauſo oſtio, id eſt, intra conſcientia ipſius ſecretum à Domino iubemur orare, vt ab eo, qui ſecretorum eſt cognitor, recipiamus orationis occultæ mercedem: Wee Hom.8 in 5.Matth. are commanded of the Lord to pray, the doore being ſhut, that is, within the ſecret of our conſcience, that from him who is the knower of ſecrets, we may receiue the reward of our ſecret prayer, &c. Now ſeeing the Saints know not our hearts, how can they be mediators of our ſecret prayers, which are only made with the heart.

2. Origen in his time made doubt of this matter: Vtrum Sancti extra corpus poſiti agunt aliquid, Lib.2.in epiſt. ad Roman. & laborant pro nobis ad ſimilitudinem Angelorum, &c. habeatur hoc inter occulta Dei, &c. Whether the Saints being out of the bodie doe any thing, and labour for vs after the manner of the Angels, &c. let it be numbred among the ſecrets of God, &c. Cyrillus of Alexandria ſpeaketh more directly: Orandum eſt in nomine ſaluatoris, ſi exaudiri à patre volumus, &c. We muſt pray in the name of our Sa- Lib.11.c.7.in Ioann. uiour, if we will be heard of the Father. Auguſtine of the South Africane Church is very direct: Si eſſet mediator Paulus, eſſent vtiq; & cæteri Coapoſtoli, & ſic multi mediatores eſſent, nec conſtaret ipſi Paulo ratio, quia dixerat, vnus Deus, vnus mediator, &c. If Paul were a mediator, the reſt of his fellow Apoſtles alſo ſhould be mediators, and ſo there ſhould be many mediators, and then Pauls reaſon could not ſtand in ſaying, there is one God, and one mediator of God and man, the man Ieſus Chriſt. In- 1.Tim.2.5. deed Cyprian before Auguſtines time, thus writeth: If any of vs doe goe before by the diuine calling, Lib 1.epiſtol. epiſt.1.in fine. perſeueret apud Deum noſtra dilectio pro fratribus & ſororibus noſtris: Let our loue perſeuere with God for our brethren and ſiſters, &c. They which are departed out of this life, doe in generall wiſh well vnto the Saints yet liuing, and wiſh them to be partakers of the ſame felicitie: but their particular neceſſities they know not, neither can offer vp their particular and priuate requeſts, &c. And thus alſo we may vnderſtand thoſe kinds of prayers, vſed in the Aethiopike Church to this day, though we may well think, that they in proceſſe of time, &c. degenerate from the puritie of the ancient faith, as other Churches haue done. The Empreſſe Helena, which had the gouernment during the minoritie of her ſonne Dauid, thus wiſheth vnto Emmanuel King of Portugall: The Lord proſper thee, per deuotos preces nuntiorum redemptoris Chriſti, by the deuout prayers of the meſſengers of our Redeemer Chriſt, that is, the foure Euangeliſts Iohn, Luke, Marke, Matthew, quorum orationes te ſeruent, whoſe prayers and holineſſe keepe thee, &c. Though this ſauour of ſome ſuperſtition, yet the meaning may be reſtrained to the generall prayers and deſires of the Saints departed.

3. Confeſſion of Saxonie: Ioyning our prayers with all Saints in heauen and earth, &c. Wittem- Harm.ſect.2. pag.12. berg, artic.23. The Saints in heauen doe after their certaine manner pray for vs before God, as the An- Sect.2.p.45. gels alſo are carefull for vs, and all the creatures doe after a certaine manner groane for vs: but vpon the prayers of the Saints in heauen, we may not allow the inuocation of Saints, &c. And againe, a little after: Whereas the ancient writers do in their prayers turne themſelues to Saints, they either ſimply without exact iudgement followed the error of the common people, or vſed ſuch manner of ſpeaking not as a diuine honor, but as a figure of Grammar, called (Proſopopæia) whereby they ſet foorth the vnſpeakable groaning of the Saints, and of all creatures for our ſaluation, and ſignifie, that the prayers which the Saints made in the world doe yet ring in the eares of God, as the blood of Abel after his death cried vnto God, &c. In either of theſe ſenſes, we denie not, that the Saints pray for vs and helpe vs, either by their generall longing and deſires, and requeſts for vs, or by the vertue of their prayers made, while they were yet liuing among vs.

4. We want not here euident teſtimonie from the Papall writers: for whereas commonly that Geneſ.48.16. place, Gen.48.16. is alleaged for inuocation of Saints: others do refuſe that place, and ſay it is an Hebraiſme,

The fourth place, Reuel.6. Ribera thus expoundeth vpon that place: The bodies of the Saints embrued with blood did crie for vengeance, as the blood of Abel is ſaid to haue cried, &c. And thus their owne writers doe anſwere all thoſe principall places, which they doe vrge againſt vs for the prayer and mediation of Saints.

THE THIRD PART, WHETHER THE SAINTS vnderſtand our prayers, and be alwaies at hand to helpe vs.

The Papiſts.

32.Error.

THey affirme three things, which they are driuen to graunt by neceſſitie of argument, while they ſtiffly maintaine inuocation of Saints: for firſt they graunt that they know our hearts, and our inward repentance, and ſecret thoughts: for otherwiſe it would not auaile to pray vnto them, yet not of themſelues, but by the reuelation of God, *Bellarm.cap.*20. And of foure opinions of this matter, as that the Saints know our prayers either by the reuelation of Angels, or by their celeritie or agilitie of nature, paſſing from place to pace, or at once they ſee in God as in a glaſſe, all things that may concerne them, or elſe they know mens ſecret thoughts, by ſome ſpeciall reuelation from God, as Eliſha deſcried the corruption of Gehezi, and Samuel had a ſecret reuelation concerning Saul, 1.Sam.9.15. Of theſe foure he preferreth the two laſt, and refuſeth the other.

2.King.5,26.
1.Sam.9.15.

So alſo the Doway tranſlators ſay, that glorified Saints know our cogitations by ſeeing God, in whom all things appeare: or they haue it by inſpiration, pag.605. and if God communicated this power to Prophets, being yet mortall, to ſee mens thoughts, much more doth God reueale to glorified Saints our preſent ſtate, &c. pag.710.

Apoc.6.10.
Act.3.21.
1.Iohn 3.2.
1.Sam.16.6.
2.King.4.27.

Anſw. Neither of theſe foure waies can ſtand: not the firſt, for though Angels ſhould reueale to the Saints, yet our thoughts they cannot reueale, becauſe they know them not themſelues: not the ſecond, for Saints doe reſt vnder the Altar, which is Chriſt, Apoc.6. and paſſe not to and fro, ſeeing that Chriſt, as he is man, ſhall be contained in the heauens till his comming againe. Not the third, for we ſhall not ſee Chriſt as he is, till he doe appeare. And concerning the laſt, we denie not, but that God may reueale to the Saints ſome things at his pleaſure, as he did to the Prophets: but it hereof followeth not, that all our prayers are reuealed vnto them: for neither were all things reuealed to Samuel, when he went to anoint Dauid: and Eliſha ſaith, concerning the Shunamite, Her ſoule is vexed, and the Lord hath not told me.

Againe, what a prepoſterous order is this, and ſuperfluous, God firſt reuealeth vnto them our prayers, and then they ſolicite God in our behalfe? I pray you what neede this, ſeeing God knoweth our prayers? Firſt, why is he not as readie of himſelfe to graunt our requeſts, as to ſtay till he be entreated?

Iob 14.21.

And whereas our Doway men doe affirme that the Saints come to the knowledge of our thoughts both waies, by ſpeculation in God, or inſpiration and reuelation from God: 1. Theſe two waies one ouerthrowes another: for if they haue this knowledge by reuelation, then not by ſeeing God; if by ſeeing, then they need no reuelation. 2. The reaſon is not alike, for reuelation to Prophets liuing, and to the Saints, for that the Lord vſed his Prophets as his miniſters and inſtruments here in earth: ſo doth he not the Saints departed. 3. The Scripture is contrarie: Iob ſaith of them which are dead, he knoweth not if his ſonnes ſhall be honourable, neither ſhall hee vnderſtand concerning them, whether they ſhall be of low degree: where they giue this marginall note, that the parents departed are not affected with the ſtate of their children, as they be in their life, &c. But the text directly ſpeaketh of knowing: that not ſo much as the knowledge of humane ſtates is imparted to the dead: as Auguſtine ſaith, Ibi ſunt ſpiritus defunctorum, vbi non vident, quæcunq́; aguntur, aut eueniunt in iſta vita, &c. There the ſpirits of the dead are, where they ſee not the things that are done, or happen to men in this life, &c. If it were otherwiſe, what benefit was it for Ioſias to be promiſed, that he ſhould die before he ſaw the euils to come: *De cur. pro mort. cap.*13.

33.Error.
Apoc.2.26.

Secondly, ſeeing it were in vaine to pray to Saints, if they had not power to helpe vs: they alſo are vrged to confeſſe, that the Saints are patrones of men, and haue the gouernment of the world committed to them: yea, that they may receiue others into the kingdome of heauen.

*Argum.*1. To him that ouercommeth, will I giue power ouer nations, and hee ſhall rule ouer them with a rod of iron: Ergo, the Saints haue the gouernment of men committed vnto them, *Rhemiſt.ibid. Bellarm.cap.*18.

Anſw. The power which our Sauiour here promiſeth, is the participation of his kingly inheritance: firſt, ſpiritually to ouercome the world by faith in this life, and after this life they ſhall be ſet in full poſſeſſion of his royall inheritance. The rod of iron, is the word of God, which is alſo called a two edged ſword, whereby they execute vengeance vpon the heathen: It is the ſword of the ſpirit, whereby the wicked ſhall be deſtroyed. Auguſtine expoundeth it to be the rod of Iuſtice, whereby the good are corrected, and the wicked broken in pieces, Homil.2.in Apocal. Pſal.149.7.

Againe, it followeth in the text, As a potters veſſell ſhall they be broken. This cannot bee vnderſtood of the Church of God: wherefore this place ſerueth not to proue the regiment of the Saints ouer the Church of God. Thirdly, ſeeing this is a promiſe made to euery one of Gods Saints, who are many hundred thouſands, by this reaſon euery one of them ſhould haue a regiment in the Church of God, which were infinite. Laſtly, Chriſt promiſeth that they ſhall rule, with a rod of yron, as himſelfe hath receiued; and they ſhall ſit with him in his throne: will they inferre hereupon, that the Saints haue the like kingdome and power and glory with Chriſt? this were very abſurd to grant, and againſt Chriſt blaſphemous. Wherefore, the meaning of theſe and the like ſpeeches is nothing elſe, but this, that Chriſt ſhall impart and communicate vnto the Saints the glorie of his kingdome, not in ſuch full manner as he himſelfe hath it, but in ſuch ſort, as it is meete for them to receiue. S. Ambroſe thus expoundeth the like words of our Sauiour, Father: I will that they whom thou haſt giuen me be with mee where I am, &c. Vt ſint mecum, non vt ſedeant mecum, &c. That they may be with me (ſaith he) not ſit with me; where I am, but not as I am; to ſee my glory: to ſee it, not to haue it; for the ſeruant ſeeth, the maſter poſſeſſeth, lib.5.de fide.cap.3. And againe, vpon thoſe words, Hee hath made vs ſit together in heauenly places in Chriſt: Non vt homines ſedere ſibi ad dextram patiatur Deus, &c. Not that God doth ſuffer men to ſit at his right hand, but to ſit in Chriſt, who is the foundation of all, the head of his Church, who hath in himſelfe merited to our nature the prerogatiue of the heauenly ſeate, &c. lib.5 de fide, cap.7. Thus Ambroſe ſheweth how the Saints are ſaid to ſit in the heauenly throne, namely in Chriſt, in reſpect that our nature in him is aduanced to that heauenly ſeate; which prerogatiue being complete and full in Chriſt, is in meaſure communicated to his members. Apoc.3.21. Iohn 17.24. Epheſ.2.6.

Argum.2. Make you friends of the vnrighteous Mammon, that when they neede, they may receiue you into euerlaſting habitations: See the Saints may receiue their friends and benefactors into their eternall manſions, Rhemiſt.ibid. Luk.16.9.

*Anſwere.*1. Almes beſtowed vpon the poore doe procure their prayers, but not their patronage. 2. The words are thus parabolically to be vnderſtood: They ſhall receiue you, that is, ſhall giue teſtimonie of you, and your almes ſhall be a teſtimonie of your charitie, and proceeding from a liuely faith, ſhall euerlaſtingly be rewarded. 3. That it is not meant of the perſons, but of the worke, it is plaine, becauſe almes which iſſue from a true faith, ſhall be rewarded at the Lords hand, though beſtowed vpon an hypocrite.

Thirdly, they alſo hold that the Saints at their pleaſure can be preſent with their bodies, and bee amongſt vs, and ſo heare our prayers, Bellarm.cap.20. 34.Error.

*Argum.*1. Otherwiſe the Saints ſhould bee fettered as it were in heauen, if they remaine and bee kept all in one place.

Anſw. They are not fettered when they are limited by the Lord to a place: ſee alſo what a goodly opinion theſe fellowes haue of heauen, making a priſon of it, Rhemiſt.annot. Apocal.6.9.

*Argum.*2. They follow the Lambe whither ſo euer he goeth: Ergo, they may be euery where.

*Anſw.*1. That place is vnderſtood of all the elect, yea of thoſe that doe imitate and follow Chriſt, liuing vpon earth, as it followeth verſ.4. Theſe are bought from men, being the firſt fruits vnto God, &c. which comprehendeth all the elect both liuing and departed to God. 2. If the ſoules are euery where, becauſe the Lambe is euery where, then Chriſt in his humanitie is euery where, and ſo the Papiſts are become Vbiquitaries. Apoc.14.4.

*Argum.*3. The Diuels are of great dexteritie, and celeritie in paſſing from one place to another: Ergo, much more the Saints.

*Anſwere.*1. The argument followeth not: for diuels by propertie of nature together by the ſufferance of God, doe wander vp and downe the world, being thereto appointed of God: but the ſoules of Saints haue no ſuch office, as we reade in Scripture, to be curſorie ſpirits in the world. 2. Though it ſhould be granted, that in a ſhort time they are able to change their places: yet it is vnpoſſible, they ſhould be in ſo many places to heare the prayers euery where made vnto them, vnleſſe they could bee in diuers places at once.

The Proteſtants.

First, it is a great vntruth and blaſphemie to ſay, that the Saints doe know our thoughts, inward repentance, prayers, as the Rhemiſts affirme.

*Argum.*1. God onely is the knower of the heart, neither doth he communicate this propertie of the Godhead to any creature: he may reueale what he thinketh good vnto them: but for them, when they will themſelues, to know our ſecret prayers and meditations (for this is the queſtion) it is impoſſible.

Bernard agreeth with vs, thus writing: Ioſeph cum praenidiſſet exaltationem ſuam, non tamen praeſciuit ſui venditionem, quamuis propior eſſet venditio, quam exaltatio: Though Ioſeph foreſaw his exaltation, yet did he not foreknow that he ſhould be ſould; and yet his ſelling was nearer, then his preferring, &c. By this he ſheweth, that although God may and doth reueale ſome things to the Saints, yet it followeth not, they ſhould know all things.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that God onely is the knower of mens hearts naturally, and by his owne power: but the Saints know them by reuelation.

1.King.8.39. Contra, Salomon ſaith, Thou onely knoweſt the hearts of all men: He ſaith not, God chiefly or principally knoweth the hearts, but onely. If God then onely know our hearts, then the Saints know them not.

Eſay 63.16. De cura pro mortuis. *Argum.*2. Auguſtine out of thoſe words of the Prophet. Abraham is ignorant of vs, and Iacob knoweth vs not, concludeth thus, Si tanti Patriarcha, quid erga populum ex his procreatum geretur, ignorauerunt, quomodo mortui viuorum rebus atque actibus cognoſcendis adiuuandiſque miſcentur? If ſo great Patriarks were ignorant, what became of the people which was borne of their loynes; how is it like, that other dead can bee preſent to vnderſtand, and bee helping to mens affaires? And here S. Auguſtine alſo meeteth with the cauillous anſwere of Bellarmine, who ſaith, that the Patriarkes vnder the law being dead, knew not the affaires of the liuing, becauſe they were not yet in heauen: but the Saints now departed are in heauen, and therefore may and do know our eſtate: for Saint Auguſtine reaſoneth cleane contrarie, If Abraham ſo great a Patriarke knew not, much leſſe the dead now: Againe, he ſtill very vnlearnedly beggeth the thing in queſtion, ſeeing wee haue proued before, that the Patriarkes were in heauen.

This was the confeſſion of one Paul Luther, confeſſour of Gods truth *anno.*1529. that Saints in heauen cannot helpe vs, and know no more what men doe here in this world, then a man in the North Countrey knoweth what is done in the South Countrey: *Fox.*1040. col.2.

Secondly, we acknowledge no patrones, protectors or captaines in heauen, but our Lord God and Sauiour Chriſt.

Pſal.73.25. Gen.28.20. 1 The Prophet Dauid ſaith, Whom haue I in heauen but thee? and Iacob calleth onely vpon the Lord God, to be the guide of his iourney: Vpon which words of the Pſalme S. Ambroſe thus noteth, Tu portio mea es, abundas mihi ad omnia, &c. Thou O Lord art my portion, thou ſufficeſt mee for all things, I require none other thing, but to haue thee my portion: I neede the helpe of none, being receiued of thee; neither is there any thing in heauen, which I ſeeke beſide thee, &c. *de interpel. lib.*4. c.12. Behold, Chriſt onely in heauen, without the helpe either of Angell, or Saint, ſufficed Ambroſe, and may ſuffice euery faithfull man.

2 By appointing Saints to be patrones of places and countries, at length they brought in a multitude of Popiſh Saints, and were not in ſuperſtition farre behinde the Gentiles, who gloried in the number of their Gods: For haue they not allotted ſome to Countries, as S George for England, S. Andrew for Scotland, S. Denis for France, S. Patricke for Ireland? So likewiſe diuers Saints were called vpon for diuers diſeaſes, as S. Rombal for the tooth-ache, S. Petronil for the Ague: One for horſe, as S. Loye, S. Antony for Pigges, S. Gregory for Schollers, S. George for Souldiers: Euen thus the Heathen inuented diuers gods, Neptune for the ſea, the Satyrs for the woods, the Nymphes for the water, Ceres for corne, Bacchus for wine, Venus for the Troians, Pallas for the Grecians, Iupiter ſtator for the Romanes.

Auguſt.lib.4. de ciuit.Dei. cap.8. Nay, they were yet more ridiculous, they appointed many gods for one thing: as for Infants Vagitanus, that made them to cry, Cuninus, that kept them in their Cradle, Adeona, Abeona, to teach them to goe: So for the entrie of the houſe, they had Limentinus the God of the threſhold, Cardea the God of the hinges, Forrulus that kept the doore: for their Corne, they had the Goddeſſe Seia when it was ſowne, Proſerpina when it ſprouted, Nodotus when it knotted, Hoſtilina when it eared, Flora when it waxed white, Runcina when it was cut downe. The like ſuperſtition almoſt raigneth in Poperie. But what neede we runne to ſo many for theſe things, when as at the Lords hands wee are promiſed, asking in the name of Chriſt, to receiue all things we neede? This great folly of theirs ſheweth what good commeth by the deuiſed patronage of Saints.

Cantic.2.3. Super.cantic. ſerm.48. Bernard here helpeth vs well, writing vpon that place in the Canticles: My welbeloued is as the apple tree among the trees of the forreſt: Non comparantur huic omnia ligna ſyluarum, &c. All the trees of the wood are not to be compared to this: for although there bee faire and great trees which may ſeeme to helpe, by their prayer, miniſterie, inſtruction, example; yet Chriſt onely the wiſedome of God is the tree of life: the other trees though they haue a ſhadow of ſolace, yet no refection of life: there is one author of our life, the onely mediator of God and man.

Maſter Tindall holy Martyr hath put to his ſeale: Why ſhould I truſt in Pauls prayer or holineſſe: for if Paul were aliue, and loued me, as he did them of his time, what could he doe for me, or wiſh me, but to preach Chriſt, and pray to God for me to open my heart, to giue me his ſpirit, and to bring mee to the knowledge of Chriſt? &c. *Fox.*pag.1250. col.2. artic.16. This holy Martyr with the reſt, were farre from making Saints their patrones, or aduocates.

Thirdly, it is alſo another Popiſh fable and dreame, that the Saints may be preſent euery where, as it pleaſeth themſelues, at their tombes and ſepulchres, and whereſoeuer elſe they are called for.

Act.3.21. *Argum.*1. The heauens containe the humanitie of Chriſt: it hath pleaſed him there to reſt himſelfe, vntill his comming to iudgement: Ergo, much more are the Saints kept in their reſting places.

Apoc.14.13. Apoc.6.9. *Arg.*2. The Saints are at reſt, they do ceaſe from the affaires of this life: They reſt vnder the Altar in the peace of Chriſt, there expecting and waiting the comming of Chriſt to iudgement: Ergo, they do not wander nor ſtray abroad in the world, neither do intermeddle with humane affaires.

Auguſtine ſaith, Si rebus viuentium intereſſent anima mortuorum,&c. meipſam pia mater nulla nocte deſereret, qua terra marique ſecuta eſt, vt mecum viueret. De cura pro mortuis, c.13. If the ſoules of the dead were preſent at the affaires of the liuing, my deuout mother would neuer a night bee from me, who when ſhe liued, followed me by ſea and land, to haue my companie, and to liue with mee: Ergo, the Saints departed are not preſent with vs when they would.

Bernard alſo agreeth, writing thus vpon the death of Humbertus: Quandiu viueret in eius laude non aperui os meum, ne forte poſſemus, vel ego adulationis notam, vel ille culpam incurrere vanitatis: ex hoc ſane neutrum iam timetur, nec ego illum video, & forſitan ille me non audit: While hee liued, I opened not my mouth in his praiſe, leaſt that I might haue incurred the ſuſpition of flatterie, hee of vaine glorie; but now neither of theſe is feared, for I neither ſee him, and perhaps he heareth not me: Sermon. in obitum Humbert. Bernard doubteth whether the Saints be preſent to heare vs, and thinketh rather that they doe not.

I will laſtly adde out of their owne decrees. par.2.cauſ.13.qu.2.c.29. Fatendum eſt, neſcire mortuos, quid hic agatur,&c. We muſt confeſſe that the dead know not, what is done here: but they doe heare of thoſe that depart hence, not all things, but what they are ſuffered to declare, and what it behoueth them to heare,&c. So then the dead know not all the affaires of the liuing, but ſo much, as it pleaſeth God ſhould be declared vnto them.

Further, 1. Chryſoſtome ſaith, Clamore vocis non eſt opus in oratione ad Deum, quem ſcimus ſecreta cordis intueri, ſed clamore fidei,&c. Wee neede not the clamour of the voice in our prayer to God, whom we know to behold the ſecrets of the heart, but the voice of faith,&c. He thinketh God onely to be knowne of the heart, and to heare the prayer of the heart: Gregorie Nazianzene doth doubt, whether the Saints heare our voice: as that he ſaith, in his oration for Gorgonia his ſiſter: Si tibi aliqua ſermonis noſtri eſt ratio, et hoc ſanctis à Deo munus, vt talia reſciſcant, ſuſcipe noſtrum ſermonem: If thou haſt any ſenſe of my ſpeech, and this be a gift of God to the Saints, to know ſuch things, receiue my ſpeech,&c. Ieremie Patriarke ſaith, Neq; Petrus neq; Paulus ipſe eorum quenquam exaudit, qui eum inuocant, ſed gratia et donum, quod habent iuxta illud promiſſum, Neither Peter nor Paul himſelfe doe heare any of thoſe, but the grace and gift, which they haue according to that promiſe, I am with you to the end of the world,&c. By the gift hee vnderſtandeth the ſpirit of charitie, which is alwaies preſent with the Saints: as Theodulus vnderſtandeth that place, Rom.8. The ſpirit maketh requeſt with ſighes,&c. Dicit, quod donum et gratia orationis apud Deum pro nobis intercedit, He ſaith, that the gift and grace of prayer doth make requeſt to God for vs with ſighes: that is, the ſpirit of charitie remaineth with the Saints toward vs, which maketh them mindfull of vs.

Hom.8.in 5. Matth.

Cenſur. c.21.

Rom.8. 26.

2 For the South Church, what Origenes opinion was, is ſeene in the former queſtion, and Auguſtine alſo is alleaged before: who alſo further thus ſaith: Ita eſt eis cura de viuis, quanquam quid agant, omnino neſciant,&c. The dead haue ſuch care of the liuing, though they know not at all, what they doe, as wee haue care of the dead, though we know not what they doe,&c. De ſpirit. et anim. c.29. he giueth to the one and other onely a generall deſire and mutuall wiſhing of the others good.

3 Confeſſ. of Auſpurg. artic.21. the inuocation of Saints, aſcribeth vnto the dead an omnipotencie, in that Saints ſhould ſee the motions of mens hearts. Saxonie artic.22. inuocation of a creature, which is departed from the ſocietie of this life, aſcribeth vnto it omnipotencie, in beholding the heart, and in diſcerning the true ſighes from faigned,&c. Wittemberg. artic.23. The Saints are not to be praied vnto, becauſe they are no ſearchers of the heart.

Harm.ſect.2. pag.37.

Ibid.pag.40.

4 The Romaniſts are vncertaine themſelues, how the Saints ſhould know our prayers, whether by reuelation from the Angels, or from God, as our prayers are made, as Auguſtine, or as being euery where preſent themſelues as Hierome, or as ſeeing in God all things as Gregorie, and Thomas: onely Bellarmine ſaith, That this latter is the more probable opinion: and thus prayer which ſhould proceede of faith, they ground vpon probabilities and vncertainties.

Bellar.lib. 1.de ſanct.c.20.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, CONCERNING the reliques of Saints.

THis queſtion hath foure parts. 1 Whether the reliques of Saints are to be worſhipped. 2 Of the tranſlation of reliques. 3 Of the keeping and preſeruing of reliques. 4 Of the miracles wrought at the tombes and reliques of Martyrs.

THE FIRST PART, CONCERNING the worſhip of Reliques.

The Papiſts.

THe reliques of Saints, that is their bodies and bones, and Sepulchres, where they are buried, are to be adored and reuerenced, Trident in Concil. ſeſſ.25. though with leſſe honour ſomewhat, then the Saints themſelues, Bellarm. de reliquijs ſanctor. lib.2.cap.21. And not onely their bodies (ſay they) are worthie of due reuerence, but other monuments of theirs, as S. Peters chaire at Rome, Rom.16.

35. Error.

verſ.16. the priſon, wherein S.Paul was kept in Malta, Rhemiſt. The chaine that S.Paul was bound with at Rome, Act.27.4. The ſtone that hit S.Stephen vpon the elbow, now to be ſeene at Ancona in Italy, Act.7.ſect.6. Act.27.4.

Anſwere. As for S.Peters chaire, and S.Pauls chaine, they are neither able to ſhew that Peter ſate in ſuch a chaire, or that it is the very chaine which they ſhew, wherewith Paul was bound. Concerning the priſon houſe at Malta, they ſhew that which neuer was: Paul was a priſoner, but not in priſon there: that of the ſtone that ſmote Stephen vpon the elbow, is a meere fable: See Fulk vpon that place.

Argum.2. Ioſias, when he cauſed the bones of other dead to be burned, yet he commanded them to let the Prophets bones alone, Bellarm.lib.2.cap.3. The diſciples of Iohn came and buried his body; an example of dutie and religious deuotion to the dead bodies of Saints, Rhemiſt, Matth.14.ſect.2. Their bodies are the temples of the holy Ghoſt, and ſhall be raiſed againe to life: Ergo, they muſt bee adored and worſhipped, Trident.Concil.ſeſſ.25.

Anſwere. One anſwere may ſerue for all theſe arguments. We denie not, but that the dead bodies of the faithfull are to be laid vp with reuerence in hope of the reſurrection; but it therefore followeth not, that they muſt be abuſed to Idolatrie. Iohns diſciples buried his bodie, but ſhrined it not to be worſhipped: Ioſias made difference betweene the bones of the Idolatrous Prieſts, and of the true Prophet: the one he burned, and thought them vnworthie of honeſt ſepulture; the other he ſuffered to reſt, and enioy the honour of buriall. But of any adoration or worſhipping of his bones, we read not.

Argum.3. Iſay 11.10. Erit Sepulchrum eius glorioſum: His graue or Sepulcher ſhall be glorious. This is vnderſtood of the graue of Chriſt, that it ſhould be honoured: wherefore reliques are worthie of honour. Bellar.cap.3.

Anſwere. First, though the Latine text ſo tranſlate, as the Ieſuite readeth; yet there is no ſuch thing in the originall: the word is מנחה, * which ſignifieth reſt, and ſo the Septuagint tranſlate it, ἀνάπαυσις: ſo that the ſenſe is, his reſt, that is, his Church ſhall be glorious: and ſo is this word vſed, Pſal. 132.14. This is my reſt for euer. Secondly, we denie not, but that (admitting the Latine reading) the place of Chriſts buriall was glorious, and to be honoured, while as Chriſts precious body was there, but that afterwards it remained holy, this text ſheweth not. Thirdly, if Chriſts body and the place thereof were to be honoured; how ſerueth this place for the reliques of Saints? Chriſts bodie was to be adored, becauſe of the vniting to the Godhead; but the ſeruants are not to be honoured as the Maſter.

* Menucah.

Pſal.132.14.

The Proteſtants.

THe bodies of Martyrs are reuerently to be brought to the ground, in teſtimonie of our hope of their reſurrection, and their memorie is to be honoured, as in praiſing God for their conſtant Martyrdome: ſo the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Right precious in the ſight of God is the death of his Saints, as alſo in following their ſteps, and propounding vnto vs their good example: but to adore and worſhip their bones, to kiſſe, and kneele downe at their ſepulchres, is too too groſſe idolatrie, and not to be vſed amongſt Chriſtians.

Pſal.116.15.

Argum.1. The Lord did of purpoſe himſelfe burie the body of Moſes in a ſecret place, which was neuer knowne to the Iſraelites: and this reaſon is generally rendred by moſt writers, leaſt the people of Iſrael ſhould worſhip his body, and ſo commit Idolatrie; Ergo, the adoration of the bodies of Saints diſpleaſeth God. Argum.Caluin.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that though the people of Iſrael might by that meanes haue fallen into idolatrie; yet the people of God may now more ſafely honour reliques, becauſe they are not ſo prone to idolatrie.

Anſwere. Experience of Popiſh idolatrie proueth the cleane contrarie: for the like ſuperſtition and worſhipping of images was neuer ſo common and vſuall, no not in the moſt corrupt times of that Church, as now it is in Poperie.

And what danger of ſuperſtition is occaſioned by the keeping of reliques, and other ſuch vnprofitable vſages, I appeale to the late Popiſh Synode, Auguſtenſ.cap.23. Seduló moneri populum, ne ceremonias religioſiſſime inſtitutas in abuſum vertant, aut ſuperſtitionem, ſed ipſis ad exercendam pietatem vtantur: That the people ſhould be continually admoniſhed, that they turne not ceremonies moſt religiouſly inſtituted, to any abuſe, or ſuperſtition, but vſe them for the exerciſe of pietie, &c. If there be feare of ſuperſtition in the vſe of ceremonies which had a good beginning, much greater danger is there in theſe, that can haue no good vſe, neither euer had any good inſtitution.

Argum.2. Our Sauiour Chriſt reproueth the Scribes and Phariſies, calling them hypocrites, becauſe they did garniſh the Sepulchres of the Prophets, whom their forefathers put to death, but their doctrine they neglected and regarded not. Such hypocrites are the Papiſts at this day, who commit a double fault; for they contemne the doctrine of the Apoſtles, whoſe memories they would ſeeme to honour: and againe, in the ſuperſtitious honour and worſhip, which they yeeld vnto them, they exceede the bounds of Chriſtian pietie.

Argum.3. Their bodies were not to be worſhipped when they were aliue, much leſſe now they are dead. What are they now but earth, duſt and aſhes? according as the Lord ſaid to Adam, Thou art duſt, and vnto duſt ſhalt thou returne. What is this elſe, but to worſhip the earth, euen duſt, and aſhes: So Auguſtine ſaith, Timeo adorare terram, ne damnet me, qui fecit cœlum & terram: I am afraid to worſhip the earth, leaſt he condemne me, that made both heauen and earth. Onely in Chriſt (ſaith he) I finde, Quomodo ſine impietate adoretur terra: How the earth, that is, his body may be worſhipped without any impietie: namely, becauſe of the neere coniunction and vnion of his humane nature with the Godhead in one perſon, &c. for otherwiſe of it ſelfe the bodie of Chriſt is Gods Creature and workmanſhip, and not capable of diuine worſhip. This then is the priuiledge that Chriſt hath, more then all Saints and Martyrs beſide, that in him onely the humanitie is adored. Gen.3.19. In Pſal.98.

Concil. Carthag. 5. can. 14. Placuit, a glorioſiſſimis imperatoribus peti, vt reliquiæ non ſolum in ſimulachris, ſed in quibuſcunque locis, lucis, vel arboribus deleantur: Wee thinke good to make requeſt to the moſt renowned Emperours, that reliques may be taken away, not only ſuch, as are kept in ſhrines and images, but in what place ſo euer, woods, or trees, &c. Theſe fathers were ſo farre off from worſhipping reliques, that they would not haue them at all extant: but it will be here anſwered: that they meane that the reliques of heatheniſh idolatrie ſhould be remoued; for in the 14. canon, which is produced by Bellarmine, it is decreed, that no memories or monuments of Martyrs ſhould be there appointed, where no reliques of the Martyrs were, &c. It is true, they would not haue the people deceiued, to be made beleeue, that in ſuch places the Martyrs bodies were buried, where no ſuch thing was: but they decree againſt the ſuperſtitious abuſe of reliques: Nulla ibi ſuperſtitione deuincti teneantur: That they ſhould not be tyed to any ſuch place by a ſuperſtitious deuotion, c.14. Yet this canon notwithſtanding, the words of the 15. canon are generall, and may be vrged againſt all ſuperſtitious reliques: and whereas they would haue no memoriall of Martyrs without their true reliques, this maketh againſt the practiſe of the Romane Church, wherein ſo many forged reliques are ſhewed, as Eraſmus complaineth, afterward alleaged.

Concil. Lateranenſ. ſub Innocentio 3. cap. 62. Ne reliquiæ ſanctorum oſtendantur extra capſam: That the reliques ſhould not be ſhewed out of the caske or cheſt, where they were kept, &c. It ſhould ſeeme that their meaning was not to haue them worſhipped, vnleſſe wee thinke the cheſt and caske ſhould be worſhipped withall.

Their owne decrees alſo witneſſe with vs, part. 2. cauſ. 1. qu. 1. c. 65. Si ita Martyrium fecerimus, vt noſtras velimus ab hominibus reliquias honorari: If we deſire Martyrdome, to the intent our reliques ſhould be honoured of men, it deſerueth puniſhment, and not reward, &c. And if it be a ſinne in them to require it, it is in vs alſo to performe it.

The holy Martyrs haue ſealed this doctrine: Thomas Bilney holy Martyr; Prieſts (ſaith he) take away the offerings, and hang them about their whores neckes, and after that they take them againe from their whores, if they pleaſe them not, and hang them vpon the Images: and is not that a great relique, when it is hanged there againe? Fox pag. 1010. And are not ſuch reliques now meete things to be worſhipped. Pag.911.1.2.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr: That oblations ſhould bee offered or done to the Sepulchres and reliques of Saints, God did neuer inſtitute any ſuch thing in the new teſtament, which is the veritie and rule of all Chriſtian people to follow and beleeue. And this he further ſheweth by the buriall of Moſes, whoſe graue was hid from the Iewes, leſt they being prone to new fangled worſhipping, ſhould haue fallen into idolatrie; this argument we haue touched before. Pag.1014.1.40

1 The Muſcouites, following the Greeke Church, miſlike the Romaniſts, Quia cadauera mortuorum Epiſcoporum inſepulta ſeruant, &c. Becauſe they keepe the bodies of Biſhops vnburied certaine weekes, &c. which was to make reliques of them. Append. de errorib. Muſcouitar.

2 The Councell of Carthage, for the Africane and South Church is before alleaged.

3 Heluetia, latter confeſſ. c. 5. If the Saints are not to be worſhipped much leſſe are their bodies to be adored, &c. Theſe ancient holy men thought, that the moſt noble reliques of their anceſtors, were their vertues. Harm. ſect. 2. pag. 22.

4 Eraſmus in that worke, which he dedicated to Pope Leo the tenth: thus reproueth the ſuperſtition of the Papiſts in ſetting forth their reliques, If S. Hierome did ſo reproue ſimple women (for certaine ſuperſtitions) what would hee ſay, if hee ſhould haue ſeene the milke of Marie ſet forth for gaine, the fragments of the wood of the Croſſe, which if they were gathered together, would load a ſhip: here to be ſhewed S. Francis coole, there the virgine Maries petticoate, in another place Annes combe, in another Ioſephs breeches, Thomas of Canterburies ſhooe, &c. Annot. in Matth. c. 23.

THE SECOND PART, OF THE TRANSLAtion of the bodies of Saints.

The Papiſts.

IT is an vſuall thing amongſt them to tranſlate, and carrie from one place to another the bones and reliques of Saints: as they ſay Iohn Baptiſts head was tranſlated from Samaria to Alexandria, and is now at Amiens in France, Rhemiſt. Matth. 14. ſect. 1. So the body of S. Luke was remoued, they ſay, from Achaia to Conſtantinople, and from thence to Padua in Italy, where now it remaineth: Argum. in Luk. Rhemiſt. The ſtone alſo that hit S. Stephen, is now at Ancona in Italy, Act. 7. ſect. 6. 36. Error.

*Argum.*1. Ioſeph gaue charge concerning his bones when he dyed, and they were remoued from Egypt to the land of Canaan, at the departure of the Iſraelites, Exod.13. Heb.11.22. Ergo, the re- Heb.11.22. Pag.102. moouing and tranſlation of Saints bodies or reliques is lawfull, *Rhemiſt. Bellarm. cap.*4. ſo alſo our Doway men obiect.

Anſwere. Ioſeph gaue commandement concerning his bones, to teſtifie his faith and hope in the promiſe of God, for the inheritance of the land of Canaan, as it followeth: God will ſurely viſite you Geneſ.50.24. and bring you to the land which he ſware to Abraham; therefore ye ſhall carie my bones hence, &c. They were not remoued to be adored or worſhipped, but to be buried: Ergo, no ſuch tranſlation of Perer. in 50. c.Geneſ. Iohn.24.32. reliques is hereby proued. Pererius the Ieſuite confeſſeth thus, the bones of Ioſeph, which the children of Iſrael brought into the land of promiſe, Sepelierunt in Sechem, They buried in Sechem, as it is in the laſt of Ioſua: they were not tranſlated to be adored, but to be buried. Secondly, you can ſhew no ſuch charge, that S. Paul, Peter, or any of the reſt, gaue concerning the tranſlation of their bodies, as Ioſeph gaue vnto his poſteritie.

The Proteſtants.

WE denie not, but that the bodies of the dead, before they bee interred, may be conuayed vnto the place of their buriall, as Ioſias was carried being dead by his ſeruants from Megiddo 2.King.23 30. to Ieruſalem, where a ſepulchre was prepared for him: But either for the dead to be remoued to bee buried in ſome one place more then another, for the holineſſe thereof; or the bones of Saints to be raked out of their graues, and tranſlated, with intent to ſhrine them, and ſet them vp to be adored: they are ſuperſtitious cuſtomes, and not vſed of ancient time among the people of God.

*Argum.*1. That the place profiteth not the dead, but vnto them it is all alike whereſoeuer they are buried: we haue ſhewed afore, 1. part. controuer.9. queſt.2. part 4. The example of Auguſtines mother is notable, and worthie the memorie: Shee had with great care prouided her a Sepulchre neere vnto her huſband, who died at Thagaſta in Africa, and was there buried, and was purpoſed her ſelfe to lye by him: but the Lord ſo diſpoſed, that ſhe left her life at Hoſtia in Italie, and being readie to depart, ſhe ſaid thus to her ſonnes: Ponite hoc corpus vbicunque, nihil vos eius cura conturbet: Burie my body where you thinke good, take no great care for it. And being asked, if it grieued her not to leaue her body ſo farre off from her owne Citie, ſhee gaue this godly anſwere: Nihil longe eſt à Deo, neque timendum eſt, ne ille non agnoſcat in fine ſeculi, vnde me reſuſcitet: *Auguſt. lib. confeſſ.9. cap.*11. No place is neerer to God then other, neither am I to feare, leaſt the Lord ſhould not as well raiſe me vp in this place, as in mine owne Citie: Ergo, in reſpect of the dead, it ſkilleth not where they are buried.

*Argum.*2. The other cuſtome of tranſlating of reliques to be worſhipped, is farre more impious and ſuperſtitious: for hereupon it commeth, that the people haue beene deceiued with falſe reliques; yea one and the ſelfe ſame relique is ſaid to be in diuers places. As of S. Iohn Baptiſts head: his face they ſay, is at S. Iean Angelz: the reſt of his head at Malta: his ſcull at Nemours: his braine at Nouium Raſtrouienſe: his iaw bone at Veſalium: a piece of his eare at S. Florida: his forehead and haires in Spaine at S. Saluadores: and yet for all this his whole head is to be found at S. Silueſters in Rome, and at Amiens in France: Fulk, Matthew 14.2. Thus they haue mangled alſo the body of Saint Peter: halfe (they ſay) is at S. Peters in Rome, halfe at S. Paules: his head at S. Iohn Laterane: his neather iawe with his beard at Poyctiers in France: at Triers many of his bones, *Fulk. Rom.*16. *ſect.*4. See what mockage and couſening here is, and abuſing of ſimple people? How can their whole bodies bee in one place, and yet their parts and bones in another? And where doe they learne thus to diſmember their bodies, and to rake them out of their graues? The honouring of the bodies of Martyrs, is to ſuffer them quietly to reſt in their graues, and not to rot aboue the ground: Ioſias honoured the Prophets Sepulchre, and would not remoue his bones: herein therefore they diſhonour the Martyrs, and offer violence to their bodies, thinking falſly that they doe great worſhip vnto them.

Auguſtine ſaith, that he which would now renew the ceremonies of the Iewes, that are as it were buried: Tanquam ſopitos cineres eruens, non erit pius deductor vel baiulus corporis, ſed impius ſepulturæ violator, *Epiſtol.*19. He ſhould be as one raking in the aſhes of the dead, and ſo be rather a violator of Chriſtian buriall, then a bringer of the body honeſtly to the ground. So by Auguſtines iudgement, eruens ſopitos cineres, he that pulleth out dead mens aſhes, bones, or reliques, is ſepulturæ violator, a prophaner of their buriall.

*Synod. Moguntiac. can.*51. Deinceps corpora ſanctorum de loco ad locum, nullus præſumat transferre, ſine conſilio Principis, vel Epiſcopi, & ſanctæ ſynodi licentia: From henceforth let no man preſume to carie the bodies of the Saints from place to place, without the counſell of the Prince or Biſhop, and leaue of the Synode, &c. This Councell miſliked the common and vſuall manner of tranſlating Saints bodies, and therfore maketh a reſtraint for it: this Canon is alleaged among the decrees, *part.*3. *diſt.*1. *c.*37.

We haue alſo further euidence both out of the ciuill and Canon law, *Cod. lib.*1. *tit.*6. *l.*26. Leo. Reliquiæ in ædes publicas non debent illicite inferri: Reliques muſt not bee remoued or caried from their places, into publike or common houſes. This law forbiddeth reliques to bee remoued out of the Church. *Lib.*3. *tit.*43. *leg.*14. Valentinian. Nemo ſine Auguſtis afflatibus, &c. That no man without the leaue of the Emperour ſhould remoue any humane body.

Likewiſe in what caſes humane reliques ſhould be remoued, or tranſlated, the law hath determined: as Cod.lib.3.tit.43.leg.1. Si vi fluminis reliquiæ filij tui contingantur. If thy ſonnes reliques be beaten vpon by the water, thou maiſt remoue them, or vpon any other iuſt or neceſſarie cauſe, ibid. leg.10. Si necdum perpetuæ ſepulturæ corpus traditum, &c. If the bodie be not yet interred, or committed to ſepulture, it may be remoued, &c. So then there may be ciuill occaſions to remoue bodies, but no religious.

The Canon law alſo agreeth, decret.part.3.diſtinct.1.c.36. Tribus ex cauſis Sanctorum loca tranſmutanda ſunt: The places of the Saints may be changed vpon three occaſions, when as perſecution is raiſed in the place: ſecondly, when as the place it ſelfe is difficult, or inconuenient: thirdly, when as, malorum ſocietate grauantur, they are moleſted with the companie of the wicked, &c. This Canon alloweth Saints bodies to be remoued, either when perſecuters would rage againſt their aſhes, or the place is inconuenient, by reaſon of the ouerflowing of water, or otherwiſe; or when the people are readie to abuſe them to idolatrie, or any other vngodlineſſe: but all this while no mention is made of tranſlating of reliques, to be honoured or worſhipped.

Thus haue we ſeene the practiſe and iudgement in former times: 1. both of the Greeke Church in their Imperiall conſtitutions, 2. and of the Africane Church in Auguſtines mothers comely reſolution: 3. and of the Romane Church in their decrees: 4. and hereunto conſent the reformed Churches: as of Heluetia, latter confeſſion, artic.25. the Scripture willeth that the bodies of the faithfull, being the temples of the holy Ghoſt, which we truly beleeue ſhall riſe againe at the laſt day, ſhould be honeſtly without any ſuperſtition committed to the graue, and beſide, that wee ſhould make honourable mention of them, that haue godly died in the Lord, and performe all duties of loue, to ſuch as they leaue behinde them, as their widowes and fatherleſſe children: other care to be taken for the dead, wee teach none, &c. So then all the dutie to be performed to the dead conſiſteth in theſe three things; in honeſt buriall of their bodies, honouring of their memories, kinde vſage of their poſteritie: no veneration is to be ſhewed toward their reliques.

Harm.ſect.16. pag.483.

Herein two extreames are to be ſhunned: for both wee miſlike the Cynikes, which neglected the bodies of the dead, and the Gentiles, which thought they were polluted by comming neere the bodies of the * Martyrs: as alſo we condemne the ſuperſtitious adoration of them: which was brought in by three waies eſpecially: 1. By the corrupt imitation of the Gentiles, who vſed to remoue their gods from one place to another, to helpe their common calamities. 2. By the inſtigation of Satan: as when Iuliane conſulted with the Oracle of Apollo about his expedition againſt the Perſians, hee receiued this anſwere, that he was hindred by the dead, which were buried there: whereupon Iuliane gaue leaue to the Chriſtians to remoue the bodie of Babylas the Martyr: but not long after, the temple was conſumed by lightning, and the image of Apollo burnt to aſhes: to ſhew, that it was the power of God, not the vertue of the Martyrs reliques, that did put the diuels Oracle to ſilence. 3. By fained miracles reliques grew into ſuch great requeſt: as Nicephorus writeth, how when the Emperour ſent to remoue the bodie of Chryſoſtome, firſt the tombe was immoueable, then by the prayers of the Emperour vnto Chryſoſtome to ſuffer his bodie to be tranſlated, they tooke it vp, and ſet it in a throne, and the bodie opening the mouth, bleſſed the people, &c. Any reaſonable man may iudge what ſmall credit is to be giuen vnto ſuch ſtuffe.

THE THIRD PART, OF THE KEEPING and preſeruing of reliques.

The Papiſts.

WE muſt not thinke it impoſſible, that the monuments of Saints, as their garments, reliques, bones, ſhould endure a long time, ſeeing Manna was kept ſo many hundred yeeres in the pot, which was placed by the Arke, being a thing ſo apt to putrifie. Rhemiſt. Hebr.9.ſect 4. So alſo our Dowey tranſlators obiect, pag.712. 37.Error.

Anſw. When wee haue a commandement for the reſeruation of ſuch things, as the Iſraelites had, wee may beleeue they will keepe ſo long. And againe, the Iſraelites for all that did not worſhip the pot of Manna, though it were of ſuch long continuance.

The Proteſtants.

THe bodies and bones of men departed, neither are to be kept out of their graues, as wee haue ſhewed, neither can they be preſerued without corruption.

*Argum.*1. Vnto all Adams ſeede it is ſaid, Duſt thou art, and to duſt ſhalt thou returne: onely the bodie of Chriſt had this priuiledge, not to ſee corruption: Ergo, the bodies of men departed though they were neuer ſo holy, being all the ſeed of Adam, muſt be turned to duſt. Pſal.16.10.

*Argum.*2. If they would glorifie God and ſpeake the truth, they doe very well know by experience, that the reliques of Saints haue no ſuch promiſe or warrant for their continuance: for moſt of their reliques were forged and deuiſed, and no ſuch thing indeed. S. Peters braine at Geneua was found to be a pumice ſtone: S. Anthonies arme was found to be an Harts piſſle: at Towres of late the image of Venus in an Agate was worſhipped for the image of the Virgine Mary: the blood of Hales in England was deſcried to bee but the blood of a Drake: the three hoſtes at Calice were but three white counters ſoldred into a marble ſtone. Theſe and many ſuch monuments and reliques of Saints the Church of Rome hath great ſtore: no maruell now, if they be of long continuance, for ſtones and counters may laſt a great while: and Drakes blood, with other ſuch ſtuffe, is not ſo daintie, but it may be ſtill renewed.

Of ſuch couſoning tricks Auguſtine complained in his time, ſpeaking of runnagate Monkes, hee ſaith: Alij membra martyrum, ſi tamen martyrum, venditant: Alij fimbrias ſuas, & phylacteria magnificant: Some doe boaſt of reliques of Martyrs, which they carrie about, and perhaps they are no ſuch reliques; ſome doe extoll their habite and Monkiſh weeds: De opere Monachorum, cap. 28.

To this place of Saint Auguſtine Bellarmine thus anſwereth, cap. 5. That Saint Auguſtine diſalloweth onely of ſuch reliques, which were priuilie carried about, not of thoſe which were publikely ſhewed.

Contra. Yea many of your publike reliques were forged: for to what end elſe, was that decree made by Innocent. 3. decr. Greg. 3. tit. 45. c. 2. Prælati non permittant, &c. Prelates ſhall not ſuffer thoſe which come to their Churches to worſhip, Varijs figmentis & falſis, &c. to be deceiued with falſe and fained reliques, as the cuſtome hath been in diuers places for lucre ſake, &c. So then euen publikely in their Churches they vſed to deceiue the ſimple people with forged reliques.

See then, I pray you, what diueliſh idolatrie was this, to cauſe the people to worſhip Counters, Drakes blood, Harts ſinewes, and other ſuch baſe creatures, in ſtead of reliques; which, though they were ſuch indeed, ought not to be worſhipped.

Gelaſius decret. de apocryphis, thus writeth of this matter: Scriptura de inuentione crucis dominicæ, & alia de inuentione capitis Iohannis Baptiſtæ, nouellæ quædam relationes ſunt, & nonnulli eas catholici legunt: ſed cum hæc ad catholicorum manus veniunt, beati Pauli præcedat ſententia, Omnia probate, quod bonum eſt tenete. The writings of the inuention of the Lords Croſſe, and of Iohn Baptiſts head, are new reports, and ſome Catholikes read them: but when ſuch writings come to Catholikes hands, let them remember S. Pauls ſaying, Trie all things, and keepe the beſt. Heere we haue the iudgment of a Biſhop of Rome, who thinketh that many reliques, that are ſaid to haue beene found, and ſo kept, and preſerued, are but meere forgeries, and foiſted in by heretikes.

That corruption is now incident vnto all Adams poſteritie, vpon whom ſinne entred: and that Adams bodie onely before his fall was created immortall and free from corruption: 1. Cyrill teſtifieth, ſpeaking of Adam, erat ei corpus vtiq; immortale, vitam enim infuderat omnium opifex: He had an immortall bodie, for the Creator of all had infuſed life, &c. but after his fall he was ſubiect to corruption: as Damaſcene ſaith. Lib. 3. cont. Iulian. Lib. 1. de fid. cap. 1.

2. Auguſtines iudgement concerning the carrying about of reliques, we haue ſeene before: 3. as likewiſe the teſtimonie of Gelaſius for the Romane Church. 4. See alſo before error 30. the ſentence of the reformed Churches, that one part of our humanitie to be ſhewed to the dead, is to commit them to buriall: yea Bellarmine himſelfe confeſſeth, that it is an honour to the dead to be buried: quia eſt ignominia quadam, quod fœditas noſtri corporis aliorum conſpectibus pateat: It is not without ſome ignominie, that the filthineſſe of our bodie is ſhewed to the ſight of others. And, if wee will know the originall of this reſeruing of reliques, it was firſt taken vp by the Heathen; as Plutarch reporteth of Niſus King of the Megarians, that he had ſuch affection to his wife, that he cauſed her bodie to be attired with the ſame apparell, which ſhe wore in her life time: The ſame author reporteth, that in Egypt they ſhew the ſepulcher of Oſiris in diuers places, and that at Delphos they affirmed they had the reliques of Bacchus, placed neere vnto the Oracle. Lib 2 de purgat. c. vlt. Lib. quæſtion. Græcar. qu. 18. Plutarch. lib. de Iſid. & Oſirid.

THE FOVRTH PART, CONCERNING VISIONS and miracles done at the Tombes and reliques of Martyrs.

The Papiſts.

38. Error. FIrſt, they almoſt make it an ordinarie thing in their Church to worke miracles: Bellarmine ſaith, that it is a ſufficient note of the Church, the glorie or power of miracles, De eccleſ. lib. 4. cap. 14. Chriſt ſaith, that they that doe beleeue in him, ſhall doe greater workes then he. No maruell then, if the image of our Ladie (ſay they) and the like, worke miracles, as Peters ſhadow did, and that they ſeeme greater then Chriſts: for hee promiſeth that his Saints ſhall worke greater miracles then himſelfe, Rhemiſt. annot. Iohn 14. ſect. 3. They alſo call vpon vs to confirme our doctrine by miracles, becauſe we preach newly and extraordinarily, Rhemiſt. 1. Corinth. 12. ſect. 5. Iohn 14.12.

The Proteſtants.

Anſ. FIrſt, that place alleaged proueth not ſuch a generalitie and perpetuitie of working miracles: for then euery one that beleeueth ſhould doe greater workes then Chriſt: for our Sauiour ſpeaketh generally, He that beleeueth, it muſt be referred to the whole bodie of the Church, wherein the vertue of Chriſt remaineth for euer. Auguſtine doth farre otherwiſe, and in a better ſenſe expound this place: He that beleeueth in me ſhall doe the ſame workes that I doe: Quæ opera, niſi vt ex impio iuſtus fiat? prius ego facio, deinde & ipſe faciet, quia facio, vt ipſe faciat: What workes, ſaith he, but that hee which beleeueth, of a wicked man ſhall be made righteous? which worke firſt I doe (ſaith Chriſt) then he himſelfe doth it, becauſe I make him to doe it. Quod vtiq; in illo, ſed non ſine illo Chri- ſtus operatur: Mans conuerſion is wrought by Chriſt in man, and not altogether without man, becauſe Chriſt working in vs, doth enable vs by his grace to worke out our ſaluation: yet is it not our ſelues that worke, but the grace of God in vs. Then it followeth, hee ſhall doe greater workes then theſe: Prorſus maius hoc eſſe dixerim, quàm eſt cœlum & terra: The redemption and conuerſion of men, is a greater worke then the heauens or the earth, Tract.in Iohan.72. Auguſtine therefore doth properly vnderſtand this place, not of outward miracles, but of the wonderfull conuerſion of the heart, which we are ſaid to worke, becauſe Chriſt worketh it in vs.

Philip.2.12.

Origen alſo long before Auguſtine thus expoundeth this place, Hom.7.in Leuit. Chriſtus dicit, qui credit in me, &c. Chriſt ſaith, he that beleeueth in me, ſhall doe greater things then theſe: Verè enim maius mihi videtur, &c. For it ſeemeth indeed a greater thing vnto me, that man being in the fleſh, being armed only with the faith and word of Chriſt, doth ouercome legions of diuels, though it bee Chriſt that ouercommeth in vs, yet he ſaith it is more, that he ouercommeth by vs, then by himſelfe. Chryſoſtome vnderſtandeth this great worke to be terrarum orbis conuerſionem, the conuerſion of the whole world, which was done by the Apoſtles by Chriſts ſpirit, Hom.6.in 1.Cor.c.2.

2 As we denie not but that there may in theſe daies be miracles wrought: and all ſuch miracles as ſerue to confirme the doctrine deliuered in Scriptures, we doe not refuſe, though we be not bound to beleeue any mans report of ſuch miracles, but only the writings of the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts: ſo we affirme that there is no ſuch neceſſitie of miracles, as in times paſt; neither that we are to be preſſed to ſhew miracles, ſeeing wee profeſſe the ancient Apoſtolike faith, which hath been alreadie confirmed by the miraculous workes of our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles. Wherefore wee condemne the fabulous hiſtories and reports of popiſh Saints, whoſe liues are fuller of miracles, if wee will beleeue them, then were the liues of Chriſt and his Apoſtles. Nay, there is nothing almoſt done in their ſeruice but by a miracle: Chriſts bodie preſent in the Maſſe by a miracle: Diuels chaſed away with holy water: Saints know their thoughts, heare their prayers, are preſent here and there, their bodies many yeeres kept from corruption, and all by miracles. I conclude this point with Auguſtine: Aut non ſunt vera, quæ dicuntur; aut ſi hæreticorum aliqua mira facta ſunt, magis cauere debemus: Either they are not true miracles, which they boaſt of: or if they be, we muſt beware and take heed of them the more.

Thus ſpeaketh alſo Thomas Bilney holy Martyr: The miracles done at Walſingham, Canturburie, Ipſwich, were done by the diuell, through the ſufferance of God, Fox pag. 1001.

Heare alſo what a whole Councell ſaith: Colonienſ. part.6. c.23. Miracula ne impudentius iactentur, niſi quæ ſcripturis prodita, aut non à leuibus ſcriptoribus ſumma cum hiſtoria fide tradita ſunt: Let not miracles be too much boaſted of, but ſuch as are ſet foorth in Scripture, or deliuered by graue writers, with euident truth of hiſtorie. We are not bound therefore to beleeue all miracles, which are reported in the popiſh Church. And that there is now no ſuch neceſſitie of miracles, another Councell teſtifieth: Interrelig. Cæſar. cap.19. Inter initia fidei, interna virtus externis ſignis & miraculis demonſtrabatur, ad confirmationem rudis fidei: nunc verò adulta & corroborata fides, ſigna quæ infirmis dantur, non requirit: In the beginning of faith, the inward vertue or operation (of the ſpirit) was ſhewed by outward ſignes and miracles, for the confirmation of the weake faith: but now faith being come to perfect growth and eſtabliſhed, needeth not ſuch ſignes as are for the weake.

To this effect alſo one of your owne writers alleageth Gregorie, Moral.lib.27.cap.11. Quid eſt Paule, quod Publij patrem agrum, &c. What is the cauſe (O Paul) that by thy prayer thou didſt heale the father of Publius being an Infidell, Act.28. but thou preſcribeſt to Timothie for his health after the manner of Phyſitions, 1.Timoth.5? Surely Publius was to be healed by a ſigne, that he might be conuerted to the faith: but Timothie needed no miracle, being alreadie conuerted: Quid ergo mirum, ſi propagata fide, &c. What maruell then, if (the faith being now propagated) miracles are not often done, when as the Apoſtles ſometime did not ſhew miracles in the faithfull? If then in Gregorie his time, almoſt a thouſand yeeres ſince, there were ſo few miracles, how much fewer are now to be looked for?

1.Tim.5.23.

1 Chryſoſt. in his time ſaid, ſigna in præſentia non fiunt, miracles now are not done: and he giueth the reaſon out of the words of our Sauiour to Thomas: Bleſſed are they which haue not ſeene, and yet beleeue: quanto itaq; certius demonſtratur argumentum, tantum fidei præmio detrahitur: for the more certaine demonſtration is made, ſo much the leſſe reward hath faith, &c. We walke by faith, not by ſight; and therefore, gehenna ad terrorem proponitur, non apparet. Hell is propounded for our terror, it appeareth not. Then hee addeth further: Yet if thou doeſt ſeeke ſignes, thou maiſt ſee ſignes: prophetias innumeras, orbis terrarum conuerſionem, ferorum morum mutationem, &c. innumerable prophecies, the conuerſion of the world, the change of brutiſh manners, the propagation of pietie, &c. In thoſe daies ſuch miracles were not done by the reliques of Martyrs, or at their Tombes.

2.Cor.5.7.
Hom.6.in 1.Cor.c.2.

2 Auguſtine hath an excellent ſpeech of this matter, for asking the queſtion, cur miracula nunc non fiant: why miracles are not done now adaies, he maketh this anſwere: Poſſem dicere neceſſaria fuiſſe prinſquam crederet mundus ad hoc vt crederet mundus: quiſquis adhuc prodigia, vt credat inquirit, magnum eſt ipſe prodigium, qui mundo credente non credit: I can ſay miracles were neceſſarie, before the world beleeued, that it might beleeue: but whoſoeuer now doth require a wonder, that he may beleeue, is himſelfe a wonder that beleeueth not, when all the world beleeueth, &c.

The Papiſts.

39.Error.

SEcondly, they doe as much maintaine their fabulous viſions and apparitions, as lying miracles: as how Chriſt came in a pilgrimes weede to Gregories table of hoſpitalitie, *Rhemiſt. Hebr.*13.2. Peter beleeued the viſion and apparition ſhewed to Cornelius, at his report, before it was written: Ergo, we ought to beleeue viſions not written in Scripture, *Rhemiſt. Act.*10.*ſect.*3.

The Proteſtants.

FIrſt, that of our Sauiour Chriſts appearing, is an hereticall fable, and impugneth the article of our faith concerning Chriſts aſcenſion into heauen, and there remaining till his ſecond comming. Secondly, Peter was not bound to beleeue Cornelius viſion, till hee had been by viſion admoniſhed himſelfe: the Apoſtles which were then endued with the gift of diſcerning ſpirits, could better iudge of true viſions, then any man now can: yet we refuſe not to giue credit to viſions, when they are as credibly reported vnto vs, as this was to Peter: but no viſion, nor miracle, nor Angell from heauen ſhall draw vs away from the doctrine of the Scriptures to beleeue errors. Laſtly, we denie not, but that they may haue viſions; but ſuch, as one Vincentius bragged of, that wrote againſt Auguſtine concerning the originall of the ſoule: He ſaid, that another Vincentius who had been a captaine or chiefe Donatiſt, appeared vnto him in viſion, and bad him write thoſe bookes: to whom Auguſtine thus anſwereth; Ille qui ſe transfigurat in angelum lucis, in eo tibi eſt transfiguratus, quem tu fuiſſe vel eſſe veluti angelum lucis credis: Hee that can transfigure himſelfe into an angell of light, did transfigure himſelfe into the ſhape of that man, whom thou eſteemedſt as an angell of light, &c. Such apparitions they may haue, and yet no great cauſe to boaſt of them.

Lib.3.cap.2. de animæ origine.

Such was that viſion that one Polychronius a Monothelite heretike boaſted of in the ſixth generall Councell at Conſtantinople, action 15. how that a man appeared vnto him in white, who tolde him that Chriſt had but one will, and that he ſhould write the confeſſion of his faith, and lay it vpon a dead man, and he ſhould raiſe him to life againe. The Councell gaue him the hearing, and prouided a dead bodie for him to worke his skill vpon, who muttered ouer the dead a long time in vaine, and could doe nothing. Such viſions, as this was, popiſh prieſts haue had many: And that we ſlander them not, one of their late Popes Paulus 3. ſhall ſpeake for vs: Qui legendas Georgij & Chriſtophori tolli precepit de breuiario: Who commaunded that the legends of George and Chriſtopher ſhould be taken out of the Breuiarie. Thus Paulus Vergerius proteſted in the late Tridentine Chapter, and therefore was excluded. Of ſuch old wiues fables thus was it decreed, *Concil. Colonienſ. part.*6.*cap.*10. Ineptas & aniles fabulas deuitabit (id eſt, concionator) qualia nuper erant, quæ ex nullis probatis authoribus, ſed potius ſuſpectiſſim. hominum commentis adferebantur exempla: The preacher muſt take heede of fooliſh old wiues fables, ſuch as of late were reported not out of any approued authors, but from the ſuſpicious deuices of men.

Such is that tale and Monkiſh fable of Pilate, that he ſhould be ſeene euery yeere in a Iudges habite in a certaine lake, called after his name, vnder a hill not farre from Lucerna in Heluetia; and that he, which chanceth to ſee him, liueth not a yeere after. This is held to be a ridiculous fable by one of their owne writers, Eſpenc. in 1. *Timoth. p.*159.d. Of the like credit hee holdeth that dreame reported by *Chriſtianus Maſſæus, lib.*8. Chronic. how that Trophimus going to Rome to ſee Peter, as he ſailed, buried his wife, dying in trauell, in a Rocke, with the childe at her breaſts, and after two yeeres comming that way againe, found his wife aliue, and the little childe playing at her breaſt, who were preſerued by Mary Magdalen, Eſpenc. 2. *Timoth. p.*183.a. We ſee the Papiſts themſelues are aſhamed of theſe fables. The ſame author doubteth not to ſay of the ſecond Nicene, where the worſhip of Images was decreed; That the fathers there, Dæmonum ſpectris, & muliebribus ſomnijs parum verecunde abutebantur, did without ſhame abuſe the viſions of diuels, and womens dreames, to eſtabliſh their opinion.

Let vs heare alſo the complaint of Abbas Cluniacenſ. more then 400. yeeres ſince, who (ſaith he) was aſhamed, when he did ſing in the Church the ſong of S. Benet, Mendacia ad minus 24. Canticum id citato percurrens animo reperi: wherein he found 24. lies at the leaſt, running ouer the ſong haſtely in his minde, *lib.*5.*epiſt.*29. Wherefore according to the rule of the Ciuill law, *Cod. lib.*3.*tit.*43.*leg.*6. Alexander. Monumentorum inſcriptiones non faciunt fidem: The ſuperſcriptions of monuments are not to bee beleeued, &c. No more are the fabulous viſions and miracles, which are reported to haue been ſeene, and done at Tombes, to be receiued.

The Papiſts.

40.Error.

THirdly, they ſay, that the power of working miracles was in the Apoſtles actually, and that they properly did giue health, and other things by their miraculous gift, though they receiued the force and vertue of God. And therefore they finde fault with vs, becauſe we giue this note, A miracle done by Chriſt by the hands of the Apoſtles.

Firſt, Peter ſaith, That which we haue, giue we to thee, Act.3.6. Secondly, we muſt not thinke, that they had no more power, then as dead inſtruments in the workmans hand, Rhem. in hunc locum.

Act.3.6.

The Proteſtants.

WE both agree, that the power of working miracles was giuen of God: but herein wee differ, they thinke that this power was inherent in the Apoſtles, and that hauing once receiued this power of God, they could execute it themſelues: like as a man hauing the power of ſenſe and mouing by nature, moueth and ſeeth when he liſt himſelfe. But wee hold againſt the Pelagians, Gratiam Dei ad ſingulos actus dari, that the grace of God is daily infuſed, and we haue need of it for euery act: it is not ſufficient once generally to haue receiued it. So then the Apoſtles were but the inſtruments of Chriſts working: he is better ſaid in them and by them to worke miracles, then they in and by him. Neither doth it follow, that they are dead inſtruments; for the horſe (I trow) that draweth in the plough is no dead inſtrument: yet hee hath neede for euery bout and turning to haue a driuer and a guide: truly we are as vnfit for the Lords yoke by nature, as the horſe is for the plough: and therefore haue need of the Lords continuall direction. The Apoſtles then gaue that they had, not as owners, but as the Lords agents and inſtruments of his working.

*Argum.*1. Act.3.16. His name hath made this man ſound: and the faith which is by him hath giuen to him this diſpoſition of his whole bodie. From hence we reaſon thus: That which depended vpon the faith of the receiuer, was not actually inherent in the power of the giuer; but this miraculous worke of healing was by the faith of him that was healed: Ergo, it was not actually in the Apoſtles that gaue this gift. Againe, the name of Chriſt did make him ſound: Ergo properly the Apoſtles gaue not health, but onely as Miniſters, the Name of Chriſt working in, and by them: And Saint Peter himſelfe denieth that they did this miracle by their owne power or godlineſſe, Act.3.12. wherefore the Apoſtles properlie, (as they ſpeake) that is, by a power inherent or reſiant in them, did not worke miracles.

Act.3.12.

*Argum.*2. If the Apoſtles had the power of working miracles alwaies actually in themſelues, then might they exerciſe the ſame facultie, when they would: but ſo could they not; for Saint Paul, when Epaphroditus was ſicke, depended by prayer vpon Gods mercie for his health, whom no doubt he would haue cured by miracle, as well as the father of Publius, if this power had been alwaies preſent with the Apoſtle: So then, as the Apoſtles had not knowledge and foreſight of al things to come; as S. Paul truſted to haue been deliuered being a priſoner at Rome; as it may appeare, Hebr.13.13. yet did it not ſo fall out; but ſuch things only, as God did ſee profitable for his Church to be knowne, were reuealed: in like manner, neither could the Apoſtles worke miracles as they were diſpoſed themſelues at all times, but when it pleaſed God thereto to enable them. I will not refuſe herein the teſtimonie of one of their owne: Et alia pleraq́ Apoſtolos pro ſua diſcipulorumq́ ſalute vtiliter nequiniſſe conſpicimus: We ſee that the Apoſtles could not doe many other things, for their owne, and their diſciples health: Eſpenc. comment. in 2. Timoth. p.183.c.

Phil.2.27.
Heb.13.13.

Auguſtine thus writeth: Maiora quam ipſe fecit, dicit eos facturos ſed in eis vel per eos ſe faciente: He ſaith, they ſhall doe greater workes then he: that is, himſelfe working in them or by them: Ergo, Chriſt wrought miracles by the hands of the Apoſtles, they were his liuely inſtruments in working.

Tractat. in Iohan.71.

The Papiſts.

FOurthly, they doe greatly triumph and reioyce for the miracles which are wrought by the vertue of holy reliques. Firſt, the woman was healed by touching the hemme of Chriſts garment: Ergo, vertue in holy reliques. Rhemiſt. Secondly, napkins that had touched Saint Pauls bodie wrought miracles, by the vertue giuen vnto them: Ergo, reliques may, Act.19. verſ.12. Rhemiſt.

41. Error.

The Doway tranſlators doe thus contend for the miraculous vertue of reliques: the Arke being an holy thing as reliques are, was terrible to their falſe god, the diuell: ſo the reliques of Babylas the Martyr, ouerthrew the falſe god Apollo, &c. p.381. We haue example of Saints reliques in the cloake of Elias, in Eliſeus bones, and in another Prophets bodie buried in Bethel, which Ioſias would not ſuffer to be touched, &c. p.935.

The Proteſtants.

Anſw. TO the firſt: firſt, the vertue was not in the hemme of Chriſts garment, but he ſaith, it proceeded from himſelfe, Luke 8.46. Secondly, it was her faith that healed her, for many that thronged Chriſt, touched his garments, but receiued no benefit: neither was there any vertue in his garments when the ſouldiers parted them amongſt them. Thirdly, if it pleaſed the Lord to vſe ſome externall ſignes, as of oyle, clay, ſpittle, in healing of men; yet haue we no warrant, that hee will doe the like by touching of reliques.

Luk.8.46.

To the ſecond: firſt, the napkins brought from Paul had no ſuch vertue in them: for the text is plaine, that they were wrought by the hands of Paul. Secondly, not all that touched them were preſently healed. Thirdly, they were but as ſignes and tokens to the diſeaſed, that the Apoſtle (when it pleaſed God) might diſpenſe miracles, euen when he was abſent. Laſtly, if they haue to this day miracles wrought by the reliques and monuments of Saints; I feare me, nay, I dare ſay, they are no better then the Donatiſts miracles were, either figmenta mendacium hominum, vel portenta fallacium ſpirituum:

vitium: either the gloſings or fables of lying men, or the ſtrange workings of deceiuing ſpirits: as Auguſtine ſaith of them.

To our Doway diſcourſers we anſwere: 1. That the Arke was a viſible ſigne of Gods preſence, and to that end conſecrated by God himſelfe, and ſo confirmed by his owne word and promiſe: when they can ſhew ſuch warrant for their reliques, they ſhall ſay ſomewhat. Againe, what argument betweene an Arke made of durable wood, and the corruptible bodies of dead men, that fall to duſt and corruption? It was not the bodie of Babylas that deſtroyed Apollo, but the power of God, for the Martyrs bodie was remoued before: and it was the diuels owne Oracle, that aſcribed firſt ſuch vertue to the Martyrs reliques: ſee before error 36. in fine. 2. It was not Elias cloake, but the God of Elias, that diuided the waters. 3. And one extraordinarie miracle wrought by touching the Prophets dead bodie, is no warrant, to make ſuch miracles vſuall and ordinarie. 4. Ioſias did ſuffer the Prophets bodie to enioy the honour of buriall, and who denieth, but that the bodies of the Saints are reuerently to be vſed, and honeſtly to be buried.

Act.3.12.

Argum. 1. The Apoſtles by their owne power, vertue, or godlineſſe did not worke miracles, Act. 3. 12. but there was greater vertue in the liuing Apoſtles, then in dead and ſenſeleſſe reliques; Ergo, much leſſe is there any vertue in reliques.

2.King.2.14.

Argum, 2. If there be any vertue in reliques, it would appeare as well at one time as another, becauſe the vertue ſhould be abiding in the reliques: but ſo doth it not, for Elias cloake at the firſt ſmiting did not part the waters, till Eliſhah had ſaid, where is the Lord God of Elyah? ſo that the vertue was not in the garment, but in the inuocation of the name of God.

Concil. Nicen. 2. action. 7. Tharaſius the preſident propoundeth this queſtion: Quamobrem miracula à noſtris imaginibus non eduntur? What is the cauſe that miracles are not wrought by our images? then he anſwereth thus: Miracula non credentibus data ſunt, ſed illis, qui incredulitate verſantur: Miracles are not giuen to thoſe which beleeue, but to thoſe that beleeue not. This Councell was celebrated at the leaſt 800. yeares agoe, about anno. 780. whatſoeuer images and reliques did before, we haue heere the warrant of this Councell, that they haue done none ſince.

Pag.921.2.12.

The holy Martyrs alſo haue confirmed this truth: Thomas Bilney: They gild their gods, and beare them about, and men ſay, they do ſpeake; and if they ſpeake, it is the diuell that ſpeaketh in them, not God, Fox pag. 1010.

Zonaras tom 3 in Martiano.

Now to conclude this matter touching the viſions and miracles at the tombes, and by the reliques of Saints: it is ſtrange how ridiculous and light of beleefe the papiſts are, to giue credit vnto ſuch fabulous and lying reports: We are told of ſeuen ſleepers of Epheſus, that had ſlept an 142. yeares from the time of the Emperor Darius, vnto the raigne of Theodoſius, and then they awaked, and came out of the caue where they lay aſleepe: and to ſpeake many things to the Emperor of the reſurrection, and then fell aſleepe againe: We heard before how Chryſoſtoms body being taken vp, opening the mouth, bleſſed the people: the like tale there is, how in the time of the Chalcedon counſell, the Orthodoxes and Heretikes, agreed to lay the libells of their faith, in the tombe of Euphemia the Martyr, and prayed that ſhe might decide the controuerſie, and three daies after, they opened the tombe, and they found the heretikes libell caſt at her feete, and the other the dead body reached with the right hand to the Emperor. Thus theſe fables, as we ſee, were in coyning long ſince: and leſt we ſhould thinke it ſtrange that dead bodies ſhould ſpeake and ſhew other actions of life, wee are told of S. Bernakes cow, that being ſtollen and cut in peeces, and caſt into a cauldron, did low when S. Bernake called her, and S. Patrike cauſed a ſheepe to bleat in the bellie of him that had eaten it: And yet that which is more ſtrange, the ſtones anſwered vnto the prayer of Bede, and ſaid, Amen venerable Bede: Are not theſe iolly fables, and worthy of credit: and as the Latine Church is thus giuen to tell and beleeue lies, as S. Paul ſaith, becauſe they receiued not the loue of the truth, &c. God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſion to beleeue lies. So the Muſcouites following the Greeke Church as it now ſtandeth very corrupt, are not behind in this their credulitie. The ſixth great Duke telleth vs of a temple in Lydia built by the Apoſtles, where was a picture of the Virgine Mary, made not by humane hands, but by God himſelfe, and that the Virgine Marie comming to the dedication of that Church, ſaid of the image, virtus mea huic adſit, my vertue and power be preſent with it: which image afterward Iulian commanded to be demoliſhed, but the more they battered it with their iron inſtruments, the faſter it ſtood, &c. This is much like to the fable which the heathen deuiſed of the image of Diana, that it ſhould come from heauen: and like to the mad conceyt of the Helcheſaits, which refuſed the writings of S. Paul, and ſaid they had a booke which came from heauen, which whoſoeuer heard, ſhould haue remiſſion of ſinnes: yea I finde that the Aethiopike Church at this day, is ſomewhat addicted to ſuch fabulous narrations: as how the queene of Saba called Maqueda, went to heare Salomons wiſedome, and had by Salomon a child called Melech, whom ſhe ſent afterward to Salomon to bee inſtructed, who called him Dauid, and at his departure Azaria the ſonne of Sadoch, went with him and carried away the tables of ſtone, leauing other much like vnto them? this tale Zaga Zabo telleth; wherein there are diuers euident vntruthes: for, 1. Zadock had no ſonne ſo called, Abimaaz was Zadocks ſonne, which Abimaaz in deede begot Azaria: 2. Seeing the high Prieſt onely entred into the holy place, how is it like, that Azaria ſhould ſteale away the tables. 3. Of this Azaria the ſonne of Abimaaz deſcended the high Prieſts of Iudah: which could not be, if he had gone into Æthiopia, there to abide. 4. And of all other it is moſt vnlike, that the counterfeit tables remained in the Arke: whereas it is held by a generall conſent, that there the true tables remained till the captiuitie. But howſoeuer now, thoſe Churches in the Eaſt and South, are addicted to fables, (though nothing ſo much as the Latine Church) yet in former times their iudgement was otherwiſe.

THE FIFTH QVESTION, CONCERNING Images, and of the ſigne of the Croſſe.

THe firſt part concerning Images, is ſubdeuided into certaine other articles and points. Firſt, of the difference of Idols and Images. Secondly, whether it be lawfull to haue images. Thirdly, if it be lawfull to worſhip them. Fourthly, what manner of worſhip it ſhould be.

THE FIRST ARTICLE, OF THE DIFFErence betweene Idols and Images.

The Papiſts.

THere is great difference (ſay they) betweene an Image and an Idoll: an Image called in Greeke εἰκὼν, is the true ſimilitude of a thing: an Idoll, εἴδωλον, in Greeke, tranſlated ſimulachrum, doth repreſent that which is not, as were the Idols of Venus, Minerua, women Goddeſſes, which was a meere deuiſed thing. Images they confeſſe they haue, but no Idols, Bellarm.cap.5.

42. Error.

Firſt, S.Paul ſaith, That an Idoll is nothing: that is, doth repreſent a thing that is not: as ſuch were their heatheniſh Idols, Bellar.

1.Cor.10.

Anſwere. Firſt, the place is not ſo vnderſtoode: for the Apoſtle ſaith, That things offered to Idols alſo are nothing, which were not made to repreſent any thing: But his meaning is this, that of themſelues they are nothing to breede offence, neither were it needfull to ſhunne eating of Idoll ſacrifices, or to abhorre an Idoll, but that they are abuſed and turned to the ſeruice of diuels, as it followeth in the next verſe. Therefore an Idoll is not ſaid to bee nothing, becauſe it repreſenteth a thing imagined, but that of it ſelfe, being but wood, or ſtone, or ſuch like, it were not offenſiue, if it were not abuſed to Idolatrie. Secondly, all the portraictures of the Heathen were not Idols in this ſenſe: for Iupiter, Mars, Apollo, Hercules, whoſe Images they had, were men ſometime liuing. Thirdly, you haue images repreſenting nothing: as the pictures of Angels, of God the father, of the holy Ghoſt, which haue no ſhape nor likeneſſe. Againe, you haue alſo your imagined Saints, as * S.George, S.Chriſtopher, for there were neuer any ſuch: and therefore you haue Idols as well as the Heathen.

* Bellar.lib.1. de ſanctor. beatit.cap.20.

Bellarmine proueth this diſtinction out of Orig. hom. 8. in Exod. who there affirmeth that then a man maketh a ſimilitude or likeneſſe, when he portraiteth in mettall, ſtone or wood the faſhion of any creature? but an idoll is ſome ſtrange ſhape that is not, as when to a mans body is ioyned the head of a dogge, &c. or a man is pictured with two faces &c. to this purpoſe Origen.

Anſwere. 1. This authoritie maketh nothing for them: firſt, if an idoll be nothing elſe, but a ſtrange and monſtrous ſhape, then had the Gentiles no idols, for they worſhipped the reſemblances and pictures of men. Secondly, Origen in the ſame place ſheweth it to be vnlawfull to worſhip any ſimilitude or likeneſſe as well as any idoll; writing vpon the ſecond Commandement: Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelfe any idoll, or the ſimilitude or likeneſſe, &c. Thirdly, this was but Origens conceit; for the fathers did confound theſe words, indifferently taking the one for the other: S. Ambroſe calleth idols Images; Simulachrum verè nihil eſt, quia imago videtur rei mortuæ: A ſimulachre or an idoll is nothing, being the image of a dead thing, in 1. Cor. 10. and S. Hierome alſo, Sicubi fiat imago, dæmones dabant reſponſa: If an Image were made, the diuels gaue anſwere: tradit. in 2. Paraleip. c. 11.

This diſtinction betweene an idoll and an image, our new tranſlators of Doway, doe not ſo much ſtand vpon: for they confound the words themſelues, and make this difference of them: that an image made for a God, which the Hebrewes call peſel, which was an idoll of Gentilitie, ſuch as Micah made, Iud. 17. was forbidden, not the ſacred images of Chriſt, and the Saints: annot. Iud. 17. pag. 533. Theſe they call images of idols, which are forbidden, not of other things. pag. 412. which they alſo call images of falſe Gods; pag. 103. but the terme of image and idoll they vſe indifferently: as the idols of Belphegar, they terme the images of Belphegar: pag. 386. ſo page 906. they tranſlate, the images of Baal. 2. Chron. 23. 17. whereupon they giue this note: they are wilfully blinde, that will not ſee difference betweene the images of Baal and of Chriſt, or of Saints, &c.

Contra. 1. It is well then, that they yeeld vs the indifferent vſe of theſe words image and idoll: and confeſſe that an image may be of an Idoll: this is otherwiſe, then Papiſts vſually teach: and the great peremptorie Duke of Muſcouia had learned ſo much from his ſuperſtitious Greekes: Aliud eſt coram imagine, aliud coram idolo diabolico poplitem curuare: It is one thing to bow the knee before an image, another before a diuelliſh idoll: And indeede an image and an idoll ſet vp for religious vſe are the ſame: as Hierome tranſlateth the Hebrew word teraphim, idols: Geneſ. 31. which, ſaith he, Aquila interpreteth μορφώματα, Figuras vel imagines, Figures or images: and Cicero who knew well the propertie of words, ſaith, Atomi, vanæ imagines, quæ idola nominantur: The ſmall motes, vaine images, which are called idols.

Relig. Muſcouit. c. 13.
Geneſ. 31.
Lib. 1. de finib.

2 But as in the names, ſo there is ſmall difference in the things: for both to the idols of the Gentiles, and of Pſeudo-chriſtians, agreeth that deſcription, Pſal. 115. They haue eyes and ſee not, &c. a mouth and ſpeake not: and both of them are adored and worſhipped.

Pſal. 115. 5.

3 To omit their new phraſe and terme, of an image of an idoll, which is as much as to ſay, an image of an image, or an idoll, of an idoll: it cannot be ſhewed, that the image, which Micah ſet vp, was an idoll of Gentilitie, for he ſaith, now Iehouah will be good vnto mee: hee worſhipped the true God, though after a ſuperſtitious manner: hee did not make that image his God, nor yet ſet vp an heathen idoll.

Iud. 17. 23.

4 And whereas, they alſo pag. 103. on the 31. of Geneſis, reade, that Rachel had ſtollen her fathers idols, they themſelues confeſſe, that the word teraphim doth not alwaies ſignifie an idoll in that ſenſe: for the image which Michol put into the bed in ſtead of Dauid, is ſo called teraphim, where they themſelues confeſſe in their marginall note, that the word in that place importeth not an idoll.

Geneſ. 31. 34.
1. Sam. 19. 13.

5 If this make a difference betweene an image and an idoll, that this is worſhipped for a God, and not the other, then are the Popiſh images idols, which are worſhipped and truſted vnto: the other ſort, ſaith Polydore, Magis fidunt illis, quam Chriſto, Doe put more confidence in them then in Chriſt.

Lib. 6. Inuent. c. 13.

The Proteſtants.

Though the name Idoll haue an odious ſignification in the Engliſh tongue, yet neither the Greeke εἴδωλον, nor the Latine ſimulachrum, doe ſound ſo euill vnto the eares: and in many places of the Scripture wee may indifferently reade, idoll or image: for all worſhipping of Images is idolatrie. If wee will diſtinguiſh them, they are thus rather to bee ſeuered: An Idoll is that image, which is ſet vp with an intent to bee worſhipped: an Image is a generall name as well to vnlawfull pictures ſet vp for Idolatrie, as lawfull, which haue but a ciuill vſe. But that the Papiſts Idols are Images, thus we proue it.

Argum. 1. The Scripture calleth the Gentiles Idols, images Rom. 1. 23. there the word εἰκὼν is vſed: Ergo, Idoll and Image are taken for one: they haue images ſet vp for religious or rather irreligious vſes, Ergo, Idols.

Rom. 1. 23.

Argum. 2. Apocal. 9. 20. There is mention made of Idols of gold, ſiluer, braſſe, which cannot bee vnderſtood of the idols of the Gentiles, which were aboliſhed long agoe: and that Prophecie is to be vnderſtoode of men liuing after the opening of the ſeuenth ſeale, which is toward the end of the world. Wherefore it muſt needes be vnderſtood of the Papiſts, who are the onely knowne people in the world, that worſhip images: Ergo, they haue Idols.

Auguſtine taketh imago, and ſimulachrum, which is the Latine for the Greeke εἴδωλον, for all one: for the loue of the dead (ſaith he) images were firſt made, whereof the vſe of ſimulachers or Idols did ariſe. Againe, nec idipſum, quod ſedere pater dicitur, flexis poplitib. fieri putandum eſt, &c. tale enim ſimulachrum Deo nefas eſt Chriſtiano in templo collocare: God is not to be imagined to ſit in heauen as with bowed knees: ſuch a ſimulachre or idoll it is not lawfull to ſet vp in the temple of Chriſtians:

de fide & ſymbolo, cap.7. The picture then of God, which the Papiſts call an image, Auguſtine termeth an Idoll, for ſimulachrum, by their owne confeſſion, ſignifieth the ſame thing which Idolum doth: Bellarm.cap.5.

Likewiſe in the Ciuill law, from whence we may beſt deriue the different vſe of words, an Image and a ſimulachrum or Idoll, is all one: as Cod.lib.1.tit.27.leg.2. Theodoſius, Si quando noſtræ ſtatuæ, vel imagines erigantur: If our images or pictures be erected, &c. and tit.28.leg.1. the ſame are called Imperatoria ſimulachra, the Emperours idols: for Bellarmine granteth, that euery where in the olde Teſtament, where the Latine text readeth, Simulachrum, the Greeke hath the word εἴδωλα.

And yet more plainely it appeareth, that imago, and idolum, are all one in ſignification: for in the Nicen.2. generall Councell action.6.tom.6. Gregorius Biſhop thus ſpeaketh, Nemo ſub prætextu exterminationis imaginum, manus in ea, quæ Deo ſacrata ſunt, iniiciat, quia poſſunt transferri in alios vſus huiuſmodi idola: Let no man vnder the colour of pulling downe images, lay his hands vpon things conſecrate to God, for ſuch idols may be tranſlated to other vſes: Here Images and Idols are taken for all one.

Caietanus a learned Papiſt taketh an Image and an Idoll to be all one: in *20.cap.*Exod.

Thomas Hawkes holy Martyr hath ſealed this point: That there is no difference betweene an Idoll and an Image: when Boner had thus diſtinguiſhed, If it bee a falſe God, and an Image made of him, that is an Idoll; but if an image be made of God himſelfe, it is no Idoll, but an Image, becauſe he is a true God. The Martyr anſwereth: Lay your Image of your true God and falſe God together, you ſhall ſee the difference: haue not your Images feete, and goe not, eyes and ſee not, eares and heare not, hands and feele not, mouthes and ſpeake not, euen ſo haue your Idols? *Fox.*pag.1589.col.2.

We haue ſeene before the iudgement of the Eaſt Church, and of ſome of the Africane Church, as alſo of ſome of the Romaniſts, vnto whom we will adioyne the teſtimonie of Polydore Virgil: Imaginum cultum, &c. Almoſt all the ancient fathers condemned the worſhip of Images, ob metum idololatriæ; for feare of idolatrie, &c. idolatrie here and the worſhip of images are made coſine germanes. Lib.6.Inuent. c.13.

The reformed Churches knowe no difference betweene images and Idols: Heluetia former confeſſion. c.23. Idols, which are ſet vp to be worſhipped, &c. wee doe remoue them, &c. Saxonic artic.21. there is inuocation of the dead, &c. adoring of images, &c. Paul would in no caſe allow of ſuch vowes as are ioyned with the worſhip of Idols: They make here the adoration of images and worſhip of Idols all one. Harm.ſect.18. p.569.

THE SECOND ARTICLE, WHETHER IT BE lawfull to haue the Images of the Trinitie, or of Chriſt, or of Angels.

The Papiſts.

THat Images may haue a good ciuill vſe, as for decencie or comelineſſe of ſome worke, or for vtilitie of ſtorie, it is of neither part denied; but they further affirme, that it is lawfull to expreſſe the Trinitie by pictures; as God like an olde man, and with the world in his hand; Chriſt, as hee walked vpon the earth; the holy Ghoſt in the likeneſſe of a Doue; the Angels with wings: and theſe pictures (they ſay) are very meete and profitable to be ſet vp in Churches, Rhemiſt. Act.17.ſect.5. 43.Error.

*Argum.*1. To paint the Trinitie, or any one of them as they appeared viſibly, is no more inconuenient, then it was vndecent for them ſo to appeare, Rhemiſt.ibid.et Bellarmin.cap.8.

Anſwere. You flatly controle the law of God, which ſimply forbiddeth any ſimilitude to be made of things in heauen or in earth to worſhip God by. And Deut.4.15. God expreſly declareth, that he would not appeare in any viſible ſhape when he gaue the law, leaſt the people ſhould abuſe that ſhape, to make an image of God after it. Againe, the argument followeth not: for God ſaw it was conuenient ſometime by viſible ſignes to appeare vnto men, and yet ſeeth it to be inconuenient for pictures to be made to reſemble him by: for elſe he would neuer haue forbidden it. Laſtly, though the argument be admitted, yet ſeeing now that all ſuch viſible apparitions of the Trinitie are ceaſed, all ſuch viſible pictures likewiſe ſhould be out of vſe; And if that, when ſuch apparitions were ſeene, yet no ſuch images were tollerated, how much leſſe are they lawfull now, all ſuch viſions being long agoe determined. Deut.4.15.

*Argum.*2. The Angels were pictured in forme of Cherubims: Ergo, Spirits may be portraicted. Bellarm.cap.8.argum.1.

Anſwere. When you can ſhew an expreſſe commandement for your images, as the Iſraelites had for them, we will yeeld, that they are lawfully made. Againe, how followeth it, God may command images to be made for the vſe of religion: Ergo, men may? for the law bindeth not the Lord who is the law maker. But the law ſaith, thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelfe, that is, by thine owne authoritie, any grauen image. The Cherubims alſo were not made publikely to be ſeene and gazed vpon by the people, but were ſet in the holy place; ſo are not your pictures and images which are ſet vp openly in your Churches to entice people to idolatrie.

*Argum.*3. The Scripture deſcribeth God by humane members, as by his hands, eyes, feete, &c. therefore he alſo may be ſo deſcribed in picture, Bellarm. ibid.

Anſwere. Firſt, if it be lawfull to ſet forth God by picture, as hee is deſcribed in Scripture, then make a Lyon alſo to ſignifie Chriſt, for hee is called the Lyon of the tribe of Iuda: picture him alſo with Doues eyes, Rauens lookes, Marble legges, &c. for ſo he is deſcribed Cantic. 5. and thus will you make a monſter of Chriſt. Secondly, if an idoll be, as your ſelues define, a picture of that, which is not; then doe you make an idoll of God, when you paint him with hands and feete, &c. whereas there is no ſuch thing in God. Thirdly, the Scripture ſo deſcribeth God to our capacitie, for our edifying and inſtruction; becauſe wee cannot otherwiſe vnderſtand the high things of God: but there is no ſuch end of pictures; which are ſo farre from edifying, that they are rather occaſion of offence: and therefore the argument concludeth not, from the phraſe of Scripture, to the phantaſie of Painters; from diuine authoritie, to humane preſumption.

The Proteſtants.

TO ſet forth the Godhead and diuine nature by any picture or Image, is impoſſible; and therefore both vnlawfull and inconuenient: but to bring them into Churches, and to make them for ſome vſe of religion, is a high ſtep vnto groſſe ſuperſtition.

*Argum.*1. Such images of the Trinitie among the Papiſts, are made to reſemble the diuinitie and Godhead: for to what purpoſe elſe ſhould ſuch images be made? They picture God the father like an olde man: becauſe in that forme he appeared to Daniel: but how know they whether it were God the Father, rather then God the Sonne, who is as olde as God the Father, or then the whole Godhead? They commend alſo the image of God the Father with the world in his hand; which is a lying image, and maketh ſimple people to beleeue, that the world was made onely by God the Father, which was the worke of the whole Trinitie. Some of the Papiſts themſelues, as [a] Abulenſis, [b] Durandus, [c] Pereſius, doe hold, that the image of God ought not to be made, and that it is rather tolerated, then allowed in the Church.

[a] In 4. Deut. 4.5
[c] De trad. par. 3. in tract. de imaginib.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that there are three ſorts of images, or pictures: ſome doe expreſſe the very ſimilitude, and nature of a thing, and ſo onely things materiall and corporall may be pictured; ſome images doe not properly, but by way of Allegorie and implication expreſſe the thing deciphered, as when Angels are pictured with wings, to ſhew their celeritie, &c. there can be no Image of God made after the firſt ſort, but after the ſecond there may, &c. A third ſort of pictures, are to ſet forth ſome hiſtorie, as if any would deſcribe the expulſion of Adam out of Paradiſe, hee would paint God walking in Paradiſe in the forme of a man, and the Angell alſo in humane ſhape carying a naked ſword, &c. Bellarm. lib. 2 de imaginib. c. 8.

Anſwere. Firſt if an image be made of a thing, which doth not expreſſe the nature thereof, as a picture aſcribing to God a bodily ſhape, which he hath not, is but a lying image: ſecondly, the properties of God being infinite, cannot any way by a picture be implied or ſhadowed forth, as Iſay 40. 12. God hath meaſured the waters with his fiſt, and counted heauen with a ſpanne: and verſ. 17. all nations before him are as nothing, &c. then it followeth, To whom then will you liken God, or what ſimilitude will you ſet vp vnto him? The Prophet reaſoneth thus, God is omnipotent, infinite, incomprehenſible, therefore by no ſimilitude whatſoeuer can be expreſſed. Thirdly, S. Ambroſe ſaith, Quod inuiſibile eſt, pingi non poteſt, & Deus, qui ab his omnibus alienus eſt, quomodo poteſt imaginem habere viſibilem? That which is inuiſible, cannot be pictured, and God, which is farre from any bodily ſhape, how can he haue a viſible Image? Ambroſe in 1. ad Coloſſ. Hee denieth, that God any way may be viſibly deſcribed. Fourthly, it is one thing, to make a picture for hiſtorie, which is a cited thing, another for a religious vſe: which is altogether forbidden, of what thing ſo euer it be the image: God the Father was neuer ſeene in any humane ſhape: neither euer ſhewed himſelfe in any viſible forme, as Ambroſe affirmeth, that the Father neuer appeared vnto any: but when God ſhewed himſelfe, in any outward figure, Non pater intelligitur, ſed filius; The father is not vnderſtoode but the ſonne, &c. therefore God the father is no way to be reſembled by any picture: Concerning other pictures, as of Angels with wings, becauſe they haue ſo appeared, if it be onely for the ſetting forth of ſome hiſtorie, we doe not much gaine-ſay it; and concerning the image of Chriſt, if likewiſe it be made onely hiſtorically, as to deſcribe ſome of his miraculous workes, as they were done, without any ſpeciall or particular relation to his perſon, it is farre more tollerable, then when the image of Chriſt is ſet forth by it ſelfe, without any ſuch hiſtoricall intention, onely to portrait his perſon and countenance, which cannot be but dangerous and offenſiue.

Eſay 40. 12.

In Coloſſ. 1. pag. 15.

As for the images of Chriſt in the forme of a Lambe, and the holy Ghoſt in ſhape of a Doue, Bartholomaus Caranza, a Papiſt ſheweth that they were forbidden in the ſixth generall Synode, Canon. 82.

Bellarmine here anſwereth, that the Councell condemneth not the Image of Chriſt in forme of a Lambe, but preferreth onely the other picture of Chriſt, as a man.

Contra. Firſt, the words of the Canon are theſe, Picturam illius agni Chriſti, &c. in poſterum pro veteri agno erigendam ſancimus: We decree, that the picture of Chriſt, as hee is man, be from henceforth erected in ſtead of the picture of the Lamb. If the one picture muſt giue place to the other, what is that elſe, but to abrogate the one, and eſtabliſh the other? Secondly, Caranza the abridger of the Councels ſo expoundeth the Canon, though it pleaſe Bellarmine to oppoſe himſelfe againſt him.

Concerning the picture of Chriſt as he was man, the Papiſts themſelues confeſſe, and we denie not, but it may better bee made then the image of the Trinitie; yet can there not be any true image of Chriſt as he was in forme of man: for the image doth only expreſſe his bodily ſhape, not as hee was God in the forme of man: and ſo ſuch a picture were dangerous to the weake and ignorant, being a lying image, ſhewing Chriſt only as man, who was both God and man. And againe, the image, which is made of his bodily ſhape, is no more the image of Chriſt, then of any other man: Fulk. Act. 17. ſect. 5.

But ſome will ſay, if Chriſts image cannot conueniently bee made, becauſe it expreſſeth not his Godhead: by the ſame reaſon wee cannot make a picture of a man, becauſe his ſoule being inuiſible cannot be painted.

Anſw. The reaſon is not alike: for hee that pictureth a man liuing, ſetteth foorth the life, beautie and motion of the bodie; by which effects, by a conſequent, the ſoule is reſembled, which cauſeth and worketh theſe things in the bodie: but in the bodily ſhape of Chriſt, there cannot be made to appeare any ſuch notorious ſignes of his Godhead.

2 Though it be not ſimply vnlawfull to expreſſe in painting the viſible ſhapes that were ſhewed in viſion to the Prophets, if it be only for vſe and ſignification of the hiſtorie, or if there be any other commendable vſe: yet to make thoſe ſhapes for any vſe of religion, or ſeruice of God, is abominable idolatrie, Fulk. ibid. Epiphanius ſaw in a Church at Anablatha, an image painted in a table, as it had bin of Chriſt or a Saint, hee tooke it downe and cut it in peeces: affirming that it was contrarie to the Scripture for any image of a man to hang in the Church of Chriſt. The Eliberine Councell, Canon 36. decreed, that no pictures ſhould be made in Churches. If no pictures, much leſſe carued images, which are a more ſtrong prouocation to idolatrie. The words of the Councell are theſe: Placuit picturas in Eccleſia eſſe non debere, ne quod colitur, aut adoratur in parietibus depingatur: We thinke good that no pictures ſhould be in the Church, leſt that which we adore and worſhip, ſhould be painted in the walles.

Auguſtine rendreth a reaſon, why it is dangerous to haue images in Churches, where there is yea but the leaſt feare of ſuperſtition: Quis adorat vel orat intuens ſimulachrum, qui non ſic afficitur, vt ab eo ſe exaudiri putet, ac ab eo ſibi præſtari, quod deſiderat, ſperet? Who (ſaith hee) worſhippeth or prayeth beholding an image, and is not ſo affected, as though he were heard of it, and hopeth not to haue that performed by it, which he deſireth? in Pſal. 113. part. 2.

Againſt the hauing or making of the image of Chriſt, it was thus reaſoned Conſtantinople 7. generall Synode: as it is alleaged Nicen. 2. action. 6. tom. 3. Ipſam imaginem Chriſti Chriſtum vocant, eſt autem Chriſtus Deus & homo; ſequitur vt imago ſit Dei & hominis, & ſic deitatem circumſcriptibilem, & cum Eutyche confuſionem inducunt, &c. They doubt not to call the image of Chriſt, Chriſt: but Chriſt is both God and man; it followeth then, that the image of Chriſt muſt bee the image of God and man; and ſo they make the deitie circumſcriptible, and with Eutyches confound the natures of Chriſt: or elſe they doe picture the bodie of Chriſt without the deitie, and ſo with Neſtorius they diuide the perſon of Chriſt, and ſeparate the humanitie from the diuine nature: Vel tertio, illi aliam perſonam conſtituentes, dum carnem à deitate ſeparant, quam imagine repræſentari dicunt, quartam perſonam trinitati adijciunt: Or thirdly, they make a new perſon of Chriſt (while they ſeparate the fleſh from the deitie) which they ſay is repreſented in picture, and ſo adde a fourth perſon to the Trinitie. Theſe abſurdities theſe fathers did foreſee would follow in hauing the pictures of Chriſt.

Againe, they reaſon thus in the ſame place, tom. 3. from the words of our Sauiour Chriſt vttered in the inſtitution of the Sacrament, this is my bodie, &c. doe this in remembrance of me: Veluti non eſſet vlla alia ſpecies electa ab illo, aut quaſi non poſſet vllo alio illorum, quæ ſub cœlo ſunt, incarnatio illius repræſentari: Ecce igitur viuificantis illius corporis imaginem totam, panis ſcilicet ſubſtantiam, quam mandauit apponi: As though he had choſen no other ſhape, nor any other type of all things vnder heauen, whereby his incarnation could be repreſented: Behold then all the images of that quickning bodie, the ſubſtance of bread, which hee commanded to be vſed, &c. Chriſt then hath appointed no other way to be called to our remembrance by, but by the Sacrament.

One other reaſon I will adioyne, alleaged in the ſame place out of Euſebius Pamphilus, tom. 4. who thus writeth to Conſtantia the Empreſſe, who had ſent to him for the image of Chriſt: what image (ſaith he) doe you require? ſuch an one as may expreſſe the characters of his diuine nature: but I thinke you are ſufficiently inſtructed of this, that no man hath thus ſeene the ſonne but the father: Sed ſerui requiris formæ imaginem: But you require the image of the forme of a ſeruant, which hee tooke; but vnderſtand you that it was ioyned to the glorie of his Godhead: in ſo much that his Apoſtles could not behold the glorie of his fleſh in the Mount: much more glorious is it now hauing put off mortalitie: Quis igitur gloriæ & dignitatis ſplendores lucentes & fulgurantes effigiare mortuis & inanimatis coloribus & vmbratili pictura poſſet? Thoſe ſhining and brightſome beames of ſo great glorie, who is able with dead and liueleſſe colours, and a ſhadowed picture to expreſſe?

See alſo the determination of the Ciuill law, Cod. lib. 8. tit. 12. leg. 20. Theodoſ. Valentinian. Baſili- eam alicuius imaginis,&c. We forbid the Church to be obſcured with the Images or painted tables of any,&c. This law forbiddeth pictures to be ſet vp in Churches.

One alſo of their owne writers is bold to write thus of Nicephorus, for reporting of S. Luke to haue been a Painter, and to be the firſt that made the Images of Chriſt and of Mary, and of the Apoſtles: In hiſtoria ſi non mendax, certè valdè audax: He is very bold in his hiſtorie, if not a liar: Eſſenc. comment. in 2. Timoth. p. 173.

This truth the holy Martyrs haue ſealed: Nicholas Shetterden Martyr: The law forbiddeth to make any manner likenes, or image of God, Deut. 4. 17. you ſaw no ſhape, &c. To whom Wincheſter obiected thus: Yet by your leaue, we may make an image of ſo much as was ſeene, as of Chriſt, of the holy Ghoſt, and the Father appeared to Daniel like an old man. The Martyr anſwereth: This is no proofe that we may make images contrarie to the commandement, for the holy Ghoſt appeared like a Doue, yet was he not like in ſhape but in certaine qualities, &c. Fox pag. 1675. col. 2. Pag. 1521. 2. 20

We haue here alſo further euidence: 1. Of the Eaſt Church, Ephrem ſaith, Wilt thou be the temple of God? fac habeas imaginem illius in corde, ſee thou haue his image in thine heart, Dei imaginum dico, non colorum varietate in ligno, &c. I call that the image of God, not which is in wood or other matter formed with varietie of colours, but that image of God, which is painted by good works, &c. Damaſcene ſaith, Of the inuiſible and incircumſcriptible God, quis facere poteſt repreſentationem? who can make any repreſentation? The ſuperſtitious and peremptorie Duke of Moſcouia, ſeemeth to allow no images of the inuiſible God: for thus hee ſaith, Diuinarum imaginum prima eſt Ieſu Domini, &c. Of diuine images the firſt is of our Lord Ieſus, then of his pure mother, &c. the third kind of the heauenly powers and Saints.

2. Of the South Church, Origene ſaith, The Chriſtians, Dei incorporei & inuiſibilis nullam effigiem faciunt, make no image of the incorporall and inuiſible God. Athanaſius, Stulti & vecordes qui Deũ corporalib. rebus aſſimulent: They are fooles and ſenſeleſſe, which doe liken God to corporall things. The Emperour of Ethiopia writing to the Biſhop of Rome, prayeth him, vt mittere velit, aliquas Sanctorum imagines, & pracipue beata Maria Virginis, &c. to ſend him ſome pictures of Saints, but ſpecially of the Virgine Mary, &c. If the images of God were in vſe among them, they ſhould haue bin preferred before the reſt.

3 Confeſſion of Heluetia the former, chap. 4. Becauſe God is an inuiſible ſpirit, and an incomprehenſible eſſence, he cannot therefore by any art, or image be expreſſed: for which cauſe wee feare not with the Scripture to terme the images of God meere lies, &c. although Chriſt tooke vpon him mans nature, yet he did not therefore take it that he might ſet foorth a paterne for Caruers and Painters: he denied that he came to deſtroy the Law and the Prophets, but images are forbidden in the Law and the Prophets, &c.

4 The opinion of ſome of the Romaniſts, as of Abulenſis, Durandus, Pereſius, is mentioned before.

THE THIRD ARTICLE, WHETHER THE images of Saints are to be worſhipped.

The Papiſts.

44. Error.

THat images are to be reuerenced and worſhipped, ſo it be not with the diuine honour due vnto God it was concluded in the late Tridentine chapter, ſeſſ. 25. confeſſed by our Rhemiſts, Act. 17. ſect. 5. maintained by the Ieſuites, Bellarm. cap. 12.

Argum. 1. The braſen Serpent was worſhipped of the people, ſeeing it was ſet vp in an high place, and gaue health to thoſe that looked vpon it; Ergo, images may be worſhipped, Bellarm. So alſo the Doway tranſlators giue inſtance of the braſen Serpent, pag. 366. The people alſo fell downe before the Arke and Tabernacle, and worſhipped God: Ergo, lawfull, praying, to fall downe before a Crucifixe, Rhemiſt. annot. Heb. 11. 21.

Ioh. 3. 14.

Anſw. Firſt, it was not thē Serpent that healed them, but Chriſt who was thereby prefigured. The Serpent was lift vp, that the people might round about the better behold it, and it ſheweth foorth alſo the lifting vp of Chriſt vpon the Croſſe. It was not ſet vp to be worſhipped, neither was it worſhipped till the people fell into ſuperſtition, and offered incenſe to it, and therefore becauſe the people abuſed that monument, Hezekiah brake it downe, 2. King. 18. Secondly, it is not all one to fall downe before, in, or at the Arke and Tabernacle, and to worſhip God, as to worſhip the Arke or Tabernacle. You doe not only fall downe before a Crucifixe, but worſhip it. Neither is it as lawfull to worſhip before a Crucifixe, as it was before the Tabernacle: for the one was commanded of God, the other is the ſuperſtitious deuice of men.

Argum. 2. As the image of Nabuchadnezzar was for his honour, ſo the image of Chriſt is for his, Rhemiſt. Reuel. 13. 14.

Anſw. A good ſimilitude, if Chriſt himſelfe had not forbidden ſo to bee honoured and worſhipped.

Argum.3. Man is honoured becauſe he is the image of God: Ergo, images of Saints are to be reuerenced, becauſe they are their images, Bellarm.cap.12.

Anſw. Firſt, man is a liuelie image of Gods owne making, images of Saints are the workes of men.

Secondly, no image can ſo liuely repreſent a Saint, being but a dead thing, as man who hath a liuing ſoule is the image of God.

Thirdly, wee doe reuerence men with ciuill honour, not with religious worſhip, as they doe their images.

Fourthly, though Gods image in man were to be worſhipped: yet it would not follow, that Saints images ſhould: for all diuine worſhip belongeth onely to God: but the Saints themſelues, though they were aliue, are not to be worſhipped, much leſſe their images.

Argum.4. The chiefe Iconomachi, that is, enemies or oppugners of Idols, ſay they, are the Iewes, Samaritanes, Mahometanes: yea the diuell himſelfe loueth no images, Bellarm.ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, it followeth not, the Iewes and Turkes abhorre images, and therefore Chriſtians ought to loue them: for the Heathen hated many vices, which are alſo to bee abhorred of Chriſtians.

Secondly, they were not the firſt Iconomachi, Image haters: for Moſes was an Iconomach, when hee cauſed the golden Calfe to be burnt to powder: Hezekiah an Iconomach, that brake downe the braſen Serpent: Ioſiah an Iconomach, that cauſed the Idols to bee deſtroyed, 2.King.23. Nay, God himſelfe was the firſt Iconomach, that forbiddeth Images and Idols to be made in the morall law.

Thirdly, I pray you where did the Ieſuite learne, that the diuell hateth an image? I am ſure the Scripture ſpeaketh contrarie, that what was offered to Idols was ſacrificed to diuels. 1.Cor.10.20.

Argum.5. The Colledge of Doway doe bring theſe arguments for the adoration of Images.

1 Images were conſerued in the Temple, 3.King.7. as before in the Tabernacle.

2 When idolatrie was moſt deſtroyed, 3.King.15. 4.King.13. yea an abuſe riſing of the braſen Serpent, for the which Ezekiah deſtroyed it, 4.King.18. yet hee touched not the image of Cherubims in the Temple: which none but Infidels ſought to deſtroy.

3 Oſee the Prophet, (Chap.3.) bewaileth the want of Teraphim or Images, among other ſacred things.

4 Whereby the ancient Rabbines proue very well, that the images of Angels, as of other Saints, are not contrarie to the Decalogue, but the image of Idols, &c. to this purpoſe they argue, pag.936. and before pag.103.

Anſw. 1. The Images in the Tabernacle and afterward in the Temple, were made by Gods commandement, they were not ſet vp publikely in the view of the people, but altogether kept in the holy place, whether the Prieſts only reſorted, neither were they adored: popiſh Images haue none of theſe, they haue neither Gods warrant, they are expoſed to the view of the people, they adore them, and fall downe before them: therefore this preſident ſerueth not their turne.

2 Heſekiahs example condemneth all adoration of Images, as hauing no commandement from God: the Images in the Temple hee defaced not, for the reaſons aforeſaid: if the braſen Serpent, ſet vp by Gods commandement, were deſtroyed becauſe it began to be adored, and incenſe burned vnto it, much more Images erected by men to be worſhipped, are to be demoliſhed.

3 Oſee bewaileth not the want of Teraphim: but foretelleth the miſerable ſtate of the Iſraelites, that they ſhould haue no face at al either of Church or Common-wealth, nor that corrupt ſtate, when vnder the Kings of Iſrael they worſhipped Images: and ſo conſequently hee prophecieth of the deſtruction of the Idols, wherein they truſted: otherwiſe, if the Prophet allowed Teraphim, then hee ſhould giue allowance to Idols, as theſe tranſlators interprete that word, Geneſ.31. where it is ſaid, Rachel ſtole her fathers Idols: the word is Teraphim: but if Teraphim may bee taken in any good ſenſe; what ſay they to the word Matzebah, the Prophet ſaith, they ſhall be without a ſtatue or Image: which word is applied to ſignifie an Idoll, as the Image of Baal is ſo called, 2.King.chap.10. verſ.26. Oſee 3.4. 2.King.10.26.

4 They make the Iewes their patrones of Images: but Bellarmine nameth them, as is ſhewed in the former argument, the Iconomachi, enemies to Images. And it is vntrue, that the Iewes either by that text, or any other, are induced to allow any Images at all. Some indeed of their popiſh writers are of opinion, that not all worſhip of Images, but ſuch as the Heathen gaue to their Idols, was forbidden to the Iewes, as Waldenſ. Caietan, Stapleton, Sander, Alphonſ. de Caſtro. But there are more of the contrarie opinion, quemlibet vſum imaginum & ſtatuarum, &c. fuiſſe interdictum: that all vſe whatſoeuer of Images and ſtatues was by the poſitiue law, Exod.20. forbidden to the Iewes, as Richardus, Alexander, Bonauenture, Henricus, Paludanus, Catharinus: which ſaith their Vaſquez a Ieſuite is the more probable opinion: and another Ieſuite, *Gretzerus*proueth out of Ioſephus, that the Iewes would not admit of the trophees, armes or enſignes of the Romanes, ſuſpecting leſt ſome Images were hidden vnder them, which altogether were forbidden by their law.

Argum.6. We will helpe them out with another argument: which the Muſcouian Duke alleageth, that miracles haue not been wrought by the Idols of the Gentiles, as by their Images: Anſwere to Robite, cap.13.

Anſ. Yet diuers examples may be produced, of prodigious things wrought by the heathens idols, through the cunning and illuſion of Sathan: Cicero, action. 6. in Verrem, ſpeaking of the image of Ceres in Sicilia, ſaith multa prodigia vim eius numenque declarant: many wonders do ſhew the diuine vertue thereof: the Grecians vſed to ſet vp in tables the diſeaſes cured by Æſculapius in Epidamus. Strab. lib. 8. Virgil writeth 1. Georgic: that after the murther of Cæſar, the yuorie and brazen images, did weepe and ſweat: Auguſtine ſaith: let them heare what wonderfull things done or ſeene, the Pagans report of their gods, et tamen dij gentium dæmonia; and yet the gods of the heathen are but deuils: de vnit Eccleſ. c. 16.

The Proteſtants.

THat Images or Idols are not at all to bee reuerenced or worſhipped, or to bee made, or ſet vp in Churches, or in any other place for any religious, or rather irreligious vſe: thus out of the holie ſcriptures we make it plaine.

Exod.20.4.
Deu.4.15.
Iſay.40.18.
Rom.1.23.
1.Cor.10.20.
1.Iohn.5.21.

Argum. 1. The making of any ſimilitude or likenes, to fall downe before it and worſhip it, is flatly forbidden in the ſecond commandement, Ergo, they are not to be worſhipped. So likewiſe, Deut. 4.15. Iſai. 40.18. and in many other places in the olde Teſtament: worſhipping of Images, which is idolatry, is manifeſtly alſo forbidden in the new teſtament, Rom. 1.23. 1. Cor. 10.20. 1. Iohn 5.21. Ergo not lawfull.

Anſ. One Catharinus a great Papiſt ſaith, that the commandement in the law againſt Images, was but temporall, and to continue but till the eſtabliſhing of the new Teſtament. But Bellarmine vtterly miſliketh this anſwer, being moſt abſurd, for the morrall law is perpetuall, De imaginib. ſanct. lib. 2. cap. 7. They doe giue therefore a more deliberate anſwer: that the Scriptures doe reproue and condemne the Idolatry of the Heathen, which worſhipped their images as gods. But ſo do not they: they make no account of them, as they affirme, for their matter or forme; but for that relation they haue to the things whoſe images they are, Rhemiſt. Philip. 2. ſect. 2.

Exod.32.4.5.
1 King.12.28.
Exod.32.5.
Iude.17.3.

Anſ. First, the Iewes alſo in their golden Calfe had a relation to that God that brought them out of the land of Egypt, Exod. 32.4.5. The like relation had Ieroboam in ſetting vp of his Calues, 1. Kin. 12.28. for they were not ſo mad as to thinke that a calfe brought them out of Egypt. And it appeareth yet more plainly: for Exod. 32.5. Aaron ſaith, To morrow ſhall be the Lords holy day: the word is Iehouah, which name the Iewes onely aſcribed vnto God. So Iudg. 17.3. Micha his mother ſaith, that ſhee had conſecrated the ſhekels of ſiluer vnto the Lord Iehouah, to make a moulten Image: wherefore in their images they had relation to God, and yet were they reproued for their idolatry.

In Pſal 96. in expoſition.

The like relation the Gentiles alſo had in their Idols, as Auguſtine witneſſeth: Non ego illum lapidem colo, &c. adoro, quem video, ſed ſeruio ei quem non video. Quis eſt ille? Numen quoddam inuiſibile quod præſidet illi ſimulachro: I doe not worſhip that carued ſtone or Image: I reuerence that I ſee, but I ſerue or worſhip that I ſee not: that is, a certaine diuine ſpirit, which is preſident in that image, &c. Wherefore popiſh idolatry can no more be excuſed by this ſhift of reference or relation, then either the Iewes or Gentiles, that pretended the ſame colour.

Deut.38.18.

Our Doway men do heere alſo come in with their part: they ſay that Caluin giuing this note, that the Iſraelites were not ſo inconſiderate, as not to remember that it was God which brought them out of the land of Egipt, is quite contrary to that text, Deut. 32.18. God that begat thee, thou haſt forſaken, and haſt forgotten the Lord thy creator: Whereupon they infer, that they indeed made the golden calfe their God. P. 245. and 465.

Ezech.8.10.

Contra. 1. If the Iſraelites had thought that calfe to bee their very God, it is not like, that Aaron would therein haue condeſcended to their madnes, though he ſhewed great infirmity in yeelding ſo farre as he did: and whereas Ezechiel found in a ſecret corner 70. ancients of Iſraell, cenſing before the images of creeping things and abominable beaſts: is it like they were ſo groſſe, to imagine God to be like an abominable thing? 2. Heerein they had bene more groſſe then the Pagans, who vſed this defence of their idolatry, as Caſſander one of their owne men alleageth out of Lactantius: non ſimulachra timemus, ſed eos, ad quorum imaginem ficta, we do not reuerence the images, but them according to whoſe image they are made. 3. Yet they forgot God, in as much, as they ſo ſoone tranſgreſſed the commandement ſo lately giuen them, not to make them any grauen image to worſhip it &c. as the Lord himſelfe ſaith, they are ſoone turned out of the way which I commanded them.

2. It may bee proued by the practiſe of the Popiſh Church in England, that ſimply without any ſuch relation or ſignification they commanded Images to be worſhipped. Thomas Man Martyr troubled, becauſe he beleeued not in the Crucifixe. Robert Rane of Dorney moleſted, becauſe hee ſaid, that an image grauen with mans hand, is neither God nor our Ladie, but made for a remembrance of Saints: nor we ought to worſhip any thing, but God and our Lady, and not images of Saints, which are but ſtocks and ſtones. Miſtriſſe Alice Dolie brought into trouble, for ſaying; Wee ſhould not worſhip that thing that hath eares, and eies, and can neither ſee nor heare. Theſe good men and women, wee ſee, were perſecuted in thoſe daies for denying worſhip to Images, as they were Images. And of latter daies, we ſee the popiſh ſect, euen they amongſt them, which had the name of learning, to haue fallen into the ſame idolatrous dotage of their forefathers: as it may appeare by Boners ſetting vp of the Rood in Pauls, at the comming in of King Philip: how he with his Chapleins annointed the Rood, crept vnto it, and kiſſed it, and ſo ſet him vp in his place, all the Queere in this meane ſeaſon, ſinging Te Deum: Let indifferent men now iudge, whether they made not this Roode their God amight, Fox pag. 1472. So then the popiſh practiſe agreeable to their doctrine was, (as it appeareth) that Images were ſimply to be worſhipped: which Pollydore one of their owne men confeſſeth, that the ruder ſort among them, magis eis fidunt, quam Chriſto, do put more confidence in the image then in Chriſt himſelfe.

Apocal.9.20.

*Argum.*2. Apocal.9.20. Worſhippers of Idols of ſiluer and gold are there condemned; which can be no other but the Papiſts: for that prophecie is to be fulfilled in the latter times towards the end of the world, after the opening of the 7. ſeale and blowing of the 6. trumpet. But there is no known nation in theſe parts of the world, nor hath been many a day, that worſhippeth images as the popiſh Synagogue doth.

*Argum.*3. Man is the image of God, and yet is not worſhipped: how much leſſe ought we to worſhip carued Images, which are but made with mens hands? As Auguſtine ſaith, Opera hominum non colenda, meliores ſunt artifices: The handy works of men are not to bee worſhipped, the workemen themſelues are better, and yet not worſhipped, &c. What foule idolatry is this, to prefer the works of mens hands, before the worke and image of God, to deſpiſe men, and haue in ſo great regard dead ſtocks and ſtones?

*Argum.*4. Ezechias cauſed the braſen Serpent, which Moſes had made to be broken in peeces, becauſe the people worſhipped it, and burnt incenſe to it: Ergo, images are not to be worſhipped.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that the people did honour the braſen Serpent, for the matter ſake, thinking, that the benefit of health proceeded from the image it ſelfe, *cap.*17.

Contra. Firſt, they could not honour it for the matter, it being of braſſe, not of gold, or any other pretious mettall. Secondly, neither did the people aſcribe the miracle to the image it ſelfe: for in the text it is added, which Moſes had made: they remembred very well, that it was made by Moſes, at Gods appointment, and ſo was indued with that vertue.

Secondly, ſaith he, they did worſhip it as God, becauſe they offered incenſe to it, which in the old law was accounted a ſacrifice, ibid.

Contra. See firſt how contrary Bellarmine is to himſelfe: for before, *lib.*1.*de Sanctor. beatitud. c.*13. *argum.*3. he tolde vs, that the ſacrifice of beaſts onely was peculiar vnto God: but odors and incenſe might be giuen to Saints; and that therefore Nabuchadnezzar commanding odors to bee offered to Daniel, did therein no vnlawfull thing. But heere he affirmeth the contrary, that the people in offering incenſe to the braſen Serpent, did giue the honour of God vnto it. Thus well hee agreeth with himſelfe.

Secondly, the people were not ſo blind, to thinke a Serpent to be their God, no more then their forefathers tooke the golden Calfe for God, but they worſhipped it in the remembrance of God: for they were not ſo blockiſh to thinke that a calfe did bring them out of Egypt. Thus doe the Papiſts worſhip their Images euen as the people did the braſen Serpent.

Auguſtin ſaith, Noui multos eſſe ſepulchorum & picturarum adoratores: I know there are many which worſhip ſepulchres & pictures. Of theſe he warneth men to take heede, Noli conſectari turbas imperitorum. Follow not ſuch vnlearned & vnskilfull multitudes. Bellarm. anſwereth, that Auguſtine wrote thus when he was a yong man, & not fully conuerted, cap. 16. A ſillie ſhift: yet wee will vouchſafe an anſwer, though it be worthy of none. Let vs heare what Auguſtine thought when he was old, & staied in iudgement: Iam vero artifex melior eſt eis, &c: quem te tamen puderet adorare; melior et tu, quamuis ea non feceris, quoniā, quæ illa non poſſunt facis, melior et beſtia. The workman is better then the Image, who gaue faſhion and ſhape vnto it, yet thou wouldeſt be aſhamed to worſhip him: thou thy ſelfe art better, for thou canſt do many things which that cannot; nay a bruit beaſt that heareth and ſeeth is better, &c. By this we may ſee what Auguſtine thought of worſhipping of images.

We haue the glorious teſtimony of the holy Martyrs: Claudius Monerius burned at Lions for the truth, anno 1551: Nothing is to bee adored, but that which is not ſeene with the eies, that is God alone, which is a ſpirit, &c. Images therefore are not to bee ſet vp before Chriſtians, ſeeing the nature of man is ſo prone to idolatry, euer occupied and fixed on thoſe things which lye before his eyes, rather then vpon thoſe which are not ſeene. Fox pag. 905. col. 1.

Maſter George Wiſchart holy Martyr, reporteth how hee had conference with a Iew, as hee was ſayling vpon the water of Rhene: and asking him the cauſe of his pertinacie in not receiuing the chriſtian faith, alleaged this with other, for that Chriſtians did worſhip Images contrary to the law of God, which will haue God only to be honoured; Fox pag. 1269. col. 2.

Iohn Maundrel, William Coberly, Iohn Spicer put to death, for denying the worſhipping of Images, pag. 1893. with many other that gaue their liues in defence of this truth: The papiſts for their idolatry cannot ſhew ſo ſure a ſeale.

I will adde in the end the determination of the 7. generall Councell at Conſtantinople, as it is extant *Nicen.*2. *Action.*6. *tom.*6. Qui ab hoc die imaginem auſus fuerit ſibi parare aut adorare in eccleſia, aut in priuata domo conſtituere, aut clam habere; ſi clericus, deponitur; ſi laicus, anathemate percellitor: If any man from henceforth ſhall dare to make him an Image, or to worſhip it in the Church, or ſet it vp in his houſe, or keepe it ſecretly; if he be of the Clergie, let him bee depoſed; if a lay man, accurſed be he.

Againe, tom.5. in fine: Nos qui ſacerdotij dignitate ſuccincti ſumus, ſimul exiſtentes vna voce definimus, omnem imaginem ex quacunque materia improba pictorum arte factam ab eccleſia Chriſtianorum reijciendam veluti alienam & abominabilem: Wee of the Prieſtly dignity aſſembled together, doe define with one voice, that euery Image, of what matter ſoeuer, made by the lewd skill of painters, is to be caſt out of the Church of Chriſtians, as a ſtrange and abominable thing. This was enacted anno.780. by the conſent of 300. Biſhops aſſembled at Conſtantinople, in the preſence of two Emperours, Leo and Conſtantinus in two ſeuerall ſynodes.

Our aduerſaries heere anſwere, that this aſſembly at Conſtantinople is not the 7. generall Synode, but that which followed at Nice, called Nicen. 2. which was kept vnder the Empreſſe Irene and her ſonne Conſtantinus, wherein the adoration of Images was eſtabliſhed: and to this Councell Adrian Biſhop of Rome gaue his conſent, which the other wanted.

Anſ. The Synode of Conſtantinople is rather to bee held vniuerſall, then this of Nice. First, it was aſſembled by the authority of two Emperors, Leo, and Conſtantinus: whereas this of Nice had but the authority of a woman, Irene the Empreſſe: for her ſonne Conſtantine, beeing then in his nonage, afterward reuoked his conſent, which he gaue in his childhood. Secondly, there were 300. Biſhops preſent at Conſtantinople, a number ſufficient to make a generall Councell, and it came before the other: wherefore then ſhould it not be counted the 7. generall before the other? Thirdly, what though the Biſhop of Rome conſented not? no more did he to that act of the Chalcedon Councell, which giueth the Patriarke of Conſtantinople equall authority to the Biſhop of Rome; yet is it held to bee vniuerſall. Againe, it had the Patriarke of Conſtantinoples conſent, who was then Paulus, who is the cheefe of the Eaſt Churches, as the Pope would be of the Weſt. Wherefore for ought yet alleaged, the 7. generall Councell ſhall be that, which was kept at Conſtantinople, not the other at Nice. And of this ſuperſtitious Councell one of their owne giueth this teſtimonie; That the Fathers there, Dæmonum ſpectris, & muliebribus ſomnijs parum verecunde abutebantur: did vnſhamefaſtly abuſe the viſions of diuels, and the dreames of women, to proue the adoration of Images, Eſpence. in 2. Timoth. p.151. a.

Laſtly, againſt the adoration of Images wee haue the teſtimony of the Ciuill law, Cod. lib.1. tit.14. leg.7. Martian. Abſit à ſeculo noſtro, &c. Farre bee it, that in our time the accuſtomed honour ſhould bee giuen vnto the curſed Idols, incenſe to be burnt vnto them. &c And becauſe it will bee heere anſwered, that this law was made onely againſt the Idols of the heathen: ſee further, Cod. lib.1. tit.27. leg.2. Theodoſ. Quando ſtatuæ noſtræ eriguntur, &c. adſit iudex ſine adorationis ambitioſo faſtigio: When our Images are erected, let the Magiſtrate bee preſent, without any ambitious or flattering ſhew of adoration. This law forbiddeth the Images of godly Emperours, and ſo alſo Saints, to bee adored.

Their owne decrees agree heereunto: Decret. p.3. diſtinct.3. cap.27. Gregor. Sanctorum imagines quod adorari vetuiſſes, omnino laudamus, &c. We doe euery way commend you, for that you did forbid the images of Saints to be worſhipped, &c. What could be ſaid more directly againſt the adoration of Images?

Epiphanius of the Greeke Church, condemneth the adoration of Images: Mortui ſunt qui adorantur, ipſorum vero imagines, quæ nunquam vixerunt, &c. adorandas introduxerunt, adulterante mente ab vno ſolo Deo, &c. They are dead which are adored, but their images, which neuer were aliue they haue brought in to be adored, with a mind adulterating from God, &c. Bellarmine telleth vs, that hee ſpeaketh againſt thoſe which worſhipped Images as the Gentiles did their idols with diuine worſhip.

Bellar. lib.2. de imaginib. c.16.

Contra. 1. He ſpeaketh againſt all kind of adoration of images: hee calleth it ſimulacrificum ſtudium, a ſtudie of imagerie, and of the Virgin Mary he ſaith, ipſa honorata, ſed non ad adorationem data, ſhe is to be honoured, but not giuen to be adored, &c. making a difference betweene ciuill honour, and religious adoration. 2. The papiſts themſelues are not farre from giuing diuine adoration to Saints and their images, as one of their owne writers ſaith: that many Chriſtians, Diuos diuaſq; non aliter venerantur, quàm Deum: doe worſhip their hee and ſhee Saints, no otherwiſe then God. The Muſcouites as ſuperſtitious as they are at this day, which follow the Greeke Church, doe not worſhip their images: as Faber reporteth, Non vnum vel alterum adorare, &c. Thou ſhalt hardly finde one that doth adore them, though they vſe them as monuments: Sacranus ſaith, imagines operis et artificij catholicorum horrent: the images of the worke and making of the catholikes, though it bee of the crucifixe, they doe abhorre, &c. that is carued and grauen images, for they allowed none but painted in plaine tables: ſo alſo an other ſaith, Statuas nullas in templis venerantur: they worſhip no images in their temples.

2. The Ethiopike Church, though they haue plaine painted images, yet as it ſeemeth, they worſhip them not: for they keepe them wrapped vp in their veſtures among other papers, and bring them not forth vnleſſe it be vpon feſtiuall daies: yet Damianus would make vs beleeue, that, in their Churches, the Images of God, of the Virgin Mary and Saints, haberi colique, are receiued and worſhipped: but he ſpeaketh this by heereſay, whereas Aluarez the reporter of the other, did a long time dwell among them, and ſo was better acquainted with their faſhions.

3. Confeſſion of Scotland, chap. 22. auncient writers forbid praying to and worſhipping of Images, as flat contrary to the commandement of God, &c. Bohemia c.17. The Churches taught, that none ought to honour holy men as God, much leſſe images, neither worſhip them with any honour, or affection of ſpirit, the which is due onely to God.

See before the iudgment of Gregorie alledged out of the decrees, who thus further writeth vnto Saranus Biſhop of Marſilia. If any man wil make images, minime prohibe, forbid him not, ſed adorare omnibus modis deuita, but hinder them by all meanes to worſhip them. But Bellarmine telleth vs, hee onely ſpeaketh againſt ſuperſtitious adoration of images, whereby they are worſhipped as gods. chap. 16. Contra. Nay hee forbiddeth they ſhould bee adored, omnibus modis, by all waies and meanes whatſoeuer, and he further ſaith, aliud eſt picturam adorare, aliud quid ſit adorandum per picturam addiſcere: it is one thing to adore a picture, an other to learne by a picture what is to bee adored, &c. hee alloweth no adoration at all, but onely an hiſtoricall vſe of pictures. Lib 9.epiſt.c.9. Gregor.ibid.

AN APPENDIXE, WHETHER CHVRCHES are the meeteſt places for Images.

The Papiſts.

THey affirme, that images may not onely be ſet vp in Churches, but that they are no where better placed, then there: Bellar. lib.2.c.9. Error.45.

Argum. 1. His beſt argument is taken from the practiſe in the olde Teſtament, the images of Cherubims were allowed in the Temple.

Anſwer. To this obiection anſwer is made before: firſt, that they had Gods expreſſe commandement for it: Secondly, and beſide, they were onely in the moſt holy place, whether the high prieſt onelie came: where the Arke was couered with Cherubims: Thirdlie the other pictures of Cherubims, which were in the vaile, were onely for ornament, and comelineſſe, not ſet vp for an idle ſhew. Fourthly, and thereby was ſignified the preſence of the Angels, ſpecially in holy places, where God is inuocated as Chryſoſtome well obſerueth: cum in aere angelorum multitudo verſatur, multo magis in eccleſia, multo amplius hodierno die, cum Dominus eorũ aſcendit in cœlum, ſeeing there is a multitude of Angels in the aire, much more in the Church, much more this day, when the Lord aſcended into heauen, &c. Homil.de aſcẽſion.

The Proteſtants.

It is not ſafe to ſet vp any images painted, carued, or grauen in Churches and places of Gods worſhip, vnleſſe they bee ſuch pictures, which are for comelineſſe and ornament onely, or for hiſtoricall vſe, and thoſe alſo very ſparingly, and cautelouſlie without any manner of offence to bee vſed.

*Argum.*1. Wee read in Ezechiel, that there were the ſimilitude of creeping things, and abominable beaſts painted vpon the wall: which were priuily made, vnto the which they went by a ſecret doore made in the wall: euen theſe idolatrous Iſraelites were aſhamed to ſet vp ſuch pictures publiquely, they ran into corners vnto them. Ezech.8.10.

Argum. 2. Moſes ſaith, Deut.4.15. Take heede to your ſelues, you ſaw no image on the day that the Lord ſpake vnto you: God hath giuen vs a patterne and preſident, that where preaching is, no images ſhould be ſet vp: for it would draw away the people from attention, while they are gazing vpon them: and it may be an occaſion vnto them of ſtumbling, and therefore they are bid to take heed to themſelues. Deutr.4.15.

See the teſtimonie of Claudius Manerius Martyr before, error 44. that Images are not to be ſet vp before Chriſtians, becauſe they are ſo prone to idolatrie.

1 Epiphanius ſhall ſpeake for the Greeke Church: who in an epiſtle to Ioannes Patriarke of Ieruſalem writeth, that finding a certaine picture of a man hanging in the doore of an Oratory, cauſed it to be cut in peeces, adding, that it was againſt the authoritie of Scripture, quod in eccleſia penderet imago hominis, that the picture of a man ſhould hang in the Church.

To this place they make vs diuers anſweres: 1. Alphonſus de Caſtro doth note him of error. 2. Valentia ſaith, the authoritie of the whole Church ought more to preuaile with vs. 3. Marianus Victorius in his annotations vpon that epiſtle, ſaith it was the picture of ſome prophane man, whereas Epiphanius ſaith himſelfe it ſeemed to be the picture of Chriſt, or of ſome Saint. 4. Thomas Waldenſ. ſaith Epiphanius did ſo, becauſe of the error of the Anthropomorphites, which was rife in thoſe daies. 5. But Bellarmine hath found out another anſwere, that thoſe words are ſuppoſititia, foiſted in: yet is the whole epiſtle found tranſlated by *Hierome, tom.*3. I thinke he borrowed this anſwere from the peremptorie Duke of Muſcouia, who denieth the truth of this hiſtorie, and maketh it to be a fained thing. Thus, when they can anſwere nothing elſe, they denie the author, or ſuppoſe one vaine thing or other: meaſuring others by themſelues, becauſe they take vpon them to correct, or rather corrupt authors (as their expurgatorie Indices bewray their fraud) they imagine alſo ſo of others: they ſhould doe well to ſhew when, by whom, and how long ſince, thoſe words haue been coyned, which they ſhall be neuer able to ſhew. Alphon.hæreſ. tit.2.Imag.lib. de idol.c.7. Tom.3.tit.19. c.157. Anſwer.to Rohite.c.13.

2 Origene when Celſus obiected that the Chriſtians did not care for altars nor images, maketh this anſwere: that the Chriſtians had images, non per impuros opifices fabricata, ſed per Dei verbum in nobis

Lib 8.cont. Cellum. nobis formata, not made by impure workemen, but formed within vs by the word of God, &c. It ſeemeth that in theſe times Chriſtians had no images, for Origen would then haue iuſtified and defended the vſe of them: The cuſtome of the Ethiopike Church is ſhewed before, err. 44. They haue certaine pictures, but wrapped vp in their veſtries, which are onely brought out vpon feſtiuall daies: neither will they haue Chriſt painted, as hee was crucified, ſaying that no man is worthy to ſee him in Aluares c. vlt. that paſſion: It ſeemeth then, that they hang not vp pictures in their Churches.

Harm. ſerm. 2. pag.49. 3. Sweueland. chap. 22. They held it an abhominable thing, to admit any images, grauen or painted in the Church, and they proue it by that place of Epiphanius before alledged.

2.Sam.5.8. 4. I wil heere alledge the teſtimony of our Doway men: who giue this marginall note vpon that place: The blind and lame ſhall not enter into the Temple: Idoles (ſay they) that haue eies, and cannot ſee, feet and cannot goe, ſhall not enter into the Church of Chriſt, &c. As though all popiſh Images bee not of their ſort, they haue eies, eares, hands, mouth, feet, and can neither ſee, heare, handle, ſpeake or goe, as it is in the Pſalme. Pſal.115.6.

THE FOVRTH ARTICLE, WHAT MANNER of Worſhip is to be giuen to Images.

The Papiſts.

46.Error. Bellarmine, who is the mouth of the reſt, ſetteth downe theſe poſitions: Firſt, that Images, though they are not properly to be worſhipped with diuine honour, neither is it ſafe ſo to teach in the hearing of the people; yet improperly they may haue the ſame worſhip, which properly belongeth to the Saint whoſe image it is, cap 23. Secondly, there is a religious worſhip properly due vnto Images, as they are conſidered in themſelues, & non ſolum vt vicem gerunt exemplaris, and not onas they repreſent another thing: Bellarm. de Imaginib. Sanctor. lib. 2 cap. 21.

Argum. Bellarmine reaſoneth thus: As the image is to that, whoſe image it is, ſo the worſhip of the Image is to the worſhip of the exemplar, patterne, or patrone thereof: but the image, ſecundum quid, after a ſort, is the thing it ſelfe, as a painted man is a man after a ſort: therefore after a ſort alſo the ſame worſhip, which is due to the thing it ſelfe, may bee giuen to the image, cap. 25.

Anſ. Firſt, he taketh that to be granted, which is in queſtion: for we denie, that an image hath any worſhip at all, and therfore it is in vaine to contend: what manner of worſhip it ſhould be. Secondly, his owne example is againſt him: for as a painted or pictured man, cannot bee ſaide to bee a man, but onely the image of a man; ſo neither can the worſhip of the thing bee giuen to the image of the thing. Thirdly, we grant, as the image is to the thing, ſo is the worſhip, &c. for both ſuch images are idolatrous, and all worſhip giuen vnto them, impious.

The Proteſtants.

WE haue ſhewed before that Images ought not to be worſhipped at all, and that all religious worſhip is due onlie vnto God: wherfore to vs this queſtion is ſuperfluous, with what religious worſhip Images are to be adored; for no religious worſhip at al is due vnto them: yet let vs vouchſafe the while, to ſee the contradictions that are amongſt them, and the abſurdities that they are driuen vnto.

Argum. 1. Our Rhemiſts confeſſe, that Images are not at all to be worſhipped with any diuine honour, Act. 17. ſect. 5. But it was decreed in the Idolatrous Councell of Nice the 2. and maintained by Thomas Aquinas, Bonauenture, Caietanus, and other Papiſts, that the image of God is to to bee worſhipped with the ſame worſhip that is due vnto God. And Bellarmine commeth not much ſhort of them, that ſaith, improprie, improperly Images may haue the ſame worſhip: as the Kings Ambaſſadour improperly is honoured as the King. I pray you how farre are theſe men from making their images gods? for they ſay they are the Lords deputies and Vicegerents, as the Ambaſſadour is for the King.

Againe, the Rhemiſts affirme, that the images of Chriſt are not to bee honoured or accounted of, but for the reſpect and relation they haue to our Sauiour, Annot. Phillip. 2. 2. So the Tridentine Councell determineth, Seſſ. 25. Honos qui eis debetur, refertur ad prototypa, quæ illa repreſentant: The honour due vnto them is to be referred vnto thoſe things which they repreſent.

Nicen. 2. action. 2. Non ipſum lignum honoratur, ſed ipſum illud, quod in ligno datur contemplandum: The wood it ſelfe is not to be honoured, but that which in the wood is offered to our contemplation. Likewiſe, Action. 3 Imagini honor exhibitus, ad ipſum prototypum referatur: The honor exhibited to the image, muſt be referred to the originall. Adrian. 1. epiſt. ad Conſtantin. Conſtat ob recordationem ſanctorum, imagines tantum pingi, venerari, coli: It is manifeſt that images are worſhipped and reuerenced only in remembrance of the Saints. But Bellarmine teacheth cleane contrary, that they haue not onely a reſpectiue honour, as repreſenting other things, but properly and in themſelues conſidered are to be worſhipped. Wee may ſee by this, how handſomely they agree together.

Argum. 2 Let vs ſee their abſurdities. Firſt, they hold that all images are not to be worſhipped alike: for they make three degrees of religious worſhip; the higheſt, which they call λατρεία, due vnto

God; the loweſt religious worſhip, which they call δουλεία, proper to Saints; the middle or meane worſhip, called by them ὑπερδουλεία as you would ſay, Super-ſeruice, to be giuen onely to the Virgin Mary. And as theſe three, Chriſt, the Virgin, the Saints doe differ, ſay they, in honour; ſo their Images accordingly muſt be diſtinguiſhed in their worſhip.

Thus it commeth about, that a Roode of wood repreſenting Chriſt, is more to be honoured, then an image of our Ladie of ſiluer; and her image, if it be but of ſtone, is more to be reuerenced then a Saints image of gold: and thus the excellencie of nature, which is giuen to theſe things by creation, is inuerted.

If it ſhall be anſwered, that a baſer mettall may be preferred before a more precious kinde, not in reſpect of the matter, but of the higher repreſentation: We reply, that all ſuch repreſentations by images are idolatrous, and therefore cannot obſcure the priuiledge of nature: ſo alſo the braſen Serpent had a good ſignification, yet when it began to be abuſed to idolatrie, Hezekiah made no better account of it, then of a piece of braſſe: and ſo he calleth it, Nehuſhtan. 2. Reg. 18.4.

Againe, whereas beſide theſe three deuiſed worſhips, which are properly due (as they ſay) to the Saints, not to their images, the images alſo haue their proper worſhips: they make three other inferiour kindes of worſhip, which doe exceede in degree, as the other ſuperiour kindes doe: ſo as Chriſt hath his λατρεία. worſhip, his image muſt haue ὑπολατρεία. his vnder-worſhip, (for wee muſt coyne new names for ſtrange deuiſes) their Lady Marie hath her ὑπερδουλεία. ſuper-ſeruice: her image muſt haue an ὑποϋπερδουλεία, an vnder-ouer-ſeruice: as the Saints haue their δουλεία, ſeruice; ſo their images muſt haue their ὑποδουλεία an vnder-ſeruice. And thus haue wee ſixe kindes of religious worſhip; as Bellarmine hath coyned them, cap. 25. and yet before the Ieſuite tolde vs but of two kindes of religious worſhip, and the third a ciuill; three in all, Lib. 1. de Sanct. beatit. cap. 12.

But the Scripture acknowledgeth one onely kinde of religious worſhip, and that due onely vnto the Lord: Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him onely ſhalt thou ſerue. And the Angell forbad Iohn to fall downe before him, giuing a rule for all religious worſhip: Worſhip God, ſaith hee, Apocal. 22.9. Matth.4.10. Apoc.22.9.

Now, if our aduerſaries deale plainly with vs, and tell vs in good ſooth, that they would not haue Images to be adored with diuine worſhip: I aske them, whether to offer incenſe be not a part of diuine worſhip? They cannot denie it: for Hezekiah therefore brake downe the braſen Serpent, becauſe the people burned incenſe to it. Seeing then the Ieſuite alloweth cenſing and burning of odours before Images, Bellarm. lib. 1. de Sanctor beatit. cap. 13. They giue vnto them diuine honour. The Ieſuites ſimple ſhift, that offering of incenſe was a ſacrifice then, and ſo part of diuine worſhip, but it is none now, is not worth the anſwere, Bellarm. lib. 2 cap. 17. 2.King.18.4.

We want not the witneſſe of the Papiſts themſelues: as Alexander. 3. p. queſt. 30. art. vltim. Durand. lib. 3. diſt. 9. qu. 2. Alphonſus à Caſtro, &c. All theſe are bold to affirme, that an Image in it ſelfe is not to be worſhipped at all.

1 The Greekes vſe a kinde of reuerence at this day to the images of Saints, but Ieremie telleth vs, that all the honour is referred to the firſt exemplars: Res eſt impia, et a Chriſti Eccleſia alieniſſima, vere et non ad aliud relate ſacras imagines adorare: It is a wicked thing, ſaith he, & farre frõ the Church of Chriſt, to worſhip ſacred images verily, and not with reference to another thing, &c. And what kind of reference this is, he telleth vs in another place: that diuers wayes haue men found out to conſerue the memorie of their benefactours, as ſepulchres, images, pillers, feſtiuall dayes: Quorum omnium vnum eſt inſtitutum, non ſinere, vt viri præclari obliuioni mandentur, &c. Of all which there is one end, not to ſuffer, that excellent men ſhould be forgotten: This is but a ciuill and hiſtoricall end of images, to keepe in remembrance the vertues of holy men departed. The Muſcouites to this day doe not adore their images at all: they yeeld a kinde of reuerence by bowing their head, not in kneeling, or vncouering the head, which reuerence they ſhew to other holy things, they touch not the Goſpels, with their hands, Niſi caput prius multoties inclinando, But firſt bowing their head often: And Faber in his report giueth this reaſon, why they adore not images: becauſe there is no man, which is ignorant, A lege prohibitum eſſe, ne veneremur lapides, That it is forbidden by the law, that we ſhould worſhip ſtones. Cenſur. Oriental.c.21. Gaguin. de relig. Muſcou. Faber de relig. Muſcou.

2 The Aethiopians at this day, doe not giue adoration to their images: for they bring them ſeldome into the peoples ſight: neither doe they vſe any reſtauration or amending of the images defaced or worne out vpon the Church wals: yet a kinde of reuerence they ſhew, as to other things ordained for ſacred vſe: as the Eccleſiaſticall perſons doe put off their hoſe and ſhooes, when they come into the Church, as God commanded Moſes. Exod. 3. And if any paſſe by a Church being on horſebacke, he lighteth downe, and boweth himſelfe till he be paſt it. Aluares deſcrip. Æthiop. c.vltim.

3 The reformed Churches condemne all worſhip of images, and therefore it is needleſſe for them to diſpute, what kinde of adoration, ſhould be yeelded vnto them: as confeſſion of Saxonie, artic. 21. calleth adoration of images a foule ſuperſtition: Bohemia cap. 17. Images are not to be worſhipped with any honour or affection of ſpirit.

4 The Latine Church is of ſundry opinions concerning the manner of worſhiping images. 1. Gregorie in his time allowed images to be made, but onely for hiſtoricall remembrance of things done: Quod legentib. ſcriptura, hoc idiotis præſtat pictura intuentib. As writing is to the reader, ſo a picture Greg. epiſt. lib. 7. epiſt. 7.

to the ignorant beholder,&c. 2. Thom.Aquin. defendeth, that an image muſt be worſhipped with the ſame honour, which is due vnto the perſon whoſe image it is; as the Crucifixe with the ſame honour, that Chriſt hath: And Azarius the Ieſuite confeſſeth, that this is the conſtant opinion of the ſchoolemen. 3. But Bellarmine dare not goe ſo farre, he ſaith, that images, improprie, improperly, and accidentally may be worſhipped, cultu latria, with diuine worſhip. c.23. 4. Other yet better aduiſed, denie diuine worſhip in any ſenſe to be exhibited vnto images: howſoeuer it bee conſidered, though as an image, and ſigne of another thing, Res eſt inſenſibilis et creatura. It is a thing without ſenſe and a creature, to the which the adoration called λατρεία, is not to be exhibited: Gabriel Beel hee alloweth no diuine worſhip in any ſenſe, but that inferiour kinde, called δουλεία ſeruice. 5. But Wicelius a deuoted Romaniſt, denieth this kinde of worſhip alſo. It grieueth me (ſaith hee) that vnder pretext I know not of what (dulia) it is affirmed, that one may, and ought to honour with adoration, the Saints and their images. 6. Our Doway men further acknowledge, that no honour is due to the image, but vnto him, whoſe image it is: as they giue this note in the margen, Chriſt and Saints are honoured in their images: and in the annotation: The honour is not done to the image for it ſelfe, but at the preſence of the image to Chriſt, or Saint, whoſe image it is, &c. They differ from other Papiſts, allowing no honour to the image for it ſelfe, but with relation to the Saint, whoſe image it is. Thus they wearie themſelues with their brainſicke and braineleſſe inuentions.

THE SECOND PART OF THIS QVESTION, concerning the ſigne of the Croſſe.

THis part alſo is deuided into certaine points or articles.

1 Of the honour due to the true Croſſe of Chriſt, whereon he ſuffered.
2 Of the image of the Croſſe.
3 Of the ſigne of the Croſſe in the forehead, or made otherwiſe with the hand.
4 Of the power and efficacie of the Croſſe.

THE FIRST ARTICLE, OF THE TRVE Croſſe whereon our Sauiour ſuffered.

The Papiſts.

47.Error.

THe wood of the Croſſe, both the whole and euery piece thereof (ſay they) is worthie of great worſhip and reuerence: and therefore it hath beene worthily viſited in pilgrimages, honoured with feſtiuall daies, reſerued with all deuotion in times paſt, Rhemiſt.annot Ioh.19.ſect.2.

*Argum.*1. It is highly ſanctified, by the touching, bearing, and oblation of the ſacred bodie of Chriſt, the Altar of that ſupreme ſacrifice, and inſtrument of our redemption: Ergo, to be worſhipped, Rhemiſt.ibid.Bellarm.lib.2.de Imagin.cap.27.

Anſwere. If therefore it was holy becauſe it touched the body of Chriſt, and was an inſtrument of his death: by the ſame reaſon, the nayles that pierced him, the ſpeare that gored his ſide, the tormenters that crucified, Iudas that betrayed and kiſſed him: All theſe ſhould alſo bee honoured and worſhipped, that handled and touched him, and were inſtruments, occaſions, and procurers of his death.

Againe, admit it was holy, becauſe of Chriſts body, it was holy no otherwiſe then the ground where the Angell appeared to Moſes, Exod.3. and to Ioſua chap.5. which Bellarmine elſe-where confeſſeth, was holy, ob præſentiam angeli, becauſe of the preſence of the Angell: that is, it continued not alwaies holy, but was for that inſtant: ſo the Croſſe was holy, becauſe of the neereneſſe & preſence of Chriſts body, but this holineſſe remained not afterward.

*Argum.*2. The Croſſe of Chriſt was found out, ſay they, in Conſtantines time the great, by a ſtrange miracle: for there were three Croſſes digged vp, which had beene a long time buried in the earth: the two Croſſes vpon the which the two theeues ſuffered; the third whereon our Sauiour hung: They brought them all three to a woman that then lay very ſicke, they laid the two firſt to her, and ſhee remained as ſhe was; then they applied the third, and ſhe was preſently made whole, Bellarm.ex Ruffino: Ergo, the Croſſe is holy and to be worſhipped.

Anſwere. The inuention of the Croſſe by Helena Conſtantines mother, ſeemeth to be a forged and fabulous ſtorie.

1 Euſebius that writeth of the life of Conſtantine, and the acts of Helena, and regiſtreth diuers matters of leſſe importance, yea hee ſheweth how the Mount Caluarie, where the Heathen had built idolatrous Temples, was purged, and in that place (ſay they) the Croſſe was found; yet he maketh no mention at all of the inuention of the Croſſe: which is very like he would not haue omitted, if there had beene any ſuch thing.

2 The moſt ancient author that writeth of this matter, is Ambroſe, de obitu Theodoſij, which oration Eraſmus thinketh to be forged in Ambroſes name.

3 There is great diſagreement amongſt writers about this ſtorie. Ambroſe ſaith, the Croſſe was knowne by the title that Pilate faſtened to it. Sozomenus and Nicephorus ſay, the letters were worne out, and it could not be diſcerned by the title. Paulinus ſaith, the way to diſcerne it, was reuealed to Helena: Ruffinus aſcribeth the deuice to Macarius Biſhop of Ieruſalem: Paulinus ſaith, it was knowne by raiſing vp a dead man to life: Ruffinus, by reſtoring a ſicke woman to health, Fulk. annot. Iohn.19.ſect.2. Thus we ſee of what ſmall credit this ſtorie is. And be it granted, that there might be ſome ſuch thing found: yet they muſt bring better proofe for that miraculous inuention, before wee will beleeue it.

The Proteſtants.

WE are not taught any where in the word of God, to giue any religious worſhip to any creature, nor to adore ſtockes and ſtones, no nor the very Croſſe it ſelfe, whereon Chriſt was crucified, if it were now to be ſeene or had.

Argum.1. If there had belonged vnto the Church any religious care of it, the Apoſtles would (no doubt) haue procured the ſafe keeping thereof, and not haue ſuffered the Church to want it 300. yeeres: and it had beene an eaſier ſute for Ioſeph and Nicodemus to begge the Croſſe, then the bodie of Ieſus.

Argum.2. If the Croſſe were to be adored, wee are vncertaine which it is, and where to be had; and ſo might worſhip a common piece of wood, for the wood of the Croſſe: for there is no doubt, but this relique is forged and counterfeited as the reſt be. Euagrius ſaith, the Croſſe was at Apamea: Ruffinus, that it was left at Ieruſalem, and that Helena ſent a piece of it to Conſtantinople: and in manie other places there are pieces of the Croſſe to be ſeene, which if they were all laid together (as Eraſmus ſaith) would fill a ſhip: for why? Paulinus witneſſeth, that the Croſſe remaineth whole at Ieruſalem, as though it had beene neuer touched, though innumerable pieces be daily cut off from it, at the requeſt of men. But this fable that goeth vnder the name of Paulinus, the Papiſts themſelues are aſhamed of.

But if the true and right Croſſe were to bee had; why might it not bee ſerued, if people began to abuſe it to idolatrie, as Hezekiah ſerued the braſen ſerpent? he brake it in pieces, when the people began to make an Idoll of it.

Auguſtine ſaith, Chriſtus ambulauit in mari, &c. Chriſt walked in the Sea, to ſhew vs that our way muſt be through the Sea: but thou, becauſe thou canſt not walke in the Sea, muſt ſaile in a ſhip, and be caried in a piece of wood: Beleeue in him that was crucified for thee: and a little before, no man can paſſe the ſea of this world, but being borne vp with the Croſſe of Chriſt.

Tractat.2. in Ioann.

Here Auguſtine maketh no reckoning of the wood of the Croſſe, which was eaſier to be had in his dayes, then euer ſince, but aſcribed all to faith and beliefe in Chriſt crucified.

Gelaſius decret. de Apocryphis, writeth thus, Scriptura de inuentione crucis dominicæ, nouellæ quadam relationes ſunt, & alia de inuentione capitis Iohannis Baptiſtæ, &c. The writings of the inuention of the Croſſe are but new deuiſed reports, and of the inuention of Iohn Baptiſts head: and therefore he giueth Chriſtians warning to take heede how they reade them, &c. This is the iudgement of a Biſhop of Rome, as touching the finding out of the Croſſe, which hee iudgeth to be a fabulous report: this decree Gratian hath remembred, part.1.15.cap.3.

The teſtimonie of Maſter Hawkes holy Martyr is ſingular: If the Croſſe were of ſuch profit vnto vs, as you ſay, why did not Chriſts diſciples take it vp and ſet it on a pole, and carrie it in proceſſion, with (ſalue feſta dies?) Chadſey: It was taken vp. Hawkes: Who tooke it vp? Helene, as you ſay, for ſhe ſent a piece of it to a place of Religion, where I was with the viſitors, when that houſe was ſuppreſſed, and the piece of the holy Croſſe (which they had in ſuch eſtimation) being called for, it was found to be but a piece of a lath, couered ouer with copper, and double gilt, as though it had beene cleane gold: *Fox.*p.1589.col.2. Were they not well occupied now, that thus deluded the people, giuing them ſuch Croſſes to be worſhipped?

To admit that narration of the inuention of the Croſſe by Helena Conſtantines mother. 1. It was not their meaning to haue it adored: Socrates writeth, that Helena did keepe part of it in a ſiluer ſheath or box at Ieruſalem, for a monument for them that were deſirous to ſee it: and ſent the other part to Conſtantine, who put it within his owne ſtatua, or image at Conſtantinople: his intent was not to haue it worſhipped, vnleſſe his image ſhould be adored withall, which groſſe idolatrie he was farre from: And it may ſeeme alſo probable, that the parcels of the Croſſe, was not ſo carefully kept at Ieruſalem, which Helena left there: for then Theodoſius the younger needed not to haue ſent a golden Croſſe to haue beene ſet vp in mount Caluarie in ſtead thereof, if it be true, that Nicephorus writeth. And what reuerence they would haue yeelded to the Croſſe, whereon Chriſt ſuffered, may bee gathered out of Damaſcene, who would haue the ſpeare, nailes, the caue, the ſepulchre, the maunger, the place it ſelfe Golgotha, and all things, that touched Chriſts bodie, to bee adored, as well as the wood of the Croſſe: but I hope no man is ſo abſurd, to thinke, that the ſcourge, the hammer, the chaines, the cordes, and other inſtruments of Chriſts death, are to be adored: then adore alſo the villaines and hangmen, which ſcourged him, and nailed him to the Croſſe.

πάντα τὰ τῷ Θεῷ ἀνακείμενα. lib.4. de fid.c.12.

2. Helena the Regent of Æthiopia, during the minoritie of Dauid the Emperour, writeth vnto Emmanuell King of Portugall, that ſhee had ſent him a piece of the wood of the Croſſe, whereon

Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop.

Chriſt hanged, which was ſent her from Ieruſalem, whereof ſhe had made two Croſſes, one ſhe ſent him, the other ſhee kept: the wood thereof was blacke, &c. whether this were a part of the Croſſe, whereon Chriſt ſuffered, is not the queſtion, (it is more like it was not) but howſoeuer the Aethiopians would not adore it: for their manner is to adore no images, as is ſhewed in the former queſtion the laſt part, and ſo neither the image or ſigne of the Croſſe.

3 Confeſſion of Bohemia, c. 17, It is by no meanes to be ſuffered, that the honour of the Lamb Chriſt our Lord, and things belonging to him, and due to him alone, and appertaining to the proper and true Prieſthood of his nature, ſhould be transferred to them, &c. That is, to Saints, and by the ſame reaſon, that worſhip is not due to the Croſſe, which belongeth onely to Chriſt.

Annot. in Mat. 23. dedicated to Leo the 10.

4 Eraſmus ſaith, Fragmentula ligni crucis tam multa, vt ſi in aceruum redigant, vix vna nauis oneraria vehat: The fragments of the wood of the Croſſe are ſo many, that if they were gathered to one heape, a ſhip of burden would ſcarce carrie them. The wood of the Croſſe then being forged in ſo many places, how can worſhip be yeelded vnto it, without great idolatrie?

THE SECOND ARTICLE, OF THE Image of the Croſſe or Crucifixe.

The Papiſts.

48. Error.

THe Image of Chriſt vpon the Croſſe, whether painted, carued, or grauen, we ſee is had in great honour amongſt our aduerſaries: They kneele downe before their Crucifixe, weare it in their boſomes next to their heart, carrie it in their iourneyes, ſet it vp to be adored in their Churches.

Argum. 1. As adoration was done vnto God in old time, at and before the Arke and Tabernacle; ſo it may be done now, at, or before a Crucifixe, relique, image, Rhemiſt. annot. Heb. 11. ſect. 9.

Anſw. 1. It is not all one to worſhip God at or before a thing, as to worſhip and adore the thing: the Iſraelites worſhipped God, in, at or before the Tabernacle; yet did they not worſhip the Tabernacle, as you doe the Crucifixe.

2 They might worſhip God before the Arke, becauſe they were commanded ſo to doe: but it is not lawfull to fall downe before a Crucifixe, becauſe all ſuch Images are flatly in the ſecond commandement forbidden.

Argum. 2. The ſigne of the Croſſe appeared to Conſtantine in the ayre, he cauſed the Croſſe to be caried before him as an Enſigne in battaile: When the Iewes had leaue of Iulian to build the Temple, there were Croſſes ſeene euery where in their garments, and many ſuch apparitions haue there beene of the Croſſe: Ergo, it is to be honoured and worſhipped, Bellarm. cap. 28.

Anſw. 1. What if Conſtantine cauſed the Croſſe to be carried before him, ſtamped it in his coyne, ſet vp his picture with the Croſſe in his hand? all this we grant was done, and may be done againe: It was but a ciuill, no religious vſe of the Croſſe: He worſhipped it not, vnleſſe you will ſay, he ſet vp his owne Image with the Croſſe in his hand to be worſhipped.

2 As for the apparitions of the Croſſe (though we thinke many of them to be forged) yet we denie not, but that the Lord hath, and may yet ſhew, what ſignes and tokens it pleaſeth him in the heauen, and the earth: yet it followeth not, that the ſigne of the Croſſe ſhould therefore be worſhipped, becauſe it was ſhewed to Conſtantine, no more then other ſignes and ſtrange ſights, that many times appeare in the ayre.

For the other apparition of Croſſes in the Iewes garments, we will requite it with another, and yet you ſhall gaine nothing by it. Anno 1505. vnder the raigne of the Emperour Maximilian, there appeared diuers tokens of bloodie Croſſes, the nayles, the ſpunge, the ſpeare, and other ſignes of Chriſts paſſion, in the garments of men and women, yea in their rockes, while they were a ſpinning, reported by Francis Mirandula, Carion, Functius, Melancton, Flaccius: But the Popiſh Chronologers make no mention of it, as Chriſtianus Maſſeus, and others of that profeſſion. As the Croſſes in the Iewes garments, that went about to eſtabliſh their ceremonies againe, did ſhew, that doe what they could, the Goſpell, that is, the preaching of his Croſſe, ſhould take place, as it did: ſo theſe ſignes in Germanie did portend, that the Goſpell in Germany ſhould be preached, though the Papiſts ſtriued neuer ſo much againſt it. But it is a farre fetcht concluſion to inferre hereupon, that the ſigne or Image of the Croſſe is to be adored.

The Proteſtants.

THe image of the Croſſe of Chriſt, is neither to be painted, carued, grauen, for any religious vſe, not to be adored or worſhipped: but men ſo doing do fall into the grieuous and high offence and ſinne of Idolatrie. And yet we grant, that the ſigne of the Croſſe is not to be deſpiſed, ſcorned or contemned: and therefore it was enacted by Theodoſ. that whoſoeuer did picture the Croſſe vpon the ground, or pauement, that is, in contempt of it, ſhould be grieuouſly puniſhed, Cod. lib. 1. tit. 11. leg. 1. The like is decreed Trull. Synod. can. 73. Likewiſe Honorius made a law, that the Iewes ſhould not burne the ſigne or picture of the Croſſe, lib. 1. tit. 12. leg. 10. but it followeth not, the ſigne of the Croſſe muſt not be deſpiſed, or contemned, therefore it is to bee worſhipped: for though the image of the Prince be not of the ſubiects to be worſhipped, yet there is no good ſubiect, that will rend it in pieces, or deface it: wherefore that the ſigne of the Croſſe is not to be adored, thus it may appeare.

*Argum.*1. The Scripture neuer calleth the Croſſe, whereon Chriſt ſuffered, the holy Croſſe, as the Papiſts doe, but rather curſed: for S. Paul proueth that Chriſt became accurſed for vs, becauſe he died vpon the Croſſe, according to the Scripture, Curſed is euery one that hangeth on a tree. How then is it now honoured, which was then accurſed? And if all Croſſes are worthie honour, becauſe of Chriſt his Croſſe, then why not all nayles, and ſpeares? for with them hee was pierced; all thornes alſo, becauſe of his crowne of thornes: yea, and all horſe-mangers too, becauſe hee was laid in a Cribbe?

Bellarmine anſwereth, that we worſhip all Croſſes, becauſe they are all Images of Chriſts Croſſe: ſo are not all ſpeares, and thornes, &c. *cap.*30.

Contra. As there were other ſpeares and thornes, &c. then thoſe wherewith Chriſt was crucified; ſo were there alſo other Croſſes, then that, vpon the which hee ſuffered: for S. Peter and S. Andrew were crucified, and tormented vpon the Croſſe: and S. Ambroſe ſaith, Aliæ cruces nihil mihi proſunt, ſola crux Chriſti mihi vtilis eſt, &c. Other croſſes doe nothing profit me, only Chriſts Croſſe is profitable vnto me, lib.6.in Luc. Therefore all Croſſes are not images of Chriſts Croſſe: ſo then hee hath anſwered iuſt nothing.

*Argum.*2. They are vncertaine of what faſhion the Croſſe of Chriſt was, whether like the Greeke letter, τ. or this letter, x. or the Greeke TAV. T. or of this faſhion, †. or of this, ✱. which is the vſuall forme of their Croſſes: how then dare they worſhip that which they know not, and are vncertaine of?

3 All thoſe reaſons which wee brought before againſt the worſhipping of Images, *part.*1.*huius quaſt.articul.*3. may be vrged againſt the adoration of Crucifixes. In Pſal.118. Concion.26.

Auguſtine thus writeth, Hanc intuentes ſalutiferam crucem, omne calumniantium ſuperborum virus expellimus: By beholding this helpfull, or healthfull croſſe, we are able to auoid the poyſon of all proud venemous cauillers. He ſpeaketh not of any Crucifix that they had in ſight, but of the fruitfull meditation of the paſſion of Chriſt: as he ſaith a little before, Dum vigilantiſſima & diligentiſſima pietate Chriſtus crucifixus attenditur: When with diligent and watchfull and godly attention we conſider Chriſt crucified. Loe, this was Auguſtines Crucifixe, to meditate vpon the death of Chriſt.

Though the picture of Chriſt crucified haue been vſed of ancient time, yet was it not then adored, but put onely to a ciuill vſe, to call to remembrance the ſtorie of Chriſts paſſion. *Concil. Nicen.*2. *action.*2. Tharaſius the Preſident ſaith thus, Epiſtol. ad Antiochen. Epiſcop. Agnus, qui peccata mundi ſuſtulit iuxta humanam effigiem configuratus erigitur, &c. The Lambe of God, which taketh away the ſinnes of the world, is figured in his humanitie, that wee may be drawne to the memorie of his incarnation, and may be lead as by the hand, to thinke of his moſt holeſome death and paſſion.

*Action*4. of the ſame Councell, Germanus writeth thus, Epiſtol. ad Thomam Epiſcop. Claudiopol. Apud Chriſtianos ſanctorum virorum imagines nihil aliud ſunt, quam fortitudinis eorum delineatio, &c. Among Chriſtians the pictures of holy men are to no end elſe, but to deſcribe their fortitude and excellent vertue, and to admoniſh vs to glorifie and praiſe God for them. Quæ hiſtorica narratio per auditum docet, ea tacens pictura per imitationem oſtendit: That which in hiſtorie is taught by hearing, in picture is ſhewed by imitation, &c. Here is no mention made of any worſhipping of Images, Croſſes, or Crucifixes: but the vſe of pictures only is to bring the hiſtorie to remembrance.

We haue alſo the ſeale of Martyrs: Thomas Man condemned for that he ſaid he would not beleeue in the Crucifixe, neither worſhip it, pag.815.col,2.artic.7. Franciſcus San Romanus martyred at Burges in Spaine, anno 1540. for refuſing to doe homage to a wooden Croſſe, ſaying, it was not the manner of Chriſtians to worſhip wood, pag.930. Pag.746.1.89.

1 We haue ſeene the ancient iudgement and practiſe of the Greeke Church, out of the 2. Nicene Councell.

2 The Aethiopians to this day will not haue Ieſus Chriſt painted, as he was crucified, ſaying, that no man is worthie to ſee him in that paſſion. Aluares deſcrip. Æthiop. cap.vltim.

3 Wittemberg, confeſſ.35. they condemne the carrying about of banners and croſſes, to ſignifie the victorie of Chriſt vpon the Croſſe. Harm.ſect.17. pag.538.

4 Gregorie allowed images only for repreſentation, and hiſtoricall inſtruction: Aliud eſt picturam adorare, aliud per picturæ hiſtoriam quid ſit adorandum addiſcere, &c. It is one thing to adore a picture, another by an hiſtoricall picture to learne what is to be adored. Lib.9.epiſt.9.

THE THIRD ARTICLE, OF THE SIGNE OF THE Croſſe in the forehead, or made ouer any thing with the hand.

The Papiſts.

THey ſay, it is an holy and venerable ſigne, and meete to be vſed, to croſſe the forehead, and other parts, to bleſſe themſelues and their meates with croſſing and ſuch like, Rhemiſt. 49.Error.

*Argum.*1. Iacob croſſed his hands when he bleſſed his ſonnes, Gen.48.14. it is like our Sauiour did lift vp his hands in the forme of the croſſe, when he bleſſed. It is a conuenient memoriall of the death of Chriſt: and therefore to be vſed, *Rhemiſt.annot.Luk.*24.*ſect.*5. The Doway tranſlators vrge alſo the croſſing of Iacobs hands vpon that place, pag.146.

*Anſw.*1. Iacob laid his hands after that forme, becauſe of the preſent occaſion: for the younger ſonne that ſhould be the greater, was placed at his left hand, and the elder at the right.

2 Seeing the Scripture expreſſeth not in what manner Chriſt lifted vp his hands, it is great preſumption for you to ſay, it was done in the ſimilitude of the Croſſe.

3 How can it be a conuenient memoriall of Chriſts death, being neither ordained of Chriſt, nor taught by his Apoſtles ſo to be?

Epheſ.9.4.

*Argum.*2. Ezech.9.4. The Angell is commanded to ſigne with Tau, the foreheads of thoſe which mourned, &c. this, ſaith Bellarmine, was none other then the ſigne of the Croſſe, cap. 29.

Anſw. Firſt, though the word Tau, there vſed, be the name of an Hebrew letter, yet it ſignifieth a ſigne, and is ſo tranſlated by the Septuagint, σημεῖον, giue them, or marke them with a ſigne in their foreheads. Secondly, the Hebrew Tau, hath this forme ת, though in the Greeke language it hath another faſhion, yet this figure hath no affinitie with the ſigne of the Croſſe: wherefore they haue gained nothing, though it be granted, that they were marked with Tau. Thirdly, this ſigne, which the Angell maketh, none but the godly receiue, and they are all deliuered from deſtruction: but many a wicked and reprobate man is marked with the ſigne of the Croſſe: Ergo, this was no ſuch ſigne.

Apoc 7.3.

*Argum.*3. Apocal.7.3. Hurt not the earth, till wee haue ſealed the ſeruants of God in their forehead: This is the ſigne of the Croſſe, Rhemiſt ibid. Bellarm. cap. 29.

Anſw. It is the ſigne proper to Gods elect, and therefore not the ſigne of the Croſſe, which many reprobates haue receiued. Let them heare their owne expoſitors; Bruno, in 2. ad Timoth. 2. thus writeth, Deum ſuos conſignare, &c. That as a Captaine giueth his ſouldiers ſome ſigne, whereby they are knowne: ſo God giueth his a ſigne, which the diuell ſeeing, leaueth them, as not appertaining to him; Hoc ſignum eſſe diuinam electionem, &c. This ſigne is the diuine election: and Anſelme vpon theſe words 2. Timoth. 2. God knoweth who are his: Hoc cordi ſuo bonus impreſſum ſignum: let a man print this ſigne in his heart, and ſay to himſelfe, what doth it profit me, to ſeeme outwardly iuſt, and bee inwardly wicked? And then he further ſaith, Talis cogitatio eſt diuini ſigilli impreſſio: Such a cogitation is an impreſſion of this ſigne: And this is the ſigne which the elect are marked with.

Our Doway countrimen come in here alſo with their verdict: Is not the forme of the croſſe as conuenient a ſigne to put Chriſtians in minde, how our Sauiour redeemed vs, as thoſe ſtones were to the Iewes, how God brought their fathers out of Iordan. Annot. in Ioſua. 4.6.

*Anſw.*1. Thoſe ſtones were ſet vp by Gods ſpeciall commandement: the like warrant cannot be ſhewed for the ſigne of the Croſſe. 2. Thoſe ſtones were vſed only for a remembrance of that benefit, and Croſſes alſo may haue a ciuill vſe, to be ſet vp in ſtreamers and banners, and ſuch like: but what is this to the adoration of the Croſſe, and putting of confidence in the externall ſigne?

The Proteſtants.

Though wee finde that the ſigne of the Croſſe hath been of ancient time vſed in Baptiſme, and is now in ſome reformed Churches without popiſh ſuperſtition: yet this ridiculous and ſuperſtitious abuſe of the ſigne of the Croſſe, which is common and vſuall among the Papiſts, to croſſe themſelues, their foreheads, their eyes, mouth, lippes, to croſſe themſelues going forth, and returning home, thinking thereby to be ſufficiently ſhended and preſerued from euill, wee doe vtterly condemne, and haue worthily aboliſhed.

1.Cor.1.17.
Philip.3.18.
Galath.6.14.
Coloſſ.3.8.

*Argum.*1. This cuſtome of croſſing hath no warrant from Scripture, neither was practiſed by the Apoſtles. Yet S. Paul ſpeaketh of diuers croſſes, as hee calleth the fruite and efficacie of Chriſts death the croſſe of Chriſt. Alſo the croſſe is taken for the Goſpell which is the preaching of the Croſſe, enemies to the croſſe of Chriſt, that is, his Goſpell. The Croſſe is alſo taken for the affliction that followeth the Goſpell: I reioyce in the croſſe of Chriſt. But of any ſuch ſigne of the croſſe to be made, the Apoſtle no where ſpeaketh: wherefore hauing no warrant in the word, it is a tradition of men, and therefore not after Chriſt. This is alſo confeſſed in their owne Canons, that this vſe of ſigning with the Croſſe hath no warrant in the word: *Decret. p.*1. diſtinct. 11. *c.*5. Quæ Scriptura ſalutiferæ crucis ſignaculo, &c. What Scripture doth teach vs to ſigne with the moſt holeſome ſigne of the Croſſe, &c.

*Cod. lib.*9. *tit.*47. *leg.*17. Conſtant. Nemo eſt ſignandus in fronte, nemo in facie ſcribatur: No man muſt be ſigned in the forehead, or marked in the face. But it will be here replied, that this law ſpeaketh againſt the marking and marring of their faces, that were puniſhed and condemned to the mettall mines. Anſw. I grant it is ſo: but if there were ſuch vertue in the ſigne of the Croſſe, why might not a brand of the Croſſe in the forehead be as ſafe a defence, as the making of a croſſe with a finger? but this law ſpeaketh againſt all ſuch ſigning and marking of the forehead, with what markes ſoeuer.

Valentinus the Heretike was the firſt that made any great account of it, *Irenæus lib.*1. *cap.*1. therefore not to be vſed amongſt Chriſtians. Nos ab alienis noſtræ fidei demonſtrationes non recipimus: We therefore will not borrow demonſtrations of our faith from ſtrangers and aliens, *Nicen.*2. *action.*5. ſuch as Heretikes are.

Matth.23.5.
*Numb.15.31
Deut.c.6,v.8.
In Iohn. tract.43.

*Argum.*2. Matth.23.5. Chriſt reprooueth the Phariſies for their phylacteries, that is, certaine writings of the law in parchment, which they bound to their foreheads, and for their broad fringes, which were notwithſtanding commanded by the *law. If our Sauiour reprooued them for abuſing the things rightly inſtituted at the firſt: much more worthie of blame is the ſuperſtition of Chriſtians that hath no ground nor warrant at all.

Auguſtine ſaith, Chriſtus elegit, vt in cruce penderet, vt ipſam crucem in cordibus fidelium figeret: Chriſt made choiſe of that kinde of death to hang vpon the Croſſe, that his Croſſe might be fixed in faithfull mens hearts: he ſaith not in frontibus, in the forehead, though in ſome editions that word be foiſted into the text, but in cordibus, in their hearts: and this to be the true reading, appeareth by the words following, vt dicat Chriſtianus, &c. that a Chriſtian may ſay, farre be it from me to glorie but in the croſſe of our Lord Ieſus: but this he doth which hath the croſſe of Chriſt fixed in his heart, not in his forehead.

1 The Muſcouites which follow the Greeke Church doe much differ herein from the Latines: for as they abhorre all images though of the Crucifixe, being of their making: ſo alſo they vſe to croſſe themſelues after another manner: in formam crucis punctis tangunt, &c. they touch their forehead, then their breaſt, on the right ſide and on the left, with points, pricks or dottes in the forme of a croſſe, and whoſoeuer ſigneth himſelfe otherwiſe with the croſſe, they count him an heretike. Thus variable are theſe ſuperſtitious croſſe-makers, in their fancies and toyes. Sacran.Elucid. cap.2.& 7. Guagnin.de relig Muſcou.

2 Dauid Emperour of Aethiopia, thus writeth to Emmanuel King of Portugall: I took great pleaſure, cum pectora nuntiorum veſtrorum crucibus inſignita conſpicerem, &c. when I ſaw the breaſts of your meſſengers ſigned with the croſſe, and afterward found by queſtioning with them that they held the Chriſtian faith, &c. This was but a ciuill vſe of the croſſe, which ſouldiers and trauellers may take vp to be diſcerned by, as the place and time may require. Damianus de morib.Æthiop.

3 The reformed Churches ſay, that vertue and efficacie is not to be tied to any creature at all, but is to be diſpenſed by the free fauour of God. Heluetia former confeſſ.artic.15. And againe, artic.10. Our truſt ought not to reſt in outward ſignes: They ſpeake of the ſacramentall ſignes, much leſſe to be aſcribed to the ſigne of the croſſe, which is no ſacrament. Harm.ſect.11. pag.347.

See the Decrees, Anſelme and Bruno alleaged before.

THE FOVRTH ARTICLE, OF THE POWER and efficacie of the Croſſe.

The Papiſts.

THe ſigne of the Croſſe (ſay they) hath two notable and powerfull effects: one is to driue away diuels and euill ſpirits, to heale and cure diſeaſes: the other is to ſanctifie and bleſſe creatures, as our meates and drinkes, which is done by the ſigne of the Croſſe, Rhemiſt. 1.Tim.4. ſect.12.13. Bellarm.cap.30. 50.Error.

*Argum.*1. That the ſigne of the Croſſe, euen ex opere operato, as Bellarmine ſaith, by the very act, and making of the ſigne, yea by a Iew, Infidell or Pagan, hath power to driue away the diuell, they would thus proue it: Dauid by his Harpe droue away the euill ſpirit from Saul: the Angell did the like with the fiſhes liuer, in the ſtorie of Tobie: Rhemiſt. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, wee muſt haue better Scriptures then Apocryphall ſtories to build our faith vpon: The good Angels of God haue power from God to driue away euill ſpirits, though they vſe no externall ſignes: yet it followeth not, that euery man may doe that which is granted to the Angels, though we ſhould admit the ſtorie. Secondly, Dauid not ſo much by the ſound of his Harpe refreſhed Saul, as by his godly ſongs and muſicke chaſed away the ſpirit: neither did the euill ſpirit depart from him, but hee for the while found ſome eaſe; his phantaſticall and melancholy fits which Satan wrought vpon, being by his pleaſant harmonie ſomewhat alaied. This alſo your owne gloſſe confeſſeth, Decr. p.2.cauſ.33.diſtinct.1.cap.60. Saul non poterat, &c. Saul could not returne to his right minde, Niſi coram eo Dauid pſalleret: vnleſſe Dauid did ſing before him: It was not then the ſound, but the ſong that helped Saul. Thirdly, all this being granted, yet haue they not proued by theſe examples, that Pagans and Infidels, by the ſigne of the Croſſe, may chaſe away euill ſpirits.

*Argum.*2. That things are hallowed and bleſſed by the ſigne of the Croſſe, they alſo proue it, becauſe the Croſſe being an holy ſigne in it ſelfe, doth communicate holines vnto the things ſigned with the Croſſe. Bellarm.cap.30. 51.Error.

Anſw. Firſt, wee deny the ſigne of the Croſſe, as they vſe it, to be an holy, but rather a ſuperſtitious and deceiueable ceremonie. Secondly, though it were holy, yet being abuſed, it cannot transferre any holines to other things: for in the law the ſacrifices of the wicked, though they lay vpon the Altar, were not thereby ſanctified, but were an abomination, being not offered in a right faith. Nay there is no outward ceremonie ſo holy, as that it can impart the holines to another thing; as it is ſhewed Hagg.2.13. Though a man did beare holy fleſh in the skirt of his garmēt, yet was it not thereby holy.

The Proteſtants.

FIrſt, it is a deceitfull toy that they beare the people in hand: the diuell at the ſigne of the Croſſe will flie away: For the weapons of our warfare (ſaith S. Paul) are not carnall, but the ſigne of the Croſſe is an externall and carnall, no ſpirituall weapon: and therefore preuaileth not againſt ſpirituall powers. The diuell would not giue place when Ieſus and Paul were named, much leſſe at the ſigne of the Croſſe. 2.Cor.10.4. Act.19.15.

Auguſtine ſaith: Signum Chriſti expellit exterminatorem, ſi cor noſtrum recipiat ſaluatorem; The ſigne of Chriſt doth expell the deſtroyer, when our heart receiueth our Sauiour: *Tractat.in Iohan.*50. So it is not the ſigne in the forehead, but the faith of the heart, that maketh Satan afraid: if ſometime he auoid when men ſigne themſelues, he is diſpoſed to play with them, that he may deceiue them more ſtrongly.

1.Tim.4.5. Secondly, wee know no ſuch meanes to ſanctifie creatures by: They are bleſſed and ſanctified for our vſes (as S.Paul ſaith) by the word and prayer, 1.Tim.4. Prayer therefore without warrant of the word is but preſumption. The Greeke Scholia, by the Word, vnderſtand ſermonem, qui eſt in gratiarum actione, the thankeſgiuing vſed before meate, and by prayer, Fidelium precem, the requeſts of the faithfull, whereby meates are ſanctified: Here is no mention at all of the Croſſe. They therefore hauing no word for their ſuperſtitious croſſings, inuocations, incantations, popiſh bleſſings, doe deceiue themſelues and others, in thinking that the creatures in ſuch order are ſanctified vnto them.

Nicen.2.action.6.tom.3. this reaſon was vſed againſt Images, and it may very well ſerue alſo againſt the ſigne of the Croſſe: Neque precationem vllam, qua ſanctificari poſſet, imago habet, ſed manet communis & inhonorata vt pictor eam abſoluit: An image hath no forme of prayer appointed, whereby it ſhould be ſanctified, but remaineth prophane and vnholy, as it commeth from the workemans hand, &c. ſo may we ſay of the ſigne of the Croſſe, that it cannot ſanctifie, vnleſſe it be firſt ſanctified it ſelfe; it cannot be ſanctified without prayer of faith, and faith is built vpon the word: ſuch ſanctification by prayer, the ſigne of the Croſſe hath none. Ergo.

Concil. Laodicen.can.32. Non oportet hæreticorum benedictiones accipere, quia maledictiones magis ſunt, quam benedictiones: We muſt not receiue the bleſſings of heretikes, becauſe they are curſes rather then bleſſings: yet Bellarmine ſaith, there is vertue in the ſigne of the Croſſe made by a Iew, Pagan, Infidell, or whoſoeuer: but this Councell ſaith, that the benedictions of ſuch are maledictions.

Wherefore we doubt not to conclude, that the ſigne of the Croſſe, as it is vſed by Papiſts, is a ſuperſtitious and idolatrous ſigne; and that as one Robert Cooper confeſſor of the truth ſometime ſaid, the bleſſing with a ſhooe ſole is as good as a Popiſh Biſhops bleſſing done no otherwiſe, then by croſſing, Fox pag.1043.col.2.

We confeſſe, when Paganiſme and heathen ſuperſtition yet preuailed in the world, and many both Iewes and Gentiles oppoſed themſelues to the croſſe of Chriſt, that the Lord might and did ſhew ſome extraordinarie ſignes that way.

Euſeb.lib.1.de vit.Conſtantin. 1 As for the conuerſion of Conſtantine and his further confirmation when he was to fight againſt Maxentius, after earneſt prayer made vnto God, whom his father Conſtantius worſhipped, Euſebius ſaith that he ſaw the ſigne of the Croſſe in the ayre, with theſe words appearing, In hoc ſigno vinces: Thou ſhalt ouercome in this ſigne. Likewiſe it ſometime is ſaid to haue appeared, as a prediction of the ouerthrow of the enemies of the Croſſe, as Gallus Conſtantius aſſociate in the Empire, ſaw a bright ſhining Croſſe in the ayre, which appeared to be in length fifteene furlongs, at what time he went to Antioch in the ſeuenteenth yeere of Conſtantius reigne, when hee ſuppreſſed the Iewes, that made rebellion, and ſlew of them many thouſands. (Sozomen.lib.4 cap.5.) Likewiſe, ſometime it appeared for the confuſion of the enemies of the Croſſe, as Iulian the Apoſtata looking into the intrals of beaſts, after the manner of the Gentiles, to know what ſhould become of the Chriſtian religion, ſaw the ſigne of a Croſſe compaſſed about with a crowne: which the Maſter of his Diuinations did interprete to ſignifie, that the Chriſtian religion ſhould be driuen to a great ſtraight, as the Croſſe was encloſed with a circle: but the other Diuiners gaue their opinion, that the crowne ſignified victorie, and the circle being without beginning and end, the perpetuitie and continuance of the Goſpell. (Sozomen. lib.5.c.2.) But all this while, wee ſee no vertue or power aſcribed to the ſigne of the Croſſe it ſelfe.

2 And in the Africane Church, the Chriſtians to be diſcerned from the Pagans would make the ſigne of the Croſſe in their doores and windowes, as they did in Alexandria, in ſtead of the reliques and markes of Serapian their Idols of Gentiliſme: (Ruffin.lib.2. cap.17.) yet herein they aſcribed no vertue to the ſigne: it was but a cognizance and marke of difference to diſtinguiſh betweene the Chriſtians and Paganes. And if the Aethiopike Church at this day, did aſcribe ſuch vertue to the Croſſe, they would not wrap vp ſuch monuments in corners, nor forbeare making the ſigne of the Crucifixe, as they doe. (Aluares de ſcrip.Æthiop. cap.vltim.)

Harm.ſect.16. pag.504. 3 Wittemberg, artic.29. As touching that which S.Paul ſaith, (The creatures are ſanctified by the word of God and prayer) he meaneth not, that creatures, as fleſh, ſalt, hearbes be coniured, that Satan by the vſe of them may be driuen away, but that all creatures are by the word of God appointed to their outward vſe which then ſerue for our good, when wee vſe them well by faith, and praying vnto God, &c. Here then is no coniuring or hallowing by the ſigne of the Croſſe, as the Rhemiſts before inferred out of this place.

Alphonſ.lib.3. hæreſ.tit.baptiſm. 4 Claudius the Biſhop Taurinenſ. did hold, that it was no baptiſme vnleſſe the ſigne of the Croſſe were made in the forehead of the partie baptized: but Alphonſus de Caſtro ſaith, it is manifeſtus error, a manifeſt error: and he giueth this reaſon, becauſe it is certaine, that Chriſt, when he inſtituted baptiſme, nunquam de ſigno crucis meminiſſe, did neuer thinke of the Croſſe, &c. But if there were ſuch vertue in the Croſſe, baptiſme ſhould be weakned by the want of it.

AN APPENDIXE CONCERNING THE name of Ieſus.

The Papiſts.

51. Error.

THe name of Ieſus (they ſay) ought to bee worſhipped by capping and kneeling thereunto, by wearing it in their caps, and ſetting it vp in ſolemne places: alleaging for their purpoſe that of S. Paul, that at the name of Ieſus all things ſhall bow. Yea, they ſay, that Proteſtants by aboliſhing the name and image of Chriſt, doe make a way for Antichriſt, *Rhemiſt. annot. Philip.2. ſect.2. Apocal.*13.17.

Phil.2.10.

The Proteſtants.

1. THe bowing at the name of Ieſus, as it is vſed in Poperie, to bend the knee at the ſound thereof, is not commanded in this place: which ſheweth eſpecially the ſubiection of all creatures, of Turkes, Iewes, Infidels, yea of the diuells themſelues to the power and iudgement of Chriſt. Secondly, Proteſtants haue onely taken away the ſuperſtitious abuſe of the name of Ieſus. Thirdly, the kneeling at the name of Ieſus is ſuperſtitiouſly abuſed in poperie: for the people ſtoop onely at the ſound, not vnderſtanding what is read, and ſo make an Idoll of the letters and ſillables, adoring and worſhipping the verie name when they heare or ſee it: And againe, in ſitting and not vailing at the name of Chriſt, Immanuel, God the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt, and bowing only at the name of Ieſus, Fulk. ibid. Fourthly, due reuerence may be vſed to our Sauiour without any ſuch ceremony of capping or kneeling, Fulk. Neither doe wee binde any of neceſſitie to vſe this reuerence to the name of Ieſus, as the Papiſts do, which thinke that Chriſt cannot otherwiſe be honoured: neither doe we iudge and condemne thoſe that doe vſe it, beeing free from ſuperſtition, and grounded in knowledge, & carefull not to giue offence: for ſuperſtitious and offenſiue ignorance is not in any caſe to be defended. Fifthly, this outward reuerence to the name of Ieſus was firſt taken vp amongſt Chriſtians, becauſe of all other names it was moſt derided and ſcorned of the Pagans and Iewes: and therefore they did the more honour it. But now there is greater danger of popiſh ſuperſtition in abuſing holy things, then of prophane Paganiſme in vtterly contemning them: and therefore there is not ſuch neceſſarie and iuſt occaſion of vſing this externall geſture now, as was in former times: It was not vſed of neceſſity then, much leſſe now.

*Synod. Moguntin.c.*59. it was thus decreed: Pari religione ad nomen ſaluatoris noſtri D. Ieſu Chriſti, ſimiliter ad Euangelium, &c. Let men with like deuotion at the name of our Lord and Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt, as likewiſe at the Goſpell, the Magnificat, Benedictus, Nunc dimittis, Gloria in excelſis, Gloria patri, and other parts of the diuine ſeruice, ſo compoſe themſelues by bowing the knee, vncouering the head, and the like geſture of the whole body, as they may ſeeme to haue their mind occupied in thoſe things that are done, &c. I note out of this decree three things; firſt, that they ſhould bow at the name of Chriſt, as well as when Ieſus is named. Secondly, that the like reuerence ſhould be vſed when as other Pſalms are ſung, and when mention is made of the Father, and the holy Ghoſt, as in the Gloria patri. Thirdly, that this geſture ſhould not bee done in reuerence to names, words, or ſillables ſo pronounced, but onely to declare our attention. Thus then wee ſee that this ſuperſtitious cuſtome in bowing to the name of Ieſus onely, is contrary euen to their owne popiſh Canons and decrees. The like thing alſo was decreed *Synod. Auguſtenſ.cap.*23.

To this effect alſo *Gregor.*10.*ſext. decretal. lib.*3.*tit.*23.*c.*3. Quandocunque recolitur, &c. Whenſoeuer that glorious name is rehearſed, cordis genua flectant, let them bow the knees of their heart, which at the leaſt let them teſtifie by the inclination of the head, &c. So then the reuerence of the heart is more requiſite, when Ieſus is named, then the geſture of the body.

It is not then the name it ſelfe, which conſiſteth of ſyllables, but the power of Ieſus, who is named, that is to bee bound vnto, & not the naming but the beleeuing in Ieſus, worketh ſuch wonders, as 1. Euſebius ſaith: quis ignorat noſtræ eſſe conſuetudinis, ipſo Ieſu nomine puriſſimisq; precib. omniũ dæmonũ vexationem abigere, ipſius verbum et Doctrina nos inuiſibili poteſtatis genere potentiores effecit, &c. Who knows not, that it is our cuſtome, by the very name of Ieſus, and our pure prayers to driue away the vexation of ſpirits: his word and doctrine hath made vs mighty by a ſpirituall kind of power.

Lib.3.demonſt Euang.16.7.

2. So Origen anſwereth Celſus, that Chriſtians did not cal out deuils, by enchanted verſes, ſed precib, et ſine quadam adiuratione, nuncupato Ieſu nomine, &c. But by prayers & naming Ieſus without any adiuration, &c. The vertue and power was in the word of God, and their prayers, not the pronouncing of the ſyllables of the name Ieſus: and that the place obiected Phil. 2.10. hath no ſuch meaning: Origen ſheweth giuing this interpretation of it: Quæ genua ſpiritib. eſſe creduntur &c. flectere genua, ſubiecta eſſe cuncta, et cultui Dei obedire declarat, &c. What knees haue ſpirits, to bow the knee then, ſignifieth, all things to be ſubiect, and obedient to the worſhip of God, &c.

Cõment. in c. 4 ad Roman. lib.9.

3. I will inſert the iudgement of learned Pareus of this point: the bowing of the knee and vncouering of the head at the naming of Ieſus: ſi vt ritus indifferens præſtetur externa reuerentia, nemo improbat, ſi vt neceſſarius et cultus præceptus, ſuperſtitio eſt reprehenſibilis, If this externall reuerence be vſed as an indifferent rite, no man miſliketh it, if as a neceſſary and commanded worſhip, it is a ſuperſtition worthy to bee reproued, &c. And he giueth this reaſon, becauſe this reuerence done to

THE SIXTH QVESTION CONCERNING Temples and Churches.

THis queſtion hath diuers parts: Firſt, of the forme and ſituation of Churches. Secondly, of the end and vſe of Churches. Thirdly, of their ornaments. Fourthly, of the dedication of Churches. Fifthly, of things hallowed and conſecrated for Churches.

THE FIRST PART OF THE SITVAtion of Churches.

The Papiſts.

52. Error. THe Churches and Temples of Chriſtians (ſay they) are moſt conueniently and haue beene of ancient time builded toward the Eaſt, Bellarmine libro tertio, capite tertio, de ſanctis.

Gen. 2. 8. Argum. 1. Paradiſe was built in the Eaſt, Gen. 2. 8. and therefore wee ought to pray that way, for deſire we haue to our countrie.

Anſ. Firſt, Paradiſe was then Eaſtward vnto Moſes and the Iſraelites beeing in the Wilderneſſe, when he wrote this ſtory: but it cannot be Eaſt to all Chriſtian nations: for Paradiſe being planted in Eden, which was part of Meſopotamia, muſt needs bee Weſt to the Perſians, South to the Scythians and Tartarians, North to the Ethyopians: wherefore this reaſon is not generall for all Churches in Chriſtian nations. Secondly, it skilleth not where that earthly Paradiſe is ſituate: our heauenly paradiſe is in heauen, which is euery where open to all true beleeuers.

Argum. 2. Wee looke for Chriſt to come in the Eaſt to iudgement, therefore wee pray toward the Eaſt: As the lightning ſhineth from the Eaſt to the Weſt, ſo ſhall the comming of the ſonne of man be, Therefore he ſhall appeare toward the Eaſt, Bellarm. ibid.

Matth. 27. 24. Anſ. Firſt, by that ſimilitude of the lightning, the ſuddennes of his appearing, not the place is declared. Secondly, it is great preſumption to define that which the Scripture hath not reuealed: Chriſts comming is onelie generallie ſet downe, he ſhall come in the clouds. And we ſhall be caught

Matth. 24. 30.
1. Theſ. 4. 17. vp in the clowds. There is no particular deſcription of the place.

The Proteſtants.

TO vs it is no matter, which way Churches are builded, we may turne our ſelues in prayer as well toward any one part of the heauens, as another: neither do we refuſe to pray in Churches builded toward the Eaſt. But that our Oratories & places of prayer ought rather to be builded that way, then any other; out of the Scripture it cannot bee proued, and wee hold it as a meere ſuperſtitious

1. Tim. 2. 8. opinion.

Argum. 1. S. Paul exhorteth men euery where to lift vp pure hands, He ſaith, in euery place, without exception, whether toward the Eaſt or the Weſt, or whereſoeuer.

Argum. 2. If any place were more dangerous then other to pray in, it is not ſo ſafe, and perhaps

Ezech. 8. 17.
Exod. 26. 27. more perillous to pray toward the Eaſt: for Idolaters were wont to turne them toward the Eaſt, and to worſhip the Sunne riſing. And for this cauſe, the holy place in the Tabernacle was toward the Weſt, Exod. 26. 27. And it was the cuſtome of the Iewes to pray Weſtward, leſt they ſhould be entiſed to worſhip the Sunne riſing in his ſtrength. And therefore the Ieſuite maketh but a bad argument: The Iewes prayed toward the Weſt: Ergo, Chriſtians muſt pray toward the Eaſt: nay, rather contrary, becauſe they turned their backe to the Eaſt, for feare of idolatry; Chriſtians if any place were to be regarded more then other, ought vpon the ſame ground alſo to follow the ſame cuſtome, for as much as all men by nature are prone to idolatry: and the reaſon of their ſo praying ſeemeth rather to bee morall, then ceremoniall. This I ſay not, as though I commended the Iewes ſuperſtitious praying toward the Weſt, but onely to ſhew that they haue better reaſon for their cuſtome, then our aduerſaries haue for their ſuperſtitious turning toward the Eaſt. But to chriſtiãs al places are alike.

Auguſtine ſaith, Cum quis quærit orationem, collocat membra, ſicut ei occurrit: If any man bee deſirous to pray, he doth place his body, as occaſion ſerueth: he ſaith not toward the Eaſt, or toward the Weſt, ad Simplician. lib. 2. quæſt. 4.

Concil. Conſtantinop. 6. cap. 7. Singulis diebus quiſque duabus vicibus oret, mane & veſpere, &c. Euerie day let euery man pray twice, morning and Euening: if he be in his iourney, or in the woods, or fields, whereſoeuer the morning and euening houre findeth him, ſo let him doe: knowing that God is euery were preſent, &c. If God be euery where preſent, then as well in the weſt, or any other part of Heauen, as in the Eaſt: therefore it skilleth not which way a man turneth himſelfe in prayer.

Walter Brute holy confeſſour hath ſealed this truth, who ſaith; It is the cuſtome of Necromancers to turne their face to the Eaſt, as to a place more apt for their prayers: As Balaam being hired to curſe the Iſraelites, when he could not accompliſh his purpoſe in one place, remoued to another, &c. Fox pag. 497. col. 2, It is not ſeemely therefore for Chriſtians in their prayers to imitate the ſuperſtitious manner of the Heathen, in preferring the Eaſt before the Weſt, or one place before another. Pag.458.1. 40.

Damaſcene alledgeth many reaſons for praying toward the Eaſt: becauſe Chriſt is called the day-ſpring, paradiſe was built toward the Eaſt: Moſes tabernacle had the vaile hanging toward the Eaſt: Iuda as the more honourable tribe, was placed in the Eaſt ſide, Chriſt vpon the Croſſe looked toward the Weſt, and we therefore ſhould looke toward him eaſtward, hee ſhall returne in the Eaſt to iudgement: theſe ſleight reaſons Damaſcene vſeth: but he in the ſame place ſaith: antiquam patriam requirentes,&c. we ſeeking our ancient country (he meaneth Paradiſe, which was in the Eaſt) doe ſigh toward it, worſhipping God, &c. but our paradiſe is not now in earth, it is in heauen which is neither eaſt nor weſt, and therefore to heauen muſt we looke vp: Againe he ſaith, wee doe worſhip, [illegible] ſuſpirantes, ſighing toward Chriſt, &c. but Chriſt is not hanging now vpon the croſſe toward the Eaſt, but he is in heauen, thither we muſt turne our ſelues. And after he had heaped vp all his reaſons, he concludeth that this is an vnwritten tradition of the Apoſtles.

Damaſcene. lib. 4. de fid. c.13.

2. Athanaſius writeth that the Iewes at Berytum being conuerted to the Chriſtian faith did conſecrate a great ſynagogue vnto Chriſt their Sauiour: but their ſynagogues were built toward the weſt, not eaſtward

[illegible] Lib. de paſſ. imag. Chriſt.

In the temples at Antiochia in Syria, the altars were placed toward the weſt, not the Eaſt: Socrat. lib. 5. c. 22.

3. The latter confeſſion of Heluetia. chap. 22. Let theſe places where the faithfull meet together be decent &c. let houſes be choſen for that purpoſe, or Churches that be large and faire, &c. If houſes may be vſed for Churches, where no other are, which are built indifferently any way, then it skilleth not in this iudgement, which way oratories and places of prayer be built.

4. Their Binius writeth that becauſe of the Manichees which did worſhip the Sun praying toward the eaſt: Leo the firſt ordained, that to diſcerne catholikes from heretikes, when as in times paſt they prayed toward the eaſt, ad occidentem conuerſi Deum colerent, they ſhould worſhip God toward the weſt: to the ſame purpoſe alſo Baronius: But after this by the conſtitution of Vigilius the Prieſt ſtanding at the altar was preſcribed to pray toward the eaſt.

Binius tom. 1. fol. 932. and Baronius, an 443. num. 5. Durant. de ritib. lib. 5. c. 2.

AN APPENDIX OF THIS PART, CONCERNING the forme and faſhion of Churches.

The Papiſts.

THey would haue their Curches to bee built as Salomons Temple was, which conſiſted of three parts: there was firſt the porch or court for the people; then the holy place where the Altar ſtood, and the Prieſts offered ſacrifice; and laſt of all the moſt holy place, where the Arke and Mercy ſeate was placed. So they haue the Church porch, then the body of the Church, and aboue that, their ſanctuary, as they call it, or the Queere or Chancel, which was ſeparated from the reſt, by ſteps or ſtaires, hangings or curtaines, and other partitions: And heere muſt ſtand their Altar, Bellarm. lib. 3. de cultu Sanctor. cap. 3. 53. Error.

The Proteſtants.

COncerning the faſhion and forme of Churches, and the diuiſions and partitions within, wee will not much contend, ſo theſe conditions be obſerued; Firſt, that all ſuperſtition bee auoided, in making one place of the Church holier then the reſt; wherein the Papiſts mightily offend: for the Queere or Chancell was for their Prieſts and ſingers, the other part of the Church, for lay men, they were not to enter into that holy place: and thus according to the places, they diuided the congregation: as though one part were more holy then the other. The people alſo were made to beleeue, that to be buried in the Chancell, but eſpecially vnder the altar, was more auaileable for the dead, then to be buried in the Church. But where learne they that our Churches ought to haue a Sanctuary as the Iewiſh temple had? that was an euident type, and is now accompliſhed in our Sauiour Chriſt, who is now entred into the heauens, as the high Prieſt then entred into the holy place to make attonement for the people, Heb. 9. 24. This therefore is very groſſe, to reuiue and renew againe Iewiſh tipes and figures: as their own ordinary gloſſe ſaith, De quatuor concilÿs primitiuæ Eccleſiæ: Externi ritus & cæremoniæ legis, quia hæc fuerunt vmbra Chriſti tum venturi, & myſteriorum eius, ideo adueniente veritate Euangelica, illicita facta ſunt & euanuerunt: The externall rites and ceremonies of the law, becauſe they were a ſhadow of Chriſt to come and of his myſteries, therefore the truth of the Goſpell being come, are made vnlawfull, and vaniſhed away. Salomons Temple then, with the Sanctuary and prieſthood thereof, which were ſhadowes of things to come, are no preſidents or patternes for Chriſtians to follow. Heb. 9. 24.

But if herein notwithſtanding they wil imitate the building of Salomons Temple to haue a ſanctuary, why doe they not alſo build toward the weſt as the temple was? why bring they not their Altar down into the body of the Church? as the altar of burnt offring was placed at the dore of the tabernacle not in the holy place. And indeed, altar we acknowledge none, as afterward ſhall be prooued. But we ſee no reaſon why the communion table may not be ſet in the body of the Church, as wel as in the Chancel, if the place bee more conuenient and fit to receiue the Communicants. But I pray you, why is your Altar rather ſet in your Sanctuary, then the Font or Baptiſterie? they are both Sacraments, as well Baptiſme as the Lords Supper: why ſhould one be preferred, as holier then the other?

Chaun-

Secondly, all things in the Church ought to be done vnto edifying; and therefore wee allow no ſuch partitions, as doe hinder the edifying of the people, and exclude them from hearing; as in popiſh Churches the Prieſt is pued or mued vp by himſelfe a great way off, that his voice can hardly bee perceiued of the people. The Miniſter is ſo to ſtand and turne himſelfe, as he may be beſt heard and vnderſtood of the people: as Ezra had a pulpit of wood to ſtand in when hee read the law. Nehem. 8.4.

Lib. 2. cont. Parmem. c. 7.

Auguſtine thus writeth, Cum Epiſcopus ſolus intus eſt, populus & orat cum illo, & quaſi ſubſcribens ad eius verba, reſpondet, Amen While the Biſhop or Paſtor prayeth within, the people both prayeth together with him: and ſubſcribing to his words, anſwereth, Amen, &c. By this it appeareth that though in Auguſtines time the Miniſter had a place for himſelfe (as it is meet he ſhould) yet he ſo diſpoſed himſelfe, that his prayer was heard of all the people: for otherwiſe how could they pray with him, and ſubſcribe or giue aſſent to his words?

This faſhion of building of Churches deuiding them into 3. parts, the porch, body of the Church and Chancell, if it be vſed as an indifferent thing, and for more fitnes and decencie, we miſlike not: but beeing vrged as the moſt conuenient, becauſe conformable, and anſwerable to Salomons temple, we except againſt it.

Lib. 3. de vit. Conſtantin.

1. Euſebius ſheweth that the Temples of the Gentles were built in that very faſhion, beſide the bodie of the Temple, they had their veſtibula, porches, and conclauia et cellulas, their conclaues and cells, vnto the which the profane and common ſort had no acceſſe.

Sozomen. l. 7. c. 15.

2. Theophilus patriarke of Alexandria demoliſhed an idols temple at Alexandria which was built in that manner, with out any conclaues and inward parts, where he found myſticall and ſecret murders to haue beene committed: if this faſhion had beene ſo conuenient, the abuſe corrected, the temple might haue beene vſed ſtill.

3. See in the former part, the iudgement of the reformed Churches, which ſtand not vpon any ſuch faſhion of their Churches, not refuſing houſes to that end, to be places of prayer.

4. Bernard whom the Romaniſts will acknowledge for their owne did reprehend in his time, oratoriorum immenſas altitudines et immoderatas longitudines, the exceſſiue heights and immoderate lengths of the oratories, &c. ſuch as were built like to Salomons Temple.

Apolog. Bern.

THE SECOND PART, OF THE END and vſe of Churches.

THis part hath three ſeuerall points. Firſt, whether the Churches of Chriſtians are built to offer ſacrifice in. Secondly, whether they bee in themſelues places more holy then others. Thirdly, whether they may be dedicated to Saints.

THE FIRST POINT OR ARTICLE, WHEther our Churches are for ſacrifice.

The Papiſts.

54. Error.

THe principall end of Churches is for the ſacrifice of Chriſtians, and in that reſpect they are truly called Temples: they are not onely for prayer, the preaching of the word, and adminiſtration of the Sacraments, but chiefly for the externall ſacrifice of the Maſſe, Bellarm. cap. 4.

1. Cor. 10. 21.

Argum. 1. The Churches of Chriſtians haue Altars, therefore ſacrifices: that they haue Altars, he thus proueth: Firſt, S. Paul ſaith, You cannot bee partakers of the Lords table, and the table of diuels. By the table heere is ment the Altar; for the table of the Heathen was their altar, wherein they ſacrificed to their Idols.

Anſ. Firſt, a table is one thing, an altar another: and very vnproperly is an altar called a table: this place in any wiſe mans iudgement makes more againſt them then with them. Secondly, S. Paul ſpeaketh not heere of the ſacrifices of the Heathen nor of their altars, but of the feaſts which they made in their Idolatrous Temples, which was done vpon tables, of ſuch ſacrifices as had beene offered to Idols: vnto the which feaſts, S. Paul forbiddeth Chriſtians to come, as it appeareth in the reſt of the chapter, and more plainly, chap. 8. 10.

1. Cor. 8. 10.

Heb. 13. 10.

Argum. 2. Heb. 13. 10. We haue an altar, of which they haue no power to eate that ſerue at the Tabernacle: that is, the altar whereon Chriſts body is offered, Bellar. Rhemiſt, in hunc locum.

Anſ. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh expreſſely of participation of the ſacrifice of Chriſts death; (as it is manifeſt in the two verſes next following) which is by a Chriſtian faith, and not in the Sacrament only, wherof none can be partakers that remaine in the ceremoniall obſeruations of the Leuiticall ſacrifices; For the Apoſtle ſpeaketh manifeſtly, verſ. 12. of the ſuffering of Chriſt without the gate. Chriſt therefore is the altar, yea our Prieſt and ſacrifice too. Further, you abuſe this place to proue your materiall Popiſh altars, which are many: but the Apoſtle ſaith, we haue an altar, ſpeaking of one. This expoſition Richard Woodman holy Martyr hath ſealed, that Chriſt is the true altar whereon euery true Chriſtian ought to come and offer, he proueth by the conference of theſe two places of the Goſpell, Matth.5.23. If thou bringeſt thy gift to the altar, and remember that thy brother hath ought againſt thee, &c. Matth.5.23. Likewiſe, Matth.18. Where two or three are gathered in my name, there am I in the midſt: Matth.18.20. whereſoeuer then people are gathered together in Chriſts name, there is hee in the midſt; and where he is, there is the Altar; ſo that we may be bold to come and offer our gift, Fox pag.1991. col.2.

The Proteſtants.

THe Churches of Chriſtians are the houſes of prayer, made to that end, that they ſhould come together to heare the word of God read and preached, receiue the Sacraments, and offer vp their ſpirituall ſacrifices of praiſe and thankſgiuing: other externall ſacrifices, or Altars wee acknowledge none.

*Argum.*1. The temple of the Iewes was called an houſe of prayer, that is, principally for prayer. Mark.11.17. Moſes was read and preached in their Synagogues; Much more are the Churches of Chriſtians appointed for preaching and prayer. Act.15.21. The firſt day of the weeke, which is the Lords day, they came together to breake bread, and Paul preached vnto them: Act.20.7. Ergo, the adminiſtration of the word and Sacraments with prayer, is the chiefe and onely cauſe of the holy aſſemblies of Chriſtians.

*Argum.*2. Altars we haue none in our Churches: S.Paul calleth it the Lords table, where we receiue the Sacrament of the body and blood of Chriſt. 1.Cor.10.21. And he calleth it bread, which is broken: 1.Cor.11.26. But bread is ſet vpon tables, not ſacrificed vpon altars.

Auguſtine alſo calleth it, Menſam Domini, the Lords table, *Epiſt.*59. and *Epiſt.*50. Hee ſheweth how cruelly the Donatiſts handled Maximian a Catholique Biſhop, beating him with clubs, euen in the Church, lignis altaris effractis immaniter ceciderunt, and wounded him with the wood of the Altar, which they had broken downe. Where though he improperly call it an Altar, yet was it a Communion table framed of wood, and made to be remoued, not faſtened to the wall, as their Popiſh Altars were. And it is very euident, that it was a table, not an Altar, whereon they receiued the communion: as Eutropius the Emperours Chamberlaine, hauing committed ſome grieuous offence, fled into the Church, and, ad ſacram menſam ſupplex iacet, lieth proſtrate before the ſacred table. Sozomen. lib. 8.c.7. Baſilicus the Emperour being ſuppliant in the Church, coronam Imperij ſacra menſa imponit, Did lay the crowne of the Empire vpon the ſacred table. Nicephor. lib. 16.c.8.

Indeede ſometime they called it an Altar, but it was the Communion table: as Chryſoſtome hauing ſo named it an Altar, yet afterward ſaith, Ipſa menſa animæ noſtræ vis eſt, The table it ſelfe is the ſtrength of our ſoule. Commentar. 1.Cor.11. Auguſtine ſaith, the ſacrament of the body and blood of Chriſt, in Dominica menſa præparari, To be prepared in the Lords table; yet afterward in the ſame place hee calleth it an Altar: Tractat.26.in Euangel. Iohan. They ſo termed it an Altar, vſing the phraſe of the olde Teſtament, becauſe it was a commemoration of that ſacrifice, which was offered vpon the Altar of the Croſſe, prefigured by the Altars in the Tabernacle.

Damaſus epiſtol.4. Chorepiſcopi miniſterio presbyterorum contenti ſint, atque menſæ Domini participes tantummodo exiſtant: Let the locall Biſhops be content to miniſter as Prieſts, and to be partakers onely of the Lords table: He ſaith the Lords table, not the Lords Altar.

And that Churches are ordained for the word of God, prayer, and the ſacraments, we haue euident teſtimonie of Councels. Synod. Moguntin. cap.40. Templa orationis, diuini cultus & Sacramentorum officinas, &c. They call our Temples or Churches, the ſhops of prayer, the diuine worſhip, and the Sacraments.

Colonienſ. part.9. cap.13. Conſecratur templum, &c. vt ab omnibus pariter conuenientibus Deo laudes ſoluantur, diuinum verbum audiatur, ac eccleſiaſtica ſacramenta miniſtrentur: The Church is conſecrate, that of all men aſſembled together, praiſe ſhould be rendred to God, the word of God heard, and the Sacraments of the Church miniſtred.

Yet further we haue the teſtimonie of their owne law, decret. p.1. diſtinct.43. c.5. Oratorium hoc ſit, quod dicitur, &c. Let the Oratorie bee that, which it is called; neither let any thing elſe bee there done, then that which agreeth to the diuine Miniſterie: and in the ſame place cap.6. In Oratorio præter orandi & pſallendi cultum, &c. In the Oratorie beſide ſinging and praying, let nothing bee done, &c. decret. part.3. diſtinct.1. c.21. Ioannes: Eccleſias Arrianorum, &c. The Churches of the Arrians, whereſoeuer you finde them, Diuinis precibus & operibus conſecrate: Conſecrate to diuine prayers, and workes, &c. By theſe Canons it appeareth, that Churches are eſpecially conſecrated and ordained for prayer.

Maſter George Wiſeheart holy Martyr: Churches ſhould bee ſuſtained and vpholden, that the people ſhould be congregate vnto them, there to heare of God: for whereſoeuer is true preaching of the word of God, and lawfull uſe of the Sacraments, vndoubtedly there is God himſelfe. Fox. pag.1270. col.2. Pag.1157.2.2. This then is the right and proper vſe of Churches, as we haue ſeene.

What the ancient end and vſe of Churches was. 1. Euſebius ſheweth, reckoning the publique actions of Chriſtians in their Eccleſiaſticall meetings, as orationes, pſalmodium, participationem de my- Lib.10.c.2.3.

ſterijs gratiarum actiones, Prayers, ſinging of Pſalmes, pertaking of the myſteries, giuing of thankes, mons reuerently ſtanding, and being deſired to ſit, he would anſwere, that it was not meete to heare Hom.1.in 1.c. Ioann. the doctrine of God negligently. Chryſoſtome calleth the Church, ſedem doctrinæ, the ſeate of doctrine.

2 The ſame was the vſe of the Church of Alexandria, as Pſalmes, prayers, preachings: Athanaſ. in homil. de ſement. Theophil. Paſchal. lib. 8.

3 Heluetia latter confeſſ. chap. 22. All exceſſe of apparrell is to be abandoned from Churches and places, where Chriſtians meete in prayer: They are then the houſes of prayer and preaching, not for any externall ſacrifice.

4 See for the Latine Church, Damaſus before alleaged, and the Councell of Colen.

THE SECOND ARTICLE, WHETHER CHVRCHES are more holy places in themſelues.

The Papiſts.

55. Error. God (they ſay) rather dwelleth and is preſent in Churches, then elſe where: and therefore it is more auaileable for a man, euen to make his priuate prayer in the Church.

Argum. 1. The Temple of Salomon was ordained euen for the prayers of priuate men: and Salo-
1.King.8.38. mon prayeth vnto God, that they might be heard: So Anna prayed in the Tabernacle, 1.Sam.1. And Act.3.1. the Apoſtles went vp to the Temple to pray, Ergo, prayers made in the Temple are more auaileable, Bellarm. cap. 4.

Anſwere. 1. See what Iewiſh arguments here are: becauſe the Lord gaue an eſpeciall bleſſing to his Temple amongſt the Iewes, that was the onely place for ſacrifices, and alſo a peculiar priuiledged place for prayer: therefore he will binde and tye himſelfe to ſome certaine place now. But our Saui-Iohn.4.21. our ſaith cleane contrarie vnto the woman of Samaria, The houre commeth, when ye ſhall neither in this mountaine, nor in Ieruſalem worſhip my Father. The prayers and ſacrifices of Chriſtians are now no more tyed and limited to places. 2. That was but a type vnto the Iewes, that as then God would bee onely heard in his Temple: ſo his name is now onely truely inuocated and called vpon in his Church.

3 It is falſly alleaged that the Apoſtles went vp, onely to pray, to the Temple: they went vp at the ninth houre of prayer, when the people were accuſtomed to goe vnto the Temple, that they might preach the Goſpell vnto them.

Dan.6.10. Argum. 2. Daniel prayed with his window open Eaſtward to Ieruſalem, where the Temple was,
Luk.2.37. *Dan.*6. Anna departed not out of the Temple, but gaue her ſelfe to continuall faſting and prayer: Ergo, priuate prayers are more auaileable in the Church; Bellarm. cap. 4.

Anſwere. Firſt, the argument followeth not from the vſe of the Iewiſh Temple, to the practiſe of Chriſtians now: for we denie not, but that there was an eſpeciall bleſſing promiſed to thoſe that prayed in the Temple of Salomon, according to the requeſt which hee made at the dedication of the Tem-
1.King.8.31. ple: If any man pray in this place, then heare thou in heauen: But now the prophecie of Malachie is Malach.1.11. fulfilled, that incenſe ſhould vnder Chriſt be euery where offered vnto God: this difference betweene the Temple of the Iewes, and of Chriſtians, Origen maketh, tract. 35. in Matth. Vir quidem Iudaicus non dubitat de huiuſmodi, &c. A Iew doth nothing doubt of this, that is, that one place is more holy for prayer then another, but he that is departed from Iewiſh fables to Chriſts doctrine, doth ſay that the place doth not make one prayer better then another.

Secondly, Daniel openeth not his window to Ieruſalem, in reſpect of the holineſſe of the place, but to make it knowne, that he prayed to God, that was there worſhipped, & to ſhew his confidence in Gods promiſes for their returne thither: Anna alſo continued in the Temple, as being the fitteſt place for her widowes ſtate, and ſolitarie life, being ſequeſtred from all humane encumbrances, and in reſpect of the helps of religion by the ſacrifices and common prayers; not in regard of any inherent holineſſe there.

Gen.46.1. Argum. 3. Our Doway interpreters doe thus alſo reaſon for the holineſſe of Churches. 1. Iacob conſulted with God in Berſheba, where Abraham and Iſaack had confirmed by oath their league with the Kings of the Country, and erected altars, &c. whereupon they giue this note, that God reuealeth his will in holy places.

Exod.13.3. 2 Moſes was bid to put off his ſhooes, for the place was holy: whereupon they note in the margen, that reuerence is to be ſhewed in going bare-foot to holy places. p.160. and the ſame note they giue p.202.

1.King. 8.30. 3 Vpon theſe words, when they ſhall ſpread their hands in this place, &c. then heare thou in heauen, they inferre, that places dedicated to Gods ſeruice, are more acceptable to him. p.879.

Anſwere. 1. Iacob conſulted with God in Berſheba, because it was in the vtmoſt border of Canaan, and in his way into Egypt, ſhewing his hope to returne thither againe. 2. God heard him there, as in many other places, becauſe he faithfully called vpon him, not for any holineſſe of the place.

3. We read not in Gen.21.and 26. of any altars there built, but of the league made with the King of that Countrey, by an oath, which was but a ciuill tranſaction.

2. The place was holy, becauſe of Gods viſible preſence at that time, and therefore Moſes for reuerence vnto God, put off his ſhooes: ſo Ioſhua being by Ierico, was bid to put off his ſhooes, becauſe there the Lord ſhewed himſelfe as a man of warre: but this place was holy onely at that time, for afterward Ierico was accurſed, both the Citie and the ground thereabout: for Eliſha long after healed the waters of their bitterneſſe by caſting in ſalt. Ioſn.6.26. 2.King.2.20.

3. To the third obiection, anſwere is made before in the third argument.

The Proteſtants.

WE preferre publique prayers made by the congregation in the Church, before priuate prayers not becauſe of the place, but in reſpect of the congregation, whoſe prayers ioyntly altogether are more feruent and effectuall, then the prayer of one man. But if we compare publique prayer with publique, and priuate with priuate, wee doubt not but that the one and the other being made in faith, may as well be hard out of the Church, as in it.

Argum.1. The promiſe of our Sauiour is generall, wheresoeuer two or three are gathered together, I am in the middeſt amongſt them: So S. Paul, I will that men euery where lift vp pure hands, Ergo, they may be heard praying in faith in any place. Matth.18.20. 1.Timoth.2.8.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of publique prayer, which is done in the Church, as it may appeare by the beginning of the chapter, verſ.1. I exhort, that ſupplications, prayers, interceſſions be made, &c. Which is vnderſtood of common and publique prayer, Bellar. cap.4.

Anſwere. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh not onely of publique, but of priuate prayer alſo: firſt, becauſe Kings, for whom the Apoſtle would haue interceſſions made, are not onely publiquely, but alſo priuately to be praied for. Secondly, the Apoſtle would haue them pray euery where; but in euery place there is not a Church to pray in. Thirdly, it is the ſame, with that the Apoſtle ſaith elſewhere, Pray continually: which is vnderſtood of priuate prayer. 1.Theſſ.5.17.

Argum.2. So our Sauiour ſaith, When thou prayeſt, enter into thy chamber; he ſaith not, goe to the Church. Bellarmine ſaith, he entereth into his chamber, that prayeth without vaine glorie, whether he doe pray ſecretly or openly. Matth.6.6.

Anſwere. Our Sauiours words are plaine without allegorie, for he ſpeaketh of ſhutting the doore of the chamber: and there is a manifeſt oppoſition betweene the Phariſies praying in the corners of the ſtreets, and the frequencie of people, and the others praying in ſecret. And whereas Bellarmine obiecteth, that the ſhutting of the doore cannot litterally be vnderſtoode, becauſe that Chriſt himſelfe prayed in the mountaines often, but in his chamber wee doe not reade, that hee prayed; the anſwere is readie: firſt, by ſhutting of the doore Chriſt vnderſtandeth praying in ſecret, as it is in the text, God, which ſeeth in ſecret ſhall reward thee openly. Secondly, no maruell, if Chriſt is not read to ſhut the doore, for he had no houſe, nor place, where to reſt his head: Thirdly, in that Chriſt prayed in the mountaine, but in the Temple he prayed not, but preached, it teacheth vs, that euery where our prayers are acceptable vnto God. Luk.21.37.

Argum.3. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, that vnder the Goſpell, neither in that mountaine, nor in Ieruſalem God will be worſhipped, but in ſpirit and truth. Ergo, the worſhip of God is not tied to any place. Iohn.4.21.

Bellarmine anſwereth, Chriſt ſpeaketh not of the place, but of the manner of worſhip; that is, that henceforth God would not be worſhipped, after the manner of the Samaritanes and Iewes: for afterward the Apoſtles prayed in the temple at Ieruſalem, Bellarm. cap.4.

Contra. Firſt, our Sauiour ſpeaketh both of the place and manner: for ſo the woman propoundeth the queſtion of the place of worſhip, verſ.20. Our Fathers worſhipped in the mountaine, and ye ſay that in Ieruſalem, &c. And our Sauiour anſwereth her accordingly, fitly, and appertinently to the matter: for otherwiſe the anſwere ſhould not be fitting, if the woman ſhould aske one thing, and Chriſt anſwere another. Secondly, Bellarmine ignorantly diſtinguiſheth that, which is not to be diſtinguiſhed, for to be addicted to a certaine place of prayer, is of, or belonging to the manner of prayer: wherefore, Chriſt comprehendeth both in one ſpeech, that though prayer afterward might be made both in the mountaine, and at Ieruſalem, yet they ſhould not pray, with that opinion of holineſſe in the place, as before; as the Iewes and Samaritanes did.

Auguſtine ſaith, Quid ſupplicaturus Deo locum ſanctum requiris? &c. valens in Templo orare, in te ora: & ita age ſemper, vt Dei Templum ſis, ibi enim Deus exaudit vbi habitat. When thou art about to pray, what needeſt thou to goe to any ſacred place? wouldeſt thou pray in the Temple or Church? ſee that thou be the Temple of God, and there the Lord will ſooneſt heare where he dwelleth. Lib ſententiar. Auguſt. ſentent.333.

Bernard hath an excellent ſpeech of this matter: Habent ſanctitatem, ſed propter corpora veſtra, &c. Your Churches are holy, becauſe of your bodies: as your ſoules are holy, becauſe of the ſpirit that dwelleth in you; your bodies holy, becauſe of your ſoules; ſo this houſe is holy becauſe of your bodies, &c. not in themſelues therefore are they holy, &c.

Concil. Conſtantin. 6. cap.7. Singulis diebus quiſque duabus vicibus oret, &c. Euery day let euery man pray twice, morning and euening, in the Church, if he be in the Church: but he that is in his iourney, or vpon any occaſion in the woods or fields, whereſoeuer the morning or euening ſeaſon findeth him,let him pray there,knowing that God is euery where preſent. Euery place therefore hath Gods preſence, and therefore is alike in it ſelfe ſanctified for prayer.

Gangrenſ. Concil. in ſubſcriptione. Omnem locum ædificatum in nomine Dei honoramus, & congregationem in Eccleſia factam ob vtilitatem communem recipimus: We doe honour euery place built in the name of the Lord,and do reuerence or receiue the congregation or aſſembly made in the Church, for the common vtilitie,&c. Churches then are holy places and to be reuerenced,becauſe of their holy vſe, and for the holy aſſemblies there made: the people aſſembled for diuine exerciſes make the place holy, not the place the people. As it is ſaid of the Iſraelites, Non propter locum gentem, ſed propter gentem Dominus locum elegit: God did not chuſe the nation for the place but the place for the nations ſake; Concil. Aquiſgran.lib.2.cap.24.

Likewiſe, Cod. lib.3. tit. 43. leg.2. Locus, in quo ſepelitur corpus, efficitur religioſus: The place is made religious, or holy for the buriall of the dead. If the preſence of the dead make the place holy, much more the aſſemblies of the liuing: wherefore the place is not holy of it ſelfe, but becauſe of the preſence.

Decret.p.2.cauſ.13.qu.2.c.15. Iuxta altare nemo ſepeliatur; That no man ſhould be buried neere to the Altar,&c. But if there were an inherent holineſſe in the Altar, it were an iniurie to the dead to barre them from the more holy place.

I cannot here omit the notable ſentence of Origen. Locum ſanctum in terris non requiro poſitum, ſed in corde,&c. I doe not ſeeke an holy place in the earth, but in the heart: the holy place is rather ſo to be taken, quàm ſi putemus ſtructuram lapidum,&c. Then to thinke, that the building of inſenſible ſtones is the holy place, Hom.5.in Leuit.

Maſter Tindall holy Martyr hath ſealed this truth: Chriſt taking away the difference of places, will be worſhipped in euery place:Neither is there in his kingdome one place holy, another prophane, but all places are indifferent, neither canſt thou more heartily and better beleeue, truſt, and loue God in the Temple, at the Altar, in the Churchyard; then in thy barne, kitchin, vineyard, bed,&c. And to be ſhort, the Martyrs of Chriſt haue honoured him in darke dungeons and priſons. Fox pag.1254.
Pag.1142.2.26 col 1.

Now further. 1. Chryſoſtome ſaith, that Chriſtians, Minime alligatos ad certum aliquem locum: are not tied to any certaine place, as the Iewes were, Sed omni loco orandum, But that they may pray euery where: Yet he preferreth the prayer in the Church, as being more effectuall then domeſticall and priuate prayers, he preferreth them not for the holineſſe of the place, but becauſe of the congregation there aſſembled.

THE THIRD ARTICLE, WHETHER CHVRches and Temples may be dedicated to Saints.

The Papiſts.

56.Error. THey nothing doubt, but as Churches may be conſecrated, and dedicated to the honour of God, ſo they may be alſo vnto Saints.

*Argum.*1. The Temple of Salomon was not onely built for ſacrifices and prayer, but for the Arke of God alſo: as Dauid ſaith to Nathan: Now I dwell in an houſe of Cedar trees, and the Arke of God remaineth within curtaines: But there is as great honour, yea and greater, due to the reliques of Saints: Ergo, it is lawfull to build Temples vnto them; Bellarmine capite quarto. 2.Sam.7.2.

*Anſwere.*1. When you haue a commandement to build Churches for reliques,as they had to build a Temple for the Arke, ye may be bold to doe it.

2 To build a Temple for the Arke, was all one as to build an houſe for the Lord: for it was the Mercie ſeate of God: it pleaſed the Lord to dwell betweene the Cherubims, there to ſhew euident tokens of his preſence. And whereas Dauid conſulted to build an houſe for the Arke, the Lord doth thus anſwere him by his Prophet: Shalt thou build me an houſe for my dwelling? ver.5. So the Temple was made in the honour of God, being made for the Arke. It was all one, for the Arke to dwell there,and the Lord himſelfe to dwell there. This argument therefore maketh nothing for them.

The Proteſtants.

TO build Churches and religious houſes in the name and honour of Saints,and to make them Patrones and protectors of thoſe places,and there to call vpon them, and make prayers vnto them, all which is defended by our aduerſaries,we hold it vtterly vnlawfull, as tending to manifeſt impietie, and idolatrie.

*Argum.*1. No diuine worſhip is to be giuen to Saints, therefore no Churches to be made in their names: for it is part of the diuine worſhip to haue Temples.

De ciuitate Dei,lib.8.cap. vlt. Auguſtine ſaith, Nos non Martyribus Templa, ſacerdotia aut ſacra conſtituimus, quoniam non ipſi, ſed Deus eorum nobis Deus eſt: We doe not ordaine Temples, Prieſthoods, or ſacrifices for Martyrs:

for not they, but their God, is both their God and ours, &c. None therefore is to haue a Temple but God. But marke, I pray you, their diſtinction: They ſay, that Religious houſes, as they are Temples, are onely conſecrated to God, but as they are Baſilicæ, palaces, ſumptuous buildings, the ſelfeſame Churches may be dedicate to Saints. Like as (ſaith he) one and the ſame altar of ſtone, as it is an altar is conſecrated to God: and it may be alſo the tombe of ſome Martyr, and ſo alſo dedicate to the remembrance of the Martyr, Bellarm. cap. 4.

Anſw. If one and the ſame Church may be conſecrate both to God and to ſome Saint beſide, I pray you who is the principall patrone of that Church? God or the Saint? You will ſay, I am ſure, God is. But I will proue the contrarie, becauſe it hath the name of the Saint: It is called by the name of Saint Peter, Saint Paul, or ſome other, not by the name of God. Thus they are not contented to make Saints Gods fellowes, but will euen thruſt him out of place, giuing vnto Saints the honour of Gods houſe.

Secondly, the inſtance or example of the altar, which he alleageth, cannot ſerue his turne. Firſt, ſuch altars of ſtone to be ſacrificed vpon are not agreeable to the times of the Goſpell, the Church hauing alwaies of ancient time vſed tables, not altars, as I haue ſhewed before out of S. Auguſtine, error 54. And Origene thus witneſſeth of his times, Veniente principe ſacerdotum, &c. The prince of prieſts being come, the prieſt in figure ceaſed, &c. the temple made of ſtones is deſtroyed, to giue place to the temple made of liuely ſtones: effoſſum eſt altare, quod erat deorſum, &c. the altar below was broken downe, becauſe the heauenly altar had appeared, Tract. 11. in Matth. Wherefore if Communion tables were in vſe, not altars, they could not ſerue for Tombes or Sepulchers. Secondly, the vſe of altars being admitted, yet they ought not to be made places of buriall: Decret. par. 2. cauſ. 13. qu. c. 15. Prohibendum eſt ſecundum maiorum inſtituta, &c. We forbid according to the decrees of our elders, that none bee buried in the Church, prope altare verò, but neere vnto the altar in no caſe. Thirdly, though it were a lawfull place for buriall vnder the altar, yet cannot the ſame place be conſecrate to the honour both of God and the Martyr; ſeeing God will not part ſtakes with any, or diuide his honour.

Thirdly, this ridiculous diſtinction, betweene a Temple, and a Baſilica, or palace, is contrarie to antiquitie: Cod. lib 8. tit. 12. leg. 20. Baſilicam inauratam nullius imaginis obumbratione fuſcari, &c. We forbid, that the Baſilica be obſcured with the ſhadowing forth of any image. This law admitteth not the image of any in the Church; how then can the Church be conſecrate to any Martyr, as patrone, whoſe image is not ſuffered to be there? Here then, Baſilica, is taken for a temple dedicate to the honour of God. And in the Councell of Wormes, Can. 48. it is forbidden, vt nulla baſilica, that no Baſilica, that is, Church, be dedicate in the name of the dead: Ergo, not of Saints departed.

See alſo what one of your owne writers ſaith: Loca publica, &c, oratoria, tum Dominica Latinis, tum baſilica & eccleſiæ Græcis: The publike places of prayer are called Oratories, and the Lords houſe of the Latines, of the Greekes Baſilica, &c. So that the one name of Temple is the Latine, the other of Baſilica is the Greeke, Eſpenc. in 1. Timoth. 39. b. Thus doth it appeare how full of trifling the Ieſuite is in his ſophiſticall diſtinctions.

Fourthly, and yet further let it be here remembred, that there were diuers names giuen vnto Churches, they were called, either in reſpect of God to whoſe honour they were dedicated, templa, temples, as Auguſtine ſaith, Nos martyribus noſtris, non templa vt dijs, &c. Wee doe not build temples to our Martyres as vnto Gods: or of the people there aſſembled, eccleſia, Churches, as Chryſoſtome, nemo in eccleſia, &c. let no man in the Church thinke of his familie, &c. or of the exerciſes there vſed προσευκτήρια, Oratories, places of prayer, as Euſebius: or of the largenes and greatnes, Baſilicæ, Baſilikes or Palaces, as Auguſtine ſpeaketh of a Baſilica, which a Catholike Biſhop recouered, quam Donatiſtæ innaſerant, which the Donatiſts had inuaded: or of the memories of the Apoſtles it was called Apoſtolium, as a great Church at Conſtantinople, Nicephorus: or of ſome Martyr Martyrium, the Martyrie, as a Temple built at Ieruſalem by Conſtantine was called, the great Martyrie. Now the difference betweene Baſilica and the reſt, ſeemeth to be this: that the moſt ſpacious Churches and goodly buildings were called Baſilicæ, Palaces, and the Martyrie might be a Chappell within it: as Auguſtine ſheweth, how the Martyrie of Stephen was within another temple: therefore Bellarmine is farre wide, to thinke that a temple, as it was called, Baſilica, a Palace, was dedicated to Saints.

Argum. 2. How names are to be giuen to places, we cannot better learne, then of thoſe ancient founders of names, the holy Patriarkes: As Abraham calleth the mountaine Iehouah-jireh, The Lord hath ſeene. So Iacob giueth holy names to the place where he met the Angels, and where he wreſtled with the Angell, verſ. 31. They, as we ſee, gaue holy and reuerent names vnto places, not made peculiar for Gods ſeruice, but onely for ciuill vſe for the places to be called and knowne by: how much more ought Churches and houſes of God to be called by his name?

Geneſ. 32. 2.

We therefore conclude, that Churches ought not to be erected in Saints names, to worſhip them thereby, and make them our Patrones, Mediatours, and preſenters of our prayers: for this were great Idolatrie: Euen like as the Heathen called their Temples by the names of their Idols, Venus, Iupiter, Diana, and the like: Yet we refuſe not to call our Churches by the names of Saints, as they haue been called of old, becauſe we are not inuentors of names and termes, which inured by continuall cuſtome can hardly be left. Wee vſe them only as ciuill termes to diſtinguiſh places by: if any otherwiſe vſe them for any religious purpoſe, they doe amiſſe. And yet wee denie not, but that the names of holie men may be ſafely remembred, by thankſgiuing vnto God for ſuch excellent inſtruments, and ſetting before our eyes their good example. And concerning the names which haue been ſuperſtitiouſly giuen in times paſt vnto Churches and other places (though it were to be wiſhed, that they neuer had been ſo giuen) yet now we vſe them (ſetting apart all ſuperſtition) as ciuill names of difference, as S. Luke deſcribeth the ſhip of Alexandria, wherein they were carried, whoſe badge (ſaith he) was Caſtor and Pollux. In a ciuill matter of deſcription, he refuſeth not to vſe the names of the heathen gods. Auguſt. alſo giueth a good rule cócerning ſuch names. He ſpeaketh of the names of daies, which were called after the names of Heatheniſh Idols, as the fourth day in the weeke, which we call Wedneſday, was then called, and is yet in the Latine tongue, Dies Mercurij, Mercurie his day. Sic dicitur à paganis, & à multis Chriſtianis, ſed nolumus vt dicant, & vtinam corrigantur vt non dicant, &c. melius de ore Chriſtiano ritus loquendi eccleſiaſticus procedit: So is it called of the Heathen, and of many Chriſtians, but I would not haue them called ſo, and I wiſh they were amended that they ſo ſpeake not, &c, for a Chriſtian kind of ſpeaking beſt becommeth a Chriſtian. Sed ſi quem forte conſuetudo contraxerit, &c. ſciat illos omnes, &c. homines fuiſſe: But if cuſtome preuaile with a man ſo to ſpeake, let him vnderſtand that all they were but men whom the Heathen take for gods.

Act.28.11.

In Pſal.93

So ſay we, it were to be wiſhed, that wee had names void of all ſhew of ſuperſtition: but ſeeing for our ſpeaking we muſt be ruled by cuſtome, let vs know that thoſe Saints, by whoſe names places are called, are no Gods, nor Gods fellowes, nor patrones, or Mediators for vs, nor any way to be worſhipped: but they are the fellow-ſeruants of all faithfull Chriſtians, to be reuerenced with a Chriſtian duty of loue, not a religious worſhip of ſeruice.

Let vs ſee the conſent of antiquitie: Concil. Gangrenſ. can. 5. Eccleſia, domus Dei, &c. The Church is called the houſe of God: Ergo, not of any Saint. And in the ſubſcription of the Councell: Omnem locum in nomine Dei ædificatum honoramus: We doe honour euery place built in the name of God. It was the generall vſe of thoſe times, onely to build Churches to the honour, and in the name of God.

Concil. Vormatienſ. can. 48. Vt nulla baſilica ſub defunctorum conſtructa nomine dedicetur: That no Church built in the name of the dead, or departed this life, ſhould be dedicated. But the Saints were ſometime liuing, and now are dead to the world, &c.

The holy Martyrs haue ſealed this truth: Iohn Lambert alleageth out of Auguſtine, that the Angels will not wee ſhould build any Churches in reuerence of them, but would that with them wee ſhould honour the originall maker and performer of all. Fox pag. 1108.

Maſter Tindall holy Martyr: To build a Church in the honour of our Ladie, or any other Saint is in vaine, they cannot helpe vs. Fox pag. 1247. col. 2. artic. 10.

Pag.1137.120

Though when ſuperſtition began to encreaſe, Temples were dedicated to Saints, yet the more ancient vſe was to deuote them to the honour of Chriſt.

1 As Conſtantinus built a Temple at Hieruſalem dedicated to the [a] Sauiour of the world: there was [b] another built in memorie of the reſurrection.

2 [c] Athanaſius writeth how the Iewes at Berytum being conuerted to the Chriſtian faith, did conſecrate their greateſt Synagogue to the honour of Chriſt their Sauiour.

3 [d] At Florence there was a Temple built in the name of the Sauiour.

4 Confeſſion [e] of Wittemberg, they alleage that ſaying of Auguſtine, ſubſcribing thereunto: Neither doe we conſecrate Temples, Prieſthoods, rites, ſacrifices vnto the ſame Martyrs, ſeeing not they, but their God is our God.

THE THIRD PART, OF THE ADORning and beautifying of Churches.

The Papiſts.

57. Error.

THe Temples and Churches of Chriſtians, they would haue built in the moſt ſumptuous and coſtly manner; yea, in beautie to exceed the palaces of Princes, with ſiluer, gold, ſilke, veluet; to bee decked and adorned, Bellarm. cap. 6.

Argum. 1. The Tabernacle of the Iewes was of exceeding beautie: the curtaines thereof, of ſilke; the veſſels, euen to the ſnuffers for the Lampes, were of gold: the Prieſts garment had a breaſt-plate of gold, ſet about with precious ſtones: Therfore why ſhould not the Temples of Chriſtians be in like ſort adorned, and ſet foorth? as Iſay prophecieth, that the Glorie of Lebanon ſhall come, the Firre, Oliue, and Boxe tree to beautifie my Sanctuarie, which is literally to bee vnderſtood, Bellarmine ibid.

Iſai. 60. 13.

Anſw. Firſt, if the Ieſuite had turned his argument and reaſoned thus: The Temple of the Iewes was gorgeous, and ſumptuous, and beautifull to the eye: therefore Churches of Chriſtians ought not to be ſo now; he had reaſoned much better: for their ſeruing of God was externall; now God will be worſhipped in ſpirit. All things were done vnto them in types and figures: the outward glorie of their Temple was a liuely figure of the ſpirituall beautie of the Church of Chriſt. Secondly, where you would haue the prophecie of Iſay to be literally vnderſtood, you haue made a good argument for the Iewes: for then they ſhall haue their Sanctuary reſtored againe, which the Prophet ſpeaketh of by name. Thirdly, if that place of Iſay haue a literall ſenſe, why not that alſo, I will lay thy ſtones with Carbuncle, and thy foundation with the Saphires: I will make thy windowes of Emeraulds, and thy gates ſhining ſtones? Say alſo that this ſhall be literally performed: and ſo according to this groſſe ſenſe, the prophecie of Haggie ſhall alſo be fulfilled; The glorie of the laſt houſe ſhall be greater then the firſt. But I thinke you neuer ſaw Church built in this goodly manner, in beautie ſurpaſſing the Iewiſh Temple, nor neuer ſhall.

Iſai.54.10.

Hag.2.10.

Argum.2. The widow is commended for caſting into the offerings of God all ſhe had. The woman that beſtowed the precious ointment vpon Chriſt, is ſaid to haue done a good worke: Ergo, by the ſame reaſon it is a good worke to beſtow ſumptuouſly vpon Churches, which are the houſes of God, Bellarm.ibid.

Luke 21.1.

Anſw. Firſt, the argument doth not follow, for the bodie of Chriſt is more worth then ſtones, and the offerings of the Altar of more value, then the tiles of the Church: if extraordinarie coſt be fit to be beſtowed vpon the one, it is not ſeemly for the other. Secondly, the widow caſt in all ſhe had, and would ye haue men alſo to beſtow all they haue vpon ſtone walles? Chriſts example is extraordinary, and it was once done for his buriall: how then can you draw an extraordinarie preſident to an ordinarie practiſe?

The Proteſtants.

THat the Churches of Chriſtians, and places of prayer, ought decently to be kept; yea, and with conuenient coſt and ſeemely beautie to be built and repaired, and Church veſſels with other neceſſarie furniture, to be of the beſt, not of the worſt ſort, we doe both commend it, and practiſe it: the Ciuill law ſaith, Ornare ſepulchrum, non eſt probibitum: It is not forbidden to adorne a ſepulcher. Cod.lib.3.tit.43.leg.7. much leſſe a Church. And we learne by the example of our Sauiour (that caſt out of the Temple ſellers of Doues and money changers, and would not ſuffer them to carrie veſſels through it) that the houſe of prayer ought to be reuerently regarded: but yet it followeth not, that ſuch immoderate and exceſſiue coſt ſhould be beſtowed vpon the walles of the Church and Idols, to garniſh and beautifie Idolatrie, and poore people in the meane time to want. A Matrone ought to goe comely and decently apparelled, though not tricked vp with the iewels and ornaments of an harlot.

Mark.11.15.16

Argum.1. Our Sauiour Chriſt reproueth the Scribes and Phariſies, becauſe they drew the people to be good vnto the Altar, and to beſtow largely vpon them, and ſo leaue their parents helpleſſe. And he often doth inculcate that golden ſaying, I will haue mercie and not ſacrifice: it is better to ſuccour the liuing temples of God, which are the bodies of his poore children, then to beſtow ſuperfluous coſt vpon dead temples of ſtone.

Math.15.5.

Argum.2. Chriſt alſo doth rebuke them, becauſe like hypocrites they did garniſh the ſepulchres of the Prophets, and yet perſecuted their doctrine. So all popiſh Phariſies are worthie of blame, that take greater care in garniſhing the Temples and Tombes of the holy Apoſtles and Martyrs, then they doe in ſetting foorth their holy doctrine, and preaching the Goſpell, nay they doe contemne, perſecute, and hate that doctrine, for the which thoſe holy men died: ſo that this prouerbe was very well deuiſed of them; In times paſt we had golden Prieſts and wooden Cuppes, now we haue wooden Prieſts and golden Cuppes.

Math.23.29.

Argum.3. Chriſt in the day of iudgement ſhall condemne the wicked, for omitting the workes of mercie, as Matth.25. becauſe they did not feed and clothe the poore, &c. he ſaith not, becauſe they did not beſtow gold and ſiluer vpon Churches.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the leſſe ſinners are there remembred, whereby it is gathered that the greater ſinners ſhall be much more puniſhed: Chriſt ſaith not, Goe into hell fire becauſe ye oppreſſed the poore, but becauſe ye did not cheriſh them: yet if this be a ſinne, the other much more; ſo if he be damned, that gaue no almes, much more he that did not build, or repaire the Church: cap.6. in fine.

Contra. Firſt, Is it true then in popiſh diuinitie, that he that buildeth not a Church, that is able, ſhall be damned? if this were ſo, or men could be ſo perſwaded, we ſhould haue Churches enow, and too many: and I thinke many a Pope-Catholike man amongſt themſelues, hath not been a builder of Churches. Againe, it is moſt abſurd to ſay or thinke, that not to repaire a Church with ſuperfluous coſt, is a greater ſinne, then not to refreſh a man ready to die: for the one is a liuing member of Chriſt, the other is but a dead ſtone: hee may be aſhamed to broach ſuch ſtuffe. Thirdly, it is no ſinne at all not to beſtow princely coſt in garniſhing of a Church (for moderate and ſeemely coſt, we ſpeake not againſt) much leſſe a greater ſinne.

Auguſtine ſaith, Non dixit templum ſanctum tuum mirabile in columnis, mirabile in marmoribus, &c. He ſaid not thy temple is wonderfull in the pillars or marble, but in righteouſneſſe: in Pſal.64.

Bernard in his time much complained of the ſuperfluous coſt that was beſtowed vpon Churches; Domum Dei decet ſanctitudo, quæ non tam politis marmoribus, quam ornatis moribus delectatur: &

Apolog. Bernard.

2. Cor. 5.7.

puras magis diligit mentes, quam ſuperauratos parietes : Holineſſe becommeth Gods houſe, which is rather delighted with vnpolluted manners, then poliſhed marble; with pure wits rather, then painted and gilded walles : ad milites templi, cap.5. Againe ſaith he : Omitto oratoriorum immenſas altitudines, immoderatas longitudines, &c. I omit to ſpeake of the exceſſiue height of their Oratories, the vnreaſonable length, the ſuperfluous breadth, the curious paintings : Quæ dum orantium in ſe retorquent aſpectum, impediunt affectum, & mihi quodammodo repræſentant antiquum ritum Iudæorum : Which while they draw vnto them the ſight or aſpect of him that prayeth, doe hinder his affection, and doe ſeeme to me to repreſent the old rite of the Iewes, &c. If Bernard had liued in theſe late popiſh times, I thinke, he ſhould haue been talked withall for this ſpeech: he ſaith contrarie to Bellarmine, who vntruly affirmeth, that the gorgeous ornaments of Churches doe ſtirre vp deuotion, and not hinder it: whereas S. Paul alſo ſaith, We walke by faith, not by ſight. Whereupon it may be inferred, that the ſight of the eye doth hinder the faith of the heart.

Zepherinus Biſhop of Rome thought he had done enough, when he brought glaſſe veſſels into the Church for the vſe of the Sacrament, in ſtead of wooden. But when Vrbanus after him, for glaſſe veſſels gaue them ſiluer, it was then thought, that nothing could bee added: but now gold vpon gold, pearles, precious ſtones, and all the coſtlines that may be, is thought too little to adorne the popiſh Maſſe : Wherein they forget the ancient decree of Euſebius Biſhop of Rome, Non in ſerico panno, aut tincto, ſed puro lineo ſacrificium altaris conſecretur : That the ſacrifice of the Altar, (for ſo ſignificantly they called the Sacrament of the Lords bodie) ſhould not be conſecrate in ſilke, or ſtained or coloured cloth, but in pure and plaine linnen.

Cod. lib. 1. tit. 5. leg. 17. Iuſt. It is made lawfull for the redeeming of captiues, to ſell the ornaments, veſſels and veſtments of the Church: and this reaſon is giuen, Quia non abſurdum eſt, animas hominum quibuſcunq; veſtimentis præferri : It is not abſurd to preferre the ſoules of men before veſſels and veſtments whatſoeuer : Ergo, it is a better worke to clothe the naked, then to hang a Church, &c.

Likewiſe, Decret. part. 2. cauſ. 12. qu. 2. cap. 70. Aurum ſacramenta non quærunt : The ſacraments need no gold. Againſt ſuperfluous ornaments there is extant the decree of Clemens 5. Clementin. lib. 5. tit. 11. c. 1. Deus ad animum ſibi miniſtrantium reſpicit principaliter, non ad manum : God chiefly reſpecteth the minde of him that miniſtreth, not his hand : neither will he be ſerued with ſuch veſſels and inſtruments, as are not agreeable to the condition of thoſe, which ſerue him, &c. Superfluitie, coſtlines, or curioſitie in Church veſſels is not ſeemely, &c. Likewiſe, Extrau. com. lib. 1. tit. 5. c. 1. Ioannes 22. decreed againſt the begging Friers, Quod plures campanas, becauſe they had many bels in their Churches, that from henceforth, they ſhould haue but one : yet of all other ſuperfluous ornaments, ſome ſuperfluous coſt in a ring of bels ſeemeth to be more tolerable.

Mark. 7.11, 12.

Churches we grant are in decent manner to be maintained, not to be ſuffered to goe to ruine, or no better kept, then barnes or ſtables : the Iſraelites were reproued for making themſelues ſieled houſes, and to ſuffer Gods houſe to lie waſte : But notwithſtanding immoderate and exceſſiue coſt is not commendable, to garniſh the Temple of ſtones with gold and ſiluer, and to ſuffer the liuing members of Chriſt to want : as our Sauiour reproueth the Scribes and Phariſies for mouing the people to inrich their altars, while they ſuffered their parents to want.

Tom. 2. Homil. de Natiuit.

Homil. 6. in 1. Timoth. c. 2.

1 Chryſoſtome miſliketh not, that coſt ſhould be beſtowed vpon the Church, as hee maketh mention of a maunger made of ſiluer at Conſtantinople, to repreſent the cratch where Chriſt lay, neq; condemno eos, qui in templo fecerunt vaſa : neither doe I condemne thoſe which haue made veſſels of gold, &c. yet he more commendeth almes to the poore, and therefore aduiſeth euery one before hee goe to prayer, to ſet ſomewhat apart for the poore : and perſwadeth, non eſſe ſine eleemoſyna orationi vacandum, that one ſhould not giue himſelfe to prayer without ſome almes. Epiphanius finding in a Church a picture in a cloth, counſelled it to be taken downe, and ſome poore mans bodie wrapped in it : *Epiſt. ad Ioann. Cauſ. 12. qu. 2. cap. 71. ex Hieron. ad Nepotian.

4 Beſide the teſtimonie of Bernard, before alleaged, there is a moſt direct and pregnant place, which Gratiane hath collected out of Hierome : Multi ædificant parietes & columnas Eccleſiæ ſubſtruūt, marmore nitent. &c. Many do raiſe walles, and ſet vnder the pillars of the Church, which ſhine with marble, the roofe gliſtereth with gold, the Altar with precious ſtones is garniſhed, and in the meane time there is no choice of the Miniſters of Chriſt : neither let any oppoſe the rich Temple in Iudea, the Table, Candleſticke, Cenſors, &c. and other things made of gold : then thoſe things were allowed of God, when the Prieſts offered ſacrifices, &c. though all thoſe things went before in figure, &c. but now ſeeing pauper Dominus, our poore Lord, hath dedicated the pouertie of his houſe, let vs beare the croſſe, & diuitias lutum putabimus, and we ſhall thinke riches to be duſt.

Walfridus ſaith, Longe ſatius eſſe pauperibus ſubuenier, &c. It was better to helpe the poore, then to adorne Church walles : lib. de offic. et ritib. c. 14. Petrus de Aliaco complaineth of the multitude of Temples in his booke of the reformation of the Church exhibited to the Councell of Conſtance, &c.

THE FOVRTH PART OF THE DEDICAtion of Churches.

The Papiſts.

THe ſuperſtitious dedication of their Churches, with the Annuall memories thereof, they would warrant by the example of our Sauiour Chriſt, who was preſent at the feaſt of the dedication, which was inſtituted by Iudas Macchabeus. Ioh. 10. 22. and by his preſence allowed it, Rhem. in eum loc. 58.Error. Iohn 10. 22.

Iacob alſo conſecrated the Altar with oyle, before the times of the law, and called it the houſe of God: and vnder the law Moſes did conſecrate the Tabernacle, and the altar with oyle. Exod.14. Bell. c.5. The ſame things are obiected by the Doway tranſlators, as that of Iacob. P. 44. and of Dauid, ſanctifying of things to the vſe of the temple. 1.Chron. 26.25.

The Proteſtants.

FIrſt, a thankſgiuing to God for the reſtitution of the temple after the horrible prophanation therof, is a thing approued by Gods lawe, but it is not neceſſary to keepe a yerely memory thereof: for neither was there any ſuch inſtituted by Ezechiah, after the prophanation of the Temple by Achaz and Vrias; nor by Ioſias, after the ſame had beene moſt horribly polluted by Manaſſes and Amon; nor by Zorobabel, Eſdras or Nehemiah, after it was reedified, when it had beene vtterly deſtroyed by the Chaldees.

Againe it was moſt abſurd, that by the example of Iacob, and Moſes, he pleadeth for the reſtitution of Iewiſh Ceremonies: for Saint Paul ſaith, theſe were ſhadowes of things to come, but the bodie is in Chriſt. The body therefore being come, the ſhadow vaniſheth: he might by the ſame reaſon as well bring in Iewiſh ſacrifices, becauſe Iacob before the Law, and Moſes vnder the Law offered ſacrifices: but herein I refuſe not the triall of your owne law, decret. part.2. cauſ.12. qu.2. cap.71. Tunc hec probabantur à Domino, &c. Then theſe things were allowed of God (ſpeaking of the ornaments of the Tabernacle) when as the Prieſts offered Sacrifice &c. all theſe things went before in figure, &c. So may wee ſay, of oyle, ſalt, oyntment, hyſſope, with other ceremonies of the Iewes: what haue we to doe with them now? they were as handmaids to waite vpon the externall ſacrifices, which being aboliſhed, they alſo ſhould ceaſe. Coloſ.2.17.

Dauids ſanctifying of theſe things, was but a dedicating of them to the ſacred vſe of the Temple: there is no mention of rites ceremonies, curioſities vſed in this Dedication: and their owne marginall note ſaith no more: things are ſanctified by deſignation to holy vſe: and though they would haue ſhewed here ſome ceremoneous ſanctification, thoſe were the times of the Law, which would beare them out in ſuch obſeruances, which beſeeme not the Goſpell.

Your popiſh hallowing of Churches hath nothing like vnto it, but the name: for you vſe a number of fooliſh ceremonies, and many of them groſſe ſuperſtitions, in the dedication of your Churches.

Firſt, there are twelue Croſſes painted round about in the Church, and twelue burning Lampes ſet ouer againſt euery one of them, one againſt one: heereby (ſay they) the twelue Apoſtles are ſignified, that by the preaching of the Croſſe gaue light to the whole world. 2. They vſe oyle in annointing their Altar, and other veſſels, ſhewing hereby that they are conſecrate to holy vſes. 3. They ſprinkle water, burne incenſe, ſet vp Taper light: this ſheweth (ſaith the Ieſuite) that the place is conſecrate to prayer, & other holy actions. 4. They ſprinkle aſhes round about the Church, and write in the floore the Greeke and Latine Alphabet from one ſide of the Church to the other. This betokeneth (ſay they) the preaching of faith, which is the foundation and ground of all righteouſnes, which was firſt taught in the Greeke and Latine tongue. 5. They beat vpon the Church doore, and call vpon Saints and Angels: that is, (ſay they) to command Sathan to depart. Bellar. cap.5.

Firſt, they offend in the number of their fooliſh ceremonies, exceeding heerein the manner of the Iewiſh dedication: ſo that vnto them it may be ſaid, as Paul to the Galathians; how turne you againe to impotent and beggerly rudiments? Galath.4.9.

Secondly, they haue no warrant for their friuolous ſhadowes and ſignfications: which are but ſhadowes of things to come. but the bodie is in Chriſt: wee haue the body, what neede any more ſhadowes? Chriſt will not now be worſhipped with Croſſes, aſhes, characters, candle light, and ſuch apiſh toyes. Coloſſ.2.17.

Thirdly, ſome of theſe ceremonies are impious, and ſacrilegious: the inuocation of Angels and Saints, is a robbing of God of his honour, who onely is to be prayed vnto.

Auguſtine ſaith of ſuch inuentors of new rites and ceremonies, Ipſam religionem, quam pauciſſimis et manifeſtiſſimis celebrationum ſacramentis liberam eſſe voluit &c: ſeruilib. oneribus premunt: they cumber religion with burdenſome ceremonies, which the mercy of God hath made free with a fewe Sacraments. Epiſtol.119.

Neither hath this ceremoneous rite of dedicating Churches, any ſuch ſignification as the Ieſuite ſetteth downe, to be applied to the materiall Church: but as Bernard ſaith: In nobis ſpiritualiter impleri pleri neceſſe eſt, quæ in parietibus viſibiliter preceſſerunt, It muſt neceſſarily be in vs ſpiritually fulfilled, which viſibly is done to the wals: de dedicat. eccleſ. ſerm. 1.

Concil. Colonienſ. part. 9. cap. 11. Docendus eſt populus dedicatione eccleſiæ ſignificari dedicationem Eccleſiæ catholicæ, ac cuiuſlibet hominis Chriſtiani, qua dedicatur Deo. The people muſt bee taught, that by dedication of the Church is ſignified the dedication of the whole Catholike Church, and of euerie Chriſtian man, whereby he is conſecrate to God.

Euſeb. lib. 4. de vit. Conſtanti. Athanaſ. Apolog. 2. Sacran. Elucid. c. 2. err. 8. Athanaſ. Apolog. ad Cōſtāt. Harm. 15. p. 465

What was the auncient manner of dedicating of Churches, ſhall further appeare. Firſt as when Conſtantine dedicated the Church of our Sauiour at Ieruſalem, he diſtributed money and garments among the poore, and gaue great gifts to the Church, the Biſhops precib. et concionib. decorarunt: did with praiers and preaching adorne that feſtiuall aſſemblie: the Muſcouites at this daie make ſmall account of the Romane manner of conſecrating and hallowing of Churches.

2. Such was the faſhion alſo in the South Church, as Athanaſius writeth of Alexander Biſhop there, that he did celebrate the dedication of the Church, which he had made, per conuentus laudes et gratias Deo canentes: by aſſemblies, ſinging, praiſe and thanks vnto God.

3. Confeſſ. latter of Heluetia: c. 22. As we beleeue that God doth not dwell in temples made with hands; ſo we know, that by reaſon of the word of God, and holy exerciſes therein celebrated, places dedicated to God, and his worſhip are not prophane, but holy, &c. they are conſecrated by the holy exerciſes therein vſed.

Tom. 3. diſp. 61. ſer. 2.

4. Suarez a Ieſuite telleth vs, poſſit interdum Oratorium per ſimplicem voluntatem, et Eccleſia per ſimplicem benedictionem, ſometime an oratory by the ſimple intention of the will, and a Church by a plaine benediction, may be deſtined for the miniſterie of ſacred things.

THE FIFTH PART, OF THINGS HALLOWed and conſecrate for Churches.

The Papiſts.

59. Error.

THey maintaine their ſuperſtitious and popiſh bleſſing with the Croſſe, the hallowing of wax, fire, palmes, aſhes, holy bread, holie water, ſalt, oyle, and ſuch like: which haue power, as they would beare vs in hand, to driue away diſeaſes and euill ſpirits, Rhemiſt. annot. 2. Tim. 4. ſect. 2. 13. Bellarm. lib. 3. cap. 7.

1. Tim. 4. 5.

Argum. 1. Firſt, for the hallowing of theſe creatures to holie vſes, and making of them actually holy, they alleage that ſaying of Saint Paul, Euery creature of God is good, and is ſanctified by the worde of God and prayer: Ergo, theſe creatures may be ſanctified to holy vſes, as the water alſo in Baptiſme, and bread and wine in the Euchariſt; for the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not heere onely of the common benediction of meats, but of a more high and exact applying of creatures to holie vſes, Rhemiſt.

Anſ. S. Paul heere ſpeaketh only of the common and ordinary vſe of Gods creatures, as of meats and drinkes for euery mans priuate vſe: and he ſheweth how they are ſanctified by the word of God, which permitteth vnto the faithfull the free vſe of them; and by praier: not that they are vncleane by nature, but by pollution of ſin; and by this meanes are made holy and cleane. Secondlie, wee confeſſe alſo, that ſome things ſet apart for the ſeruice of God, are more ſpecially called holie, as the Arke, Altar, and Temple: but it is not lawfull to ſeuer what creatures wee will from the common vſe, and conſecrate them to the ſeruice of God, but ſuch as are appointed by his word; as water in baptiſme, and bread and wine in the Lords ſupper haue the warrant of Gods word, as none of your popiſh trumperie haue: neither are theſe creatures ſo conſecrate holy in themſelues, to conferre or impart their holineſſe to other things, but are ſo called in reſpect of the holy vſe, for the which out of the word of God they are appointed.

Num. 5. 22.

Argum. 2. For the efficacie and power of theſe hallowed things, they thus reaſon. The bitter water giuen to the adulterous woman cauſed her thigh to rot, if ſhe were guilty, otherwiſe it made her fruitfull. Eliſæus healed the bitter water with caſting in ſalt: the Apoſtles healed the ſicke with annointing them with oyle, Rhemiſt. Bellarm. ibid. Ergo, theſe ſanctified creatures may doe the like.

Anſ. Firſt, the bitter water of it ſelfe had not that power, but by vertue of that oath, with the which the woman was charged. Againe, it hath the warrant of the word, as yours haue not. Secondly, Eliſæus and the Apoſtles had the ſpirit to worke miracles, ſo haue not you: and they might haue done that they did without any ſuch meanes. Againe it was common ſalt, and ordinary oile which they vſed, not bleſſed before, after your popiſh manner.

Pag. 412. Numb. 5. 22. 1. Sam. 21. 4.

Argum. 3. Our Doway men doe heere alſo come in with their part: and obiect the ſame place, Numb. 5. 22. giuing this marginall note: water ſanctified by ſpeciall acts, is called holie-water, and ſerueth to holy vſes, page. 332. Likewiſe by that place where the high Prieſt ſaith to Dauid. I haue no common bread at hand, but onely holy bread, they infer the diſtinction of common and holy bread: ſo they would proue the ceremony of aſhes, becauſe the Lord ſaith to Adam: duſt thou art, Page 12. and pag. 32. and holy oyle by Iacobs powring oyle vpon the ſtone &c. Gen. 28. 18. p. 90.

Anſ. Firſt, the ceremonies before and vnder the Law are no patterne for the rites to bee vſed vnder the Goſpell: ſuch are the bitter water and holie bread, oile and the like, S. Paul giueth vs a rule for ſuch ceremonies of the law: which are ſhadowes of things to come, but the body is Chriſt: the bodie then being come, there is no more vſe of the ſhadow. I would oppoſe againſt them their owne notes: as vpon the 11. of Leuiticus p. 284. Chriſtians are not bound to the obſeruances of the old Law, but to that which they ſignified: and againe vpon Iohn. 1.11. prepare ye victuals, they make this marginall note: they might beſide Manna, which yet ceaſed not, prouide other meate, prefiguring, that in the Primitiue Church, it ſhould be lawfull to vſe legall ceremonies, with Euangelicall rites for a time till the old law were buried with honour: pag. 471. Themſelues then are witneſſes that now legall ceremonies ſuch as theſe be, are not to be vſed together with Euangelicall rites.

The Proteſtants.

First, wee hold that no ſuch things ought to bee ſeparated for holy vſes, becauſe they haue not the warrant of the word of God: for all things that are ſanctified, are ſo ſanctified by the word of God and prayer, 1. Timoth. 4.5. But they haue not the worde of God for their warrant, neither doe they vſe any prayer of faith, but a ſuperſtitious kinde of croſſing. Nadab and Abihu were conſumed with fire, becauſe they offered ſtrange fire, not taken from the Altar: that is, they preſumed of their owne authority, without Gods commandement, to conſecrate a ſtrange element to Gods ſeruice, and were puniſhed, Ergo, it is dangerous without Gods word, to conſecrate any ſuch things. Leuit.10.1.

Interrelig. Caeſarea in praefation, thus we reade: Si quid in ceremonijs ſuccreuerit, ex quo ſuperſtitio cauſari poſſit, illud tollatur: If any thing haue growne by the ceremonies of the Church, which may giue occaſion of ſuperſtition, let it bee remoued. But ſuch are popiſh rites and ceremonies: Ergo, &c.

See the confeſſion of the holy Martyrs: Iohn Fortune, being asked what he ſaid to the ceremonies of the Church: anſwered by the words of our Sauiour Chriſt, All things that are not planted by my heauenly father, ſhall bee plucked vp, And againe, In vaine doe men worſhip me with mens traditions and commandements. Chriſt openly rebuked the Scribes, Phariſees, Prieſts, for making Gods commandement of none effect, to ſupport their owne tradition. The Biſhop of Norwitch replied; Thou lieſt, there is not ſuch a word in all the Scriptures, Fox pag. 1919. So cunning were theſe popiſh Biſhops in Scripture. Math.15.13. Mark.7.7.

Concerning the ſprinkling and waſhing with holy water, Auguſtine thus writeth of the ſame or like cuſtome of waſhing: Ne ad ipſum baptiſmi ſacramentum videretur pertinere, multi hoc in conſuetudinem recipere noluerunt: nonnulli de conſuetudine auferre non dubitarunt: Many would not receiue that cuſtome, leaſt it ſhould ſeeme to be another baptiſme; and ſome haue not doubted cleane to take it away. Epiſtol. 119. cap.18.

I will obiect againſt them a conceit of one of their Popes: Innocent. 3. who decreed, that, Oleum non conſecratum, &c. Oyle not hallowed or conſecrated may be mingled with hallowed oyle, in the dedication of Churches; Decret. Greg. lib. 3. tit. 40. c. 3. Thus wee ſee that they themſelues hold not alwaies the conſecrating of theſe toyes neceſſary.

Secondly, though ſuch things were rightly hallowed, yet haue they no ſuch power: Chriſt ſheweth the way, whereby euill ſpirits are chaſed away; by prayer and faſting. And therefore to coniure creatures, to expell Sathan, without the word of God, is no better then a kinde of Magicke and enchantment. Mark.9.29.

Synod. Moguntin. c. 39. Paſtores ſedulo doceant effectus, qui inde petũtur, non ipſarum rerum efficaciae, ſed diuinae virtutis operationi, per fortiſſimi nominis Domini inuocationẽ tribuendos eſſe: Let the paſtors diligently teach, that the effects (of theſe ceremonies of holy bread, holy water, &c.) are not to be aſcribed to the efficacie of the things themſelues, but to the working of the diuine power, by calling vpon the moſt powerfull name of God: Ergo, theſe hallowed things haue no ſuch power of themſelues.

Thomas Haukes holy Martyr hath put to his ſeale: who vpon theſe words, Act. 19. God ſo wrought by the hands of Paul, that there went partlets and napkins from him, &c. which gaue health; inferreth, that it was God that wrought, not the ceremonies, Fox pag. 1588. If theſe Ceremonies wrought not of themſelues warranted by the Apoſtles, much leſſe ſuch as are inuented by men.

Concerning ſuch Iewiſh ceremonies, the ancient writers thus deliuered their opinion: 1. Baſil ſaith, corporalis legis obſeruatio in aduentu Chriſti aboleta eſt, figuris ad veritatem tranſlatis: the corporall obſeruations of the law are aboliſhed in Chriſts comming, the figures beeing tranſlated into the verity, &c: ſuch are the waſhing with water, which at this day the Muſcouites doe euerie day ſprinkle themſelues withall ritu Iudaico after the Iewiſh manner: and therfore the Romaniſts themſelues do note this as one of their errors: And they to requite the Latins againe, do neither allow of chriſme nor any other thing, hallowed or conſecrated by them of the latine Church, but hold that the patriarke onely of Conſtantinople, hath power to conſecrate ſuch things. Pag. 1443. 2. 18 Libr. de Spirit. ſancto. Append. error. Muſc. error. 17.

2. In the South Church the ancient doctrine was, that of the precepts of the Law, ſome muſt bee kept corporally, ſome ſpirituallie, corporally as thou ſhalt not commit adultery, thou ſhalt not kill: &c. but to circumciſe, to keepe the ſabbath, to kill a lamb, to eat vnleauened bread, and ſuchlike, tantum ſpiritualiter, onely ſpiritually: Maximus Alexandrin. Sacrari. Elucid. c. 1. err. 11. 12. Lib. 2. de charit. c. 86.

In vita Alexan. De ritib. eccle. lib. 1. c. 21. Theod. lib. 2. 8. Sozomen. lib. 6. c. 6.

4. Platina ſaith that Pope Alexander, primus inſtituit, did firſt ordaine that water, which they call holy, tempered with ſalt ſhould be vſed, ad fugandos dæmones, to driue away Deuils: and Durant thinketh it was borrowed of the Iewes or Gentiles: And in deede the Gentiles had the very like cuſtome to ſprinkle thoſe which came into the Church with water.

THE SEVENTH QVESTION, OF PILGRImages and Proceſſions.

The Papiſts.

60. Error.

First, they hold that pilgrimages made to Ieruſalem and the holie land, as they call it, to Rome, and to the memories of Saints in other places, to aske and obtaine their helpe, are godlie and religious, and to be much vſed of Chriſtians, Concil. Trident. ſeſſ. 25. Bellarm. cap. 8. The halt and lame went vp to Ieruſalem to be healed in the poole of Betheſda. Certaine Greekes came vp to worſhip at the feaſt. The Eunuch went vp in pilgrimage to Ieruſalem, Ergo, it is lawfull and requiſite, Rhemiſt. Bellar. cap. 8.

Iohn 5.4. Ionn 12.20. Acts. 8.27.

Anſ. Firſt, when you can proue that ſuch miracles are wrought at the memories of Saints, as the Scripture teſtifieth of this poole, men may be bold to goe vnto them for their bodily health, as we ſee there is reſort vnto Bathes: but not for anie religion. Secondly, the Grecians, that viſited Ieruſalem, were Iewes that dwelt amongſt the Gentiles, or Proſelytes, which were bound to viſit the Temple at Ieruſalem. Thirdly, the Eunuch went not vp in pilgrimage to Ieruſalem, but to worſhip: for there was yet no other knowne place of the world, where God was worſhipped.

61. Error.

Secondly, their ſolemne proceſſions, eſpecially vpon Palme Sunday, with carying the Sacrament about, ſtrawing of ruſhes, bearing of Palmes, ſetting vp of boughs, hanging vp rich clothes, the Quire and Queriſters ſinging: they would warrant by that action of our Sauiour Chriſt, Matth. 21. 8. when he came riding to Ieruſalem, and the people ſtrawed their garments in the way, Rhemiſt. annot. Mat. 21. ſect. 12.

Anſ. Firſt, your proceſſions are horrible abuſings and prophanations of the Lords inſtitution, who ordained his Supper to be eaten and drunke, not to be carried about in proceſſion like an heatheniſh Idoll. Secondly, that which the people and Chriſts diſciples did, they had warrant for out of the Scripture: but who required this theatricall pompe at your hands? The riding of Chriſt vpon an aſſe was before prophecied of, Zachar. 9. and the childrens crying out in the temple, Pſalm. 8. The cutting downe of Palme branches was a ceremony belonging to the feaſt of Tabernacles, truely accompliſhed by our deliuerance in Chriſt. But you haue turned the holy myſtery of Chriſts riding to Ieruſalem, to a Maysgame, and Pageant play.

Zachar. 9. 9. Pſalm. 8.

Exod. 3. 5. 2. Chron. 20. 4.

Our Doway men alſo come in heere with their part, by Moſes putting off his ſhoes, they would warrant deuout going to holy places. Pag. 160. and for that Iſraell in Iehoſophats time came vp from their cities to Ieruſalem to require of the Lord. Pag. 899.

Iohn. 4. 21.

Anſ. Firſt, that place where Moſes put off his ſhooes, was holy during the time onely of Gods viſible preſence there, neither went Moſes farre vnto it; but God appeared in the place where Moſes was: and it were too hard to enioyne their pilgrimes to goe all the way barefoot. 2. Ieruſalem was then the ſpeciall place of Gods worſhip: but now God chooſeth not one place more then another, Iohn 4. Neither did the people goe vp for the holineſſe of the place, but to celebrate a publike faſt, neither went they out of their owne country, but to the cheefe citie of the kingdome, whether the King called them.

The Proteſtants.

First, that no places ought to be frequented, or reſorted vnto for religions ſake, or more holines, or for the health of the ſoule: we proue out of the word of God.

Acts. 10. 35. Iohn. 4.

S. Peter ſaith, That in euery nation he that feareth God is accepted with him, Ergo, one nation is as holy as another. And now our Sauiour ſaith, That God will not be worſhipped at Ieruſalem, or in Mount Garrizin, but in ſpirit and truth. Hee therefore that ſeeketh places to worſhip God in, as though he were rather to be found in one place then another, hath left the ſpirituall worſhip.

Auguſtine thus writeth concerning pilgrimage, Hee wiſheth men to ſeeke them teachers and inſtructors, by whom they might be taught: Deerat in ea terra [illegible] qua cauſa vtilius cogeret peregrinari? But is there no teacher in the Country where thou dwelleſt? what better cauſe canſt thou haue to trauaile, and goe in pilgrimage to ſeeke one in other countries? De vtilit. credend. cap. 7.

Thus hee would haue men to play the pilgrimes, not to runne gadding to reliques and Images, but to ſeeke for teachers and inſtructors.

Againſt this ſuperſtitious vſe of pilgrimages it was thus decreed: Conc. Cabilonenſ. ſub Carolo, can. 44.

can.44.45. Sunt presbyteri, qui negligenter viuentes, in eo ſe purgari à peccatis putant, ſi præfata loca attingant, Romam ſcilicet ſeu Turonem: ſunt quidam laici qui ſe impunè peccare putant, &c. There bee prieſts, who liuing diſſolutely, do thinke themſelues purged from their ſinnes, by going to Rome or Turraine: there be certaine lay men, which thinke they may ſinne without controulement, by reſorting to theſe places to pray: ſome mightie men, which vnder the pretence of going on pilgrimage do oppreſſe the poore: ſome poore men which do it, vt maiorem habeant mendicandi materiam, to begge more freely: Non attendentes quod aijt B. Hieronymus, Non Hieroſolymam vidiſſe, ſed Hieroſolymis bene vixiſſe, laudandum eſt: They marke not what Hierome ſaieth, it is not praiſe worthy to haue ſeene Ieruſalem, but to haue liued well at Ieruſalem: which ſentence of S. Hierome is approued in their decrees, *par.2.cauſ.*12.*c.*71. We ſee then much hurt, but little good to come by pilgrimages.

Let vs heare the determination of one of their Popes: *Innocent.3. decret. Gregor. lib.*3. *tit.*34.*c.*7. gloſſ. Quia iam impletum eſt verbum Dei dicentis, &c. Becauſe now the word of Chriſt is fulfilled, ſaying, The houre ſhall come, and now is, when neither in this mountaine, nor at Ieruſalem, yee ſhall worſhip the father, &c. Videri poterat, quod non minus in eccleſia tua, quam Orientali terra proficeres pijs orationibus: It might ſeeme, that you might as much profite by your prayers in your owne Church at home, as in the Eaſt Countrie: meaning, that which they call the holy land, &c. Heere wee haue the determination of a Pope againſt the neceſſitie of pilgrimages, and that warranted by Scripture.

See the confeſſion of holy Martyrs: William Sweeting perſecuted to death, for ſaying to his wiſe, that it were better for her to keepe at home, and attend vpon her buſineſſe, then to go on pilgrimage, Fox pag.818. Iſabel Morwin, for ſaying, ſhe would goe no more on pilgrimage while ſhe liued, for all Saints (ſaid ſhee) are in heauen, pag.827. col.2. Thomas Geffrey perſecuted for ſaying, That true pilgrimage was barefoot to goe and viſite the poore, weake, and ſicke; for they are the true Images of God, pag.827. col.1. Miſtreſſe Cotiſmore, for ſpeaking theſe words, That if ſhe went to her chamber and prayed there, ſhee ſhould haue as much merit, as though ſhee went to Walſingham in pilgrimage: and that folkes goe on pilgrimage more for the greene way, then any deuotion, pag.835. col.2.

Secondly, as touching the Popiſh pompous proceſſions, they are both ſuperſtitious, in reuiuing and renewing the Iewiſh ceremonies, ſuch as the feaſt of Tabernacles was, which are all now aboliſhed as ſhadowes by the comming of Chriſt: and they are plainely idolatrous, for they carrie about their breaden God in proceſſion, and make an Idoll of a piece of baked wheat: but Paul ſaith, The Sacrament ought to be receiued with thankſgiuing in the Churches and congregations of Chriſtians, not to be caried about to be gazed vpon in the fields. Seemely proceſſions, voide of ſuperſtition, which are vſed for ciuill purpoſes, as to maintaine the limits and bounds of townſhips, and withall by the ſight of Gods bleſſing vpon the creatures to be ſtirred vp to thankfulneſſe, wee neither miſlike nor condemne. 1.Cor.11.33.

*Conc. Colon. part.*9. *cap.*8. Vt proceſſiones per agros & campos amplius non peragantur, &c. That proceſſions ſhould be no longer made through the fields, becauſe that by occaſion of ſuch walking, which was inſtituted for the appeaſing of God, many ſinnes are committed: Wherefore it ſeemeth better to vs, that theſe and ſuch like ſupplications from henceforth ſhould be made within the compaſſe of the Church, &c. Popiſh proceſſions, as we ſee, are heere by a Popiſh Councell abridged. This alſo hath beene the iudgement of the holy Martyrs: Thomas Spicer, Iohn Deny put to death, for refuſing to follow the Croſſe in proceſſion, p.1912. *col.*2. *artic.*6. Ralfe Allerton for refuſing to carie the Croſſe in proceſſion, p.2018. col.1.

Now yet further. 1. Gregorie Nyſſenus hath a whole oration of this matter againſt thoſe which goe a pilgrimage to Ieruſalem: ſome of whoſe pithie arguments, it ſhall not bee amiſſe here to ſet downe.

1 It is none of the precepts, which Chriſt hath preſcribed to make vs bleſſed: Quod ergo beatum non efficit, &c. Why then ſhould one place his ſtudie in that, which will not make him bleſſed.

2 Then he obiecteth the difficultie of the iourney, ſpecially to weake women, and danger of their chaſtitie, Reprehenſionem nullo modo effugiat, &c. She cannot eſcape rebuke, whether ſhe trauell with thoſe ſhe knoweth, or with ſtrangers.

3 They paſſe by many places of corrupt manners, and how can it be? Vt non afficiatur, qui affectis loco tranſgreditur, That he ſhould not be infected, that paſſeth by places infected.

4 Localis mutatio, vt Deus propior fit, non efficit: The change of place maketh not God neerer: whereſoeuer thou art, God will come vnto thee, if thy ſoule bee fit to receiue him: otherwiſe, if thy minde be vnprepared, if thou wert in mount Oliuet, Et ſub ipſo monumento reſurrectionis, And in the very monument of the reſurrection, it ſhould not profit thee, and ſo hee concludeth, A corpore ergo peregrinemur ad Dominum, non è Cappadocia in Paleſtinam: Let vs then trauaile as Pilgrimes out of the body to God, not out of Cappadocia to Paleſtina.

2 So Antonie the Egyptian Monke, let the Grecians follow tranſmarine ſtudies: wee haue no neceſſitie of paſſing ouer the Sea, In omni ſede terrarum conſtituta ſunt regna cœlorum: In euery ſeate of the earth, the Kingdome of heauen is to be found: as our Sauiour ſaith in the Goſpell, the Kingdome of heauen is within you. Vit.Anton.

Harm. ſect. 16. pag. 487. 3 French confeſſ. artic. 24. Purgatorie is a fained thing comming out of the ſame ſhop, whence alſo haue proceeded, monaſticall vowes, pilgrimages, &c.

4 See the decree of Innocentius, and the Councell of Colon before alleaged. Adde hereunto the teſtimonie of Vincentius a Spaniſh Monke, who liued about ann. 1454. whom the Romaniſts call a Saint: Homines et mulieres peregrinando, &c. efficiuntur peiores, &c. Men and women in going a pilgrimage become worſe, they goe forth chaſte, and returne ſtrumpets, therefore let our pilgrimage be ſpiritually done, as Saint Paul ſaith, Let vs liue in the ſpirit, walke in the ſpirit, &c. Ex Verger. de Idol. Lauretan.

AN APENDIX CONCERNING THE HOLY Land, and holy warres for the ſame, as they were called.

The Papiſts.

62. Error. THey which are but a little acquainted with ancient ſtories, ſhall find, that there were neuer in Chriſtendome ſuch bloody warres, and for ſo long a time, as thoſe, which were at the inſtigation of the Popes, taken in hand by chriſtian Princes for the recouery of the holy land; in ſo much that they were made to beleeue, that it was a meritorious worke: Whereupon King Richard the firſt, calling to minde his rebellion and diſobedience to his father, in part of ſatisfaction, purpoſed a voyage into the Holy land, as it was called, to redeeme Chriſts patrimonie from the Infidels, Fox pag. 235. For why? Exod. 3. 5. Iohn. 5. 15. 2. Pet. 1. 18. they ſay it is an Holy land: for if the places of Gods apparition are counted holy, much more the places of Chriſts natiuitie, buriall, paſſion, and reſurrection. Saint Peter calleth the place where Chriſt was transfigured, The holy mount, Rhemiſt. 1. Tim. 4. Sect. 10.

Anſw. The places where God appeared in times paſt, were holy for that time onely of Gods preſence, not for euer after: and the mount is called holy in reſpect of the time, wherein the transfiguration was, not that the holineſſe of the place doth alwayes continue: for that place which Iacob called Bethel, the houſe of God, Geneſ. 28. is by the Prophet called Bethauen, the houſe of wickedneſſe, Oſe. 4. 15. Oſe. 4. 15. becauſe of the idolatries there committed: What was now become of the holineſſe of the place? So the mount of Oliues, which for the fruitfulneſſe thereof, was called Mons Miſchcha, the mount of oyle; was afterward termed Mons Maſchchith: the mountaine of corruption, becauſe of the 2. King. 23. 13. idolatrie there committed.

Hom. 6. in Ioſ. This alſo is Origens iudgement of the holineſſe of places, Nec ipſa Ierico locus erat ſanctus, &c. Neither was Ierico an holy place, but becauſe the Prince of Gods warfare was there, it was called holy: The place alſo where Moſes ſtood, was not holy of it ſelfe, but becauſe the Lord ſtood with Moſes, Præſentia Domini ſanctificauerat locum: The preſence of the Lord did ſanctifie the place. If then the holy preſence made thoſe places holy, they were no longer holy, then they had that preſence.

Nicen. 2. action. 4. ex Leontio: Sion tanquam illius ciuitatem, &c. We reuerence Sion, as his citie: Nazareth, as his countrie: Iordane, as his lauer: not worſhipping the region it ſelfe, or the ſtones, but him that there appeared, and was conuerſant, euen Chriſt our Lord, &c. The land therefore is not holy in it ſelfe, but it was holy becauſe of Chriſt, while he was conuerſant there.

The Proteſtants.

TO warre againſt the Turkes vpon iuſt cauſe, as to ſeeke to defend our ſelues from their inuaſions, and to maintaine the confines and bounds of Chriſtendome, to deliuer Chriſtians vniuſtly and cruelly kept in ſlauery vnder him, we hold it lawfull: but to wage battaile with him, onely for a ſuperſtitious deuotion to the land of Paleſtina, to recouer it out of his hand, we ſee no warrant at all for it.

Argum. 1. The euill ſucceſſe that Chriſtians haue had againſt them, and the ſhamefull ouerthrowes that they haue ſuſtained at their hands, do euidently ſhew, that God was not pleaſed with thoſe ſuperſtitious warres. While Princes had a good quarrell, ſeeking onely to maintaine their owne, and to deliuer Chriſtian countries from the thraldome of the Turkes, God proſpered them, as the famous victories of Scanderbeius, and Iohannes Huniades obtained againſt Amurathes the 8. Turkiſh Emperour, do notably teſtifie: but thoſe ſuperſtitious and pope-holy warres, though ſometimes they had good ſucceſſe, yet in the end al went to wracke. And as their cauſe was not good, ſo neither were the meanes that they vſed: for they brought S. George, and S. Denys into the field againſt the Turkes, and left Chriſt at home. If the Iſraelites could not be deliuered from the Philiſtims by the preſence of the Arke, but thirtie thouſand fell before them, and all becauſe of their ſinnes: let not men thinke that popiſh Saints can defend them, while their liues remaine vnreformed at home.

Argum. 2. That the heathen are not to be prouoked to warre, but vpon iuſt cauſe, that is, when they prouoke vs, it appeareth by the example of the Iſraelites, who as they came from Ægypt, ſent vnto the Kings of Edom and Moab, that they might haue leaue to walke through their land: but they not graunting ſo much, yet the people of God offered them no violence, but went a longer iourney about, Iudg. 11. 17. Iudg. 11. 17.

De Ciuitat. Dei lib. 19. cap. 7. Auguſtine ſaith, Sapiens geſturus eſt iuſta bella &c: ſed multo magis dolebit iuſtorum neceſſitatem extitiſſe bellorum: A wiſe man will take iuſt warre in hand: but it more grieueth him that he hath iuſt cauſe to warre. And what he meaneth by iuſt warre, he further ſheweth: Iniquitas partis aduerſa iuſta bella ingerit gerenda sapienti. The iniquitie or iniuries of the aduerſe part, doth giue vnto a wiſe man occaſion of iuſt warre. Iuſt warre therefore ariſeth, when men are prouoked by iniuries.

In the Ciuill law, the Citie of Rome is called ſacra Vrbs, the holy Citie, and that vnder the heathen Emperours: Cod. lib. 4. tit. 33. leg. 2. Diocletian. Wherefore this title is not onely proper to Ieruſalem.

Looke your owne decrees, part. 1. distinct. 40. c. 9. there you ſhall finde, that Gratia, non locus, ſaluat animam: Grace, and not the place, doth ſaue the ſoule: Extra Paradiſum factus, &c. Man made without Paradiſe in an inferior place, was found better: and the woman made in Paradiſe in a better place was found worſe, &c. Wherefore it is in vaine ſo much to contend for the holineſſe of the place.

Lateranenſ. ſub Iulio. 2. ex oratione Ægidij Viterbienſ. episcopi: Freta initio ſuis armis eccleſia Africam cepit, Europam obtinuit, &c. The Church in the beginning vſing her owne weapons, obtained Africa, Europa, Aſia, not by violence, or by ſword, but by religious actes: But ſince the ſpouſe hath changed the golden robe of the ſpirit, for the Iron weapons of madde Aiax, ſhee hath loſt Aſia, Ieruſalem, Africa, Egypt, &c. Thus he ſpake in the hearing of the Pope, inſinuating thus much, that rather by religious acts the Turke might be wonne, then by forceable warre ſubdued.

1 Gregorius Nyſſenus beſide the reaſons before alleaged againſt going in pilgrimage, hath theſe two ſpecially againſt the opinion conceiued of the holineſſe of Ieruſalem: 1. Quid plus habiturus eſt, qui locos illos adit, What more doe they get then others, which goe to thoſe places? as though God corporally is now to be ſeene in thoſe places? 2. As though the ſpirit of God were tied to Ieruſalem, Ad nos autem tranſire non poſſit, and could not come to vs? 3. If there were more diuine grace in the places at Ieruſalem, Illic viuentium peccatum non tam frequens eſſet, ſinne would not ſo much abound there: whereas there is no kinde of wickedneſſe, murther, adulterie, theft, idolatrie, that is not common there.

2 Gregentius an Aethiopian Biſhop of Tephra among the Homerites thus ſaith: That holy Mountaine, is that mother Citie Ieruſalem, which is aboue: this Zion, which is ſeene, is not to be called, as I ſuppoſe the holy mountaine, cum cinis et puluis ſit, being aſhes and duſt.

Diſput. Gregent. in Heiban. p. 105. χοῦς τῆς γῆς ἐν τῷ τόπῳ.

Dauid Emperour of Aethiopia, writing to Emmanuel King of Portugal, wiſheth him not to giue ouer, but to pray vnto God, that he may recouer the holy Temple at Ieruſalem. And in another Epiſtle to Ioannes King of Portugall, he giueth this reaſon, why hee forbeareth to warre againſt the Mahometanes, leſt they ſhould violate the Temple at Ieruſalem, and caſt downe other Temples in Egypt and Syria, he feareth the hinderance rather of Chriſtian religion, then the loſſe of thoſe places, and hath care of other Chriſtian Churches, as well as of that at Ieruſalem.

3 See in the former part the confeſſion of the reformed Churches.

4 And their owne decrees with the teſtimonie of Egidius Viterbienſ. before alleaged.

THE EIGHT QVESTION CONCERNING holy and feſtiuall dayes.

THis queſtion hath diuers parts, Firſt, of holy dayes in generall, Secondly, of the Lords day. Thirdly, of the feſtiuall dayes of Chriſt and the holy Ghoſt. Fourthly, of Saints holy dayes.

THE FIRST PART, OF HOLY dayes in generall.

The Papiſts.

FIrſt, they hold that holy and feſtiuall dayes, are in themſelues, and properly and truely, more ſacred and holy, then other dayes are, Bellarm. cap. 10. propoſit. 2. Apocal. 1. 10. I was in the ſpirit (ſaith the Apoſtle) on the Lords day: God reuealeth ſuch great things to Prophets rather vpon holy dayes, then prophane dayes: Ergo, ſome dayes holyer then other, Rhemiſt. Apocal. 1. ſect. 6. 63. Error. Apocal. 1. 10.

Anſw. God giueth not his graces in reſpect of times, but according to his owne pleaſure. Times of prayer he chuſeth often, and of other godly exerciſes, not for the worthines or holines of the times, but for the better diſpoſition of his ſeruants in ſuch exerciſes, to receiue them: yet this was not perpetually obſerued; for God appeared to Moſes keeping of ſheepe, to Amos following his heard. Exod. 3. 1. Amos. 7. 14. 15.

Argum. 2. If holy dayes were not in themſelues holier then other dayes, then it would follow, that all feſtiuall dayes ſhould be of the like holineſſe, not one more holy then another: but ſo are they not, for the Lords day is the chiefe of all the reſt: Ergo Bellarm. lib. 3. cap. 10.

Anſw. Firſt, we grant, that as feſtiuall dayes in themſelues are not holier then other dayes, but in reſpect of the vſe, ſo neither are they in the nature of the day more holy one then another; yet in reſpect of the inſtitution one feſtiual may be preferred before another: as the Lords day is more holy, becauſe it was inſtituted of God, then the other feſtiuals of the Church; & in reſpect of the religious vſe and obſeruation thereof, being more ſtrictly to be kept, then any other feſtiuall whatſoeuer; but not in the nature of the day is it more excellent, for then it could not haue bin changed: wherefore firſt the argument followeth not, as I haue ſhewed.

Secondly, I am glad, that he giueth the Lords day the preeminence; yet their popiſh practiſe is contrarie: for whereas they diuide their feaſts, into duplex feſtum, & ſimplex: double feaſtes, and ſingle feaſts: they make 4. kinds of duplex feſtum, principall double, more double, leſſe double, inferior double; yet the Lords dayes are none of this number, as may be ſeene in the Calendar of their Maſſe booke according to the vſe of Sarum.

Argum.3. Chriſt in his Birth conſecrated the manger, where he lay; in his death the Croſſe whereon he ſuffered; riſing againe, the Sepulcher, where he was buried: why ſhould not the daies as well of his birth, paſſion, reſurrection, bee conſecrated, and before other dayes preferred? Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, we denie not, but that theſe Feſtiuals of our Sauiour are to be preferred before other dayes, but not as in their nature more holy, but in reſpect of the vſe, and commemoration of the holy actes of Chriſt. Secondly, the places of Chriſts birth, paſſion, reſurrection, were holy, not by any inherent or naturall holineſſe, but in reſpect onely, and during the preſence of Chriſt, ſo are the Feſtiuals of Chriſt holy in regard of the commemoration of the holy actions of Chriſt, and not otherwiſe: Wherefore Bellarmine hath gained nothing by theſe reaſons.

The Proteſtants.

WE graunt that the Lords day being commaunded of God, and ſo diſcerned from other daies, may be ſaid to be holier then the reſt, in reſpect of the preſent vſe, but not in the nature of the day; for then could it not haue been changed from the laſt day in the weeke to the firſt: as water in Baptiſme is holier then other waters, becauſe of the ſacred vſe, not in it ſelfe, as by a qualitie of holines inherent. And as for other feſtiuall daies, which haue not the like inſtitution, they are appointed onely of the Church, for Chriſtian policie and orders ſake, for the exerciſe of religion: but this now Popiſh, and before time Iewiſh diſtinction of daies, as being by their nature holier then another, is flatly againſt the Apoſtles rule, One putteth difference betweene day and day. Rom.14.5.

Anſw. Bellarmine anſwereth firſt, that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of thoſe, whereof ſome thought good to faſt euery day, ſome onely certaine daies, and both of them did well: and this is the iudging betweene day and day, whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtle maketh no mention at all of faſting, but of eating: wherefore this diſcerning of dayes was not in any ſuch reſpect of faſting, or not faſting. Secondly, verſ.6. The Apoſtle maketh the obſeruing, and not obſeruing of dayes, and eating or not eating, to be two ſeuerall things, and he bringeth them in as diuers inſtances: wherefore it is not agreeable to the Apoſtles meaning to confound them into one, as Bellarmine doth. Thirdly, the Apoſtle, ſaying, He that obſerueth, or obſerueth not the day; obſerueth, and obſerueth not vnto the Lord, verſ.6. approueth not the obſeruation of daies: But firſt we muſt conſider the times, when as yet ſome ceremonies of the Iewes remained, which the Apoſtle did for ſome while beare with, for feare to offend the weake. Secondly, the perſons muſt be reſpected, of whom the Apoſtle treateth, not ſuch as obſtinately maintained Iewiſh rites, but the weake in faith, verſ.1. that did all of conſcience, whom the Apoſtle would haue gently and charitably dealt with, and not rigorouſly to be condemned: as verſ. 15. Deſtroy not by thy meate, for whom Chriſt died: But what is this to theſe times, when as all Iewiſh ceremonies ought long agoe to be buried? or to the perſons of our aduerſaries, who not of weakeneſſe and conſcience, but profeſſedly and purpoſely maintaine the difference of daies? Thirdly, the Apoſtle ſaying, He obſerueth to the Lord, &c. hee ſaith none other thing, then before verſ.4. Why iudgeſt thou another mans ſeruant? hee ſtandeth or falleth to his owne maſter: He obſerueth, or not obſerueth to the Lord, that is, hee is left to Gods iudgement.

Gal.4.10.11. Coloſſ.2.16. Argum.2. Saint Paul ſaith, You obſerue daies and moneths, times, and yeeres, I am afraid of you, leaſt I haue beſtowed on you labour in vaine. And againe, Let no man condemne you in reſpect of an holy day, or of the new moone, or of the Sabbath, which are but a ſhadow of things to come, but the body is in Chriſt. From hence we reaſon thus, out of the firſt place, That which hindreth, and deſtroyeth the faith of the Goſpell, is to be auoided; but the obſeruation of daies cauſeth the Apoſtles labour to be in vaine, and ſo deſtroyeth the preaching of the Goſpell: Ergo. Againe, all figures ought to ceaſe, the body being come; obſeruation of daies was in figure, Chriſt is the body. Ergo.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the Iewiſh obſeruation of daies, and not of the feſtiuals of Chriſtians: for S. Paul himſelfe obſeruing the feaſts of Chriſtians, as of Pentecoſt, Act.20 did make difference of daies. Act.20.16.

Contra. Firſt, the feaſt of Pentecoſt, which Paul obſerued at Ieruſalem, was a feaſt of the Iewes: for as yet the Iewiſh feſtiuals were not aboliſhed, as it may appeare. 1. By the name, it being called the feaſt of Pentecoſt, that is, the feaſt of fiftie daies, or the feaſt of weekes: which was a feaſt appointed in the law. 2. Becauſe it is kept at Ieruſalem, whereas it was not neceſſarie to keepe the Chriſtian feſtiuals there. 3. Saint Paul comming to Ieruſalem, did other things according to the law, as hee purified himſelfe, Act.21.24. 4. The feſtiuals of Chriſtians were not yet eſtabliſhed. Secondly, though we grant it was a feaſt of the Chriſtians, yet the Apoſtle made no ſuch difference of daies, but onely for the holy vſe. Thirdly, theſe places ſerue as well againſt Popiſh, as Iewiſh obſeruation of daies, for there is no difference. Act.21.24.

Bellarmine would ſeeme to make a treble difference, betweene the Iewiſh feſtiuals and theirs. Firſt, the Iewiſh feſtiuals after Chriſt haue a falſe ſignification, but ours haue a true.

Contra. Firſt, the Iewiſh Sabbath hath a true ſignification yet in remembring the creation of the world. Secondly, ſome of yours haue a falſe ſignification, as the feaſt of the aſſumption of Marie, which is a fable.

Secondly, the chiefe end of their Sabbath, was to ſignifie things to come; but the end of ours is to acknowledge Gods benefits.

Contra. 1. So alſo the Sabboth now is a ſymbole of our euerlaſting reſt, Hebr. 4. as theirs was a type of our reſt in Chriſt. 2. The Iewes alſo vpon the Sabbath remembred Gods benefits, as of the creation, Exod. 31. 17.

Heb. 4. 9. 10.

Exod. 31. 17.

Thirdly, the chiefe part of their feſtiuall, was to abſtaine from bodily labour: but the chiefe part of ours is to be occupied in diuine ſeruice. Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, their Sabbath conſiſted not only in bodily reſt, but ſpirituall duties alſo, as in not doing their owne will, nor ſpeaking a vaine word. Secondly, your Sabbath hath no ſpirituall duties, but a ſuperſtitious and idolatrous ſeruice, in worſhipping of Idols, inuocation of Saints, and ſuch like: So then in the obſeruation of daies there is no difference betweene the Iewes and Papiſts.

Iſai. 58. 13.

Auguſtine ſaith, Nos dominicũ diem & paſcha celebramus, &c. ſed quia intelligimus, quò pertineant, non tempora obſeruamus, ſed quæ illis ſignificantur temporibus, Cont. Adimant. cap. 16. We keepe the Lords day and the feaſt of Eaſter, not obſeruing the times, but remembring what is ſignified by thoſe times: that is, for what cauſe they were ordained: Ergo, obſeruers of times are reproued.

Leonis Epiſtol. 4. cap. 4. Notum ſit dilectioni veſtræ vniuerſos dies Chriſti, &c. Be it knowne to your brotherhood, that all the daies of Chriſt are conſecrate with innumerable vertues: yet if wee ſhould indifferently honour the memorie of all his acts, all daies ſhould be holy, becauſe euery one of them is full of his miracles, &c. Hence I gather, that daies in themſelues are not one holier then another, in as much as they all and euery of them were beautified and adorned with ſome miracle of Chriſt.

The ſcrupulous obſeruation of daies is forbidden by the Imperiall law of Theodoſ. Cod. lib. 6. tit. 30. leg. 17. and by the Canon law, part. 2. cauſ. 26. qu. 7. c. 17. Ad animæ periculum pertinent ſuperſtitioſæ temporum obſeruationes: Superſtitious obſeruation of daies bringeth danger to the ſoule, as the Apoſtle ſaith, I feare I haue laboured in vaine amongſt you.

The Papiſts.

2. They affirme the keeping and ſanctification of holy daies to be neceſſarie, Rhemiſt. annot. Galath. 4. ſect. 5. and that wee are bound in conſcience to keepe the holy daies appointed of the Church, although no offence or ſcandale might follow and enſue vpon the neglecting of them.

64. Error.

Eſther 9. Mardocheus and Eſther appoint a new feſtiuall day, not inſtituted of God, and bind euerie one to the obſeruing thereof, that none ſhould faile to obſerue it, verſ. 27. Ergo, men bound in conſcience to keepe feſtiuall daies. Bellarm. cap. 10. So alſo our Doway men, pag. 1050.

Eſther 9. 27.

The Proteſtants.

Anſ. Firſt, though wee refuſe not ſome other feſtiuall daies, yet we acknowledge none neceſſarie, more then are of the holy Ghoſts appointing in the Scripture. Secondly, wee denie that the conſtitutions of the Church for holy daies doe binde Chriſtians, in reſpect of the daies themſelues, in conſcience to keepe them, otherwiſe then they may giue offence by their contempt and diſobedience to the wholeſome decrees of the Church: for it ſelfe in it owne nature is indifferent; neither can the Church make a thing neceſſarie in nature, which God hath left indifferent: nothing bindeth abſolutely in conſcience, but that which is warranted by the word: wherefore keeping of holy daies, being not inioyned but left indifferent in the word, bindeth no otherwiſe then we haue ſaid. Thirdly, the example of Eſther ſheweth that the Church hath authoritie to appoint for ciuill vſes, daies of reioycing: that feſtiuall day, then begun did binde the obſeruers in conſcience, becauſe they were bound in all lawfull things to obey their gouernours, for their conſent was required, and they promiſed both for themſelues and their ſeede to keepe that day, Eſth. 9. 27.

Eſther 9. 27.

Fourthly, Mardoche beſide his ordinarie authoritie, as a chiefe gouernour, had alſo ſome propheticall direction to inſtitute this day of reioycing, (being held to haue written alſo that booke of Eſther) which cannot now be drawne to an ordinarie preſident: conſidering alſo, that thoſe were daies of ceremonies, among the which their feaſts are numbred, ſo that their obſeruation of daies bindeth not now. Laſtly, it ſeemeth rather to haue been appointed as a feſtiuall day of reioycing and thankſgiuing, for the ioyfull remembrance of that deliuerance, then as a new holy day to be kept with the like ſtrictnes, as the holy daies appointed by the law: for they kept it with ioy and feaſting, and ſending preſents one to another, verſ. 19. like as now in the Church of England, the 5. of Nouember is by act of Parliament appointed yeerely to be celebrated, as a memoriall of our deliuerance from the popiſh Gunpowder treaſon, not as a new holy day, with iniunction of abſtinence from work the whole day, but only to aſſemble together at morning prayer to giue God thankes. But it will be obiected, that this day was appointed by Mardoche to be kept with faſting and prayer, and therefore is a true holie day, verſ. 31. Anſ. 1 How could they keepe it both with feaſting, verſ. 19. and with faſting? neither did they vſe to celebrate daies of reioycing with faſting and mourning: as Ezra ſaid, in that great aſſemblie, after their returne from captiuitie, Mourne not, neither weepe, &c. but goe and eate of the fat, and drinke of the ſweete, &c. 2. The words then are thus to be read, to confirme the daies of purim, &c. the teſtimonies (Hebr. dibbrer, words) of faſting and their crying: that is, in remembrance of their faſting and prayers, by the which they obtained that deliuerance: not, with faſting, for in the Hebrew there is no prepoſition, to ſignifie, with : the vulgar Latine readeth, faſts and cries, leauing out the word dibhrer.

Acts 15.10.

Argum. If Chriſtians were bound in conſcience to keepe all holy daies which are enioyned them in the popiſh Church, their burthen ſhould be greater then the Iewes was, (ſeeing they haue a great number of holy daies more) yet the Iewes yoke was ſuch, as neither they, nor their forefathers were able to beare.

Bellarmine anſwereth : firſt, that the yoke of the Iewes is heauier, in reſpect of the hard obſeruances, as that it was not lawfull to ſeeth meate, to kindle a fire on the Lords day, thrice a yeere they went vp to Ieruſalem, they were enioyned to eate vnſauourie and vnleauened bread : it was not heauie in reſpect of the multitude of their feaſts, but of other ceremoneous rites, cap. 10.

Iſai. 1.14.

Contra. Firſt, the popiſh yoke euen in reſpect of their hard iniunctions is more intolerable then the Iewes was : your pilgrimages to Rome, to Ieruſalem, to other remote places, are more then their going vp to Ieruſalem : your preſcription to faſt bread and water is harder, then to eate vnleauened bread, and yet you vſe that too : not to eate an egge in Lent is more, then not to dreſſe meat vpon the Lords day. Secondly, the heauines of the Iewiſh yoke did much ſtand in the multitude of their feaſts, as Iſai. 1.14. if they were a burthen to the Lord, much more vnto men : and therefore the popiſh yoke enioyning the keeping of many more holy daies, is much more grieuous.

This only holy day, he ſaith, is of the Lords making, and therefore of all other neceſſarie to be kept.

Synod. Moguntin. cap. 61. Sanctorum celebritates in diem dominicum incidentes, cenſemus ſubmouendas, &c. Wee thinke it meete, that holie daies falling within the Lords day ſhould be remoued, and tranſlated to the day before, or after, that the ſolemnitie of them all may be reſerued and referred to their Lord, &c. The Lords day we ſee, is preferred before the reſt, as being of neceſſitie onely to bee kept, and the reſt to giue place to it.

This truth alſo hath been ſealed : Ioane Iohn, the wife of Lewis Iohn, perſecuted for ſaying, That God commanded no holie daies to be kept but the Sabbath day, Fox pag. 803. col. 2.

Apolog. 2. pro Chriſtian.
κοινῇ πάντες τὴν συνέλευσιν ποιούμεθα.

That feſtiuall daies appointed by the Church, are not in themſelues more holie then other, nor yet of neceſſity to be kept. 1. Iuſtinus Martyr ſeemeth to affirme, that the Chriſtians had but two times of publike meeting, one was vncertaine and extraordinarie, when any was conuerted to the Chriſtian faith and baptized, then the congregation met together to commend him in their prayers to God: the other was ordinarie vpon the Lords day, then called Sunday, when all had a common aſſemblie together. The feſtiuals of Saints were not then in vſe, nor were daies of publike meetings.

He held not one day holier in it ſelfe then another. Euen Diogenes by the light of nature could reproue the curioſitie of a Lacedemonian, that did prepare himſelfe to ſolemnize a feſtiuitie : What, ſaith he, an non vir probus quemuis diem feſtum cenſet? doth not an honeſt man thinke euery day feſtiuall?

Eraſmus ; ætas Hieronymi præter diem Dominicum, &c. Hieromes age, beſide the Lords day, acknowledged few feſtiuals : nunc feriarum neque finis, neque modus : now there is no end nor meaſure of holie daies. Genebrard hath brought to light the Calendar of the Syrian, Greeke, and Latine Churches ; and the Lord of Eſcules the Calendar of the Church of Aethiopia, by comparing whereof there appeareth great difference of feſtiuals obſerued among them, which ſheweth, that they held no neceſſitie of them, nor thinke ſo great holineſſe to be tied vnto them.

THE SECOND PART, OF THE Lords day.

The Papiſts.

CONcerning the Lords day, our aduerſaries doe grant ; firſt, that it is the moſt ancient of all Chriſtian feſtiuals, Bellarm. cap. 11. Secondly, that it was inſtituted by the Apoſtles, ibid. Thirdly, that it ſucceeded in ſtead of the Iewiſh Sabbath, ibid. Fourthly, that it is the moſt excellent, and to be preferred before all other holy daies, Bellarm. cap. 10. Theſe points are on both ſides condeſcended vnto, and whatſoeuer elſe is affirmed agreeable to Scripture.

The ſeuerall points wherein our aduerſaries and wee doe differ about the Chriſtian Sabbath, are theſe:

First, the principall exerciſe of the Sabbath, ſay they, is for the people to come to the Church and heare Maſſe, which their abominable and idolatrous ſacrifice they make the proper worke of the Sabbath, Catechiſm. Roman. pag. 649. 65. Error.

The Proteſtants.

THe Sabbath was ordained for the people to aſſemble together to heare the word read, Act. 15. verſ. 21. and preached; and to receiue the Sacraments, Act. 20. 7. and to offer vp their prayers: theſe were the proper exerciſes of the Sabbath: as for the popiſh ſacrifice of the Maſſe, wee finde no mention at all thereof in Scripture.

Concil. Moguntiac. can. 34. Nunquam deſit diebus dominicis, aut feſtiuitatibus qui verbum Dei prædicet: Let there be neuer wanting, vpon the Lords daies and other feſtiuities, one that ſhould preach the word of God.

Colonienſ. part. 9. cap. 9. Dies Dominicus a temporibus Apoſtolorum celebris, vt in vnum omnes pariter conueniant, ad audiendum verbum domini, ad audiendum quoque ſacrum, & communicandum, &c. The Lords day hath been obſerued ſince the Apoſtles time, that all might meete together to heare Gods word, to heare alſo and receiue the Sacraments. Theſe then are the principall exerciſes of the Lords day. And yet more euidently it was thus decreed, Synod. Auguſtenſ. cap. 18. Euangelia & epiſtolæ diebus dominicis lingua Germanica exponantur, eoque tempore nulla miſſa, ne populum ab auſcultatione diſtrahi contingat, celebretur: Let the Goſpels and the Epiſtles be expounded vpon the Lords daies in the Germane tongue, and at that inſtant let no Maſſe be celebrated, leſt the people be drawne away from hearing, &c. From hence we reaſon thus: That whereunto other exerciſes giue place, is the chiefe exerciſe of the Lords day; but other giue place, as the ſaying of Maſſe, to preaching and expounding of Scripture: Ergo, &c.

And for further euidence hereof: 1. Iuſtine Martyr ſheweth at large the exerciſes of the Chriſtians vpon the Lords day: 1. When they are come together, the writings of the Apoſtles or Prophets are read. 2. Then the Preſident or Paſtor exhorteth the people to the imitation of that which they heard. 3. Then followe prayers. 4. Then panis offertur, et vinum et aqua, the bread and wine and water is offered vnto them. 5. And laſtly, a contribution is made by the richer ſort to the poorer. Apolog. 2. pro Chriſtian.

2 The ſame was the cuſtome of the South Church ſpecially to attend vpon the preaching of the word vpon the Lords day, as Athanaſius thus writeth: Ne ſine te propinqui populi paſchalis feſtum celebrent; quis enim eis reſurrectionis diem euangelizabit, ſi lateas, &c. Let not the people celebrate without thee the feaſt of the paſch at hand: for who ſhall preach vnto them of the day of the reſurrection, if thou appeare not?

Zaga Zabo ſheweth how it is the manner of the Aethiopike Church to come together the third houre after Sunne riſe vpon the Lords day: firſt, ad audiendum & legendum, &c. to reade and heare the bookes of the Prophets, then vt ſanctum euangelium prædicemus, that we preach the Goſpell, and ſacrum faciamus, to make the Sacrament. 3 Former confeſſion of Heluetia, chap. 23. We thinke that holy meetings are ſo to be celebrated, that aboue all things the word of God be propounded to the people, &c. Harm. ſect. 15. pag. 468.

4 Eſpenceus to this purpoſe alleageth a conſtitution of the Synode of Baſile, ſeſſ. 15. that they, to whom the care of ſoules is committed, diebus Dominicis alijsq; ſolennibus plebem ſalutaribus doctrinis inſtruerent, ſhould inſtruct the people vpon the Lords daies and other ſolemnities, with wholeſome doctrine: and long before that he vrgeth the 25. of the Synode of Mentz, and the 14. c. and 15. of the Councell of Rhemes, that if the Biſhop chance to be abſent, ſick, or otherwiſe letted, nunquam tamen diebus Dominicis deſit, &c. yet there ſhould not be one wanting vpon the Dominicall and feſtiuall daies, which ſhould preach the word to the vnderſtanding of the people. In 1. Timoth. digreſſ. lib. 2. pag. 254. at Pariſe 1561.

The Papiſts.

2. WE diſſent about the reſt of the Sabbath: they allow ſuch works to be done vpon the Sabbath, as ſhall be permitted by the Prelates and Ordinaries, and ſuch as by long cuſtome haue been vſed, Bellarm. cap. 10. 66. Error.

The Proteſtants.

WE hold, that as the Lords day was inſtituted of God, ſo the manner of celebrating and keeping it holie, is to be learned out of the word, and neither cuſtome nor authoritie ought to giue libertie for ſuch workes vpon the Lords day, as are not warranted by the word.

Firſt, we grant that we are not ſo neceſſarily tied to the reſt of the Sabbath as the Iewes were: for thoſe things are aboliſhed which appertained to the Iewiſh Sabbath: Firſt, the preſcript of the day. Secondly, the ceremoneous exerciſes of the Sabbath in the ſacrifices and other rites of the Law. Thirdly, the typicall ſhadowes and ſignifications of their Sabbath, as firſt it betokened their reſt in Canaan; then the reſt and peace of the Church by Chriſt, Heb. 4. 3. 5. Fourthly, the ſtrict and preciſe reſt, wherein Chriſtians haue more libertie then the Iewes had: and againe, they obſerued their reſt, as being properlie and ſimplie, and in it ſelfe a Sabbath daies duetie; but wee doe conſider it, as Heb. 4. 3. 5.

being referred to a more principall end : as making of vs more fit for ſpirituall exerciſes.

Secondly, we allow theſe workes to be done ; Firſt, opera religioſa or pietatis, the religious workes, and conferring to pietie : as the Prieſts did ſlay the ſacrifices vpon the Sabbath, and yet brake not the reſt of the Sabbath ; ſo the people may walke to their pariſh Church, though ſomewhat farre off : the Paſtor and Miniſter may goe foorth to preach ; yea, and preaching is of it ſelfe a labour of the bodie, to ſtudie alſo and meditate of his ſermon, to ring the bels to call the people to the Church : all theſe are lawfull, as being helpes for the exerciſes of religion. Secondly, opera charitatis, the workes of mercie are permitted, as to viſite the ſicke, the Phyſition to reſort to his patient : yea, to ſhew compaſſion to brute beaſts, as to helpe the ſheepe out of a pit. Thirdly, opera neceſſitatis, the workes of neceſſitie, as the dreſſing of meate and ſuch like. Our Sauiour excuſeth his Apoſtles for plucking the eares of Corne, when they were hungrie. As for opera voluntaria, workes of pleaſure and recreation, we haue no other permiſſion to vſe them, then as they ſhall be no lets or impediments vnto ſpirituall exerciſes, as the hearing of the word, and meditating therein, and ſuch other : Otherwiſe they are not to be vſed.

Matth.12.5.
Matth.12.1.3.

Auguſtine ſaith, ſpeaking of the Iewes, who did greatly prophane their Sabbath, in ſporting and dalliance : Melius toto die foderent, quàm toto die ſaltarent : It were better for them to digge all day, then to daunce all day : euen ſo verily it were better for many poore ignorant people, that vpon the Sabbath giue themſelues to drinking, and quaffing, and gaming, if they ſhould goe to plough or cart all the day. But as for ſeruile workes, as to keepe Faires and Markets vpon the Lords day, to trauell themſelues, their ſeruants, and beaſts vpon the Sabbath, it is flat contrarie to the commandement of God, and the practiſe of the Church, where there is no extreame and vrgent neceſſitie : ſo that it is not to be doubted, but that as the keeping of the Lords day is a morall commandement ; ſo alſo the manner of the obſeruing thereof in ſanctifying it, and reſting therein, is morall : the ceremonies of the reſt being aboliſhed, that is, the Iewiſh ſtrictnes thereof, and the opinion which they had of their reſt, as being ſimplie a part of the ſanctifying of the Sabbath. But wee doe conſider it, as referred vnto more principall duties, and obſerue it, not as of it ſelfe pleaſing God, but as making vs more fit for ſpirituall exerciſes. Contraie to theſe rules, we acknowledge neither power in Ordinaries, nor priuiledge in cuſtome, to diſpenſe with the ſanctification of the Sabbath.

In Pſal.32. part 1.
Nehem.13.16.

Decret.part.1 diſtinct.86.cap.24. Gregorie writeth ſharply to one Ianuarius an old Biſhop, becauſe hee preſumed vpon the Lords day, Exarare alterius meſſem, to enter vpon anothers harueſt, to ſpoyle it. By this we may ſee what great diſcretion popiſh Ordinaries haue, in preſcribing Sabbath day workes.

Concerning ſuch ſanctification of the Sabbath as we ſpeake of, which conſiſteth partly in abſtaining from all corporall labours, and worldly affaires, partly and chiefly in giuing our ſelues to ſpirituall exerciſes, we haue the full conſent of antiquitie.

Concerning the firſt : Concil. Aurel.3 can.27. Die dominico cum caballis, bobus, vehiculis itinerari non debere : That none ought to trauell with horſe, oxen, carts vpon the Lords day. Cabilonenſ.can.18. Ruralia opera nemo facere præſumat : Let no man vpon this day preſume to do any country work, as to ſow, to reape, to plough. Matiſconenſ.2.can.1. Nullus cauſarum actiones exerceat : That no man ſhould goe to law. Colonienſ.part.9.cap.10. Markets and Faires are forbidden to bee kept. Moguntin.cap.61. Tripudia, ſaltationes, profana ſpectacula non permittenda : Dauncing, and leaping, and all prophane playes and fights muſt be forbidden.

As touching the affirmatiue part of this ſanctification, in ſequeſtring our ſelues to ſpirituall exerciſes, thus alſo it hath been decreed : Trullan.can.19. Vt omnibus diebus ſed præcipuè dominicis populum doceant pietatis eloquia : That vpon all daies, but chiefly on the Lords daies the Paſtors inſtruct the people : preaching of the word is one chiefe worke of the Lords day : the receiuing of the Sacraments is another, Colonienſ.part.9. cap.9. Populus conueniat ad communicandum : the people muſt come together to communicate. Prayer is another Sabbath worke : Matiſconenſ.2.cap.1. Die dominico quiſq; ſeipſum precibus & lachrimis afficiat : Vpon the Lords day let euery man giue himſelfe to prayer and teares. Giuing of thankes and praiſing of God is proper alſo for the Lords day : Synod. Colonienſ.part.9.cap.9. Dies illa tantum orationibus, hymnis, Pſalmis tranſigatur : Let that day only be ſpent in prayer, Hymnes and Pſalmes, and ſpirituall ſongs. Aurelianenſ.2.can.20. Vincti in carceribus, &c. Let the Biſhops viſit thoſe on the Lords daies that are bound in priſon. Conſtantin.6.cap.8. Tantummodo vacandum eſt orationi, & celebrationi eleemoſynarum : Vpon this day they muſt giue themſelues only to prayer, and celebrating of almes. Here be other exerciſes of the Lords day. And thus, as we ſee, the ancient Canons doe teſtifie with vs for the ſanctification of the Lords day.

To theſe Canons agree the Imperiall lawes : which bid, Omnium Iudicum & artium officia ceſſare, &c. Both the offices of Iudges, and artificers ſhops to ceaſe and be ſhut vp vpon the Lords day, Cod. lib.3.tit.12.leg.3.Theod. and that no playes or enterludes ſhould bee kept vpon that day, or any ſuch games, ibid.leg.10.Leo, & Anthem. Yet works of neceſſitie are excepted, as in time of harueſt & ſeed time, leg.3. and cauſa piſtoria, Bakers cauſes, as touching the making of bread, are excepted, leg.5.Valentin. Likewiſe workes of charitie, as in according and reconciling men, are tolerated, leg.10. as alſo manumitting and ſetting bond-men at libertie, leg.8.Valentin. Thirdly, workes of pietie are excepted, as doing of iuſtice in executing of malefactors and offenders, leg.9.Honor.Theodoſ.

That the holy day of the Lord, is to bee wholly ſpent in Diuine exerciſes. 1. Damaſcene witneſſeth, ſpending the whole ſeuenth day, in Pſalmes and hymnes, and meditation of the Scriptures, ceaſing ab occupatione circa materalia, from being occupied about materiall things. ἀπαυστὶ τὴν ἑβδόμην ἀναλίσκοντες. lib.4.c.24.

2. See the practiſe of the Aethiopike Church in the former part in what exerciſes they beſtow the Lords day: and Zaga Zabo further ſaith, that it is not lawfull for them therein ne minimam rem facere, not to doe the leſt thing: ſee alſo Auguſtines iudgement before.

3. Heluetia former confeſſ. c. 24 The Lords day euer ſince the Apoſtles was conſecrated to the religious exerciſes, and to an holy reſt, &c. Harm.ſec.16. pag.479.

4. Clictoueus: non erat legis ſententia, &c. it was not the meaning of the law to forbid ſuch works to be done with the hand, quæ ad Dei gloriam ſpectabant: which concerned the glory of God, or the neceſſity and ſafety of mans life, ſuch were the circumciſion of infants, and the offring of ſacrifices, &c. The chiefe cauſe of ſanctifying the Sabbath, was vacatio ad Dei obſequium, attendance vpon our ſeruice to God, which that it might be done more commodiouſly, the mind being ſequeſtred from ſecular buſines, it was forbidden on the Sabbath to doe any worke with the hand, &c. This their learned writers opinion is, that no works ought to be done vpon the Sabbath, whereby Gods glory and ſeruice is hindred. Annot. in lib.4 Damaſ.c.24.

The Papiſts.

They affirme that the Apoſtles altered the Sabbath day, from the ſeuenth day to the eighth, counting from the creation; and they did it without Scripture, or any commandement of Chriſt: ſuch power (ſay they) hath God left to his Church. This then they hold; that the Sabbath was changed by the ordinary power and authority of the Church, not by any ſpeciall direction from Chriſt: thervpon it followeth, that the Church, which (they ſay) cannot erre, may alſo change the Sabbath to any other day in the weeke, Rhemiſt. Apoc.1.ſect.6. 78. Error.

The Proteſtants.

1. The Apoſtles did not abrogate the Iewiſh Sabbath, but Chriſt himſelfe by his death, as he did alſo other ceremonies of the Law: and this the Apoſtles knew both by the Scriptures, the word of Chriſt and his holy ſpirit.

2. They did not appoint a new Sabbath of their owne authoritie: for firſt they knew by the ſcripture, that one day of ſeauen was to be obſerued for euer, for the ſeruice of God and exerciſe of religion, although the preſcript day according to the Law were abrogate: for the Lord before the morall law was written, euen immediatly after the creation, ſanctified the ſeuenth day, ſhewing therby, that one of the ſeauen muſt be obſerued ſo long as the world endured. Secondlie, they knew there was the ſame reaſon of ſanctifying the day of Chriſts reſurrection, and the reſtitution of the world thereby, as of ſanctifying the day of the Lords reſt, after the creation of the world. Thirdly, they did it by the direction of the Spirit of God, wherby they were ſo directed and gouerned, that although they were fraile men by nature, and ſubiect to error: yet they could not decline in their writings and ordinances of the Church, from the truth, which aſſurance of Gods ſpirit in the like meaſure the Church hath not now; but ſo farre forth is promiſed to bee led into all truth, as ſhee followeth the rule of truth expreſſed in the Scriptures. Wherefore the Church hath no authoritie to change the Lords day, and to keepe it vpon Mondaie or Tueſday, or any other day; ſeeing it is not a matter of indifferency, but a neceſſary preſcription of Chriſt himſelfe, deliuered by the Apoſtles: for the Lords day began in the Apoſtles time, and no doubt by their Apoſtolike authoritie directed by the ſpirit of Chriſt, was inſtituted, Act.20.7. Apocal.1.verſ.10. Neither can there come, ſo long as the world continueth, ſo great a cauſe of changing the Sabbath, as the Apoſtles had by the reſurrection of Chriſt. Wherefore the law of the Sabbath, as it is now kept and obſerued, is perpetuall.

Conſtantin.6.can.8. Diei dominici, quia in eo Deus lucem condidit, in eo Manna in eremo pluit, &c. tanta debet eſſe reuerentia, &c. The Lords daie muſt be had in great reuerence, becauſe vpon this day God created the Light, it rained Manna in the Wilderneſſe: Chriſt then vouchſafed to bee borne: on this daie the ſtarre appeared to the Wiſe men: Chriſt fed fiue thouſand men with fiue loaues and two fiſhes: on this day he was baptized, roſe againe, ſent down the holy ſpirit vpon his diſciples, &c. theſe are the reaſons why we do now keepe the Lords day vpon the firſt in the weeke: but greater reaſons than theſe, ſhall neuer fall out vpon anie other daie: Ergo, the Lords daie cannot be remooued to anie other daie of the weeke.

1. WE grant, that the Sabbath may be ſo applied, both to cal to remembrance things alreadie, as vpon that daie done: as the reſurrection of Chriſt, and the deſcending of the holie August. de tempor. ſerm. 154. Ghoſt. Some thinke alſo that Chriſt vpon that daie was baptized, vpon that daie turned water into wine, fed fiue thouſand with a few loaues, came vnto his Apoſtles after his reſurrection the dores beeing ſhut, and that as vpon this daie he ſhall appeare to iudgement: but vpon what ground I know not. Certaine it is, that vpon this day Chriſt roſe againe, and that the holie Ghoſt came downe then Heb.4.10. vpon his Apoſtles. We denie not but that the keeping of the Lords day holie, may fitly bring vnto our remembrance theſe things: yea and that it may be a type and ſymbole vnto vs in ſome ſort, both 1.Pet.4.1. of things ſpirituall, as to betoken our ceaſing and reſting from the works of ſinne, as alſo of things to Iſay.66.32. come, as the kingdome of heauen is called a Sabbath.

But we dare not, neither will affirme, that the Sabbath was ordained and conſtituted for any ſuch end: for the commandement of the Sabbath now to vs is onely morall, not typicall or ceremoniall, as the Iewiſh Sabbath was; but looke wherein the Sabbath was morall to the Iewes, ſo it is kept ſtill: As in theſe two points it was morall to them; firſt, to be a ſigne betweene them and the Lord, Exod.31.17. and to diſtinguiſh them from other people. And ſo alſo the right keeping of the Lords day is a notable outward marke of difference betweene the Church of God and all others. Secondly, that vpon Acts 15.21. the Sabbath they ſhould reſort together, and heere the lawe read and preached. And for this cauſe, namelie, the exerciſe of religion, are Chriſtians cheeflie bound to the Sabbath. It may (I ſay) fitlie be drawne to reſemble heauenly and ſpirituall things: but that is not any end of the inſtitution. The Iewes had two kinds of types, typos factos, and typos deſtinatos, types made and applied; and types appointed and ordained of God to ſhadow forth ſome notable thing: as the Paſchall Lambe, was typus deſtinatus of our Sauiour Chriſt, as they were not to breake a bone of the Lambe; ſo was it accordinglie performed in Chriſt. They had alſo many types beſide, that were not deſtinated to ſig- 1.Cor.19.6.11. nifie any certaine thing: of ſuch Saint Paul ſpeaketh, 1. Corinth. 10. 6. 11. So wee ſay of the Sabbath, that is not typus deſtinatus, it is not inſtituted for any ſhadow or ſignification; though it may be fitly applied to ſuch an vſe.

6. THey ſay that we are not bound vpon the Sabbath by any peculiar commandement to abſtaine from ſinne, more then vpon any other day: neither that the internall act of religion appertaineth to the keeping of the Sabbath, but the externall: that any ſinne committed vpon the Sabbath, is not thereby the greater: neither that we are more bound vpon the Sabbath to ſeeke for internall grace then vpon anie other daie, Bellarm.lib.3.cap.10.propoſ.4.

70. Error.

Argum.1. Bellarmine reaſoneth thus, the internall act of religion is the ende of this commandement, but the meanes tending to the end, not the end it ſelfe, are commanded.

Secondly, the internall worſhip is preſcribed in the firſt commandement: for this is the order: In the firſt precept, the worſhip of the heart: In the ſecond, the worſhip of the mouth: in the third, the worſhip or ſeruice of God in our works is preſcribed.

Thirdly, it were dangerous to appoint ſo many holie daies, for this were but to entangle mens conſciences, if ſinne be more grieuous committed vpon feſtiuals, cap.10.

Anſ. To the firſt we anſwere; Firſt, that it is vntrue, that the meanes onely, and not the ende is commanded: for loue is the end of the commandement, and yet is commanded, and one of the greateſt commandements. So in the 7. Commandement the end is, not to commit adultery; the means tending to adultery, as chambering and wantonnes are likewiſe prohibited, ſhall we ſay therfore that adultery it ſelfe is not forbidden? ſo admit that the internall ſanctification of the Sabbath is the end, yet it may be and is commanded. Secondly, though it bee the ende, in reſpect of the meanes tending vnto it, as the corporall reſt, and the externall exerciſes of religion; yet it is alſo as a meane referred to the principall end of all, which is the glorie of God; and therefore may be commanded, according to Bellarmines owne rule.

1.Tim 1.5.
Rom.13.13.

To the ſecond, we anſwere: Firſt, though ſome internall act of religion be preſcribed in the firſt Commandement: Thou ſhalt haue no other Gods, and as to loue God, and feare him; yet that internall act, which is peculiar for the Lords day, is onely preſcribed in the fourth commandement. Secondly, hee verie fondly deuideth the firſt table into three precepts, whereas it containeth foure, as Origen ſheweth by this reaſon: ſome men thinke, ſaith hee, that theſe two are one Commandement: Quod ſi ita putetur, &c. which if it bee ſo, then are there not tenne Commandements, what is become then of the Decalogue? therefore the firſt commandement is, thou ſhalt haue no other Gods: the ſecond, Thou ſhalt make no grauen image, &c. thus farre Origen, hom. 8. in Exod. Thirdlie, to make a grauen image to worſhip it, is an externall act of religion, yet this is forbidden in the ſecond commandement, which Bellarmine ioyneth to the firſt, therefore his diuiſion is not good, referring all externall actes of religion to this fourth, or as he maketh it, the third commandement.

To the third we anſwere; Firſt, that other holy daies are not enioyned with the like ſtrict precept of ſanctification, as the Lords day is, which is of Gods inſtitution onely, the other were ordeined by the Church, ſome are the meere inuentions of men, as popiſh holie dayes: but the ſpeciall ſanctifying of a day to an holy vſe, dependeth vpon Gods commandement and inſtitution.

Secondly, it is Bellarmines owne poſition, that men are bound in conſcience to keepe the Feſtiuals of the Church, cap. 10 prop.3. whereas we do not ſo affirme: therefore it is he himſelfe, and not we, that doth lay ſnares by the ſuperſtitious obſeruation of holy daies, to entangle mens ſoules and conſciences.

Thirdly, we yeeld vnto him, that it is very hurtfull to appoint ſo many holy daies, as they doe, which indeed is nothing elſe but to clog mens conſciences with a multitude of ceremonies, which are burdenous to the Church.

The Proteſtants.

Anſ. FIrſt, wee graunt that all ſinne, as of theft, adulterie, and the like, are in their owne nature alike, at what time ſoeuer they are committed; yet they may be made more heinous by the circumſtances: as of the place, as ſacriledge is greater than common theft; ſo why not of the time?

Secondly, if that which is no ſinne vpon the worke-daie, bee a ſinne vpon the Sabbath, as to dig, to plough, to cart; then that which is a ſinne of it ſelfe, as to ſteale, to commit adulterie, muſt needs be greater and more hainous being done vpon the Sabbath: for beſide the ſinne, he alſo prophaneth the Sabbath, which is the breach of another commandement. Thirdlie, the internall act of religion, is properlie commanded in the ſanctifying of the Sabbath: for it cannot be ſanctified by the externall act of going to Church, and hearing the worde, vnleſſe a man be inwardly in the deuotion of his heart prepared for thoſe holy exerciſes. So inward grace is more ſought for vpon the Sabbath, not in reſpect of that inward deſire which we haue vnto them, which ought alwaies to bee alike feruent in vs, if it were poſſible, but becauſe of thoſe outward meanes, of hearing the worde, publique praier, receiuing the ſacraments, which are vpon the Sabbath: for the which, wee ought more eſpeciallie to prepare and examine our ſelues.

Eccl.4.17.
Iſay 58.13.

The Prophet Eſay doth teach vs, how the true Sabbath muſt be kept. If thou turne away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy will on my holie daie,&c. and ſhalt honour the Lord, not doing thine owne waies, nor ſeeking thine owne will, nor ſpeaking a vaine word,&c. Abſtinence from ſinne then is cheeflie required vpon the Lords daie: we muſt not doe our owne waies. So it is decreed, Colonienſ. part.9.cap.10. Blaſphemijs ac periurijs nomen Domini profanatur, ac Sabbatum, quod nos admonet, vt quieſcamus peruerſe agere, & benefacere diſcamus, contaminatur: By blaſphemies and periuries the name of God is prophaned, and the Sabbath, which teacheth vs to leaue doing peruerſly, and to learn to doe well, is polluted.

Auguſtine ſaith, ſpeaking of the Iewiſh women: Quanto melius fœmina eorum lanam facerent, quam illo die in neomenijs ſaltarent &c. ſpiritualiter obſeruat Sabbatum Chriſtianus, abſtinens ſe ab opere ſeruili, id eſt, à peccato: Tract. 3. in Iohan. Their women might bee better occupied in ſpinning at home, than in dancing vpon this day: for a Chriſtian doth ſpiritually keepe the Sabbath, in abſtaining from all ſeruile worke, that is, from ſinne. They then doe obſerue the Sabbath onely in externall acts, doe but carnallie keepe it.

Concil. Matiſcon.2.can.1. Eſtote omnes in hymnis & laudib. Heere is more then the externall act of religion required: intention and affection are inward things. Againe in the ſame Canon, Exhibeamus deo liberam ſeruitutem, non quia hoc a nobis Deus expetit, vt corporali abſtinentia diem Dominicum celebremus, ſed quærit obedientiam, per quam nos calcatis terrenis actibus ad cœlum vſque miſericorditer prouehat: Let vs yeelde vnto God our free ſeruice: for God requireth vs not by bodily abſtinence to keepe the Lords day, but he looketh for our Obedience, by the which we ſhould tread vnder our feete all earthly and carnall acts, and ſo be lifted vp in meditation euen vnto heauen,&c. Obedience then is eſpecially required vpon the Lords day.

71. Error.

7. THey hold it a thing vnlawfull for Chriſtians to faſt vpon the Lords day, Bellarm. lib. 3. de cultu ſanctor. cap. 11.

The Proteſtants.

Anſ. First, we grant that this opinion is very ancient, and that in Tertullians time it was receiued in many Churches: and they thought it as vnlawfull to bow the knee vpon the Lords day, Tertul.lib.de coron.Militis.Die dominico ieiunare nefas ducimus, & de geniculis adorare: Wee count it vnlawfull to faſt vpon the Lords day, and to pray kneeling.

So likewiſe, Trullan. Synod. can.90. Ne dominicis diebus genua flectamus: That wee bow not our knees vpon the Lords day: but the Papiſts obſerue not the one, why then ſhould they binde themſelues to the other? Ignatius maketh faſting vpon the Sabbath as great an offence, as the killing of Chriſt himſelfe, Epiſtol.ad Philip. But, I truſt, they will not ſay ſo.

Secondly, the reaſons why faſting is not to be vſed vpon the Lords day, becauſe the Ieſuite ſetteth downe none, I will ſupply out of Auguſtine: firſt, Sentio (ſaith hee) ad ſignificandam requiem ſempiternam (vbi eſt verum Sabbatum) relaxationem, quàm conſtrictionem ieiunij aptius conuenire. I think that to ſignifie the eternall reſt, which is the true Sabbath, libertie rather, than the vrging of faſting doth moſt fitly agree. But to this we anſwere; that this ſignification of eternall reſt, is no eſſentiall part of ſanctifying the Sabbath, nor no end of the inſtitution, as we haue ſhewed afore though it may haue ſuch an application: and therefore this reaſon proueth not ſuch a neceſſitie of not faſting vpon the Sabbath. Secondly, Die dominico ieiunare magnum eſt ſcandalum: It is a great offence to faſt on the Lords day, becauſe the Manichees made choiſe of that day to faſt in. Per quod factum eſt, vt ieiunium Sabbathi horribilius haberetur, By the which (ſaith hee) it came to paſſe, that the faſt of the Sabbath was more abhorred, Auguſtin. ibid. But this reaſon now bindeth not vs, becauſe the name and hereſie of the Manichees is now worne out, and therefore there is no feare of any ſcandale to ariſe that way.

Epiſt.86.

Thirdly, wee grant that the Lords day is not the fitteſt time for publique faſts: firſt, becauſe it is a day of reioycing: ſo wee read that the people in Nehemiah his time, were forbidden to mourne and weepe, after the law was read vnto them by Ezra, becauſe it was a day of ioy and mirth. Secondly, the day of ſolemne and publique faſting ought to be ſet apart from other daies, and to be proclaimed ſolemne, and to bee ſpent wholly in ſpirituall exerciſes, euen as the Sabbath, with vacation and reſt from other bodily labours, as wee may read, 2. Chron. 20. 3. Nehem. 9. 1. And therefore any day is more fit than the Sabbath, becauſe that is a holy day alreadie vnto the Lord: but when we will humble our ſelues before the Lord by faſting and prayer, ſome day would onely for that purpoſe be conſecrate vnto God: that may be as a voluntarie ſacrifice: whereas we are bound of neceſſitie to keepe the Lords day.

Nehem.8.11.
2.Chron.20.
Nehem.9.1.

But concerning priuate and particular faſts, when men by themſelues haue occaſion to giue themſelues to prayer, whereof Saint Paul ſpeaketh. Such priuate exerciſes may be better performed vpon the Sabbath, becauſe of the ordinarie exerciſes of the word, which are notable meanes to kindle and ſtirre vp true deuotion in him, which at that time will humble himſelfe; yea and publique faſts, though not ordinarily, yet when there is iuſt occaſion, may bee kept vpon the Sabbath: as wee read Act.20.7. how that Paul continued his preaching till midnight: whereof Auguſtine writeth thus, Neceſſarius ſermo reficiendi corporis cauſa interrumpendus eſſe non viſus eſt profecturo Apoſtolo: The neceſſarie preaching of the Apoſtle, he thought not good, for the refreſhing of their bodies to breake off, being readie to depart. Wee conclude therefore, that it is lawfull to faſt vpon the Lords day, though it be not alwaies expedient. And Auguſtine very well determineth this matter: Ego in Euangelicis, & Apoſtolicis literis video preceptum eſſe ieiunium: quibus autem diebus non oporteat ieiunare, & quibus oporteat, præcepto domini, vel Apoſtolorum non inuenio definitum: I finde both in the Euangelicall and Apoſtolicall writings, that faſting is commanded: but vpon what daies we ought to faſt, vpon what we ought not, I doe not finde it defined, Epiſt.86. Wherefore to faſt or not to faſt vpon the Lords day, or vpon any other, being not determined in Scripture, is left as a thing indifferent to the Church of God.

The Councell doth not ſimply forbid faſting vpon this day, but that it ſhould not be done ſuperſtitiouſly, with an opinion of greater holineſſe, nor in contempt of the day, which is to Chriſtians a day of reioycing.

So likewiſe Carthaginenſ.4.can.64. Qui dominico die ſtudioſè ieiunat, credatur non catholicus: He that of purpoſe doth faſt on the Lords day, let him be counted not Catholique. A man may faſt then vpon the Lords day, ſo it be not of a ſuperſtitious or wilfull purpoſe.

In their owne decrees it ſtandeth thus: Decret.par.1 diſt.76 cap. Vtinam omni die ieiunare poſſimus, &c. I would we might faſt euery day, which in the Acts of the Apoſtles we read, that S.Paul did, and the reſt of the faithfull with him in the daies of Pentecoſt, and vpon the Lords day.

1 Damaſcene ſheweth at large, that whereas the Iſraelites were commanded not to afflict themſelues vpon the Sabbath, yet Moſes faſted twice fortie daies, and Elias trauailed 40. daies, faſting all that while, and Daniel faſted three weekes of daies, and the Iewes did faſt their great and ſolemne faſt, in humbling of themſelues, if it fell out vpon the Sabbath.

2 Auguſtine is alleaged before, how S. Paul preached till midnight, and ſo they faſted vpon the Lords day: and he addeth further, Vt ſciremus ſi neceſſitas aliqua oriatur, non eſſe vrgentiori actioni prandium præferendum: That we ſhould know, if any neceſſitie doe ariſe, that one repaſt muſt not be preferred before a more vrgent occaſion,&c. yet Auguſtine concludeth, that it were not ſafe in thoſe daies, no not vpon any ſuch occaſion to faſt vpon the Lords day, becauſe of the Priſcillianiſts, that enioyned a neceſſarie feaſt vpon that day, Ne maius malum incurratur è ſcandalo quam bonum percipiatur ex verbo, Leaſt greater euill may fall out by the offence, then good receiued by audience, and hearing of the word,&c. But it is euident that Auguſtine ſpeaketh of publique and ſolemne faſts, which are not ſo fit vpon the Lords day: for thus he ſaith, Farre be it from vs ſo to take this, Tanquam ſolerent Apoſtoli ſolenniter die Dominico ieiunare, As though the Apoſtles vſed ſolemnly to faſt on the Lords day. And Auguſtines reaſon was, why faſting was not fit vpon the Lords day, becauſe the Priſcillianiſts, ioyning therein with the Manichees and Marcionites faſted vpon that day, as making queſtion of the truth of the reſurrection, as likewiſe they faſted vpon the day of the Natiuitie vpon the ſame reaſon, Quaſi non fuerit veris, as though it were not in truth: as Leo ſaith: This hereſie being now baniſhed, there cannot ariſe the like offence by faſting vpon the Lords day.

The Proteſtants.

Anſ. FIrſt, as the name of Sunday, and the reſt, is of the heatheniſh beginning, and therefore were better to be otherwiſe termed, as the firſt, ſecond, or third from the Lords day, as the Iewes called their daies from the Sabbath: ſo your terme of Feries, is no leſſe heatheniſh, deriued from the word feria, or feria, which were ſo called, à feriendis victimis, of ſtriking the heatheniſh ſacrifices, as Sextus Pompeius ſaith, Fulk. ibid.

Auguſt. cont. Fauſt. 18. 5.

2 We haue other names alſo that might be reformed, as of our moneths: as March is ſo called of Mars, Iune of Iuno, Ianuary of Ianus, which were Heathen Gods: Iuly and Auguſt doe beare the names of men: yea, and if we might bee inuentors of new names, the termes of Chriſtmas, Michaelmas, Candlemas, ſhould not ſtand in force, nor any more bee vſed, which are as offenſiue as the reſt: for as for the names of Heathen Idols, the moſt part are ignorant of them; but the vulgar terme of Maſſe, is too too well knowne, and too much loued of many of our Country men. Now for the name Sunday, which is ſo great a mote in your eye, if there were no more but that, Auguſtine ſheweth how it might be fauourably expounded, Dies magni ſolis celebramus, illius ſolis, de quo dicit ſcriptura, orietur vobis ſol iuſtitiæ: We doe keepe Sunday holy, namely of that great Sunne, whereof the Scripture ſpeaketh, the Sunne of righteouſneſſe ſhall ariſe. So in the Ciuill law, Cod. lib. 3. tit. 12. leg. 3. it is called, dies ſolis, Sunday: though the other name, dies Dominicus, the Lords day, bee preferred; as ibid. leg. 7. Valentin. Dies ſolis Dominicos rite dixere maiores, the Sundaies, our anceſtors rightly called the Lords daies.

In Pſal. 93.

3 We wiſh that all theſe termes might be laid downe, as Auguſtine ſaith, Nolumus, vt dicant, & vtinam corrigantur vt non dicant: We would not haue men ſo to ſpeake, and I wiſh they were reformed. But ſeeing by continuall cuſtome mens tongues are inured to ſuch termes, let them know, that they are vſed onely as ciuill names, to call things by, not for any religion or myſterie in them contained, or ſignified.

And here I doe commend Hieromes two rules concerning heatheniſh names, the firſt, where hee ſaith, Libr. de veſte ſacerdotal. in Iob, Arcturum & Orionem, &c. In Iob wee reade of Arcturus, and Orion, and other names of the ſtarres, not that the Hebrewes doe ſo call them: Sed quod nos non poſſumus, quæ dicuntur, niſi conſuetis vocibus intelligere, But becauſe we cannot vnderſtand what is ſaid, but vnder the common termes,&c. So then, where vſe and cuſtome hath obtained to haue things called by ſuch names, and they are knowne by no other, there neceſſitie doth diſpenſe with Heatheniſh names.

His other rule is this, that ſuch Pagan termes, which haue no neceſſarie vſe, but proceede of prophaneneſſe or wantonneſſe, ſhould be left, Abſit, vt de ore Chriſtiano ſonet, &c. God forbid, that a Chriſtian mouth ſhould ſound, Iupiter, Hercules, &c. quæ portenta ſunt magis, quàm nomina. Which are monſters rather, then names. This is a good caueat for young Students, that they ſhould in their exerciſes, as declamations, diſputations, Comedies, Tragedies, auoide and decline thoſe monſtrous Heatheniſh names, which yet are too rife among them.

As we thinke other names fitter then that of Sunday for the Lords day, yet ſome haue vſed it, which were farre from heatheniſh termes. 1. Iuſtine Martyr calleth it Sunday. 2. Auguſtines iudgement is ſeene before, in what tollerable ſenſe it may be ſo called. 3. The reformed Churches doe moſt vſually call it by the name of the Lords day: and wee take it to be the fitteſt name: ſee confeſſ. Heluetia c.24. Anſpurg. artic. 5. and the reſt.

THE THIRD PART, OF THE FESTIVAL dayes of Chriſt and the holy Ghoſt.

The Papiſts.

THe feaſts of Eaſter and Whitſontide, and other ſolemnities of Chriſt, were preſcribed (they ſay) by the Apoſtles, Rhemiſt. Matth. 15. ſect. 2. to be kept vpon certaine daies, and that Peter did appoint that Eaſter ſhould not bee kept the 14. day of the firſt Moone, as the Iewes obſerued it, but the Lords day after. And of the feaſt of Pentecoſt mention is made: Ergo, theſe feaſts were inſtituted of the Apoſtles, Bellarm. cap. 12, 13.

73. Error.

1. Cor. 16. 8.

Bellarmine to proue the celebration of Eaſter, as it is now obſerued in the Latine Church, to bee Apoſtolicall, alleageth the 8. Canon of the Apoſtles, which decreeth, That hee which obſerued Eaſter before the vernall Equinoctium, whether Biſhop or Prieſt ſhould be depoſed.

Anſw. It is a cleare caſe, that thoſe Canons are forged and falſly aſcribed to the Apoſtles: 1. In the laſt Canon the Goſpel of S. Iohn is counted among the Canonicall bookes of the new Teſtament, which was not at that time written, when theſe Canons are ſaid to haue beene made by the Apoſtles aſſembled together: for S. Peter, a principall compoſer of theſe Canons, is brought in ſpeaking, Can. 28. who was put to death before S. Iohn writ his Goſpell. 2. Of what validitie theſe Canons be, it appeareth in the Trullane Councel, Can. 12. where they forbid Biſhops after their conſecration to haue ſocietie with their wiues, directly contrarie to the 5. Canon of the Apoſtles: and they giue a reaſon thereof, Statum eccleſiaſticum in pulchriorem ordinem reducentes: Their meaning was to bring the ſtate eccleſiaſticall to a more beautifull order, whereas the Apoſtles in the beginning of the Goſpell, ad fidelium imbecillitatem ſe demittebant, did ſubmit themſelues to the imbecillitie of the weake. But if they were the Canons of the Apoſtles indeede, what boldneſſe had this beene, ſo lightly to reuerſe their decrees? 3. In the laſt Canon there are three bookes of the Macchabees made Canonicall, whereas the Papiſts themſelues receiue but two: why then doe they themſelues tranſgreſſe the Apoſtles Canons? 4. Gelaſius, decret. de Apocryphis, doth in direct termes make, Librum canonum Apoſtolorum, the booke of the Canons of the Apoſtles Apocryphall. The authoritie therefore of theſe forged Canons doth little moue vs.

Againe, Bellarmine vrgeth a diuine teſtimonie, as he calleth it, how that Paſchaſinus reporteth, that in Pope Zozimus time there being a queſtion about the time of the celebration of Eaſter: the Pope with the Weſt Church appointing the 25. of March, the Eaſt Church the 22. of Aprill, it ſo fell out, that in a certaine Church in Sicily, a certaine fountaine, that vſed euery yeere to fill it ſelfe againſt Eaſter day for thoſe that ſhould be baptized, was emptie vpon the 25. of March, but was full the 22. of Aprill: whereby the Pope and the Weſt Church, did perceiue themſelues to be in an error, and the Eaſt Church in the right, Bellar. cap. 12.

Anſ. Firſt, if this tale beare any credit, it ſheweth, that the Eaſt Church was ſounder, concerning the celebration of Eaſter, than the Pope. Secondly, this miracle alloweth that Eaſter day ſhould be kept after the 20. day of Aprill, contrary to the decree of the Nicene Councell: which limited the time for Eaſter from the 21. of March to the 20. of Aprill, and no further. Thirdly, this fained miracle is of like credit to that viſion, which Pope Pius affirmeth to haue beene ſhewed to one Hermes: how that an Angell appeared vnto him, commanding him to keepe Eaſter vpon the Lords day, decret. p. 3. diſt. 3. cap. 21. But if the celebration of Eaſter were grounded vpon the inſtitution of the Apoſtles, they need not bring ſuch beggerly ſtuffe, by lying miracles and viſions, to make proofe of their matter.

The Proteſtants.

Anſ. FIrſt, wee grant that it is expedient for the Church to keepe the memoriall of the Natiuitie, Paſſion, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion of Chriſt, and of the comming of the holy Ghoſt; and the daies inſtituted for the remembrance thereof, no doubt, ought to be had in greater account, then any other holy daies inſtituted by the Church. Secondly, it cannot be proued, that they were preſcribed by the Apoſtles; or if they were, but as indifferent ceremonies, which are ſubiect to alteration, and in the which the religion or worſhip of God doth not conſiſt. Certaine it is, that before the time of Conſtantine the great, there were not many feſtiuall daies kept, in ſo much, that the feaſts of the Natiuitie of Chriſt, Eaſter, Pentecoſt, were not vniformally obſerued for many yeeres after, as appeareth by diuers Councels. And before Conſtantines time, there was great contention betweene the Biſhop of Rome, and the Biſhops of the Eaſt, about the celebration of Eaſter; they alleaging the conſtitution of S. Iohn, the other of S. Peter: wherefore it is like that the Apoſtles appointed no ſuch certaine daies: for then the Church would not haue broken them.

Concil. Aurel. 4. cap. 1.

Tolet. 10. c. 1.

Thirdly, Pentecoſt, whereof Saint Paul ſpeaketh, was the feaſt of the Iewes, which, with other ſolemnities of theirs, the Apoſtles obſerued not as a portion of Chriſtian religion, but taking occaſion of the meeting of the Iewes in thoſe feſtiuall daies: and ſo doe we obſerue thoſe holy daies for order and edification of Gods people, that vſe to aſſemble at ſuch times.

Fourthly, what cauſe is there, why Eaſter and Whitſontide ſhould be tied to the Lords day, and the Natiuitie of Chriſt, which Bellarmine confeſſeth, was vpon the Lords day, ſhould indifferently be kept vpon any day? but that hereby we vnderſtand, that it is an indifferent matter, whether they ſhould be kept vpon the Lords day, or any other, and whether vpon any certaine day, or to bee left to the diſcretion of the gouernours of the Church to be obſerued, as any other occaſion ſhall be offered, Fulk. annot. Apocalyp.1. ſect.6.

Laſtly, we ſhewed Auguſtines opinion, in the firſt part of this queſtion, how hee vnderſtandeth that ſaying, Pſal.118. This is the day which the Lord hath made, onely of the Sabbath: thereby inſinuating, that other holy daies either were not inſtituted of God at all, or elſe not with the like neceſſitie.

Let vs ſee further the conſent of antiquitie: that the obſeruation of Eaſter is no Apoſtolicall conſtitution it appeareth: 1. Becauſe there was no vniforme order ſet downe for it before the firſt Nicene Councell, where, as Theophilus Alexandrinus witneſſeth, theſe three rules were made for Eaſter: the firſt, that it ſhould not be kept before the 21. of March, nor after the 20. of Aprill, becauſe their Equinoctium did fall then vpon the 21. of March, and Eaſter muſt in no wiſe be kept before the Equinoctium: The ſecond, that they ſhould waite for the 14. day of the firſt Moone from the 21. of March, till the 14. of Aprill. The third, that they ſhould obſerue the firſt Lords day after the 14. of the firſt Moone, and ſo keepe their Eaſter. This order was begun in the Nicene Councell, not by the Apoſtles: Ergo, it is not Apoſtolicall.

2. Neither after the Nicene Councell did this order holde: for in Pope Zozimus time, the Weſt Churches kept Eaſter the 8. from the Calends of Aprill, that is the 25. of March: the Eaſt Churches the 22. of Aprill: Leon. epiſtol.61. Againe, Leo. epiſtol.62. maketh mention how Theodoſius the Elder committed this matter to the Biſhop of Alexandria, to compoſe the cycle of the Paſch: who committed in his account a great error (as Leo ſaith) for in the 76. yeere of his order, Eaſter fell vpon the 24. of Aprill, whereas by the order of the Nicene Councell, it ſhould not exceede the 20. day. Further, the ſame Leo writeth, Epiſtol.92. that whereas ſome appointed the next Eaſter then comming vpon the 15. from the Calends of May, ſome vpon the 8. he writ to the Emperour Martian, who according to the order of the Eaſt Church, would haue it kept the 8. day: and thereunto Leo conſented. This could not then be an Apoſtolicall decree, whereof there was no more certaintie.

But that the feſtiuities of Chriſt and the holy Ghoſt are to be preferred before other holy daies, we willingly grant: as Cod. lib.3. tit.12. leg.7. by the conſtitution of the Emperours, Valentin. Theodoſ. Arcad. the feaſts of the Paſch, the Natiuitie, and Epiphanie, are eſpecially authorized. And Decret. par.2. cauſ.7. qu.1. c.29. the Natiuitie of our Lord, Epiphanie, the Paſch, and Pentecoſt, are reckoned vp for the principall feaſts, and ſolemne daies, &c.

That the feſtiuals of Chriſt and the holy Ghoſt, though not inſtituted by the Apoſtles, yet are to haue the preeminence before the feſtiuities and commemorations of Saints, thus further it is ſhewed. 1. Socrates euidently teſtifieth, ſpeaking of the Paſch, Nemo Apoſtolorum quicquam de illo ſanciuit. None of the Apoſtles did ordaine any thing cōcerning it: yet the day of Chriſts Natiuitie, Paſſion, and the reſt were preferred before other feſtiuals: as Chryſoſtome calleth the Natiuitie of Chriſt, Omnium reliquorum feſtorum Metropolim, The mother feaſt of all the reſt: ſo Conſtantine, though hee would haue other dayes alſo reuerenced, yet hee gaue commandement vnto all the ſubiects of the Romane Empire, Vt dieb. Seruatori nuncupatis feriarentur: That they ſhould make holy day, that is, reſt and recreate themſelues vpon the dayes dedicated to our Sauiour.

2. It appeareth alſo by that Canon of the Councell of Carthage. 4. c.65. Paſcha ſolennitas vno die et tempore celebranda eſt: The ſolemnitie of the Paſch muſt be celebrated vpon one day and time, &c. that there was no certaine Apoſtolicall tradition for it. And thoſe holy dayes of Chriſt haue to this day in the South Church the preeminence: as Zaga Zabo, next after the obſeruation of the Lords day, rehearſeth nouem dies in Chriſti memoriam celebrandos, Nine dayes to be celebrated in the memorie of Chriſt, the Annuntiation, Natiuitie, Circumciſion, Purification, Baptiſme, Transfiguration, Palmes, Aſcenſion, Pentecoſt, &c. beſide the Paſch, which he ſpeaketh of afterward: he further affirmeth, that all theſe they obſerue by the inſtitution of the Apoſtles, but thereof there is no more certaintie, then of that which he ſaith afterward: Ex inſtitutione quoq; Apoſtolorum duos dies celebrare tenemur, ſcilicet Sabbati et Dominici: By the inſtitution of the Apoſtles, we are bound alſo to keepe two dayes, of the Sabbath and Lords day, wherein it is not lawfull for vs to doe any thing at all, &c. But it is certaine that the Apoſtles abrogated the Iewiſh Sabbath.

It ſeemeth then to be no Apoſtolicall conſtitution, for then ſo many in the Eaſt and South would not haue tranſgreſſed it: yet for the preeminence of theſe feaſts, ſee before the Decrees alleaged.

THE FOVRTH PART, OF THE ſolemnities of Saints.

The Papiſts.

1. THey hold that holie daies may be dedicated vnto Saints, for their honour and worſhip: as Chriſt promiſed that the charitable act of Mary Magdalene wrought vpon him ſhould be recorded and remembred. Hereby wee learne that the good workes of Saints may be recorded to the honour of Saints in the Church, whereof ariſe their commemorations and holie daies, Rhemiſt. annot. Matth. 25. ſect. 1. 74. Error. Matth. 26. 13.

The Proteſtants.

THe good workes of Saints may bee remembred to the honour of God, without their holy daies and commemorations: Chriſt inſtituted no holie day of Mary Magdalene, nor commanded an image of her fact to be made, but a memorie of her in preaching the Goſpell. Secondly, wee graunt, that Chriſtian ſolemnities may be kept, as things indifferent, which the Church may retaine or abrogate as it ſhall ſeeme beſt for edification, not obſerued of neceſſitie as a part of the worſhip of God, not conſecrate to the honour of Saints; ſeeing all diuine worſhip is wholly to be reſerued to God, not to be giuen to any other: For times and ſeaſons, the Scripture ſaith, the Lord hath put only in his owne power: therefore he is onely to haue the honour of them. Thirdly, what honour is due vnto Saints Auguſtine ſheweth: Colimus martyres eo cultu dilectionis, & ſocietatis, quo & in hac vita coluntur ſancti homines dei: We doe honour Martyrs with the ſeruice of loue and fellowſhip, as holie men are honoured in this life. But it is not lawfull to conſecrate times and daies to holy men liuing, therefore neither to Saints departed: for one and the ſame kinde of honour is due to them both. Act. 1. 7. Contra Fauſt. lib. 2. cap. 21.

Leon. 1. epiſtol. 4. c. 4. Notum ſit dilectioni veſtræ vniuerſos dies Chriſti innumeris conſecratos fuiſſe virtutibus, &c. Be it knowne to your brotherhood, that all the daies of Chriſt are conſecrate with his innumerable vertuous acts: yet if wee ſhould indifferently honour all the workes of Chriſt, all daies ſhould be holy daies, for they are all full of the miracles of Chriſt, &c. From hence we collect theſe two arguments againſt Saints daies. 1. The miracles of Chriſt are more forcible to conſecrate an holy day, then the acts of Saints; but all his miracles make not holie daies: Ergo. 2. By the ſame reaſon, that all Chriſts acts haue not their feſtiuals, becauſe then all daies ſhould be feſtiuall, we do alſo exclude Saints daies, becauſe that if all Saints ſhould haue their commemorations, the daies of the yeere would not ſuffice thereto: and we ſhould haue none but feſtiuals.

Cod. lib. 3. tit. 12. leg. 4. a law was made by Conſtantinus the Emperour, that none but the Prince, ſhould, ferias condere, erect daies of recreation for the people, &c. If ciuill holie daies muſt be appointed only by the Emperour the Lord of the earth, in the Church holy daies ſhould be grounded vpon the inſtitution of Chriſt Lord and King of his Church.

1 Ieremie the Greeke Patriarke well ſheweth wherefore holie daies were inſtituted, Ad laudem Dei memoriamq́; eorum, qui illi à ſeculo placuerunt, referuntur, ad excitationem imitationemq́; virtutis: They are referred to the praiſe of God, and their memorie, who haue pleaſed him in times paſt, and to ſtirre vs vp to the imitation of their vertues, &c. Saints memories then are to the praiſe of God, not to their honour. Cenſur. Oriental. p. c. 15.

2 Auguſtine ſaith, Deo, beneficiorum eius feſtis diebus ſacramus memoriam, ne volumine temporum ingrata ſubrepat obliuio: We by feſtiuall daies conſecrate the memorie vnto God of his benefits, leſt vngratefull obliuion of them in the proceſſe of time might grow. Lib. 10. de ciuit. Dei. c. 4.

3 See the confeſſion of Heluetia in the former part.

4 See alſo Leo before alleaged.

The Papiſts.

2. THey maintaine, that there may bee holie daies and commemorations of all Saints, as Chriſt promiſeth there ſhould be of Mary Magdalene, Rhemiſt. Matth. 25. ſect. 1. 75. Error.

The Proteſtants.

THis is another principall fault, which wee finde and complaine of in their holy daies: that they haue peſtred the Church with ſuch a number of Saints and Saints daies. Firſt, as wee haue partlie ſhewed before, they appointed a ſeuerall Saint almoſt for euery purpoſe, as here we haue ſet it downe. Ex Tileman. Loc. 28.

Saint Leonard for captiues.
Saint Rochus for the peſtilence.
Saint George for warre.
Saint Anna giues riches.
Saint Nicholas and Chriſtopher for the ſea.

And thus it is true of them, as Ieremie complained of the idolatrous Iſraelites: that their gods were after the number of their cities, Iere.2.28. In like manner alſo haue they multiplied their Saints daies: for beſide the feſtiuals of Chriſt, the holy Ghoſt, and of the Apoſtles, they haue added theſe beſides.

And thus haue they cumbred the people of God with their infinite obſeruations. Vulgare eſt, quod malæ mulieres dicunt, quod plus lucrantur in vno die feſto de peccato ſuo, quam per totam ſeptimanam,&c.* It is a common thing in the mouthes of naughtie women, that they gaine more by their ſinne in one holy day, then all the weeke beſide, and ſo of other ſins: Et ideo videtur, quod acceptum eſſet Deo, quod pauciora feſta eſſent in eccleſia: And therefore it ſeemeth to be acceptable to God, that there ſhould be fewer holy daies in the Church,&c.

Cod.lib.3.tit.12.leg.7.Valentin. Theodoſ. Beſide the feſtiuities of Chriſt, as the Natiuitie, Epiphanie, Paſch: only, the feſtiuals of the Apoſtles are enioyned to be kept.

Likewiſe, *Bonifac.*8. though a corrupt Pope, yet herein not ſo ſuperſtitious as the reſt, enioyneth, that the feaſts of the twelue Apoſtles, the foure Euangeliſts, and the foure Doctors of the Church, Gregorie, Auguſtine, Hierome, Ambroſe, ſhould be ſolemnely kept aboue the reſt: and in that decree there are no other holy daies particularly named: Sext.decret.lib.3.tit.22:cap.1.

Maſter Tindall holy Martyr hath ſealed this truth: The multiplication of holie daies, of feaſts of Corpus Chriſti, the viſitation of our Ladie, is a wicked face and colour, and indeed fooliſh, vnprofitable, vaine, Fox pag.1253.col.1. Pag.1141.2.40

2 Athanaſius calleth the feaſt of the Annuntiation, vnum ex Dominicis feſtis, atq; adeo primarium, one of the Dominicall feaſts, and that a principall one, &c. and he giueth this reaſon, quippe in quo de filij Dei è cœlis deſcenſu agatur, &c. becauſe therein the deſcenſion of the Sonne of God from heauen is treated vpon, &c. Hee will haue the feaſt of the Annuntiation, not the Ladies, but the Lords feaſt: and alloweth them onely as chiefe feſtiuals, wherein the benefits and acts of Chriſt are treated on. The Papiſts.

They enioyne ſanctification and neceſſarie keeping of all their feſtiuities and holie daies: and ſo make no difference betweene the obſeruation of holie daies appointed of God, and others ordained of men, requiring the like ſtrictnes in keeping of them all, Rhemiſt.annot.Gal.4.ſect.5. And Bellarmine alſo affirmeth, that men are bound in conſcience to keepe all the feſtiuals of the Church: cap.10.prop.3. 76.Error.

The Proteſtants.

There are no daies neceſſarie to bee kept, but thoſe that are of the Lords appointment; the reſt, being void of ſuperſtition, may be celebrated as indifferent: and therefore not to be commanded with the like ſtrictnes, as is the Lords day. There is greater libertie vpon holie daies for bodily labour, then vpon the Sabbath: for bodily reſt vpon the ſeuenth day is commanded of God; bodilie labour vpon all other daies permitted, and may without offence of conſcience be vſed, when it is not by the lawfull authoritie of the gouernours of the Church vpon iuſt occaſion reſtrained, as during the time of publike prayers and faſts, hearing of the word, and ſuch like.

The reſt of the Sabbath, ſo farre as it helpeth our preparation and fitnes to ſpirituall exerciſes, and is a part of ſanctifying the Lords day, bindeth ſimply in conſcience, becauſe it is the commandement of God: but the reſt vpon holy daies doth not in it ſelfe binde vs, no otherwiſe then by reaſon of offence, that may ariſe by our contempt of the conſtitutions of the Church.

Wee finde that Simon Iſlip, Archbiſhop of Canterburie, directed his letters patents to all Parſons and Vicars, wherein he ſtreightly charged them and their pariſhioners vnder paine of excommunication, not to abſtaine from bodily labour vpon certaine Saints daies, which before were wont to be hallowed and conſecrated to vnthriftie idlenes, Fox p.393. Ergo, by their owne iudgement, all the feſtiuities of their Church are not to be kept alike.

*Reformat.Ratiſpon.artic.*20. In minoribus feſtiuitatibus liberum cuique facimus,&c. In the ſmaller feaſts, we giue leaue to euery man, after he hath heard Maſſe, to returne to his labour, whereby he may prouide ſuſtenance for him and his.

*Synod.Treuerenſ.cap.*10. Vſque in meridiem in feſtis diebus feriari volumus, & facto ſacro, cuique ad labores, & negotia ſecularia redire liceat: Wee will haue men to keepe holy day vpon the feſtiuals till noone, and then to returne to their labours and worldly buſines, hauing firſt ſerued God,&c. All feſtiuals therefore are not with the like ſtrictnes to be obſerued.

This truth hath alſo been ſealed: Iſabel Tracher perſecuted, becauſe ſhe did work vpon holie daies, Fox p.819.col.1. William Wingraue, Thomas Hawkes, with other perſecuted for the like, for ſaying, That God biddeth vs worke one day as well as another, ſauing the Sunday. pag 985.col.1.

Auguſtine maketh three degrees of feſtiuall daies: In the firſt and higheſt degree hee placeth the Lords day; Quomodo Maria virgo, mater Domini, principatum tenet inter omnes mulieres; ita inter cæteros dies, hæc omnium dierum mater eſt: As amongſt women the Virgine Mary, the mother of our Lord, is the chiefe; ſo this day is the mother and chiefe of all other daies: ſpeaking of the Sabbath of Chriſtians: *De tempore Serm.*136.

In the next place or degree hee putteth the feſtiuals of Chriſt, and the holy Ghoſt, as the commemorations of his Natiuitie, Paſſion, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion : as in his ſermon vpon the Aſcenſion day he thus ſaith, Conditoris baſilicæ huius S.Leontij hodiè depoſitio eſt : ſed dignetur obſcurari ſtella à ſole: To day we haue the commemoration of the depoſition or ſepulture of S.Leontius the founder of this Church: but let not the ſtarre thinke much to be obſcured of the Sunne. So in the third ranke hee counteth the commemorations of holy men, which vnto the feſtiuities of Chriſt were but as the ſtarre to the Sunne. We will adde a fourth place or degree, diſtinguiſhing betweene the commemorations of the holy Apoſtles, and other ſuperſtitious and popiſh Saints daies, which our Church hath worthilie thruſt out at the doores.

Let vs ſee their owne Decrees : Decret.part.3.diſtinct.3.c.1.Reliquas feſtiuitates,&c. Vpon other feſtiuals, neq; cogendi ad feriandum,&c. men muſt neither be conſtrained to play, or ceaſe from worke, nor yet bee forbidden: Therefore by this decree all their feaſts are not of neceſſitie to bee kept. Againe, ibid.cap.12.Gregor.Peruenit ad nos,&c. It is come to our eare, that certaine doe forbid to work vpon the Saturday, who are nothing elſe but the preachers of Antichriſt, &c. But the Papiſts forbid to worke vpon Saturdaies being their holie daies: Ergo, by the determination of Gregorie, they are Antichriſts preachers.

Euſeb. lib.4 de vit.Conſtantin.

1 Conſtantine decreed, vt diebus Seruatori nuncupatis feriarentur,&c. that men ſhould keep holie day, or recreate themſelues vpon the daies dedicated to our Sauiour: other daies of Martyrs hee would haue honoured onely, &c. So herein he would haue a manifeſt difference betweene them and other daies, Ex Damiano de morib. Æthiop.

2 The Aethiopians doe keepe the old Sabbath, and the Lords day with ſuch ſtrictnes, that it is not lawfull for them thereon, rem aliquam facere, ne minimam quidem, to doe any thing, no not the leaſt matter, &c. Zaga Zabo: Other feſtiuities they keep with more libertie. It is their error to keep the old Sabbath ſtill: but herein they agree with vs in making difference betweene the feſtiuals of Gods inſtituting, and thoſe which are by humane conſtitution.

3 See the confeſſion of Heluetia, chap.24. The Lords day they affirme to haue been kept euer ſince the Apoſtles: the feſtiuals of Chriſt they allow to be kept, but with greater libertie: Saints daies they wholly diſclaime, being ordained to their honour.

4 See Gregories decree, and Simon Iſlips, and reformat.Ratiſpon.&c. before alleaged, &c.

AN APPENDIX TO THIS PART, OF THE VIgiles and night watches annexed to feſtiuall daies.

The Papiſts.

77.Error.

1. THey were wont vpon Saints eeues to giue themſelues to faſting, and watching. But their night vigiles or watches they doe not now ſo ſtrictly obſerue, becauſe of the great abuſes which did grow thereupon, Bellar.cap.17. Yet they haue not altogether left them, for they haue their Nocturnes or midnight Mattens, and their prime houres in the morning, Rhemiſt.annot.Act.10.ſect.6.

The Proteſtants.

THe Chriſtians in time of perſecution had their antelucanos hymnos, their early and timelie ſongs and hymnes: they met together to worſhip God, before the Sunne riſe, becauſe they could not ſafely, neither were ſuffered to aſſemble in the day time. But that is no reaſon, why now the Church ſhould vſe vigiles or nocturnes, ſeeing we now haue free exerciſe of religion in the day time: no more then Pauls example is to be vrged, that prayed by the riuers ſide with the people, and there preached vnto them, becauſe in idolatrous cities they could haue no places of meeting, that therefore wee now ought to doe the like, hauing Churches and Oratories to aſſemble in.

Decretum Teleſphori: Vt nocte natiuitatis domini miſſas celebrarent, reliquis verò temporibus non ante horam diei tertiā,&c. That Maſſe ſhould be celebrate the night before the natiuitie of our Lord, at other times not before the 3.houre of the day, becauſe Chriſt was crucified at that houre, &c. Here vigiles are forbidden, except only one night in the yeere. This Canon is rehearſed, diſtinct.1.cap.48.

Synod.Colonienſ.ſub Adulpho,part.1,cap.7. Ne Canonici & Vicarij Cleri noſtri Colonienſis vigilijs defunctorum,&c. Leſt that the Canons and Vicars of our Clergie at Colon, ſhould be hindred from frequenting more neceſſarie leſſons by the vigiles of the dead, which they were wont to performe at ſeuen in the morning; we will, that from henceforth vigiles ſhall begin at two in the afternoone, that they may bee finiſhed before euening prayer. Here vigiles and night watches are cleane cut off, and turned to day-exerciſes.

And how well they kept their vigiles may appeare by that decree of Innocentius,decr.Greg.lib.3.tit.41.cap.9.Dolentes referimus,&c. We ſpeake it with griefe, that certaine, not only inferiour prieſts, but prelates, ſpend the time in eating and drinking vntill midnight, &c.

Auguſtine ſaith, Vigiliæ ſunt inutiles, cum qui vigilauerit circa cogitationes turpes,&c. Vigiles are vnprofitable when one watcheth vnto vncleane thoughts: De ſalutarib.Dominicat.cap.47. and hee commendeth onely thoſe vigiles, in nocte non opera noctis, ſed diei peregiſſe. Orat.cont.Iudæor. in the night to do the works of the day, not of the night, &c. as to ſing, to pray, to eate & drink, to dance, &c.

It cannot bee denied, but that of ancient time, the Chriſtians had their nocturne aſſemblies, and night watches, but they kept them not of any ſuperſtitious minde, as thereby thinking to merit, but they did giue themſelues to watching and faſting, to make their praiers more earneſt, neither was it vſually done, but at ſome ſolemne times, as in the Paſch. 1. As Epiphanius ſaith, in diebus paſchalibus apud nos ſunt humi dormitiones &c. preces vigiliæ, ieiunia &c. in the daies of the Paſch among vs there is lying vpon the ground, praiers, watchings, faſting.

Lib. 3. tom. 1. hæreſ 75.

2. So alſo Tertullian of the Africane Church: ſpeaking of the inconuenience of the marriage of Chriſtian women with the Pagans: Quis ſolennib. Paſchæ abnoctantem ſecurus ſuſtinebit? what husband (hee meaneth a Pagane) will endure his wife to lie from him all night in the ſolemnities of the Paſch: But this inſtance of watching afterward was taken vp ſpeciallie by Monkes, who grew to be immoderate and exceſſiue in it, as Caſſianus reporteth of Moyſes an Abbot, that was ſo giuen to watching, that he was faine to pray vnto God to ſend him a little ſleepe.

Harm. ſect. 15. pag. 477.

4. Eraſmus ſaith, vigilias nocturnas non placuiſſe eccleſiaſticis viris, &c. That night watches pleaſed not eccleſiaſticall men, this ſheweth, that they were taken away by their authoritie, the name onlie remaining.

The Papiſts.

2. THey haue alſo another ſuperſtitious cuſtome, to ſet vp waxe candles, and Taper-light before Images, and vpon the Alar, to carrie them about in proceſſion, and euen at midday, and high noone: And Bellarmine would authoriſe this cuſtome by the continuall burning of the Lampes day and night, as he ſaith, in the Tabernacle among the Iewes. Bell. lib. 3. de reliqu. c. 3. ſ. nono.

78. Error.

The Proteſtants.

Anſ. FIrſt, we ſay of this, as we did of the vigiles of the Church before: that Chriſtians in thoſe daies in their night aſſemblies vſed candle light, as S. Hierome ſaith, anſwering thus to Vigilantius: Cereos non clara luce accendimus, Wee doe not burne candles at noone day, as you doe falſely cauill: but thereby to temper, or qualifie the darkenes of the night, &c. But it followeth not, that the vigiles beeing now left, wee ſhould burne candles at noone day: and that this was their cuſtome, to burne their Lampes onelie in the night, Auguſtine ſheweth, where hee ſpeaketh of thoſe that did not vow ceram ad luminaria noctis, waxe candles for the lights of the Church in the night.

Hier. aduerſ. Vigilant.

De tempor. ſerm. 7.

Secondly, it is vtterly vntrue, that the Lampes in the Tabernacle burned all day: the contrary is prooued, that they were lighted in the euening, and ſo burned all night, for thoſe that kept the watch in the Temple, 2. Chron. 13. 11. and that in the morning againe they were put out. 1. Sam. 3. verſe 3. The Prieſts ſhall ſet the Lampes on fire, inter duas veſperas, betweene the two twilights, that is, the euening and morning, Exod. 30. 8. And he ſhall dreſſe them to burne from the euening to the morning. Leuit. 24. 3. And S. Hierome vpon thoſe words, 1. Sam. 3. before the lampe of God went out, &c. thus writeth: Intelligi oportet antequam lux diurna fieret: It muſt bee vnderſtood before it was day, when the lampe was put out. That therefore which the Ieſuite made for an argument for himſelfe, wee will vrge againſt him: that ſeeing the lampes amongſt the Iewes, who abounded in types and ceremonies, were burnt onely in the night, and not vpon the day: it is ſhame for thoſe that would be counted Chriſtians, in ſuperſtitious cuſtomes, to exceed and go beyond them.

2. Chro. 13. 11.
1. Sam. 3. 3.
Exod. 30. 8.
Leuit. 24. 3.
1. Sam. 3. 3.

Our Doway men, vpon that place before alleaged. 1. Sam. 3. 3. giue this note: this viſion happened early in the morning, before the time of dreſſing the lamps, when ſome were put out, and others light. If their meaning be that others were lighted to burne by day, as they note in another place, that God would not haue darkenes in his tabernacle by day nor night: it is an erroneous gloſſe, and contrary to the very text, where they fixe this marginall note: Exod. 27. 21. where they thus tranſlate. Aaron and his ſonnes ſhall place it, that it may giue light before the Lord, vntill the morning: but in the originall it is from euening to morning.

True it is, that in the times of perſecution the Chriſtians had their antelucanos cœtus, their meetings before day, whereof Plinius Secundus maketh mention in an Epiſtle to Traiane and Tertullian in his Apologetic. and then it is like they vſed lamps and lights of neceſſitie to helpe the darkeneſſe of the night, and afterward, lights were vſed in the day, not ad fugandas tenebras to chaſe away darkneſſe, ſed ad ſignum lætitiæ demonſtrandum, to ſhew foorth a ſigne of ioy: as Hierome ſaith: but after this, a ſuperſtitious vſe of day lights crept into the Church.

Aduerſ. Vigilant.

1. Tatianus teſtifieth, faces præferri ſolitas principibus, that lights were wont to be carried before the princes, in the feſtiuals of their gods: it ſeemeth then that this vſe, being an heatheniſh cuſtom, was not then taken vp among the Chriſtians: this Tatianus liued about anno 170. at that time when hee wrote againſt the Gentiles, an Orthodoxe, but afterward he fell into hereſie.

Aduerſ. Græc.

2. Tertullian directly ſpeaketh againſt this vſe of Gentiliſme in burning candles by day: accendant quotidie lucernas quibus lux nulla eſt &c. illis competunt teſtimonia tenebrarum, &c. let them ſet vp lights daily which haue no light, &c. the teſtimony or ſigne of darkeneſſe well agreeth vnto them: and againe, quis philoſophum ſacrificare, aut lucernas meridie vanas proferre compulit: who euer compelled a Philoſopher to ſacrifice, or to bring forth vaine lights at noone day, &c. Hee complaineth that they vrged Chriſtians to doe that, which they exacted not of their owne Philoſophers.

Lib. de idololat.

Tertul. Apologetic.

3. This then hauing beene taken vp by the Heathen, is worſe to be liked of, then if it had beene a Iewiſh ceremony: for certainely it is a leſſe fault to play the Iewes then the Heathen: confeſſ. of Sweueland. c. 8.

4. Hereupon the ancient Eliberine ſynode in Spaine, miſliking the ſuperſtitious vſe of candlelight by day, decreed thus: ceroes per diem placuit in cæmiterio non accendi: it ſeemeth good vnto vs, that candles ſhould not be lighted in Churchyards by day.

THE NINTH QVESTION, CONcerning the Virgine Marie.

THis queſtion ſtandeth of many parts. Firſt, whether the bleſſed Virgin Marie were conceiued without ſinne. Secondly, whether ſhee vowed virginitie before the Angell was ſent vnto her. Thirdly, of the aſſumption of her body into heauen. Fourthly of the dignitie and preeminence that ſhe hath (as they affirme) aboue all other Saints, yea, and the Angells too. Fifthly, of the merits of the Virgin Mary and of the Aue Maria.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE VIRGIN Mary, were void of originall and actuall ſinne.

The Papiſts.

79. Error. 1. ALl men are borne in ſinne, Chriſt onely excepted, and his mother for his honour: Rhemiſt. Rom. 5. ſect. 9.

Anſw. It is no more honour for Chriſt to be borne of a ſinner, then to haue taken his fleſh, and lineally deſcended, according to his humanity, of Thamar that committed inceſt with Iuda, and Rahab which was an harlot, Matth. 1. 3. 5. Secondly, it maketh more for the honour of God that Chriſt was borne without ſinne of a woman which was a ſinner, and more ſetteth forth his power, than otherwiſe, leſt he ſhould be thought to haue deriued his puritie from his mother. Matth. 1. 35.

80. Error. 2. They hold, that there was no actuall ſinne in the Virgin Marie, no not in the leaſt and ſmalleſt ſinnes, which they call veniall, Rhemiſt. 1. Iohn. 1. ſect. 5. Shee was eſpecially protected, and preſerued from ſinning by the grace of God.

Anſ. That God is able cleerely to ridde his children from ſinne, and to preſerue them from falling thereinto, we denie not: but, ſeeing you haue no Scripture for this priuiledge, that ſhould bee beſtowed onelie vpon Marie, to bee free from ſinne: but rather the contrary is prooued out of Scripture, That all haue ſinned, Rom. 3. 23. it is too raſh and bold an aſſertion, contrarie to the will of God, to aſcribe any thing to his power. He is as able to exempt all from ſinning as one: vnleſſe therefore you can ſhew ſome ſpeciall warrant out of Gods worde, for Maries freedome, by your reaſon, all the children of God ſhall be freed from ſinne as well as Marie, becauſe God is able to doe it. Rom. 3. 23.

Let vs heare Bellarmines opinion: hee ſaith that men are ſtained three waies with originall ſinne. Firſt the whole poſterity of Adam may be ſaide to haue ſinned potentiallie in Adam, beeing at that time in his loynes. Secondly, as ſoone as the bodie beginneth to haue any being in the womb. Thirdly when as the ſoule is inſpired into the bodie: hee confeſſeth that the Virgine Mary was conceiued as all other are, after the two firſt waies: that is, if we either reſpect her beeing in Adams loynes, or the firſt conception of her fleſh: but concerning the third, her ſoule was without ſpot of originall ſinne, in the very inſtant of the infuſion thereof into her body. And this he ſaith is a godly and probable opinion, though it be not yet determined in their Church as a point of faith: De amiſſion. grat. lib. 4. cap. 16.

Anſ. This diſtinction, which the Ieſuite hath coyned, concerning theſe three kinds of conception in ſinne, is both very friuolous and vntrue: for the firſt is none at all: if all that were in Adams loynes, when he ſinned, may bee ſaid to bee conceiued in ſinne, then our Sauiour Chriſt alſo, which were blaſphemy to affirme. The other two kinds make indeede but one; for to bee conceiued in originall ſinne, implyeth a pollution both of body and ſoule: And the time of the conception is more properly referred to the beginning of the knitting of the fleſh in the wombe, than to the inſtant of the infuſion of the ſoule: as Dauid in the Pſalme 51. 5. ſaith, In ſinne hath my mother conceiued mee: But the mother conceiueth onely the fleſh: the ſoule is infuſed and inſtilled of God, as the Ieſuite alſo thinketh. Wherefore in graunting that the Virgine Mary was in her fleſh conceiued in originall ſinne, hee affirmeth in a manner the ſame that we doe: for how can the ſoule remaine vnſpotted, comming into a body already infected with originall ſinne? But let vs examine ſome of his reaſons. Pſalm. 51. 5.

Argum. 1. Adam was a figure, as S. Paul ſaith, of him that was to come, that is, of Chriſt: but Adam was created of the earth before it was curſed: Ergo, Chriſt alſo muſt be borne of the Virgin Marie void of curſe, and ſo free from originall ſinne: Bellar. cap. 15.

Anſ. Firſt, the Ieſuite knoweth that theſe are but weake arguments, that are drawne from types and allegories, and conclude not. Secondly, Adam was a forme or figure of Chriſt, but not in all things, neither in this, which the Ieſuit vrgeth: but Auguſtine ſhall ſpeake for vs both, wherein hee was a figure: Adam forma futuri eſt, i. Chriſti, &c. Adam was a figure of Chriſt to come, becauſe as he was cauſe of death by eating the forbidden meat, euen vnto thoſe of his linage, which did not eat of the tree: ſo Chriſt vnto thoſe which are of him, although they haue done nothing righteouſlie in themſelues, hath giuen righteouſneſſe by his croſſe. *Cont. Iulian. lib.*1. The words alſo of the Apoſtle doe carrie the ſame ſenſe; for in the ſame verſe he ſaith, That death hath raigned euen ouer thoſe that ſinned not after the manner of the tranſgreſſion of Adam, verſ. 14. that is, ouer children: ſo that this muſt be the meaning: That as Adams ſinne extended to thoſe that committed it not, ſo Chriſts righteouſneſſe is applyed to thoſe that wrought it not: herein then is Adam a figure of Chriſt. 3. And yet if we ſtretch this allegorie to this point, which the Ieſuite vrgeth, it will onely enforce the virginity of Mary, not her freedome from ſinne: as Auguſtine elſewhere maketh this alluſion: Adam de terra virgine natus, Chriſtus de Maria virgine procreatus: As Adam was made of the earth, beeing yet a Virgine that had brought foorth none before; ſo Chriſt alſo was borne of the Virgine Marie. De tempor. Serm.77.

*Argum.*2. Thou art all faire my loue, and there is no ſpot in thee, Cantic. 4. 7. this is vnderſtood of the virgine Mary: Ergo, ſhe was without ſpot, Bellar. ibid. Cantic.4.7.

Anſ. Firſt, S. Paul I thinke vnderſtood this place better then the Ieſuit doth; the Apoſtle applyeth it to the Church of Chriſt, That hee might make it to himſelfe a glorious Church, without ſpot or wrinckle, Epheſ. 5. 27. Secondly; Chriſt maketh it without ſpot by ſanctifying it and waſhing it in his bloud: this place therefore ſerueth not for any originall pureneſſe by nature. Epheſ.5.27.

Our Doway doctors doe heere alſo put in their verdite, thus gloſing vpon that place, Geneſ. 3. 15. Where they read thus corruptly, according to the vulgar latine, ſhee ſhall bruiſe the head: our B. Ladie refuſed all euill ſuggeſtions, &c. and ſo bruiſed the ſerpents head, in that ſhee quite vanquiſhed all manner ſuggeſtions of the wicked ſerpent, &c. Doway tranſlation pag 12.

*Contra.*1. The Latine tranſlation which goeth vnder Hieromes name, appeareth herein euidently not to be his: for he readeth, ipſe conteret, he ſhall bruiſe, or it may be put in the neuter, it ſhall bruiſe, that is the ſeede, as Pagnin, Montanus, Vatablus, Iunius read, in the Hebrew, the worde is (Hu) which is not of the feminine gender: and Vatablus their owne writer doth expound it of Chriſt, not of Marie. 2. That Marie refuſed all Sathans groſſe ſuggeſtions, that they came not into act wee doubt not, but that ſhee yeelded to none of his ſuggeſtions, is as much to ſay, that ſhe was without ſinne, which Tertullian is ſo farre from yeelding vnto, that he toucheth her with a ſpice of vnbeleeſe, hoc in loco apparet incredulitas eorum &c. in this place appeareth their incredulitie: when his mother and brethren ſent to ſpeake with him: and in the ſame place hee affirmeth, mater aque non demonſtratur adhæſiſſe illi, &c. It is euident that his mother did not ſo much adhere vnto him, as Martha and Marie. Tradit in Gen. Lib de carne Chriſti. Matth.12.

The Proteſtants.

That the virgine Mary was both conceiued in ſinne, and was alſo ſubiect to actuall ſinnes in her life, as other of the children of God: thus out of the Scripture we doe declare it.

1. How elſe can the word of God be true, that ſaith, All haue ſinned, Rom. 3. 23. and 5. 12? They will anſwer, that Mary had an eſpeciall priuiledge: then let them ſhew it out of the worde of God, and wee will beleeue it: otherwiſe the generall concluſion muſt ſtand, that all haue ſinned: Againe, Marie her ſelfe in her ſong, calleth Chriſt her Sauiour, Luk 1. 47. Ergo, ſhee was a ſinner: for how elſe could ſhe be ſaued from her ſins which ſhee had not? If they anſwere as they doe, that Chriſt was her Sauiour onely, becauſe he preſerued her from ſinne: we doe thus replye. Firſt, that a Sauiour in Scripture is defined to be he that laueth the people from their ſinnes, Math. 1. 21. not that preſerueth onely. Secondly, if Mary were free from originall ſinne, as they ſay ſhe was, ſhe needed not a Sauiour to keepe her from ſinne, for ſhe might haue preſerued her ſelfe. Rom.3.23. Luk.1.47. Fox.pag.801. Matth.1.21.

*Argum.*2. Mary died: Ergo, ſhe was a ſinner: for ſinne brought death into the world, Rom. 5. 12. If ſhe had had no ſinne, ſhe had not died. Chriſt indeed, though hee were no ſinner, yet hee bare our ſinnes, and therefore died for vs.

Theſe places alſo may be vrged: In whome, that is, in Adam, all haue ſinned, Rom. 5. 12. As in Adam all die, ſo in Chriſt we ſhall be made aliue, 1. Cor. 15. 22. and Chriſt died for all, 2. Corin. 5. 15. Therefore the virgine Mary alſo ſinned, and was dead in Adam, and Chriſt died for her: Ergo, ſhee was a ſinner. Rom.5.12. 1.Cor.15.22. 2.Cor.5.15.

*Anſ.*1. Mary ſinned potentially in Adams loynes: and in that reſpect we confeſſe ſhee was redeemed by the bloud of Chriſt: and though by nature ſhe had an ability to ſinne, yet was ſhe preuented by grace, Bellar. cap. 16.

*Contra.*1. If ſhe ſinned onely as ſhe was in Adams loynes, then all that were in Adams loynes ſinned, ſo Chriſt ſhall be counted in the number of ſinners. 2. As wee ſinned in Adam, ſo wee are made righteous by Chriſt; but we are not potentially made righteous, but verily and indeed: Ergo, if Mary haue life and righteouſneſſe in Chriſt, ſhee ſinned more then potentially in Adam. 3. Shee was preuented, you ſay, by grace, and kept from ſinne, Vt ſimul eſſe, & iuſta eſſe inciperet: That ſhee began to haue her being, and to be iuſt at one time. How then is it true, as you confeſſe, that Mary was redeemed by the bloud of Chriſt, and that Chriſt dyed for her? For Chriſt died for vs, while wee were yet ſinners. Rom. 5. 8. and reconciled vs being enemies, verſe 10. Ergo, Mary was ſometime both a Rom.5.8.10.

ſinner, and an enemy to God, if ſhe haue any benefit by Chriſts death: for redemption and freedome purchaſed, betokeneth bondage and ſlauery before.

Iohn.2.4. Chriſt checked and rebuked his mother, Ioh.2.4. Woman what haue I to doe with thee? Ergo, it ſeemeth ſhe was not without fault. Rhemiſt. Anſw. It was rather a doctrine to others, to teach them not to doe any thing for reſpect of kinred, againſt reaſon, then a reprehenſion to Mary. Wee reply: But I pray you, how could the Apoſtles learne to beware of that fault, if it had bene no fault in Mary? How could they be admoniſhed in her, if ſhe were not firſt her ſelfe admoniſhed? And the manner of ſpeech ſheweth, it was a rebuke, Chriſt ſaluting her by no other name, then if hee had ſpoken to any other woman.

Argum. 3. The Papiſts themſelues are in a ſtagger, and dare not conſtantly affirme, that Mary was conceiued without ſin, but put in this clauſe (as many godlie deuout men iudge) Rhemiſt.Rom. 5 ſect.9. And Bellarmine ſaith, In maiori parte Eccleſiæ pie credi: That the greater part of the Church doth ſo godly beleeue, yet he dare not determine vpon it himſelfe, De cult ſanct lib.3.c.16. But why Fox.p.800. are they afraid to hold it as an vndoubted truth, ſeeing Pope Sixtus hath cleerely determined that it was ſo, forbidding the Dominicke Friers to preach the contrarie, and heereupon erected a new holie day of her Conception? Heere then they are driuen to a great ſtreight: for either they muſt abſolutely hold, that ſhe was not conceiued in ſinne, againſt the Maſter of ſentences, and Thomas Aquinas, with other Schoolemen; or elſe hold the contrary, and ſo confeſſe the Pope to haue beene in error.

I maruell that the Ieſuite is not aſhamed to ſay, that Pope Sixtus the fourth left this queſtion of the Virgin Maries conception vndetermined; ſeeing hee erected an holy day in memory of her conception: and tooke part with the Franciſcanes, that held her pure and vndefiled conception, againſt the Dominickes that maintained the contrary: yea and the ſame Pope vpon this occaſion added this clauſe to the Aue Maria: Et benedicta ſit Anna mater tua, de qua ſine macula tua proceſſit caro virginea. And bleſſed be Anna thy mother, of whome thy Virgins fleſh proceeded without blot of origenall ſinne: granting alſo great Indulgence, and releaſe of ſinnes, to all thoſe that would inuocate the bleſſed Virgine with the ſame addition. For all theſe euident and ſubſtantiall proofes, which make this matter as cleere as noone day: yet Bellarmine would face vs downe, that this Pope holy father concluded no ſuch thing, but left it as a matter indifferent, cap. 15. It was alſo thus determined, Concil.Baſilienſ.ſeſſ.36. Doctrinam illam diſſerentemglorioſam Virginem ſemper immunem fuiſſe ab omni orginali & actuali peccato tanquam piam & catholicæ fidei conſonam definimus, nulliqúe de cætero licitum eſſe contrarium prædicare, aut docere: This doctrine, that the glorious Virgine was free from all ſinne originall and actuall, we define to be a godly doctrine and conſonant to the faith, and that no man teach the contrary. And extrauag. commun. lib.3. tit.12 cap 2. Sixtus 4. decreeth all thoſe to be heretikes, which affirme the Virgin Marie to haue beene conceiued in originall ſinne. How then is this matter left vndetermined?

De ſanct. virginit.cap.4. Auguſtine ſaith, Beatior Maria percipiendo fidem Chriſti, quàm concipiendo carnem Chriſti &c. materna propinquitas nihil Mariæ profuiſſet niſi fœlicius Chriſtum corde, quàm carne geſtaſſet. Mary was more happie in perceiuing the faith of Chriſt, then in conceiuing the fleſh of Chriſt: neither had it profited her to be the mother of Chriſt, if ſhe had not more happily borne him in her heart, then ſhe did in her wombe, &c. But what neede had Marie to beleeue in Chriſt, if ſhee had beene pure from her natiuity, and had no ſinnes to be forgiuen her?

In Pſal.34. conci. 2. Auguſtine yet more plainely ſaith, Maria ex Adam mortua propter peccatum Adæ: Adam mortuus eſt propter peccatum, & caro domini ex Maria mortua eſt propter delenda peccata: Mary dyed being borne of Adam, becauſe of the ſinne of Adam: Adam dyed becauſe of his owne ſinne: Chriſt dyed in the fleſh to take away our ſinnes: Ergo, Mary by his ſentence was borne in the ſinne of Adam.

Auguſtine further ſaith, Quiſquis humanam &c. Whoſoeuer contendeth, that humane nature in any age whatſoeuer, needeth not the Phiſition the ſecond Adam, quia non vt vitiata in primo Adam, &c: becauſe it was corrupted in the firſt Adam, &c. Gratia Dei conuincitur inimicus, is conuinced to be an enemy to the grace of God.

Leo epiſtol.91 cap.9. thus writeth againſt the Priſcillianiſts that ſaid, the children of promiſe were borne of women, but conceiued of the holy Ghoſt: Quod catholicæ fidei repugnans, atque contrarium eſt, &c. Which aſſertion, ſaith he, is repugnant and contrary to the catholique faith, which confeſſeth that euery man receiueth life in his mothers wombe, that contagion of ſinne and mortality remaining, which is deriued into the offspring from the firſt parent: but they are regenerate and made the children of promiſe by the holy Ghoſt in the Sacrament of Regeneration, not in the wombe of fleſh: but in the efficacy of Baptiſme &c. Here this catholike Biſhop concludeth all men vnder originall ſinne in the wombe, there is no exception made of the virgine Mary.

Origen ſaith; Solus Chriſtus ſine macula eſt, &c. Onely Chriſt is without ſpot, who did no ſinne, &c. hom.1 in Leuitic. and Saint Hierome. Concluſit Deus omnes ſub peccato, &c. God hath ſhut vp all vnder ſinne, to haue mercy vpon all, onely he is excepted, which did no ſinne, neither any guile found in his mouth, Algaſ. queſt. 8. If onely Chriſt bee excepted, then not the virgin Marie.

See the Teſtimonie of Maſter Philpot holy Martyr: Praiſed bee God, that hath giuen you this ſorrowfull heart in reſpect of righteouſneſſe, and I pray you let me be partaker of theſe godly ſorrowes for ſinne, which bee the teſtimonie of the preſence of the holy Ghoſt; did not the ſword of ſorrow pierce the heart of the elect and bleſſed mother of our Lord? did not Peter weepe bitterly for his ſinnes? &c. pag. 1833. Epiſtol. ad Ioan. Careleſſ. This holy Martyr confeſſeth, that the Virgin Marie was a ſinner, and that ſhe ſorrowed for her ſinne.

Pa.1664.1.80.

And yet for further euidence. 1. Of the South and African Church, Tertullian ſaith directly, Soli Dei filio ſeruabatur ſine delicto permanere: It was reſerued onely to the Sonne of God to remaine without ſinne: And againe, Solus Deus ſine peccato, et ſolus homo ſine peccato Chriſtus, quia et Deus Chriſtus: Onely God is without ſinne, and the onely man without ſinne is Chriſt, becauſe Chriſt is God: So Gregentius Biſhop of Tephra, in Aethiopia: there is but one perfect Ieſus Chriſt, who was not ſubdued to the yoake of ſinne.

4 Salmeron the Ieſuite, confeſſeth that ſome of their ſide alleage 200. ſome 300. writers of opinion, that the Virgin Marie was conceiued in ſinne, and that Thomas Aquinas thinketh it too great a priuiledge for the Virgin Marie, for therein ſhe is made equall vnto Chriſt.

Yet we doe willingly yeeld vnto the Virgin Marie the title of bleſſedneſſe, becauſe ſhee was the choſen veſſell of God, dignified with the greateſt temporall bleſſing, to bee the mother of Chriſt, in whom ſhee found by faith in him euerlaſting happineſſe: yea wee refuſe not to call her the moſt pure Virgin, with ſome reformed Churches: that is pure not from all ſinfull thoughts or acts, but onely in reſpect of her ſpotleſſe virginitie: as Gregentius calleth her πάναγνον, the moſt chaſt Virgin.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER MARIE vowed Virginitie before the Annuntiation.

The Papiſts.

They would gather and conclude ſo much out of the anſwere of Marie to the Angell, who tolde her, ſhe ſhould conceiue and beare a ſonne, How can this be (ſaith ſhee) ſeeing I know no man? That is, ſhe plainely declareth, ſhe could haue no childe by knowing a man, becauſe of her vow, for otherwiſe ſhee needed not haue asked ſuch a queſtion, how a woman might haue a ſonne promiſed her, if ſhee had married to haue carnall copulation. Rhemiſt. Luke 1. ſect. 13. Bellarm. de Monachis. cap. 22.

81. Error.

Anſwere. Firſt, Origen thinketh, that this queſtion of the Virgin Marie (how can this be) proceeded from doubtfulneſſe, and ſome incredulitie or hardneſſe of beliefe: as thus he writeth, Homil. 1. in Geneſ. Si dixiſſet Scriptura, creſcite, &c. If the Scripture had ſaid, encreaſe and multiply, not adding further, he made them male and female, he might haue beene incredulous of this bleſſing, as the Virgin Marie was of the Angels bleſſing, ſaying, how can this be? Wherefore Bellarmine neeeed not ſo to take vp Caluine, as the deuiſer of a new fantaſie, in imputing ſome doubting to the Virgin; ſeeing this ancient father before him long agoe ſo affirmed.

Secondly, Ambroſe maketh this to be the cauſe why Marie ſo anſwered, ſhe had read the Prophecie of Eſay, that a Virgin ſhould conceiue and bring forth a ſonne, and therefore knew very well, that this holy childe ſhould be otherwiſe conceiued, then by the knowledge or helpe of man, Fulke ibid. Thirdly, as alſo the Angell deliuering at once his whole meſſage, and ſhewing what manner of childe it ſhould bee, euen the ſonne of the moſt High, who ſhould ſit on the throne of Dauid, and of his kingdome there ſhould be no end: that is, that the child ſhould be the Son of God: ſhe ſtraightwaies conceiued that ſuch a holy ſeede could not be borne of man, and therefore asketh, How without man he might be borne. Sic Caluin. Beza.

Bellarmine replieth, Firſt, that it is like the Virgin Marie was ignorant, that Chriſt ſhould be borne of a Virgin, lib. 1. de monach. cap. 22. And ſo it will follow, that ſhe vnderſtoode not the Prophecie of Iſay, or knew it not.

Contra. Firſt, it is a wonder, that they which doe in other things aduance the Virgin Marie aboue the ſtate of a woman or creature, making her equall to the Angels, ſhould now ſo much depreſſe her, imputing vnto the mother of Chriſt ſo groſſe ignorance, as not to know the moſt manifeſt Prophecies of Chriſt. Secondly, it is vntrue, that ſhee knew not the Prophets, as may appeare by her ſong, Luc. 2. verſ. 55. As he hath ſpoken to our fore-fathers, to Abraham, and his ſeede.

Origen ſaith of the Virgin Marie, Habebat legis ſcientiã, et Prophetarũ vaticinia quotidiana meditatione cognouerat: Had the knowlege of the law, & knew the Prophets writings by continual meditation, &c. and therefore the Angels ſalutation ſeemed ſtrange vnto her, not finding the like in all the

Hom. 6. in Luc.

Scriptures: yet Bellarmine is bold to tell vs, that ſhe was ignorant of the Propheſie, that the mother of the Meſſiah ſhould be a Virgine.

Secondly, ſaith he, ſhe was a moſt humble Virgine, and therefore would not curiouſly ſearch after the manner, how this childe ſhould be borne, ibid.

Contra. Firſt, it is no curioſitie, to deſire to be further inſtructed for the confirmation of our faith, but godly ſimplicitie: as it was no curioſitie in Gedeon to deſire to bee confirmed in his calling by the Iudg.6.36. ſigne of the fleece, Iudg.6.36. Secondly, it proceedeth rather of pride and curioſitie, not to ſeeke to be confirmed, or to refuſe the meanes of our further ſtrengthening, as Ahaz is reproued, becauſe he Iſay 7.12. would not aske a ſigne of the Lord for his further confirmation, Iſay 7.12.

The Proteſtants.

THat Mary, as ſhe was an entire Virgin before the birth of Chriſt, ſo that ſhe continued alſo a Virgin all her life after, we doe verely thinke, and condemne their opinion that hold the contrarie: but that ſhe vowed or purpoſed virginitie, before the meſſage of the Angell was brought vnto her, it is raſhly without Scripture, nay rather againſt it affirmed.

Argum. 1. The text is plaine, that they had a purpoſe to conſummate their mariage: when as Ma- Matth.1.18. rie was betrothed to Ioſeph, before they came together, Matth.1.18. Ergo, there was a meaning to come together, if ſhe had not in the meane time beene found to be with childe of the holy Ghoſt: for otherwiſe, it ſhould ſeeme to haue beene a mockerie on Maries behalfe, to promiſe mariage to Ioſeph, without any purpoſe to performe the dutie of mariage. But if it were done with both their conſents, then mocked they with God, who inſtituted mariage for ſome end and purpoſe, which could not be attained out of mariage: for they ſhould haue maried neither for auoyding fornication, nor for procreation, which are the two chiefe ends of mariage: as for the third, which is mutuall comfort, it ariſeth of the former.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that this vow of Mary was no hinderance to their mariage, in as much as ſhe knew by reuelation, that Ioſeph would neuer exact mariage duties of her: Bellarm. lib. 2. de monach. cap. 22.

Contra. 1. Thus they build their fanſies vpon deuiſed dreames and ſpeculations, Scripture they haue none for Maries vow, and therefore they ground it vpon their owne conceits. 2. If Mary had any ſuch reuelation, it is like alſo it was reuealed vnto her, for what cauſe Ioſeph ſhould forbeare her companie; but this is contrarie to the Scripture: for it appeareth by the annunciation of the Angell vnto Mary, when ſhee muſed with her ſelfe, what manner of ſalutation that ſhould be, Luk.1. verſ.28. that ſhe was not vſed or accuſtomed to ſuch reuelations and viſions. Theophylact ſeemeth to affirme as much, that the Virgin Mary was not acquainted with ſuch viſions and reuelations, giuing this reaſon, why the Virgin Mary was troubled, at the Angels ſalutation, doubting thereof whether it were μνηστεία ſuch as the ſalutation and ſollicitation is of woers vnto maids: and Eraſmus in his annotations vpon that place thereunto ſubſcribing, ſaith, Non conſtat an virgo ſic aſſueuerit, It is not euident whether the Virgin was vſed to ſuch viſions of Angels. 3. Your Maſter of ſentences thinketh that Ioſeph alſo purpoſed virginitie, *lib.*4. diſtinct. 30.b. If they both purpoſed virginitie, and yet contracted mariage, how was it not a kinde of mockerie, or deceit in them? 4. Your owne Doctors are vncertaine what to holde: Thomas Aquinas thinketh, that Mary made not an abſolute vow before the eſpouſals; Scotus affirmeth ſhe did: wherefore agree firſt among your ſelues, and let vs know your minde, and you ſhall haue our anſwere.

Argum. 2. It was not the manner among the Iewes to vow virginitie, but it was rather a ſhame and reproch to remaine and die a Virgin: and therefore Iephtahs daughter lamented her virginitie, Iudg.11.38. Iudg.11.38. How then could Mary be induced contrarie to the cuſtome of the Church, to vow virginitie? Yea Auguſtine confeſſeth as much: Hoc mores Iſraelitarum adhuc recuſabant: The manners of the Iſraelites did not ſuffer it, de Virginit. cap 4. though he himſelfe elſewhere, and in the ſame place ſeemeth to incline to the contrarie opinion.

Againe, if Mary vowed virginitie, ſhe vowed alſo againſt the bearing of children, and ſo her vow ſhould haue hindred the accompliſhment of that meſſage, which the Angell brought vnto her: for ſhe vowed not to be a mother, if ſhe vowed any thing, then had ſhe vowed againſt her ſelfe, who was choſen then to be the mother of our Lord.

The Auraſicane Councell ſaith: Concil. 2. can. 11. Nemo quicquam rectè Deo vouerit, niſi ab ipſo acceperit, ſicut legitur, quæ de manu tua accepimus, damus tibi, 1. Chron. 29. No man can rightly vow any thing to God, vnleſſe hee haue receiued it of God, as wee reade, that which wee haue receiued at thy hands we giue vnto thee: Mary therefore ſhould not haue done well to haue vowed virginitie, hauing not at that time receiued the gift, when ſhee eſpouſed her ſelfe to Ioſeph. It is ſufficient for vs to know, that Mary was both before Chriſts Natiuitie, and after ſo continued, an vndefiled Virgin: As Ambroſe ſaith, Synod. Telenſ. Quæ eſt illa porta, quæ manet clauſa, & nemo pertranſibit per eam ſed ſolus Deus Iſrael, Ezech. 44. nonne hæc porta Maria eſt, per quam in hunc mundum redemptor intrauit? What is that gate which remaineth ſhut, and no man ſhall paſſe thorough it but onely the God of Iſrael: is not the Virgine Mary this gate, by the which the Redeemer came into this world?

Let vs ſee their owne decrees: Part.2.cauſ,27.qu.2.cap.44. Inuenta eſt habens in vtero,&c. Mary was found to be with childe, of Ioſeph, who though he did not touch her, yet knew almoſt all the ſecrets, vxoris futuræ, of her that was to be his wife. And cap.40. Licentia maritali, By the right and power of an husband Ioſeph found her to be with childe,&c. This then being knowne to Ioſeph, that ſhe was with childe, and not to others, ſheweth, that ſhe was in ſubiection to Ioſeph, as his eſpouſed wife: and therefore no ſuch vowed virginitie.

S. Ambroſe alſo thus writeth: Ecce ancilla, apparatus eſt officij; contingat mihi, conceptus eſt voti: Behold thy handmaid, here is the yeelding of her dutie and obedience; be it vnto me according to thy word, here is the conceiuing of her vow, lib.2.in Luc. S. Ambroſe maketh this to be her vow, namely, that ſhe might beare this holy childe without the ſeede of man: and this vow taketh beginning after the annunciation, not before, which was long after the eſpouſals.

Further. 1. Iuſtine Martyr ſeemeth not to thinke, that Mary vowed virginitie before the eſpouſals: for, as Ioſeph (ſaith he) was ſaid to be the ſonne of Ely, not begotten of him, but borne onely of his wife according to the law, So it ſeemed good vnto God, of the wife of Ioſeph, to giue a ſonne vnto Ioſeph, yet not naturally begotten of him: If Marie then were his wife, and Ieſus counted his ſonne, how could the eſpouſals of mariage follow after a vow, which is an impediment to mariage.

reſp ad 133. qu. ad Orthodox.

2 Gregentius the Æthiopian Archbiſhop, thus applieth that place of Iſay, The ſealed booke ſhall be giuen vnto a man that can read, and hee ſhall ſay, I cannot read, for the booke is ſealed: This ſealed booke is the Virgin Mary (ſaith hee) the man that can read is Ioſeph, which in another mariage by another wife had children: now he could not read this book, that is, he could not haue carnal copulation with the Virgin, vnderſtanding by God, that ſhe was ſhut vp and reſerued for Chriſt,&c. If Mary had vowed virginity, it is like Ioſeph did ſo too: but he knew nothing of this ſecret, till after the eſpouſals, by the reuelation of the Angell.

Iſay.29 11.
Pag.44 diſput. cum Herban.

3 So Beza very well expoundeth thoſe words. Matth.1.18. before they came together: that is, before Ioſeph tooke her home to his houſe: for it was a cuſtome among the Iewes, to haue ſometime come betweene the eſpouſals and the mariage: not as Eraſmus tranſlateth, Priuſquam congreſſi fuiſſent, before they companied together: as though they had inhabited together before, but abſtained, becauſe of the vow of virginitie: of the ſame iudgement are Caluin. Bucer.in 1.c.Matth.

Matth.1.18. Beza annot.in hunc locum.

4 Gerſan alſo doth interpret it as Beza doth, of Ioſephs receiuing Mary into his houſe, not of companying together, and thinketh that mariage was ſolemnized betweene them,&c. which it is like ſhould not haue beene, if a vow, had gone before: and hereupon Eraſmus taketh vp Gerſan and refuſeth his opinion.

Eraſm.annot. in Luk.1.59.

THE THIRD PART, OF THE ASSVMPtion of the Virgin Marie.

The Papiſts.

THey report the ſtorie of the death and departure of the Virgin Mary, after this manner: At the time of her death after ſhe had liued ſixtie three yeeres, all the Apoſtles, being diſperſed into diuers nations, were miraculouſly brought together to Ieruſalem, to ſolemnize her funerall. They buried her in Gethſemani: and for three daies together the Angels were heard to ſing melodious ſongs: At three daies end alſo Saint Thomas came; who being deſirous to ſee her bodie, and not finding it in the graue, they thereupon aſſuredly deemed that her body was aſſumpted into heauen, Rhemiſt. Act.1.verſ.14.

82. Error.

*Argum.*1. It is beſt agreeable to the priuiledge of the mother of God, not to ſee corruption, Rhemiſt.ibid. Seeing alſo her ſonne was exempted from corruption, & natura Mariæ excipitur, the nature of Mary muſt bee excepted: caro enim Ieſu eſt caro Mariæ, The fleſh of Ieſus is the fleſh of Marie. And ſeeing Chriſt came to fulfill the law, which ſaith, Honour thy parents: it is very like, eum in morte ſpeciali gratia eam honoraſſe, That he did honour her by ſpeciall grace in her death. Theſe reaſons and other are to be read in a forged booke amongſt Auguſtines works, bearing title, De aſſumptione Mariæ.

Anſwere. Firſt, there is no credit to bee giuen to the forged writings which paſſe vnder the name of Saint Denis, and Athanaſius, out of whom they doe report the aſſumption of Marie, nay their owne leſſon, which they reade vpon the Aſſumption day, doth controll and confute the other. Firſt, that ſtorie ſaith, that without doubt ſhee was taken vp in bodie; but your leſſon leaueth it as vncertaine, whether ſhee were raiſed vp in bodie or not. Secondly, the forged ſtorie ſaith, ſhee was buried in Gethſemani, which was in Mount Oliuet: your leſſon ſaith, that the place of her buriall is in the midſt of the valley of Iehoſaphat, which is betweene Mount Oliuet and the Citie, Fulk. ibid.

Secondly, it followeth not becauſe Chriſt tooke fleſh of the Virgin, that therefore ſhe ſhould alſo as well be exempted from corruption: for hee tooke fleſh alſo of Dauid, and other his progenitors, who by the ſame reaſon ſhould be made immortall. And if ſhee were priuiledged by being the mother of Chriſt, from ſeeing corruption; why not alſo from hauing any ſinne? for her ſonne after the fleſh ſaw neither.

Luk.2.51.
2.Cor.5.16.

Thirdly, Chriſt alſo both did and might honour his mother as he was man, though ſo great a priuiledge be not granted vnto her. The reuerence which was to be done to his mother, was in regard of his manhood, and ſo was he obedient vnto them, Luk.2.51. and ſo long as hee liued in the fleſh: and therefore he did care for her euen vpon the Croſſe, commending her to the diſciple whom hee loued. But he neither was to honour her as he was God, and therefore not to free her from corruption, which had beene a worke of his Godhead: and the naturall affection and honour due vnto parents ceaſeth after this life. It were then too groſſe a conceite, to thinke that Chriſt hath ſuch regard now of the Virgin Mary in heauen, as he had of her, being his mother, in the daies of his fleſh: for Chriſt, as he is not now knowne after the fleſh, 2.Corinth.5.16. ſo neither knoweth he any after the fleſh.

The Proteſtants.

THis vncertaine report of the aſſumption of Mary, with other circumſtances thereof, we hold to be a very counterfeit ſtorie, and worthie of no credit.

De Sanct, ſerm.35.

*Argum.*1. If it were a matter of ſuch waight, as they make it, who haue erected a new found holyday of the aſſumption of Mary, ſurely the Scriptures would not haue beene ſilent therein: eſpecially S.Iohn (as Auguſtine ſaith) to whoſe charge ſhee was committed, would haue left ſomewhat in writing of that matter: for (ſaith he) Nullus fidelius id narrare potuerit, for no man could more truly and faithfully make relation thereof.

Gen.3.19.

*Argum.*2. That generall ſentence pronounced vpon Adam and all Adams ſeede, muſt needes alſo take place in the Virgin Mary, Thou art duſt, and to duſt ſhalt thou returne, Geneſ.3.19. Chriſt onely is excepted, and that by the teſtimonie of the word of God: wherefore, vnleſſe this priuiledge of the Virgin could be proued out of Scripture, as Chriſts is, we muſt needes hold her ſubiect to that generall law of corruption.

Auguſtine ſaith, Nulla catholica narrat hiſtoria,&c. How Mary was aſſumed no Catholique hiſtorie doth declare, and Apocryphal hiſtories the Church receiueth not. Serm.35.de ſanct.

Gelaſius decr.de Apocryphis: Liber qui appellatur tranſitus ſeu aſſumptio Mariæ, Apocryphus: The booke called the paſſage, or aſſumption of Mary, is Apocryphal: And in the end of the decree, he doth anathematize this booke and other the like, cum ſuis authoribus hæreticis, with heretikes the authors thereof. Gelaſius thought ſome heretike to be the inuentor of this fable of Mary her aſſumption.

There is a booke intituled, Of the aſſumption of Mary, bearing Saint Hieromes name, the author thereof ſeemeth to be more reaſonable concerning this point, than our new Maſters of Poperie: firſt, whereas the tombe, where Mary is ſaid to haue beene buried, was found emptie; the like (ſaith the author) many doe report of S.Iohn the Euangeliſts graue, that there was nothing, but Manna, found therein: Veruntamen, quid horum verius cenſeatur, ambigimus, Wee are in doubt, which of theſe ſhould be moſt true. Secondly, after the ſame manner diuers learned doe thinke (ſaith hee) that they roſe for euer, that were ſeene in the Citie, out of their graues, at the reſurrection of Chriſt, and David amongſt the reſt: and therefore S.Peter durſt not ſay, whoſe body, but whoſe graue is with vs, Act.2. For his body being riſen, the graue was emptie. Like to this fanſie he thinketh the ſtorie of Maries aſſumption to be. Thirdly, hee thus concludeth, Melius Deo totum, cui nihil eſt impoſſibile, committimus,&c. It is better to leaue this matter to God, to whom nothing is impoſſible, then to define of our owne authoritie, that which we cannot proue. Thus farre that author.

Hæreſ.78.

It ſeemeth, that in Epiphanius time it was not held, that the Virgin Mary was aſſumed and taken vp to heauen in body, for thus hee writeth: Siue mortua eſt ſancta virgo,&c. Whether the holy Virgin were dead and buried, &c. or whether ſhe were taken away (by the ſword) as it is written, the ſword ſhall pierce thy ſoule, &c. or whether ſhee remained, for her end is knowne to no man, wee muſt not worſhip the Saints, aboue that is meete, &c.

De Sanct. ſer.35.

2 Auguſtine, as before is alleaged, doubteth of the aſſumption of Mary, and thus concludeth: Reſtat vt homo mendaciter non fingat, apertum, quod Deus voluit manere occultum: It remaineth, that man doe not vntruly faine that, as manifeſt, which God would haue remaine hid.

3 Confeſſ. of Saxonie: artic.2. of originall ſinne: We ſay, that all men ſince the fall of our firſt parents, which are borne by the coupling together of male and female, do together with their birth bring with them originall ſinne, as Paul ſaith, Rom.5. by one man ſinne entred into the world, and by ſinne death,&c. Their opinion is then, that as Mary was ſubiect to originall ſinne, ſo likewiſe vnto death: and ſo was not exempted from the common condition of mortall bodies.

4 Baronius himſelfe confeſſeth, that this narration of the Virgin Maries aſſumption is confirmed neither by Scripture, nor by the ancient fathers. Suarez a Ieſuite ſaith, it hath eum gradum certitudinis, the ſame degree of certaintie, which the other opinion hath of her conception and ſanctification in her mothers wombe, &c. which is none at all, as is ſhewed before: for thus many vncertainties there are. 1. Whether ſhe died and was buried, or was taken away by the ſword, as before is alleaged out of Epiphanius. 2. Some thinke ſhe was buried in mount Oliuet, ſome in the valley of Iehoſaphat: as is alſo mentioned before. 3. Some ſay ſhe died, and after her death her body was found miſſing and ſo ſuppoſed to be taken vp: but Baronius holdeth, Marie vna cum corpore receptam, was taken vp together with her bodie into heauen: that is ſoule and bodie together. 4. The common opinion among them, is, that ſhe died at 63. yeeres of her age: but Volaterane at 51. Maſſeus at 49.

THE FOVRTH PART, OF THE HONOR and worſhip of the Virgine Mary.

The Papiſts.

They doe aſcribe vnto her a kinde of religious honour, more then to any of the Saints beſide: For whereas they call the worſhip of Saints, δουλεία, ſeruice; the honour of the Virgine, they terme, ὑπερδουλεία, a higher kinde of ſeruice, Bellarm. de Sanct. lib.2.cap.15. They call her Regina mundi, ſcala cœli, thronus Dei, ianua paradiſi, The Queene of the world, the ladder of heauen, the throne of God, and gate of paradiſe: yea, they giue her iuriſdiction ouer her ſonne, Iube natum, commaund thy ſonne, Iure matris impera filio, commaund thy ſonne by the right of a mother; Coge Deum, compell God to be mercifull to ſinners, annot. Fulk. 1.15. 83. Error.

Againe, they ſay, ſhe is to be honoured with the feaſts of her Natiuitie, Aſſumption, and Conception: for the other two, of her Purification, and Annunciation, are not proper to the Virgine, but concerne Chriſt: the one his Conception, the other his Preſentation, Rhemiſt. actor.1. ſect.7.

Argum. She her ſelfe prophecieth of all Catholike generations, that they ſhould bleſſe her in keeping her feſtiuities and memorials: but if theſe feſtiuities of her Conception and Aſſumption be not kept, ſhe ſhould haue none at all: and ſo be thought worthie of leſſe remembrance, then any other Saint, Galat.4. ſect.5. Rhemiſt.

The Proteſtants.

1. We doe not celebrate any feſtiuall daies in the honour of creatures, neither of the Virgine Mary, nor any other Saint, but onely to the honour of God: and therefore the feaſts of the Annunciation, and Purification, may much better be receiued, becauſe they belong and are referred vnto Chriſt, then the other feſtiuities of the Aſſumption and Conception of Mary, the inſtitution whereof was moſt ſuperſtitious: the one for the fained aſſumption of her bodie, which your owne writers are vncertaine of; the other to maintaine the hereſie of the Franciſcanes, that ſhe was conceiued and borne without ſinne. As for the memorie of the Virgine Mary, it may better be kept, then by ſuch feſtiuities: as our Sauiour Chriſt taught to keepe the remembrance of Mary Magdalen, by preaching the Goſpell, Matth.26.13. *Fulk. annot. Act.*1.7. And if they only are Catholike generations, that call her bleſſed in keeping theſe feſtiuities in her memoriall: then there were no Catholike generations for many hundred yeeres after, and ſo doe you condemne the age of the Apoſtles: for neither then, nor many yeeres after were theſe ſuperſtitious feſtiuities heard of. But Mary ſaith in her ſong, From henceforth, euen from this time forward, ſhall all generations call me bleſſed: ſo that if her bleſſedneſſe had conſiſted in the memorie of thoſe daies, they ſhould immediatly haue been kept, eſpecially the day of her natiuitie.

2 We doe allow all praiſe giuen vnto the Virgine, without the diſhonour of God and her Sonne and Sauiour Chriſt: we doe acknowledge the honour that God vouchſafed her, not to bee a meritorious or principall efficient cauſe of our redemption, but only an holie veſſell, and inſtrumentall cauſe of the conception and birth of Chriſt, by whoſe only merit and worthineſſe our redemption is perfited, as by a proper and principall, and only meritorious efficient cauſe thereof. And therefore, thoſe are blaſphemous titles which are giuen vnto her, to call her the ladder of heauen, and gate of Paradiſe, and ſuch like: and ſo in a manner to make her our redeemer. Auguſt. ſaith, She was more happie, in that ſhe conceiued the faith of Chriſt, then in conceiuing the fleſh of Chriſt. If then theſe titles bee vnmeete for her, in reſpect that ſhe receiued the faith of Chriſt, which is common to all the children of God, then are they more vnfit, in that ſhe conceiued the fleſh of Chriſt. De ſanct. virgine, cap.3.

3 It is great preſumption to thinke, that the Virgine Mary may commaund her Sonne in heauen, ſeeing ſhe had no authoritie to commaund him vpon earth, in any thing pertaining to his office, Ioh.2.4. And now likewiſe that carnall reſpect of children to their parents ceaſeth in the kingdome of God. Ioh.2.4.

As for that ſuperioritie and higher kinde of honour which ſhe hath aboue all the Saints beſide, we finde no warrant out of Scripture. She is reſpected now in heauen, not as ſhe bare the fleſh of Chriſt, but as ſhe liued by faith in Chriſt: ſhe alſo reioyced in God her Sauiour. The Scripture therefore maketh one condition and eſtate of all that ſhall be ſaued: and ſaith, generally of all, of others as well as the Virgine Chriſts mother, That they ſhall be as the Angels in heauen, Matth.22.30. Yea, our Sauiour ſheweth, that Whoſoeuer doth the will of God, is his ſiſter, brother, and mother, Matth.12.50. By the which wee learne, that other the faithfull ſeruants of God may by their faith in Chriſt, be as well accepted of God as if they had borne Chriſt in the fleſh. Where then is that high dignitie which ſhe hath, as the mother of Chriſt, aboue all Saints? Auguſtine ſaith: Tu concinis ſine fine choris coniuncta, Angelis & Archangelis ſociata: Thou (O Virgine) doeſt reioyce being ioyned vnto the heauenly quire, being aſſociated to Angels and Archangels, &c. He maketh her not Ladie or Queene of heauen, but only a fellow companion of the Saints and Angels.

Matth.22.30.
Matth.12.50.
Serm.35. de ſanct. de aſſump. Mariæ.

*Synod. Moguntin. cap.*45. ſancti qui vita huius curſum beato fine clauſerunt, &c. The Saints departed, as the moſt noble members of Chriſt, muſt be honored of vs with that dutie and worſhip of loue and fellowſhip, which the Saints liuing are to be worſhipped withall, &c. If then the moſt noble members of Chriſt are no otherwiſe to be adored, then holie men vpon earth, the Virgine Marie can haue no greater honour: for more ſhe cannot be, then a moſt noble member of Chriſt.

This truth hath been ſealed: Helen Stirke perſecuted, becauſe lying in child-bed, ſhe refuſed to call vpon the name of the Virgine Marie, being thereto exhorted by her neighbours, but only vpon God, for Ieſus Chriſts ſake, Fox pag. 1267.

Saint Hierome hath this ſentence writing againſt Heluidius; Innocandus eſt Spiritus ſanctus, vt Mariæ virginitatem ſuo ſenſu, ore meo defendat, &c. The holie Spirit muſt be called vpon, to defend the virginitie of Marie by my tongue, &c. the Lord Ieſus muſt be inuocated, to deliuer from all ſuſpition the ſacred wombe, &c. God the Father muſt be prayed vnto, to declare the mother of his Son to be a Virgine, &c. And why, I pray you, doth he not alſo call vpon the Virgine Marie to defend her owne virginitie, if ſhe be to be prayed vnto?

And concerning the feſtiuities of Marie, if you would indeed haue them ſo ſolemnely kept aboue other holie daies, what meaneth then your owne darling Boniface 8. to preferre the feaſts, not onely of the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts, but of the foure Doctors of the Latine Church, making no mention at all of Maries feſtiuals? for theſe are the words of the decree, Sext. decretal. lib. 3. tit. 22. cap. 1. Meritò prouidit, Apoſtolos, Euangeliſtas & confeſſores in vniuerſali eccleſia honorificentia maioris impendijs attollendos, &c. This Sea hath worthilie prouided that the Apoſtles, Euangeliſts and Confeſſors, ſhould through the vniuerſall Church be more highly extolled, that they be ſo much the more honoured of the Church, as they haue more, then others, lightned the ſame. This decree preferreth the commemorations of Saint Ambroſe, Gregorie, Hierome, Auguſtine, before the memorie of the virgine Marie.

Epiphanius writeth againſt the Collyndianes, ſo called becauſe they did offer certaine cakes, which the Grecians ſo call, in the name of the Virgine Marie, and ſo kept a certaine ſet holie day to the worſhip of Marie: Re vera virgo erat, & honorata, ſed non nobis ad adorationem data: She was indeed an honourable virgine, but not giuen vs to be adored.

Matth. 12. 48. lib. de carne Chriſti.

2 Tertullian thus writeth of this ſaying of Chriſt, Matth. 12. Who are my mother and brethren? Non matris vterum & vbera negans, ſed feliciores deſignans qui verbum Dei audiunt: Not denying the wombe and breaſts of his mother, but ſhewing them to be more happie, which heard his word.

Origene, reporting the mad conceits of the Heretikes called Ophiani, ſheweth how they make ſeuen principall Angels keepers of the ſeuen gates of heauen: and vnto the keeper of the third gate called Aſtaphaon they thus pray: Redde me virginis ſpiritu mundatum: Make me pure by the ſpirit of the Virgine: And to Elobian the keeper of the third gate they thus pray: Exhibe me tuæ matris tibi vt deſeram ſigna: Let me bring vnto thee tokens from thy mother, &c. How much vnlike are theſe to the popiſh prayers which are made to the Virgine Marie, to bid and commaund her Sonne?

Confeſſ. of Bohemia, cap. 17. Harm. p. 23.

3 We together with the reformed Churches giue all due honour vnto the bleſſed Virgine Marie: Firſt, that ſhe was ſanctified aboue all other of her ſex, to be the mother of Chriſt, and therein renowned as happie before all others of her ſex. Secondly, that ſhe was at all times, before her birth, in the ſame and after it, a true chaſt and pure Virgine. Thirdly, that ſhe was adorned with excellent gifts, noble vertues, and fruites of good workes. Fourthly, that ſhe was through the price of her Sonnes death, dearely redeemed, and made a ioynt heire of euerlaſting life. Fifthly, they doe celebrate alſo holy daies in the remembrance of her, to the praiſe and glorie of God. Sixthly, and to confirme themſelues they rehearſe thoſe great things, wherewith God had aduanced her aboue all other women. Seuenthly, and ſo much as lieth in them, they doe imitate and follow the holie life and manners of that Virgine, &c. All this wee acknowledge to be due to the bleſſed Virgine. But wee dare not pray vnto her, to make her our aduocate or interceſſor, becauſe God only is the ſearcher of the hearts: as the confeſſion of Wittemberg reſolueth out of Epiphanius, before alleaged: that ſhe was an honourable Virgine, but not propounded to vs for adoration.

AN APPENDIX OR FIFTH PART, OF THE merits of the Virgine, and of the Aue Maria.

The Papiſts.

34. Error.

1. THey doe teach and hold, that ſhe only amongſt all women deſerued to beare the redeemer of the world, and ſo by her merites obtained that fauour to be the mother of Chriſt.

Argum. The Angell ſaluteth her, and calleth her, Full of grace, which ſheweth the prerogatiue that ſhe had aboue other women, and the worthineſſe that was in her, Rhemiſt. Luk. 1. ſect. 12. 15.

The

The Proteſtants.

*Anſw.*1. WE acknowledge that herein ſhe was bleſſed aboue all other women,in that ſhe was choſen to be the mother of our Sauiour,and that ſhe was indued fully with the graces of the holie Ghoſt: but thoſe graces ſhe had not of her ſelfe, but of the free gift of God,without her merits:and S.Hierome ſheweth how ſhe was full of grace,Sancta Maria,quia conceperat eum,&c. Holy Marie, becauſe ſhe conceaued him, in whom the Godhead dwelled bodily,is ſaluted full of grace,tom.4.ad Principium; ſhe was full of grace,becauſe ſhe was filled with Chriſt: and as S.Ambroſe ſaith,quia gratia replebatur authore,becauſe ſhe was repleniſhed with the Author of grace,*lib.2 in Luc.*It was not then her owne grace,but the grace of Chriſt.

2 The word κεχαριτωμένη, ſignifieth freely beloued,not full of grace,as it is likewiſe taken,Epheſ.1.6. ἐχαρίτωσεν ἡμᾶς,He hath made vs accepted in his beloued Sonne. Epheſ.1.6.

3 She her ſelfe confeſſeth her ſelfe in her ſong,to be of a low degree, poore in ſpirit, and hungrie, whom God in mercie looked vpon, Luke 1.50. whereas God ſent away the proud and rich: as the proud Phariſie that thought himſelfe rich of good works,obtained nothing of God,Luk.18.Wherefore if ſhe had ſtood vpon her owne deſerts,ſhe had made her ſelfe rich,not poore: neither ſhould ſhe haue magnified the mercie of God,but his iuſtice: for when a reward is giuen according to deſert, it is of his iuſtice and not mercie. Luke 1.50.

S.Ambroſe thus concludeth,Simul ancillam dicendo, nullam ſibi prerogatiuam tanta gratia vendicauit,&c. And in calling her ſelfe handmaid,ſhe challengeth no prerogatiue of ſo great grace,for being to bring foorth one,that was humble and meeke,it became her alſo to be humble. Luke 1.48.

And S.Hierome vpon thoſe words,Luc.1.48.From hencefoorth ſhall they call me bleſſed: Animaduerte, quòd beatam ſe eſſe dicit, non proprio merito, aut virtute,&c. Marke, that ſhe calleth her ſelfe bleſſed, not by her owne merite or vertue, but by the mercie of God dwelling in her,&c.Dialog.1.aduerſ.Pelag.

Auguſtine thus commenteth vpon the words of her ſong, Magnificet anima mea Dominum,& recordetur,&c. quomodo nullis ſuis præcedentibus meritis, ſed ſola dei bonitate ſit ab iniquitate ſaluata: Let my ſoule praiſe the Lord,and remember,how that not by any merits going before, but through the only gracious goodneſſe of God,it is deliuered from ſinne. De ſanct.virginit.Serm.35.

Bernard ſaith,Regina miſericordiæ dicitur, vt ſoli tribuamus diuinæ miſericordiæ non meritis, quod ſuper omnem creaturam præcellens,&c. She is called the Queene of mercie, that we ſhould aſcribe it only to Gods mercie,not her merits,that ſhe is exalted aboue all other creatures,Serm.ſuper ſalue Regina: Ergo,Marie not ſaued by her merits,nor conſequently the mother of Chriſt,by her merits, but only by the meere fauour of God.

This truth alſo wanteth not the ſeale,Helen Stirke perſecuted becauſe ſhe affirmed in effect, That there was no merits in the Virgine,which procured her that honour,to bee the mother of Chriſt,and to bee preferred before other women, but Gods free mercie onely exalted her to that eſtate: Fox pag.1267.

Concerning this point: 1.Theophylact is an euident witneſſe, who vpon theſe words,for hee hath looked vpon the low degree of his handmaid: Virgo plenius edocta, glorificat Deum,&c. The Virgine being fully inſtructed glorifieth God,aſcribing the miracle to him,not to her ſelfe,he hath looked vnto me,I haue not looked vp to him, he hath had mercie on me, I ſought not him: from hencefoorth all generations ſhall call me bleſſed: and why ſhall they call me bleſſed? non propter meam virtutem,not for my vertue,but becauſe he that is mightie hath magnified me. Luke 1.48. ἐπέβλεψεν ἐπὶ τὴν ταπείνωσιν,&c.

2 Origene: Non eſt dubium,quin quo tunc repleta eſt ſpiritu, propter filium repleta ſit,&c. It is no doubt,but that ſhe which was then filled with the ſpirit,was ſo repleniſhed,becauſe of her Sonne,&c. much more was it for her Sonnes ſake,that ſhe was choſen to be his mother. Hom.7.in Luc.

3 Confeſſion of Bohemia,chap.17.By her beſt beloued Sonne,through the price of his death, ſhe was dearely redeemed,&c.by the holy Ghoſt, through faith,&c. as by grace in Chriſt ſhe was ſaued, ſo by the ſame grace ſhe was made his mother. Harm.p.27.

4 Eraſmus,vpon theſe words of the Angel,Thou haſt found fauour with God,addeth,Non eſt meriti tui, ſed fauoris diuini: It is not of thy merit,but of the diuine fauour: and for this ſaying, being accuſed of Lutheraniſme by a Diuine of Paris,he thus fortifieth his former ſaying: Si promeruit, vbi eſt gratia quam prædicat Angelus? If ſhe merited,where is the grace which the Angell ſpeaketh of? And how hangeth that together,from hencefoorth all generations ſhall call me bleſſed: for no man is called happie for the things which he hath by his owne vertue prepared. Eraſm.annot. in Luc.1.48.

The Papiſts.

3. THey much commend the often vſing of the Aue Marie,which is done (ſay they) to the honour of Chriſt and our Ladie. 85.Error.

Argum. They be the very ſumme and abridgement of the whole Goſpell: and therefore to bee vſed,Rhemiſt.Luc.1.ſect.11.

The Proteſtants.

1. YOu doe ſhamefully abuſe thoſe words,in making a prayer of them, which was but a forme of ſalutation vſed by the Angell: neither can you ſay them in that ſenſe they were vttered in by the Angell. Alſo you offend in the vaine repetition of them vpon your beades, as the heathen did, Matth.6.7. and in committing idolatrie, in the inuocating of the Virgine, and praying vnto her in theſe words: who is a creature, and not a God to be called vpon.

2 What myſterie ſoeuer be contained in theſe words, yet the people vnderſtand nothing at all. And though we denie not but that the words are holie and myſticall, yet it followeth not that they ſhould be vſed for a prayer.

3 What great account they make of the Aue Mary, it may appeare by this: that they thinke they may alter and change it, and adde to it at their pleaſure: as by Pope Sixtus the fourth, there was a Fox p.800. clauſe more added vnto the common Aue Mary, in this manner: Haile Mary full of grace the Lord is with thee, bleſſed art thou amongſt women, and bleſſed is the fruite of thy wombe Ieſus Chriſt, and bleſſed is Anna thy mother, of whom thy virgines fleſh hath proceeded without blot of originall ſinne. What a fearefull thing is this, that they ſhould thus dare to adde vnto the Scriptures? How can they now eſcape that iudgement that is threatned againſt all thoſe that do adde, or take, ought to or from the Apoc.22.18. word of God? Apocal.22.18.

That the Aue Mary is no prayer, nor to be vſed as a prayer, we haue the glorious teſtimonie of the holie Martyrs, Claudius Monerius Martyr, being asked whether it were not good to ſalute the bleſſed Virgine with the Aue Mary, made this anſwere: When ſhe was on earth, ſhe had then neede of the Angels greeting, for then ſhe had need of ſaluation, as well as another: but now ſhe is bleſſed, that no more bleſſing can be wiſhed to her, Fox pag.905.col.1.

Benet Romaine, a French Martyr, becauſe he refuſed to ſay the Aue Maria, was tormented of the Pag.845.1.70. Friers, pag.826.col.2.

Maiſter Latimer bleſſed Martyr, moleſted and troubled for affirming, that the Aue Maria was a ſa- Pag.1176.1.11 lutation onely and no prayer, pag.1736.col.2.

Thus farre of ſuch queſtions and controuerſies, as concerne the kingdome of Chriſt, which is his Church: of the which we haue now entreated at large: firſt in generall of the whole, and then of the ſeuerall parts and members thereof in order. Now follow thoſe controuerſies, which belong vnto the Prieſthood of Chriſt, the third excellent and glorious office of our Sauiour: which his Prieſthood is partly ſeene in his interceſſion and mediation for vs, partly in his ſacrifice, where we are to handle the great and waightie controuerſies of the Sacraments, by the which the ſacrifice of his death is applied vnto vs.

Epiphanius ſpeaking againſt the ſuperſtition of certaine women which offered cakes in the name Hæreſ.78. of the Virgine Mary, ſaith, ſit in honore Maria, &c. let the Virgine Mary be honoured, but the Father, Sonne and holie Ghoſt onely adored: Mariam nemo adoret, let none adore Mary, &c. but whoſoeuer vſe the Aue Mary as a prayer to the Virgine Mary, in inuocating doe adore her.

Hom.6.in Luc. 2 Origene thinketh it is a ſalutation and no prayer: ſoli Mariæ hæc ſalutatio ſeruabatur: onely this ſalutation was reſerued to Mary, which is not found elſewhere in Scripture, &c. To what purpoſe then ſhould this ſalutation be vſed now to Mary, the myſterie of the incarnation being long ſince accompliſhed: and it is preſumption, for euery one to aſſume into their mouthes, that forme of ſalutation, which that glorious Angell onely vſed in that heauenly meſſage.

3 Eraſmus agreeth, that it was a ſalutation, and that the word κεχαριτωμένη, ſignifieth not full of Epheſ.1.6. grace, but rather gratioſa, gratious, or freely beloued: as in the ſame ſenſe the Apoſtle vſeth, the actiue ἐχαρίτωσεν, he hath made vs gratious, gratificauit, and ſo the vulgar Latine there readeth.

Harm.ſect.16. pag.485. 4 Confeſſion of Bohemia, chap.17. We doe make and ſing godlie and Chriſtian ſongs of her, &c. but to the praiſe of God, as they ſay a little before, and to ſuch purpoſe, as is expreſſed before, err.83. they make no mention of ſaying the Aue Mary.

CERTAINE ADDITIONS TO THIS QVESTION, concerning the bleſſed virgine Mary.

AS namely: firſt, of the manner of that holy and bleſſed birth, whether Chriſt were borne, his mothers wombe being not opened. Secondly, whether Mary be any efficient cauſe in the worke of our redemption. Thirdly, whether ſhe at any time wauered in faith. Fourthly, whether ſhe haue power to helpe thoſe that doe inuocate her. Fifthly, whether there be any vertue in her image.

Touching the firſt of theſe, there ſhall be occaſion offered to handle the ſame afterward, as Contr. 13.error 12.Argum.Pap.2.and Controu.20.error 3.to the which places I referre the Reader: the reſt ſhall be conſidered here in order.

The Papiſts.

BEcauſe ſhe brought foorth the author of our redemption, whereby ſhe is the mother of mercie and grace, and life, and whatſoeuer goodneſſe we receiue by Chriſt: Rhemiſt. Act 1. ſect. 7. in the end: And a little before: She is our hope, our refuge, our aduocate, &c. And in the ſame place they inferre out of certaine teſtimonies by them wreſted, that both the ſexes common to our ſaluation, the man and the woman, Chriſt and our Ladie, as Adam and Eue were the cauſe of our fall, though Adam more then his wife; ſo Chriſt more excellently then our Ladie: They haue alſo this blaſphemous prayer vnto the Virgin: Holy mother of God by thy godly interuiction waſh away our ſinnes, that beeing redeemed by thee, we may be able to climbe to the ſeate of eternall glory, out of the office called Seruitium Beatæ Marie.

2. Heere the benefit redounded to them who were the Apoſtles hope, but they which make the Virgin their hope, looke for benefit from her.

3. Theodoret vpon this place, ſheweth the Apoſtles meaning, becauſe he likened himſelfe to a mother cheriſhing her children, he imitateth the words of mothers, which are wont to call their children their hope, their ioy. &c.

The Proteſtants.

CHriſt onelie was the efficient cauſe and meritorious worker of our redemption, the Virgin Marie was a choſen veſſell and inſtrument only of his holy incarnation, not concurring, as any working cauſe or agent in the myſticall worke of our redemption.

Argum. Thus the Prophet ſpeaketh: I haue troden the wine preſſe alone, &c. and I looked, & there was none to helpe, &c. therefore mine owne arme helped me: vpon the which words Ambroſe thus inferreth: Chriſti paſſio ad omnium redemptionem adiutore non eguit: The paſſion of Chriſt for the redemption of all, needed no helpe, &c. ſuſcepit matris affectum, non quaſiuit alterius auxilium: hee tooke vpon him the affection of his mother, he ſought not an helper: And Hierome vpon the ſame place: ſolus Dominus calcauit torcular nullumque adiutorem habuit: onely the Lord troade this winepreſſe, wherein both puniſhments are troad forth to the euill, and rewards to the good: he had no helper: *ex citation. The ancient Fathers doe in diuers points compare Eue and Marie together, making them in ſome things like, in ſome things vnlike, but they make not Marie ſo the cauſe of redemption of mankinde, as Eue of their ruine and fall.

Origen ſaith: ante Ioannem Prophetat Elizabeth, &c. Elizabeth prophecied before Iohn, and Marie before the death of our Sauiour, et quomodo peccatum cœpit a muliere, &c. That as ſinne began from the woman, and ſo came vnto man; ſo the beginning of ſaluation a mulieribus habuit exordium, had the originall from women, &c. Hee aſcribeth not an efficiency but a prioritie onely in the myſtery of ſaluation to women, and to Elizabeth in this behalfe as vnto Marie.

Error.88. Annot.in Luc. 2.35. THe common opinion of popiſh Diuines is, that there was not at any time the leaſt doubting in the myſtery of ſaluation to be found, in the bleſſed Virgin Marie, as Eraſmus reporteth their opinion: and that in the paſſion of Chriſt the true faith was onely in her: as Alexander Alenſ. 3. part. 4. vltimi art. 2. Ioannes de Turrecremata. lib. 1. de eccleſ. 1. 30. et lib. 3. c. 61.

Luke.2.19. Argum. The Rhemiſts ſeeme to inferre ſo much vpon theſe words of the Euangeliſt: Marie kept all theſe ſayings, and printed them in her heart: Our Ladie (ſay they) knew all theſe myſteries and wiſely noted, &c. All theſe things, which were done and ſaid about Chriſt, from the firſt houre of his conception, till the end of his life and aſcenſion, whereupon it wil follow that hauing ſuch perfect knowledge ſhe had not the leaſt doubt at all.

Luke.2.50. Contra. Though the bleſſed Virgin were a woman of great vnderſtanding, yet that ſhee knew not all the myſticall words and acts of Chriſt at the firſt, is euident by that place verſe. 50. of the ſame chapter: they vnderſtood not that ſaying which he ſpake vnto them: and they themſelues vſe thus to ſing in an anthem: venter puellæ baiulat, ſecreta quæ non nouerat: The wombe of the maid did beare the ſecrets which ſhe did not know.

The Proteſtants.

WEe doe not derrogate from the due praiſes of the Virgin Marie, neither will diminiſh or empayre the waight and worth of the great graces which were in her, yet from all kind of doubtfull and perplexed thoughts concerning Chriſt, ſhe by warrant of Scripture is not altogether freed and exempted though they preuailed not, neither long continued.

Luke.2.35. Hom.17.in Luc. Theophyl.in hunc locum. Argum. 1. Simeon prophecieth of Marie, the ſword ſhall pierce thy ſoule: which Origen vnderſtandeth of ſome dobtfulneſſe wherewith Marie ſhould be perplexed: pertranſibit infidelitatis gladius et ambiguitatis mucrone ferieris &c. the ſword of vnbeleefe ſhall paſſe through, and thou ſhalt bee ſmitten with the blade point of ambiguity, when thou ſhalt ſee him, whom thou heardeſt to be the ſonne of God, &c. to bee crucified: ſo alſo Theophylact vnderſtandeth it, either of the griefe of the paſſion, vel de ſubdubia cogitatione, or of ſome doubtfull thought, ſeeing him crucified, that had done ſuch great miracles, &c. Likewiſe Auguſtine affirmeth that this is ſo ſaid: Qu.veter. et nov. teſtamen. qu.73. Quia Maria &c. in morte Domini dubitaret, becauſe Marie doubted in the death of Chriſt: al theſe Fathers thus expound this text: yet that other ſenſe of Theophylacts, of the griefe which Marie ſhould conceiue by the paſſion of Chriſt, is more fit; notwithſtanding they all agree, that Marie was not without ſome doubting: and Matth.12.48. Lib. de carne Chriſti. Tertullian directly ſaith alleaging the words of Chriſt, who is my mother and brethren: hoc loco apparet incredulitas eorum, in this place their vnbeleefe appeareth; meaning, of his mother and brethren.

Math.26.31. Argum. 2. Our Sauiour ſaith: all yee ſhall be offended by mee this night: Origen includeth heere the Virgin Marie, putamus, quod ſcandalizatis Apoſtolis, doe wee thinke that the Apoſtles beeing ſcandalized, that the mother of our Lord was free from ſcandale? Auguſtine alſo in the place before noted: doth heere comprehend the Virgin Marie. Thus we haue the conſent of the writers both of the Greeke and South Church for this point: And Eraſmus one that is theirs rather then ours ſeemeth to concurre with him in the place before alleaged.

The Rhemiſts vrge that report of Euſebius of the image of a woman in braſſe kneeling vnto another image made for Chriſt, repreſenting the hiſtory of the woman which was healed of her bloudy iſſue by touching the hem of Chriſts garment: in memory of which benefit, ſhee made that monument: where alſo there grew a ſtrange herbe, which as ſoone as it touched the skirts of the image had vertue to heale all manner of diſeaſes: which Image Iulian cauſed to bee demoliſhed and his owne to be ſet vp, which was caſt downe by lightning. Euſeb.lib 7.c.14. Rhemiſt. annot. in math. 9.*ſec.*9.

But it is better anſwered, that Euſebius, concerning the images, which remained to his time, ſaith that they were erected συνηθείᾳ ἐθνικῇ, by an heatheniſh cuſtome, for the manner of the heathen was to make ſuch monuments of them from whom they receiued any benefit: but touching the miraculous healing wrought by the herb, he writeth vncertainly by report onely. 3. It was iuſt, that an example ſhould be ſhewed in the defacing of the tyrants image: for God miſliketh all prophaneneſſe, ſhewed euen toward ſuperſtitious monuments of an irreligious mind: for the contempt of all religion is an iniury to God: as ſtories make mention how Brennus with all his hoſt was deſtroyed, when he would haue ſpoyled the temple of Apollo at Delphos.

Anſwer to Rehit.c.33. 4. But concerning that report of the Lady of Lauretto: wee hold it to be of like credit, with the fabulous report of the peremptory Duke of Muſcouia, of three images of our Lady, one made by diuine power without mans hands, in a temple made by the Apoſtles, at the dedication whereof Marie met the Apoſtles, and ſeeing her image, ſaid, gratia et virtus mea huic adſit: my grace and vertue be heere preſent: a ſecond was made of it ſelfe in a temple built by Ienaus, who was cured by Peter and Iohn: a third was made by S. Luke, and brought to the Virgin Marie, who ſaid likewiſe vnto it, my grace and power be with this my image: which image is ſtill kept, ſaith this reporter, in the Kings palace in Muſcouia, and thereby Chriſtianity is preſerued among them, &c. Thus whereas they haue no Scripture for their ſuperſtitions, they runne vnto fables: for how many vnlikelihoods are heere couched together. Firſt, that the Apoſtles ſhould build a temple, whereas in thoſe times Chriſtians were not ſuffered to haue their Churches. Secondly, that God ſhould make an image without hands, againſt his owne commandement, that images ſhould not be made to bee adored. Thirdly, that S. Luke ſhould be a painter: he is called the beloued Phyſitian: but of his art of painting we read not. Fourthly, that the Virgin Marie ſhould transferre her vertue to a dead image:

The Proteſtants.

WEe hold it a ſuperſtitious and vngodly practiſe to ſet vp the images of Saints to be adored in Churches: and they ſeing themſelues but lying vanities, we hold all theſe miracles ſaid to be wrought by ſuch images, and namely of the Virgin Marie, to be either the forgeries of deceitfull men, or the impoſtures of lying ſpirits.

Argum. God forbiddeth images to be made, with an intent to be adored in the ſecond commandement: but to giue power of miracles to an image, is to make a way to the adoration of them: therfore God cannot deny himſelfe, or be contrary to himſelfe, in giuing grace to that thing which hee Habac.2.19.20 forbiddeth, and abhorreth: the Prophet Habakuk calleth an image a teacher of lies, and ſaith wo vnto him that ſaith to a dumbe ſtone ariſe: that is, that looketh for any helpe from it, as they doe which come thither to be healed.

Iſay.42.8. 1. Tertullian denieth any vertue to be in images, vpon that text: my glory will I not giue to another, nor my praiſe to grauen images: vt omnes cum ſuis figmentis ethnicos excludat et hæreticos, probans deum non eſſe, qui manu artificis factus ſit, nec qui ingenio hæretici fictus: to exclude all heathen and heretikes with their fictions: prouing him to be no God, that is eyther framed by the artificers hand, Lib.de Trinit. or fained by the head of heretikes &c. HE TENTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING THE INTERCESSION AND MEDIAtion of Christ, whether he be onely our Mediator and Intercessor.

The Papists.

THey seeme in these very words to confesse, that Christ is the onely singular aduocate and patrone of mankinde, that by himselfe alone, and by his owne merites procureth all grace, and mercie, none asking or obtaining either grace in this life, or glorie in the next, but by him. But this letteth not, but that there may bee other inferiour mediators, though not in that singular sense, Rhemist.annot.1.Tim.2.sect.4. 91.Error.

Argum. Christ is the onely Sauiour and Redeemer of the world, yet the name of Sauiour and Redeemer is giuen to men in the Scriptures, as Iudg.3. 9. Othniel is called a Sauiour: Act.7.35. Moses a Deliuerer or Redeemer: Iudg.3.9. Act.7.35.
all this without derogation to him, that in more excellent manner is the onely Sauiour of the ld: Ergo, there may be also many mediators, in an inferiour degree to that singular mediator, to vp our prayers, Rhemist.ibid.

*nswere.*1. If Christ bee sufficient to procure all grace and mercy vnto vs, what neede then the iation or inuocation of Saints? for wee must either doubt of his power, in ioyning other helpers h him, or make question of his good will and readinesse to helpe vs, in making other mediators him.

They make other mediators and intercessors beside Christ, euen in that high and singular dee: for not onely Christ by their doctrine, by his merites procureth grace, but other Saints also by r merites, are our mediators: as it is plaine to see in that Popish prayer, Tu per Thomæ sangui-
ē. By the blood of Thomas, which for thee he did spend, make vs, Christ, to climbe, whither Tho- did ascend. In this blasphemous prayer and many such like, they pray onely to Christ as God, not Mediator; men departed, and many of them no Saints, they make their onely Mediators by their o proper merites. See Fulke ibid.
trine, their Saints are not onely intercessors for grace, but conferrers of grace and helpe, which ghest degree of Mediation. They appoint seuerall Patrones amongst the Saints for all purpo-
S. Apollonia for the toothach: Saint Rooke for the pestilence: Saint Petronil for the ague: Saint gorie for Schollers: Saint Morris for Souldiers: Saint Luke for Painters: Saint Crispin for Shooers: Saint Nicholas for the Sea: Saint Iodocus for corne: Saint Urbane for wine. And thus doe y not onely (as they beare vs in hand) pray for these graces and blessings, but they haue power mselues to bestow them.

Concerning the name and title of Sauiour and Redeemer, wee answere: first, men are called in Scripture Deliuerers and Sauiours, in respect of some temporall deliuerance, not of the spirituall ternall redemption, which belongeth onely to Christ: but you make your Saints mediators of nall redemption. Secondly, they whom the Scripture calleth Redeemers and Sauiours, were ap-ted by God for such temporall deliuerance: but you cannot shew the like appointment for ts to be mediators of eternall saluation, though in an inferiour degree to Christ. Thirdly, seeing name of God and Christ is giuen to men in the Scriptures, as to Princes and Prophets: why may noc as well say, that there may bee many Gods and Christs properly, though in an inferiour dee to him which is onely God and Christ, as to appoint other inferiour Redeemers, Sauiours and diators.
ee more of their arguments for the mediation of Saints against the onely mediation of Christ,

Our Doway men doe here also play their part, and reason thus for the mediation of Saints.

Pag.1110. Chriſts mediation in the law of grace, 2.Cor.1.11.

*Anſwere.*1. That place is not well by them tranſlated: for neither doth the Latine reade, ego fui mediator, I was a mediator, but, medius, I was or came betweene: but in the originall, the word is ghomed, I ſtood betweene God and you. Moſes yet aliue knowing the wants of the people, and by Gods appointment, and by way of entreatie, did mediate for his people: doth it therefore follow, that they which are dead, which are ignorant of our ſtate, and are not thereunto in Scripture appointed, ſhould be interceſſors for the liuing, and that by a right of mediatorſhip.

2 There is great difference betweene a Sauiour and deliuerer in temporall things and ſpirituall: and thus ſhall we haue Saints alſo not onely mediators, but Sauiours, deliuerers, patrones: what preeminence now ſhall be left for Chriſt: let them alſo ſhew, where the Saints departed are called and appointed to be Sauiours of the liuing, and that in ſpirituall things, as thoſe deliuerers of Gods people, were raiſed of God in their life time?

3 It followeth not from the mutuall prayers of the liuing one for another, that Saints departed may likewiſe mediate for the liuing. 1. The one is commanded, ſo is not the other. 2. The one is a mutuall worke of charitie, in that one prayeth for another, as the Corinthians for Paul, and he for them: but there can be no ſuch entercourſe betweene the liuing and the dead: the Saints need not our prayers, neither doe know our neceſſities. 3. Wee pray one for another, not as mediators to be ſupplicated vnto, but moued in charitie, but Saints they ſet vp as Mediators to bee ſupplicated and adored.

The Proteſtants.

WE acknowledge but one onely Mediator as well of interceſſion as redemption, euen Ieſus Chriſt our Lord: to whom and through whom all our prayers and ſupplications ought to be made: to him wee onely pray, as being one God with the Father and the holy Ghoſt: by him and through him we onely pray, as being the onely Mediator betweene God and man.

1.Tim.2.5. *Argum.*1. S.Paul ſaith, There is one Mediator of God and man, the man Ieſus Chriſt. Hence wee doe frame this argument: The Mediator betweene God and men, muſt himſelfe bee both God and man: but ſo is none but Chriſt: Ergo, he is the onely Mediator. Bellarmine here anſwereth making a diſtinction of Mediators, whom at large with his ſophiſticall diſtinction ſee confuted, Contr.9.qu.3. part.2.argum. Proteſtan.3.

*Argum.*2. Hee is onely the Aduocate and Mediator for our ſinnes, that is the propitiation for our 1.Iohn.2.1. ſinnes. Chriſt onely is the propitiation for our ſinnes: Ergo, the onely Mediator.

I will adioyne other arguments for the ſole mediation of Chriſt out of the fathers, grounded vpon the Scriptures.

*Argum.*3. If any were ioyned with Chriſt in the office of mediation, the Angels are moſt like, being the next in dignitie to the Trinitie, of all Gods creatures: but the Angels are not our Mediators: for S.Paul ſaith, Galath.3. The law was giuen by the Angels in the hand of a Mediator: wherefore Angels are not Mediators. S.Auguſtine ſaith; Quem inuenirem, qui me reconciliaret tibi, an eundum mihi ſit ad Angelos? Whom ſhould I finde to reconcile me vnto thee? ſhould I goe to the Angels,&c. lib.confeſſ.10 cap.42.

*Argum.*4. There is one and the ſame Mediator, both of the Law and Goſpel, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Galath.3.19. The law was giuen in the hand of a Mediator, that is Chriſt, Galat.3.19. Thus Origen, Chryſoſtome, with moſt of the Greeke interpreters, expound this place: but the Saints could not be Mediators of the law, being not yet borne: Ergo, neither are they Mediators of the Goſpell.

*Argum.*5. There is the ſame Mediator of the recreation of man, and redemption, which was of the creation: as Athanaſius ſaith, Ut creaturæ exiſterent, opus fuit mediatore: A Mediator was neceſſarie, that the creatures might haue a being, Epiſtol. de ſynod. Nicen. decret. But Chriſt onely was Heb.1.2. the Mediator of the creation of man, Heb.1.2. by him hee made the worlds: Ergo, onely of the redemption.

*Argum.*6. He is the onely true Mediator, as Auguſtine ſaith, Pro quo nullus interpellat, ſed ipſe pro omnibus: For whom no man prayeth, but he prayeth for all. But the Saints had one neede of anothers prayers, Chriſt onely needeth the interceſſion of none: Ergo, he is the onely Mediator.

Cont. Parmen lib.2.c.8. Auguſtine thus further writeth vpon this place: Si Apoſtolus ita diceret,&c. If the Apoſtle had ſaid thus: If any man ſinne, you haue me a mediator with the Father, and I doe by my prayer obtaine pardon for your ſinnes (as Parmenianus in a certaine place maketh the Biſhop a mediator betweene the people and God:) Quis ſicut Apoſtolum Chriſti, & non ſicut Antichriſtum intueretur? Who would behold him as an Apoſtle of Chriſt, and not as Antichriſt? It is then Antichriſtian doctrine, in Auguſtines iudgement, to make any other mediators or interceſſors beſide Chriſt.

Decretal. Gaij. Licèt in conſpectu Domini pretioſa mors iuſtorum, nullius tamen infantis occiſio redemptio fuit mundi: Although in the ſight of God, precious be the death of his Saints; yet the ſlaying of no Innocent (but Chriſt) is the redemption of the world. Againe, Non eſt redemptio captiuitatis humanæ, niſi in ſanguine eius qui dedit ſe redemptionem pro omnibus, ibidem: There is no redemption of mans captiuitie, but in his blood, that gaue himſelfe a redemption for all: Ergo, there are no more Sauiours, Redeemers, or Mediators, but Chriſt.

Likewiſe, Extrau. commun. lib. 3. tit. 11. c. 1. Ioann. 22. Expediens immo neceſſarium æſtimamus vt ad illum, qui ad dextram patris reſidet in excelſis, &c. Wee thinke it expedient, yea neceſſarie, that to him that ſitteth at the right hand in the higheſt, whom both the windes and Sea obey, wee lift vp our heart with our hands, &c. This Canon maketh no mention of any inuocation of Saints, but of praying vnto Chriſt, as not onely expedient, but neceſſarie.

This doctrine hath beene ſealed: Richard Feuruus a French Martyr; I beleeue, as in the word of God is teſtified, Ieſus Chriſt to be the onely mediatour, and aduocate for all ſinners: albeit the Virgin Marie bee a bleſſed woman, yet the office of an aduocate belongeth not vnto her, Fox. p. 912. col. 1. Pag. 832. 188.

Iohn Lambert holy Martyr: The Scripture vſeth to ſpeake but of one Mediator, which ſignifieth a maker of peace or attonement betwixt God the Father and man, 1. Tim. 2. there is one God and one Mediatour, &c. Fox. pag. 1109. reſponſ. ad articul. 15. Pag. 1013. 2. 25

Herein that Chriſt is the onely Mediator betweene God and man. 1 Chryſoſtome ſhall ſpeake for the Greeke Church, thus writing vpon that place, There is one God and one Mediator, &c. Mediator debet vtriuſq; quorum mediator eſt, eſſe particeps, &c. A Mediator muſt be partaker of both thoſe, betweene whom he is mediator: But if he be ioyned to the one and ſeperated from the other, Iam mediator dici non poteſt, Hee cannot now be called a mediator, &c. So alſo Epiphanius, Hee is mediator of God and man, Quoniam in medio vtrorumq; eſt, Becauſe he is in the midſt betweene both: that is communicating of both their natures: Chriſt then, in their iudgement is only the Mediator, becauſe none but he, is both God and man. This was the ancient faith of the Greeke Church, though it bee now much declined. Ieremie Patriarke ſaith: Mediatores facimus omnes ſanctos, We make all the Saints our mediators, &c. And yet a little before he ſheweth how they profeſſe thus in their prayers to God, Alium præter te in tribulationib. noſtris adiutorium non habemus. We haue no other helper beſide thee in our tribulations, &c. but how can any be our mediator, vnleſſe our helper alſo: if then Chriſt onely be our helper, hee onely is our Mediator: the like contradiction there is in the Muſcouites diuinitie, who follow the ſuperſtitious rites and doctrines of the Greeke Church, and are rather worſe: for the great Duke confeſſeth thus. This is the ſumme: Et Ieſum Chriſtum vnicum eſſe noſtrum interceſſorem, That both Ieſus Chriſt is our onely interceſſor, and yet hee immediatly addeth, as hauing forgotten himſelfe, Et huius caſtiſſimam matrem ſua interceſſione opitulari, &c. And we beleeue his moſt chaſte mother to helpe all Chriſtians by her interceſſion. Homil. 3. in 1. Tim. 2. 5. Epiphan. in Anchor. Cenſur. Oriental. Eccleſ. ca. 2. Reſponſ. ad Rohit. c. 5.

2 The Africane Church in former times did holde Chriſt to be the onely Mediator, as Tertullian ſaith, Horum erit venia per exoratorem patris Chriſtum, We haue forgiueneſſe of theſe ſinnes by Chriſt the entreater of his father. Likewiſe, Non potes perfecte bonum oſtendere, a quo non perfecte liberaris: Thou canſt not ſhew him to be perfectly good, of whom thou art not perfectly deliuered, &c. If Chriſt then haue perfectly deliuered vs, his mediation is ſufficient. Origene of the Alexandrian Church, ſaith, Orationes et vota per ſolum pontificem Ieſum ad Deum defert omnipotentem: He that is a mans Angell, doth through one onely high Prieſt Ieſus, offer vp prayers and vowes to God almightie, &c. Lib de pudicitia paulo ante finem. Lib. 1. contra Marcionem. Lib. 8. cont. Celſum. circiter medium.

3 Latter confeſſ. of Heluetia, c. 5. God and the Mediator Chriſt doe ſuffice vs, neither doe we impart vnto others the honour due to God, and his ſonne, becauſe he hath ſaid, I will not giue my glory to another. French confeſſ. artic. 24. Chriſt is the onely aduocate giuen vnto vs. Engliſh confeſſ. artic. 3. Neither haue we any other Mediator and interceſſor, by whom wee may haue acceſſe to God the father, then Ieſus, &c. So alſo confeſſ. of Belgia, artic. 26. Auſpurg. artic. 21. Saxonie artic. 22. with other reformed Churches acknowledge Chriſt to be our onely Mediator and aduocate. Harm. 2. ſect. pag. 22. Pag. 30. Pag. 31. Pag. 34. Pag. 42.

4 I will adioyne the teſtimonie of a learned Papiſt, their Biſhop Eſpenceus. Maneat igitur ſuus Chriſto mediatoris, &c. titulus, &c. cum nulla creatura, &c communis: Let the title then and honour of the Mediator betweene God and man reconciling, and appeaſing remaine vnto Chriſt, and be proper vnto him, not being common with any creature, humane or Angelicall, &c. Lib. de Chriſto Mediator. c. 1. in fine.

HERE FOLLOW SVCH CONTROVERSIES, as concerne the Sacraments of the Church.

Of the Sacraments then, wee muſt firſt intreate in generall, and afterward handle them in particular.

THE ELEVENTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, OF THE SACRAMENTS IN GENERAL.

THis Controuerſie containeth diuers queſtions: firſt, of the nature and definition of a Sacrament. Secondly, of the efficacie and vertue of the Sacraments. Thirdly, of the number and order of the Sacraments, the difference and preeminence amongſt them. They thus follow in their order.

THE FIRST QVESTION, OF THE NAME, nature, and definition of a Sacrament.

FIRST, OF THE NAME OF a Sacrament.

The Papiſts.

92. Error.

FIrſt, concerning the name, Sacrament, they doe enforce it, as neceſſarie, and would deriue this word taken in this ſpeciall ſignification for the myſticall rites of the Church, out of the Scriptures, Bellarm. lib. 1. de Sacram. cap. 7.

Argum. Epheſ. 5. verſ. 31. Saint Paul calleth Matrimonie a Sacrament, This is a great Sacrament, &c.

Epheſ. 5. 31.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Apoſtle expoundeth himſelſe, This is a great myſterie, but I ſpeake concerning Chriſt and his Church: So then this myſterie is not in the coniunction of man and woman, but in the ſpirituall vniting of Chriſt and his Church; as S. Ambroſe alſo expoundeth this place; Sacramentum grande in vnitate viri & fœminæ. He ſignifieth that there is a great Sacrament, or myſterie, in the vnitie of man and woman: then it followeth, Nec hoc prodit, ſed aliam cauſam flagitat, &c. But the Apoſtle alleageth not this, but requireth a greater cauſe, that is of Chriſt and his Church. Secondly, if it ſhall be anſwered, that the ſpirituall vnion of Chriſt and his Church, is ſignified in Matrimonie, which is the externall ſigne or Sacrament thereof: Wee grant, that there is ſuch a myſticall ſignification in Matrimonie; but it followeth not, that it is therefore a Sacrament, as Baptiſme and the Euchariſt are: for it being inſtituted in Paradiſe, cannot be a Sacrament of the Goſpell. Thirdly, they doe not well to tranſlate, Sacrament, ſeeing the Greeke word is myſterium, which ſignifieth a ſecret and myſticall thing, which name, as they well know, is giuen to many things in Scripture, which are no Sacraments. Wherefore this place ſheweth no ſuch ſpeciall vſe of this word Sacrament.

The Proteſtants.

THis word Sacrament, being the Latine of the Greeke word, μυστήριον, wee refuſe not to vſe, being fitly applied to the myſteries of Baptiſme and the Lords Supper, though in this ſpeciall ſenſe and ſignification, it cannot bee found vſed in Scripture: the name (myſterie) is diuerſly read in the Scripture, taken ſometime in the good part, as Rom. 16. 25. 1. Tim. 3. 16. the Goſpell is called a myſterie: ſometime in the euill, as 2. Theſſ. 2. 7. The myſterie of iniquitie: Apoc. 17. 5. The whore of Babylon is called a myſterie; yet as a ſpeciall name for the Sacraments of the Church, wee finde it not expreſſed in Scripture: yet notwithſtanding we doe receiue it as a fit terme, to ſignifie the myſteries of religion.

Rom 16. 25.
1. Tim. 3. 16.
2. Theſſ. 2. 7.
Apoc. 17. 5.

Argum. Like as the Church of God in the diuiſion of Arrius, vſed the name, homouſion, though it were not read or found in Scripture, to expreſſe one and the ſelfe ſame ſubſtance of the Trinitie: the Arrians obiected, that the word was not to be vſed, becauſe the Scriptures had it not: Saint Ambroſe anſwereth, Quæro ſi ita credi liceat, ſi nominari non liceat: I aske, if it bee not lawfull ſo to beleeue, though not to vſe that name: If wee may beleeue ſo, why not alſo profeſſe, or name it ſo? de fide orthodox. cap. 3. So wee ſay, that this word Sacrament being agreeable to the Scriptures in this ſenſe, which we vſe it, we ſtand not ſo much vpon the very acception of the word in Scriptures. But as Saint Hierome ſaith. Non eſt nobis cura de vocabulo, cum ſenſus ſit in tuto: We care not much for the word, agreeing vpon the ſenſe: aduerſ. Lucifer.

SECONDLY, OF THE DEFINITION of a Sacrament.

WE thus define a Sacrament, to be an outward viſible ſigne, repreſenting an holie, inward, ſpirituall grace, inſtituted of Chriſt, to be vſed in that manner he hath appointed, to ſeale vnto vs the promiſes of God, and to aſſure vs of the remiſſion of ſinnes, by the righteouſneſſe of faith in Chriſt, Rom.4.11. Rom.4.11.

Some things there be in this definition, that are agreed vpon betweene vs and our aduerſaries: as that the Sacraments are outward ſignes of ſpirituall and holie graces, and that there muſt be a conueniencie and agreement betweene the ſigne and the thing ſignified: that not euery thing may bee repreſented by a Sacrament, but an holy and ſpirituall grace: that a Sacrament ought to bee inſtituted by a diuine not an humane authoritie, Bellarm. de Sacram. in genet. lib.1. cap.9.

The ſeuerall points then wherein we diſſent from them, and which they miſlike in this definition, are theſe: Firſt, concerning the authoritie of inſtituting a Sacrament, which wee affirme to be deriued onely from Chriſt, and manifeſtly to be proued out of the Scriptures. Secondly, of the forme and matter of the Sacraments. Thirdly, of the inſtrumentall or miniſteriall cauſe, which is the Miniſter. Fourthly, of the vſe and end of a Sacrament, whether it be a ſeale of the promiſes of God, and inſtituted for that end.

THE FIRST PART, OF THE EFFICIENT CAVSE, that is, the author or inſtitutor of a Sacrament.

The Papiſts.

THey doe willingly graunt, that neither the Apoſtles then had, nor the Church now hath authoritie to inſtitute Sacraments: but that this power is onely in Chriſt, and that the Apoſtles did but declare and deliuer that which they receiued of Chriſt: yet for the triall of this, they refuſe to be iudged by the expreſſe word of God, but flie vnto their traditions, which they call the word of God not written, Bellarm. lib.1. de Sacram. cap.14. & 23. 93. Error.

Argum. The ſacrament of Baptiſme, and of the Euchariſt, were inſtituted without expreſſe warrant of Scripture: for at that time the new Teſtament was not written, when Chriſt ordained thoſe myſteries: Ergo, for the other Sacraments wee need not the expreſſe commandement of Scripture: Bellarm. lib.1. cap.14.

Anſw. Firſt, the traditions of our Sauiour giuen vnto the Apoſtles concerning thoſe two Sacraments, were afterward written by the Apoſtles, and expreſly ſet downe in Scripture: and therefore we doubt not, but that they were of Chriſts inſtitution. But your traditions being not committed to writing, concerning your other forged Sacraments, are iuſtly ſuſpected, ſeeing the Apoſtles ſhould haue as well been charged with all the Sacraments, if Chriſt had inſtituted them, as with onely two. Secondly, how followeth it, the word of God was ſometime vnwritten, therefore it is ſo ſtill? or Chriſt, who was the author of the word written, might inſtitute Sacraments without expreſſe ſcripture: Ergo, the teſtimonie of Scripture is not neceſſarie now?

The Proteſtants.

WE hold no Sacraments to be of Chriſts inſtitution, but thoſe onely which the Scripture teſtifieth to haue been commanded by Chriſt, as Baptiſme, Matth.28.19. the Lords Supper, Matth.28.19. Luk.22.20. The other which haue no teſtimonie of Scripture, were not appointed by Chriſt. Luke 22.20.

*Argum.*1. Saint Paul ſaith, That the Scriptures are able to make the man of God abſolute and perfect to euery good worke, 1. Timoth.3.17. But how can the Miniſter of God be perfectly furniſhed and prepared for the worke of the Miniſterie, if he haue not ſufficient direction out of the Scriptures concerning the Sacraments of the Church? for how can he abſolutely execute euery part of his office, if he faile in the right vſe of the Sacraments? Ergo, ſeeing the Scriptures are able to make him perfect, from thence he receiueth ſufficient inſtruction for the Sacraments. 1. Timoth.3.17

*Argum.*2. Saint Paul ſaith, ſpeaking of the Sacrament, I haue receiued of the Lord, that which I haue alſo deliuered vnto you, 1. Cor.11.23. wherefore no Sacraments ought to bee deliuered to the Church, but ſuch as haue been receiued of Chriſt: and what is receiued of Chriſt, cannot bee ſhewed but out of the Scripture. Wherefore their opinion is more reaſonable amongſt the Papiſts, that denie all the Sacraments to haue been inſtituted of Chriſt, as Hugo, and Peter Lumbard, with other, becauſe they cannot finde all their Sacraments in Scripture, then Bellarmines aſſertion is, who granteth, that all the Sacraments are of Chriſts inſtitution: but for the proofe thereof, he runneth from Scripture to tradition. 1. Cor.11.23.

Auguſtine ſaith, Chriſtus ſacramentis numero pauciſſimis, obſeruatione facilimis, &c. Chriſt hath ioyned his people together by the Sacraments, few in number, eaſie in obſeruation: ſuch are Baptiſme, and the partaking of his bodie and blood. Then it followeth: Et ſi quid aliud in ſcripturis canonicis nonicis commendatur: And if any other Sacrament be commaunded in the Canonicall Scripture, *Epiſt.*118. Ergo, we muſt attend vpon the Scripture and written word of God, if wee will be inſtructed aright concerning the Sacraments.

*Concil. Florentin. ſeſſ.*7. Andreas Coloſſenſ. Velim à vobis ampliſſimi patres doceri,&c. I would gladly learne of you (honourable fathers) whether the moſt ſacred Goſpell doe not containe the moſt certaine doctrine of our religion: I thinke, you will not (ſuch is your godlineſſe) make other anſwere, then that the moſt abſolute knowledge of our faith is there comprehended, &c. If the Goſpell then doe teach the perfect rule of faith, and religion, then it muſt needs inſtruct vs concerning the Sacraments, without the which our religion is not perfect.

S. Hierome ſaith, Ergo vt ad inſtitutionis plenitudinem, verbum Domini, hoc eſt Euangelium,&c. For the fuller inſtitution, I pray you diligently reade the word of the Lord, that is the Goſpell: let vs in no wiſe reſt vpon our owne iudgement, &c.

Maſter Philpot holie Martyr: Our Sauiour ſaith, Verbum quod locutus ſum,&c. The word that I haue ſpoken ſhall iudge you in the latter day; if the word ſhall iudge vs then, much more ought it to be a iudge of our doings now: Fox pag. 1805 Ergo, we ought to enterpriſe nothing in religion, with-

Pag.1638.2.60 out the warrant of Gods word in Scripture.

And for further euidence, that for the Sacraments, and other ſuch points of Chriſtian inſtitution, we are to relie vpon the credit of the Scriptures: 1. We haue the euident teſtimonie of Tertullian and

Lib. de carne Chriſti. Cypriane of the Africane and South Church. Tertullian ſaith, Nihil de eo conſtat, quia ſcriptura non exhibet: Nothing is extant thereof, becauſe the Scripture exhibiteth nothing. And againe, Quod à Exhortat. ad caſtitatem. Domino permiſſum non inuenitur, id agnoſcitur interdictum: That which is not found permitted of our Lord, is acknowledged to be interdicted and forbidden: Negat ſcriptura, quod non notat: The

Lib. de monogamia. Scripture denieth that, which it noteth not.

Lib 2. epiſt. 3. ad Cæcil. diſtinct. 8. c. 9. Cypriane ſaith, We muſt not attend, what any hath done before vs, ſed quid Chriſtus, qui ante omnes eſt, prior fecerit; but what Chriſt, who is before all, hath done before vs, &c. which ſentence is alleaged by Gratiane in his decrees.

2 And of the Greeke Church, wee haue the imperiall conſtitution of Gratianus, Valentinianus,

Cod lib. 1. tit. 18. Theodoſius: Omnes ſciant nemini quicquã, niſi quod ſcriptis probauerit, eſſe credendum: Let all know, that no more is to be credited in any, then that which he proueth by writing, &c. The law ſpeaketh of the Princes mandate, which muſt be proued by writing: ſo the precept and mandate of Chriſt is not Cenſur. Oriental. c. 8. extant but in the Scriptures. Ieremie Patriarke ſaith directly: Quæ quidem omnia ſacramenta ſacra ſanciuntur ſcriptura: All which ſacraments are conſecrated by the ſacred Scripture.

Harm. 12 ſect. pag. 384 Pag. 386. 3 Confeſſion of Heluetia, artic. 20. The Sacraments are the inſtitution and worke of the Lord himſelfe. Bohemia, chap. 11. Theſe Sacraments no man either did or can inſtitute, but the Lord himſelfe, &c. But this inſtitution cannot be otherwiſe proued then by the Scripture.

Tom. 3. diſput. 74 ſect. 4. 4 Suarez a Ieſuite ſaith: Eccleſia non inſtituit noua ſacrificia, vel ſacramenta: The Church doth not inſtitute new ſacrifices or Sacraments: but what is not inſtituted by Chriſt in the Scriptures, is brought in by the Church. See before the Decrees of Gratiane out of Cypriane.

THE SECOND PART, OF THE FORME OF A Sacrament, and the manner of conſecration; and of the matter: firſt of the forme.

The Papiſts.

94. Error. THe Sacrament is not conſecrated (ſay they) by all the words of the inſtitution, but by a certaine forme of ſpeech to be vſed ouer the elements: as theſe words to be ſaid ouer the bread, This is my bodie: and the like ouer the wine, This cup is the new teſtament,&c. And in Baptiſme theſe: In the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt. Theſe are the formes of the Sacrament, and very words of conſecration, though ſpoken in a ſtrange tongue, without further inuocation of the name of God, or giuing of thankes, or without a ſermon, which we require (as they ſay) as neceſſarie to the eſſence of a Sacrament, Rhemiſt. 1. Cor. 11. ſect. 11. 15. Bellarm. lib. 1. de Sacrament. cap. 19.

1. Cor. 10. 16. Argum. Saint Paul ſaith, The cup of bleſſing which we bleſſe, 1. Corinth. 10. 16. The Apoſtle referreth the benediction or bleſſing to the cup or Chalice, which is nothing elſe but the conſecration thereof, Rhemiſt. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, we denie not, but that to bleſſe here doth ſignifie to ſanctifie or conſecrate: but that is not done by a magicall murmuration of words ouer the Sacrament, but by the whole action according to Chriſts inſtitution, in diſtributing, receiuing, giuing of thankes: as the Apoſtle afterward ſaith in the ſame verſe, the bread which wee breake,&c. which wee breake, ſaith hee, as before of the cuppe, which wee bleſſe, ſhewing thus much, that the benediction conſiſteth not only in the pronouncing of the words, but in the whole action, of taking, receiuing, breaking, diſtributing, giuing of thankes, &c. Secondly, as for the words which Chriſt vttered in the inſtitution, we rehearſe them not, as a magicall charme to bee ſaid ouer the bread and wine to conuert their ſubſtance: but to declare what they are made to vs by force of Chriſts inſtitution, namely, his bodie and blood.

Bellarmine alſo affirmeth, that the words of the inſtitution do not ſerue at all for the inſtruction of the people, but onely to conſecrate the elements; and therefore they may be as well repeated in Latine, ſaith he, as in the vulgar tongue, becauſe God vnderſtandeth all languages, *cap.*19. 95.Error.

Argum. The words to be vſed in Baptiſme: In the name of the Father, of the Sonne, and of the holie Ghoſt, are words of inuocation or benediction, not of inſtruction. Ergo.

Anſw. Firſt, doth he thinke, that in theſe words there is no inſtruction? how then ſaith the Apoſtle, whatſoeuer is written, is written for our learning and inſtruction, Rom. 15.4. If theſe words then be written in Scripture, they are for our learning. Againe, when the whole Trinitie is named, is it no point of inſtruction to the people to know in whoſe name they are baptized? which certaine diſciples of Epheſus were ignorant of, that had not heard, whether there were an holie Ghoſt, Act. 19.2. Rom.15.4. Act.19.2.

Secondly, it is no good reaſon, that the Sacraments may be celebrate in any tongue, becauſe God vnderſtandeth: for ſo it ſhould not bee neceſſarie to vſe any tongue, becauſe God vnderſtandeth the thoughts: the Prieſts intention then by this reaſon might ſerue without any words at all. Againe, if the words containe a prayer and inuocation, it is fit the people ſhould vnderſtand it, that they may giue conſent and ſay Amen to the prayer.

The Proteſtants.

BEllarmine chargeth vs with three great vntruths: firſt, that we hold, that the words of inſtitution are not neceſſarie in euery Sacrament, but Baptiſme only. Secondly, that wee ſay, a ſermon is of the eſſence of the Sacrament. Thirdly, that the words of inſtitution doe not ſerue at all towards conſecration, or benediction of the elements: but our opinion is this; We doe not hold, that it is an eſſentiall part of the Sacrament, alwaies to haue a ſermon before it, as they vnderſtand a ſermon; which notwithſtanding were moſt conuenient, and alwaies to be wiſhed: but this we affirme, that the Sacrament cannot be rightly miniſtred, vnleſſe there be a declaration, and ſhewing foorth of the Lords death, not onely in the viſible action of breaking and diſtributing the elements: but alſo in ſetting foorth the end of the Lords death out of the word of God, with an exhortation to thankfulneſſe, which is alwaies obſerued amongſt vs in the daily celebration and receiuing of the Sacrament. Concerning the words of the inſtitution, wee alſo graunt, that they are neceſſarilie to be vſed in the celebration of the Sacrament; but not as the Papiſts vſe them: For firſt, they make them not all of one value, but out of the whole inſtitution, picke out certaine conſecratorie words, as they call them: as, This is my bodie, This is the cup; whereas the other words, Take ye, eate ye, drinke ye, doe this in remembrance: doe as well belong to the inſtitution, as the other. Secondly, they ſay, that the words of inſtitution doe not ſerue any thing at all for the inſtruction of the people, to ſhew them the right vſe of the Sacrament, but onely for benediction and conſecration of the elements, *Bellarm. cap.*19. Thirdly, they doe hold, that only by the pronouncing of thoſe words, the elements are conſecrated: whereas by the whole action, and celebration of the Sacrament, the giuing, receiuing, inuocation, thankſgiuing, according to Chriſts inſtitution, the conſecration is performed vpon the elements: Fulk. 1. Corinth. 10. ſect. 4.

Argum. 1. That the words of inſtitution rehearſed, doe helpe as well to admoniſh and ſtirre vp the people to a thankfull remembrance of the death of Chriſt, as to conſecrate and bleſſe the elements, it is manifeſt: whereas Chriſt ſaith, as the words are vſually rehearſed, Doe this in remembrance of me: And S. Paul ſaith, That by receiuing the Sacrament, wee doe ſhew foorth the Lords death, 1. Cor. 11.26. Ergo, the people are by the words pronounced, inſtructed and admoniſhed, and taught the right vſe of the Sacrament. 1.Cor.11.26.

Argum. 2. That the words of inſtitution doe helpe toward the benediction or conſecration of the elements, we denie not; but not by them alone, but prayer alſo and thankſgiuing, and the whole action beſide of receiuing. To the conſecration or ſanctifying of any creature, two things are required: the word of God, and prayer, 1. Timoth. 4.5. Neither the word ſanctifieth without prayer, nor prayer without the word: Ergo, to the ſanctifying and conſecrating of the Sacrament, the bare rehearſall of the inſtitution ſufficeth not, without inuocation and prayer. 1.Tim.4.5.

Auguſtine ſaith, Accedat verbum ad elementum, & fiet Sacramentum: Let the word be ioyned to the element, and it is become a Sacrament. And in another place, he ſheweth what word he meaneth: Niſi faciente verbo, non quia dicitur, ſed quia creditur, hoc eſt verbum fidei, quod prædicamus: Whence is this vertue of the water to touch the body & waſh the heart, but that the word effecteth this, not becauſe it is ſpoken or vttered, but becauſe it is beleeued: this is the word of faith, ſaith the Apoſtle, which we preach: Thus farre Auguſtine tract. in Iohan. 80. Wherefore it is not the muttering of a few words in a ſtrange tongue, after the manner of inchaunters, that by any ſecret force giuen vnto them hath power to conſecrate: but the vnderſtanding, hearing, and beleeuing the inſtitution of Chriſt, with calling vpon the name of God, and thankſgiuing before him.

Alſo one of your great Maſters Innocent. 3. thus decreeth; That two things are required in Baptiſme, the word and the element; Iuxta quod de verbo veritas ait, &c. Out of the word the truth thus ſaith, Goe and preach the Goſpell to euery creature, baptizing them. Heere hee vnderſtandeth by the word, the word preached: Decret. Greg. lib. 3 tit. 42. c. 5.

Origen. in 15. Matth. Origen thus writeth: Quod ſanctificatur per verbum Dei & obſecrationem, non ſuapte natura ſanctificat vtentem, &c. That which is ſanctified by the word of God, doth not of it ſelfe ſanctifie the vſer, or receiuer: for ſo it ſhould ſanctifie him, that eateth vnworthily, &c. therefore then the bread of the Lord is profitable to him that eateth, when with a pure conſcience, and vnpolluted minde hee is made partaker, &c. We ſee then that conſecration and benediction conſiſteth in the whole action of prayer, thankſgiuing, and faithfull receiuing, not in the pronouncing of certaind words.

Synod. Augustenſ. c. 15. Volumus populum, quid in cuiuſque ſacramenti collatione agatur in concionibus & ſacramentorum adminiſtratione frequenter doceri: We would haue the people, when any Sacrament is conferred, to be taught in Sermons, and in the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, what is there done, &c. We ſee then that the words vſed in the diſtribution of the Sacraments, ſerue not only to conſecrate, but to teach and inſtruct the people.

Cenſur. Oriental. cap. 13. Adde herevnto, the practiſe of the Greeke Church: Ieremie Patriarke ſaith, Preparationem & conſecrationem ſancti operis eſſe putamus, vtpote preces, pſalmodias, ſacrarum literarum lectionem, &c. We hold to be as a preparation, or conſecration of ſo great a worke, namely prayer, ſinging of Pſalmes, reading of the ſacred Scripture.

Confeſſ. of Bohemia, chap. 10. Amongſt thoſe, who by reaſon of their age are able to vſe their vnderſtanding, it is of neceſſitie, that the preaching of the Goſpell goe before the receiuing of the Sacraments.

AN APPENDIX OF THIS PART, WHETHER THE forme of words in the inſtitution of the Sacraments may not be by ſome addition, or other alteration changed.

The Papiſts.

93. Error. THe words of inſtitution may bee changed two manner of waies: either ſubſtantially, when the ſenſe is alſo altered with the words; or accidentally, when the elements, or ſillables are onelie changed, but the ſenſe remaineth the ſame. If there be a change in the ſubſtance of the words, the Sacrament is imperfect: if the alteration be of the forme only of words, and not of the ſenſe, the Sacrament is not deſtroyed: but he ſinneth that doth ſo alter them. Wherefore it is not lawfull any way at all to alter or change the forme of words, Bellarm. cap. 21. lib. 1.

Argum. 1. It is not lawfull to adde or take, to or from the words of Scripture, much leſſe to change the words appointed to be vſed in the Sacrament, Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. To adde or detract to or from the word of God, with a purpoſe and intent, to wreſt it to a contrarie meaning, and deſtroy the true ſenſe thereof, cannot bee done without great impietie: and ſuch is the manner of all heretikes: But to alleage Scripture, in keeping ſtill the full ſenſe, though we miſſe of the words, is not to be counted ſo heinous a ſinne: we ſee the holie Apoſtles in citing texts of Scripture, doe not alwaies binde themſelues to the very words, as Act. 7. 43. Hebr. 10. 5. The Apoſtle ſaith, A bodie thou haſt giuen me: In the Pſalme we reade, Pſal. 40. 6. Mine eares haſt thou opened: diuers words, yet the ſame ſenſe: and in other ſuch places many.

De doctrin. Chriſtian. lib. 4 cap. 5. Auguſtine ſaith very well, they that vnderſtand the Scripture, though they keepe not alwaies the words, are better then they that reade and vnderſtand not: Sed vtriſque ille melior, qui & cum volet, eas dicit, & ſicut oportet, intelligit: But he is better then both, that both remembreth the words, and keepeth the ſenſe too: yet he alſo deſerueth praiſe, that beareth the ſenſe in minde, though hee cannot the words.

Argum. 2. To change the matter of the Sacrament, as the water in Baptiſme, &c. is vnlawfull, for this were to deſtroy the Sacrament: Ergo, neither are the words to be changed. Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, how then can your ſelues be excuſed, that in the Euchariſt, take away the one part of the matter, namely the Wine, and when you vſe it, you mingle it with water; what is this elſe, but to change the matter of the Sacrament? Secondly, there is not the like reaſon of the words and the matter, for the element cannot be altered or changed without corruption of it, but ſome alteration in the words may be, and yet the ſenſe remaine whole and ſound ſtill: where from the change of words, to the change of the things, the argument followeth not.

The Proteſtants.

NO ſubſtantiall change (we confeſſe) is to be admitted in the forme of inſtitution, which may alter the ſenſe; neither is any particular man by himſelfe to make any accidentall change, and bring in a new forme of words, but the publike and vniforme order of the Church muſt be kept; yea, and the Church likewiſe is bound both to retaine the true ſenſe, and, as neere as may bee, the very words; but where occaſion ſerueth, to make ſome ſmall accidentall change of the words, the ſenſe being nothing diminiſhed, it is not condemned as an vnlawfull and ſinfull act.

Argum. 1. The Euangeliſts report not all the ſame forme of words, which ſhould be vttered by our Sauiour, neither yet S. Paul fully accordeth with them, in the preciſe and ſtrict forme of inſtitution: as by comparing of them together, it may be ſeene:

Math.26. verſ. 27.	S. Luke. cap. 22.	S. Paul.
Take, eate, This is my body.	This is my body which is giuen for you, doe this in remembrance of me, verſ. 19.	Take, eate, this is my body which is broken for you, doe this in remembrance of mee, 1.Cor.11.24.
Verſ. 28. This is my blood of the newe teſtament, that is ſhed for many for the remiſſion of ſinnes.	This cup is the newe Teſtament in my blood which is ſhed for you.	This cup is the new Teſtament in my bloud: this doe as oft as you drinke it in remembrance of mee.

If it had beene a ſinne, to haue miſſed in ſome termes and ſillables, no doubt the ſpirit of God would not haue ſuffered theſe holy writers to haue made the leaſt ſcape. It is to be thought a ſinne in the Church, which in ſteede of Take ye, eate ye, in the plurall number, hath appointed the Sacrament to bee miniſtred particularlie in the ſingular number, to euerie of the communicants, ſaying, Take thou, eate thou, drinke thou? Wherefore all accidentall change of words carrieth not with it a guilt of ſinne.

*Argum.*2. In the other Sacrament of Baptiſme, the preſcript words are to baptize in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the holy Ghoſt, Matt. 28. yet your owne Canons allow ſome change, and alteration in them: as decret. part. 3. diſtinct. 4. c. 24. Nicolaus alloweth Baptiſme pronounced onlie in the name of Chriſt: cap. 30. Pelagius approueth Baptiſme celebrated onely in the name of the Lord: cap. 86. Zacharias determineth the Baptiſme of a certaine Prieſt, that ſpake falſe Latine, ſaying, in nomine patria, filia & ſpirita ſancta, to be good Baptiſme: the Maſter of ſentences alſo alloweth of Baptiſme onely in the name of Chriſt, lib. 4, diſtinct. 3. b. wherefore in their owne iudgement the words may be altered.

Auguſtine indeed ſaith, Certa ſunt verba euangelica, &c. The wordes of the Goſpell are certaine, whereby baptiſme is conſecrated. But yet he ſaith elſewhere, In ipſo verbo aliud eſt ſonus tranſiens, aliud virtus manens: In the word ſpoken, the ſound which paſſeth, is one thing, the vertue or ſenſe of the words which abideth, is another. &c. It is then the ſenſe of the words, not the ſound or ſyllables, that is certaine and permanent. Contr. Donat. de baptiſ. lib. 6 cap. 25. Tractat. in Iohan. 80.

Againe, Auguſtine ſaith, Si non ſanctificatur aqua, &c. If the water bee not ſanctified, when ſome words vnskilfully are pronounced, many as well good, as bad men ſhould not baptize at all, &c. and this ſentence is rehearſed in the decrees, part. 3. diſt. 4. c. 72. If a change proceeding of error may bee tolerated, much more a change tending to edifying may be admitted, as when for, Take yee, eate yee, we ſay in the ſingular, Take and eate. Cōtr. Donat. de baptiſ. l. 6. c. 25.

Dominicus a Soto, their owne darling, is of opinion, that the Greekes doe truelie baptize, ſaying thus, baptizetur ſeruus, let the ſeruant of Chriſt bee baptized in this water: and yet the Latine Church vſeth to ſay: Ego baptizo, I baptize thee: Wee ſee then that there may be ſome alteration. Qu. 1. art. 8.

Latter confeſſion of Heluetia c. 19. We cannot allow of them which attribute the conſecration of the Sacraments to I know not what ſyllables, to the rehearſall of certaine words pronounced by him that is conſecrated &c. they place not the force of conſecration, in a certaine preciſe number of words: ſee before, the iudgement both of the Greeke Church, and of Auguſtine for the Africane Church, and of the decrees for the Romane Church. Harm. ſect. 12. p. 381.

OF THE MATTER OF the Sacraments.

The Papiſts.

FOr the matter of the Sacraments, they hold it not neceſſarie to bee a viſible and palpable element, but it is ſufficient, ſay they, if it bee any way ſenſible, as to the eares if it bee but audible onely: for in pennance, they haue no materiall part, but the ſound of the words: Bellarm. cap. 14. lib. 1. 96. Error.

Argum. The ſenſe of hearing in the Sacraments ought not to be excluded, ſeeing they are the moſt excellent ſignes, that are perceiued of that ſenſe. Bellarmine ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, which is the moſt excellent, and fitteſt ſenſe for the Sacraments, it is not left to vs to determine, but therein wee muſt follow the inſtitution of Chriſt. Secondly, the ſenſe of hearing is not excluded in the vſe of the Sacraments, ſeeing that hearing is of the word, Rom. 10. 17. which accompanieth the Sacraments. Thirdly, though hearing be the moſt excellent ſence for inſtruction, for faith commeth by hearing, Rom 10. yet the ſight of the eies ſerueth moſt fitly to confirme the weake, as it may appeare in Thomas, Iohn. 20. 25. And that which we haue by heereſay, is made more euident by ſight; as Iob ſaith, 42. 5. I haue heard of thee, by the hearing of the eare, but now mine eye ſeeth thee. Rom. 10. 17. Iohn. 20. 25. Iob. 42. 5.

The Proteſtants.

WEe define a Sacrament onely to be a viſible and tractable ſigne, obiect to the eye, taſte, and feeling, not to the eare, or any other ſenſe.

Argum. Our reaſon is this, Chriſt hath inſtituted onely two Sacraments, Baptiſme and the Eucharist: the Scripture in the new Teſtament maketh mention of no more: but the matter of theſe Sacraments is onely obiect to the ſenſes of ſeeing, taſting, handling: Ergo: to this purpoſe S. Iohn, that which our eares haue heard, which we haue ſeene with our eyes, and our hands haue handled of the word of life, &c. 1. Iohn. 1. 1. These are the thre ſenſes, wherewith Chriſt is receiued, and perceiued of vs; the word wee doe heare with our eares; with our eyes and hands, wee ſee Chriſt, and feele him in the Sacraments. 1. Iohn. 1. 1.

Dionyſius calleth them, viſible Sacraments, de eccleſiaſtic. hierarch. c. 2. Auguſtine making but two Sacraments of the new Teſtament, ad Iunior epiſt. 18. c. 1. De doctrin. Chriſtian. lib. 3. c. 9. which he expreſſely nameth to be baptiſme, and the celebration of the bodie and bloud of Chriſt, muſt bee alſo of the ſame mind, that the matter of the Sacraments is viſible. Origen, it is a ſigne, cum indicatur aliquid per hoc quod videtur, when ſomewhat is ſhewed by that which is ſeene, in. 4. cap. ad Roman. Harm. p. 396.

So the confeſſion of Bohemia, c. 2. defineth Sacraments to be earthly and viſible ſignes conſecrated by the word of God. Coſterus their owne writer ſaith, that a Sacrament is externum et viſibile ſignum, &c. an outward viſible ſigne of a diuine and inuiſible grace: Coſter. enchirid.

Bellarmines euaſion is very idle, that euen the words may be ſaid to be viſible, as we ſay, ſee how it ſoundeth, &c. The ſenſe of ſeeing, ſaith hee, may bee applied to all the other ſenſes. c. 13. for in this ſpeech, either we vnderſtand the inward faculty of diſcerning, or Seeing is taken generally for any kinde of perceiuing: but when we ſay, the Sacrament is a viſible ſigne, wee ſpeake properly of the ſenſe of ſeeing, and the peculiar obiect thereof.

THE THIRD PART, OF THE INSTRVMENTALL cauſe of the Sacraments, that is, the lawfull Miniſter.

SOme things are yeelded vnto of both ſides: Firſt, that no man ought to take vpon him to adminiſter the Sacraments, vnleſſe he be thereunto lawfully called and ordained by the Church, ſauing that they make exception of Baptiſme, which in caſe of neceſſity, as they teach, may be giuen by the hands of lay-men or women: but of this matter we ſhall haue fitter occaſion afterward to conſider. Secondly, it is agreed, that the efficacy or vertue of the Sacrament, dependeth not of the faith or honeſty of the Miniſter: but a faithfull man may receiue the Sacrament worthily, euen at the hands of an vnworthy Miniſter.

The Papiſts.

97. Error. THe point of difference betweene vs, is this: They doe teach that the efficacie, perfection, and being of the Sacrament, doth neceſſarily depend of the intention of the Miniſter, ſo that they hold it to be no Sacrament, if the Miniſter haue not, Intentionem faciendi, quod facit eccleſia. A full purpoſe and intent in miniſtring the Sacrament, to do that which the Church doth; that is, to conſecrate the elements, and to make a Sacrament, Trid. Conc. ſeſſ. 7. can. 11. Bellar. c. 27. So that by this rule, if the Miniſters intention be not wholly vpon the buſines he hath in hand, it ſhall be no Sacrament.

Argum. If the Miniſters intention were not neceſſary to make a Sacrament, when it chanceth that the Goſpell is read at the table by a Miniſter, there being both bread and wine ſet before him, and he in reading ſaith, This is my body, and This is my bloud, ſtraightwaies all that bread and wine ſhould bee conſecrate, and become a Sacrament; but becauſe his intention is wanting, it is none, Bellarm. ibidem.

Anſ. 1. But what if the Miniſter ſhould haue a fantaſticall conceipt and intent, as hee readeth to conſecrate all the bread and wine vpon the table, then it ſhould ſeeme by your rule, that it muſt needs be a Sacrament, which were euen as abſurd a thing as the other? Secondly there are other lets and impediments, from hauing a Sacrament at the table, then the intention of the Miniſter beeing wanting or kept backe: for the elements are not conſecrated, nor the Sacrament made by the bare pronouncing of the words; but the whole inſtitution ought to be obſerued: there muſt bee eating, drinking, taking, and doing, all in the remembrance of the death of Chriſt: there muſt bee diſtributing, receiuing, inuocation, thankſgiuing: the whole action in the Sacrament, is the conſecration thereof: theſe things then being wanting, there can be no Sacrament.

The Proteſtants.

IF the Sacrament be adminiſtred aright according to the inſtitution of Chriſt, whatſoeuer the Miniſter be, howſoeuer affected, be he neuer ſo prophane in his heart, without any godly purpoſe or intention; yet to the worthie receiuer it ceaſeth not to be a Sacrament, Caluin. in antidot. concil. Tridentin. ſeſſ. 7. can. 11.

Argum. 1. The word of God, with what intention ſoeuer it be preached, yet may haue his effect, and worke faith in the hearer. So Chriſt be preached (ſaith S. Paul) whether vnder pretence, or ſincerely, I therein ioy, Philip. 1. 18. Ergo, the Sacraments alſo may haue their efficacie, without the intent of the Miniſter, Argum. Lutheri. Philip. 1. 18.

Hee alleadgeth alſo how Alexander B. of Alexandria ratified and confirmed the baptiſme, which Athanaſius being a child, conferred in ſport vpon other children.

Bellarmine anſwereth to the firſt: 1. that there is not the ſame reaſon of the word and the Sacraments: for the word hath not a ſacramentall effect, neither doe the Sacraments ſerue to beget or reuiue faith, as the word doth, and therefore the word may profite without an intention, ſo cannot the Sacraments.

Contra. Though the word and the Sacraments worke not the ſame particular effect, becauſe in the Sacraments our ſenſes are more liuely touched, yet they tend both to the ſame generall end, that as the word preached begetteth faith; ſo the Sacraments increaſe and nouriſh it (as it followeth in the next ſection to bee proued;) wherefore if the word, though the preachers intention bee wanting, may beget faith, why may not the Sacraments likewiſe without the Miniſters intention nouriſh faith?

2. The Ieſuite diſtinguiſheth, Aliud eſt intendere non concionari, aliud intendere concionari, ſed ad malum finem: That it is one thing to intend not to preach; an other to haue an intention to preach, but for an euill end: of the latter (ſaith he) ſpeaketh S. Paul. and ſo hee truely is ſaid to baptize, that hath an intention ſo to doe, though to an euill end: cap.28.reſpon. ad argum.1.

*Contra.*1. It is not likely that a man that is ſober minded, of diſcretion, and well in his wittes, ſhould not intend to doe that thing which he doth: what intention then call you this when a man preacheth, or miniſtreth the Sacraments, to intend not to doe it, whereas the action proceedeth from the intention: and therefore this diſtinction is friuolous. 2. The Miniſter muſt haue an intent to do that, which the Church doth: but the Church doth baptize to a good end, therefore his intention by their owne learning, will not ſerue to baptize, vnleſſe it bee for the right end. Whereas therefore he anſwereth, that Athanaſius had an intent to baptize indeed, though for a wrong end, namely for ſport: it is both falſe, that he had ſuch an intent to make a Sacrament, being a child, and ſporting himſelfe among his companions; and if he had, it ſhould haue beene inſufficient, becauſe he propounded not to himſelfe the right end. Wherefore no ſuch intention is neceſſary.

*Argum.*2. If the effect of the Sacrament conſiſteth vpon the intention of the Miniſter, then ſhould euery man be vncertaine whether any thing be wrought in him, or hee haue receiued any benefit by the Sacrament, becauſe he knoweth not the intent of another mans heart, and ſo ſhould he be depriued of the ſpirituall comfort, which he might reape by the Sacrament, Caluin.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that we may haue a certaine morall and humane, that is, a coniecturall certitude of the Sacrament, though it depend of the Miniſters intention, ibid.

Contra. The Sacraments muſt worke not a coniecturall, but an infallible certitude in vs: as it is thus ſhewed: To haue Chriſt dwelling in vs is a ſacramentall worke, Iohn 6.56. as the Papiſts vnder- Iohn.6.56.
ſtand that place of the ſacramentall eating, but we ought to be ſure of Chriſts dwelling in vs: 2.Cor. 2.Cor.13.5.
13.5. Know ye not your ſelues how that Chriſt Ieſus is in you, &c. Ergo, wee muſt be ſure of the ſacramentall worke.

Auguſtine ſaith: Sacramentum (Baptiſmi) tam ſacrum eſt, vt nec homicida vel ebrioſo miniſtrante Tractat.5. in polluatur: The Sacrament of Baptiſme is ſo holy, that it cannot, either by a murtherer or drunken per- Iohan.
ſon miniſtring it be defiled &c. And I pray you, is it not like to be a good intention, that ſhould enter into the hearts of ſuch leaud and wicked men? Therfore without any good intention, euen by the hands of ſuch, may the Sacraments be giuen.

Synod.Colonienſ. Gratia ſacramentorum non ex ipſa externarum rerum virtute, nec ex merito miniſtri, ſed ex interna & diuinæ operationis virtute æſtimanda eſt: The grace of the Sacraments muſt not be eſteemed by the vertue of things externall, or the worthineſſe of the Miniſter, but by the inward vertue of the diuine operation, &c. But the intention of the Miniſter is no diuine thing: Ergo, &c.

We haue further euidence from their owne writings, Innocent.4.cap. Si quis puerum, &c. affirmeth that it is a Sacrament, etiamſi non gerat in mente facere, quod facit eccleſia, although the Prieſt do not thinke in his minde to doe that, which the Church doth.

Decret.Greg.lib.3.tit.41.cap.7. Innocentius decreeth againſt thoſe, qui ſuppreſſis verbis, which ſuppreſſing the words of conſecration, per hoc, quod intendit, &c. doth thinke, by that, which hee intendeth, not to prouoke God, &c. From whence we may reaſon thus; Intention beeing preſent maketh not a Sacrament; therefore being abſent, it deſtroyeth it not.

Catharinus a learned Papiſt holdeth no ſuch intention to be requiſite, Opuſcul.de intentione Miniſtri: and he alleageth Thomas in 4.diſtinct.6.qu.1.art.2.q.1. Non requiri mentalem intentionem Miniſtri, ſed ſufficere expreſſionem verborum, &c. That an intention of the minde is not neceſſary in the Miniſter, but onely an expreſſing of the words, wherein is contained the intention of the Church. Of the ſame minde alſo is the Maſter of ſentences, lib.4.diſt.13.b.

This doctrine alſo is ſealed: Maſter Bland holy Martyr; It is a great abſurditie that the intent of the Miniſter conſecrateth, and not the word of God: for ſo ſhould mans intent bee ſtronger then Gods word. Againe, becauſe the Sacrament is not the ſame to an vnbeleeuer, which it is to a beleeuer, the beleeuer muſt needs haue ſomewhat to doe in the conſecration, ſo that all is not in the Miniſters intention: Fox.pag.1671.col.2.

Nicholas Sheterden Martyr: Thus it ſhould be euer doubtfull, whether the people worſhip Chriſt P.1518.1.50.
or bread, becauſe it is doubtfull what the Prieſts doe entend. Againe, if the minde of the Prieſt, and not the words, doe make the bread Chriſts body, as they ſay, if the Prieſt do then mind his harlot, or any other vaine thing, that thing ſo minded was there made, and ſo the people ſhould worſhip the Prieſts harlot in ſteed of Chriſts blood. Fox. pag. 1673. col. 2. Pag.1519.2.76

For the Greeke Church, Ieremie the Patriarke ſhall ſpeake, Deus non omnes ordinat, ſed per omnes operatur, ſalutem populi moliens, non illorum intuens merita: Nam ſi per aſina os, &c. God doth not ordaine all, but he worketh by all, endeuouring the ſaluation of his people, not looking to their merits: if God ſpeake by the mouth of an aſſe, and by wicked Balaam to his people, much more for his peoples ſake, will he ſpeake by an euill Prieſt, &c. If a Prieſt then haue no more intention then Balaams aſſe, in his opinion, the ſacred action may haue the effect, if it be miniſtred according to Chriſts inſtitution. Cenſur. orientall. c. 8.

Confeſſion of Bohemia, c. 11. The vertue and efficacie of the ſacraments doth neither depend on him which doth adminiſter them, whatſoeuer he be, or doth receiue them, but it conſiſteth in the inſtitution, &c. Harm. ſect. 12. pag. 389.

THE FOVRTH PART, WHETHER THE SAcraments be ſeales of the promiſes of God.

The Papiſts.

98. Error. THey vtterly deny, that the Sacraments be pledges and ſeales vnto vs of the promiſes of God, or that thereby our faith is nouriſhed and confirmed, and we aſſured of free remiſſion of ſinnes by the death of Chriſt: neither that the Sacraments were ordained for any ſuch end. Bellar. lib. 1. de Sacram. cap. 14.

Argum. 1. If the Sacraments confirme vnto vs the promiſes of God in his word, then muſt they of neceſſity be more euident, and better knowne vnto vs, then is the word of God: for that which is leſſe knowne, and not ſo notorious, can not perſwade vs of that, which we haue better knowledge of. But ſuch are the Sacraments, which are not ſo euident, being called myſteries of religion, as are the words of God: Ergo. Bellarm. ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, it is ſtrange to ſee, that you ſhould now contend for the euidence, and plaineneſſe of Scripture, which you haue locked vp from the people, with no other pretence, then becauſe they are hard and obſcure, and dangerous to be read of the ſimple. Secondly, you doe not well in comparing the word and the Sacraments together: for they cannot be diuorced or ſeparated: for the word giueth life to the Sacraments, the Sacraments againe giue liuely teſtimonie and witneſſe to the truth of the word. But let this be the queſtion, not whether the writing by it ſelfe, and the ſeale by it ſelfe are of greateſt force; but whether an inſtrument with a ſeale be not of greater euidence and ſtrength then without it: So the word of God, which doth but beate vpon the ſenſe of hearing, muſt of neceſſity, not in it ſelfe, but in reſpect of vs, worke more effectually, beeing ſealed by the Sacraments, where we receiue inſtruction by two other ſenſes of ours, the ſight, and the taſte.

Argum. 2. If the Sacraments are appointed to be ſeales of the promiſes of God, for the increaſe and ſtrengthening of our faith, then children ſhould not be baptized at all, becauſe they haue no faith to be ſtrengthened, Bellarm. cap. 14. Argum. 4.

Contra. 1. This argument taketh away onely this vſe of the Sacraments in children, ſo that it holdeth notwithſtanding in all other. Secondly, although in children the ſeale goeth before, and righteouſneſſe of faith followeth after, as Circumciſion was to Iſaac, as Auguſtine ſheweth, and they as yet, when they are baptized, haue no faith to make preſent vſe of the Sacrament, yet when they come to yeeres of diſcretion, they are prouoked and ſtirred vp, by the remembrance of the ſeale of faith giuen in Baptiſme: which was indeede receiued but once, but the vſe and benefit thereof remaineth all the life long: ſo that this notwithſtanding the Sacraments are ſeales of faith, whether the ſeale goe before faith, or follow after.

Argum. 3. If the Sacraments bee ſeales of the grace of God, to euery one that receiueth them, then they ſhould many times bee falſe ſignes, when as many vnworthy receiuers are not made partakers of grace, nor of the promiſes of God, Bellarm. ibid.

Anſ. Firſt, yet notwithſtanding are the Sacraments true and certaine ſeales on Gods behalfe, the obſtacle and impediment is in thoſe that beleeue not: The Sunne is a true light to the world, yet to him that wilfully ſhutteth his eyes, it giueth no light: yet is it a true light notwithſtanding. Secondly, by this reaſon, they may make Chriſt a falſe redeemer of the world, as they make the Sacraments falſe ſeales: for euery one is not redeemed by the death of Chriſt, but onely thoſe which beleeue: wherefore faith is required in them, which by the Sacraments will be aſſured of Gods promiſes.

Bellarmine replieth, Fides eſſe debet certa, Faith muſt be certaine, and dependeth not of this condition, ſi homo credat, if a man beleeue: faith muſt be abſolute, not conditionall.

Contra. Firſt, he ſpeaketh moſt abſurdly, that faith muſt not haue any ſuch condition, if a man beleeue: as though faith could bee without beleefe: for what is beleefe, but an act of faith? Secondly, faith indeede is not conditionall, but abſolute: but faith is the condition it ſelfe; for ſaluation is not promiſed in Chriſt to any, niſi ſub conditione fidei, but vnder the condition of faith: as Philip anſwereth to the Eunuch, who ſaid, What letteth me to be baptized? If thou beleeueſt (ſaith hee) with all thy heart thou mayeſt, Acts 8. verſe 37. Here Baptiſme is graunted with the condition of faith. Act. 8. 37.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Sacraments are ordained of God; to be pledges and ſeales of his promiſes made vnto vs in Chriſt, that as verily as the externall elements are applied to the outward man; ſo our ſoules ſpiritually are refreſhed with an aſſured hope of the remiſſion of our ſinnes in Chriſt, and ſo the Sacraments to be ſeales onely of the righteouſneſſe of faith, and not giuers or workers of grace in vs: it is euident out of the Scripture.

Argum.1. Abraham receiued the ſigne of circumciſion, as the ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, Circumciſion then was to Abraham a ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, that is, that he was iuſtified by faith: Ergo, ſo are all other Sacraments. Rom.4.11.

Rhemiſt. Indeede Circumciſion was a ſeale to Abraham, for he was iuſt before, and receiued this Sacrament, as a ſeale thereof afterward. But it followeth not, that it was ſo in all: for in Iſaac his ſonne, and ſo conſequently in the reſt, the Sacrament went before, and iuſtice followed, annot. Rom 4. ſect. 8. So anſwereth Bellarmine alſo, that vnto Abraham onely circumciſion was a ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, *Lib.1. de Sacram, cap.*17. And he further ſaith, that the ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, and of Gods promiſe or couenant, are not all one.

Anſwere. Firſt, the promiſe of God; and the righteouſneſſe of faith, in effect are all one: for on Gods behalfe, it is a promiſe or couenant, on our part it is called the righteouſneſſe of faith: and thus the Apoſtle taketh them for the ſame, Rom. 4. 13. The promiſe was made to Abraham through the righteouſneſſe of faith. And verſ.14. If they which are of the law, be heires, faith is made voide, and the promiſe of no effect: the nullitie of faith, and of the promiſe is all one. Rom.4.13.14.

Secondly, the Apoſtle ſetteth forth the example of Abraham, to ſhew how all men are iuſtified before God, and what is the vſe of the Sacraments in all men: and therefore it is no extraordinarie or exempt caſe, but the common caſe of all the faithfull, that righteouſneſſe (ſaith the Apoſtle) might be imputed to them alſo, Rom.4.11. Rom 4.11.

Thirdly, although Iſaac with many other, were firſt circumciſed, and after iuſtified: yet this is perpetuall, they were no more iuſtified by circumciſion, then Abraham, who was iuſtified before he was circumciſed, but by faith onely: and therefore the Sacraments are ſeales of the iuſtice of faith, whether the iuſtice of faith goe before, or follow after.

So Auguſtine ſaith, In Iſaac, qui octauo die circumciſus fuit praceſſit ſignaculum iuſtitiæ fidei; & quoniam patris fidem imitatus eſt, ſecuta eſt in creſcente ipſa iuſtitia, cuius ſignaculum in infante praceſſerat: In Iſaac, who was circumciſed the eighth day, the ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith went before: and becauſe he did follow his fathers faith, as he grew, iuſtice it ſelfe followed, the ſeale whereof went before in his infancie: Ergo, circumciſion was a ſeale as well to Iſaac as to Abraham, and ſo conſequently to all. De Bapt ſ. contr. Donatiſt. lib.4.c.24.

Argum.2. Geneſ. 17. 11. Circumciſion is called the ſigne of the couenant betweene God and Abraham: but Baptiſme is ſucceeded in the place of Circumciſion: Ergo, it alſo is a ſigne of Gods couenant. Gen.17.11.

Bellarm. It was a commemoratiue, not a confirmatiue ſigne; it brought to their memorie the couenant of God, it confirmed not their faith.

Contra. Firſt, verſ.9. The Lord ſaith, Thou ſhalt keepe my couenant, thou, and thy ſeed after thee, &c. Circumciſion then was a ſigne of keeping Gods couenant: but the couenant is not kept by memorie, but by faith: wherefore Circumciſion was not a ſigne to ſtirre vp the memorie onely, but alſo to helpe their faith. Secondly, the Apoſtle expounding this place, Rom.4.11. ſaith, It was a ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith: Ergo, it ſerued not for memorie, but for faith. Your owne Maſter alſo doubteth not to call Circumciſion, ſignaculum iuſtitiæ fidei, the ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, lib.4. diſt.1.g. Rom.4.11.

Argum.3. S.Peter ſaith, that in Baptiſme the ſtipulation or taking to witneſſe of a good conſcience before God ſaueth vs by the reſurrection of Chriſt. 1.Pet.3.21. Whereby we doe gather, that Baptiſme is a ſeale vnto vs of Gods promiſes in Chriſt, being a liuely repreſentation of his reſurrection, and a pledge vnto vs and aſſurance of the remiſſion of ſinnes, without the which our conſcience cannot bee quieted before God, as here the Apoſtle affirmeth.

Bellarmine replieth: firſt, that there is great difference betweene the teſtimonie and couenant of God, and the teſtimonie of a good conſcience: Baptiſme is here ſaid onely to ſeale or confirme the teſtimonie of our conſcience, cap.17. reſponſ. ad argum 5.

Contra. To ſeale vnto vs the promiſe of God, and to ſeale or confirme the peace of conſcience, tend both to the ſame end; for wee cannot bee at peace with God, vnleſſe wee be iuſtified by faith, Rom.5.1. and faith is an apprehenſion of Gods promiſes. Wherefore in Baptiſme wee cannot haue peace of conſcience by the inward worke of the ſpirit, vnleſſe by faith wee be aſſured of Gods promiſes. Rom.5.1.

Secondly, Baptiſme is here ſaid, not to ſeale vnto vs our iuſtification, but actually indeede to ſaue and iuſtifie vs, as the Arke did actually ſaue Noah from the deluge. Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, if he will ſo ſtrictly vrge the figure of the Arke, then it muſt follow, as then Noah was not in hope onely, but in act ſaued from the waters; ſo wee alreadie are not onely aſſured by faith in Epheſ 1.13. John 5.24.

Baptiſme, but actually ſaued indeede from euerlaſting deſtruction, which is contrarie to the Scriptures, which teach, that the ſpirit of promiſe, wherewith we are ſealed, is the earneſt penie of our inheritance, vntill the redemption: ſo that our deliuerance and redemption is not yet accompliſhed, but onely in hope and aſſurance. Secondly, Baptiſme is ſaid to ſaue vs by the reſurrection of Chriſt, becauſe by faith confirmed in Baptiſme, we haue an infallible aſſurance in the death of Chriſt, of our ſaluation: as our Sauiour ſaith, Ioh. 5.24. Hee that beleeueth is paſſed from death to life: hee is as ſure thereof by faith, as if it were alreadie done. Wherefore this place of S. Peter, notwithſtanding his obiections, doth proue directly that remiſſion of ſinnes is ſealed vnto vs in Baptiſme: firſt, becauſe it is a liuely repreſentation of the death and reſurrection of Chriſt, whereby we haue remiſſion of ſinnes. Secondly, becauſe we haue peace of conſcience before God, as the Ieſuite expoundeth this place, which cannot be without remiſſion of ſinnes.

Rom. 4.11. Theophylact. comment. in hunc locum. Cenſur. Oriental. c 13.

For further euidence. 1. Theophylact thus expoundeth that place, Rom. 4.11. Abraham receiued the ſigne of circumciſion as the ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, &c. he receiued the ſigne of circumciſion for a ſeale, Quo et obſignaret, et prædicaret ſuam ex fide iuſtificationem, &c. Whereby hee ſealed and profeſſed his iuſtification by faith. Ieremie Patriarke ſheweth the ſame to be the opinion of the moderne Greeke Church: In the diuine myſteries God doth not anew inſert theſe bleſſed affections, but preſerueth, reneweth and encreaſeth them, Et in fide firmiores in pietate et charitate feruentiores facit, And maketh vs more firme in faith, and in pietie and charitie more feruent, &c.

2 Origen ſaith, Per iſtud ſignaculum iuſtitiæ fidei, &c. indicatur: By this ſeale the righteouſneſſe of faith, which Abraham was meete to receiue being in vncircumciſion, is ſignified: The Sacraments then ſerue to ſignifie, ſeale and confirme iuſtification by faith.

3 Thus alſo the reformed Churches: latter confeſſ. of Heluetia, c. 19. By the Sacraments, hee calleth to minde his great benefites beſtowed vpon man, and whereby he ſealeth vp his promiſes, &c. Confeſſ. of Bohemia. c. 11. That by the adminiſtration of the viſible Sacraments, faith might be helped and furthered, &c. French confeſſ. artic. 34. They are pledges and tokens of the grace of God, whereby our weake and rude faith may be helped, &c. Confeſſ. of Belgia. artic. 33. God did inſtitute the Sacraments for vs, that by them his promiſes might be ſealed vnto vs, and that they might be moſt certaine pledges, of his heauenly loue toward vs, and of his gifts beſtowed vpon vs, for the cheriſhing and ſuſtaining of our faith.

4 Synod. Colonienſ. part. 7. cap. 2. Excitanda eſt fidelium fides & deuotio in Deum, vt credentes, ac diuinum myſterium intelligentes, ad Dei ac Saluatoris noſtri gratiam participandam accedant: The faith of the faithfull, and their loue toward God muſt bee ſtirred vp, that beleeuing, and vnderſtanding the diuine myſterie, they may come to bee partakers of the grace of God our Sauiour, &c. Here wee ſee that by occaſion of celebrating the Sacraments, our faith is more liuely ſtirred vp.

This truth alſo is ſealed: Iohn Careleſſe Martyr; A Sacrament being miniſtred according to Chriſts inſtitution, is a viſible ſigne of an inuiſible grace, and hath the promiſe of Gods mercie annexed to it, Fox. p. 1928. The Sacraments then of the Goſpell are ſeales of Gods promiſes.

THE SECOND QVESTION, OF THE efficacie and vertue of the Sacraments.

THis queſtion alſo hath diuers parts: Firſt, whether the Sacraments doe giue or conferre grace by the worke wrought. Secondly, of the difference of the Sacraments of the olde and new Teſtament. Thirdly, whether the Sacraments of the new law doe imprint a ſigne or character in the ſoule, that can neuer be put out. Fourthly, of the neceſſitie of the Sacraments.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER THE SACRAments of themſelues doe giue or conferre grace.

The Papiſts.

99. Error

THe Sacraments giue grace, ex opere operato, by the worke wrought, that is, by force and vertue of the worke and word done and ſaid in the Sacrament, Rhemiſt. Act. 22 ſect. 1. So that not faith onely iuſtifieth, but the Sacraments alſo, and other workes of religion, Rhemiſt. Rom. 6. ſect. 5. The Sacraments then are immediate inſtruments and efficient cauſes of our iuſtification, not mediately, as they nouriſh and increaſe our faith, but properly and in themſelues: Faith in the receiuer giueth no efficacie to the Sacrament, but onely taketh away the lets and impediments which might hinder the efficacie of the Sacraments: as the drineſſe of the wood maketh it to burne the better, yet is it no efficient cauſe of the burning, which is the fire onely, but onely a helpe. Thus they compare the Sacrament working of it ſelfe, to fire that burneth, and faith is as the drying of the wood, but a diſpoſing and preparing of the heart, Bellarm. lib. 2. de Sacram. cap. 1.

Acts 22. 16.

Argum. 1. Be baptized and waſh away thy ſinnes, in calling on the name of the Lord, Act. 22. ver. 16. The Sacrament of Baptiſme doth of it ſelfe waſh away ſinnes, Rhemiſt. And wee ſee in S. Iames, that remiſſion of ſinnes is annexed to the vnction with oyle, Rhemiſt.1.Timoth.4.14. Ergo, the Sacraments giue and conferre grace.

Anſwere.1. To the firſt we anſwere, that the text ioyneth with the Sacrament, the inuocation of the name of God, to the which ſaluation is promiſed, Rom.10.13. Whoſoeuer ſhall call vpon the name of the Lord ſhall be ſaued: Wherefore that place maketh nothing for your purpoſe. Secondly, in the other place health of body is promiſed by the gift of miracles, but remiſſion of ſinnes is ſaid to be obtained by the prayer of the Elders. The prayer of faith ſhall ſaue the ſicke, Iam.5.15.

Rom.10.13.
Iam.5.15.

Argum.2. S.Paul ſaith, He hath cleanſed his Church, by the lauer of water in the word, Epheſ.5.26. Ergo, Baptiſme is an inſtrumentall cauſe of our iuſtification; Bellarmine.

Epheſ.5.26.

Anſwere.1. It is not vnuſuall in the Scripture to call the ſigne or Sacrament by the thing ſignified: as Exod.12.11. the Paſchall Lambe is called the Paſſe-ouer, whereas it was but a ſigne and memoriall thereof. So Baptiſme is called, The lauer of regeneration, Tit.3.5. becauſe it is a ſure ſigne of our regeneration by the holy Ghoſt. Secondly, the Apoſtle in this place expoundeth himſelfe; for hee ſaith, that we are waſhed by water in the word: that is, the outward element doth ſend and referre vs to the word and promiſe of God, whereof it is a ſeale.

Exod 12.11.
Tit.3 5.

Argum.3. Marke 16.16. Hee that ſhall beleeue, and be baptized, ſhall be ſaued. Here ſaluation is aſcribed to Baptiſme: and not to faith ſealed or confirmed by Baptiſme, for it were very prepoſterous, to put the effect before, and the cauſe after. Bellar.lib.2.cap.3.argum.2.

Math.16.16.

Anſwere. Firſt, beliefe is ſet before Baptiſme, becauſe they, which were then to be baptized, were adulti, men of ſufficient yeeres, in whom faith and confeſſion of their ſinnes was firſt required; as Math.3.6. They were baptized, confeſſing their ſinnes. Secondly, that ſaluation dependeth of faith, not of Baptiſme, it may appeare, Iohn 5.24. He that beleeueth, is paſſed from death to life: hee that beleeueth ſhall be ſaued: and it followeth, in this place, Hee that ſhall not beleeue, ſhall be damned; Hee ſaith not, he that ſhall not be baptized: Baptiſme is ioyned notwithſtanding to beliefe, that no man ſhould neglect or deſpiſe the ordinance of God.

Argum.4. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith; Except a man be borne of water and the ſpirit, he cannot enter into the kingdome of heauen, Iohn 3.3. Here water in Baptiſme is made the cauſe of regeneration and newneſſe of life. Bellarm.ibid.

Iohn 3.3.

Anſwere. Though it be admitted, that by water here we may vnderſtand the Sacrament of Baptiſme, which notwithſtanding doth receiue a more fit and proper interpretation, as ſhall afterward be declared more fitly in the queſtion of the neceſſitie of Baptiſme; yet this place enforceth not any thing for the element, ſeeing that the ſpirit is ioyned, which giueth the efficacie to the water; as Auguſtine ſaith, to whom the Maſter of ſentences ſubſcribeth: Viſibilis ſanctificatio, quæ fit Sacramento tenus, ſine inuiſibili prodeſſe non poteſt, cùm illa ſit omnis illius vtilitas: The viſible ſanctification, which is in the Sacrament onely, doth not profite without the inuiſible, wherein conſiſteth all the vtilitie of the other. Mag.lib.4.diſtinct.4.d.

The Proteſtants.

THe Sacraments haue no power to giue or conferre grace to the receiuer: neither are they immediate inſtruments of our iuſtification: inſtrumentall meanes they are to encreaſe and confirme our faith in the promiſes of God: of themſelues they haue no operation, but as the ſpirit of God worketh by them, our internall ſenſes being moued and quickened by thoſe externall obiects. Neither doe we ſay, that the Sacraments are bare and naked ſignes of ſpirituall graces: but they doe verily exhibite and repreſent Chriſt to as many, as by faith are able and meete to apprehend him. So to conclude, looke how the word of God worketh being preached, ſo doe the Sacraments; but the word doth no otherwiſe iuſtifie vs, but by working faith at the hearing thereof: So Sacraments doe ſerue for the encreaſe of our faith: Faith is not as the drineſſe of the wood to the Sacraments as the fire, but rather as the kindling of the fire, which enflameth the wood: ſo faith giueth life to the Sacraments, whereby it ſelfe is enflamed and more encreaſed.

Argum.1. Rom.1.17. The iuſt ſhall liue by faith: Ergo, he liueth not, that is, he is not iuſtified by any worke wrought, as by the Sacraments, but onely by faith: faith therefore giueth life and efficacie to the Sacraments.

Rom.1.17.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Apoſtle ſaith not, the iuſt onely liueth by faith; wherefore, although he liue by faith, he may alſo liue by the Sacraments, and other workes.

Contra. Firſt, if life be by faith, and beſide the life of the ſoule, other things are ſuperfluous; then all other meanes to life are ſuperfluous beſide faith: for what elſe is to bee deſired but to liue? but life is by faith, therefore faith is of it ſelfe ſufficient, becauſe the effect of faith, which is life, is ſufficient: wherefore no other helps are requiſite vnto life. Secondly, to liue by faith, and for Chriſt to liue in vs, are all one, as Galat.2.20. Thus I liue, not I now, but Chriſt liueth in me; and that I now liue in the fleſh, I liue by the faith of the Sonne of God, &c. Wee reaſon thus: The iuſt liueth onely by Chriſt; but Chriſt liueth in vs onely by faith: for the Apoſtle ſaith, In that I liue, I liue by faith. Ergo, there is no life but by faith.

Galath.2.20.

Argum.2. The Apoſtle ſheweth, Rom.4.10.11. that righteouſneſſe was imputed to Abraham by faith, before hee was circumciſed, and that circumciſion was added afterward as a ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith: Ergo, as Abraham was not iuſtified by circumciſion, but by faith, no more are we by the Sacraments.

Rom.4.10.11.

Bellarmine hath nothing elſe to anſwere, but that this onely was a priuiledge granted to Abraham, to haue circumciſion as a ſeale and teſtimonie of his faith, *reſp.ad argum.*3.

Contra. The Apoſtle ſaith contrary, *verſ.*11. that he ſhould be the father of them that beleeue, not being circumciſed, that righteouſneſſe might be imputed to them alſo: the father and the ſonnes are iuſtified one and the ſame way: Abraham was not iuſtified by circumciſion, but by faith: Ergo. And *verſ.*23. it was not written for him onely,&c. but for vs,&c.

1.Pet.3.21. *Argum.*3. S.Peter ſaith, Baptiſme saueth vs, not the putting away of the filth of the fleſh, but in that a good conſcience maketh requeſt vnto God, by the reſurrection of Chriſt, 1.Pet.3.21. Ergo, it is faith in the reſurrection of Chriſt, which worketh in vs peace of conſcience, and not the outward waſhing, that ſaueth or iuſtifieth.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that by the reſurrection is not vnderſtood faith in the reſurrection, but mention is made thereof, becauſe when we are baptized, we doe repreſent the reſurrection of Chriſt, and by Baptiſme doe riſe vp to newneſſe of life.

Contra. Firſt, if by the reſurrection of Chriſt, nothing elſe were ſignified, but the repreſentation of Chriſts reſurrection in Baptiſme; it were an improper ſpeech to ſay, Baptiſme saueth by the reſurrection, that is, Baptiſme ſaueth by Baptiſme: wherefore ſeeing that the reſurrection of Chriſt giueth life and efficacie to Baptiſme, it is our faith in the reſurrection of Chriſt, which ſaueth vs in Baptiſme. Secondly, the Apoſtle ſaith, not the waſhing of the fleſh ſaueth: Ergo, not the externall act of the Sacrament, but the teſtimonie of a good conſcience; what is that elſe, but the aſſurance of faith, whereby the conſcience is ſetled as the Apoſtle ſheweth, Rom.5.1. Rom.5.1.

Epheſ.5.29. *Argum.*4. The Apoſtle ſaith, Epheſ.5.26. That he might cleanſe it and ſanctifie it, by the waſhing of water through the word. Here our cleanſing and ſanctifying is not aſcribed to the water, but to the word of God, that is, his gracious promiſe in Chriſt, apprehended by faith, which elſe-where the Apoſtle calleth the word of faith, Rom 10.8. Rom.10.8.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that by the word here is not vnderſtood the word preached, that begetteth faith, but the word of conſecration in the Sacrament, *reſp.ad argum.*5.

Contra. Firſt neither doe wee vnderſtand in this place, the word preached, as though there could be no Baptiſme without a Sermon, nor yet the word of conſecration: for though the conſecratorie word ioyned to the element doth make it a Sacrament, yet doth it not make it alwaies a cleanſing and ſanctifying Sacrament, to preſent the receiuer without ſpot and blameleſſe, as it followeth in the ſame place, but onely in the faithfull and beleeuers. Secondly, the word therefore that cleanſeth, is the word of faith, whereby our hearts are purified: Act.15.9. which is begotten in vs by the preaching of the word, and confirmed by the Sacraments. Act.15.9.

In 1.c.ad Roman.ſerm 2. 1 Chryſoſtome ſaith, Nulla prorſus re liberamur niſi per fidem, We are deliuered by nothing, but through faith,&c. The Sacraments then auaile not without faith: Ieremie Patriarke ſaith: Fides tua ad omnia valet,&c. Thy faith is auaileable for all things: neither can a iuſt man profite thee, vnleſſe thou beeſt faithfull: Non poſſunt, quæ Deus largitur, veluti ſacerdotali munere perfici,&c. The things which God giueth, cannot be perfited by the prieſtly function,&c. But the act or marke of the Sacrament, dependeth vpon the prieſtly function,&c. Cenſur. Oriental.c 48.

Tractat.6.in epiſtol.Iouin. 2 Auguſtine thus writeth: Aliud eſt aqua ſacramenti, aliud aqua, quæ ſignificat ſpiritum Dei: aqua viſibilis eſt,&c. & abluit corpus, & ſignificat, quid fit in anima, per illum ſpiritum anima mundatur & ſaginatur. The water of the Sacrament is one thing, the water which ſignifieth the ſpirit is another: the one is viſible, and waſheth the fleſh, and ſignifieth what is done in the ſoule: but by the ſpirit the ſoule is cleanſed,&c. The Sacrament of Baptiſme then, by this fathers ſentence, and ſo all other Sacraments, doe not giue grace, but ſignifie onely and repreſent grace.

Damianus a Goes Indor. legat. The moderne Africane Church in Æthiopia, though in many things they are very ſuperſtitious, yet herein they thus holde, that their children are vpon the ſeuenth day baptized and circumciſed: Nullo aut. meriti aut fiduciæ reſpectu: Yet with no opinion or reſpect of merit, or any confidence therein.

Harm.ſect.12. Pag.381. 3 Latter confeſſ. of Heluetia, c.19. Wee diſallow their doctrine, who teach, that grace and the things ſignified are ſo tied together, that whoſoeuer doe outwardly receiue the ſignes, muſt needes inwardly participate the grace,&c. Bohemia c.11. We teach, that the Sacraments of themſelues, or by their owne vertue for the workes ſake, or for the onely outward action, that is for the bare participation, or receiuing and vſe thereof, cannot giue grace,&c. for faith muſt goe before, whereby the holy Ghoſt doth inwardly lighten and quicken man,&c. Ibid.pag.328.

4 *Synod.Colonienſ.part.9.cap.*13. Quod præter preces, aſperſiones, & vnctiones, aliarumq́; rerum ſolennia adhibentur,&c. In that beſide prayer, we vſe ſprinkling, annointing, with other externall rites, therein lieth a myſterie, not that theſe dead things are capable of grace, but when theſe things are viſibly done, Chriſtians are admoniſhed, that God worketh by the inuiſible vertue of his ſpirit. The externall things therefore worke not, but are ſignes of the inward working of the ſpirit.

We want not the witneſſe of their owne decrees: Decret.part.3.diſtinct.4.c.145. Melior Centurio nondum baptizatus, Simone baptizato,&c. The Centurion being not yet baptiſed was better, then Simon baptized: for hee before Baptiſme was repleniſhed with the holy ſpirit; the other after Baptiſme was poſſeſſed with an vncleane ſpirit, &c. How then is grace annexed to the Sacrament, when as both he that wanteth the Sacrament, may haue grace; and he that hath the Sacrament, wanteth grace?

Heare alſo an euident teſtimonie of one of your owne writers: Conſtat in omni ſcriptura, ieiunam eſſe & languidam operam noſtram, etiam Apoſtolicam, etiam Chriſti, &c. It is apparant throughout the whole Scripture, that our outward endeuour is weake, and of no force, yea the labour of the Apoſtles, and of Chriſt himſelfe, vnleſſe it be helped by the inward worke of the ſpirit, &c. *Eſpenc. in 2. THE SECOND PART, OF THE DIFFErence of the old and new Sacraments.

The Papiſts.

THe ſacrifices and ceremonies of the old law were ſo farre from giuing ſpirit, grace, remiſſion, iuſtification, and thereupon the entrance into the ioyes of heauen, that they were but meere ſhadowes, obſcurely repreſenting the graces of the new Teſtament: whereas the Sacraments inſtituted by Chriſt, containe and giue grace, and iuſtification. Rhemiſt. Heb. 10. ſect. 3. 100. Error.

Our countrie men of Doway doe giue a preeminence to Baptiſme beyond Circumciſion in vertue and efficacie: Baptiſme as an inſtrumentall cauſe counteth ſome and iuſtifieth, Circumciſion was only a ſigne that grace was giuen. Againe, Baptiſme imprinteth a character in the ſoule, the other leaueth a marke only in the fleſh: finally, Baptiſme openeth the gate of heauen in vertue of Chriſts paſſion now paſt, which Circumciſion could not before Chriſt ſuffred death, &c. but ſeeing Chriſt was the Lambe of God which was ſlaine from the beginning of the world, heauen was opened to all beleeuers in him from the beginning of the world: Let vs ſee ſome of their arguments. Annot. in 17. Geneſ. v. 10. Apoc. 13. 8.

Argum. 1. They were but ſhadowes of good things, not the image of the things themſelues, Heb. 10. 1. They were but ſhadowes and repreſentations of the Sacraments of the new Teſtament: Ergo, they had not the ſame efficacie or power, Rhemiſt. ibid. Heb. 10. 1.

Anſw. 1. Their Sacraments were onelie ſhadowes of Chriſts ſacrifice, not of our Sacraments, though theſe come in the place of the other, and are anſwerable and correſpondent vnto them. Secondly, neither doe the Sacraments of the new Teſtament giue grace or iuſtification, but are onely liuely teſtimonies of grace and reconciliation wrought by the death of Chriſt. Thirdly, their Sacraments were as effectuall to aſſure the Fathers of grace and remiſſion of ſinnes by Chriſt, as our Sacraments are to vs.

Argum. 2. The Sacraments of the new law or Goſpell doe giue grace and iuſtification, ſo did not the Sacraments of the old law: Ergo, there is not the ſame efficacie of them both. Againe, S. Paul calleth them impotent and beggerly rudiments, Galath. 4. 9. ſo are not the Sacraments of the Goſpell: Ergo: Bellarm. lib. 2. de Sacram. cap. 14. argum. 4. Galath. 4. 9.

Anſw. 1. The Sacraments of the new law are no more able by any efficacie in themſelues to iuſtifie vs, then the Sacraments of the old: It is the propertie of faith onely to iuſtifie vs, Rom. 3. 28. and chap. 5. 1. Being iuſtified by faith, we are at peace with God. Where it cannot be anſwered, that faith iuſtifieth but in part, for that is perfect iuſtification which worketh peace of conſcience in vs, but faith bringeth ſuch iuſtification: Ergo, it iuſtifieth perfectly. Therefore in this reſpect, the Sacraments differ not, becauſe neither of them iuſtifie, but are ſeales only of the righteouſnes of faith, Rom. 11. 4. Rom. 3. 28. c. 5. 1 Rom. 11. 4.

To the ſecond place we anſwere: firſt, that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of the Sacraments of the law, but of other ceremonious rites, as the obſeruation of daies, moneths, yeeres. Secondly, he reſpecteth that preſent time, when ſuch ceremonies ought of right to haue ceaſed and giuen place, the Goſpell being now reuealed, and therefore he calleth them beggerly, becauſe of the ſuperſtitious vſe of them, not hauing in this ſpeech any relation to the originall and firſt inſtitution. Thirdly, they are ſaid to be impotent, not in reſpect of our Sacraments (and yet we denie not, but that as our Sacraments haue a more cleere ſignification, and liuely repreſentation of holy things; ſo the other being herein compared, may bee called more impotent) but as they are ſet againſt iuſtifying faith: in reſpect whereof our Sacraments are weake and impotent: as S. Paul ſaith, That neither circumciſion is any thing, nor vncircumciſion, but faith working by loue, Galath. 5. 6. where faith is ſet againſt all other things whatſoeuer, as being of no value, that is weake and impotent to iuſtifie, whether appertaining to the circumciſed or vncircumciſed (as there are no Sacraments but belong to either of theſe orders.) Wherefore only faith is auaileable and ſtrong to iuſtifie, all other things impotent and weake. Galath. 5. 6.

Argum. 3. Coloſſ. 2. 11. In whom (ſaith the Apoſtle) yee are circumciſed with circumciſion made without hands, &c. through the circumciſion of Chriſt, in that you are buried with him through Baptiſme, &c. Here circumciſion made with hands is oppoſed to circumciſion made without hands, that Coloſſ. 2. 11.

is Baptiſme: ſo that which could not be wrought by Circumciſion, is wrought by Baptiſme: Ergo, there is not the ſame effect of Circumciſion and Baptiſme, Bellarm. loc. 7.

Anſw. Firſt, Baptiſme is not the circumciſion made without hands, for as much as in Baptiſme there is the miniſtrie of the hands of men, as well as in circumciſion: but by circumciſion without hands the Apoſtle vnderſtandeth, the ſpirituall circumciſion of Chriſt, as hee himſelfe expoundeth it. Secondly, as the externall circumciſion of it ſelfe profited not, ſo alſo the Apoſtle ſaith of Baptiſme, that, we are buried with him in Baptiſme, &c. through the faith of the operation of God, &c. So it is faith by the operation of God, not the outward act of Baptiſme: wherefore out of this place no difference can be gathered.

Iſay 1.11. Rom. 4.10. Argum. 4. Bellarmine heapeth vp many places together; as Iſay 1.11. what haue I to doe with the multitude of your ſacrifices? Rom. 4.10. Abraham was counted iuſt being vncircumciſed: Galath. 4. they are called beggerly elements: Coloſſ. 2. the ſhadowes of things to come: Ergo, the Sacraments of the old law did not conferre grace.

Anſw. Firſt, the Prophets did not ſimply condemne the ſacrifices, but becauſe they were offered in ſinne and hypocriſie: and therefore the Prophet ſaith, Iſay 1.16. waſh you, make you cleane. Secondly, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the times of Chriſt, when as the old ſacrifices and ceremonies were out of date: the figures were to ceaſe, the bodie being come. Thirdly, they are called impotent and weake, not in reſpect of the Sacraments of the Goſpell, but being compared to faith, which is the complement both of their Sacraments and ours. Fourthly, wee grant, that the ſacrifices of the law did not conferre grace, no more do the Sacraments of the Goſpel: wherefore he hath ſaid nothing, vnleſſe he had proued, that our Sacraments doe conferre grace, which theirs did not.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe hold and conſtantly affirme and teach, that the Fathers in the law receiued no leſſe the truth and ſubſtance of Chriſt by faith in their Sacraments, then we doe in ours: although in reſpect of more cleere and lightſome ſignification, our Sacraments doe farre exceed theirs, and ſo alſo may more liuely ſtirre vp our faith: yet the ſubſtance and effect both of their Sacraments and ours, was all one and the very ſame.

1. Co. 10.3. Argum. 1. S. Paul ſpeaketh plainly, that the Iſraelites did all eate the ſame ſpirituall meate, and all drinke of the ſame ſpirituall rocke, and the rocke was Chriſt, 1. Cor. 10.3.4. Therefore Chriſt was exhibited as well to them in their Sacraments, as he is in ours.

Bellarmine anſwereth: Firſt, they did all eate the ſame ſpirituall meate amongſt themſelues, not the ſame together with vs. So alſo ſay the Rhemiſts, that they amongſt themſelues did all feede of one bread, and drinke of the ſame rocke. The Apoſtle ſaith not, that they and wee doe eate and drinke of the ſelfeſame meate and drinke, Rhemiſt. in hunc locum.

Anſw. 1. Yes the Apoſtle ſaith ſo in effect, that there is one and the ſelfeſame ſpirituall meate and drinke to vs all, both to them and vs: for what doe we eate and drinke but Chriſt? and ſo doe they: The rocke, ſaith the Apoſtle, was Chriſt. Secondly, Auguſtine ſaith ſo expreſly, that they did eate the ſame ſpirituall meate, and drinke the ſame ſpirituall cup that we doe: Quicunque in Manna Chriſtum intellexerunt, eundem, quem nos, cibum ſpiritualem manducauerunt: De vtilitat. pœnitent. c. 1. They which in the eating of Manna did vnderſtand Chriſt, did eate the ſame ſpirituall meate that wee doe: Ergo, Chriſt was as well preſent by faith to them in their Sacraments, as he is to vs in ours.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Auguſtines meaning is, that their Sacraments and ours had not the ſame efficacie, but the ſame ſignification only, becauſe both theirs and ours doe ſignifie Chriſt.

Contra. 1. He hath not anſwered to this place of Auguſtine, wherein he affirmeth, that they did eate the ſame ſpirituall meate with vs: and if they did eate the ſame ſpirituall meate, then not in ſignification only, but in vertue and efficacie their Sacraments are equall with ours. 2. That Chriſt gaue the ſame vertue and efficacie to both Sacraments, Bernard plainly affirmeth, Serm. de cœna Domini, or who elſe vnder his name: Chriſtus pro ſalute mundi ſemel factus eſt hoſtia ſalutaris: omnibus ſacramentis tam præcedentibus quam ſubſequentibus virtutem dedit & efficaciam, vt tanta & tali hoſtia ſanctificarentur omnes liberandi per illam: Chriſt to ſaue the world was once made an acceptable ſacrifice: to all the Sacraments both going before and following after he gaue vertue and efficacie, that all might be ſanctified with this worthie ſacrifice, for whoſe deliuerance it was appointed.

Secondly, Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Manna is called a ſpirituall meate, either in reſpect of the cauſe, which was heauenly and ſpirituall, it being wrought by a miracle; and ſo alſo the water: and therefore the rocke is ſaid to bee Chriſt, becauſe Chriſt was the author, or the efficient cauſe to bring the water out of the rocke: or elſe in reſpect of the ſignification only, not becauſe it had any ſpirituall effect. His reaſons are theſe:

First, the beaſts and birds did drinke of the ſame water, therefore it was not ſpirituall. Secondly, we reade of no ſpirituall promiſe made to thoſe, that did eate Manna, or drinke of the rocke; ſuch as are annexed to the Sacraments. Thirdly, our Sauiour ſaith, Your fathers did eate Manna, and are dead, and Moſes did not giue you bread from heauen, Ioh. 6. wherefore it was a corporall foode onely, not ſpirituall. John 6.32.

Contra. First, the Apoſtle ſaith, they did all eate the ſame ſpirituall meate, that is both amongſt themſelues and with vs, as wee haue ſhewed: but to vs it is ſpirituall meate, not in reſpect of the author only, but in regard of the ſpirituall efficacie; therefore it was ſo vnto them: And in that the Apoſtle ſaith, they did drinke Chriſt ſpiritually, this betokeneth not the ſignifying only, but the exhibiting alſo of Chriſt vnto them: for this were a ſlender eating and drinking of Chriſt, to haue him ſignified only and ſhadowed foorth, vnleſſe they ſhould verily be made partakers of him.

Secondly, we anſwere to his reaſons: to the firſt, that it letteth not the rock to be ſpirituall drinke, becauſe the cattell alſo did drinke thereof: for your ſelues denie not, but that your conſecrated hoſt may be deuoured of mice and dogs: And againe, the cattell alſo and beaſts went thorow the red ſea as well as the Iſraelites, yet was it a Baptiſme to the Iſraelites, though not to the other: and Sacraments are ordained for men, and not for beaſts.

To the ſecond: the Apoſtle ſaith, they dranke of the ſpirituall rocke, which rocke is Chriſt; they therefore did ſpiritually drinke Chriſt: but to thoſe that eate and drink Chriſt, ſpirituall promiſes are made, as Ioh.6.54. whoſoeuer eateth my fleſh, &c. hath eternall life, &c. wherefore ſo many of them, as by Iohn 6.54. faith did ſpiritually in Manna eate Chriſt, and in the rocke drinke Chriſt, were made partakers of this ſpirituall promiſe.

To the third we anſwere: that Moſes indeed gaue but the materiall Manna, but Chriſt concurring with Moſes outward miniſterie, gaue himſelfe the true bread from heauen: like as in the Euchariſt, the Miniſter giueth the external elements, Chriſt working together giueth the ſpiritual grace. Wherefore our Sauiour ſaith not, that the Iſraelites had not the true bread, for elſewhere hee teſtifieth, that Moſes wrote of him, Ioh.6.46. but that beſide the materiall Manna, whereof their fathers did eate, and Iohn 6.46. yet died, there was another ſpirituall and heauenly bread exhibited to all beleeuers both of the old and new Teſtament: for vnleſſe they alſo vnder the law, had eaten the fleſh of Chriſt and drunke his blood, they could not haue had life, as our Sauiour ſaith, verſ. 53. but ſome of them had life: Ergo, they did eate the true bread of heauen.

Argum. 2. In Circumciſion, which was a Sacrament of the old law, there was promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes and of life euerlaſting, as there is in Baptiſme: Ergo, there is the ſame vertue and efficacie both of the old and new Sacraments.

That to Circumciſion was annexed the promiſe of life eternall: firſt it appeareth, Gen. 17.7. where Gen.17.7. the Lord maketh this couenant with Abraham, whereof Circumciſion was a ſigne, I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeede: that is, thy God for euer, not onely in this world, but the next: for our Sauiour expoundeth it, Matth.22.32. I am the God of Abraham, Iſaac, Iacob: he is not God of the dead, Matth.22.32. but of the liuing. Secondly, Epheſ.2.12. the Apoſtle ſaith, that the Gentiles being vncircumciſed, were Epheſ.2.12. ſtrangers from the couenant of promiſe, and had no hope, and were without God in this world; therefore circumciſion was a couenant of Gods euerlaſting promiſes.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that Abraham was reputed righteous and iuſt before Circumciſion: Ergo, to him in Circumciſion there was no promiſe made of remiſſion of ſinnes, which hee had alreadie.

Contra. We ſay not, that Circumciſion cauſed remiſſion of ſinnes: for then the effect could not goe before the cauſe; but that it was a ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 4.11. and of remiſſion of ſinnes: and ſo it may be, whether righteouſneſſe goe before circumciſion, as in Abraham, or follow after, as in Iſaac. So we reade, Act. 10.47. that the holie Ghoſt went before, Act.10.47. and then Baptiſme followed: the thing ſignified appeared firſt, and then the ſigne or ſeale was added: Can any man forbid water (ſaith S. Peter) that theſe ſhould not be baptized, which haue receiued the holie Ghoſt as well as we?

Secondly, ſaith Bellarmine, the Lord, in ſaying, I will be thy God, and of thy ſeede, maketh no promiſe of euerlaſting ſaluation, but of temporall protection peculiar to that people, both to the good and bad: and the ſaying of Chriſt, he is not God of the dead, &c. doth but implie that God is God not of thoſe that are not, but of thoſe that are, whether they be good or bad.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtle by ſeede vnderſtandeth Chriſt: he ſaith not, to thy ſeedes, as ſpeaking of many, but to thy ſeede, as of one, euen Chriſt, Galath. 2. 16. wherefore this promiſe, I will be thy God, Galath.3.16. and of thy ſeede, hath a ſpirituall relation to Chriſt. Secondly, this couenant appertained not to the wicked, but is applied onely by the Apoſtle to the faithfull, Hebr. 13.5. He hath ſaid, I will not leaue Heb.13.5. thee, nor forſake thee. Thirdly, to be God of Abraham, Iſaac, Iacob, is to bee God not onely of thoſe which are, but, that are liuing with God: for if God bee not God of the dead in reſpect of this life, how much leſſe of thoſe that are dead eternally: and the Apoſtle ſpeaketh euidently, Epheſ. 2.15. of whom is named the whole familie in heauen and earth, that God doth only name and call himſelfe by Epheſ.2.15. thoſe, whether liuing or departed, that are of his familie.

Thirdly, it was not the want of Circumciſion, but the want of faith, that made the Gentiles ſtrangers from the couenant: for Iob and Cornelius were not circumciſed, Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. So may it be ſaid of Baptiſme, that many which haue it not among the Turkes and Iewes, if they contemne it not, may by Gods extraordinarie mercie be ſaued, if they beleeue; yet Baptiſme hath the promiſe of life eternall: ſo though ſome vncircumciſed might beleeue, yet ordinarily the circumciſion had the promiſe of life and ſaluation in Chriſt.

Argum. 3. Leuit. 5. verſ. 12, 13. He ſhall bring his offering to the Prieſt, &c. who ſhall make attone- Leuit.5.12.13. ment for him, as touching his ſinne, and it ſhall be forgiuen him: Ergo, the ſacrifices of the law had promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes by the force of Chriſts death repreſented in the ſame.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the ſacrifices did purge the offerers ſinnes only in reſpect of the temporall puniſhment, and ſome legall vncleanneſſe, but they did not cleanſe them ſimply before God in reſpect of euerlaſting puniſhment: and this may appeare, for that the ſacrifices were not ordained for all ſinnes, but of ignorance only committed againſt the ceremonies of the law. Bellarm. cap. 17. reſp. ad argum. 2.

Leuit. 6. 2. 3.

Contra. Firſt, it is falſe, that the ſacrifices ſerued only to purge ſinnes of ignorance, for Leuit 6. 2. 3. there are ſacrifices preſcribed for the ſinnes of deceit, robberie, oppreſſion, falſe ſwearing, which were voluntarie ſinnes, and not of ignorance.

Pſal. 79. 9.

Leuit. 5. 5.
Leuit 6. 4.

Secondly, it alſo vntrue, that the temporall puniſhment was onely pardoned, and not the ſinnes truly remitted. Firſt, where the Prieſt is ſaid to make attonement, the word is כפר caphar: which ſignifieth to reconcile, to remoue wrath: and it is vſed, Pſal. 79. 9. Be mercifull vnto our ſinnes, &c. will he now ſay, that the Church here prayeth onely for the mitigation of temporall puniſhment? wherefore if the Prieſt made attonement for them, and Gods wrath was appeaſed for their ſinne, then was it verily remitted. Secondly, there is confeſſion of the ſinne required, Leuit. 5. 5. and reſtitution, Leuit. 6. 4. but where there is confeſſion, and reſtitution, there is repentance; and where repentance is, there is remiſſion of the ſinne it ſelfe before God.

Coloſſ 2. 11.

Rom. 2. 28.

Argum. 4. Coloſſ. 2. 11. S. Paul ſaith, In whom yee are circumciſed by circumciſion made without hands, by putting off the ſinfull body of the fleſh, through the circumciſion of Chriſt, &c. Here the Apoſtle affirmeth, that the ſpirituall circumciſion, which did accompanie the ſacramentall circumciſion, in them that did beleeue, was effectuall to the putting off the bodie of ſinne; Wee ſay not, that the externall act of circumciſion only had this effect, but the inward grace in the circumciſion of the heart in all true Iſraelites working with the circumciſion of the fleſh, was auaileable to the remiſſion of ſinnes: as the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 2. 28. He is not a Iew, which is one outward, neither is that circumciſion, which is outward in the fleſh, &c.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that in circumciſion not the whole body, but one part onely was circumciſed, and therefore it did not ſerue to the putting off the whole body of ſinne.

Iohn 13. 10.

Contra. Neither when Chriſt waſhed Peter, did hee waſh any thing but his feete, though Peter would haue had his hands and head alſo waſhed: yet was the waſhing of his feete ſufficient, Ioh. 13. 10. ſo though in circumciſion the outward ſigne only touched one part, yet the inward circumciſion thereby repreſented, was ſufficient to purge the whole inward man.

Catech. 10.

1 Cyril by that place of the Apoſtle, they dranke of the ſpirituall rocke, and the rocke was Chriſt, proueth that Chriſt appeared and was preſent with Moſes: and he inferreth, Cernis, quod & Propheta tum videbant Chriſtum: You ſee, that euen the Prophets did ſee Chriſt, &c. and the people did alſo drinke of Chriſt: for the rocke was Chriſt, whereof they dranke.

Lib. 10. in 15. cap. ad Rom.

Hom. 2. in Cantic.

2 Origen ſaith, Spiritualem potum biberunt, bibentes de ſequente Petra, quæ erat Chriſtus: They did drinke ſpirituall drinke, drinking of the rocke which followed them, which rocke was Chriſt. Yet more euidently in another place he ſaith: Quamuis nec illis potuerit defuiſſe perfectio veniens ex fide: Although that neither perfection comming of faith was wanting vnto them: for the things, which we beleeue, to haue been done, they with greater expectation did beleeue more to come: therefore as ſince the comming of Chriſt the faith of things paſt doth vs; ſo the faith of things to come brought them ad ſummum perfectionis, to the height of perfection, &c.

Harm. p. 307.

3 Latter confeſſion of Heluetia, chap. 17. They are all ioyned (both in the old and new Teſtament) vnder one head, and by faith are all partakers of one and the ſame ſpirituall meate and drinke.

4 We want not here their owne witneſſe againſt themſelues, Decret. part. 3. diſtinct. 2. cap. 81. Inquit Apoſtolus (omnes eandem eſcam ſpiritualem manducarunt) &c. The Apoſtle ſaith, they did all eate the ſame ſpirituall meate; the ſame ſpirituall meate indeed, but another corporall, becauſe they did eate Manna, and wee ſome other thing: and hee addeth, and they all dranke the ſame ſpirituall drinke; they one thing, and we another; ſed ſpecie viſibili, but in outward ſhew; quod tamen idem eſt virtute ſpirituali, which is notwithſtanding the ſame in the ſpirituall vertue. This Canon affirmeth, that they did eate the ſame ſpirituall meate, not amongſt themſelues, but with vs, which though it were in ſhape diuers, yet in vertue is the ſame: Ergo, there is the ſame efficacie and vertue, both of the old and new Sacraments.

The Maſter of ſentences alleageth thus out of Gregorie: Quod apud nos valet aqua Baptiſmi, hoc egit apud veteres, vel pro paruulis ſola fides, &c. That which the water of Baptiſme is to vs, faith only was in time paſt to children, and to the elder ſort, the vertue of the ſacrifices, &c. or the myſterie of Circumciſion, lib. 4. diſtinct. 1. g. If Circumciſion was auaileable then, as Baptiſme is now, then the vertue and ſubſtance of the Sacraments was the ſame.

Likewiſe Innocentius 3. thus decreeth, Decret. Greg. lib. 3. tit. 42. c. 3. Originalis culpa remittebatur per Circumciſionis myſterium, & damnationis periculum vitabatur: Originall ſinne was remitted by the myſterie of Circumciſion, and the perill of damnation auoided, &c. Here is an euident teſtimonie of one of their moſt learned Popes, that remiſſion of ſinnes was had by the Sacraments of the old law.

Further, it is the opinion of ſome of their beſt ſchoolemen, that circumciſion did conferre iuſtification, ex opere operato, by the very worke that was wrought; which efficacy the reſt of theirs aſcribe only to the Sacraments of the new Teſtament; thus holdeth Alexander, Bonauenture, Scotus, Gabriel: ſo that in their opinion, betweene Circumciſion a Sacrament of the old Teſtament, and the reſt of the Sacraments of the new, there was no difference: yea, as Bellarmine confeſſeth, it is Communis ſententia Theologorum, the common ſentence of popiſh diuines, that the old ſacraments did onely iuſtifie ex opere operantis, by the worke of the doer, that is, the faith and deuotion of the receiuer: and the new Sacraments do no more; for though we truely hold, that we are iuſtified onely by faith, not by the Sacraments, yet by them is iuſtifying faith confirmed; and without the faith of the receiuer, they are altogether vnprofitable: for S. Paul biddeth euery man to examine himſelfe before, 1. Cor. 11.28. which examination, is to proue, whether they be in the faith, 2. Cor. 13.5. Wherefore neither old nor new Sacraments are profitable without faith. 1.Cor.11.28. 2.Cor.13.5.

See alſo this doctrine ſealed: Iohn Frith holy Martyr; They did all eate the ſame ſpirituall meat, and did drinke the ſame ſpirituall drinke, all one ſpirituall thing, but not all one corporall matter: for they did eat Manna, and we another thing, but the ſelfe ſame ſpirituall thing that we doe, Fox. pag. 1033. P.942.2.50.

THE THIRD PART, OF THE CHARACTER or badge, which (as they ſay) is imprinted in the ſoule by the Sacraments.

The Papiſts.

First, there is a certaine ſeale, and ſpirituall marke or badge: imprinted by the Sacraments, in the ſoules of the receiuers, which can neuer be blotted out, neither by ſinne, apoſtaſie, or hereſie. Secondly, but it perpetually remaineth for the cogniſance of their Chriſtendome, & diſtinction from others, that were neuer of Chriſts fold, by which alſo they are conſecrated and deputed to God. Thirdly, this indeleble Character, is giuen by three Sacraments onely, Baptiſme, Confirmation, Orders; which is the cauſe, they are not reiterable, nor euer to be receiued but once, Rhemiſt. annot. 2. Corin. 1. ſect. 7. Trident. Concil. ſeſſ. 7. can. 9. Bellar. lib. 2. de ſacram. cap. 19. So they of Doway ſay that Baptiſme imprinteth a Character in the ſoule. Annot. in 17. Gen. v. 10. 101. Error.

Argum. 1. 2. Corin. 1.22. He hath ſealed vs, and giuen the earneſt of the ſpirit into our hearts. Likewiſe, Epheſ. 1.13. Ye were ſealed with the holy ſpirit of promiſe. Epheſ. 4.30. Greeue not the ſpirit of God, by whom ye are ſealed againſt the day of redemption. This ſealing is nothing elſe, as they ſay, but an imprinting in the ſoule of this indeleble marke or character.

Anſ. First, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh manifeſtly of the ſpirituall and inward ſeale of the ſpirit of God, whereby the promiſes of God are ſealed and aſſured vnto vs, whereof Baptiſme is an outward ſeale in our bodies. Secondly, it is an abſurd thing to holde, that hee that hath vtterly and malitiouſly renounced Chriſtianity, and blaſphemed Chriſt himſelfe, ſhould ſtil retaine this Character of Baptiſme, as cogniſance of his Chriſtendome. Thirdly, Baptiſme is not reiterable, that is, to be iterated or repeated, not becauſe it leaueth an indeleble character in the minde of the baptized; which is but a meere deuiſe and fancie: but becauſe, as it ſufficeth once to be borne in the fleſh, ſo once to be borne againe, and to be regenerated by the ſpirit, (of the which regeneration, Baptiſme is a ſeale and pledge) it is ſufficient. As for confirmation; and orders, we acknowledge them to be no Sacraments: and therfore to haue no ſuch indeleble character. 2.Cor.1.22. Epheſ.1.13. Epheſ.4.30.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that theſe places cannot be vnderſtood, of the ſealing or aſſuring of Gods promiſes by his ſpirit in our hearts in the Sacrament: firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith, he hath ſealed vs, not ſealed the promiſes.

Contra. First, in the ſecond place, the Apoſtle ſaith, we are ſealed with the ſpirit of promiſe: to bee ſealed with the promiſe, and to haue the promiſe ſealed vnto vs, are all one. Seconly, in the firſt place, where he ſaith, he hath ſealed vs, a little before, he ſaid, in him the promiſes of God, are yea, and Amen, verſe 20. What is that elſe, but the promiſes are ſealed in him?

Secondly, the Apoſtle ſaith, after you beleeued, you were ſealed, Epheſ. 1. that is, in Baptiſme, which commeth after faith, Bellar. cap. 20.

Cont. First, heere Bellarm. leaueth the Vulgar text, which readeth, credentes, beleeuing, and preſſeth the Greeke word of the preter tence, πιστεύσαντες, hauing beleeued: ſo inconſtant are they, ſometime preferring the Latin, ſometime the Greeke. Secondly, though Baptiſme came after faith then, it is miniſtred before faith now. Thirdly, it followeth not: this ſeale was after faith: Ergo, in Baptiſme: for vpon their very beleeuing they were ſealed. Fourthly, we denie not, but that Baptiſme is a ſeale of the righteouſnes of faith, as S. Paul ſpeaketh of Circumciſion, becauſe thereby the Promiſes are ſealed to vs: yet there is no ſuch character in Baptiſme, as there was not in Circumciſion.

Now further, that theſe places cannot bee vnderſtood of any ſuch character, or marke, or infuſed, inherent, or imprinted qualitie in the ſoule by their three Sacraments, it may thus appeare.

First, 2. Cor. 1.22. As wee are ſaid to bee ſealed, ſo alſo are wee annointed: but our annointing, or oynt- 2.Cor.1.22.

1.John,2.20. ointment, is the holy Ghoſt, 1. Iohn 2.20. as the Rhemiſts themſelues expound it : Ergo, the ſame is alſo the ſeale.

Secondly, He hath ſealed vs, and giuen the earneſt of his ſpirit in our hearts : the ſame is both the ſeale, and the earneſt, the ſpirit of God is our earneſt vntill the day of redemption : Ergo, alſo the ſeale.

Epheſ 4.30. Epheſ.1.14. Thirdly, Epheſ.4.30. We are ſealed to the day of redemption: which is not in Baptiſme, as Bellarmine fondly expoundeth, taking of for in, and redemption for Baptiſme: for this ſeale none haue, but they for whom the inheritance is purchaſed, Epheſ.1.14. but all that are baptized ſhall not be ſaued: Ergo, there is no ſuch ſeale in Baptiſme.

Iohn.1.33. Fourthly, as we are ſealed, ſo doe we ſeale: Iohn 1.33. He that receiueth his teſtimony, hath ſealed that God is true: If by being ſealed we receiue a Character, then by ſealing we giue a character: theſe places then ſerue not his turne.

Argum.2. They which were baptized with Iohns baptiſme, were afterward baptized againe, Acts.19.4.5. Act.19.4.5. And this was the reaſon thereof, becauſe Iohns baptiſme did not imprint an indeleble character in the ſoule, as Chriſts baptiſme did, Bellar.cap.22.reſp.ad 3.ration.

Anſw. Firſt, it cannot be proued, that the Apoſtles baptized thoſe that had receiued Iohns baptiſme, neither hath that place, Acts 19.5. any ſuch meaning : ſee the full anſwer for this afterward, Contr.12, of Baptiſme, qu.7.arg.2.Papiſtar. Secondly, though that after Iohns baptiſme they had beene baptized againe, it followeth not, that it was becauſe of any ſuch character. Hierome giueth another reaſon : Ioannis baptiſma imperfectum, &c. Iohns baptiſine was imperfect, and did not giue remiſſion of ſins, therefore they were baptized againe with Iohns baptiſme, aduerſ.Luciferian. Though this be an error alſo, yet it is againſt them.

The Proteſtants.

THat by Baptiſme and ſome other ſacraments, there is imprinted in the ſoule a marke, or character, which can neuer be blotted out, no not by Apoſtaſie; and that this is the cauſe why Baptiſme cannot be iterated, we hold it to be a meere Deuiſe, and inuention of men.

Argum.1. Where the end and fruits of Baptiſme are vtterly extinguiſhed, there cannot remaine any character or badge, or ſigne of Baptiſme : The fruits of Baptiſme are repentance and regeneration by the ſpirit : But it is poſſible for theſe, in ſome that are baptized, to be vtterly loſt, as in them that Heb.6.6. fall away by Apoſtaſie, they cannot be renewed by repenſtance. Hebr. 6 6. Therefore in ſuch there is not to be found any character, badge or ſigne of Baptiſme, which they haue vtterly renounced: onely the memoriall thereof is kept before God, they being ſo much worſe, then they that were neuer baptized, becauſe they haue wilfully reiected their profeſſion.

Why Baptiſme is not iterated. Argum.2. The cauſe why Baptiſme is but once to be giuen, is not, as they alleage, becauſe it leaueth ſuch a ſure marke behinde, ſo deepely died in the ſoule, that it cannot be blotted out. There are other cauſes that come neerer the trueth : Firſt, as God is but one, who maketh a couenant with vs in Baptiſme; and the faith but one, into the which we are entred by that Sacrament: ſo Baptiſme is one and the ſame. Epheſ.4.5. and as it ſufficeth once to be borne in the fleſh; ſo once to bee regenerated Epheſ 4.5. 1.Cor.11.25. by the ſpirit in Baptiſme. Secondly, the inſtitution of God is another cauſe, who hath appointed the other Sacrament often to be receiued, 1.Corinth.11.25. But for the iteration of Baptiſme, wee haue no ſuch commandement. Thirdly, Baptiſme commeth in the place of Circumciſion : as that was but once miniſtred, ſo likewiſe it muſt be in the other. Fourthly, In Baptiſme God maketh a perpetuall couenant with vs, which he alwaies remembreth; and therefore neede not to be put in minde, by the often vſing of that Sacrament. Theſe and the like reaſons may be alleaged, why Baptiſme is not often to be required: and not that, which by them without any ground is pretended.

Lib. de Baptiſ. Tertullian ſheweth another reaſon, why Baptiſme is not iterated: ſemel lauacrum inimus, ſemel delicta diluuntur, quia iterari, &c. non oportet, caterum Iſrael quotidie lauat, quia quotidie inquinatur, We once come to the lauacre, ſins are once waſhed away, becauſe they muſt not be iterated, but Iſrael waſheth daily, becauſe they are dayly polluted, &c. Baptiſme then is not repeated, to ſignifie, that they Annot. in Damaſcen.lib.4. de fid.c.5. which are baptized ſhould not returne to their old ſinnes : Clictoueus giueth an other reaſon, why baptiſine is not to be iterated; quia typum gerit martis Chriſti; quam ſemel pro nobis pertulit, becauſe it beareth a type of Chriſt, which he once onely ſuffered for vs.

Bellarmine thus obiecteth againſt the former firſt reaſons: Againſt the firſt, that Baptiſme is not iterated becauſe it is our ſpirituall birth: Firſt ſaith he, we are alſo borne by the word, yet ſermons are often repeated. Secondly, though our carnall birth cannot be iterated, yet our ſpirituall may, as in the reſurrection : for as the bodily death is but once, the ſpirituall often; ſo the ſpirituall birth may be renued, as the carnall cannot.

Rom.10.17. Tit.3.5. Contra. Firſt, though faith is begotten by the word, Rom.10.17. and we by faith are made the children of God, yet becauſe Baptiſme is a ſeale and confirmation of this faith, it is properly called in Scripture, the lauacre of regeneration or new birth. Tit.3.5. Secondlie, the reſurrection is a regeneration of the body, not of the ſoule, and therefore improperly alleaged. Thirdly, as the body dieth but once, no more doth the ſoule, when it finally falleth away from God, whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh Hebr.6.6. That if they fall away, they cannot be renued by repentance : but as the body once borne, may be in danger of death by ſicknes, and not die; ſo the ſoule may be weakned and decay by ſinne, and ſo bee renued : as the Apoſtle ſaith, our inward man is renued dayly, 2.Corin.4.16. but the ſoule once begotten vnto God, cannot die by ſinne, becauſe his ſeed remaineth in him, neither can he ſinne, that is vnto death, becauſe he is borne of God. 1.Iohn.3.9. Here the Apoſtle euidently ſpeaketh, that the ſpirituall birth cannot be loſt.

2.Cor.4.16.
1.Iohn.3.9.

To the ſecond he obiecteth, that as in Scripture it is not written, that Baptiſme ſhould be iterated; ſo neither it is found, that it ſhould not.

Contra. Firſt, in that the often receiuing of the Euchariſt is commanded, 1.Cor.11.25. but no ſuch charge giuen of Baptiſme, it is euident that the holy Ghoſt in this reſpect hath ſet a difference betweene them: if the Scripture had beene ſilent as touching both, there had beene ſome colour in Bellarmines obiection, but now there is none. Secondly, it is vntrue that the Scripture forbiddeth not baptiſme to be iterated: for Iohn 13.10. our Sauiour ſaith, that he which hath his feete waſhed, that is, is regenerate in his affections, whereof Baptiſme is a ſeale, need not to be waſhed, but more euidently, Hebr.6.6. He that falleth away, cannot be renued by repentance : that is, as the Rhemiſts expound it, it is impoſſible to be baptized againe. Annot. in hunc locum.

Iohn.13.10.
Hebr.6.6.

Leo alſo in his decree,proueth thus out of Scripture that Baptiſme is not to be iterated: Lauacrum ſemel initum nulla iteratione violetur : The lauacre once entred vnto muſt not by any iteration be violated, the Apoſtle thus ſaying, one God, one faith, one Baptiſme: decr.p.2.cauſ.1.q.1.c.51.

Thirdly, he obiecteth, that circumciſion was therefore not repeated, becauſe it left a character or ſcarre in the fleſh, as Baptiſme doth in the ſoule, which print of circumciſion was a cogniſance betweene the Iewes and the Gentiles, Bellarm.cap.22.

Contra. The outward marke in the fleſh by circumciſion, was not that marke, whereby the Iewes were diſcerned, but the circumciſion of the heart: Firſt, becauſe circumciſion was a ſigne betweene the Lord and them, Gen.17,11. But the Lord looketh to the heart. 1.Sam,16.7. not to the outward appearance. Secondly, the women amongſt the Iewes were counted among the circumciſed, and diſcerned from heathen women: but they were not circumciſed in the fleſh, therefore it was the inward circumciſion, whereby they were ſanctified, as by their faith: this your Maſter confeſſeth. lib.4. diſtinct.3.g. Thirdly, the marke in the fleſh, beeing in the ſecret parts, and remote from the eye could bee no cogniſance to know a Iew by: If the fleſhly marke were any thing, it ſhould haue beene in the hand, or forehead; as the Angell is commanded, to marke them in the foreheads. Ezech.9.4. Fourthly, the Apoſtle ſaith, he is not a Iew, that is one outward: neither is that circumciſion which is in the fleſh, Rom.2.28. wherefore the fleſhly marke, was no cauſe of the not iterating of circumciſion.

Geneſ.17.11.
Ezech.9.4.
Rom.2.28.

Fourthly, to the firſt reaſon he obiecteth, that the perpetuity of Gods couenant made in Baptiſme can be no cauſe why it is not iterated: Firſt, becauſe God maketh no couenant in Baptiſme, for a couenant is made between two conſenting: but children in Baptiſme being without faith cannot conſent. Secondly, God couenanteth as well with vs in the word, and in the Euchariſt; yet that is often preached, the other often receiued. Thirdly, Gods couenant is alwaies conditionall; ſo to him that keepeth not the condition it is not perpetuall.

Contra. Firſt, Bellarmines firſt reaſon is ridiculous: for though children in their owne perſon cannot conſent, yet are they within the couenant, which God maketh to vs and our ſeede, Gen.17. Otherwiſe Gods couenant ſhould be weaker then the couenant of men, who doe make couenants for themſelues and their ſeed: as Dauid and Ionathan. 1.Sam 20.42. And againe, if circumciſion were a ſigne of Gods couenant, how much more Baptiſme which is more excellent: and S. Peter perſwadeth the Iewes to be baptized, becauſe the promiſe was made to them and their ſeede. Act.2.39. therfore it is great boldneſſe in him to denye ſo manifeſt a truth, that there is no couenant made in Baptiſme.

1.Sam.20.42.
Acts.2.39.

Secondly, there is difference betweene the writing of a couenant, and the ſealing, as Nehem.9.38. the people make a couenant with God, they both write it & ſeale it: ſo the word of God, is as the writing of the couenant, and therefore is repeated; Baptiſme is as the ſure ſeale, that remaineth inuiolable: Likewiſe God couenanteth with vs in the Euchariſt: but it is a diuers couenant from that in baptiſme: for this is the couenant of adoption, which once ſufficeth; the other of continuall feeding and preſeruation, and therefore may be often vſed: as in circumciſion there was a couenant made, whereby the Iſraelites became his people, in the paſſeouer a promiſe and couenant of protection and preſeruation. Exod.12.27.

Nehem.9.38.
Exod.12.27.

Thirdly, Gods couenant in it ſelfe remaineth ſtedfaſt, though men be deceitfull: and therefore it is called a couenant of ſalt. 2.Chro.13.5. ſo that God doth not make a new couenant, when men returne vnto him, but remembreth the old, as Exod.32.13. Remember Abraham, Iſaac and Iacob, to whom thou ſwareſt, &c. And Saint Paul thus reaſoneth, Epheſ.4.5. One Lord, one faith, one Baptiſme: from the conſtancy of God, to the ſtablenes of Baptiſme: wherefore Bellarmine hath babled much, and ſaid little: other arguments might alſo be adioyned, as theſe.

2.Chron.13.5.
Exod 32.13.
Epheſ.4.5.

*Argum.*3. Circumciſion vnder the law was the ſame in effect, which Baptiſme is vnder the goſpell: ſo the Maſter of ſentences confeſſeth. lib.4.diſtinct.4 g. but circumciſion left no indeleble character in the ſoule, as Bellarmine confeſſeth. cap.19.propoſ.7. Ergo, neither doth Baptiſme.

*Argum.*4. There was no character imprinted in the ſoule of Chriſt by Baptiſme: confeſſed by

*Bellarmine.cap.*19.*propoſ.*8. but we are baptized with the ſame baptiſme, that Chriſt was baptized with: vnleſſe they will ſay, that the head and members are baptized with diuers baptiſmes; which were moſt abſurd, and contrary to the Apoſtle, who ſaith, There is one Lord (that is Chriſt) and one faith (that is in Chriſt) and one Baptiſme (that is in the name of Chriſt;) but if Chriſts baptiſme were diuers, there ſhould not be one Lord, one baptiſme.

Ambroſe alſo ſaith, ſerm. 41. Ergo fratres tingi debemus eodem fonte, quo Chriſtus, &c. Therefore brethren, wee muſt bee dipped in the ſame fountaine with Chriſt, that wee may bee the ſame that Chriſt is.

Catecheſ.4. σφραγῖς. Cyrillus Hieroſolymit. ſaith that the holy ſpirit in the time of Baptiſme, doth ſet a ſeale vpon the ſoule: it is not then the externall act of the Sacrament, but the inward operation of the ſpirit, which ſealeth the ſoule, &c. And againe he ſaith, that the ſpirit did print a ſeale in the ſoule of Paul, when he was baptized, and made it a choſen veſſell: but euery one which hath their character, is not an elect and choſen veſſell. Catecheſ 17. Harm p 388.

2. Confeſſ. Bohemia c.11. the Sacraments (of themſelues) cannot giue any ſuch grace, &c. nor inwardly quicken or regenerate any mans ſpirit.

3. Wee haue alſo their owne witnes againſt them: Durandus ſaith, that this character is but reſpectus rationis, a relation or reſpect vnto the miniſter, no permanent or infuſed quality, in 4 *diſt.*4.*q.*1. Scotus holdeth, that it cannot be proued by any manifeſt teſtimony of Scripture. *diſt.*6.*q.*9. Gabriel doubteth, whether the Church hath defined it. *ibid qu.*2.

Decret. Greg. lib.3.tit.42.c.3 *Innocent.*3. ſaith, that they which are baptized being madde, or aſleep, characterem non ſuſcipiunt, doe not receiue this character: Ergo, Baptiſme doth not alwaies imprint a character.

4. Auguſtine is flat againſt them, for the iteration of confirmation: Manus impoſitio non ſicut baptiſmus repeti non poteſt. Quid enim eſt aliud, niſi oratio ſuper hominem? The impoſition of hands is not as Baptiſme, neuer to be iterated againe: for what is it elſe, but prayer ouer a man? *de Baptiſ. cont. donat. l.*3.*c.*16. Confirmation in his opinion may be iterated, and therfore imprinteth no ſuch character.

Neither doth Orders leaue any ſuch character behind it: *Concil. Agathenſ. can.*50. Clericus falſum teſtimonium dicens, &c. A Cleargy man bearing falſe witneſſe, let him be depoſed from his office: Et laicam tantummodo communionem accipiat: Let him communicate onely as a lay man. What is now become of your indeleble character?

See the teſtimony of Walter Brute holy confeſſor: The Pope ſaith that in the adminiſtration of euery Sacrament he doth imprint a certaine character or marke into the ſoule of him that receiueth, &c. I know that in a Sacrament are two things: the ſacramentall ſigne, which is giuen to man of man, the ſpirituall grace giuen of Chriſt.

*In giuing of Orders the Biſhop doth imprint the corporall markes, but of the ſpirituall markes I know none, &c pag.*500. P.460 2.6.20. The reaſon is, that man in the miniſtry of the Sacrament conferreth onely the externall things, but this inuiſible character is internall, and therefore not conferred by man.

THE FOVRTH PART, OF THE NECESſitie of the Sacraments.

THey willingly grant, that no Sacraments are abſolutely neceſſary in their nature, but in reſpect of the inſtitution and commandement of Cod; for he is able to worke without Sacraments, as with them. In this point, we are agreed: the points of difference are theſe. 102. Error.

The Papiſts.

1. THeſe three Sacraments are abſolutely and ſimply neceſſary, as they are inſtituted of God: Baptiſme vnto all: penance to thoſe that fall after Baptiſme: Orders ſimply neceſſary to the whole Church. And thus they vnderſtand neceſſary, that without the which a man cannot be ſaued: without the reſt of the Sacramentes men may be ſaued, ſo there be no negligence or contempt, *Bellarm lib.*1. *de ſacram. cap.*22 yea, hee is bould to ſay, that the Sacraments are more neceſſarie then faith: his reaſon is, becauſe without the Sacraments, as Baptiſme, or the deſire thereof, none, neither children nor others, can be ſaued: but without faith children are ſaued, Bellarm. lib. 1. de ſacram. cap 22. ſect. at qui hæc &c.

Anſ. Firſt, he doth apparently contradict the Scriptures: for our Sauiour ſaith, One thing is neceſſary, Luke 10. 42. ſpeaking of Maries diligent hearing of the word, whereby faith is obtained, Rom. 10.17. ſo that faith comming by the heating of the worde, is the onely or chiefe neceſſary thing. Againe, Mark.16.16. our Sauiour ſaith, He that ſhall beleeue and be baptiſed ſhall be ſaued; but he that beleeueth not, ſhall be damned: he ſaith not, he, that is not baptized, but he, that beleeueth not: therefore faith is more neceſſary then Baptiſme. Luk.10.42. Mark.16.16.

Secondly, it is vntrue, that none can bee ſaued, no not children without baptiſme: ſeeing that Dauids childe dying the ſeuenth day before it was circumciſed, 2. Samuel 12. 18. was ſaued, as Dauid himſelfe ſaith, verſ. 23. I ſhall goe to him: and there was as great neceſſity of circumciſion then, as of baptiſme now: Likewiſe the children which Herod ſlew, from two yeeres and vnder, ſome of them being but newly borne, were neither circumciſed, nor baptiſed, yet we hold them all to bee innocents. 2.Sam.12.18.

Thirdly, children are not capable of faith, as they are of baptiſme, and therefore in them there can be no compariſon betweene faith and baptiſme: ſeeing one is required in them, and not the other.

Fourthly, this argument may better be returned vpon his owne head: that ſeeing children without baptiſme may be ſaued, as they are an holy ſeed, 1.Cor.7.14. and ſo vnder the couenant, of the which Sacrament they are capable; but none can be ſaued without faith, that are capable of faith, that therefore faith is more neceſſarie then baptiſme. 1.Cor.7.14.

The Proteſtants.

Though the Sacraments being appointed for our comfort are neceſſarie and profitable as wholeſome meanes to be vſed for the encreaſe of our faith, and much to be deſired and ſought for: yet God hath not laid ſuch a neceſſitie vpon any of them, as that the want of them ſhould cauſe hazard of ſaluation. The thiefe vpon the Croſſe was ſaued both without Baptiſme and Penance: I pray you what penance did Peter after his thrice deniall of Chriſt, but that hee wept bitterly, and earneſtly repented him of his fall? as S. Ambroſe ſaith, Lachrymas Petri lego ſatisfactionem non lego: I read of Peters teares, not of his ſatisfaction. Such repentance we hold to be neceſſarie, but a Sacrament of penance we acknowledge none. So the ordaining of Miniſters to preach, is the ordinarie meanes to beget men vnto the faith: yet many haue beene called without ſuch preaching: as Paul was conuerted by the voyce of Chriſt from heauen, Nabuchadnezzar was called by the great miracle of the preſeruation of the three children in the firie Ouen.

So Auguſtine ſaith, Undique vocat nos Deus ad pœnitentiam, vocat per lectorem, vocat per tractatorem, vocat per intimam cogitationem, vocat per flagellum correptionis; vocat per miſericordiam conſolationis: God calleth vs euery way to repentance; he calleth, by the reader, by the preacher, by the inward thought, by the ſcourge of correction, by the mercie of conſolation: *in Pſalm.*102. God therefore may call and inſtruct vs by more waies then one, he is not tied to any.

The Papiſts.

2. The Sacraments of the new law are neceſſarie to ſaluation, that is, it is impoſſible to obtaine the grace of iuſtification, by faith alone, without the celebrating of the Sacraments, Sine ſacramentis aut eorum voto, or at leaſt, hauing a will, purpoſe, and deſire to celebrate and vſe them, Concil. Trident. ſeſſ.7. can.4. 103.Error.

The Proteſtants.

A Neceſſitie of the Sacraments wee grant, as alſo of other profitable meanes, as of preaching the word, of prayer, and the like: but no ſimple or abſolute neceſſitie, as we haue ſaid: neither are the Sacraments neceſſarie at all to any ſuch purpoſe (being ordained for no ſuch vſe) as to be a meanes to apply the grace of iuſtification vnto vs: but our iuſtification is onely applied and apprehended by faith, as S. Paul concludeth, Rom.3.28. that a man is iuſtified by faith onely, without workes of the law: yea, all workes whatſoeuer are excluded, as deſtroying grace, Rom.11. verſ.6. The Sacraments are profitable inſtruments, to ſtirre vp the gift of faith, and other graces in vs, but not by their proper worke to iuſtifie vs. Rom.3.28. Rom.11.6.

Auguſtine ſaith: Primò fides catholica Chriſtiano neceſſaria eſt, &c. per ipſam renaſcimur in baptiſmate, & ſalutem æternam impetramus: First of all, the Catholike faith is neceſſarie for a Chriſtian, by the which in Baptiſme we are borne againe, and obtaine eternall ſaluation. He ſaith not that Baptiſme but that faith is neceſſarie, and that it is faith which giueth life to the Sacrament: it worketh not by it owne proper act: which is contrarie to Bellarmine, who ſaith, that fides non tribuit vim ſacramentis, that faith doth not adde any force to the Sacraments, lib.1 de ſacram. cap.22. whereas the Apoſtle ſaith, that he which eateth the bread, and drinketh the cup of the Lord vnworthily, eateth and drinketh his owne damnation, 1.Cor.11.27. ſo that the worthie receiuing conſiſteth in the examination of our ſelues, verſ.28. and to examine our ſelues, is to proue whether wee are in the faith, 2.Corinth. 13.5. Wherefore by faith wee are made worthie receiuers, and the Sacrament is vnto vs to life, which was before vnto death. De tempor. Serm.53. 1.Cor.11.27.

Bernard alſo ſaith: Nos ſi ſanguinis teſtimonium non habemus, id eſt Martyrij, &c. If we haue not the witneſſe of blood, that is of Martyrdome, let vs haue the witneſſe of the ſpirit and water: for without the ſpirit, neither blood, nor water ſufficeth: yea, if we haue the ſpirit without both blood and water, the witneſſe thereof is ſufficient, &c. Baptiſme then is not neceſſarie, and if it be not, none is.

*Synod. Trullan. can.*59. In oratorio priuato baptiſmus nullatenus peragatur, ſed ad catholicas eccleſias accedant: ſi quis contrà fecerit, Clericus deponatur, laicus excommunicetur: In a priuate oratorie, Baptiſme muſt in no caſe be adminiſtred: but they muſt goe to the common Church: if any man doe contrarie, if a Clergie man, he ſhall be depoſed; if a lay man, excommunicate.

It ſhould ſeeme that Baptiſme was not in thoſe daies counted ſo neceſſarie, ſeeing they forbad it to be kept in priuate houſes.

And for further euidence. 1. Socrates ſheweth, that in Theſſalia by reaſon of deferring baptiſme till Eaſter, it happened that many, yea the moſt died without baptiſme, &c. which ſheweth, that the Church then had no ſuch opinion of the neceſſitie of this Sacrament; for then they would not haue deferred it to the danger of ſo many. Hiſtor. Eccleſ. lib.5.c.21.

2 Tertullian granteth, that before the paſſion of Chriſt, Per fidem nudam ſalui fuerit, ſaluation

Lib.de baptiſm. was had by bare faith without the Sacrament, but after his paſſion, Obſtrinxit fidem ad neceſſitatem baptiſmi: He tied faith to the neceſſitie of baptiſme: Itaq; omnes exinde credentes tingebantur: From thence-forth all that beleeued were baptized: ſo he ſeemeth to make it neceſſarie, not to infants but to beleeuers: for in them it ſhall be a contempt, if they be not baptized.

Harm. p.387. 3 Confeſſ. of Bohemia: c.11. If a man doe wholly and truly beleeue the Goſpel, he may by that faith be ſaued, although he haue not the vſe of the Sacraments, &c.

Lib.1.de baptiſm.c.4. 4 Bellarmine affirmeth Caietanus, Gabriel and other of their ſide to hold, 'Alienum eſſe à miſericordia Dei, That it is farre from the mercie of God, that all which die without baptiſme, ſhould periſh, &c,

THE THIRD QVESTION, OF THE NVMBER and order of the Sacraments.

THE FIRST PART, OF THE number.

The Papiſts.

104 Error THeir generall ſentence and opinion is this, that there are ſeuen Sacraments, neither more or leſſe: Baptiſme, the Euchariſt, Confirmation, Penance, Matrimonie, Orders, extreame Vnction. If any man ſay that any of theſe are not truly and properly Sacraments, or that they are not all of Chriſts inſtitution, let him be anathema or accurſed, Concil. Trident. ſeſſ. 7. can. 1.

Argum. 1. The number of ſeuen is myſticall, propheticall, perfect: the Prophet commanded Naaman to waſh himſelfe ſeuen times, 2. King. 4. The Altar muſt bee cleanſed ſeuen daies, Exodus 29.37. Iob offered ſeuen bullocks & ſeuen rammes for his friends, Iob 42. So in the Apocal. ſeuen Churches, ſeuen Angels, ſeuen Starres, ſeuen Candleſticks, ſeuen Thunders, and the like: And why not alſo ſeuen Sacraments? Bellar. lib. 2. cap. 26, Rhemiſt. annot. Apocal. 1. ſect. 3.

Anſwere. Firſt, the number of ſeuen is ſometime applied, to deſcribe myſteries of wickedneſſe, as Apoc.17 8. well as of godlineſſe: As the beaſt with ſeuen heads, Apocal. 17.8. is called a myſterie, or as your vulgar Latine hath it, a Sacrament. And with greater reaſon may we conclude, that this beaſt with ſeuen heads, is Antichriſt, with his ſeuen Popiſh Sacraments, than you out of Naamans ſeuen times waſhing, can picke out ſeuen Sacraments. But if you will needes make a myſterie of ſeuen: it may as well be a myſterie of iniquitie as of godlineſſe, euen the myſterie of the beaſt with ſeuen heads, as we haue ſaid. Secondly, what though the number of ſeuen, and of ſome other numbers, be ſometime myſticall and ſignificatiue, when it pleaſeth the Lord in his word ſo to apply and appoint them? doth it therefore follow, that men vpon their owne heads, may ſuperſtitiouſly apply numbers to Sacraments, prayers, faſtings, times, as though there were any religion in numbers, or that the Lord had the rather reſpect vnto ſuch things, becauſe of the number?

Argum. 2. Man hath ſeuen wounds to be healed or cured: Ergo, there ought to bee ſeuen Sacraments as remedies againſt the ſame: Baptiſme is a remedie againſt originall ſinne, Penance againſt actuall, extreame Vnction againſt the reliques of ſinne, Confirmation againſt infirmitie of faith, the Euchariſt againſt malice, Matrimonie againſt concupiſcence, Orders againſt ignorance: Bellar. lib. 2. cap. 26.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Sacraments are not properly of themſelues remedies againſt ſinne; no otherwiſe than they are tempered with faith, from whence they haue their whole ſtrength and vertue. Secondly, if they were ſuch remedies, what neede ſo many? as though one medicine may not heale diuers diſeaſes. Thirdly, the Ieſuite hath not well matched the diſeaſes and remedies together: firſt, the efficacie of Baptiſme, which ſetteth forth our ſpirituall waſhing by the blood of Chriſt, ſerueth as well againſt actuall, as originall ſinne: ſeeing we are cleanſed from both by the blood of Chriſt. Secondly, if Baptiſme ſerue againſt originall, and Penance againſt actuall ſinne, what other ſinne remaineth to be helped by the other remedies? Thirdly, if Matrimonie bee auaileable againſt concupiſcence, why doe ye forbid your luſtfull and belly-fed Prieſts to marrie? and if Orders helpe ignorance, how commeth it to paſſe that you haue ſo many doltiſh and ignorant Maſſe-prieſts?

Bellarmine hath other arguments, ſhewing in particular that euery one of their ſeuen are Sacraments, which ſhall be anſwered in their ſeuerall places.

The Proteſtants.

THis word or name, Sacrament, may be taken two wayes: firſt, generally for any myſticall ſigne or ſymbole, which may repreſent an holy thing: and ſo wee will grant, that there may be not onely ſeuen Sacraments, but ſeuen and ſeuen; which are more properly ſymboles and ſignes, than Sacraments: As the couering of the head in the woman is a ſymbole of ſubiection, 1. Cor. 11. 10. the Sab- De ſymbol. lib.3.cap.9. bath day is a ſymbole or Sacrament of the heauenly reſt, Heb. 4. In this ſenſe Auguſtine calleth the myſterie of the Trinitie a Sacrament: yea he ſaith, the Sacrament of fire, becauſe therein in ſome ſort, by the vndeuided and inſeparable properties thereof, the heat, light, and ſhining brightneſſe; the Trinitie, ſaith he, is ſhadowed forth. Wherefore euery ſigne or ſymbole of a holy thing, that hath a ſpirituall ſignification, either found in Scripture, or deuiſed by men, is not by and by a Sacrament.

Secondly, if we will take a Sacrament in the ſtrict and proper ſenſe, there are eſpecially three things required thereunto. Firſt, that they doe not onely ſignifie, but exhibite and repreſent vnto vs after a liuely manner, the ſpirituall things which are ſignified. Secondly, they muſt haue the inſtitution and perpetuall commandement of Chriſt. Thirdly, the Sacraments of the new law muſt ſucceede in the place of the olde. Hereupon wee will inferre, that there are but two Sacraments in the new Teſtament, Baptiſme, and the Lords Supper.

Argum.1. Theſe two alone are not onely ſignes of heauenly things, but ſeales and pledges vnto vs thereof, whereby our faith is ſtrengthened, and our hope confirmed in the promiſes of God: as the remiſſion of ſinnes is repreſented in Baptiſme, Act.2.38. the death of Chriſt ſhewed forth in the Euchariſt, 1.Corinth.11.26. The like commendation is not giuen of any other of their Sacraments. Act.2.38. 1.Cor.11.26.

Argum.2. Chriſt onely commanded theſe two Sacraments to bee vſed for euer in his Church: to ſuch ſpirituall purpoſes, as Baptiſme is inſtituted and commanded, Matth.28 19. the Lords Supper likewiſe, Matth.26. Many other ceremonies Chriſt vſed himſelfe, as lifting vp of hands, the tempering of clay and ſpettle, his Apoſtles impoſition of hands, and annointing with oyle: But hee hath not laid his commandement vpon theſe ceremonies, inioyning vs perpetually to keepe them, as he hath charged vs with the other two. Matth.28.19.

Argum.3. The Sacraments of the new Teſtament ſucceede in the roome of them of the olde: Baptiſme ſtandeth in ſtead of Circumciſion, the Lords Supper is come in place of the Paſchall Lambe. But they cannot ſhew what olde Sacraments, thoſe fiue other newly inuented, Confirmation, Orders, Penance, Matrimonie, extreame Vnction, doe ſucceede and ſupply: Ergo, they are none. And beſide, if all theſe ſhould be Sacraments, and ſo ſeuen in all: we ſhould haue more in number than the Iewes had, which is not to be admitted: for they had but two ordinarie Sacraments, Circumciſion, and the Paſchall Lambe: two extraordinarie, as their baptiſme in the red Sea and the cloude, and their eating of the Manna, and drinking of the rocke, 1.Cor.10.2.3. So they ſhould haue but foure Sacraments, for your ſeuen. Other legall rites, ceremonies, and ſacrifices they had, and many typicall ſhadowes and ſignifications, but no more Sacraments than we haue heard.

Other arguments we haue in particular againſt their fiue Sacraments, which I referre to their ſeuerall places, which being proued to be no Sacraments at all, they muſt needes faile of their ſeuen.

Auguſtine yeeldeth to haue no more Sacraments than onely two: As Eue was made out of Adams ſide as he was aſleepe: Sic ex latere domini dormientis in cruce, &c. ſacramenta eccleſiæ profluxerunt: So out of the Lords ſide ſleeping vpon the Croſſe, the Sacraments of the Church iſſued: that is, water and blood: by the which he vnderſtandeth the two Sacraments. Tract. 15. in Euangel. Ioan.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that though Baptiſme bee fitly vnderſtoode by water, and the Euchariſt by blood, which iſſued out of Chriſts ſide, yet are not the other Sacraments excluded: as Heb.6.2. there is mention onely made of Baptiſme and impoſition of hands, yet were there more Sacraments, Bellarm.cap.27. Heb.6.2.

Anſwere. Firſt, we doe not greatly vrge this analogie, to proue two Sacraments: but onely ſhew what Auguſtines iudgement was herein: neither can the proportion hold, if there ſhould bee more Sacraments than two: for as out of Adams ſide onely Eue was made: ſo out of Chriſts ſide the Sacraments iſſued, whereof the Church conſiſteth: if this collection be good, there can be no more but two Sacraments: vnleſſe they can ſhew, that ſomewhat elſe beſide water and blood was ſhed from Chriſts ſide. Secondly, that place to the Hebrewes is not like: for the Apoſtles purpoſe is not to ſet downe there all the Sacraments of religion, but onely ſuch principles, as young beginners were to learne, who after theſe beginnings were admitted to the Euchariſt.

Now laſtly in defence of this truth, that Chriſt hath left onely two Sacraments to his Church, many holy Martyrs haue giuen their liues: As Thomas Whittle, Bartlet Greene, with fiue other, condemned for denying the ſeuen Popiſh Sacraments, Fox pag 1844 Likewiſe thirteene holy Martyrs burned at Stratford the Bow for the ſame cauſe, pag. 1914. 2 Suarez their Ieſuite confeſſeth, that this veritie, that Chriſt inſtituted, ſeuen Sacraments is grounded vpon eccleſiaſticall tradition, &c. they haue then no Scripture to warrant them. Tom.3.diſput. 12.ſect.1.

3 Tertullian maketh mention but of two Sacraments, lib. 4. contra Marcionem: nor yet Auguſtine: epiſt.118. ad Ianuar. and lib.3. de doctrin. Chriſtian.c.9. the moderne Chriſtians of Æthiopia hold neither confirmation nor extreame vnction to be Sacraments: but the moderne Greeke Church receiueth ſeuen Sacraments, as the Romaniſts doe. THE SECOND PART OF THE ORDER and degree of the Sacraments among themſelues.

The Papiſts.

105.Error. IF any man ſhall ſay, that theſe ſeuen Sacraments are of equall dignitie, and not one in ſome reſpect to be preferred before the other, let him be accurſed, Concil. Trident. ſeſſ. 7. can. 3. In diuers reſpects one Sacrament may excell another, as Baptiſme excelleth the reſt, becauſe of remiſſion of ſinnes thereby effected, or, as we ſay, repreſented. Orders excell, in reſpect of the Miniſter, becauſe they are onely, ſay they, conferred by a Biſhop. Matrimonie excelleth, in reſpect of the ſignification, the coniunction of Chriſt and his Church. But ſimply the Euchariſt exceedeth all, becauſe of the ſubſtance of the Sacrament, the reall and bodily preſence of Chriſt, Bellarm. lib. 2. cap. 28.

Anſwere. First, that Baptiſme and the Euchariſt exceede all the other, wee doe eaſily admit: for we hold the reſt to be no Sacraments: and therefore we ſtand not vpon their ſeuerall priuiledges. Secondly, neither Baptiſme is more excellent than the Lords Supper, becauſe it repreſenteth the remiſſion of ſinnes: for that alſo is inſinuated in the other: for how can wee ſhew forth the Lords death, which is done in that Sacrament, vnleſſe we call to minde the benefits purchaſed by his death, as remiſſion of ſinnes? Neither doth the Euchariſt goe beyond Baptiſme in regard of a more full preſence of Chriſt: for he is not otherwiſe preſent in one Sacrament, than in the other, preſenting himſelfe in both ſpiritually to be apprehended of the worthie receiuer: as for that carnall and groſſe preſence of the body of Chriſt in the Sacrament, we acknowledge none: as afterward it ſhall more fully appeare, when we come in order to that queſtion.

De diuerſ. Serm. 9. Auguſtine ſheweth, that Chriſt is no otherwiſe preſent in the Euchariſt, then in the preaching of the word, for the manner of his preſence: Euchariſtia panis noſter quotidianus eſt, &c. & quod vobis tracto, panis quotidianus eſt, & quod in eccleſia lectiones quotidie auditis, panis quotidianus eſt: The Euchariſt or Sacrament of thankſgiuing is our daily bread, that which I handle and preach to you, is our daily bread that which you heare read daily in the Church, is our daily bread, &c. If Chriſt then bee no more really preſent in the Sacrament than in the word, what is become of the preeminence, that the one Sacrament in that reſpect ſhould haue aboue the other?

Annot. in Exod. 16. The Doway Diſciples to ſet forth the eminencie of the Euchariſt, doe compare it in twelue ſeuerall points with Manna: all which miracles, ſay they, are more eminent in the bleſſed Sacrament.

1 Manna was made by Angels, the (Sacrament) was conſecrated by the meruailous power of Chriſts word, which is now communicated to the Prieſt.

2 That came from the ayre, not from the earth, or water: this is done in the militant Church.

3 How faſt or ſlowly ſo euer any man gathered that, euery one had the ſame meaſure: in the leaſt particular of the accidents Chriſt is whole and entire, and in innumerable places at once.

4 In the 6. day they had double portions to other daies: ſo this giueth abundance of grace in this life, for the glory of the next life.

5 There fell no Manna on the Sabbath: and there ſhall bee no vſe of Sacraments in the next life.

6 If Manna were kept all night, in the reſt of the weeke it putrified: and whoſoeuer will make a temporall commoditie of this heauenly foode, it periſheth vnto him, &c.

7 The ſame meaſure was ſufficient for euery one: and ſo this auaileth to euery one, as their ſoule is diſpoſed.

8 The Sunne melted Manna, yet it indured the heate of the fire: though heate of perſecution take the Sacrament away in the field of the world, yet no power can extinguiſh it in the Church.

9 That taſted to euery one what they deſired: this yeeldeth all comfort to ſpirituall deſires.

10 That ſeemed to the euill minded loathſome: this to the incredulous Capernaites ſeemeth vnpoſſible.

11 Part of that was kept in the Arke, and was not corrupted many hundred yeeres: this receiued into our mortall bodies, remaineth in incorruptible effect, whereby the body ſhall bee raiſed from death.

12 That extraordinarie prouiſion remained fourtie yeeres, till the Iſraelites came into the promiſed land: and this is our wayfaring prouiſion in the pilgrimage of this life, &c. till wee come to the kingdome of heauen, &c.

Anſwere. We acknowledge the holy Euchariſt to be a moſt heauenly myſterie, and a moſt precious treaſure of the Church, being ſo farre more excellent then Manna, as Chriſt is more fully reuealed and manifeſted in the Goſpell, then vnder the law: but theſe points of comparatiue difference betweene them we except againſt in this manner.

1 They both had the ſame Author and efficient cauſe, the word of Chriſt, that made the one, and ordayned the other: heerein then is no difference: the Sacrament wee granted was inſtituted tuted by a greater power, then of Angels, and ſo is Baptiſme alſo: as Chryſoſtome ſpeaking of the wonderfull worke of regeneration in Baptiſme, ſaith: Angeli affuerunt, & viderunt, ſed nihil operati ſunt, &c. The Angels were preſent and ſaw, but did nothing, but onely the Father, Sonne and holie Ghoſt, &c. Neither is there any ſuch power communicated to Prieſts to make the bodie of Chriſt: as Chryſoſtome againe: Non ſunt humanæ virtutis hæc opera, &c. ipſe nunc quoque operatur, nos miniſtrorum ordinem tenemus, &c. Theſe workes are not of humane power, &c. Chriſt himſelfe now worketh, wee are but the miniſters; but hee that doth change and ſanctifie theſe things is Chriſt himſelfe, &c.

Homil. 24 in 3. caput Ioann.

Homil 83. in 26. cap. Matth.

2 The true bread, whereof both the Manna then, and the Sacrament now is a type, or rather ſeale, indeed commeth from heauen: as Auguſtine ſaith, Hic eſt panis, qui de cœlo deſcendit, &c. This is the bread, that came from heauen, &c. that is, Ieſus Chriſt the bread of life: but the externall element is not from heauen, it is bread made of corne, which groweth from the earth: as Auguſtine addeth in the ſame place: he that eateth thereof ſhall not die: ſed qui pertinet ad virtutem ſacramenti, non qui pertinet ad viſibile ſacramentum: but he which belongeth to the vertue of the Sacrament, not to the viſible Sacrament, &c. the viſible Sacrament, for the materiall part is not from heauen, yet Manna was from heauen: herein then is no preeminence before Manna.

In Ioann. tract. 26.

3 That Chriſts bodie ſhould be whole in euery particular accident, and in innumerable places at once, is an vnreaſonable ſaying, contrarie to philoſophie, which placeth accidents in the ſubſtance, not the ſubſtance in accidents: and maketh a materiall bodie onely in one place at one time: and againſt Diuinitie, he is riſen, ſaith the Angell, he is not here: which had been a good argument, if the bodie of Chriſt were here and there at one time: but herein this analogie holdeth well, that is, euerie one, howſoeuer he gathered, had the ſame meaſure of Manna: ſo as Theodoret ſaith, Illius omnes ſunt æque participes, &c. All men are equally partakers thereof, both rich and poore, maſters and ſeruants, Princes and ſubiects, &c.

Matth. 28. 3.

In 1. Epiſt. ad Corinth. c. 11.

4 True it is, that by this Sacrament we are nouriſhed vnto euerlaſting life; yet is not the externall participating in the Sacrament, but the ſpirituall vertue, that ſo nouriſheth vs: as Auguſtine ſaith, that we eate not the bodie of Chriſt, tantum in ſacramento, quod & multi mali, only in Sacrament, as many euill men doe, ſed vſque ad ſpiritus participationem, but vnto the participation of the ſpirit: it is not then the carnall eating of Chriſts fleſh, which they yeeld vnto the wicked, that is auailable.

In Ioann. tractat. 27.

5 Neither ſhall there be any vſe of Sacraments in the next life: but we ſhall ſee Chriſt face to face, and behold his glorious bodie with immortall eyes: therefore his bodily preſence is not now in the Sacrament: Chryſoſtome ſaith, vt terra nobis cœlum ſit facit hoc myſterium, this myſterie maketh earth to be heauen: wee now by faith communicate the bodie of Chriſt, which then we ſhall haue fruition of by ſight: this note therefore maketh flatly againſt their carnall preſence.

1. ad Corinth. c. 11. Hom. 24.

6 As Manna kept contrarie to the commandement putrified: ſo doth the Euchariſt ſuperſtitiouſly reſerued by the Papiſts, corrupt, and is ſubiect to other changes: Herein then is the agreement, as the Manna was not to be reſerued till the next day, ſo, as Clemens decreed, if any reliques remaine of the Sacrament, in craſtina non reſeruentur, &c. let them not be kept till the morrow, but let them with reuerence be conſumed of the Clergie, &c.

7 It is well you confeſſe a diſpoſition in the ſoule of the receiuer neceſſarie to make his receiuing fruitfull: we haue been hitherto borne in hand, that faith is not neceſſarie to the due receiuing of the Sacrament, but it conferreth grace by the very act which is wrought: but the truth is, that the heart muſt be prepared by faith: as Auguſtine, nolite fauces parare ſed cor, prepare not your chaps but your heart: and he eateth the bodie of Chriſt, qui manducat in corde, non qui premit dente, which eateth in his heart, not preſſeth it with his teeth.

In Ioann. tractat 26.

8 Their fellow Rhemiſts diſſent from them: who affirme, that vnder the reigne of Antichriſt all publike entercourſe of the faithfull ſhall ceaſe, &c. ſauing the practiſe thereof in ſecret: and ſome of their Catholike writers affirme, that in the times of Antichriſt the true faith ſhall periſh through the world: but theſe ſay, that no power can extinguiſh it in the Church. But herein the analogie better holdeth: that as Manna melted with the heate of the Sunne, but endured the heate of the fire at home: ſo they which eate vnworthily, are iudged and melt away as it were, but they which receiue it by faith, are confirmed: as by an inward and domeſticall fire: as Auguſtine ſaith, Qui non mutat vitam, ad iudicium accepit vitam, & magis ex ipſa corrumpitur, quam ſanatur: He that changeth not his life, receiueth life to his iudgement, and is rather corrupted, then healed by it.

Sermon Dominic. Aduent.

9 We acknowledge, that the holy Sacrament yeeldeth all comfort to ſpirituall deſires; but as it is a ſpirituall foode: the bodie of Chriſt is then ſpiritually, not corporally or carnally eaten: as Auguſtine ſaith, then the bodie and blood of Chriſt ſhall be life vnto euery one, if that, which in the Sacrament is viſibly receiued, in ipſa veritate ſpiritualiter manducetur, Be in the truth it ſelfe ſpiritually eaten, and ſpiritually drunke. And thus Chriſt being ſpiritually receiued, yeeldeth all ſpirituall comfort, as Ambroſe ſheweth vpon thoſe words of the Pſalme, taſte and ſee how ſweete the Lord is: Si ſanari vis, medicus eſt, ſi febribus æſtuas, fons eſt, &c. If thou wilt be healed he is thy Phyſition; if thou burneſt with a feauer, hee is a cooling fountaine; if thou art laden with iniquitie, hee is thy iuſtice; if thou wanteſt helpe, he is thy ſtrength; if thou art afeard of death, he is life; if thou deſireſt heauen, he is the way; if thou ſeeke for meate, he is thy food, &c.

Lib. 3. de virginibus.

10 They are not incredulous Capernaites, which held that the bodie of Chriſt muſt be ſpiritually, not carnally eaten: but they which doe thinke, that with their mouth and teeth they doe eate the fleſh of Chriſt: as Tertullian ſheweth what the miſtaking of the Capernaites was: they thought his ſpeech to be hard and intollerable: quaſi vere carnem ſuam illis edendam determinaſſet: as though he had determined, that his fleſh ſhould verely be eaten, &c. And our Sauiour in ſaying, the words that I ſpeake are ſpirit and life: ſheweth that he ſpeaketh of the ſpirituall, not carnall eating of his fleſh: as Tertullian maketh this ſaying agreeable vnto that: Ioh. 5. 24. He that heareth my word, and beleeueth in him that ſent me, hath eternall life: and ſo hee concludeth, that the word of Chriſt, which before hee called his fleſh, is deuorandus auditu, ruminandus intellectu, fide digerendus, muſt be deuoured by hearing, ruminated by vnderſtanding, digeſted by faith, &c.

11 1. Manna indeed remained vncorrupted, hauing the word of God for the preſeruing thereof: but ſhew if you can, any of your conſecrated hoſtes to haue continued the tenth part of that time without putrefaction. 2. That the Sacrament of Chriſt receiued by faith is of incorruptible effect we grant; but that part of the Sacrament, which is receiued into the bodie, corrupteth in and with the bodie, as all other meates doe: did you euer ſee in any of your houſled ſicke, the Sacrament, which they receiued to remaine ſound, the reſt being fallen to duſt? 3. Neither is it the bodily participation of the Sacrament, but the ſpirituall communion, which wee haue with Chriſt, that ſhall raiſe our bodies at the laſt day: as the Apoſtle ſaith, He that raiſed vp Chriſt from the dead, ſhall alſo quicken your mortall bodies, becauſe that his ſpirit dwelleth in you: it is not the being of the Sacrament in our mouthes, but the dwelling of the ſpirit in vs, that ſhall raiſe vs vp: ſo our bleſſed Sauiour ſaith, whoſoeuer eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternall life: and I will raiſe him vp at the laſt day: he ſpeaketh not of the ſacramentall eating, but of communicating by faith: as he ſaid before, this is the will of him that ſent me, that euery man which ſeeth the Sonne, and beleeueth in him, ſhould haue euerlaſting life, and I will raiſe him vp at the laſt day: and diuers of their owne learned writers, (as Bellarmine confeſſeth) as namely, Gabriel, Cuſanus, Caietane, Ruardus Tapper, Heſſelius, Ianſenius, denie this place, Ioh. 6. to be vnderſtood of the ſacramentall eating. In this ſenſe Chryſoſtome is to be vnderſtood: Ipſa menſa animæ noſtræ vis eſt, nerui mentis, fiduciæ vinculum, &c. ſi hinc hoc ſacrificio muniti migrabimus, maxima cum fiducia ſanctum aſcendemus veſtibulum, &c. This table is the force of our ſoule, the ſinewes of our mind, the bond of our confidence, the foundation, hope, health, light, our life: if we paſſe hence furniſhed with this ſacrifice, wee ſhall with great confidence aſcend to the porch of heauen, as couered round with golden garments, &c. He ſpeaketh of the ſpirituall foode of the ſoule in the Sacrament, not of the corporall eating.

If the Sacrament be our wayfaring prouiſion till wee come to the heauenly Canaan, which we denie not, then is it not corporally and carnally the bodie of Chriſt: for wee ſhall enioy the ſight and preſence thereof in heauen for euer. 2. The word of God and the Sacraments are then the ſpirituall food of our ſoules in the pilgrimage of this life; not corporally digeſted, but ſpiritually receiued: as Auguſtine ſaith of the Sacrament receiued fideliter faithfully: Viaticum tibi ſaluberrimum, redemptionis precium, redemptoris monumentum, redempti munimentum: It is thy moſt wholeſome wayfaring food, the price of thy redemption, (namely which is there repreſented) the monument of the redeemer, the muniment and defence of the redeemed, &c. If the Sacrament be but a monument of the redeemer, then it is not his very bodie: for then it were the Redeemer himſelfe, not a monument of him: for monuments are remembrances of things abſent, not preſent: So Gelaſius ſaith, Certainly the Sacrament which we receiue of the bodie and blood of Chriſt, is a diuine thing, by the which we are made partakers of the diuine nature: & tamen eſſe non deſinit ſubſtantia vel natura panis & vini: and yet it leaueth not to be the ſubſtance and nature of bread and wine, &c.

Now if we will applie the Manna giuen to the Iſraelites to the times of the Goſpell: the applications, which Origene maketh, are to be preferred before theſe Doway conceits.

Homil. 7 in Exod. c. 15.

1 As Manna began to fall then vpon the firſt day of the weeke, which now is the Lords day: ſic in noſtra Dominica ſemper Dominus pluit Manna de cœlo: ſo in our Dominical the Lord alwaies raineth Manna from heauen.

2 As man hic ſignifieth, what is this: ſo when thou heareſt the law of God rehearſed, inquire and aske of the teachers, quid eſt hoc, what is this?

3 As Manna was like the hoare froſt, but in taſte as honey; ſo the word of God, habet aliquid rigoris, is ſometime rigorous, but as ſweete as honey.

4 As they gathered vpon the ſixth day double, that they might haue to eate on the Sabbath: ſo what good thou doeſt in this life: hoc erit tibi in futuro ſeculo cibus, this ſhall be thy meate in the next world.

5 As the Manna if it were kept contrarie to Gods commandement, grew full of wormes: ſic non aliunde fiunt in nobis vermes, niſi ex verbo Dei: wormes, that is vices, breed in vs by the word of God, that is, being not rightly heard.

The Proteſtants.

That the one Sacrament ſhould be ſo much extolled aboue the other, namely, the Lords Supper to be preferred before Baptiſme, as the more worthie and excellent Sacrament, we finde no ſuch thing in the word of God: but that both of them are of like dignitie in themſelues, and to bee had equally and indifferently in moſt high account: thus it is proued.

*Argum.*1. They are both commanded and inſtituted by the ſame authoritie of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: as Baptiſme, Matth.28.19. the Lords Supper, Luke 22.19. Doe this in remembrance of me: neither is one by the firſt inſtitution aduanced aboue the other. Secondly, there is the ſame matter and ſubſtance of both Sacraments, Chriſt Ieſus with all his benefits, as Baptiſme is ſaid to ſaue vs by the reſurrection of Chriſt, 1.Pet.3.21. and the cup, and the bread in the Euchariſt are a communion of the bodie and blood of Chriſt, 1.Corinth.10.16. Thirdly, one and the ſame end of them both, which is the increaſe and ſtrengthening of our faith in the promiſes of God: as Rom.6.5. we are ſaid to be graft in Baptiſme to the ſimilitude of Chriſts death and reſurrection: and 1.Corinth.11.26. the receiuing of the Communion is a ſhewing foorth of the Lords death: Ergo, they are both of equall dignitie and worthineſſe.

Exod.12.19.

I might vrge them alſo with their owne fancies: for by like reaſon, as Bellarmine would preferre Baptiſme before faith, becauſe children are ſaued without faith, and yet not without Baptiſme (in their opinion) ſo becauſe without Baptiſme children cannot bee ſaued, as they hold, and yet may without the other Sacrament: therefore Baptiſme is more neceſſarie, and ſo conſequently more worthie: wherefore they doe contrarie themſelues in their owne fancies.

Let them ſay now, which is the more worthie thing, Baptiſme, or the word preached? no doubt they will preferre Baptiſme: for they hold that the Sacraments do giue grace by the worke wrought, and ſo doth not the word: yea, they are offended, becauſe wee ſay, that the Sacraments are no other waies inſtruments of our iuſtification, then the word preached is; but that the one worketh by the hearing, the other by the ſenſes of ſeeing, handling, taſting: but they all ſerue to one end, namely, to beget and increaſe faith in vs. This our aſſertion they vtterly miſlike, Bellarm. lib.2. de ſacram. cap.2. Whereby it appeareth, that they preferre Baptiſme before the word. We then thus reaſon out of Auguſtine: he thus writeth: Dicite mihi, quid plus videtur vobis, verbum Dei, an corpus Chriſti? reſpondere debetis, quod non ſit minus verbum Dei: Tell me, which is the chiefer in your opinion, the word of God, or the bodie of Chriſt? (that is the ſacrament of his bodie:) ye muſt anſwere, that the word of God is not inferiour, Homil.26. Hence we frame this argument: The word of God is equiualent to the Sacrament of the Lords bodie: Baptiſme is equiualent to the word of God, by our aduerſaries owne confeſſion: Ergo, alſo it is of equal value and dignitie with the other Sacrament.

Now further for the more full demonſtration of this point, that Baptiſme is not inferiour to the Euchariſt, as they pretend: I will ſhew how diuers ancient fathers haue indifferently aſcribed the ſame priuiledges to them both.

1 Theodoret ſpeaking of the Euchariſt ſaith, Illius omnes ſunt æque participes, &c. All are equally made partakers of it, both rich and poore, Prince and ſubiect: ſo Cyprian before him ſaid of Baptiſme: Eadem gratia ſpiritualis æqualiter in baptiſmo, &c. The ſame ſpirituall grace is equally receiued in Baptiſme of all, which beleeue, &c. as euery one had a like portion, a ghomer full of Manna.

In c.11. epiſt.1. ad Corinth.
Lib.4. epiſt 7.

2 Gelaſius ſaith, that the Sacrament of the bodie and blood of Chriſt is diuina res, a diuine thing: and Auguſtine ſaith of Baptiſme, In nobis non ſimplex aqua operatur, &c. It is not ſimple water, that worketh in vs: but when the water receiueth the grace of the ſpirit, it waſheth away all our ſinnes.

Contr. Eutych. & Neſtor.
Homil.35. in 5.cap. Ioann.

3 Ambroſe maketh a certaine change of the bread in the Euchariſt, that after conſecration, de pane ſit caro Chriſti, the fleſh of Chriſt is made of bread: and the ſame Ambroſe ſaith of Baptiſme, naturam mutari per benedictionem, that the nature of the water is changed by benediction.

De ſacram. lib.4. cap.4. |
Ibid. cap.9.

4 Auguſtine ſaith of the Euchariſt, that it is cibus incomparabilis, ineffabilis, incomparable, ineffable meate: So Gregorie Nyſſen of Baptiſme, that the ſpirit, which appeareth not: anima ineffabiliter accedit, doth after an ineffable manner approch vnto the ſoule.

Lib.2. de viſitation. infirmor.
Concion. de Baptiſm.

5 Touching the greatnes of the myſterie, Chryſoſtome ſaith of the Euchariſt, Ea re alimur, quam angeli videntes tremunt: We are nouriſhed with that thing, which the Angels ſeeing doe tremble at: and he ſaith alſo of Baptiſme, Angeli tam inenarrabilis operis modum minime enarrare poſſunt: The Angels cannot expreſſe the manner of ſuch an vnſpeakable worke, &c. He meaneth of our regeneration in Baptiſme.

Homil.83. in c.26. Matth.
Homil.24. in 3.c. Ioann.

6 Chryſoſtome ſaith, that Chriſt had a care in inſtituting the Euchariſt, vt ſemper memoria teneamus, pro nobis ipſum mortuum eſſe: that we ſhould alway keepe in minde, that he died for vs. And ſo Leo ſaith of Baptiſme, that there is therein, ſpecies mortis, & ſimilitudo reſurrectionis, a ſhew of the death, and a ſimilitude of the reſurrection of Chriſt.

Homil.86. in c.26. Matth.

7 In the Euchariſt, Chriſt, reipſa nos corpus ſuum efficit, doth make vs indeed his owne bodie. Chryſoſtome, and ſo ſaith Sedulius in Baptiſme, membrum de corpore eius factus es, thou art made a member of his bodie.

Lib.2.de viſitation. infirmor.
Serm.11.in 6.c ad Roman.

8 The Euchariſt is both redemptoris monumentum, & redempti munimentum, a monument of the redeemer, and a muniment or defence of the redeemed: Augustine. So Chryſoſtome alſo maketh Baptiſme a muniment of a Chriſtian, priora peccata delet, & ad futura nos munit: it blotteth out former ſinnes, and defendeth vs againſt ſinnes to come.

Homil.24.in 10 c.1 epiſt. ad Corinth.
Lib.5.in libr. Regum.

9 The Euchariſt openeth a way into heauen, This myſterie cauſeth vt terra nobis cœlum ſit, that earth is become heauen vnto vs: Chryſoſtome: So Eucherius of Baptiſme: when Chriſt was baptiſed the heauens opened, to ſhew to vs, that by Baptiſme, which Chriſt hath conſecrated, ianuam patriæ cœleſtis ingredi deberemus, we ſhould enter into the gate of our heauenly countrey.

Lib.5.in c.16. Leuit.

10 But Iſychius goeth yet further, and ſaith, capitulum noſtræ ſalutis eſt baptiſma: Baptiſme is the head or chiefe part of our ſaluation, &c. It is not then inferiour vnto the Euchariſt.

THE TWELFTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE, OF THE SACRAMENT OF BAPTISME.

THis controuerſie ſtandeth vpon diuers queſtions. Firſt, of the name, and definition of Baptiſme. Secondly, of the parts of Baptiſme. Thirdly, of the neceſſity of Baptiſme. Fourthly, of the Miniſter of Baptiſme. Fifthly, of the parties which are to bee baptized. Sixthly, of the effects of Baptiſme. Seuenthly, of the difference of Chriſts Baptiſme and Iohns. Eighthly, of the ceremonies of Baptiſme.

THE FIRST QVESTION, OF THE NAME and definition of Baptiſme.

COncerning the name, there is no queſtion betweene vs, for the name of Baptiſme hath the originall and beginning from the Scripture: Saint Paul vſeth this word, Coloſſ. 2. 12. Wee are buried with him through Baptiſme. And againe, Hebr. 6. 2. All the queſtion is about the definition of Baptiſme.

Coloſ. 2. 12.
Heb. 6 2.

The Papiſts.

THey define Baptiſme to be a Sacrament of regeneration by water in the word: that is, not which ſignifieth and ſealeth vnto vs our regeneration, and aſſureth vs of remiſſion of ſinnes: but actually iuſtifieth and regenerateth vs, Bellarm. lib. 1. de Baptiſm. cap. 1. 1. Error.

Argum. Bellarmine groundeth his definition vpon thoſe words of our Sauiour, Iohn 3. 5. Except a man be borne of water and the ſpirit: and Epheſ. 5. 26. That he might ſanctifie it by the waſhing of water through the word. Hence he would inferre, that we are ſanctified by the water in Baptiſme, Bellarm. ibid. Iohn. 3. 5.

Anſ. It is manifeſt by thoſe places, where the ſpirit, and the worde are ioyned to the outward waſhing by water; that the efficacie is not in the water, but in the ſpirit, and the worde or promiſe of God, which is apprehended by faith: theſe places proue that Baptiſme is a Sacrament, ſigne and ſeale of regeneration, but no efficient or working cauſe thereof.

The Doway interpreters doe thus argue: as water in the beginning of the world receiued a certaine vitall vertue of the holy Ghoſt, to produce liuing creatures, ſo alſo Baptiſme receiueth vertue of the ſame holy Ghoſt to procreate new men: and to this purpoſe Tertullian is alleaged, let it not ſeeme ſtrange that in Baptiſme waters giue life. Lib. de Baptiſ.

Contra. 1. It is vntrue that the water had a vertue giuen vnto it, to bring forth the liuing creatures: but they were produced out of the waters by the word of God. 2. Pet. 3. 5. The waters were onely as the matter, the ſpirit of God and his word were the efficient. 2. Neither doth it follow, the waters had a gift to bring forth corporall things, that it may as well haue an actiuity to procreate ſpirituall. 3. If they will be tried by Tertullian: hee is againſt them: in that booke alleaged he ſaith, quam fides impetrat obſignata in patre filio et ſpiritu ſancto: which (waſhing away of ſinnes) faith obtaineth being ſealed in the name of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt &c. He aſcribeth the waſhing away of ſinnes not to the water, but to faith: and yet more euidently in another place, lauacrum illud obſignatio eſt fidei, that Lauacre is a ſealing of Faith: non ideo abluimur vt delinquere deſinamus, ſed quia deſiimus, quia corde iam loti ſumus: we are not therefore waſhed that we may leaue off to ſinne, but becauſe we haue left already, becauſe we are waſhed in heart, &c. Baptiſme then doth not actually iuſtifie or regenerate, ſeeing ſuch as come to bee baptized, beleeued, and were regenarate already.

Lib. de pœnitent.

The Proteſtants.

WE rather according to the Scriptures define Baptiſme to be a ſigne or ſeale of our regeneration and new birth, whereby we are aſſured, that as verily by faith in the blood of Chriſt we are clenſed from our ſinnes, as our bodies are waſhed with water, In the name of the father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt: So that baptiſme doth not actually beſtow remiſſion of ſinnes by the worke wrought, but is a pledge and ſeale of the righteouſnes of faith, as Saint Paul ſaith of Circumciſion, Rom. 4.11. For it is not the waſhing of the fleſh by water, but the eſtabliſhing of the heart with faith and grace, that saueth vs, 1. Pet. 3.21. See this point handled more at large, Controuerſ. 11. next before, queſt. 2. part. 1.

1. Pet 3.21.

Auguſtine ſaith. Per ipſam (nempe fidem) renaſcimur in baptiſmate: by ſaith we are borne againe in Baptiſme, De tempor. ſerm. 53. It is then the proper act of faith, to regenerate vs, not of Baptiſme; the vſe and end whereof, is to ſtrengthen and increaſe our faith.

2. Clemens Alexandrinus ſaith, theſe bands of ignorance and darkenes are ſoone remitted, (humana fide, diuina verò gratia, &c. verbali baptiſmate) by humane faith, but by the diuine grace, in the baptiſme of the word: ſee Tertullian before: Gregentius the Aethopian Biſhop of Tephra, treadeth in the ſame ſteps: they are admitted to life, which is Chriſt, by faith and Baptiſme: faith then muſt concur with Baptiſme.

Ibid. c. 8. Per fidem et Baptiſmum, &c. By faith and Baptiſm we are freed from our ſin. And yet more euidently cap. 39. of the ſame diſtinction, vpon thoſe words of our Sauiour, Iam vos mundi eſtis, and now you are cleane through the word, that I haue ſpoken vnto you; Quare non ayt, mundi eſtis propter Baptiſmum, &c. Why doth he not ſay, you are cleane becauſe of Baptiſme, wherewith yee are waſhed, (but becauſe of the word) but becauſe the word clenſeth in the water. Wee ſee then that the vertue of the Sacrament dependeth vpon faith, ſo that Bellarmines aſſertion, that faith addeth no force to the Sacrament, lib. 1. de Sacram. c. 22. is not onely repugnant to Scripture, but contrary to their owne Canons.

THE SECOND QVESTION, OF THE parts, which are the matter and forme of Baptiſme.

AS touching the matter: that is, the externall element vſed in Baptiſme, there is no queſtion betweene vs, but that it ought to be plaine and common water, Act. 10.47. S. Peter ſaith, can any man forbid water, that theſe ſhould not be baptized? Wherefore wee condemne the fooliſh and vngodly practiſes and inuentions of heretikes, that either exclude water altogether, as the Manichees, with others; or doe vſe any other element, as the Iacobites, that in ſteed of water burned them that were to be baptized, with a hot yron; or as the Aethiopians, which are called Abiſſines, that vſed fire in ſteed of water: miſconſtruing the words of the Goſpell, Matth. 3.11. That Chriſt ſhould baptize with the holy Ghoſt and with fire: which is not literally to bee vnderſtood, but thereby is ſignified the internall and forceable working of the ſpirit, which kindleth zeale and loue in our hearts as fire.

Bez. Matth. 3. verſ. 11.
Matth 3.11.

Concerning the forme of Baptiſme: we all agree, that no other is to be vſed, then that preſcribed by our Sauiour Chriſt, To baptize in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and holy Ghoſt: that it is neither lawfull to change this forme in ſenſe, as many heretikes haue done, nor yet in wordes, as to leaue out any of the three perſons in Trinity, and incluſiuely to vnderſtand them by naming of one: for whereas ſome alleage that place Act. 2.38. Be ye baptized in the name of Ieſus Chriſt, for remiſſion of ſinnes; to proue, that it is lawfull onely in the name of Chriſt to Baptize, wee are to vnderſtand, that the forme of Baptiſme is not in that place expreſly ſet downe; but the ſcope onely and ende of baptiſme, which is to aſſure vs of remiſſion of ſinnes in the name of Chriſt, as Beza very well noteth, vpon that place: wherefore it is a manifeſt error, which is imputed to Pope Nicholas, who deemeth Baptiſme in the name of Chriſt onely to be ſufficient; decret. part. 3. diſtinct. 4. c. 24. Bellarmine would helpe this matter, and ſaith, that he bringeth in S. Ambroſe authoritie, but determineth nothing himſelfe, whereas the very words of the Pope are theſe, Conſtat eos denuo non eſſe baptizandos: It is euident, that ſuch are not to be baptized againe, namely, they, that were baptized onely in the name of Chriſt: what are theſe elſe, but definitiue words? Wherefore we allow rather the decree of Alexander 3.decret.Greg.lib.3.tit.42.c.1. Si quis non dixerit, ego baptizo: Vnleſſe a man ſay, I baptize thee in the name of the Father, of the Sonne, and of the holy Ghoſt, hee baptizeth not: this is agreeable to the Scripture, where Chriſt commandeth his diſciples to baptize in the name of the Father, of the Sonne, and of the holy Ghoſt, Matthew 28. but the very forme of ſpeech, as whether to ſay, I baptize, or according to the vſe of the Greeke Church, Be thou baptized, is not of like neceſſitie, as to vſe the name of the Trinitie. The point then of difference betweene vs, concerning the forme of Baptiſme is this.

The Papiſts.

2,Error. THey are bold to affirme, that this forme of Baptiſme, to baptize in the name of the Father, Sonne and holy Ghoſt, is not fully concluded out of Scripture, but deliuered by tradition; for (ſay they) the commandement of Chriſt, to baptize in the name of the Trinitie, Matth.28. may be vnderſtoode thus: to baptize them into the faith of the Trinitie, or by the authoritie of the Trinitie. And it were ſufficient, by thoſe words, to doe and performe it in act, without ſaying the words; were it not, that wee haue otherwiſe learned by tradition, that this very forme of words is to be kept, Bellarm. de baptiſm.lib.1.cap.3.

The Proteſtants.

WE need no tradition for this matter; the very forme which is to be vſed in Baptiſme, is plainly proued out of the Scriptures: for that commandement of Chriſt, Goe and baptize, &c. doth neceſſarily imply a forme of ſpeech to bee vſed. Wee grant, that in the Scriptures, this word (name) is taken for power, vertue, authoritie, as Act.3.6. In the name of Ieſus ariſe and walke. So alſo, Act.3.6. as there is a Baptiſme with water, there may be a baptizing with fire, Matth.3.11. Wherefore if part of the commandement be to be taken properly and literally, as this, Goe and baptize, why not the reſt alſo, In the name of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt? If then the whole commandement bee properly and plainely vnderſtood: how can they baptize in the name of the Trinitie, vnleſſe the Trinitie be ſpoken and named?

Secondly, it appeareth alſo out of other places of Scripture, that this forme was vſed in the Apoſtles time: As Act.10.47. Can any man forbid water, why theſe ſhould not be baptized, which haue receiued the holy Ghoſt, as well as we? Act.10.47. As if S. Peter ſhould haue reaſoned thus: theſe haue receiued the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt: Ergo, they may be alſo baptized in the name of the holy Ghoſt. Likewiſe, Act.19.2. Act.19.2. When the brethren at Epheſus had anſwered Paul, that they had not heard, whether there were a holy Ghoſt: he ſaith vnto them, Vnto what then were you baptized? By this interrogatorie it appeareth, it was their manner to baptize in the name of the holy Ghoſt, and ſo conſequently of the whole Trinitie. We haue no cauſe then to flie vnto tradition, this matter being ſo plainely decided by the Scripture.

1 Auguſtin. tract. in Iohann. 80. Vpon thoſe words of our Sauiour, Iohn 15.3. You are cleane through the word, which I haue ſpoken vnto you. Detrahe verbum, & quid eſt aqua niſi aqua? Accedat verbum ad elementum, & fit ſacramentum: Take away the word, and what remaineth in Baptiſme but bare water? Let the word be ioyned to the element, and it maketh a Sacrament, &c. The forme then of Baptiſme, is the word, which Chriſt ſpake: and where elſe ſpeaketh Chriſt, but in the Scriptures? Ergo, the forme of Baptiſme, is the word of Chriſt, preſcribed and commanded in the Scriptures. Away therefore with your vncertaine and deceitfull traditions. Our Baptiſme is builded vpon a ſurer foundation: namely, the word of God.

2 Concil. Florentin. ſeſſ.7. Andreas Coloſſenſ. Velim à vobis ampliſſimi patres doceri, &c. I would learne of you (reuerend fathers) whether the moſt holy Goſpell doe containe the moſt perfect doctrine of our religion: I thinke (ſuch is your godlineſſe) that you will not anſwere otherwiſe, but that the moſt abſolute knowledge of our faith, is therein contained: Ergo, the perfect doctrine of Baptiſme is expreſſed in the Goſpell: Cyril ſaith, that not the leaſt thing of the Sacraments muſt bee deliuered without the diuine Scripture, *Catech.*4. much leſſe the forme of words whereby they are conſecrated.

3 The Maſter of Sentences thus determineth this matter: lib.4. diſtinct.3.g. Non tunc illam formam Chriſtus, &c. Chriſt did not firſt giue that forme of Baptiſme to his Apoſtles, when he ſent them to preach to the Gentiles, but before when he ſent them to preach to the Iewes: ſo that the inſtitution of Baptiſme may be better ſaid to haue beene made when Chriſt was baptized of Iohn in Iordane, &c. Tunc ergo inuocato nomine Trinitatis, &c. Then was the Baptiſme of Chriſt inſtituted, the name of the Trinitie being inuocated, which there appeared in myſterie, &c. Your Maſter groundeth the forme of Baptiſme in the name of the Trinitie, vpon the Baptiſme of Chriſt, where the whole Trinitie appeared in myſterie, the Father ſpake from heauen, the holy Ghoſt deſcended like a Doue, the Sonne himſelfe was in the waters: wherefore here is no neede to runne vnto tradition.

Harm.ſect.12. pag.384. The former confeſſ. of Heluetia, artic.20. The Sacraments are the inſtitution and worke of the Lord himſelfe: Bohemia: Thoſe Sacraments no man either did or can inſtitute but the Lord himſelfe: But the words of conſecration are part of the inſtitution, which cannot be proued but out of the Scriptures.

Hereunto the holy Martyrs giue conſent: The word of God written by the Prophets and Apoſtles, left and contained in the Canonicall bookes of the whole Bible, I doe beleeue to containe plentifully all things neceſſarie to ſaluation, &c. Iohn Bradford, pag. 1626. But the doctrine of Baptiſme is neceſſarie to ſaluation to be knowne, both concerning the forme and matter: Ergo. Pag.1476.280

THE THIRD QVESTION, OF THE neceſſitie of Baptiſme.

The Papiſts.

3.Error. THey affirme, that Baptiſme is ſimply neceſſarie to ſaluation by Gods appointment: ſo that all which die vnbaptized, vnleſſe the want of Baptiſme be recompenced either by Martyrdome or penance, muſt needes periſh, and be depriued of eternall life, Concil. Trident. ſeſſ. 7. can. 7. Bellar. lib. 1. de Baptiſ. cap. 4.

Argum. 1. Ioh. 3. 5. Our Sauiour ſaith, Vnleſſe a man be borne of water and the ſpirit, he cannot enter into the kingdome of God: Ergo, it is neceſſarie to ſaluation to be baptized, Bellarm. ibid. Rhemiſt. in hunc locum.

Anſwere. Firſt, it is not neceſſarie by water here to vnderſtand materiall water, but the purifying grace of Chriſt, which is called the water of life, Iohn 4. 11. Water then is here added as an Epithete of the ſpirit, becauſe it clenſeth and purgeth as water: as Iohn 7. 38. He that beleeueth, out of his belly ſhall flow riuers of waters of life: Quid aqua ſit (ſaith Auguſtine) euangelium interroga: Inquire of the Goſpell, what this water is. Then it followeth, verſ. 39. This ſpake he of the ſpirit, which they that beleeued in him, ſhould receiue. By water then it is no rare thing, to vnderſtand the ſpirit. Secondly, why may not water be here figuratiuely taken, to expreſſe the working of the ſpirit, as fire is added to the ſpirit, Matth. 3. 11. Hee ſhall baptize with the holy Ghoſt and with fire? What greater neceſſitie is there in this place, to vnderſtand water literally, than fire in the other? Iohn 4. 11. Iohn 7. 38. Tractat. in Epiſtol. Ioh. 6.

Obiect. Bellarmine replieth: that water muſt needes be here vnderſtood literally: firſt, becauſe the words in Scripture, if there follow not apparent abſurditie, muſt be properly vnderſtood. Secondly, if water be not here ſignified, then it will be hard to proue, that Baptiſme ought to be miniſtred onely with water: for other places, where mention is made of water, doe proue that men may be baptized with water; but they proue not, that they cannot be baptized with other things: Lib. 1. de Baptiſm. cap. 4.

Anſw. Firſt, it is true that where any abſurditie may follow, the words are not to be taken properly: as when Chriſt ſaid (this is my body) becauſe it is an abſurd thing and inconuenient to eate mans fleſh, we ſay the ſpeech is figuratiue: but it followeth not of the contrarie, that where no abſurditie followeth, there the words are properly to be taken, as Matth. 3. where mention is made of Baptiſme with fire; it were no very abſurd thing, if Chriſt had ſo appointed, for children to be ſomewhat ſinged with fire, as they were in the law circumciſed and cut with a knife: yet fire properly is not there vnderſtood. Secondly, if the element of water were here ſignified, a great abſurditie would follow, that for want of a little ſprinkling of water, children ſhould be vtterly loſt. Thirdly, we haue other places to proue the neceſſitie of water in Baptiſme beſide this place: As firſt, the example of Chriſt, Matth. chap. 3. who was baptized onely in water. Againe, the commandement of Chriſt, Matth. chap. 28. Goe and baptize: which word ſignifieth properly to waſh with water: As alſo the practiſe of the Apoſtles that onely vſed water, Act. 10. S. Peter ſaith, Who can forbid water? &c.

Iohn 6. 53. Thirdly, as you expound theſe words of Baptiſme, ſo ye do apply another place, Ioh. chap. 6. ver. 53. to the other Sacrament: Vnleſſe you doe eate the fleſh of the Sonne of man, and drinke his blood, you ſhall not haue life in you. If this bee ſpoken of the Sacramentall eating and drinking of Chriſt, as the Rhemiſts take it; then belike there is as great neceſſitie of the Euchariſt, as of Baptiſme: and ſo indeede Auguſtine ſometime thought, that the one was as neceſſarie to ſaluation as the other: Sine Chriſti carne & ſanguine nec paruuli vitam habere poſſunt in ſemetipſis: Without the fleſh and blood of Chriſt, neither can infants haue life in themſelues. And therefore it was the cuſtome of thoſe times, to giue of the Sacrament to children: Paruulis adhuc & infirmis ſtillantur quædam de Sacramentis: Some part of the Sacrament is inſtilled and powred into the mouthes of young and tender children. Cont. 2. epiſt. Pelag. lib. 4. c. 4. in Pſal. 64.

But our aduerſaries in no wiſe will admit that the Euchariſt is as neceſſarie as Baptiſme: wherefore they doe thus comment vpon our Sauiours words: That they alſo doe eate the fleſh of Chriſt, and drinke his blood, which ioyne in heart, and deſire to be partakers of the Sacrament, and ſo myſtically, and ſpiritually doe receiue it, Rhemiſt. Ioh. 6. ſect. 8. And why, I pray you, may there not bee as well a myſticall and ſpirituall reciuing of Baptiſme without the Sacrament, as of the Euchariſt or Lords Supper, ſeeing this place, Iohn 6. 53. doth as neceſſarily enforce the receiuing of this Sacrament, as that place, Iohn 3. 5. doth lay a neceſſitie vpon Baptiſme?

Fourthly, If this ſaying of Chriſt, Except a man be borne of water, &c. doe imply a neceſſitie of Baptiſme, then Baptiſme began to bee neceſſarie immediatly vpon this ſpeech of our Sauiour: for hee ſaith not, except a man ſhall bee, but except hee bee, niſi renatus fuerit, in the preter Tenſe. But Bellarmine himſelfe ſaith, that Baptiſme began not to bee neceſſarie, till after Chriſts death, cap.5. therefore it is not like, that any ſuch neceſſitie ſhould bee laid at all vpon Baptiſme. For it had beene great reaſon, that Chriſts baptiſme, which was giuen while hee liued in the fleſh, ſhould haue beene as neceſſarie as his Apoſtles baptiſme, which was miniſtred afterward.

Laſtly, the Maſter of Sentences thus expoundeth this place: Intelligendum eſt de illis, qui poſſunt & contemnunt baptizari: It is to be vnderſtood of thoſe, which may, and yet contemne to be baptized: vel ita intelligendum eſt, &c. Or it muſt be thus vnderſtood: Vnleſſe a man be borne againe of water and the ſpirit, &c. That is by that regeneration, which is done by water and the ſpirit: but that regeneration is not onely by Baptiſme, but by repentance, &c. lib.4 diſt.4.c. If either of theſe expoſitions bee receiued, children dying without Baptiſme, ſhall not be condemned: for firſt, they doe not contemne Baptiſme, if they dye without it. Secondly, that regeneration, which others haue by the ſpirit and water, others by repentance, is ſupplied vnto them by the couenant of grace.

Or we refuſe not the interpretation of this place, which Innocentius 3. one of your Popes hath in his decree, Decret. Gregor. lib.3. tit.42. cap.3. where hauing recited this place of Scripture, Vnleſſe a man be borne of water and the ſpirit, &c. with diuers other places, he inferreth thus: Ex vi literæ ſatis patet prædictas authoritates, &c. By the very letter it is apparant, that the foreſaid authorities muſt onely be vnderſtood of thoſe that are of age, which haue a multitude of ſinnes, and cannot be vnderſtood of little ones, which onely haue originall ſinne, and ſo alſo is that authoritie to be reſolued, hee that beleeueth and is baptized, ſhall be ſaued. If ye will be iudged then by your holy father, this place cannot be enforced againſt infants, that die vnbaptized.

*Argum.*2. The Popiſh diuines of Doway, doe vrge the correſpondence, that baptiſme hath with circumciſion: as they which died without circumciſion or other remedie of thoſe former times, their ſoules periſhed from their people, ſo now without baptiſme, they can neuer enter into the kingdome of heauen, &c.

Ar.not.in Geneſ.2.c.17.

*Contra.*1. They are here more reaſonable, then in another annotation: where they ſay preciſely, that all infants (dying without circumciſion) were ſecluded onely for lacke of that remedie: but here they put in a diſiunctiue, or other remedie: and ſo we grant, that children dying without baptiſme, and all other remedie, cannot be ſaued: but there is another remedie, which ſupplieth the want of baptiſme, which is the couenant of grace.

In Geneſ.17. verſ.14.

2 It is vntrue, that children dying without circumciſion were then damned: Caietanes reaſon is, becauſe Salomons brother dying before the eighth day was ſaued. Eliſius another of their Doctors, ſaith, that then the males ſhould haue beene in worſe ſtate and condition, then the female: and therefore Tilmannus reſolueth, that the vncircumciſed infants were ſaued by the faith of the parents: yea the text is euident, that the penaltie, to be cut off from their people, lieth not vpon infants, but vpon thoſe which were adulti of yeeres, becauſe he hath broken my couenant: but infants cannot be ſaid to breake the couenant: This alſo appeareth, Exod.4. where the Lord would haue killed Moſes, not the childe for the deferring of circumciſion.

In 3. part Thom.468. artic.1.
Ex citation. Caſſandri fol.123.

*Argum.*3. Bellarmine alleageth diuers fathers, who were of opinion, that infants dying without baptiſme, could not bee ſaued, as Origene, Nazianzene, Hierome, with others: lib.1. de baptiſm.c.4.

*Anſwere.*1. Some of the fathers did hold a neceſſitie of the Euchariſt to bee miniſtred to children, as well as of baptiſme, as Auguſtine and ſome others: and it is the opinion of the Greeke Church at this time, Vtrumq́ ſacramentum omnib. eſſe neceſſarium, That both Sacraments, Baptiſme, and the Communion are neceſſarily for all: why doe they not then follow the opinion of the fathers for the neceſſitie of the one, as they doe in the other.

Ieremie Patriark Cenſur. orient.c.9.in fine.

2 Auguſtine, Fulgentius, Gregorie, as their Azorius confeſſeth, hold that infants vnbaptized deſcended into the place of the damned, and that they are puniſhed with ſenſe of paine, but now the Romaniſts are gone from that, hauing found out a limbus of infants, wherein they are not puniſhed pœna ſenſus, with ſenſe of paine: but onely damni of loſſe: ſo that they can with no reaſon pretend the fathers; whoſe iudgement herein they haue renounced.

Azor. inſtitut. Moral.lib.2. c 17. part.1.

The Proteſtants.

WE acknowledge no greater neceſſitie in Baptiſme, then in the other Sacrament: both which we grant to be neceſſarie as helpes and props, and profitable meanes to encreaſe our faith: but not ſo ſimply neceſſarie, as that without them (there being no neglect, or contempt had of them) it were impoſſible to be ſaued.

*Argum.*1. The children of the faithfull are holy alreadie, euen before they bee baptized: for they are within the couenant, and to them alſo belongeth the promiſe. The Lord ſaith, I will bee thy God, and the God of thy ſeede, Geneſ.17.7. And Saint Paul ſaith, that the children of the faithfull are holy, 1.Corinth.7.14. If the Lord then bee the God alſo of children, and if they bee holy, being borne of the righteous ſeede, how can they poſſiblie periſh, although they dye vnbaptized?

Gen.17.7.
1.Cor.7.14.

Bellarmine anſwereth, Firſt, that the promiſes made to Abraham, were temporall, not ſpirituall, Galath 3.16.

Contra. Saint Paul ſheweth, they were ſpirituall: by ſeede (not ſeedes) vnderſtanding Chriſt, Galath.3.ſo that the promiſes made to Abraham, and his ſeede, were ſuch, as were to be accompliſhed in Chriſt.

Bellarmine. 2. Such ſpirituall promiſes, as were made to Abraham, belonged not to the carnall poſteritie of Abraham, but to the true ſonnes of Abraham, that is, his faithfull ſeede, cap.4.reſponſ. ad obiect. 1.

Contra. We grant, that onely ſuch as beleeued, after they came to yeeres capable of faith, were the true ſonnes of Abraham, though otherwiſe both carnally begotten of his ſtocke, as alſo outwardly ſigned with circumciſion: but no ſuch condition of faith was required in infants: but they were ſaued euen dying before circumciſion by the couenant of grace, which was made to Abraham and his ſeed, Geneſ.17.7. before circumciſion, which is the ſigne of the couenant, was giuen.

Bellarm. Thirdly, the children are ſaid to be holy: either after a ciuill kinde of holineſſe, that is to ſay, they were legitimate: or elſe becauſe the beleeuing parent doth conſecrate the children vnto God, and ſo they are made holy by Baptiſme, and are brought vp in godlines: or elſe, the vnbeleeuing part is ſaid to be ſanctified by the beleeuing, in that he is taught the right vſe of mariage; whereas Infidels do abuſe matrimony, and vſe it immoderately, and at ſuch times, as they ought to abſtain, wherby their children are vncleane, and their mariage polluted, Bellarmine ibid.

Heb.12.16.

Contra. Firſt, no ſuch ciuill ſanctification, that is, legitimation, can be here vnderſtood: for though both the parents were Infidels, yet are their children legitimate, they being lawfully linked together in mariage: but now the Apoſtle ſaying, The vnbeleeuing husband is ſanctified by the wife, meaneth a further degree of ſanctification, then is betweene both being Infidels. Secondly, neither doth the Apoſtle meane, that the children are holy by any act of holineſſe wrought vpon them by the beleeuing parent, as by conſecrating them vnto God, or bringing them to be baptized, or ſeeing them well brought vp; but ſuch an holines, as whereby both the vnbeleeuing parent is ſanctified, & his ſeed alſo: But firſt, by godly education the children onely are ſanctified, it is nothing to the ſanctification of the parents. Secondly, neither are all children made holy or vertuous, by their good education, as Eſau wanted no good bringing vp, as well as Iacob, yet he is called a prophane perſon, Heb.12.16. but the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of all the children of ſuch, that they are holy. Thirdly, and againe the Apoſtle meaneth not onely ſuch children as are brought to Baptiſme, or of age to be nurtured, but all the children and ſeede of the faithfull parent: wherefore it cannot be ſo vnderſtood. Fourthly, yet further, it is poſſible that an adulterer may haue a care for the good education of his adulterous ſeede, as Auguſtine had for his ſonne Adeodatus, and yet their vnlawfull copulation is not thereby ſanctified.

Thirdly, this ſanctification cannot be vnderſtood of the right vſe of mariage: firſt, becauſe that although the abuſe of mariage in the parents is a pollution to them, yet it extendeth not to their ſeede. Secondly, it is poſſible for Infidels to attaine to this ciuill gift, as moderately and ſoberly to vſe their wiues, as ſome of them had the gift of perpetuall continencie, doth it therefore follow, that their ſeed ſhall be holy? Thirdly, yea this infirmity in the immoderate vſe of mariage is incident to the mariage of the faithfull: as Auguſtine ſaith, Naturalis vſus, licet immoderatus, venialis eſt in vxore, &c. The naturall vſe, though it be immoderate, is pardonable in the wife: huius delicti, non habent hortatrices nuptias, ſed deprecatrices: Mariage is not an exhorter thereunto, but an intreater: *de nupt. & concup. c.*11. ſhall the children therefore of the faithfull be vnholy? So then none of theſe three expoſitions, which Bellarmine hath brought, can ſtand.

Wherefore the meaning of the Apoſtle is this, that the children of parents, where one of them is a beleeuer, are holy, that is within the couenant; and being within the couenant, they are alſo partakers of the promiſe: Where we ſee a difference betweene the law of Chriſt, and the lawes of men: for by the Ciuill law, partus ſequitur ventrem, the birth did follow the wombe, the childe did follow the condition of the mother; as Cod. lib. 5. tit. 5. leg. 3. Conſtantin. If the father were a free man, the mother a ſeruant, ſo ſhould the childe be: So likewiſe decreeth *Gregor.9.decr.Greg.lib.*1. *tit.*18.*c.*8. But the rule of Chriſt is more fauourable, that if either father or mother are free in Chriſt, that is, beleeuers, the child is free alſo, that is, holy: ſo that the faith of the one of them is more auaileable to include the ſeede within the couenant, then the infidelitie of the other to exclude it. So then the vnbeleeuer is ſanctified by the beleeuer, that is, is made a fit inſtrument, notwithſtanding his infidelitie to conuey the holy ſeede. And the Ciuill law hath a rule not much vnlike the ſaying of the Apoſtle here, Uxor concreſcat marito: The wife doth increaſe and grow with her husband, *Cod.lib.*5. *tit.*4 *leg.*28.Iuſtinian. Like as the wife, though a ſeruant, being maried to a man of honourable order, was partaker of his honour: ſo likewiſe faith in either partie, being the true honor of a Chriſtian, doth ſanctifie the other in this behalfe.

1. Sam.2.18.

Arg. 2. Circumciſion was as neceſſarie to the Iſraelites, as Baptiſme is to vs: but their children, which died before the eight day, when they were to be circumciſed, periſhed not: for Dauid doubteth not to ſay of his childe that died the ſeuenth day, I ſhall goe to him he cannot returne to me, 2. Samuel 12.18,23. He pronounceth that the childe was ſaued. And Bellarmine confeſſeth, that ſome of the children that Herod ſlew were not eight dayes old, and ſo not circumciſed; yet they were all ſaued and are counted innocents, lib. 1. de Baptiſ. c,6.prop. 1. Ergo, neither children dying without Baptiſme now are condemned.

The Maſter of Sentences anſwereth, that either children dying before circumciſion did periſh and were damned, or elſe in caſe of neceſſitie they might circumciſe before the eighth day, lib. 4. diſtinct. 1.

Contra. His firſt aſſertion is very cruell and vncharitable, and contrarie to the Scripture: for Dauids childe was ſaued dying before the eighth day; and ſome of the children that Herod did ſlay, might be vnder eight daies olde, and ſo not circumciſed, and yet they are all held to be innocents and Saints.

His ſecond aſſertion hath no ground, ſeeing that in the inſtitution of circumciſion, Geneſ. 17. it is limited to the eighth day: ſo that they which circumciſed before that day, did contrarie to the inſtitution.

Bellarmine anſwereth: that it is vncertaine, whether the Iewes had any other remedie againſt ſinne for their children dying before circumciſion, becauſe the Scripture maketh no mention thereof: but now it is certaine, there is no remedie beſide Baptiſme for infants, Bellar. cap. 4.

Anſw. Firſt, neither Circumciſion then, nor Baptiſme now, is a remedie againſt originall ſinne, but a ſigne onely and ſeale of our ſpirituall waſhing by the blood of Chriſt. Secondly, if the Iewes had another remedie for their children, ſhall we thinke that the Goſpell hath laid an harder yoke vpon infants, then the law did? Thirdly, infants then, and now dying before the Sacrament, haue one common remedie to bee ſaued by, namely the couenant of grace, in that the Lord promiſed, to bee their God, and the God of their ſeed: and the children by the Apoſtle are called holy, 1. Cor. 7. 14. 1.Cor.7.14.

Argum. 3. The holy Ghoſt may be giuen without Baptiſme, ſo it be not contemned and neglected, when it may be had: therefore life eternall may be had without Baptiſme: for the holy Ghoſt is able without the Sacrament, to regenerate vs, and bring vs to eternall life.

The firſt is proued, Act. 10. 47. Who can forbid water, that theſe ſhould not be baptized, which haue receiued the holy Ghoſt, as well as we? They had the holy Ghoſt before and without Baptiſme, as Auguſtine ſaith, Cornelius audiens & credens, quod prædicauerat Petrus, ita mundatus eſt, vt ante viſibilem baptiſmum cum ſuis qui aderant acciperet donum Spiritus Sancti. Cornelius hearing and beleeuing that which Peter preached was ſo cleanſed, that before viſible baptiſme, he with his that were preſent receiued the gift of the holy Ghoſt. 33. q. in numer. tom. 4. Act.10.47.

Argum. 4. You your ſelues make two exceptions, of Martyrs, and them that doe penance, which may bee ſaued without Baptiſme: Ergo, Baptiſme is not ſimply neceſſarie. And if our Sauiour ſpeake of Baptiſme, Iohn 3. verſ. 5. as ye ſay he doth, there is no priuiledge for any, no not for Martyrs, for all muſt be borne of water and the ſpirit: that is, ſay you, baptized. Neither are your two exceptions generall enough: for the theefe vpon the croſſe was ſaued, and yet neither died a Martyr: for he himſelfe confeſſeth, that he was righteouſly puniſhed, Luk. 23. 41. neither did he any ſuch penance, or made any ſuch ſatisfaction, as you require. Luk.23.41.

Argum. 5. If all children dying without Baptiſme are damned; then it would follow, that an infinite number of children ſhould periſh without their fault, which were a moſt cruell and vncharitable thing to affirme.

Bellarmine anſwereth: that Gods iudgements are moſt iuſt, though they be ſecret, neither are children damned without their fault, becauſe they haue originall ſinne: but it is moſt certaine, that there is no remedie for children without Baptiſme, cap. 4.

Contra. Firſt, it is true, that Gods iudgements and decrees are moſt iuſt, though wee perceiue them not, and ſo are they full of mercy too: but it is not apparant out of Scripture, that God hath ſet downe any ſuch decree for the children of the faithfull vnbaptized, but the contrarie; as Mark. 10. 14. they brought little children vnto our Sauiour, who ſaid, of ſuch is the kingdome of heauen: he ſaith not of little ones baptized, but ſimply of little ones being the ſeede of the faithfull, as theſe were. Secondly, though children haue originall ſinne, yet ſeeing Baptiſme is appointed as a remedie againſt it, which they dying before, are depriued of without their fault; how then conſequently are they not condemned without their fault, ſeeing that which ſhould preſerue them from condemnation (as they ſay) is denied vnto them without their fault? Thirdly, that there is no remedie for children dying without Baptiſme, it is contrary to the decree of Innocent. 3. decret. Gregor. tit. 42. c. 3. Abſit vt vniuerſi paruuli pereant, &c. God forbid, that all children ſhould periſh, whereof ſo great a multitude daily dieth; but that the mercifull God, who would haue none to periſh, hath for them alſo prouided ſome remedie to ſaluation. Some alſo of your owne Doctors, as Caietanus, Gabriel, with others, do hold, that there is ſome remedie for children departing before Baptiſme. Mark.10.14.

Laſtly it was the hereſie of the Hierarchites, qui regnum cœlorum paruulos habere negant, which denied, that children did goe to heauen, decret. par. 2. cauſ. 24. qu. 3. c. 39. How farre now are the Papiſts from this hereſie, that exclude all children out of the kingdome of God, that are not baptized?

Bernard thus writeth of this matter: Nequaquam poſſum omnino deſperare ſalutem, ſi aquam non contemptus, ſed ſola prohibeat impoſſibilitas: Epiſtol. 77. I cannot altogether deſpayre of their ſaluation, that are not baptized, if it bee not done of contempt, but when as Baptiſme cannot poſſibly be had.

Againe, in the ſame place he ſaith: Vide etiam, ne forte ob hoc Saluator cum diceret: qui crediderit, & baptizatus fuerit, ſaluus erit, cautè & vigilanter non repetierit, qui baptizatus non fuerit, ſed tantum, qui non crediderit, condemnabitur: nimirum intuens ſolam interdum fidem ſufficere ad ſalutem, & ſine ipſa ſufficere nihil: See alſo if our Sauiour Chriſt for this cauſe, when he had ſaid, he that beleeueth and is baptized, ſhall be ſaued, did not of purpoſe in repeating the ſentence, omit to ſay, he that is not baptized; but onely, he that beleeueth not ſhall be damned: for he ſaw, that faith onely may ſuffice to ſaluation, but without faith nothing can ſuffice.

Clement. epiſtol. 4. Bonum eſt, & puritati conueniens etiam corpus aqua diluere; bonum dico, non quaſi principale illud, in quo mens purificatur, ſed quod ſit ſequela illius boni hoc, in quo caro diluitur: It is good and conuenient to waſh the body in water, good I ſay, but not that principall good, whereby the minde is purified, but a ſecond or a conſequent good thing to that, &c. There is then a more principall thing in Baptiſme then the waſhing of water, which is the ſpirituall grace: without this a man cannot be ſaued, without the other he may.

Richard Woodman holy Martyr thus witneſſeth; The Scripture ſaith, he that beleeueth and is baptized, ſhall be ſaued; and he that beleeueth not ſhall be damned: but no Scripture in all the new Teſtament ſaith, that he which is not baptized, ſhall be damned: neither dare I ſay ſo for all the goods Pag. 1809. 2. 33 vnder heauen: Fox pag. 1994.

Orat 3. in ſanctum lauacrum. 1 For further euidence, it appeareth, that in the Greeke Church their vſuall times of baptiſme were in the feaſts of the Paſch and Pentecoſt, as Nazianzene ſheweth: though hee reproue that cuſtome, and ſheweth, that euery time is fit for baptiſme: yet it is not like that ſuch a cuſtome would haue beene taken vp, if the want of baptiſme had beene in their opinion ſo dangerous to infants.

Lib. de præſcript. aduerſ. Iudæos. 2 Tertullian ſpeaking of circumciſion, ſaith, Si ſalutem circumciſio omni modo adfert, Moſes in filio ſuo non intermiſiſſet: If circumciſion had brought ſaluation, Moſes would not haue omitted it in his ſonne, &c. if ſaluation were not annexed to circumciſion, much leſſe is it to baptiſme: ſeeing in the olde Teſtament, they were more in bondage to ceremonies, then they are now in the new. Damianus a Goes de morib. Æthiop. The Aethiopike Church at this day holdeth infants dying without baptiſme, to bee ſemi Chriſtiani, halfe Chriſtians, and not to bee counted among Paganes and Infidels, as the Church of Rome holdeth: and they giue this reaſon, Quia filij ſunt ſacrati ſanguinus parentum: becauſe they are the ſonnes of the ſacred blood of their parents: that is, they are the children of the faithfull, and ſo within the couenant.

Harm. pag. 387. 3 Confeſſ. of Bohemia c. 11. If a man doe wholly and truly beleeue the Goſpell, he may by that faith be ſaued, although he haue not the vſe of the Sacraments: If the want of the Sacraments is no preiudice to them which are of yeeres, much leſſe is it to infants, that cannot offer themſelues vnto it, as the other may.

4 Some of the Romaniſts and Popiſh teachers, are verie pregnant witneſſes in this point, that infants dying without baptiſme, are not damned: ſome of whoſe reaſons it ſhall not bee amiſſe to ſet downe.

Ex Caſſandro fol. 123. vide D Mort. his Appeale p. 246 Gerſon, made a Sermon of this matter in the Councell of Conſtance, vrging this reaſon among the reſt from the power of God, Deum miſericordiam non alligaſſe ſacramentis: That God hath not tied his mercie ſo to the Sacraments, but that hee can ſanctifie children not yet borne out of the wombe: Gabriel reaſoneth from the mercie of God, Eſt à Dei miſericordia alienum: It is farre from Gods mercie, that ſo many infants ſhould periſh.

Caietane ſheweth as much by the circumciſion of the olde Teſtament, that children which died vncircumciſed, periſhed not, which hee proueth by Dauids childe, that died before it was circumciſed.

Ex citatione Caſſandri. fol. 138. Eliſias another Popiſh author, vrgeth the inconuenience of this opinion: that it would follow, if there were no way but damnation for infants dying vnbaptized, that when as the childe being yet in the wombe, is in danger to be ſuffocated, the mother ſhould rather ſuffer her wombe to be ripped, that the infant may be taken out, and be baptized, rather then euerlaſtingly to periſh.

AN APPENDIX, WHETHER THE WANT OF Baptiſme may be by any other meanes ſupplied.

The Papiſts.

4. Error. OVr aduerſaries make three kindes of Baptiſme, Baptiſmum fluminis, Baptiſmum ſanguinis, Baptiſmum flaminis: The Baptiſme of water, the Baptiſme of blood, which is Martyrdome, and the Baptiſme of the ſpirit, which is contrition and penance: By theſe two, the firſt, ſay they, may be ſupplied.

They affirme, that Martyrdome, and penance or contrition, doe by the very act or worke wrought remit ſinnes, and iuſtifie the workers, and not in reſpect of the faith onely, which is in Martyrs or penitent perſons, Bellarm. cap. 6. lib. 1. de Baptiſm.

Argum. 1. The Innocents, which were ſlaine by Herod, were ſaued onely by their martyrdome, they had neither faith, nor workes. So the thiefe vpon the Croſſe was not onely iuſtified by his faith, but by the act and worke of contrition.

Anſw. Firſt, it is not neceſſarie to hold all thoſe children to bee Martyrs, and ſo to be ſaued: for Macrobius writeth, that one of Herods ſonnes, which was nurſed in thoſe parts, was ſlaine among the reſt: the infants which were ſaued, were within the promiſe, and belonged to the couenant, and ſo could not be loſt: their ſaluation depended of their free election before God; it was not purchaſed by the very act of their dying.

Secondly, the theefe alſo vpon the croſſe was iuſtified by his faith and beleefe in Chriſt. And therefore Auguſtine doth chiefly commend his faith: Tunc fides eius de ligno floruit, quando diſcipulorum marcuit: Then his faith did as it were bud and flouriſh out of the tree of the croſſe, when the faith of the diſciples withered.

*Argum.*2. Many Confeſſors haue greater charitie, then Martyrs, and yet they had not remiſſion of al their ſins, as Martyrs haue. And a man being not yet iuſt or righteous, yet chuſeth rather to die, then denie Chriſt; this man cannot deſerue any thing, being not iuſtified, and therefore it is his martyrdome, which by the very act wrought, doth purchaſe forgiuenes of ſinne, Bellar. rat. 2. & 5.

Anſw. Firſt, that Confeſſors may haue greater charitie, then Martyrs, it is contrarie to the ſaying of our Sauiour, Ioh. 15. No man hath greater loue then this, to giue his life for his friends. Secondly, Confeſſors dying in the faith of Chriſt, doe finde forgiuenes of ſinnes as well as Martyrs: as Reuelat. 14.13. Bleſſed are they which die in the Lord, not onely they which die for the Lord, but in the Lord, that is in the faith of Ieſus. Thirdly, they which giue their liues for Chriſt, being not iuſt before, are either in that inſtant conuerted, as the theefe vpon the croſſe, and ſo they are ſaued by their faith: or elſe if they die rather of manlines and ſtomacke, then of faith, Saint Paul in this caſe ſaith, that dying without loue, the fruite of faith, their death doth not profit them, 1. Corinth. 13.3.

John 15.13.

Reuel. 14.13.

1. Cor. 13.3.

The Proteſtants.

NEither the outward worke of martyrdome nor contrition do iuſtifie, or giue remiſſion of ſinnes: but the faith only of Martyrs and penitent perſons, whereby they apprehend Chriſt.

*Argum.*1. Saint Paul ſaith, 1. Cor. 13.3. That if a man giue his bodie to be burned, and haue no loue, it profiteth not: Ergo, it is not the outward act of martyrdome, but an effectuall and liuely faith working by loue, which pleaſeth God.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that this place proueth not, that charitie of neceſſitie muſt goe before martyrdome, but that there muſt bee charitie in martyrdome, by the force whereof there is charitie infuſed into the Martyrs heart; ſo that it is not poſſible hee ſhould die without charitie. Secondly, it may be ſaid as well of Baptiſme, as of Martyrdome, that it ſaueth not without charitie, and yet it giueth, or conferreth grace.

Anſw. Firſt, neither doe wee hold it neceſſarie, that faith and charitie ſhould alwaies goe before martyrdome in time: for faith may bee wrought in an inſtant, as in the theefe vpon the croſſe; but that faith and charitie doth ſanctifie the death of the Martyr, which is proued by this place. Secondly, charitie is not infuſed or effected by martyrdome, for then martyrdome ſhould alwaies bring forth this effect; and then were the Apoſtles ſpeech needleſſe, and his ſuppoſition falſe, if a man giue his body to be burned, and haue no loue, &c. for by their ſaying the body cannot bee giuen to be burned without loue, if loue bee the effect of martyrdome: But contrariwiſe martyrdome is the effect and fruite of faith, and charitie; as Rom. 5.8. Chriſts loue is herein commended, that he died for vs: his loue appeareth by the fruites and effects, namely his dying for vs. Thirdly, neither doth Baptiſme conferre grace, but is a ſeale only of the righteouſneſſe of faith: neither is it true, that it profiteth not without faith, ſeeing infants haue neither faith nor charitie, to whom Baptiſme is profitable by the couenant of grace: Wherefore the inſtance of Baptiſme is not herein like to the other; and yet in thoſe that are of yeeres, and capable of faith, neither Baptiſme, or Martyrdome is auaileable without faith.

*Argum.*2. Neither is the bare worke of ſorrow and contrition in it ſelfe acceptable to God: for there is a worldly repentance that cauſeth death; there is a godly repentance not to bee repented of, which worketh in vs care, zeale, feare, deſire, which are the fruites of faith, 2. Cor. 7.10.11. Ergo, it is faith only that maketh all our workes to be accepted before God: for without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him, Heb. 11.6.

2. Cor. 7.10.

1 Tertullian ſaith, Who deſireth not to ſuffer, vt totam Dei gratiam redimat, vt omnem veniam ab eo compenſatione ſanguinis ſui expediat, to purchaſe the whole grace and fauour of God, and to obtaine all pardon by the compenſation of his blood, &c. His meaning is not, that the ſhedding of blood doth merit remiſſion of ſinnes, but that God in his mercie crowneth martyrdome with forgiueneſſe: as it followeth in the ſame place, omnia huic operi delicta donantur: all ſins are pardoned to this worke, &c. Now where pardon and forgiuenes is, there is a worke of mercie, not a merit of worke.

In Apologet. in fine.

2 Chryſoſtome, as he is alleaged by Ieremie the Patriarke, vpon theſe words, Pſal. 130. with thee is mercie, &c. thus writeth, Hoc eſt, non in noſtris recte factis, ſed in tua bonitate ſitum eſt, vt tantam damnationem effugiamus: It lieth not in our well done deedes, but in thy goodneſſe, that wee eſcape ſo great damnation, &c. then the act of Martyrdome doth not by it owne merit deliuer from damnation. Damaſcene calleth martyrdome venerable and bleſſed, becauſe it is not defiled with ſecond (and ſucceeding) ſinnes, &c. not for the meriting of pardon of ſinnes paſt, but for the preuenting of ſinnes to come, doth he count martyrdome happie.

The Papiſts.

5.Error. 2. Martyrdome and contrition or conuerſion of the heart vnto God, though they bee no Sacraments, yet may ſupplie the lacke of Baptiſme, Bellarm.ibid.

*Argum.*1. Martyrdome in the Scriptures is rightly called a Baptiſme: as Chriſt ſpeaking of his death, ſaith, I muſt be baptized with a baptiſme, Luke 12.50. And therefore it may fitly ſtand in ſtead of Baptiſme. Luke 12. 0.

Anſw. If euery thing, that hath the name of Baptiſme, may bee vſed in place thereof; then adde vnto your number of ſuch deuiſed ſupplies, the Phariſaicall waſhing of cups, for they are called Baptiſmata calicum, the Baptiſmes, or clenſings of cups, Mark.7.4. Mark.7.4.

*Argum.*2. Martyrdome hath the ſame effects that Baptiſme hath, namely the conforming of vs to Chriſts paſſion, more liuely then in Baptiſme; for the conformation in Baptiſme is but ſacramentall, the other reall. Likewiſe it remitteth both ſinne and the puniſhment thereof, as Baptiſme doth; Ergo, it is a kinde of Baptiſme.

Anſw. Firſt, that the want of Baptiſme may by other meanes be recompenſed, as by Martyrdome, by faith in Chriſt, by the deſire and earneſt purpoſe of the heart, we denie not; yet we hold not any of theſe to be as Baptiſme. Secondly, the conforming of vs only to Chriſts death and ſufferings, maketh not Baptiſme; for then we ſhall haue ſo many Baptiſmes as ſufferings, becauſe therein wee alſo are made partakers of Chriſts ſufferings, 1.Pet.4.13. not only when we die for Chriſt, but if wee bee but railed vpon. 1.Pet.4.13. And againe, Baptiſme doth graffe vs not only into the ſimilitude of Chriſts death, but of his reſurrection alſo, Rom.6.5. which martyrdome doth not. Rom.6.5. And yet further, we are two waies conformed to Chriſts death, by imitation, as in dying for Chriſt; by application, as when the righteouſnes of Chriſt and the merits of his death, are ſealed vnto vs in the Sacraments: the firſt conformation of vs is in martyrdome; the ſecond is not, which is ſacramentall. Thirdly, neither Baptiſme, nor Martyrdome doe actually remit ſinne, but declare the ſame to be remitted, Baptiſme as a ſeale, Martyrdome as an effect and conſequent of faith and charitie: ſo that herein alſo they are vnlike.

The Proteſtants.

WE neede not any ſuch ſupplies to make good the want of Baptiſme, neither is it ſafe ſo to doe.

1 It is great preſumption and boldnes, without warrant of Gods word, to giue the effect and bleſſing, which God hath annexed to the Sacraments, to any other externall worke: for what is this elſe, but to inſtitute other Sacraments, then Chriſt left? And ſhall wee not thinke, that God by his ſpirit can better ſupply the loſſe and the want of the Sacraments, then we by our owne inuentions can helpe our ſelues? And whereas Bellarmine ſaith, that they haue the like inſtitution of Chriſt for Martyrdome, as for Baptiſme; when he can ſhew it out of the Scriptures, wee will beleeue him: Chriſt hath inſtituted Martyrdome, to ſhew our obedience, but not to bee a ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, whereunto he hath appointed Baptiſme.

2 Concerning contrition of the heart, if you vnderſtand by it true repentance, and withall a vow and true deſire to receiue the Sacrament of Baptiſme, which cannot be obtained becauſe of ſome remedileſſe neceſſitie; then in ſuch a caſe it ſtandeth as auaileable, as if a man had been actually baptized: for thus the Rhemiſts expound themſelues, *annot Ioh.*3.2. I pray you what greater neceſſitie is there now of Baptiſme, then of the other Sacraments? For this is true, and wee willingly grant: that euery man that ſhall be ſaued, being of yeeres of diſcretion, muſt either receiue the Sacraments, or haue a deſire vnto them: for the neglect and contempt of the Sacraments without repentance is a ſin damnable. And thus you ouerthrow your ſelues, making Baptiſme neceſſarie without neceſſitie.

Catecheſ.4.de ſpirit.ſanct. μηδὲ τὸ τυχὸν. 3 Cyrill of Ieruſalem ſaith: that of the holy Sacraments of faith, not the leaſt thing, ſhould be deliuered without the diuine Scriptures: but to make a ſupplie of Sacraments, is not the leaſt thing: therefore it is fit that Scripture ſhould be ſhewed for their ſupplies of the Sacraments. Damaſcene maketh 8. kind of baptiſmes: 1. Of the flood: 2. Of the red Sea & clowd: 3. The legall baptiſmes and waſhings: 4. Iohns baptiſme: 5. Chriſts baptiſme: 6. The Baptiſme of repentance and teares: 7. Of Martyrdome: 8. And the baptiſme of fire in the laſt iudgement, &c. Lib.de fid.c 4. If then that which is called Baptiſme, as Bellarmine reaſoned before, be a ſupplie of Baptiſme, then we ſhall not haue one or two ſupplies of Baptiſme, but many.

Harm ſect.12. pag 378. Second confeſſion of Heluetia, chap.19. The author and inſtitutor of Sacraments is not any man, but God alone; for men can by no meanes ordaine Sacraments, becauſe they belong to the worſhip of God, and it is not for man to preſcribe a ſeruice of God, but to embrace and retaine that which is taught vnto him by the Lord,&c. The ſame may be ſaid of the ſupplies of Sacraments.

3 Auguſtine admitteth none of theſe ſupplies, but only Martyrdome: Nemo ſit membrum Chriſti, niſi aut baptiſmate Chriſti, aut morte pro Chriſto: No man is made the member of Chriſt, but either by the baptiſme of Chriſt, or in dying for Chriſt. Heere Auguſtine maketh but one ſupplie of Baptiſme, they make two. When men follow their owne inuentions, there can bee no agreement. De animę origin.lib.1.cap.9

Bernard ſpeaketh fully for vs: Si martyrium vicem baptiſmi poſſit implere, quod non facit pœna, ſed ipſa fides, quod dare alteri valet, ſola non poterit obtinere: aquè enim magnam fortaſſis deus in corde cuiuſpiam in pace morientis inſpicit fidem, martyrio quidem non interrogatam, ſed martyrio idoneam: If martyrdome may ſupply the roome of Baptiſme, which not the paine maketh, but faith, how commeth it to paſſe, that it ſelfe cannot obtaine that, which it giueth to another? for God may find as great faith in a man that dieth in peace, who is not called to martyrdome, yet fit to be a Martyr: *Epiſt.*77. His reaſon is this, that martyrdome of it ſelfe cannot ſtand for Baptiſme; ſeeing of it ſelfe it is nothing: but faith both without baptiſme and martyrdome is auailable.

4 Their owne decrees thus teſtifie, decret.p.3.diſtinct.4.c.34. Quibus rebus oſtenditur,&c. whereby it is euident, that the Sacrament of Baptiſme is one thing, the conuerſion of the heart another, &c. but they doe both tend to mans ſaluation: there is not then one and the ſame effect of both.

Clictoueus ſaith, that theſe two may be iterated, baptiſme of the ſpirit and of blood; for one may often ſhed his blood for the faith, but baptiſme cannot be iterated, &c. therefore hence it will follow, that it cannot fitly by the other be ſupplied. Annot.in lib 4 Damaſc.c.5.initio.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, WHETHER women and Lay-men ought to baptize.

The Papiſts.

THey hold, that not only Lay-men, but Pagans, that are not baptized themſelues; yea and women alſo, may be miniſters of Baptiſme, in a caſe of neceſſitie, Bellarmine cap.7. 6.Error.

Argum. Exod.4. Zipporah circumciſed her ſonne, and the Lord was pleaſed therewith, and went away from Moſes, whom he came againſt him to haue ſlaine him: Ergo, women may as well now miniſter Baptiſme.

Anſw. Firſt, there is not the like ſtrict neceſſitie of Baptiſme, as there was then of Circumciſion: for if euery man-child were not circumciſed the eight day, the Lord threatned to cut him off from among the people, Geneſ.17.14. But Baptiſme is not tied or limited to any ſuch time or number of daies. Geneſ.17.14. Secondly, there was great neceſſitie, which enforced Zipporah to circumciſe her child: for they had neglected the time, and paſſed the ſtint of daies: wherefore the Lord ſtrooke Moſes with ſickneſſe; and being not able himſelfe to performe that dutie, his wife in great haſte taketh the child and cutteth him, to ſaue her husbands life: but ſhe in great indignation caſt away the fore-skin from her, knowing that ſhe was conſtrained to commit an vnwomanly act. There cannot bee any ſuch neceſſitie of Baptiſme, as there was then of Circumciſion; which was to bee done within a certaine compaſſe of daies. Thirdly, you may as well prooue by this example, that a woman may baptize, the Biſhop, Prieſt, or Deacon ſtanding by, (which notwithſtanding you hold vtterly vnlawfull) as that it is lawfull for her to baptize: for Zipporah did it in the preſence of Moſes.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that God was well pleaſed with Zipporahs act, in that Moſes preſently therupon recouered, and the Angell left him: Ergo, it was lawfully done.

Anſw. Firſt, there is great difference betweene the neceſſitie of Circumciſion then, and Baptiſme now: for then the child muſt not paſſe eight daies vncircumciſed: and therefore Zipporahs doing herein was, becauſe of the imminent danger and preſent neceſſitie, more tolerable. Secondly, in that God tooke off his hand from Moſes, it appeareth that God accepted of the act done; but it followeth not, that he approoued the manner of the doing: As it cannot bee gathered, that becauſe the plague ceaſed among the Philiſtines, 1.Sam.6. after they had ſent home the Arke with a gift, that this their offering was perfectly acceptable before God: or that the Samaritanes who ſerued God and their Idols together, did therefore pleaſe God, becauſe they were deliuered from the Lions, 2.King.17. But God in mercie accepted this maimed ſeruice, rather then none at all: So Zipporahs act was rather allowed, then that it ſhould haue been altogether left vndone.

Argum.2. Philip being but a Deacon baptized, Act.8. and Ananias a meere Lay-man baptized Paul, Act.9. Therefore other beſide Miniſters may baptize, Bellarm.cap.7. Acts 8.12. Acts 9.18.

Anſw. Firſt, Philip, though at the firſt a Deacon, yet afterward was called to bee an Euangeliſt, Act.21.8. and ſo admitted both to preach and baptize. Acts 21.8. Secondly, it is too boldly affirmed that Ananias was but a Lay-man: though the Scripture make no mention of his calling by the Apoſtles: yet was it ſufficient that hee was called of God extraordinarily to baptize Paul, as Paul was ſo called to be an Apoſtle. It followeth no more that he was a lay man, becauſe he was not called by the Apoſtles, then that Paul was ſo for the ſame cauſe.

The Proteſtants.

Neither Lay-men, of what calling ſoeuer, nor yet Midwiues,or any other women,ought to bee ſuffered in a well reformed Church to baptize infants : neither are they authorized ſo to doe amongſt vs.

Matth.28.19.

*Argum.*1. The commiſſion and charge to baptize, was giuen onely by our Sauiour Chriſt to his Apoſtles,and all lawfull Miniſters their ſucceſſors,Matth.28.19. Ergo, Lay-men and women, in baptizing,goe beyond the commiſſion of Chriſt.

Bellarmine anſwereth,that when Chriſt gaue this commiſſion, there were many preſent beſide the Apoſtles.

Contra. We denie not, but that many beſide might be preſent, but hee ſpake onely to his eleuen diſciples, who are immediatly named before verſ.17. vnleſſe you will ſay, that hee made all the reſt (thoſe fiue hundred whom S.Paul ſpeaketh of) Apoſtles alſo : for he ſendeth them into all the world, Mark.16.14.

1.Cor 14.35.

*Argum.*2. The preaching of the Word, and adminiſtration of the Sacraments,are and ought alwaies to be ioyned together. And the care and charge of both is committed to Paſtors and Miniſters lawfully ordained : Goe, ſaith our Sauiour,and teach all nations,baptizing them,Matth.28.19. But it is not lawfull for women to preach the word, 1.Cor.14.verſ.35. *Ergo,*not to baptize.

Bellarmine alſo would thus returne the argument : that as in caſe of neceſſitie it is lawfull both for lay-men and women to teach,as Aquila and Priſcilla inſtructed *Apollos,*Act.18.ſo may they alſo in caſe of neceſſitie baptize.

*Contra.*1. Priuately to teach and inſtruct, is a common dutie of all Chriſtians,and not incident onely to the Miniſterie : ſo euery houſeholder may teach his familie, the mother the children ; this dutie lay-men and women may performe : But they are not to meddle with publike teaching, nor conſequently with the Sacraments,which though they be in priuate places miniſtred,yet are publike actions : Aquila and Priſcilla publikely taught not,but priuately expounded to Apollos the way of God. The like ſtorie hath *Theodoret,lib.*3.*c.*14.how that a heathen Prieſts ſonne vnder Iulian the apoſtata, was conuerted by a woman : and it was the office of the widowes of the Church priuately to prepare, and inſtruct ſuch of their owne ſexe,as were to bee baptized, to teach them how to anſwere, when they came to Baptiſme,as may appeare,*Carthag.ſynod.*4.*can.*12. but they were neuer admitted to any publike office in the Church. Secondly,it followeth not,though it be granted, that vpon an extraordinarie occaſion, as in the conuerſion of ſome Countrie (as the people Iberi were conuerted, by the preaching of a woman) where there is no ſet Miniſterie,lay-men and women may baptize,that therefore it is lawfull for them to doe it in a ſetled Church,and where there is an ordinarie calling.

*Argum.*3. If it be lawfull for ſuch to baptize, it is onely in the time of neceſſitie : but there is no ſuch neceſſitie,as we haue ſhewed,of Baptiſme : Ergo, it is not at all lawfull for them.

Auguſtines iudgement is this : If a Lay-man doe giue Baptiſme : Neſcio an piè quis dixerit eſſe repetendum : I cannot tell whether any man may ſafely or godly ſay,that it is to be iterated or repeated, &c.He doth not allow Lay-men to baptize:but is of opinion,that they are not to be baptized againe, that receiue baptiſme at their hands. Yet he ſpeaketh vncertainly, (I cannot tell ſaith he) and ſo wee will conclude with Auguſtine : Si Laicus baptiſmum dederit,nulla cogente neceſſitate, alieni muneris vſurpatio eſt : If a Lay-man doe baptize,where there is no neceſſitie,it is an vſurping of another mans office. But there is no ſuch neceſſitie to cauſe him ſo to doe : Ergo. This teſtimonie of Auguſtine is ratified,*decret.part.*2.*cauſ.*1.*queſt.*1.*c.*87.

Lib.2.cont. Parmen.c.13.

*Concil.Carthag.*4 *can.*99. *Mulier quamuis ſancta & docta viros in conuentu docere non præſumat: can.*100. Mulier baptizare non præſumat : Let not a woman, though neuer ſo holie or learned, preſume to teach men in an aſſemblie : Let not a woman preſume to baptize ; this Canon is ratified, *diſt.*4.*c.*21.

*Cod.lib.*2.*tit.*13.*leg.*4. Per mulieres aliena negotia agi non poſſunt : Buſineſſe not belonging to women,can not be done by them : but to baptize,is not appertaining to women. *Leg.*18. Alienam ſuſcipere defenſionem, virile eſt officium, & vltra ſexum muliebrem eſſe conſtat : To take the defence of an other, is a mans office,and beyond the ſexe of women ; ſo may it be ſaid much more of Baptiſme,that it exceedeth their ſexe : *tit.*56 *leg.*6. Mulier non poteſt eſſe arbiter : A woman cannot be a Iudge,that is,in her owne perſon to ſit in iudgement,and to receiue the triall of cauſes ; how much leſſe can a woman haue the office of a Miniſter to baptize : for the chiefe ciuill authoritie may reſt in a woman, though the execution thereof be put ouer to others ; but women can neither haue authoritie,nor execution to baptize.

See alſo their owne Canons,*Decret.part.*3,*diſtinct.*2.*c.*29. Ne Preſbyteri laico vel fœmina corpus Domini tradant deferendum ægrotis : That Prieſts deliuer not the bodie of the Lord to a lay-man or woman to be carried to the ſicke, &c. If women and lay-men cannot conſecrate the one Sacrament, neither can they miniſter the other, for they are both of equall dignitie, and of the like neceſſitie.

*Decret.Greg.lib.*5.*tit.*7.*c.*14. *Gregor.*9. Interdicas laicis,cuiuſcunque ordinis cenſeantur, vſurpare officium prædicandi : Forbid lay-men,of what degree ſoeuer,to vſurpe the office of preaching : If it be not lawfull for them to preach,much leſſe to baptize.

And concerning the baptiſme of Pagans it is decreed thus by Gregor.2.decret.par.3.diſt.4.c.52. Quos à Paganis baptizatos aſſeruiſti, denuo baptizes: Baptize them againe in the name of the Trinitie, whom thou affirmeſt to haue been baptized by the Pagans: Ergo, the baptiſme of Pagans is no baptiſme, for then it ſhould not be iterated, or repeated.

And for further euidence: 1. Tertullian ſheweth what was the vſe of the Africane Church in his time: Non permittitur mulieri in eccleſia loqui ſed nec docere, nec tingere, &c. It is not permitted to a woman to ſpeake in the Church, nor teach, nor baptize, &c.

In the Aethiopike Church at this day, they baptize not till the infant, if it be a male, be fortie daies old, the female threeſcore: whereby it appeareth that as they hold no neceſſitie of baptiſme, ſo they allow not any to baptize; which confuſed libertie the opinion of neceſſitie onely hath brought into the Romane Church.

2 Ieremie Patriarke affirmeth thoſe to be in error, which hold there is no difference, whether theſe ſacred myſteries be exerciſed by thoſe, qui ex laicis ad eam rem ordinatis deliguntur tantum, which are choſen out of lay-men appointed to that end, or by thoſe which are of the Prieſts conſecrated thereunto, &c. But the Muſcouite Church, which followeth the Greekes, hold none fit to be a Miniſter of Baptiſme, but a Prieſt, quacunque neceſſitas inciderit, what neceſſitie ſoeuer doe fall out, &c.

THE FIFTH QVESTION, OF SVCH AS are to be admitted to Baptiſme.

Of the baptiſme of Infants. Part.1.

THat infants are to be baptized, it is fully agreed and concluded betweene vs. Which point wee doe ſtrongly maintaine by the Scriptures againſt the Anabaptiſts of our age. But herein we diſſent from our aduerſaries.

The Papiſts.

1. THey affirme, that the baptiſme of children and infants is grounded vpon tradition, and not vpon Scripture, Bellarm.lib.4.de verbo dei, cap.9.

7.Error.

The Proteſtants.

IT were very hard, if wee had no more certaine ground for the baptizing of infants, then tradition, which is but a feeble weapon to fight againſt heretikes withall: we haue manifeſt proofes out of the Scripture for it.

Firſt, they belong vnto the couenant: Geneſ.17. I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeede: Ergo, they haue right to the ſigne of the couenant.

Geneſ.17.7.

Secondly, they are called holy, which are borne of faithfull parents, 1.Cor.7.14. Ergo, are not to be denied baptiſme.

1.Cor.7.14.

Thirdly, they are redeemed by the blood of Chriſt, who died for all the children of God, Ioh.11.52. To them belongeth the kingdome of God, Mark.10.14. Ergo, alſo Baptiſme, which is a pledge of remiſſion of ſinnes and eternall life.

John 11 52.
Mark.10.14.

Fourthly, it is alſo proued by the practiſe of the Apoſtles, who baptized whole families, with all that thereunto belonged, Act.16.33. Theſe with other effectuall reaſons to the ſame purpoſe ſee more at large, *Epiſtol.Iohan.Philpot.martyr.pag.*1840.& 41.

Act.16.

Further, Auguſtine alſo proueth it out of Scripture, by comparing our Baptiſme with the Circumciſion of the Iewes: Veraciter conijcere poſſumus, quid valeat in paruulis baptiſmi ſacramentum, ex circumciſione carnis, quam prior populus accepit: How auaileable Baptiſme is in little ones, we may geſſe by the circumciſion, which the former people in the law receiued: Ergo, not onely by tradition, but chiefly by Scripture the lawfulnes of childrens Baptiſme is confirmed.

De Baptiſ. contr. Donatiſt.lib.4.cap. 24.

Auguſtine alſo vrgeth theſe places of Scripture, Suffer little children to come vnto me, that is, nolite eos credere me non indigere, &c. Doe not thinke that they ſtand not in need of me. And againe, Chriſt came to ſaue that which was loſt: ſeeing then children are loſt in Adam, they muſt come vnto Chriſt to be ſaued.

Lib.5.cont. Pelagian. hypognoſtic.

2 Gregorie Nazianzene proueth the baptiſme of infants, by circumciſion alſo: Idque nobis deſignat poſt octauum diem circumciſio illa: and this that circumciſion after the eighth day ſignifieth, &c.

So alſo Innocentius the 3. one of their moſt learned Popes, proueth the baptiſme of children by Scripture, Decret.Greg.lib.3.tit.42.c.3. Cùm ergò circumciſio tam adultis,quàm paruulis ex præcepto Domini,&c. Seeing that Circumciſion by the commandement of God, was conferred both vpon children,and the elder ſort; Baptiſme alſo,which ſucceedeth in the place thereof,and is more general both to men and women,muſt likewiſe be conferred to both.

The Papiſts.

8.Error. 2. Baptiſme,they ſay, giueth grace and faith to the infant that had none before,Rhemiſt.Galat.3. ſect.6. This then is their opinion,that infants, though actually and fully they haue not faith,as other haue,yet there is a certaine habite of faith and hope infuſed into them in Baptiſme; ſo that partly they doe beleeue of themſelues, and partly by the faith of others, namely of them that bring them to Baptiſme,Bellarm.lib.1.de baptiſm.cap.11.

Heb.11.6. Rom.3.28. Epheſ.3.1. Argum. Without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God,Heb.11.6. Rom.3.28. We hold that a man is iuſtified by faith: Ergo, children, if they haue no faith, are neither iuſtified, neither yet doe pleaſe God: Epheſ.3.1.Chriſt dwelleth in our hearts by faith: but he dwelleth in children; Ergo, they haue faith.Bellarm.

Anſw. Firſt,theſe places doe as well proue that children haue an abſolute,perfect,and actual faith: (for it is a perfect faith that iuſtifieth vs,and maketh vs acceptable to God) which I am ſure our aduerſaries will not yeeld vnto. Secondly, the iuſtification and ſaluation of children dependeth of the Rom.9.11. free election of God,Rom.9.11. that the purpoſe of God might remaine according to election, ſaith the Apoſtle: And that which faith worketh in thoſe that are of vnderſtanding, the ſpirit of God is able to effect in infants,by ſome ſecret way,beſt knowne to himſelfe.

Thirdly,it is manifeſt,that theſe places are to be vnderſtood of thoſe that are of yeeres,and capeable of faith, as it followeth, Epheſ.3.18. Epheſ.3.18. That you may be able to comprehend with all Saints,&c. Faith then is of them,that are able to comprehend; but this comprehenſion,capacitie and vnderſtanding is not in children: Thus alſo one of your principall pillars Innocent.3. vnderſtandeth theſe and the like places,as that, He that beleeueth,and is baptized, ſhall be ſaued: Hæc tota authoritas de adultis: all theſe authorities muſt bee vnderſtood of thoſe that are of yeeres, Decret.Greg.lib.3.tit.42.c.3. Fourthly, Chriſt dwelleth in infants by his holy ſpirit, though they haue no faith: ſo then the argument followeth not,Chriſt dwelleth in them: Ergo, they haue faith; for in the kingdome of heauen faith ſhall ceaſe,yet then ſhall we be the habitation of Gods ſpirit.

Bernard alſo thus anſwereth this obiection: Sine fide impoſſibile eſt placere Deo,& ſine fide non ſunt, qui in fidei teſtimonium baptiſmi gratiam perceperunt: Without faith indeed it is impoſſible to pleaſe God: and they are not altogether without faith, which in teſtimonie of their faith, haue receiued the grace of Baptiſme: in Cantic.ſerm.66. Children then haue no otherwiſe faith, then as they haue receiued Baptiſme the ſigne and Sacrament of faith.

The Proteſtants.

That infants neither haue faith in themſelues,nor yet are profited or furthered to their ſaluation by the faith of others,it is thus proued.

Rom.10.17. Argum.1. S.Paul ſaith, Faith commeth by hearing, and hearing by the word of God,Rom.10.17. But infants can neither heare nor vnderſtand the word of God: Ergo, no faith is wrought in them.

Galath.5.6. Argum.2. There is no habituall or potentiall faith that pleaſeth God: but the iuſtifying faith is alwaies actuall,working by loue,Galath.5.6. Ergo, children haue either no faith, or it muſt needs be an actuall or working faith.

Argum.3. Infants are not iuſtified,nor relieued or helped forward towards their ſaluation by the faith of their parents, or Godfathers, when they are baptized: for the Scripture ſaith, The iuſt ſhall Rom.1.17. liue by faith,Rom.1.17.that is,by his owne faith,not the faith of another.

Bellarmine anſwereth,that they doe not affirme,that children are iuſtified,or doe liue by the faith of their Parents, and of others, but that their faith is profitable to the Infants, being by this meanes brought vnto Baptiſme,and becauſe they do profeſſe their faith in Baptiſme by the mouth of others, Bellarm.cap.11.propoſ.5.

Contra. Firſt, that it is a benefit to be borne of faithfull parents, who are carefull to bring their infants to be baptized, and to ſee them well brought vp, wee graunt: but what is this to the ſtate of infants before God? Secondly,the confeſſion of their faith by others is profitable, to put them afterward in remembrance of their ſolemne promiſe made in Baptiſme; but before God,they are no more helped,by the confeſſion of anothers mouth, then by the beleefe of anothers heart: wherefore it is not either the faith of the parents,or the confeſſion of the witneſſes, that ſupplieth the lack of both in infants, but the grace of God inwardly working, as Auguſtine well ſaith,as it is alleaged in the Decrees; Decret.par.3.diſtinct.4.c.34. Gratia omnipotentis implere credenda eſt,&c. The grace of the Almightie doth ſupplie that,which they, by the infirmitie of age, can neither beleeue with the heart to righteouſneſſe,nor confeſſe with the mouth to ſaluation.

Auguſtine denieth that children are illuminate in their mindes, when they are baptized: Si illuminati eſſent, ſaltem ipſum baptiſmum [illegible] læti ſuſciperent; cum videmus eos cum magnis fletibus reluctari: If they were illuminate, they would ioyfully receiue Baptiſme, which we ſee them to ſtriue againſt with great crying. And why ſhould the Apoſtle ſay, Be ye not children in vnderſtanding, 1. Cor. 14. 20. if ſo be their mindes were illuminate? Wherefore that ſaying in the Goſpell, ſaith hee, This is the light that lighteth euery one that commeth into the world, Iohn 1. 9. whereby they would proue, that children doe receiue light at their very firſt comming into the world, is thus to be vnderſtoode, Quia nullus hominum illuminatur, niſi lumine illo veritatis: Because no man is lightened, but onely by that light. What now is become of that lumen fidei, the light of faith, which you ſay is infuſed into children in Baptiſme?

How children are to bee counted beleeuers, Maſter Philpot holy martyr doth thus teſtifie: That children are accounted of Chriſt in the Goſpell among the number of ſuch as beleeue, it appeareth by theſe words: Hee that offendeth one of theſe litile babes, which beleeue in me, &c. Matth. 18. where plainly Chriſt calleth ſuch, as be not able to confeſſe their faith, beleeuers, becauſe of his meere grace he reputeth them for beleeuers: pag. 1841. Not that they haue any beliefe in themſelues, but they are ſo reputed by grace: God doth of his meere mercie as well accept of them through grace in Chriſt, as if actually they did beleeue.

Decret. part. 3. diſtinct. 4. c. 76. Infans licet fidei non habeat affectum, reſpondetur fidem habere ob fidei ſacramentum: The Infant although he haue not faith in his affection, is ſaid to haue faith, becauſe he hath the Sacrament of faith, c. 129. Fidem nondum habet in cogitatione, The Infant hath not faith in his minde or cogitation, &c. as before he ſaith, they haue not faith in affection, ſo neither in their cogitation, that is, they haue neither the act, nor habite of faith: contrarie to the decree of the Tridentine Councell. ſeſſ. 6. c. 17. In Baptiſmo fidem infundi, et menti inhærere: That faith is infuſed in Baptiſme, and fixed in the minde of infants.

Neither are children helped by their Godfathers faith, for what if they bee all vnbeleeuers, by this reaſon ſuch children ſhould be baptized in no faith: Richard Woodman Martyr, pag. 1995.

Theſe reaſons alſo to the ſame effect, may bee gathered out of their owne decrees: as firſt, decret. part. 2. cauſ. 1. qu. 4. c. 3. Ne parentum illos error impediat, &c. The error of the parents being heretikes doth not hurt or hinder the children. If the error of the parents hinder not, then their faith profiteth not. Secondly, decret. p. 3. diſtinct. 4. c. 114. It is decreed, that the Infant is not baptized, being in the mothers wombe, the mother being at that inſtant baptized. If the mothers faith doth not profite the childe, being not yet Anima ſeparatim viuens: A ſoule liuing by it ſelfe, while it is in the wombe, as it is ibid. ca. 129. much leſſe when the childe is now borne, and made a liuing ſoule by it ſelfe.

1 Chryſoſtome ſaith: Per fidem eſt cognitio Dei, et ſine fide cognoſci nequit: By faith commeth the knowledge of God, and without faith he cannot be knowne. And againe, this is faith, quando mentem ad dignitatem eius, qui promiſit, intendimus, When we reare vp our minde to the worthineſſe of him that hath promiſed: but in infants there is no intention of the minde or eleuation thereof vnto God, nor knowledge of him: therefore in them we cannot ſay there is faith.

2 Tertullian ſpeaking of the infants of the heathen and vnbeleeuers, ſaith, Fiant Chriſtiani, cum Chriſtum noſſe potuerint: Let them be made Chriſtians, (that is by baptiſme) when they are able to know Chriſt: and he is ſo farre from thinking infants to be helped by the faith of others: that hee affirmeth them to be in danger rather, which vndertake for the infant: Quid neceſſe eſt ſponſores periculo ingeri qui et ipſi per mortalitatem deſtituere promiſſiones ſuas poſſunt, et prouentu malæ indolis falli: There is no neceſſitie that the vndertakers ſhould offer themſelues to danger, who both by reaſon of their mortality, cannot performe their promiſes, and are often deceiued, by the progreſſe of their euill diſpoſition, &c.

4 See their owne decrees before alleaged.

Yet, although we denie that infants are profited to ſaluation by anothers faith: we grant notwithſtanding that ſome profite may come vnto one by anothers faith: as firſt, this benefite infants haue, borne of faithfull parents, and hauing other faithfull friends, that they are offered to baptiſme, and made partakers of ſo heauenly a myſterie: as Iuſtinus Martyr ſaith: That infants (are made worthie of the benefites of baptiſme) by the faith of them which offer them to baptiſme: The offerers faith is a meanes to bring them to baptiſme, and being baptized, they enioy the benefite of baptiſme: And ſo it is true, that for the obtaining of temporall bleſſings the faith of others may be auaileable, as Cyrillus giueth inſtance of the man ſicke of the palſey, who was brought to Chriſt by others, whoſe faith Chriſt ſeeing, healed him of the palſey: but toward the obtaining of euerlaſting ſaluation, euery one muſt be furthered by his owne faith: and yet alſo we grant, that ones faith may profite another to ſaluation, Per modum impetrationis, By way of entreatie and ſupplication, not applicationis, by way of application which is the Popiſh opinion.

I will not here conceale the practiſe and iudgement of the Aethiopike Church at this day: who vſe not to baptize the male children, till they be 40. daies olde, and the female at 60. daies: for infants dying before, they ſay, the faith of the mother ſufficed, together with the communion, which ſhee receiued being with childe: The like report there is, that at a Synode held at Quitiroi in the kingdome of Maitichuſi it was decreed, that if a woman being readie to bee deliuered, came to receiue the Sacrament, after their vſage, and afterward her childe ſhould be borne dead, by this Sacrament the childe ſhould be baptized, and freed from damnation, &c. (Theuet. Coſmog. lib. 4.2.) Theſe hold that infants vnbaptized are helped by the faith of their parents: which muſt be ſo vnderſtoode, not as though their faith applied ſaluation to the infant, but their faith maketh their children to belong to the couenant, which ſaith, I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeede: (Gen. 17.5.) And ſo infants the ſeede of beleeuing parents are ſaued by the couenant of grace.

AN APPENDIX OF THE POPISH vſe in baptizing of bels.

The Papiſts.

9. Error. THey begin now to bee aſhamed of the blinde practiſes of their ſuperſtitious and ignorant forefathers: for Bellarmine flatly denieth, that bels are baptized amongſt them: but they are onely conſecrate and hallowed for diuine vſes, as other Church veſſels are, lib. 4. de Roman. pontific. cap. 12.

The Proteſtants.

IT is a great ſhame for them, to denie ſo manifeſt a thing. For in the hallowing of bels, firſt there were Godfathers choſen: Secondly, they gaue names to the bels: Thirdly, the bels had new garments put vpon them, as is accuſtomed to be done to Chriſtians in their Baptiſme: Fourthly, the Baptizing of bels was onely permitted to the Biſhops ſuffragane, whereas their Prieſts and Deacons did vſually baptize infants: all this ſheweth, that it was not onely a Baptiſme, which they beſtowed vpon bels, but in a more principall kinde, then common Baptiſme was. (Fox. Martyrol. pag. 865. col. 1. edition. 4.) This was one of the greeuances which the Princes of Germany complained of in the aſſembly at Noremberg, that the ſuffraganes exacted of the people ſuch great ſummes of money for the baptizing of bels. With what face then can they denie this vngodly cuſtome of theirs, in Chriſtening and baptizing of bels.

An. 973. Pope Iohn 14. at the coronation of Otho the Emperour, gaue vnto the great bell of the Church of Laterane his owne name: the Chriſtening of bels in the Popiſh Church teſtified by B. Ridley holy martyr, pag. 1779. col. 2. Which ſuperſtitious vſe in baptizing of bels, thereby aſcribing vnto them a ſpirituall power againſt euill ſpirits, thunder, lightening, &c. hath beene condemned in ſome of their Councels. Concil. Colonienſ. part. 9. cap. 14. They correct the error of former times of thoſe that thought, that diuels were frayed away with the ſound of bels: Qui potius precibus ipſis territi abſcedant, illiſq́; ſubmotis fruges, mentes & corpora fidelium ſeruentur: Diuels rather are frayed away by prayers, vnto which men are called by the bels: and ſo the euill ſpirits being remoued, the bodies and ſoules of men are preſerued, and their corne, &c.

THE SIXTH QVESTION, OF THE EFfects and fruites of Baptiſme.

THe parts of this queſtion are theſe: firſt, whether our ſinnes are wholy remitted and cleane taken away in Baptiſme. Secondly, whether Baptiſme ſerueth onely for the remiſſion of ſinnes that are paſt. Thirdly, of the liberties and priuiledges, which are obtained by Baptiſme: which parts are now ſeuerally to be handled.

THE FIRST PART, WHETHER IN BAPtiſme our ſinnes be cleane taken away.

The Papiſts.

10 Error. THe ſinnes which are paſt, they affirme, not onely by the grace of Chriſt receiued in Baptiſme, to be forgiuen and pardoned, and no more imputed, but euen wholy to be raſed and rooted out: Et tolli omne illud, quod veram habet & propriam rationem peccati: And all that wholy to be taken away, which hath the nature and qualitie of ſinne, Concil. Tridentin. ſeſſ. 5. For the concupiſcence or originall ſinne, remaining after Baptiſme, is now no more to be called ſinne. (Decret. de Original. peccat.) In Infants then newly baptized, there is neither mortall nor veniall ſinne, Rhemiſt. 1. Iohn 1. ſect. 5.

Argum. 1. The Scripture ſaith, Behold the Lambe of God, that taketh away the ſinnes of the world, Ioh. 1. 29. Chriſt doth ſanctifie and cleanſe his Church by the waſhing of water, through the word, Epheſ. 5. 26. (Ioh. 1.29. Epheſ. 5.26.) Ergo, by remiſſion, ſinnes are cleane taken away, Rhemiſt. Roman. 4. ſect. 7. Bellarm. cap. 13.

Anſw. Firſt, if ſinne in Baptiſme were wholy remoued, not onely the guilt, but the very ſtaine and blot of ſinne: how commeth it to paſſe, that many which are baptized, doe fall afterward into deadly ſinnes; yet there is no man that liueth without ſinne? If ſinne once haue beene vtterly expelled and baniſhed out of the fleſh, how commeth it in againe? If their iuſtification haue once cleerely rid them from ſinne, how can they be ſubiect to it againe? for the grace of iuſtification, being once obtained, can neuer be loſt: the gifts of God are without repentance, Rom.11.29. Rom.11.29.

2 The Scripture is true, that Chriſt by his blood, cleanſeth, waſheth, taketh away our ſinnes: not by actually purging vs from all corruption, but in freely acquiting and diſcharging of vs before God, both of the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne, the blot and ſtaine thereof remaineth ſtill: ſo the Scripture ſaith, Bleſſed are they whoſe iniquities are forgiuen, and to whom the Lord imputeth no ſinne. Our ſinnes therefore may be truly forgiuen, though ſome corruption of ſinne doe ſtill remaine in vs. Rom.4.7.8.

3 The Apoſtle ſaith, Epheſ.5.27. That he might make it to himſelfe a glorious Church, without ſpot or wrinkle: ſignifying, that not here, or now, but then and there the Church ſhall be perfectly cleane, and without ſpot, when it ſhall be made glorious: but now although ſhe be cleanſed, by the waſhing of water in the word; yet ſhe ſaith truly of her ſelfe, in reſpect of her infirmities that remaine, I am blacke, Cantic.1.4. Epheſ.5.27. Cantic.1.4.

*Argum.*2. Rom.5.19. As by one mans diſobedience many were made ſinners, ſo by the obedience of one ſhall many be made righteous: but in Adam we are verely made ſinners: Ergo, by Chriſt wee are truly made righteous without ſinne. Bellarm.ibid. Rom.5.19.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſheweth, that this compariſon betweene Adam and Chriſt is not to be vrged in euery point: as verſ.16. The gift is not ſo, as the offence: for the guilt is of one offence to condemnation, the gift is of many offences to iuſtification: The compariſon is betweene one, and one; as in one we die all, ſo in one we are all made aliue: It holdeth not in the manner: for our corruption from Adam is naturall, but our iuſtification by Chriſt is ſupernaturall. Secondly, wee grant, that in Chriſt we are truly made righteous by the imputation of his righteouſneſſe; yet it followeth not that wee ſhould be void of ſinne: for Chriſts righteouſneſſe which is imputed by faith is one thing, our owne righteouſneſſe another; that is perfect, and maketh vs righteous before God, the other is imperfect. Thirdly, holding their ſenſe, the compariſon may very well ſtand: for as in Adam though wee all are made ſinners; yet, they ſay, there doe remaine, pura naturalia, certaine pure naturals ſtill, notwithſtanding the corruption of our nature: ſo though wee be iuſtified and made righteous by Chriſt, there may be found in vs, ſome impure naturals and dregs of corruption ſtill.

*Argum.*3. 2.Cor.6.14. What fellowſhip hath righteouſneſſe with vnrighteouſneſſe, light with darkneſſe? Ergo, after we are once made righteous, and receiued the light, there remaineth no darkneſſe or vnrighteouſneſſe of ſinne, Bellarm.ibid. 2.Cor.6.14.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of light and darkneſſe in the ſame, but in diuers ſubiects, as verſ.15. What fellowſhip hath the beleeuer with the Infidell? Secondly, though in the righteous ſome imperfections remaine, yet there is no fellowſhip, but a continuall warre and ſtrife betweene the ſpirit of God and the corruption of our nature; as Galath.5.17. They are contrarie one to the other, ſo that ye cannot doe the things ye would. Thirdly, though ſome reliques of ſinne remaine in the faithfull, yet they doe not raigne in them, Rom.6.12. but as darkneſſe toward the riſing of the Sunne is mixed with the light; yet ſo, that the light ouercommeth, and chaſeth away darkneſſe: ſo ſaith the Apoſtle, Rom.7.25. In my minde I ſerue the law of God; in my fleſh (that is the corruption and darkneſſe of my nature) the law of ſinne. Gal.5.17. Rom.6.12. Rom.7.25.

The Proteſtants.

THere are three things to be conſidered in ſinne: firſt, the ſtaine or blot, corruption or remnant of ſinne in vs. Secondly, the guilt, fault, and offence of ſinne. Thirdly, the puniſhment and ſtipend due vnto it. By our ſpirituall waſhing in the blood of Chriſt, whereof Baptiſme is a ſeale, both the guilt, and puniſhment of our ſinnes are not onely hid and couered in Gods ſight (as our aduerſaries doe falſly charge vs to ſay:) but they are truly forgiuen vs for Chriſts ſake, and ſhall neuer bee remembred any more. But yet there is left in vs ſome remnant of ſinne ſo long as wee liue in this fleſh, which in the end together with the corruption and mortalitie of the body, ſhall be cleane taken away.

*Argum.*1. If we ſay wee haue no ſinne, wee deceiue our ſelues, and the truth is not in vs, 1.Ioh.1.8. Ergo, there are none liuing at any time voide of ſinne, no not in their Baptiſme. S.Paul alſo exhorteth to be renewed in minde, and to put on the new man, and put off the olde, Epheſ.4.23. Ergo, there remaineth ſome ſinne and corruption after Baptiſme: what neede elſe this renewing of the minde, and putting on the new man afterward? 1.Ioh.1.8. Epheſ.4.23.

Bellarmine anſwereth: Theſe and ſuch like places muſt bee vnderſtood of ſuch ſinnes as are committed after Baptiſme, or elſe of the mortifying of the ſenſes and corrupt inclinations which may prouoke vnto ſinne, but properly are not ſinne.

Contra. The Ieſuites two-fold anſwere is at once ouerthrowne by that place of the Apoſtle to the Coloſſians, Mortifie your earthly members fornication, vncleanneſſe, &c. Here firſt it appeareth, that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not only of corrupt inclinations, but of the ſinnes themſelues; as fornication, couetouſneſſe, &c. Againe, he ſaith, Lie not one to another, ſeeing you haue put off the old man, with his works, verſ.9. Here the Apoſtle ſheweth, that though in Baptiſme they had put off the old mans workes, that ſin did no longer raigne in them: yet there remained ſome corrupt inclination ſtill, which he warneth them Coloſſ.3.5.

them to take hëede of. The ſeedes then of ſinne and corruption were not vtterly extinguiſhed in Baptiſme.

Thirdly, that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not onely of ſinnes committed after Baptiſme, but euen of that corruption, which remaineth in Baptiſme, Saint Auguſtine ſheweth, as he is alleaged by Gratian decr. par.3. diſt.4.cap.146. Nam in baptiſmo, quamuis plena fiat remiſſio peccatorum, &c. For in Baptiſme, though there be full remiſſion of ſinnes, yet there is no perfect change, becauſe there remaineth ſtill ſome corruption not onely in the bodie, but the minde, which is the inner man: which if it were perfectly renewed, the Apoſtle would not ſay, that he is renewed from day to day. Fourthly, if ſinnes were fully taken away in Baptiſme, they could not afterward returne againe: for whom God loueth, hee loueth to the end, Ioh 13.1. ſo that they ſhould not commit ſinne after Baptiſme: as now followeth to be ſhewed.

Ioh.13.1.

Argum.2. If ſinne be vtterly extinguiſhed in Baptiſme, then they which are baptized can ſinne no more; for ſinne being once extinct, reuiueth not, neither returneth being aboliſhed, as the Apoſtle ſaith, with one offering hath he conſecrated for euer them that are ſanctified, Heb.10.14. Wherefore if they be perfectly conſecrated in Baptiſme by the extinction of ſinne, they are for euer conſecrated: but we ſee, that the baptized may afterward commit ſinne. Ergo.

Heb.10.14.

Anſwere. Bellarmine granteth, that the baptized may loſe the grace of God, and ſo conſequently the remiſſion of ſinnes receiued in Baptiſme: and this grace being loſt, they may afterward ſinne. cap.14.propoſ.1.

Contra. It is a great queſtion among the Papiſts themſelues, whether ſinnes remitted in Baptiſme doe returne againe, ſome holding that they may returne, ſome that they may not. The Maſter of Sentences dare giue no reſolution in ſo doubtfull a queſtion, but leaueth vs in the briers, concluding thus: Alicui parti non praeiudicans ſtudioſo lectori iudicium relinquo: Not being preiudiciall to either part, I leaue the iudgement hereof to the reader, lib.4. distinct.22.b. But others of better account then the Maſter, doe reſolue, that ſinnes once forgiuen, returne not: as Greg.decr.par.2.cauſ.33. diſt.4.c.14. Qui recedit à Chriſto, &c. non in id quod remiſſio eſt, cecidit, &c. Hee that departeth from Chriſt, doth not fall againe into that, which is remitted, but hee ſhall be condemned to death for his latter ſinnes, which was due vnto thoſe that were remitted, &c. But yet more plainely Gelaſius, ibid. c.24. Diuina clementia dimiſſa peccata in vltionem vlterius redire non patitur: The diuine clemencie doth not ſuffer ſinnes once remitted, to returne vnto our puniſhment. And the Maſter of Sentences better remembring himſelfe, alloweth theſe ſayings of Auguſtine: Sacramenta in ſolis electis efficiunt, quod figurant: The Sacraments do only effect that, which they figure in the elect. And, Communis eſt baptiſmus omnibus baptizatis, ſed non virtus baptiſmi: Baptiſme is common to all that are baptized, but not the vertue of Baptiſme, that is remiſſion of ſinnes lib.4.diſtinct.1.a.b. Wherefore the elect in Baptiſme finde remiſſion of ſinnes for euer, ſo that their ſinnes are no more imputed vnto them; the reſt doe not at all obtaine that grace.

Argum.3. Originall ſinne is not taken away in Baptiſme, therefore ſome ſinne remaineth ſtill: And that this originall corruption is properly called ſinne, and is ſinne indeede, S. Paul ſheweth euidently, Rom.7. verſ.7.8. where he nameth luſt and concupiſcence ſinne.

Rom.7.7.

Auguſtine thus writeth; Meminiſſe debemus peccatorum omnium plenam remiſſionem fieri in baptiſmo, hominis vero qualitatem non totam continuò mutari: We muſt remember, that all our ſinnes are fully remitted in Baptiſme: but the qualitie of man (that is, the corruption, and ſtaine or blot of ſinne) is not wholly changed. This ſentence of Auguſtine is ratified, decret. par.3. diſtinct.4.c.146.

De peccat. merit & remiſſ. lib.2.c.7.

Concil. Mileuitan. cap 8. Placuit, vt quicunque verba ipſa dominicae orationis, vbi dicimus, Dimitte nobis debita noſtra, ita volunt à ſanctis dici, vt humiliter, non veraciter hoc dicatur, anathema ſit: quis enim ferat orantem, & non hominibus ſed ipſi Deo mentientem: Wee decree, that whoſoeuer taketh thoſe words of the Lords prayer, where wee ſay, forgiue vs our debts, ſo to be ſaid of holy men, that they rather ſay ſo of humilitie, then truly, let him be accurſed: for ſo he that prayeth, ſhould lie vnto God, not vnto men, &c. But this they muſt needes ſay, which affirme ſinne vtterly to be taken away: for being taken away, it remaineth not: and ſo they haue no cauſe to pray for remiſſion of ſinnes which are cleane wiped away before.

Here further. 1. May be remembred, that ſaying of Conſtantine to Aceſius a Nouatian Biſhop: who held that men being baptized, were free from ſinne: Appoſitis in caelum ſcalis tu ſolus aſcende, &c. Set thou vp a ladder to heauen, and goe vp alone, &c. He reproueth the arrogancie of the Nouatian, in challenging an exemption and libertie from ſinne, which no man liuing had.

Socrates lib.1. c.10.

2 Tertullian ſaith: Sordes baptiſmate abluuntur maculae vero martyrio candidantur: The filth of ſinne is waſhed away in baptiſme, but the blot and ſtaine is made white in martyrdome: There remaineth ſome ſtaine of ſinne then after the waſhing in baptiſme: the ſame another reporteth this to haue beene one of the hereticall opinions of Menander, Ut immortales, et incorruptibiles, et ſtatim reſurrectionis compotes fiant, qui baptiſma eius induerint: That they are ſtraiteway become immortall, and incorruptible, and partakers of the reſurrection, which haue put on his baptiſme, &c. much like is the Popiſh opinion which imagineth ſuch a perfection in the ſoules of them which are baptized, as this heretike did of the bodie.

THE SECOND PART, WHETHER BAPTISME ſerue onely for remiſsion of ſinnes paſt, and not for the ſinnes alſo to come.

The Papiſts.

CHriſts death applied to man by Baptiſme, wipeth away all ſinnes paſt, for new ſinnes other remedies be daily requiſite, Rhemiſt. Heb. 10. ſect. 4. The Councell of Trent holdeth them accurſed, that thinke all ſinnes to bee forgiuen, fide Baptiſmi ſuſcepti, by faith of Baptiſme receiued, *ſeſſ.*7. *can.*10. 11.Error.

Hereupon their ſaying ariſeth, that Baptiſmus eſt prima tabula poſt naufragium: That Baptiſme is the firſt boord of refuge after ſhipwracke: & pœnitentia eſt ſecunda tabula poſt naufragium: Penance is the ſecond boord of refuge: So that if a man doe fall after, hee muſt vſe other helpes and meanes for the remiſsion of ſinnes: for Baptiſme is not auaileable for ſinnes afterward committed, *Bellar.cap.*18.

Argum. It is impoſſible, ſaith the Apoſtle, for them that haue beene once lightened, and taſted of the heauenly grace, if they fall away, to be renewed by penance, Heb.6.6. that is, they which fall away from faith and grace, after Baptiſme, cannot be baptized againe, or be illuminated, or renouated, by ſo eaſie a cleanſing of ſinnes, as the Sacrament of Baptiſme did yeeld: for to be illuminate, to be renewed, and to crucifie Chriſt, are proper vnto Baptiſme; wherein wee are illuminate, renewed, and imitate Chriſts death: Ergo, Baptiſme is not auaileable for remiſsion of ſinnes, which men fall into afterward, *Bellarm.cap.*18. Heb.6.6.

Anſw. Firſt, he very vnskilfully here confoundeth Baptiſme and repentance, whereas the Apoſtle doth diſtinguiſh them, verſ.1.2. making repentance from dead workes, and the doctrine of Baptiſme two diuers things; and they themſelues ſay, that Baptiſme is the firſt table of refuge, penance the ſecond: how then can they by repentance here enforce Baptiſme? And I meruaile, that Bellarmine hath ſo ſoone forgotten himſelfe, that whereas he ſaid before, lib.2. de Sacram.c.22. reſp. ad 2. ration.ſolid. That it is not found in Scripture, that Baptiſme ſhould not be iterated, hee remembred not this place, where after his ſenſe, the Apoſtle denieth repentance the ſecond time by the Sacrament of Baptiſme.

Secondly, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of this or that kinde of repentance, but generally of all, ſhewing, that there is no hope of remiſsion nor grace to repent left for thoſe which fall into the grieuous ſinne of apoſtaſie, which he here deſcribeth; for they crucifie againe the Sonne of God, and make a mocke of him, verſ.6. And that the Apoſtle vnderſtandeth the ſinne of apoſtaſie, and the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, it appeareth by comparing that other place, Heb.10.29. with this: for there they are ſaid, to tread vnder foote the Sonne of God, and to deſpite the ſpirit of grace. The Apoſtle then cutteth off ſuch from all hope of grace, and repentance; not onely barreth them from ſome ſpeciall kind of repentance: as he ſaith, Heb.10.26. if we ſinne willingly, that is obſtinately and of malice, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſinne, that is, there is no remedie at all. Heb.10.29. Heb.10.26.

Thirdly, that children are not illuminated in Baptiſme, Auguſtine denieth, as wee haue ſeene before, *queſt.5.part.*2. and Bellarmine moſt abſurdly taketh the crucifying of Chriſt in the good part, whereas the Apoſtle doth giue it as a reaſon, of their great impietie, why they cannot be renewed, becauſe they doe crucifie to themſelues the Sonne of God, and make a mocke of him. The ſecond clauſe expoundeth the former: They crucifie Chriſt, that make a mocke of him: which can in no ſenſe be taken in the good part: And ſo doth Origen very well expound thoſe words: Vides, quia in peccantibus, &c. We ſee that in ſinners Chriſt is not ſaid onely to die, but to be crucified; but in the holy Ghoſt is ſaid to liue, &c. Hom.2.in Iudic.

The Proteſtants.

THe externall act of Baptiſme neither wipeth away ſinnes going before, or comming after: but it is the inward working of the ſpirit of God, which by the vertue of Chriſts death, teſtified and ſhewed forth in Baptiſme, that waſheth away our ſinnes. And Baptiſme is a ſeale of remiſsion of ſinnes, for the confirmation of our faith, euen of thoſe which are committed after Baptiſme, as well as of ſinnes done before: and although the ceremonie of Baptiſme be not repeated, yet the vertue of Gods grace teſtified thereby, remaineth to our liues end.

*Argum.*1. Mark 16.16. He that ſhall beleeue and be baptized, ſhall be ſaued. We reaſon thus, Baptiſme is a ſeale of that faith, whereby men are ſaued, or to the which ſaluation is promiſed: but that faith beleeueth remiſsion of all ſinnes both paſt and to come; therefore Baptiſme alſo ſealeth vnto vs the remiſsion of all our ſinnes, going before or following after. And here is no other thing required, but for a man to beleeue, and to apprehend Gods couenant made in Baptiſme. Mark.16.16.

Anſwere. This promiſe of Chriſt is conditionall, that ſo long as they continue beleeuing, Baptiſme is a ſufficient remedie: but if they fall away from faith, then Baptiſme ſufficeth not: for if there were not a condition, then apoſtataes ſhould be ſaued, becauſe they once beleeued: ſic Bellar. c. 19. reſponſ. ad argum. 1.

Iohn 5.24.

1.Iohn 2.19.

Contra. Firſt, there neede no condition of perſeuerance to be annexed to faith, ſeeing it is a propertie of true faith, neuer finally to be loſt: otherwiſe our Sauiour would not haue ſaid, Iohn 5. verſ. 24. He that beleeueth, hath paſſed from death to life: he pronounceth as though it were alreadie done, which is but in faith, becauſe of the aſſurance thereof; wherefore apoſtataes and backſliders though they ſeemed once to beleeue, yet had no true faith, as Saint Iohn ſaith. They went out from vs, but were not of vs. Secondly, to admit his condition, then if a man doe continue a beleeuer, Baptiſme is a ſufficient remedie for all ſinnes that follow after: for euen in the faithfull there are ſinnes committed after Baptiſme: and if it be ſufficient for ſinnes, that follow in ſome, why is it not by the ſame reaſon in all?

Tit.3.5.7.

*Argum.*2. The promiſe of Baptiſme is, That we being iuſtified by his grace, ſhould be made heires of eternall life, Tit.3.5.7. But this promiſe of iuſtification is generall againſt all ſinnes before Baptiſme, and after: Ergo, ſo is Baptiſme.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that iuſtification by Chriſt is promiſed as well in the Euchariſt as in Baptiſme; and therefore it followeth not, that they, which after their fall are iuſtified by Chriſt, are iuſtified by Baptiſme, Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. We grant that iuſtification by Chriſt is exhibited in both the Sacraments, and that both of them, as Sacraments, are remedies againſt ſinnes committed afterward: ſo then the argument thus followeth very well; Iuſtification by Chriſt is a remedie againſt all our ſinnes whatſoeuer: Baptiſme is a ſeale of iuſtification by Chriſt: Ergo, it is auaileable for remiſſion of all ſinnes. Wee doe not inferre Baptiſme onely is a ſeale thereof, which Bellarmine ſuppoſeth, neither do we conclude, that Baptiſme onely is auaileable: it is ſufficient that Baptiſme hath this vertue and efficacie, together with other helps and remedies, as to extend it ſelfe to the ſinnes of the whole life.

*Argum.*3. Baptiſme is a ſigne and ſeale of our myſticall waſhing in the blood of Chriſt: but all our ſinnes both before and after are waſhed away by the blood of Chriſt: Ergo, Baptiſme doth aſſure vs of a perfect remiſſion of all our ſinnes.

Bellarmine denieth the aſſumption, that wee are iuſtified formally by the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, but by our owne righteouſneſſe inherent in vs, reſp. ad argum. 4.

Philip.3.9.

Contra. This is a great blaſphemie, and contrarie to the Apoſtle, who ſaith, that I might be found, not hauing mine owne righteouſneſſe, which is by the law, but the righteouſneſſe of God through faith, Philip.3.9. The righteouſneſſe of God by faith, is not our owne righteouſneſſe: but we are iuſtified by the righteouſneſſe of God. Ergo.

Lib.1.de nuptijs et concupiſ. c.33.

So ſaith Auguſtine: Eodem lauacro regenerationis, & verbo ſanctificationis, omnia prorſus mala hominum regeneratorum ſanantur, etiam qua poſterius humana ignorantia aut infirmitate committuntur: By the ſame lauer of regeneration, and word of ſanctification, all the ſinnes in men regenerate are healed; yea euen thoſe, which by humane ignorance afterward are committed: Non vt Baptiſma, quoties peccatur, toties repetatur, ſed quia ipſo, quod ſemel datur, fit, vt non ſolum anteà, verùm etiam poſteà quorumlibet peccatorum venia fidelibus impetretur: Not that Baptiſme, ſo oft as a man ſinneth, is to bee repeated; but by vertue of that which is once giuen, it commeth to paſſe, that the faithfull haue remiſſion of their ſinnes, not onely before, but alſo after: Ergo, Baptiſme hath it force not onely for the preſent, but it reacheth vnto the time following.

Bellarmine anſwereth to this authoritie by a diſtinction, that Baptiſme, though not immediatly, yet mediatly ſerueth to purge ſinnes done afterward, becauſe he that is baptized, by that grace, which hee receiued in Baptiſme, obtaineth remiſſion of ſinnes: *c.*18. *lib.*1. de baptiſm.

Contra. Firſt, neither doe wee ſay, that Baptiſme worketh immediatly, for the Sacraments are inſtruments and meanes of grace, and ſo mediate workers. Secondly, as he confeſſeth the ſinnes following to be remitted in Baptiſme, no otherwiſe are the ſinnes paſt, but by the grace of Chriſt ſealed vnto him, that is baptized, in Baptiſme.

*Concil. Viennenſ. ſub Clem.*5. Credimus Baptiſma, quod celebratur in aqua, &c. eſſe tam adultis, quam paruulis communiter perfectum remedium ad ſalutem: We beleeue that Baptiſme celebrated with water, in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and holy Ghoſt, is both to little ones, and men of yeeres, a perfect remedie to ſaluation, &c. If it be a perfect remedie, then it is auaileable againſt all ſinne.

*Synod. Moguntin. cap.*21. Credimus baptiſmi virtute, omne prorſus peccatum, tam originale quam actuale remitti: We beleeue, that by the vertue of Baptiſme, all ſinne both originall and actuall is remitted, &c. if all ſinne, then none is excluded.

Alſo we haue plentifull teſtimonie from their owne decrees: *Part.*1. *diſtinct.*23. *c.*2. In baptiſmate omnia peccata, &c. In Baptiſme all ſinnes whatſoeuer, not onely originall, but voluntarie, are remitted. *Part.*3. *diſtinct.*4. *c.*136. Regenerante carne tantummodo contrahitur, &c. By the generation of the fleſh originall ſinne onely is contracted, by the regeneration of the ſpirit, there is not onely remiſſion of originall, but of voluntarie ſinnes. *Clementin. lib.*1. *tit.*1. *c.*1. Nos attendentes generalem efficaciam mortis Chriſti: We conſidering the general efficacie of Chriſts death, which by Baptiſme is applied to all,that are baptized,do hold their opinion to be more probable, that think,not only the fault to be remitted in Baptiſme, but grace alſo infuſed, &c. By this grace infuſed in Baptiſme, euen the ſinnes afterward are remitted; how could the generall efficacie elſe of Chriſts death be ſet foorth in Baptiſme?

The Maſter of Sentences alſo confeſſeth,that in thoſe,which come fainedly to Baptiſme, poſtea cum pænituerint,baptiſmus incipit prodeſſe, Baptiſme beginneth to profit them afterward, vpon their repentance,lib.4.diſt.4.c. Wherefore by their owne ſentence Baptiſme is effectuall for afterward,as well as for the time paſt.

1 Theodoret maketh this difference betweene Baptiſme, and the Iudaicall waſhings: they were often applied purging only the filth of the fleſh, hic autem vnus eſt,&c. but Baptiſme is but one,as hauing a type of the healthfull paſſion and reſurrection,&c. Like as then all ſinnes are remitted by the vertue of Chriſts paſſion, ſo alſo by the force of Baptiſme as a type and repreſentation thereof. The ſame is the opinion of the moderne Greeke Church: for Ieremie the Patriarke approueth that poſition of the Diuines of Germanie: that the death of Chriſt hath not only taken away the debt of our firſt parents, ſed & omne aliud peccatum deleuiſſe, but hath blotted out euery other ſinne,&c.

2 Tertullian ſpeaking of faith,which is ſealed in Baptiſme,ſaith: Fides integra,ſecura de ſalute: Entire faith,is ſecure of ſaluation: but it cannot be ſecure,if it be not aſſured of the remiſſion of all ſins. The preſent Aethiopike Church ſaith, Credo vnum baptiſmum, qui eſt remiſſio peccatorum: I beleeue one baptiſme,which is the remiſſion of ſinnes,&c. Zago Zabo an Aethiopike Biſhop: They vſe all to be ſolemnely baptized at Eaſter,not taking it for a ſecond baptiſme, ſed tantum in commemorationem baptiſmi veri ſemel ſuſcepti in infantia,&c. but onely for the commemoration of that true baptiſme, which they receiued in their infancie,&c.

THE THIRD PART, OF THE LIBERTIE and priuiledges obtained by Baptiſme.

The Papiſts.

1. THey haue defined, that a man, by Baptiſme, is not only debitor fidei,ſed etiam vniuerſæ legis Chriſti implendæ, is not only a debter of the faith, but is made a debter to performe the whole law of Chriſt, Concil.Trident.ſeſſ.8.can.7. that is,Baptiſme is not only a ſigne of free iuſtification by faith,neither doth he which is baptized profeſſe himſelfe onely by faith to be iuſtified, but partly alſo by his workes,and the keeping of the commandements of Chriſt, Bellarm.lib.1.de Baptiſ.cap.15.

12.Error.

Argum. Mat.19.17. Chriſt ſaith to the young man,if thou wilt enter into life,keepe the commandements. 2.Cor.5.10. Euery man ſhall receiue according to that,which he hath done,whether good or euill. Ergo, we are bound to keepe the law, Bellarm.ibid.

Matth.19.17. 2.Cor 5.10.

Anſw. Firſt,Chriſt maketh that anſwere to the young man, to the intent he ſhould know himſelfe,who thought,that by his owne workes he might attaine vnto life: for otherwiſe the doctrine of the Apoſtle is plaine,that life is not by the law,as he ſaith,Galath.3.21. If there had been a law, which could haue giuen life, ſurely righteouſneſſe ſhould haue been by the law. Secondly,the Apoſtle ſaith,that wee ſhall receiue according to our workes: but he ſaith not, for our workes ſake: for as Bernard ſaith, our workes are via regni, non cauſa regnandi, are the way to the kingdome, not the cauſe of the kingdome. Thirdly, theſe places alleaged are altogether impertinent, for they onely ſhew, that wee are bound to doe good workes, which wee denie not, not that wee profeſſe to be ſaued by our workes.

Galath.3.21.

The Proteſtants.

Anſ. IN Baptiſme we make profeſſion of our obedience,to die vnto ſinne, and riſe vp to newnes of life,Rom.6.2. yet not thereby to be iuſtified: but in being baptized wee ſhew our faith and hope,only to looke for remiſſion of ſinnes and ſaluation of our ſoules by the death of Chriſt.

Rom.6.2.

*Argum.*1. Circumciſion,in place whereof Baptiſme is giuen to vs, is called by the Apoſtle a ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, Rom.4.11. not of the righteouſneſſe of workes: much more then is Baptiſme,which is a Sacrament of the Goſpell,a pledge vnto vs of the iuſtice of faith.

Rom.4.11.

*Argum.*2. By Baptiſme we are freed from the curſe of the law: for it is a Sacrament of the death of Chriſt,and of all the benefits thereof: and Chriſt by his death hath borne for vs the curſe of the law,Galath.3.13. but if by baptiſme wee binde our ſelues to the obſeruance of the law,to bee iuſtified and finde life thereby, we muſt needs fall into the curſe,becauſe we are not able to keep the commandements. Wherefore ſeeing Baptiſme deliuereth vs from the curſe,it alſo exempteth vs from the workes of the law,to finde life and iuſtification thereby.

Galath.3.13.

Their owne decrees are for vs: Part.3.diſt.4.c.3. Ab ira Dei nullus liberatur niſi per fidem mediatoris,&c. No man is deliuered from the wrath of God but by the faith of the Mediatour,&c. But in Baptiſme we are deliuered from the wrath of God: Ergo, in Baptiſme onely wee profeſſe to be ſaued by the faith of the Mediatour.

Cap.8. Per fidem & baptiſma iuſtificamur à peccatis: By faith and Baptiſme wee are iuſtified from our ſinnes: Ergo, nothing elſe in Baptiſme requiſite, but faith.

Lib.de pœnitent. Lib 3.cont. Ennormum. Harm.ſect.13. pag.398. 1 Tertullian ſaith, ſpeaking of Baptiſme, Lauacrum illud obſignatio fidei, that lauacre is a ſeale of faith. 2. So alſo Baſil: Baptiſmus eſt ſigillum fidei, Baptiſme is a ſeale of faith: this was the ancient faith both of the South and Eaſt Church, that in Baptiſme were profeſſed only iuſtification by faith, not by workes. 3. Former confeſſion of Heluetia, artic. 21. We are all borne ſinners, whereupon wee haue need of regeneration, and the purging of our ſins, which commeth to paſſe by the free mercy of God, whereby alſo we are receiued into the couenant. Baptiſme then is a Sacrament of regeneration and remiſſion of ſinnes, grounded vpon Gods mercie, not mans merit. 4. See alſo their owne Decrees before alleaged.

The Papiſts.

13.Error. 2. ALthough Chriſtians are bound by ſolemne vow in baptiſme to walke in obedience before God, and to keepe his commandements: yet are they not therefore freed and exempted from the obſeruance of the lawes and ordinances of men, which they are bound in conſcience to keepe, and vnder paine of damnation, Bellarm.cap.16.

The Proteſtants.

BAptiſme onely bindeth vs to keepe the commandements of God; and ſo farre forth alſo to obey men, as they commaund things lawfull: but we muſt not bee brought in bondage to mens traditions, and obſeruations, ſeeing wee are the Lords free men, and by baptiſme conſecrate to his ſeruice.

Matth.28.19. Argum. Matth.28.19. Goe and teach, baptizing them, &c. and teaching them to obſerue all that I commanded you: Ergo, baptiſme bindeth vs onely to the obſeruation of Gods precepts. 1.Cor.7.23. Ye are bought with a price, be not the ſeruants of men: Baptiſme is a ſigne of the death of Chriſt, the price of our redemption: Ergo, we are freed from all meere humane ſeruice, in receiuing of baptiſme. For this cauſe is it called the baptiſme of Chriſt. Auguſtine ſaith, Legimus Paulum dixiſſe Euangelium meum, baptiſmum autem meum nunquam dixit: baptiſmum autem Chriſti nemo Apoſtolorum ita vnquam miniſtrauit, vt auderet dicere ſuum: Wee reade Paul to haue ſaid, My Goſpell, but my baptiſme neuer: neuer any of the Apoſtles durſt call the baptiſme of Chriſt their baptiſme: Ergo, ſeeing it is the baptiſme of Chriſt, and wee are only baptized in his name, not in our owne name, or the name of men: we muſt only hope to be ſaued by faith in him, and become his ſeruants wholly.

1.Cor.7.23. Contr.Petil. lib.3.55.

Luke 10.16. Bellarmine anſwereth, firſt Chriſt in bidding his Apoſtles to obſerue all, that hee had commanded, doth alſo implie, that they ſhould teach to be obſerued the lawes of Prelates, for that is one of his commandements alſo: Luke 10.16. He that heareth you, heareth me. Secondly, Saint Paul forbiddeth not the ſeruice of men abſolutelie, but as it is contrarie to the ſeruice of God: Bellarmine cap.16.

Contra. To the firſt we replie: 1. To heare the Apoſtles and Miniſters of the Church teaching the ſame that Chriſt taught, is to heare Chriſt himſelfe, and ſo is one of his commandements: but when Prelates doe clogge mens conſciences with ſuperſtitious rites, contrarie to the doctrine of Chriſt, as popiſh Prelates doe, they are not to be heard, nor obeyed: no, an Angell is not to be receiued preaching otherwiſe, then Chriſt and his Apoſtles haue laid the foundation, Galath.1.8. Secondly, concerning the lawes of Prelates, it muſt bee conſidered, that they are of three ſorts: for either they are as touching faith and doctrine, which, if they be agreeable to the doctrine of the Apoſtles, are of the ſame authoritie, and ſimply to be receiued: either they are of externall orders and politike conſtitutions, which, though obedience muſt be yeelded vnto; yet they doe not ſimply binde in conſcience, as the lawes of God, but only ſo farre, as wee are bound in conſcience generally, to obey our ſuperiours in all lawfull things: either they are the meere deuices, and ſuperſtitious inuentions of men, ſuch as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of, Coloſſ.2.21. Touch not, taſte not, handle not, which are after the doctrines of men, &c. The firſt kinde wee profeſſe obedience to in baptiſme abſolutely, becauſe they are no other but the precepts of Chriſt: to the ſecond not abſolutely, but as wee haue ſaid: to the third not at all.

Galath.1.8.

Matth.6.24. Galath.1.10. To the ſecond we replie, firſt, that to be a ſeruant of men is in no ſenſe allowed in the Scripture; as Matth.6.24. No man can ſerue two maſters: and Galath.1.10. If I ſhould pleaſe (that is ſerue) men, I ſhould not be the ſeruant of Chriſt: ſo, when wee ſerue men for the Lords ſake, in lawfull things; wee ſerue not men, but God. Secondly, to yeeld to the ſuperſtitious iniunctions of Prelates, ſuch as moſt in Poperie are, is a meere ſeruice of men: for ſuch the Apoſtle calleth the precepts and doctrines of men, Coloſſ 2.22. and therefore obedience to ſuch is contrarie to our dutie and ſeruice to God.

Coloſſ.2.22.

Laſtly, as touching the ceremonious rites and obſeruations of men, their owne Decrees doe teſtifie for vs, par.1.diſtinct.12.c.12. Quamuis ne hoc inueniri poſſit, &c. Although it appeare not, how they are againſt the faith, yet they doe oppreſſe Religion with ſeruile burthens, which God in mercie hath left free with moſt few and manifeſt Sacraments, ſo that the condition of the Iewes is more tolerable, who were ſubiect onely to legall preſcriptions, not to humane preſumptions, &c. If ceremonies not apparantly contrarie to the faith, muſt be reſtrained for their multitudes; how much more ſuch as doe oppugne the faith? See for further approbation of this point, the former article, error 13. in the end.

The Papiſts.

THey hold, that notwithſtanding the vow of Chriſtianitie, and obedience made ſolemnely in Baptiſme, yet other vowes made before or after vnto God or Saints, as vowes of ſingle life, to goe in pilgrimage, to offer to ſuch a Saint, and ſuch like doe ſtand ſtill in force, and ought to be performed; *Bellarm.cap.*17. And, whoſoeuer ſhall ſay, that ſuch vowes made after Baptiſme, doe derogate to the faith profeſſed in Baptiſme, or to Baptiſme it ſelfe, let him be accurſed: Concil.Trident.de Baptiſmo,can.9.

The Proteſtants.

THat all ſuch vowes being ſome of them impoſſible, ſome of them impious, and ſuperſtitious, ſome ſuperſluous and vnneceſſarie, are diſannulled by the vow of Baptiſme, neither can ſtand in force without great derogation to the ſame, thus we doe proue it.

*Argum.*1. The things which are vowed are either commanded, or not commanded: ſuch things which are commanded vs of God, wee doe profeſſe and vow to keepe in Baptiſme, as to forſake the diuell, the world, and the fleſh: but ſuch things as are not preſcribed of God, but commanded of men, we doe not vow in Baptiſme to keepe; nay, they are contrarie to our vow in Baptiſme, whereby wee are made the ſeruants only of God, and not of men: Ergo, vowes of ſuch things are contrarie to the vow of Baptiſme.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that we are bound rather by Baptiſme to keepe our vowes, becauſe we vow to keepe all Gods commandements, whereof this is one, not to breake our vowes, *cap.*17.

Contra. All lawfull vowes and promiſes of obedience are indeed faithfully to be performed vnto God: but vnlawfull vowes, ſuch as are many in Poperie tending to ſuperſtition, are neither to bee made, nor being made are to be kept: neither doth God command vs to performe ſuch vowes; but they are like Iepthahs vow, and Herods oth, both which might better haue been reuoked, then performed, as they were.

*Argum.*2. If other vowes to be made after baptiſme are requiſite, then were the vow in baptiſme inſufficient, other vowes being added thereunto: but now it is moſt ſufficient. Ergo.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the argument followeth not, for after baptiſme receiued, it is neceſſarie to heare the word of God, and to celebrate the other Sacraments; yet theſe doe not make baptiſme inſufficient for the proper end thereof, which is the ſaluation of man: no more then doth the acceſſion of other vowes derogate to the ſufficiencie of the vow in baptiſme, Bellar.ibid.

Contra. Firſt, there is no compariſon betweene the word of God and the Euchariſt (which are of Gods inſtitution, and therefore to be vſed as neceſſarie helpes of our faith) and the vnprofitable inuentions of men, which are not ordained of God: they cannot derogate to baptiſme, hauing all one author; but the other doe, for as much as mans inuentions cannot ſtand together with Gods inſtitution. Secondly, the word preached, and the Euchariſt doe not make Baptiſme inſufficient, becauſe they haue all their ſpeciall vſes and ends; Baptiſme to ſeale vnto vs our new birth, the word to beget faith, and the Euchariſt to confirme it: but like as, if another Baptiſme ſhould be added to the firſt, the one were a derogation to the other; ſo, many vowes comming after the vow of Baptiſme, muſt needes make the firſt inſufficient.

Auguſtines iudgement is this: De tempor.ſerm.7.Sunt multi, qui vouent, &c. There bee many that vow, one a cloake, another oyle, another a waxe candle; another, that he will drinke no wine; another, that he will faſt; another, that he will eate no fleſh: this is not the beſt, nor the perfecteſt kinde of vowing; God neither careth for thy comely apparell, nor for thy oyle, or faſting: but offer that vnto him, which he hath redeemed, that is, thy ſoule.

Likewiſe Origen thus writeth, *Homil.*13.in Exod. Non vult Moſes vt offeras aliquid quod extra te eſt, &c. Moſes will not haue thee offer any thing without thee: Take (ſaith he) from among your ſelues, and offer vnto God, as euery man hath conceiued in his heart. What, doth ſiluer or gold grow within me? offer vnto God gold for the Tabernacle, that is, the faith of thy heart, &c. this then is the only vow, which we offer vnto God, which we promiſe and profeſſe in Baptiſme. See the further approbation of this point, contr.6.error 92.in the end.

THE SEVENTH QVESTION, OF THE DIFference betweene the Baptiſme of our Sauiour Chriſt, and the Baptiſme of Iohn.

The Papiſts.

THe Baptiſme of Iohn (they ſay) was of another kinde then Chriſts Baptiſme was, neither was it ſufficient without Chriſts Baptiſme, nor had the like force or efficacie, as his Baptiſme had: and therefore ſuch as had been baptized of Iohn, were afterward admitted to Chriſts Baptiſme, Concil. Trident.ſeſſ.8.can.1. Bellarm.lib.1.de Baptiſ.cap.20.21. 14.Error.

*Argum.*1. Matth.3.11. Iohn himſelfe ſaith, I baptize you with water, but he ſhall baptize you with Matth.3:11.

the holy Ghoſt: Ergo, Iohns Baptiſme and Chriſts not all one: for Iohns Baptiſme gaue not the holy Ghoſt, Bellarm.ibid.

Anſw. Iohn ſpeaketh not of diuers Baptiſmes, but of diuers operations, and miniſteries, in one and the ſame Baptiſme: for Iohn, as all other Miniſters doe, did but giue water; and Chriſt working together with them, giueth the holy Ghoſt. But it will bee anſwered, that Iohn ſaith not, hee doth baptize, but he ſhall baptize: Ergo, Chriſt did not baptize together with Iohn by his ſpirit. Bellarm. cap.21.

Ioh.1.33. Anſw. The ſame Iohn in another place ſpeaketh of Chriſt in the preſent tenſe: Ioh.1.33. This is he which baptizeth with the holy Ghoſt: Ergo, Chriſt did both then baptize with his ſpirit, and afterwards alſo more manifeſtly, when the gifts of the ſpirit began to be ſhed foorth more plentifully vpon men. Alſo he ſaith, Behold the Lambe of God that taketh away the ſinnes of the world, Ioh.1.29. hee euen then, when Iohn baptized, did take away ſinnes. And againe, Iohn teſtifieth of him, verſ.16. of his fulnes haue wee all receiued: euen then Chriſt baptized with the ſpirit, which was to receiue of his fulnes.

Ioh.1.29.

Bellarmine replieth: firſt, that Chriſt is ſaid to baptize with the ſpirit, not that then he baptized, but to ſignifie, that when he baptized, he ſhould not only baptize with water, but with the ſpirit. Secondly, Chriſt did not then take away ſinnes, but it is ſignified, that hee afterward by his death ſhould take away the ſins of the world. Thirdly, they receiued of his grace and fulnes, but by other meanes, then by the baptiſme of Iohn, Bellarm.cap.21.

Contra. Firſt, if Chriſt then onely began to baptize with the ſpirit, when hee baptized with water, it would follow, that he neuer baptized with the ſpirit: for it is certaine that hee baptized not with water, Ioh.4.2. Againe, that he at that inſtant baptized with the ſpirit, it is euident by Iohns words, verſ.33. He that ſent me to baptize, ſaid vnto me, Vpon whom thou ſhalt ſee the ſpirit come downe, &c. this is he which baptizeth with the holy Ghoſt: Chriſt then immediatly at the comming downe of the ſpirit, baptized with the ſpirit: vnleſſe they will ſay he receiued the ſpirit in vaine.

Ioh.1.33.

Secondly, it is very groſſe and abſurd to ſay that Chriſt did not take away the ſinnes of the world before his death; for the Prophet David ſaith, Pſal.32.1. Bleſſed are they, whoſe ſinnes are forgiuen: euen vnder the law by faith in Chriſt to come they found remiſſion of ſinnes. Thirdly, that Iohns baptiſme and miniſtrie was not an inſtrument of the grace of Chriſt, it is contrary to the Scripture; Luke 1.16. He ſhall turne many of the children of Iſrael to the Lord their God.

Pſal.32.1.

Luke 1.16.

Laſtly, that Chriſt and Iohn baptized together, the one viſibly, the other inuiſibly, S. Ambroſe thus teſtifieth, vpon theſe words, I baptize you with water: Cito probauit, &c. Hee prooueth that hee is not Chriſt, becauſe he worketh viſibly, &c. The bodie is waſhed with water, the ſoule by the ſpirit: we do one thing, and call vpon another; Sed hæc inter ſe diuiſa eſſe non poſſunt, &c. But theſe things cannot be diuided, in 3.cap.Luc.

Argum.2. S. Paul baptized twelue men at Epheſus with Chriſts baptiſme that had receiued Iohns before, Acts 19.4.5. Ergo, Iohns baptiſme was not the ſame that Chriſts was, Bellarmine.

Act.19.4.5.

Anſw. There can be no ſuch thing gathered out of that place, for thoſe words in the 5. verſe, when they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Ieſus, are part of the narration which Paul maketh of Iohns baptiſme: ſo that the ſenſe is this, they that heard Iohns doctrine, were baptized in the name of the Lord Ieſus. It is not ſo to be read, as though they were baptized againe of Paul, but he laieth only his hands vpon them, that had before receiued the baptiſme of Iohn.

Bellarmine replieth, that this place cannot be ſo expounded: for if the fourth and fifth verſes containe only a narration of Iohns baptiſme, then were the people baptized twice: for in the fourth verſe it is ſaid, Iohn baptized with the baptiſme of repentance. And againe, in the fifth verſe, when they heard it they were baptized.

Contra. Firſt, it followeth not that they were twice baptized, becauſe the word is here twice vſed: for firſt the Apoſtle ſetteth downe Iohns office in whole together, and then proſecuteth the two parts thereof; firſt his preaching in the fourth, and then his baptiſme in the fifth verſe.

Secondly, but that this is a narration, not of S. Luke concerning S. Pauls baptiſme, but of Saint Paul concerning Iohns baptiſme; thus it appeareth: firſt, by the Greeke particles μὲν in the fourth verſe, and δὲ in the fifth, which doe one anſwere to another, and ſhew a neceſſarie coherence and connexion of both verſes together. Secondly, Iohns preaching and his baptiſme doe beſt agree together: Iohn preached to the people that they ſhould beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt, verſ.4. and then it followeth, they were baptized in the name of Ieſus, verſ.5. So then Iohn baptized in his name, whom hee preached: but he preached Ieſus Chriſt, therefore he baptized alſo in his name: and if he baptized in Ieſus name, then would not S. Paul haue baptized them againe. Thirdly, how is it like, that theſe men being at Epheſus, ſo farre off from Iudea, where Iohn baptized, and ſo long time after, not leſſe then 30. yeeres from the death of Iohn Baptiſt, could haue been baptized of Iohn: wherefore they are ſaid to be baptized to Iohns baptiſme, not that they were baptized by the hands of Iohn, but had receiued that baptiſme, whereof Iohn was the firſt Miniſter, for Chriſt baptized not, but Iohn in Chriſts name. Fourthly, if S. Paul had baptized them, it is moſt like he would haue baptized them in the name of the holy Ghoſt, whereof they doubted: but they are baptized in the name of Ieſus: that is, the people that heard Iohn, not the twelue men, whom Paul found at Epheſus. Fifthly, the Apoſtles by laying on of hands without baptiſme conferred the holy Ghoſt, as it may appeare, Act.8.17. where Simon would haue giuen money, that on whomſoeuer alſo hee laid his hands, they might receiue the holy Ghoſt: Act.8.16.17. neither doe wee finde, that the impoſition of hands was vſed in baptiſme: ſo then as Acts 8.16. it is ſaid; The holy Ghoſt as yet was come downe vpon none of them, but they were baptized onely in the name of the Lord Ieſus: and it followeth, Then laid they their hands vpon them, and they receiued the holie Ghoſt: they are not baptized againe, but onely confirmed with laying on of hands: ſo in this place, they had receiued the baptiſme of Iohn, which was nothing elſe, but to be baptized in the name of Ieſus, and then the Apoſtle laieth on his hands, and they receiue the gift of the holy Ghoſt; they are no more baptized, then the Diſciples at Samaria, Act.8.16. Laſtly, Saint Ambroſe iudgement vpon this place is this, lib.1. de ſpirit. c.3. Iohannes in remiſſionem peccatorum in aduenientis Ieſu nomine non in ſuo baptizabat, &c. Iohn did baptize in the name of Chriſt, not his owne name for the remiſſion of ſinnes: but they in the 19. of the Acts had not receiued baptiſme in the name of Chriſt, as Iohn vſed to baptize: and therefore they were baptized in the name of Chriſt Ieſus, neither was baptiſme iterated in them, but renewed, for there is but one baptiſme. S. Ambroſe, though he thinke, that theſe twelue were baptized by Saint Paul; yet ſo thinketh, becauſe indeed they had not receiued Iohns baptiſme, which he holdeth to be one baptiſme, with the baptiſme of Chriſt.

Argum.3. The baptiſme of Iohn had not the inuocation of the Trinitie, as the baptiſme of Chriſt hath: Ergo, it is not the ſame: Bellarm.cap.20.

Anſw. Firſt, that there was the preſence and inuocation of the Trinitie in the baptiſme of Iohn, it appeareth Matth.3. where, when Chriſt came to Iohn to be baptized, God the Father ſpake from heauen, God the Sonne was in the water, the holy Ghoſt deſcended in the likenes of a Doue: and Ioh.1.33. He that ſent me to baptize with water: Heere is the authoritie of God the Father in Iohns baptiſme, ſaid vnto me, Vpon whom thou ſhalt ſee the ſpirit come downe, &c. he it is that baptizeth with the holy Ghoſt; here is the name and authoritie of God the Sonne, and of the holy Ghoſt. John 1.33. The Maſter of Sentences is of this opinion; Tunc inuocato nomine Trinitatis inſtitutus eſt in Iordane Baptiſmus, &c. Then in Iordane the name of the Trinitie being inuocated, Baptiſme was inſtituted, when the myſterie of the Trinitie appeared: lib.4.diſt.3.g. Secondly, Iohn vſed the ſame forme in baptizing, which the Apoſtles did; they baptized in the name of the Lord Ieſus, Act.2.38. and ſo did Iohn, Act.19.4. Act 2.38.8.16. and this S. Ambroſe teſtifieth, that Iohn baptized in the name of Chriſt, lib.1.de ſpiritu c.3. and therefore it is not vnlike, but that Iohn baptized in the name of the Trinitie, as the Apoſtles did: though the name of Ieſus only be expreſſed, becauſe thereby is ſignified the end and ſcope of baptiſme for remiſſion of ſinnes, rather then an exact and preciſe forme of Baptiſme.

The Proteſtants.

THat Iohns baptiſme was not diuers from Chriſts baptiſme, but was all one with it in propertie and effect, and that they which were baptized by Iohn, were baptized in the name of Chriſt, and therefore needed not againe to be baptized: thus it is made manifeſt out of Scripture.

Argum.1. Iohns baptiſme differed not in the matter of the Sacrament, for he baptized with water as Chriſts Apoſtles did. There was alſo the ſame forme of both, the word of God: for Iohn alſo taught the people to beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt that was to come, Act.19.4. There was alſo the ſame ſcope and Act.19.4. end of Iohns baptiſme: For he preached the baptiſme of repentance, for remiſſion of ſins, Mark.1.4. Mark.1.4. Ergo, it was the ſame with the baptiſme of Chriſt.

Bellarmine anſwereth that Iohn did not baptize vnto remiſſion of ſinnes, but vnto repentance: his baptiſme did incite and ſtirre vp to repentance, and ſo conſequently they which repented, obtained remiſſion of ſinnes.

Contra. Firſt, Iohn preached the baptiſme of repentance to remiſſion of ſinnes, Luke 3.3. which is Luke 3.3. all one with the baptiſme which Peter miniſtred, Act.2.38. Repent and be baptized in the name of the Act.2.38. Lord Ieſus, for remiſſion of ſinnes: repentance and remiſſion of ſinnes is the ſcope both of Iohns and Peters baptiſme. Bellarmine replieth, that repentance went before Peters baptiſme, as a preparation vnto it, but it followed Iohns as the effect. Contra. Firſt, it appeareth, Luke 3.12. that the Publicanes Luke 3.12. which came to be baptized, firſt confeſſed their ſinnes, ſaying, Maſter, what ſhall we doe? and therefore repentance alſo went before Iohns Baptiſme. Secondly, if Iohns Baptiſme wrought repentance, then conſequently alſo it aſſured them of remiſſion of ſinnes: for where there is true repentance, there is remiſſion. Thirdly, S. Ambroſe, as I haue ſhewed, ſaith, that Iohn did baptize in remiſſionem peccatorum: for remiſſion of ſinnes.

Argum.2. If the Baptiſme inſtituted by Chriſt were another Baptiſme, then Iohns was, and yet he himſelfe was baptized of Iohn: then it would follow, that wee are baptized now with another Baptiſme, then Chriſt himſelfe was, for he receiued Iohns Baptiſme: but this were very abſurd to ſay, that there is not the ſame Baptiſme of the head and the members, of Chriſt and his Church: Ergo, Iohns Baptiſme all one with Chriſts.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that it was more conuenient for Chriſt to receiue Iohns Baptiſme, then his owne, leſt he ſhould haue been thought himſelfe to ſtand in need of regeneration.

Contra. 1. Iohn alſo baptized for remiſſion of ſinnes: therefore if there had bin any ſuch danger, Chriſt might haue bin thought to need remiſſion of ſinnes, by receiuing Iohns Baptiſme. 2. Chriſt was not baptized for any cauſe in himſelfe, but to giue an example to vs: For ſo it became him to fulfill all all righteouſnes: not to preſcribe lawes to others, whereof he had not bin the firſt practizer himſelfe: ſo was he circumciſed, his mother purified: ſo did he celebrate his laſt Supper with his Apoſtles, not for his owne vſe, but for our example: In his owne perſon for our benefit to conſecrate theſe holy inſtitutions.

Againe, the Apoſtles were baptized with none other, then Iohns Baptiſme, for Chriſt baptized none: neither doth the Scripture make mention of any Baptiſme that they receiued, ſauing when hee waſhed their feete, Ioh. 13. Saint Auguſtine ſpeaketh doubtfully, as he is alleaged alſo, Decret. part. 3. diſtinct. 4. c. 147. Apoſtolos intelligimus iam fuiſſe baptizatos, &c. Wee vnderſtand that the Apoſtles were baptized, either with the Baptiſme of Iohn, as ſome thinke, or which is more credible, with the John 4.1. Baptiſme of Chriſt: but it is contrarie to the Scriptures, that Chriſt baptized any, Ioh. 4. 1. therefore they were baptized with Iohns Baptiſme: ſeeing then that both Chriſt and his Apoſtles receiued Iohns Baptiſme, it muſt needs be the ſame with Chriſts.

So witneſſeth Leo 1. Epiſtol. cap. 6. and it is rehearſed in the Decrees, part. 3. diſt. 3. c. 14. Sic voluit Christus baptizari, &c. Chriſt ſo was baptized, as it pleaſed him to be circumciſed. And a little after: He did conſecrate in himſelfe the Sacrament of his owne Baptiſme, ſo ſhewing himſelfe, as hee is the chiefe, ſo in all things to be the firſt, &c. Chriſt therefore was baptized with his owne Baptiſme.

S. Ambroſe alſo thus ſaith, Serm. 41. Ergo fratres tingi debemus eodem fonte, quo Christus: Wherefore brethren we muſt be dipped in the ſame fountaine with Chriſt, that we may be the ſame that hee is. And the Maſter of Sentences ſaith, Institutio facta eſt baptiſmi, &c. Baptiſme was inſtituted, when Chriſt was baptized in Iordane: Ergo, Chriſt was baptized with his owne baptiſme.

Epheſ. 4. 5. Act. 19. 4. Argum. 3. The Apoſtle ſaith, Epheſ. 4. 5. One Lord, one faith, one baptiſme: but Iohns faith was the ſame with Chriſts faith, for he taught the people to beleeue in Chriſt, Act. 19. 4. Ergo, his baptiſme was one with Chriſts.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, by this reaſon we may proue, that Moſes and Dauid had alſo the Baptiſme of Chriſt, for they had the ſame faith, &c.

Contra. Firſt, hee anſwereth very abſurdly, ſeeing the Apoſtle ſpeaketh manifeſtly of thoſe times then preſent: therefore hee ſhould haue firſt ſhewed that Moſes and Dauid had any Baptiſme at all, and then we would alſo haue anſwered, what kinde of Baptiſme it was. Secondly, and yet that Baptiſme wherewith Moſes and the Iſraelites were baptized in the red Sea, and the clowd, was ſpiritually the ſame that Chriſts Baptiſme is, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, 1. Cor. 10. 2.

Secondly, ſaith hee, it would alſo follow by this reaſon, that heretikes haue not the Baptiſme of Chriſt, becauſe they haue not the ſame faith: and therefore the Apoſtle doth not thus reaſon, There is one faith, therefore one Baptiſme: but exhorteth them to vnitie, becauſe they had all one faith, and one Baptiſme.

Contra. Firſt, heretikes haue the Baptiſme of Chriſt, if they baptize in the faith of Chriſt; otherwiſe they haue not the ſame Baptiſme: for an heretike baptizing in the name of the Trinitie, baptizeth in the faith of the Trinitie, howſoeuer he beleeue to himſelfe: and therefore this obiection notwithſtanding, there is one faith and one Baptiſme. Secondly, how could the Apoſtle perſwade to vnitie, becauſe they had all one Baptiſme, writing to the Epheſians, amongſt whom there were ſome, that had receiued onely Iohns Baptiſme, Act. 19. 4. 3. if Iohns Baptiſme and Chriſts had not been all one? Thirdly, S. Ambroſe proueth that Iohns Baptiſme could not be iterated, by this place, vnum Baptiſmum, one Baptiſme, lib. 1. de ſpirit. c. 3. And ſo alſo Leo enforceth this place, that Baptiſme is not to be Decret. p. 2. c. 1. qu. 1. c. 51. iterated, becauſe there is but one.

Bellarmine denieth, that the proper end and ſcope of Iohns Baptiſme was for remiſſion of ſinnes: yet Auguſtine granteth it, who notwithſtanding being carried away with the error of that time, doth elſewhere put ſome difference betweene the Baptiſme of Iohn and Chriſt: To none of the Prophets doe we reade to haue been granted, to baptize in water, in remiſſionem peccatorum, for the remiſſion of ſinnes, which was granted vnto Iohn: There being then the ſame proper end and ſcope of both theſe Baptiſmes, how can they chuſe but be all one? De Baptiſt. cont. Donatiſt. lib. 5. c. 9.

I will laſtly vrge againſt them their owne Maſter, who thinketh, that they which did not ſpem ponere in Baptiſmo Ioannis, put their truſt in Iohns Baptiſme were not baptized againe, lib. 4. diſt. 2. f. but Act. 19. 4. none by him baptized ſo did; for he taught them to beleeue in Chriſt, Act. 19. 4. Ergo, his Baptiſme was not iterated, and ſo conſequently was the ſame with Chriſts Baptiſme.

1 Tertullian, though ſometime he ſeeme to thinke, that Iohns Baptiſme did not conferre the holie Ghoſt, yet he holdeth it to haue been the ſame Baptiſme with that, which was miniſtred by the Lib. de Baptiſm. Apoſtles: Nec quicquam refert inter eos, quos Ioannes in Iordane, & quos Petrus in Tiberi tinxit: Neither is there any difference betweene thoſe whom Iohn baptized in Iordane, and Peter in Tiber, at Rome: but the Apoſtles baptized with Chriſts Baptiſme.

2 Damaſcene, though he alſo ſeeme to diſtinguiſh betweene Chriſts Baptiſme and Iohns: yet he Damaſcen lib. 4. de fid. c. 5. [illegible], &c. confeſſeth, that there is but one baptiſme for remiſſion of ſinnes: but Iohns baptiſme was for remiſſion of ſinnes, therefore it was that one baptiſme.

3 Confeſſion of Heluetia the latter, chap. 20. The firſt that baptized was Iohn, who dipped Chriſt in the water in Iordane; from him it came to the Apoſtles, who after did baptize with water: The Apoſtles baptiſme then and Iohns was the ſame.

4 Clictoneus

I. Clictoueus affirmeth, ea ipſa ablutio Chriſti baptiſma fuit: That waſhing wherewith Chriſt was baptized of Iohn, was Chriſts baptiſme, &c. but it was alſo Iohns: therefore the baptiſme of Chriſt and Iohn was all one; but they conferred diuers things: Iohn baptized Chriſt, and Chriſt baptized Iohn, hee with water, Chriſt with the ſpirit.

Annot. in 4. lib. Damaſcen de fide. c. 10.

THE EIGHTH QVESTION, OF THE CEREmonies and rites of Baptiſme.

The Papiſts.

THey haue brought into the Sacrament of Baptiſme a multitude of ſuperſtitious ceremonies, whereby they haue greatly polluted the holy Sacrament of Baptiſme, mixing therewith their owne inuentions.

15. Error.

Firſt before Baptiſme, they haue deuiſed theſe toyes to bee vſed. Firſt, they doe exorciſe, coniure, and exufflate the euill ſpirit from the partie to be baptized. Secondly, they touch the eares and noſtrels with ſpettle, that his eares may bee opened to heare the word, and his noſtrels, to diſcerne betweene the ſmell of good and euill. Thirdly, the Prieſt ſigneth his eyes, eares, mouth, breaſt, forehead, noſtrels, with the ſigne of the croſſe, that all his ſenſes thereby may be defended. Fourthly, then hallowed ſalt is put into his mouth, that he may be ſeaſoned with wiſedome, and be kept from putrifying in ſinne. Fifthly, the partie is anointed then with oyle in his breaſt, that hee may be ſafe from euill ſuggeſtions, and betweene the ſhoulders, which ſignifieth the receiuing of ſpirituall ſtrength.

Secondly, theſe ceremonies doe accompanie Baptiſme it ſelfe. 1. The font and water therein is conſecrated and hallowed, in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and holy Ghoſt. 2. He is thrice dipped in the water, to ſignifie the being of Chriſt 3. dayes in the graue.

Thirdly, after Baptiſme, they haue this vſe. 1. He is anointed with holy Chriſme in the top of the head, and thereby is become a Chriſtian. 2. A white garment is put vpon him, to betoken his regeneration. 3. A vaile is put vpon his head, in token that hee is now crowned with a royall Diademe. 4. A burning taper is put into his hand, to fulfill that ſaying in the Goſpell, Let your light ſo ſhine before men, &c. Bellarm. lib. 1. de Baptiſm. 25. 26. 27. Catechiſm. Rom. p. 310. Gabr. Biel. lib. 4. diſtinct. 6. queſt. 3.

The Proteſtants.

AGainſt theſe Popiſh ceremonies, which they vſe in Baptiſme, we doe reaſon thus.

1 It is contrarie to the rule of the Goſpell, that there ſhould be ſuch types, ſhadowes, ſignifications, brought into the ſeruice of God, as they make in Baptiſme: for ſeeing wee haue the body which is Chriſt, all ſuch ſhadowes ought to be aboliſhed. Coloſſ. 2. 17.

Coloſſ. 2. 17.

2 In one Sacrament they haue forged and found out many, as their chriſme, oyle, ſalt, ſpettle: which they make not onely ſeales of holy things, but giuers and conferrers of grace, which is more then any Sacrament can haue: and it is contrarie to the Scripture: for the ſpirit of God is as the winde that bloweth, where it liſteth, Ioh. 3. It is not tied to creatures, elements, externall ſignes, as they include the ſpirit (as it were) in theſe outward things, which haue power (as they affirme) to giue wiſedome, ſtrength, power againſt the diuell, and ſuch like. But S Paul ſaith, that the weapons of our warfare are not carnall, 2. Cor. 10. 4. The meanes whereby Chriſtians both obtaine ſpirituall graces, and ſhend them from euill, are ſpirituall. For if in Chriſt Circumciſion auaile not any thing, which was notwithſtanding inſtituted of God; but faith is all in all, Gal. 5. 6. much more vaine and vnauaileable are the deuiſes and inuentions of men.

3 This beggerly companie of ceremonies doth alſo deface and impugne the ſincere and pure inſtitution of Chriſt: None of thoſe ceremonies were vſed when Chriſt himſelfe was baptized. Matth. 3. which notwithſtanding had beene moſt fit, conſidering the worthineſſe of his perſon that was baptized: Neither did Chriſt giue any ſuch thing in charge to his Apoſtles, but biddeth them onely preach, and baptize in the name of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt, Matth. 28. 19. nor yet were any ſuch ceremonies in vſe in the Apoſtles time, Saint Peter ſaith, Act. 10. 47. Can any man forbid water, that theſe ſhould not be baptized? He calleth not for oyle, ſalt, ſpettle, or any ſuch thing, but onely for water.

THE

THE THIRTEENTH GENERALL CONTROVERSIE OF THE SACRAMENT OF THE LORDS SVPPER, OR EVCHARIST.

THis Controuerſie hath two parts: Firſt, of the Sacrament it ſelfe. Secondly, of the ſacrifice, which they ſay, is offered vp in the Sacrament: which they call the ſacrifice of the Maſſe.

THE FIRST PART, OF THE SACRAment of the Euchariſt.

THis part of the Controuerſie ſtandeth vpon diuers queſtions; Firſt, whether the body of Chriſt be really and ſubſtantially in the Sacrament. Secondly, whether the elements of bread and wine be changed, conuerted, and tranſubſtantiate into the very body and fleſh of Chriſt. Thirdly, whether the Euchariſt remaine a Sacrament after the vſe and celebration. Fourthly, of the outward elements in this Sacrament. Fifthly, of the words of conſecration. Sixthly, of the proper effect of the Lords Supper. Seuenthly, of the manner of celebrating it. Eighthly, whether it ought to be miniſtred in one kinde? Ninthly, whether it is to be adored.

THE FIRST QVESTION, CONCERNING THE carnall preſence of Chriſts bodie in the Sacrament.

The Papiſts.

IN the Sacrament of the Euchariſt, vnder the formes of bread and wine, by the efficacie of the word of Chriſt ſpoken by the Prieſt, is really, verily, and ſubſtantially preſent, the naturall body and blood of Chriſt, which was conceiued of the virgine Marie; the ſame body, that is now in heauen, Rhemiſt. Math. 26. ſect. 4. yet after another manner: For he is in heauen according to the naturall exiſtance of his body: in the Sacrament, he is really preſent in his fleſh, yet ſacramentally by his omnipotent power, Concil. Trid. ſeſſ. 13. can. 1. 16 Error, Fox. 1135. articul. 1. 6. articul.

Argum. 1. The figures muſt be inferiour to the things that are figured and repreſented: the Sacraments of the law were figures of the Sacraments in the Goſpell: therefore they ought to be inferiour: But vnleſſe the bread and wine ſhould bee the very bloud and fleſh of Chriſt in the Sacrament: their Sacraments in the law ſhould not onely not be inferiour, but farre ſuperiour to ours. As for example, the Paſchall Lambe is in nature to be preferred before bread; and the ſlaying of the Lambe did more liuely repreſent the death of Chriſt, then the breaking of bread; the eating of fleſh doth alſo better ſet forth the ſpirituall nouriſhing, then the eating of bread. Wherefore, vnleſſe wee beleeue a reall preſence in the Sacrament, their ſacrifices, in dignitie and excellencie, ſhould farre exceede and excell ours, Bellarm. lib. 1. de ſacram. Euchariſt. cap. 3. This argument alſo vrged by the Doway tranſlators. annot. in Exod. 25. 30.

Anſwere. 1. It is not true, that their Sacraments were figures of ours: But Saint Paul ſheweth, that both their Sacraments and ours doe figure out and repreſent the ſame thing, as the ſpirituall eating and drinking of Chriſt, 1. Cor. 10. 2. 3. Our Sacraments are indeede figures correſpondent and anſwerable to theirs, and theirs alſo had a certaine reference and relation to ours: but they were not types of ours: for then our Sacraments ſhould bee the body of theirs; whereas Chriſt is the bodie both of their Sacraments and ours. Saint Peter ſaith, that Baptiſme is an antitypon, a figure anſwerable to the ſauing of the eight perſons in the flood, 1. Pet. 3. 21. They are correſpondent one to the other, and had mutuall relation and reſpect one to the other. But that was not properly a type of Baptiſme, but both baptiſme and that are figures and ſignes, and liuely repreſentations of our ſaluation in Chriſt. 1. Cor. 10. 2. 3. 1. Pet. 3. 21.

2 If the reall preſence of Chriſt onely commendeth the Sacrament, and aduanceth it before the rites of the Law, which in all other reſpects are better: by this argument Baptiſme ſtill remaineth inferiour to the Sacraments of the Law: for you affirme no reall preſence in Baptiſme, as you doe in the Euchariſt: and in all other reſpects it muſt needes giue place to Circumciſion; for the cutting off of the fleſh is a more liuely repreſentation of regeneration, then is the waſhing by water: and the fleſh of man is in nature more precious then water. So by this reaſon, though you haue wonne credite for the Euchariſt, yet you haue loſt it for Baptiſme.

3 We anſwere therfore, that although the reall preſence be ſet apart, yet our Sacraments are more excellent then theirs. Firſt, the price and worth of things in their nature are not to bee weighed in a Sacrament, but they muſt be conſidered in reſpect of the vſe, to the which they are ordained by the inſtitution. Fleſh, you ſay, is better then bread: ſo is wine and milke better then water in their nature: but in Baptiſme water is better then they, becauſe Chriſt hath now ſet it apart for a more holy vſe. Secondly, the ſlaying of the Lambe doth more liuely repreſent, ſay you, the death of Chriſt, then the breaking of bread.

Further, wee grant, that if breaking of bread had beene vſed in the Law, it had not beene then ſo ſignificant as the ſlaying of beaſts: but the breaking of bread now in the light of the Goſpell, in this abundance of knowledge and inſtruction, being a ſigne of a thing alreadie done and finiſhed, muſt needes be more pregnant and liuely in repreſentation, then the killing of ſacrifices in the law, which were types of things to come, the myſterie of the Goſpell being not yet opened to the world. And againe, the words of inſtitution, and conſecration vſed and pronounced in the Sacraments of the new Teſtament, are cleerer and more ſignificant, then any preſcribed in the ſhadowes of the Law, and therefore doe make a more liuely and effectuall repreſentation in the elements. Wherefore our Sacraments are more excellent then theirs, in reſpect of the more cleere light and fuller ſignification, which they haue by the word of God, and the preaching of the Goſpell ioyned vnto them: as the Apoſtle
2.Cor.4.3. ſaith, his Goſpell was not hid, 2.Cor.4.3. and Ieſus Chriſt, was by his preacking deſcribed in their ſight, Galath.3.1. Galath.3.1. We neede not deuiſe any other way of excellencie for our Sacraments, then this, which we haue ſaid, agreeable to the Scriptures.

Bellarmine anſwereth: Firſt, that it is but an accidentall thing in our Sacraments, that they betoken a thing done and paſt, and therefore for all this eſſentially the elements of the Sacraments of the Law are better.

Contra. Firſt, as though the excellencie of the accident doth not make the thing, being in ſubſtance leſſe worthie, more excellent: as wine in the nature and ſubſtance thereof is more worthie then water, yet water in Baptiſme in reſpect of the accidentall vſe is more excellent then wine. Secondly, it is not now a thing accidentall in our Sacraments to repreſent a thing alreadie done; but it is of, and belonging to the nature of them, which otherwiſe were no Sacraments.

Secondly, ſaith he, the Euchariſt ordained by Chriſt, at his laſt Supper, did repreſent his death to come; and therefore in this reſpect, was no more worthie then the Sacraments of the olde law, which did ſhew alſo things to come, Bellar.cap.4.

Contra. Firſt, as Iohn Baptiſt was greater by the teſtimonie of our Sauiour, than a Prophet, becauſe they did long before prophecie of him; but he did point him out with the finger, being alreadie come: ſo the laſt Supper of Chriſt repreſenting his death, then inſtant, is more excellent than the Sacraments of the law, foreſhewing it long after to be fulfilled. Secondly, he hath gained nothing by this reaſon, but a derogation to Chriſts laſt Supper, ſeeing that our Sacraments now doe demonſtrate Chriſts death alreadie paſt. But as the Paſſe-ouer at the firſt inſtitution thereof being eaten the Euen before their deliuerance, was no leſſe excellent then the feaſts of the Paſſe-ouer, afterward celebrated in remembrance of their deliuerance paſt: no more is Chriſts laſt Supper going before his death, herein inferiour to the celebration of the Lords Supper now ſince his death.

Thirdly, the words of inſtitution are not of the eſſence of the Sacrament, which they ſay make the elements more excellent; the words of conſecration are of the eſſence, which are by them denied, and refuſed, as words of enchauntment, Bellarm.ibid.

Contra. Firſt, an accidentall excellencie may make the ſubiect more excellent, as I haue ſhewed; as the acceſſion of honour, being but an accident, yet maketh one man more worthie than an other. Secondly, the words of inſtitution doe make a Sacrament, and therefore are of the eſſence thereof, giuing the forme, as the elements yeeld the matter. Thirdly, words of conſecration we refuſe not ſimply, but your words of conſecration, therein miſliking theſe three things: Firſt, that you make not all the words of inſtitution, conſecratorie; but ſome few of them. Secondly, that by the very ſillables of thoſe words pronounced without relation to the prayers of the Church, the elements ſhould bee conuerted. Thirdly, that onely by the words of conſecration the Sacrament is made; whereas the whole action, of giuing, receiuing, diſtributing, giuing of thanks, doth helpe toward the conſecration. Fourthly, you doe then grant, that the words of conſecration doe make the Sacraments of the Goſpel more excellent: wherefore not the reall preſence onely.

2.Ioh.6.55. Argum. 2.Ioh.6.55. Chriſt ſaith, My fleſh is meate in deede, and my blood is drinke in deede: he that eateth my fleſh and drinketh my blood dwelleth in me, and I in him.

Firſt, this place muſt bee vnderſtood not of any ſpirituall eating or drinking of Chriſt without the Sacrament, but is properly meant of the manducation and eating of him in the Sacrament. Firſt, verſ. 51. The bread (ſaith Chriſt) that I will giue; hee ſpeaketh of a thing to come, for the Sacrament was afterward inſtituted: but if this bread were to be taken for his word, and the eating thereof for beleeuing in him; in this ſenſe the bread was giuen alreadie.

Anſw. Chriſt alſo ſpeaketh in the preſent tenſe, verſ.32. My father giueth you the true bread from heauen: And, I am the liuing bread that came downe from heauen: if any man eate of this bread, he ſhall liue for euer, verſ.51. He ſaith not, he that ſhall eate, but he that euen now eateth. And afterward hee ſpeaketh of the time to come, The bread that I ſhall giue, becauſe his death and paſſion was not yet finiſhed: therefore hee ſaith, The bread that I ſhall giue, is my fleſh, which I will giue for the life of the world. But he ſpeaketh euery where of the eating of his fleſh in the preſent tenſe, verſ.35.50,51.53. which cannot be vnderſtood of the ſacramentall eating, the Sacrament being not yet inſtituted, but of a ſpirituall manducation.

Verſ.51.53.

Secondly, ſay they, thoſe words being applied to the Sacrament, muſt needes alſo bee vnderſtood properly and literally, for the very eating of the fleſh of Chriſt, and drinking his blood, not tropically, or figuratiuely.

The fleſh of Chriſt, which Chriſt promiſeth to giue them to be eaten, he preferreth before the Manna, which their fathers did eate in the wilderneſſe: the true bread which he giueth them, is more excellent then the bread of Manna. But if the bread in the Sacrament doe but ſignifie the fleſh of Chriſt, and be not it in very deede, it ſhould be no better then Manna, which alſo did ſignifie and ſhew forth Chriſt, Bellarm.cap.6.

Anſwere. Firſt, Chriſt compareth not the materiall Manna, and the ſacramentall bread together, but he ſpeaketh of the true bread, which is himſelfe, as verſ.33. The bread of God is he, which commeth downe from heauen: The Sacrament, neither ſacramentall bread was yet giuen or inſtituted, neither yet could be eaten: but this bread, whereof Chriſt ſpeaketh, was euen at that time giuen; as verſ.32. My father giueth you the true bread from heauen: and it was euen then to be eaten: verſ.58. He that eateth of this bread, ſhall liue for euer: So then the true bread, that is, Chriſt is preferred before Manna. Secondly, the ſacramentall bread, without any carnall preſence, is more excellent then Moſes Manna, being a more liuely and full repreſentation of the ſpirituall manducation of Chriſt.

Verſ.33.32.

Thirdly, that Chriſt ſpeaketh of a ſacramentall eating and drinking of Chriſt, Bellarmine thus further proueth: becauſe that the Iewes vnderſtood Chriſt to ſpeake of the very eating of his fleſh, and were offended at it: neither doth Chriſt correct their opinion, as hee doth inſtruct Nicodemus ignorance Ioh.3. further expounding himſelfe: and if Chriſt had meant onely, that he ſhould be ſpiritually eaten, they needed not to haue taken any offence, Bellarm.cap.5.argum.3.

Contra. Firſt, it is falſe, that our Sauiour correcteth not the error of the Capernaites, ſeeing hee further thus expoundeth himſelfe, verſ.63. The fleſh profiteth nothing, the words that I ſpeake are ſpirit and life: ſhewing, that he muſt be ſpiritually vnderſtood. Secondly it is true, that they needed not to haue taken offence at Chriſts ſpeech, being altogether of a ſpirituall eating, if they had rightly conceiued him: but becauſe they vnderſtoode him groſly of a carnall eating, as the Papiſts doe, thereof proceeded the offence. This argument he might very well haue concealed, for it maketh moſt againſt himſelfe.

Fourthly, this diſtinction of ſpeech vſed by our Sauiour Chriſt, and ſo often repeated, to eate his fleſh, and drinke his blood, verſ.54.56. ſheweth, that he ſpeaketh of the ſacramentall eating and drinking vnder the ſignes of bread and wine: for otherwiſe in the ſpirituall receiuing of Chriſt by faith, it is all one to eate him and drinke him, Bellarm.arg.4.

Verſ.54.56.

Contra. Firſt, you your ſelues alſo make no difference betweene the ſacramentall eating and drinking of Chriſt, miniſtring onely vnder one kinde: wherefore you are anſwered by your owne practiſe. Secondly, the Scripture ſpeaking of the ſpirituall participation of Chriſt by faith, doth often vſe this diſtinction of eating and drinking, to ſhew, that Chriſt is the abſolute foode of our ſoule; as Iohn 6. verſ.35. He that commeth vnto me ſhall neuer hunger, and hee that beleeueth in mee ſhall neuer thirſt. And Ioh.4.14. Whoſoeuer drinketh of this water, ſhall neuer be more a thirſt: which places are onely vnderſtood, of the receiuing of Chriſt ſpiritually by faith.

Iohn 6.35.
Iohn 4.24.

Now on the contrarie ſide we will proue, that this place contained in the 6. chapter of Iohn, cannot be ſo vnderſtood as they expound it.

Firſt, Chriſt ſpeaketh not onely of the ſacramentall eating of his fleſh, and drinking of his blood, but generally of the ſpirituall participation by faith, whether in the Sacrament or without, which is wrought in vs by the holy Ghoſt.

Argum.1. If it be vnderſtood of the Sacrament, then it will follow that no man can be ſaued, vnleſſe he doe receiue the Sacrament: for Chriſt ſaith, verſ.53. Except you eate my fleſh and drinke my blood, you cannot haue life in you. This, I am ſure, they will hardly grant, that the Euchariſt alſo ſhould be neceſſarie, as they make Baptiſme, to ſaluation.

Iohn 6.53.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, by this reaſon not the ſacramentall eating onely of Chriſt, but the ſpirituall alſo, which is by faith, is excluded: for infants haue no faith, whereby they ſhould eate or drink Chriſt. Secondly, this place then of neceſſitie muſt be vnderſtood of men of yeeres, who either in act, or at the leaſt in vow & deſire muſt be partakers of the Sacrament: and this appeareth, becauſe Chriſt ſaith, verſ.53. Except ye eate, &c. ſpeaking to thoſe that heard him: but treating of the neceſſitie of Baptiſme, he ſaith not, except ye be borne of water, &c. but in generall words, except a man be borne of water, &c. And beſide Chriſt ſpeaketh of eating of bread, whereas children are fed with milke, and not bread, cap.7.reſp.ad argum.3.

Contra. Firſt, though infants haue no faith, yet the life of Chriſt is applied vnto ſo many of them as are ſaued by the ſecret operation of Gods ſpirit: for ſeeing Chriſt giueth life vnto the world, and he no otherwiſe giueth life, then as he is the true bread of God, ver. 33. for it is the propertie of bread to giue life, then infants alſo, if they haue life and ſaluation in him, muſt alſo ſome waies be made partakers of this bread. Secondly, be it granted, that this place is properly vnderſtood, of thoſe that are, adulti, of yeeres (which we will not much ſtand vpon) yet it will follow vpon their expoſition, that many, which are preuented by death, before they receiue the Communion, ſhould be damned: for although they doe much in heart and vow deſire it, this is not ſacramentally, but ſpiritually by faith to eate Chriſt: which wee ſay is the true meaning of this place. Thirdly, why may not alſo that place of Baptiſme, Iohn 3.5. Ioh. 3. Vnleſſe a man be borne of water, &c. be expounded of thoſe of perfect age, as well as this? They haue therefore put an anſwere in our mouthes for that place ſo much vrged for the neceſſitie of Baptiſme. The difference, which Bellarmine pretendeth, is nothing: for in this place alſo, verſ. 54. Chriſt ſpeaketh in the third perſon, whoſoeuer eateth my fleſh, &c. hath eternall life: ſo that the contrarie, though pronounced in the ſecond perſon, except ye eate, &c. verſ. 53. appeareth to haue the ſame meaning. Fourthly, his obiection, that children eate milke, not bread, is nothing: ſeeing our Sauiour ſpeaketh not of materiall, but ſpirituall bread: and therefore, as men of yeeres may bee fed with ſpirituall 1.Cor.3.2. milke, 1. Corinth. 3. 2. ſo children in yeeres may be nouriſhed with ſpirituall bread.

Argum. 2. That Chriſt ſpeaketh of that bread, which is ſpiritually eaten by faith, it is euident out Iohn 6.47.48.50. of the text, verſ. 47. He that beleeueth in me hath euerlaſting life. Verſ. 48, I am the bread of life. And verſ. 50. This is the bread, that commeth downe from heauen, that he that eateth of it, ſhould not die. By this it appeareth, that to beleeue in Chriſt, is to eate Chriſt.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſt indeede ſpeaketh of the true bread, which is himſelfe, communicated vnto vs by faith: as alſo he maketh mention of the ſacramentall bread, verſ. 51. The bread that I will giue is my fleſh.

Contra. It is euident that Chriſt ſpeaketh in this place of one and the ſame bread, which is himſelfe: firſt, he ſaith, I am the liuing bread, verſ. 51. And againe, the bread that I will giue is my fleſh: but Chriſt and his fleſh are all one; and therefore Chriſt and his fleſh are one and the ſame bread. Second- Verſ. 58. 59. ly, verſ. 58. Chriſt ſpeaketh of the bread which came downe from heauen; but the ſacramentall bread commeth not from heauen: Ergo, Chriſt ſpeaketh not of that bread. Thirdly, the effects of the bread are the ſame, he that eateth Chriſts fleſh, hath eternall life, verſ. 54. And, he that eateth the bread, that came from heauen, ſhall liue for euer, verſ. 58. Wherefore the bread Chriſt, and the fleſh of Chriſt, are taken for the ſame.

Argum. 3. Chriſt ſaith, He that eateth my fleſh ſhall liue for euer, verſ. 54. but euery one that eateth Chriſt ſacramentally, is not ſaued: wherefore Chriſt ſpeaketh not of a ſacramentall eating.

Bellarmine anſwereth, the words of Chriſt muſt be vnderſtoode conditionally, if they doe eate Ioel. 2. 32. Chriſt aright: as in like maner the Scripture ſaith, Ioel. 2. Whoſoeuer calleth vpon the name of the Lord, Pro. 1. 28. ſhall be ſaued: and yet it is ſaid, Prou. 1. They ſhall call vpon me, but I will not heare: becauſe they call not aright.

Contra. This condition is ſometime requiſite to be vnderſtood in ſuch things, as may be without it: as in prayer, becauſe all prayer is not in truth: and therefore S. Iames ſaith, The prayer of faith (not Iam. 5. 15. euery prayer) ſhall ſaue the ſicke, Iam. 5. But in this caſe of eating and drinking Chriſt this condition is ſuperfluous, becauſe it is impoſſible to eate and drinke Chriſt, if it be not done aright: a man may eate 1.Cor. 11. 27. the bread, and drinke the cup of the Lord vnworthily, as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1. Cor. 11. 27. but he cannot eate or drinke Chriſt vnworthily: for he either eateth him not at all; or if he doe, it muſt be effectuall: for Chriſt himſelfe ſaith, verſ. 55. My fleſh is meate indeede: wherefore hee that eateth Chriſt, if he doe eate him at all, muſt needes haue meate indeede, and ſo conſequently be nouriſhed to eternall life.

Argum. 4. Theſe words, verſ. 51. The bread that I will giue is my fleſh, cannot in their owne ſenſe be vnderſtood of the Sacrament, ſeeing they themſelues hold, that the bread, after tranſubſtantiation, is annihilate, and is bread no more.

Bellarmine is here driuen to this ſhift, to ſay, that bread is not here taken properly, but generally for meate.

Contra. Firſt, he himſelfe in his anſwere to our firſt argument obiected, that infants were not comprehended in this generall ſpeech of Chriſt, except ye eate, &c. becauſe they eate not bread, but milke: where he taketh bread properly, and not for any meate; for milke alſo is meate: and yet forgetting himſelfe, he taketh it here improperly. Secondly, if Chriſt ſpeake not of bread properly, then neither of drinke properly: then not of the Sacrament, which is celebrated not with any meate, but onely with bread.

Argum. 5. If Chriſt hath relation to the Sacrament, then muſt it of neceſſitie be miniſtred in both kindes; for in euery place he ioyneth both theſe together, the eating of his fleſh, and drinking of his blood: but this is contrarie to their practiſe.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the fleſh and blood of Chriſt is as fully receiued vnder one kind as both, Iohn 10. 57. as he himſelfe ſaith, verſ. 57. He that eateth me, ſhall liue by mee: ſo that hee which eateth Chriſt doth both eate and drinke him, reſponſ. ad argum. 10.

Contra. Firſt, to eate and drinke Chriſt ſpiritually by faith is all one: but ſacramentally to eate him, and drinke him, are two diuers things; for otherwiſe the one element were ſuperfluous. Secondlie, Bellarmine himſelfe, cap.5. argum.4. enforceth this diſtinction of eating and drinking, to bee vnderſtood of the Sacrament, where Chriſt is both eaten and drunke vnder the formes of bread and wine, whereas ſpiritually, ſaith he, it is all one, to eate and drinke Chriſt; but now forgetting himſelfe, hee would take away this diſtinction: wherefore all this while he hath ſaid nothing.

Auguſtine alſo thus writeth vpon theſe words, Hoc eſt manducare illam eſcam, & illum bibere potum in Chriſto manere, & illum manentem in ſe habere: This it is to eate that fleſh, and to drinke that drinke, to abide in Chriſt, and to haue him abiding in vs: &c. But this may be done without the Sacrament: Ergo, it is not neceſſarie to vnderſtand it of the Sacrament.

Tract.in Iohann.26.

Secondly, though we ſhould graunt, that this whole treatiſe Iohn 6. may fitly bee referred to the Sacrament, yet the words muſt be taken figuratiuely, for the ſpirituall eating and drinking of Chriſt in the Sacrament, and not otherwiſe.

Arg.1. Verſ.35. Chriſt ſo expoundeth his own words: I am the bread of life, he that commeth to me ſhall not hunger, and he that beleeueth in me ſhall not thirſt. To eate then, and to drinke Chriſt, is to beleeue in him.

Iohn 6.35.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, if the bread in the Sacrament be but figuratiuely the fleſh of Chriſt, and not the very fleſh it ſelfe, then Chriſt ſhould giue no better thing then Moſes did, who alſo gaue them Manna, which was a type and figure of Chriſt. cap.6. reſp. ad argum.1.

Contra. Firſt, though Manna to the faithfull amongſt the Iſraelites were not onely a materiall, but a ſpirituall food, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, 1.Cor.10.3. yet in this place mention is made thereof, as it was a materiall food: as verſ.35. Moſes gaue you not bread from heauen; but as Manna repreſented Chriſt it was a heauenly bread: wherefore the ſacramentall bread compared with the materiall Manna, is much more excellent. Secondly, Manna ſignified Chriſt, yet darkly and obſcurely: but in the Euchariſt he is after a more liuely and ſenſible manner exhibited and repreſented vnto vs; and therefore in reſpect of the ſpirituall vſe alſo it excelleth.

1.Cor.10.3.
Iohn 6.35.

Secondly, ſaith he, they asked a ſigne, and miracle of Chriſt, verſ.30. but in the repreſentation of Chriſts fleſh onely there is no miracle, neither in apprehending him by faith, Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, the comming of the true bread from heauen, which Chriſt giueth here as a ſigne, verſ.32. and the incarnating of the Sonne of God, is the greateſt miracle in the world, which the Angels doe wonder at, and deſire yet to behold, 1.Pet.1.12. Secondly, to beleeue in Chriſt and to apprehend him by faith, is called by the Apoſtle a great myſterie, 1.Timoth.3.16. And Auguſtine ſaith, Prorſus maius hoc dixerim, quàm cœlum & terra: I ſay it is a greater worke, then the heauen and the earth, Tract.71. in Iohan.

1.Pet.1.12.
1.Timoth.3.16

Argum.2. Chriſt vnderſtandeth another manner of eating of his fleſh, then the Capernaites did. But they imagined that Chriſt would giue his very fleſh and blood to be eaten: and therefore they went away offended, and ſaid, This is an hard ſaying, verſ.60. Therefore Chriſt to correct their erronious conceit, ſaith vnto them, that his words were ſpirit and life, that is, ſpiritually to be vnderſtood, verſ.63.

Iohn 6.60.

So Auguſtine interpreteth thoſe words of Chriſt, as if he had ſaid, Spiritualiter intelligite, quod locutus ſum: You muſt vnderſtand ſpiritually, that which I haue ſaid. You ſhall not eate this body which you ſee, nor drinke that blood, which ſhall be ſhed for you: Sacramentum vobis aliquod commendaui, ſpiritualiter intellectum viuificabit vos: I haue commended a certaine myſterie and Sacrament vnto you, which being ſpiritually vnderſtood, ſhall quicken you. And in another place, Then the bodie and blood of Chriſt ſhall be life to euery one, when that which is viſibly done in the Sacraments, In ipſa veritate ſpiritualiter manducatur, &c, bee in truth ſpiritually eaten, and ſpiritually drunke: as the Lord himſelfe ſaith, &c. My words is ſpirit and life, &c. De verb. Apoſt. ſerm.2.

Origen thus interpreteth this place, Hom.7. in Leuit. Propterea caro eius verus cibus, & ſanguis eius verus potus, &c. Therefore his fleſh is very meate, and his blood very drinke: for by the fleſh, and blood of his word, he nouriſheth mankind.

Bernard alſo thus expoundeth theſe words: Quid eſt manducare eius carnem, & bibere eius ſanguinem, niſi communicare paſſionibus eius, & eam conuerſationem imitari, quam geſſit in carne? Serm.3. in Pſalm. What is it to eate his fleſh and drinke his blood, but to communicate with his paſſions, and to imitate his conuerſation in the fleſh?

Againe, in another place: Qui manducat carnem & bibit ſanguinem meum, &c. hoc eſt, qui recolit mortem meam, & exemplo meo mortificat membra ſua quæ ſunt ſuper terram, habet vitam æternam: lib. de diligendo deo: He that eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my blood: that is, he which remembreth my death in his mind, and by my example doth mortifie his earthly members, hath eternall life. This father applieth not theſe words, as we ſee, to the ſacramentall eating.

Laſtly, concerning this place enforced out of the ſixth of Iohn, diuers of the Papiſts and of the more learned ſort amongſt them doe hold, that it is not to bee expounded of the Euchariſt: as Gabriel. lection.84. ſuper canon. Miſſæ. Nicolaus Cuſanus epiſt.7. ad Bohemos. Thomas Caietanus 3. par. qu.8. artic. vltim. Ruardus. Tapper, in explicat. artic.15. Louanienſ. So that we want not their owne teſtimonie againſt them.

The Papiſts.

*Arg.*3. CHriſt in the inſtitution of this Sacrament, ſaid vnto his Apoſtles, after he had giuen thanks and bleſſed: Hoc eſt corpus meum: This is my bodie: that is, that which is contained in this bread, or vnder the formes of this bread, is my very body, *Bellar.cap.*9. So that theſe words muſt needs be taken properly, not to be a trope or figure.

1. It is not the manner of the Scriptures to ſet downe flat precepts and commandements, and directorie rules in obſcure termes, or figuratiue ſpeeches, but plainely and euidently: therefore it is not like, that Chriſt, being now to preſcribe vnto his Apoſtles the perpetuall Law and forme of this Sacrament, would ſpeake obſcurely.

2. Though he ſpake by parables and ſignes to the Phariſies, yet there was no cauſe why he ſhould ſo doe, none being preſent but his Apoſtles, Bellarm.ibid.

*Anſw.*1. It is very well, that you will now (though I thinke vnawares) grant vnto vs, that the precepts and rules in Scripture are ſet downe ſimply and plainely: wherefore the Scriptures cannot be ſo hard and obſcure, as you would beare vs in hand they are: for if the precepts and rules of faith be euidently in Scripture expreſſed, as you ſeeme to confeſſe, what reaſon haue you to keepe backe the people from the reading of Scripture?

2 It is falſe that the Scriptures vſe no figures nor tropes, in the declaration of the lawes and Sacraments of the Church: for ſaith not S. Paul, ſpeaking of the Sacraments of the Iewes, Petra erat Chriſtus, the Rocke was Chriſt, 1.Cor.10.4. that is, ſignified Chriſt? Likewiſe in the 17. verſe, We that are many are one bread: that is, our ſpirituall vnitie and coniunction is repreſented, in that we are partakers of one bread.

1.Cor.10.4.17.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that where the Apoſtle ſaith, the rocke was Chriſt, he ſpeaketh not of the materiall or viſible rocke, but of the ſpirituall, and inuiſible: they dranke of the ſpirituall Rocke that followed them, ſaith the Apoſtle, verſ.4. and then it followeth, the rocke was Chriſt. This prooueth no trope in the Sacrament, which was the materiall, not the ſpirituall rocke, Bellarm.cap.9.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtle calleth the materiall rocke ſpirituall, as verſ. 3. he called the viſible Manna, ſpirituall meate, as Auguſtine ſaith, *Spirituale aliquid ſignificantem in Pſalm.*77. Becauſe it had a ſpirituall ſignification. Secondly, it may appeare to bee ſo, both becauſe this ſpirituall rocke, that is, the water out of the rocke, is ſaid to follow them; that is, the water did runne along by them for their continuall vſe: but Chriſt went before them in a pillar of fire, he ſhould improperly be ſaid to follow them. Againe, they all dranke of this ſpirituall rocke; but of the true ſpirituall water none but the faithfull drinke.

3. Sometimes our Sauiour would ſpeake darkly, being alone with his Apoſtles, thereby to ſtirre them vp more diligently to attend vnto his words, as when he biddeth them beware of the leauen of the Phariſies, Mark.8.15. Yet this ſpeech of our Sauiour Chriſt vttered in the hearing of his Apoſtles, This is my bodie, was neither ſo darke nor obſcure, that the Apoſtles need much bee troubled about the vnderſtanding. Nay, many things being ſpoken in borowed and metaphoricall words, are vttered with greater grace, and carrie a fuller ſenſe: When Chriſt ſaid, I am the doore, Ioh.10.9. I am the vine, Ioh.15.1. he ſpake by a figure as he doth here, for neither was he a vine, or a doore, as the bread was not his bodie: yet which of the Apoſtles was there, that vnderſtood him not, when he called himſelfe a vine, and a doore? Neither could they doubt of our Sauiour Chriſts meaning here.

Matth.8.15.
Iohn 10.9.
Iohn:15.1.

Thirdly, theſe words, ſaith Bellarmine, This is my bodie, neither any other ſpeech of Scripture is to be taken figuratiuely, vnleſſe ſome other Scripture doe ſhew it ſo to bee taken, or it bee repugnant to ſome article of the faith, as this ſpeech of Chriſt is not: for whereas they alleage, that it is contrarie to the article of Chriſts aſcenſion, we Catholikes doe beleeue the aſcenſion of Chriſt, and yet hold the reall preſence of Chriſt notwithſtanding, *Bellarm cap.9 argum.*3.

Anſ. Firſt, other places of Scripture, which muſt be vnderſtood in a figure, as where Chriſt ſaith, I am the dore, the vine, &c. doe alſo inſinuate how Chriſt is to be vnderſtood here. Secondly, if they did beleeue the aſcention of Chriſt aright, as S, Peter doth, Act.3.21. ſaying, whom the heauens muſt * containe vntill, &c. they would not containe him in earth vnder the formes of bread and wine, who muſt yet be contained in heauen: for if Chriſt could be contained in diuers places at once, the Angell had not reaſoned ſoundly, Matth.28.6. he is not here, for he is riſen.

Act.3.21.
* Here a quarrell is picked, becauſe we reade ſo, rather then receiue, the word is δέξασθαι, to hold, containe. See our anſwere further, Retect.210.

Bellarmine againe thus reaſoneth from the words themſelues: firſt, this article (hoc, this) cannot ſignifie bread, which both in Latine, and in Greeke, is of the maſculine gender; but the article is of the neuter: therefore by (this) Chriſt vnderſtandeth his bodie contained vnder thoſe formes.

Cont. 1. This article (hoc) is vſed ſubſtantiuely, not adiectiuely, and ſignifieth as much as this thing, and therefore is put in the neuter gender: neither is it ſo ſtrange or vnuſuall a thing (as the Ieſuite taketh it) to demonſtrate ſome thing in ſight in ſuch generall termes, not naming the thing: As Iohn 6.9. There is a boy which hath fiue barly loaues and a few fiſhes, (both in the maſculine gender) ſed quid hæc ſunt, &c. but what are theſe things, which is put in the neuter? 2. If Chriſt by (this) did meane his body, there ſhould be a tautologie or idle repetition of the ſame thing, as if he had ſaid, this body is my body.

Iohn 6.9.

Secondly, hee vrgeth theſe words, My bodie which is giuen for you: but his true bodie, not the figure of his body, was giuen for vs: Ergo, hee meaneth his true and naturall bodie.

Contra. As Luke readeth, This cup is the new teſtament in my blood, ſhed for you: where the participle ἐκχυνόμενον, ſhed, agreeth with ποτήριον, the cup, not with (αἵματι) in my blood; as the Euangeliſt ſaith the cup was ſhed, by a double figure, firſt taking the cup for the wine, and ſecondly wine for Chriſts blood: ſo this ſenſe may very well hold, this bread is my body, that is, a ſigne of my body, which is giuen for you.

Thirdly, if, this is my bodie, be nothing elſe, but this is a ſigne of my bodie, why may wee not pronounce in like manner of the ſacrifices and Sacraments of the Law, which were alſo ſignes and ſymboles of Chriſt; and likewiſe of Baptiſme, and of the word of Chriſt, that they are his very body, and fleſh, becauſe they are ſignes thereof: but the Scripture ſo ſpeaketh not, but onely of the Euchariſt: Ergo, it is not a figuratiue ſpeech.

Contra. Firſt, although a reaſon might eaſily bee rendred, why the Sacraments of the law ſhould not haue their denomination of the bodie and blood of Chriſt, as the Euchariſt hath, becauſe Chriſts death was not then ſo plainly deſcribed, as at the inſtitution of the Lords Supper; yet we ſee that this phraſe of ſpeech is alſo vſed of thoſe legall Sacraments: as the rocke is ſaid to be Chriſt, 1.Cor.10.4. being but a type of him; and Chriſt is called the Paſſe-ouer, or Paſchall Lambe, 1.Cor.6.7. Secondly, though in Baptiſme the water in Scripture bee not ſo euidently called Chriſts blood, as the cup in the Euchariſt (the reaſon whereof is plaine, becauſe in Baptiſme the blood of Chriſt is ſet foorth as the worker of our regeneration, and new birth; but in the Euchariſt it is propounded as our ſpirituall drinke, and nouriſhment) yet wee ſee, that the Scripture is not ſilent in this behalfe, as Ioh.7.38. the water is called the ſpirit: and Tit.3.5. the waſhing the new birth: and Reuel.7.14. They haue made their long robes white in the blood of the Lambe: the waſhing of water in Baptiſme, whereby they are ſanctified in the word, Epheſ.5.26. is called the blood of Chriſt. Thirdly, as touching the word of God, it may alſo in ſome ſenſe bee called the very fleſh of Chriſt: for by hearing of the word Chriſt commeth in vnto vs, and ſuppeth with vs, Reuel.3.20. but he dwelleth in vs only by eating his fleſh, and drinking his blood, Ioh.6.56. wherefore the hearing of his word, is the very eating of his fleſh. And ſo Origen expoundeth, Carnibus & ſanguine verbi, &c. He doth feed vs with the fleſh and blood of his word, Hom.7.Leuitic.

1.Cor.10.4.
1.Cor.6.7.
John 7.38.
Tit.3.5.
Reuel.7.14.
Epheſ.5.26.
Reuel.3.20.
Iohn 6.56.

Contra. Now on the other ſide, we will make it plaine, that theſe words of Chriſt are ſpoken tropically.

*Argum.*1. Where Chriſt ſaith according to S.Luke, This cup is the new Teſtament in my blood, Luke 22.23. we muſt needs admit a double trope or figure: for firſt, the cup is taken for that which is contained in the cup. Secondly, the wine in the cup was not the new Teſtament, but a ſigne of the new Teſtament. If then in one part of the Sacrament he ſpake by a figure, why not alſo in the other, when he ſaith, This is my bodie, that is, a liuely ſigne and ſeale thereof?

Luk.22.23.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that in theſe words, this cup is the new teſtament, &c. a trope muſt needs be admitted; but ſuch a trope, as doth explicate it ſelfe: for, whereas Chriſt ſaith, Drinke yee all of this, and, which is ſhed for you, euery man may vnderſtand of himſelfe, that not the cup it ſelfe is drunken, or ſhed, but the liquour in the cup. And againe, Matthew and Marke doe thus write, this is my blood, who doe ſhew vs how Saint Luke is to be expounded, ſaying, this cup, &c. that is, the blood in the cup, *cap.*11 *reſp.ad argum.*8. but all the Euangeliſts ſay, this is my bodie: therefore the like figure cannot be admitted in theſe words.

Contra. Firſt, as men vſe not to drinke or ſhed cups, ſo neither to eate humane fleſh, or mens bodies: and therefore common vſe will finde out a trope in the one ſpeech as well as in the other: as well, when Chriſt ſaith, take, eate, this is my bodie; as when hee ſaith, drinke of this cup. Secondly, euerie figuratiue ſpeech in Scripture, though it bee not expounded by another place, yet may bee vnderſtood to be figuratiue by the nature and propertie of the thing ſpoken of: as S. Paul ſaying, the rocke is Chriſt, though he expound not himſelfe, yet euery man knoweth that a ſtone cannot be Chriſt, no more can bread be his bodie, but in ſignification. Thirdly, yet our Sauiour himſelfe expoundeth theſe words: this is my bodie, in another place, where he had ſaid, the bread is my fleſh, Ioh.6.51. and then ſhewing his meaning hee ſaith, verſ.63. the fleſh profiteth nothing, my words are ſpirit and life: ſo then he muſt be vnderſtood ſpiritually. Fourthly, neither doth Matthew, ſaying, this is my blood of the new teſtament, expound S. Luke, this cup is the new teſtament in my blood: for if by the cup, be vnderſtood blood; then the meaning ſhould be this, this blood is the new teſtament in my blood, which were abſurd. But Bellarmine would take away this abſurditie by a diſtinction, ſaying, that blood is taken here diuerſly; in the firſt place for the blood in the Sacrament; in the ſecond, for his blood ſhed vpon the croſſe, and he maketh this to be the meaning: this blood here contained vnder the ſhew of wine, is my new teſtament conſecrated in my blood vpon the croſſe.

Iohn 6.51.63.

Contra. Firſt, thus hee will make Chriſt to haue two diuers bloods, one in the Sacrament, which is the teſtament; the other ſhed vpon the croſſe, whereof it is a teſtament. Secondly, he ſaith, Matthew expoundeth Luke: but Saint Matthew ſpeaketh of the blood ſhed vpon the croſſe: which is ſhed for many, verſ.26. then Luke alſo ſaying, this cup, that is my blood in the cup, ſpeaketh of the blood ſhed vpon the croſſe: ſo that blood in the firſt and ſecond place, is to be taken for the blood ſhed vpon the croſſe.

Secondly, as hee granteth a figure, in theſe words (this cup) ſo hee denieth any figure at all in the words following (is the new teſtament) for the blood of Chriſt in the Sacrament is the teſtament it ſelfe; and a teſtament (ſaith he) is taken two waies, either it ſignifieth the will of the teſtator it ſelfe, or elſe the authenticall inſtrument, wherein the will of the teſtator is contained; and ſo Circumciſion was both a ſigne of Gods couenant, and the couenant it ſelfe, that is the inſtrument, whereby the couenant was applied: and ſo is the Euchariſt both a ſigne of the teſtament made in Chriſt, and ſo Saint Matthew ſaith the blood of the teſtament; and it is the teſtament it ſelfe, that is, the authenticall inſtrument; and ſo S. Luke ſaith, It is the Teſtament in my blood. Bellarm. ibid.

Heb 9 16.
Rom.4.11.
Heb.9.20.

Contra. Firſt, the authenticall inſtrument of a Teſtament being vnder witneſſe and ſeale, is not the Teſtament it ſelfe, but only a ratification of it; and ſo are the Sacraments ſeales and ratifications vnto vs of Chriſts Teſtament. Secondly, there is no Teſtament without death, Hebr. 9.16. wherefore the Euchariſt is not the Teſtament, vnleſſe they will haue Chriſt daily to die in the Sacrament. Thirdly, Circumciſion is called the couenant, becauſe it was the ſigne only thereof; and ſo S. Paul the beſt expounder of Moſes, calleth it the ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, Rom. 4.11. Fourthly, the Euangeliſts ſpeake all of the ſame Teſtament, and Saint Luke ſpeaking figuratiuely is to be expounded by Matthew, who ſaith, The blood of the Teſtament; which anſwereth to the figure of the Law, for Moſes ſprinkling the blood ſaid, This is the blood of the Teſtament, Heb. 9.20. So then the blood is not the Teſtament, but of the Teſtament, that is, a ſigne thereof.

Gen.17.10.11.
Exod.12.11.
1.Cor.10.4.

Argum. 2. It is no vnuſuall phraſe in the Scripture to ſay, (this is) that is, ſignifieth, as Gen. 17.10. Circumciſion is called the couenant it ſelfe, where it was a ſigne only of it, and ſo is it called, verſ. 11. and Exod. 12.11. the Lambe is called the Lords Paſſeouer, which it betokened only: and S. Paul calleth the rocke Chriſt, being only a figure of him, 1. Cor. 10.4. In the ſame ſenſe Chriſt ſaith, This is my bodie: that is, exhibiteth and repreſenteth vnto you my bodie.

Bellarmine his beſt anſwere here is, that in all theſe examples alleaged, in the ſame place the trope or figure is expounded; as, where Circumciſion is called the couenant, it is alſo ſaid to be the ſigne of the couenant: and Exod. 12.11. the Lambe is ſaid to be the Lords Paſſeouer, that is, the ſacrifice of the Lords Paſſeouer, verſ. 27. and 1. Cor. 10. where the rocke is ſaid to bee Chriſt, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the ſpirituall not materiall rocke, which followed them, which ſpirituall rocke indeed is Chriſt. Bellar. reſp. ad argum. 6. cap. 11.

Ioh.6.51.63.

Contra. Firſt, it is ſufficient for our purpoſe to ſhew in Scripture, that (this is) is taken for (this ſignifieth) though the explication of the Trope be not inſerted ſtraightway in the ſame place; neither is this manner of figuratiue ſpeech alwaies expounded, as Galath. 4.25. Agar is the mountaine Sina in Arabia; that is, ſignifieth, or figureth that place, where the Law was giuen: which explication, though it be not directly mentioned, yet is neceſſarily implied. Secondly, this figuratiue ſpeech of Chriſt notwithſtanding (this is my body) is, as I ſhewed, by himſelfe expounded, Ioh. 6.51. where hauing ſaid, the bread is my fleſh, as here (this is my body) he further openeth his meaning, verſe 63. My words are ſpirit and life, that is, ſpiritually to be vnderſtood. Thirdly, the Apoſtle ſaying the rocke was Chriſt, ſpeaketh of the materiall rocke, which was a figure of Chriſt, not of the inuiſible rocke. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith, the rocke was, not, is; but Chriſt is alwaies the inuiſible rocke. Secondly, they did all drinke of this rocke, but they all did not ſpiritually receiue or drinke Chriſt: for, verſe 5. with many of them God was not pleaſed: but with all the faithfull he was pleaſed: wherefore they did drinke all of the materiall, not of the ſpirituall rocke. Thirdly, it is called ſpirituall, as Manna is called ſpirituall meate, for the ſpirituall ſignification. So then, here we haue the very like trope vſed by the Apoſtle, and yet not expounded. Fourthly, all figuratiue ſpeeches of Scripture, though their interpretation be not expreſſed, yet is implied by ſome conſequence; and ſo where Chriſt ſaith, This is my body, we are forced to vnderſtand a figure by implication, it being an vnwonted and inhumane thing to eate mans fleſh.

Argum. 3. Chriſt in ſaying, this is my bodie, did demonſtrate or ſhew ſomething in ſight: for a thing abſent or inuiſible cannot be demonſtrated: but Chriſts body, which they imagine was hid vnder the formes, was not ſeene: Ergo, it could not be ſhewen.

Bellarmine here runneth as it were in a maze; one while he ſaith, (Hoc) non demonſtrare accidentia: That the word (this) doth not demonſtrate the accidents of the bread; and againe he affirmeth, Formaliter in hac propoſitione demonſtrari ſpecies: That formally in this propoſition (this is my body) the ſhewes or outward ſhapes are demonſtrated: and hee refuſeth to ſay with Scotus, that (this) is as much to ſay, as this ſubſtance: but with Aquinas, this ſubſtance contained vnder the forme of bread. c. 11. reſponſ. ad argum. 3.

1.Timoth.1.7.

Contra. Firſt, it is pretie ſport to ſee how they buſie themſelues about the meaning of this word (Hoc) ſome ſay it ſignifieth Chriſts body, but this Bellarmine himſelfe miſliketh: ſome, as Scotus, expound it, (hoc ens) this thing: neither doth Bellarmine agree vnto this, but ſaith with Thomas, that (hoc) is this thing or ſubſtance contained vnder the forme of bread: thus are they at their wits end, neither vnderſtanding what they ſpeake, nor whereof they affirme, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1. Tim. 1.7. Secondly, this Pronoune (hoc) neither betokeneth Chriſts body, for that were to ſay, this, that is, my bodie, is my bodie, which were abſurd to affirme the ſame thing of it ſelfe: nor yet the forme onely of bread, for they will not ſay, that the ſhape of the bread is Chriſts bodie: neither yet doth it demonſtrate any other ſubſtance vnder the ſhew of bread,becauſe it is inuiſible, and cannot be demonſtrated,neither in their owne learning can there be any new ſubſtance before the words of conſecration be all vttered: wherefore it remaineth, that this demonſtratiue (hoc) muſt bee referred to the bread, which Chriſt conſecrated to be a figure of his bodie.

Argum.4. That which Chriſt did take,he bleſſed,that which he bleſſed,he brake, that which hee brake,he gaue to his diſciples: but he tooke bread,bleſſed bread,brake bread: therefore alſo he gaue bread,and ſo conſequently,the demonſtratiue,hoc,this,ſheweth the bread.

Bellarmine anſwereth,that betweene Chriſts taking and giuing, there commeth bleſſing; ſo that he bleſſed that he tooke,and by bleſſing changed it,and ſo gaue it: And they themſelues alſo confeſſe, that he gaue not the ſame bread, which he tooke; for he tooke common bread,but gaue ſacramentall bread: ſo as wee ſay, he ſtroke Peter, ſlew him,and buried him,and yet Peter was not buried aliue, though he were ſtriken aliue; ſo it followeth not that Chriſt gaue the ſame bread he tooke, Bellarm. c.11 reſp.ad argum.1.

Contra. Firſt,S. Matthew ſaith,He bleſſed, S.Luke 22.19. He gaue thankes; ſo that bleſſing and giuing thankes is all one, which was an action directed vnto God,not vnto that which was bleſſed; neither was the bread by this bleſſing changed into Chriſts bodie; becauſe the words of conſecration were not yet vttered: And againe after he had bleſſed, he brake it,but he brake not his bodie, but the bread. Againe,the words are plaine,Matth.26.26.Ieſus tooke bread,and when he had giuen thankes, he brake and gaue to his diſciples: what elſe now did Chriſt breake and giue,but bread,that he tooke? for otherwiſe no conſtruction can be made of the words. Secondly, wee ſay there was a ſacramentall change of the bread, after Chriſt had bleſſed it, but it was a change in the qualitie,not in the ſubſtance; ſo that notwithſtanding this change,Chriſt gaue the ſame thing he tooke, though otherwiſe qualified. And the example brought in,is not to the purpoſe: for the ſame Peter in ſubſtance is buried, that was ſtricken,though altered in condition,before aliue,now dead: but they ſay there is no bread at all remaining,ſo that in their meaning Chriſt deliuereth another thing,then he tooke,contrarie to the words of the text. Thus then it appeareth by theſe reaſons alleaged, whatſoeuer is obiected to the contrarie,that theſe words of our Sauiour,this is my bodie, cannot be otherwiſe then figuratiuely taken,and ſo S.Auguſtine expoundeth: Non dubitauit Dominus dicere,hoc eſt corpus meum,cum daret ſignum corporis ſui: The Lord doubted not to ſay,this is my bodie, when he gaue a ſigne of his bodie: cont.Adimantum.cap.12.

Matth.26.26.

The Papiſts.

Other arguments out of the Scriptures are alleaged by them for proofe of the carnall and reall preſence,which muſt not here be omitted.

Argum.4. Bellarmine vrgeth that place 1.Cor.10.16.The cup of bleſſing which wee bleſſe,is it not the communion of the blood of Chriſt? the bread which we breake,is it not the communion of the bodie of Chriſt? From this place he draweth three arguments: firſt, the Apoſtle maketh mention of benediction and conſecration,whereby the wine is conuerted into Chriſts blood, which conſecration needed not,if there were but a figuratiue conſecration,but the firſt inſtitution would ſuffice: as therefore we ſee in Baptiſme no ſuch kinde of conſecration vſed,cap.12.

1.Cor.10.16.

Contra. Firſt,we grant a conſecration neceſſarie, whereby the elements are ſanctified and ſeparated from the common vſe to a ſpeciall holy vſe in the Sacraments; neither are the bread and wine otherwiſe conſecrated in the Euchariſt,then the water in Baptiſme, which is ſanctified by the word of God. Secondly, wee grant alſo that to this conſecration the inſtitution of Chriſt in his word ſufficeth: for the word being applied to the element,as Auguſtine ſaith,maketh a Sacrament: if they require to their conſecration any thing more then Chriſts inſtitution, it is a meere humane and ſuperſtitious inuention. Thirdly,the argument then followeth not,the elements are bleſſed and conſecrated,and therefore conuerted into another ſubſtance: it is ſufficient that they are turned to another vſe: as the Paſchall Lambe was ſeparated from the flocke,and ſet apart for an holy vſe, Exod.12.3. yet remained a Lambe ſtill: the vſe was altered,the ſame nature was reſerued.

Exod.12.3.

Secondly,the Apoſtle ſaith,the bread which we breake: by breaking he vnderſtandeth the oblation and immolation of the bodie of Chriſt; as 1.Cor.11.25. Saint Paul thus rehearſeth the words of Chriſt,this is my bodie which is broken for you, that is, offered vp in ſacrifice: but bread is not broken, or offered in ſacrifice: Ergo,it is the bodie of Chriſt,Bellarm.ibid. And againe, this clauſe, the bread which we breake, muſt anſwere to the former,the cup which we bleſſe: that ſeeing the Apoſtle ſpeaketh there of conſecration,ſo he doth here of oblation,which is done by the words of conſecration.

1.Cor.11.25.

Contra. Firſt,there is great difference betweene that ſaying of Chriſt rehearſed by Saint Paul, this is my bodie,which is broken for you,and this of the Apoſtle,the bread which we breake: for there he ſpeaketh of his bodie,here of bread, but bread is not his bodie: there his bodie is broken by the tormentors vpon the croſſe, here the bread is broken by beleeuers in the Sacrament. Againe,as in the firſt inſtitution Chriſt firſt brake the bread,and then ſaid,this is my body giuen for you: ſo breaking was one thing,the giuing,or offering his body,another: ſo is it here. Secondly, as the cup is conſecrated by bleſſing and prayer in part,ſo is the bread conſecrated in part by breaking and diſtributing: for not by the words of benediction only,but by the whole action of giuing,receiuing,thankſgiuing,are the elements conſecrated: ſo that in this ſenſe,one part of the ſentence fitly anſwereth to the other.

Thirdly, the Apoſtle ſaith, the bread is the communion of the bodie of Chriſt, that is, wee are reallie and corporallie made partakers of the body of Chriſt in the Sacrament: for if there were but a repreſentation of Chriſts fleſh onely, and not his very fleſh indeede, the Apoſtle ſhould haue reaſoned but weakely, perſwading them from the ſacrifices of the Gentiles, and eating of things ſacrificed to Idols, if he had not alſo inuited them to a more excellent ſacrifice and a better table, where the very fleſh of Chriſt is preſent, and not the figure only: for this were to offer a ſilke garment painted onely, in ſtead of a true ſilken one.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtle meaneth a ſpirituall communion of the bodie of Chriſt, as it followeth, 1.Cor.10.17. verſ.17. We that are many, are one bread, and one bodie, becauſe wee are partakers of one bread: as wee are one bodie amongſt our ſelues, ſo are we one bodie with Chriſt: but wee are myſtically one bodie amongſt our ſelues: Ergo. Likewiſe the Apoſtle ſaith, the bread is the communion, and wee are partakers of one bread: if it remaine bread ſtill, then is it not the body of Chriſt. And the Apoſtle further Epheſ.2.22. ſheweth how we are ioyned vnto Chriſt, Epheſ.2.22. in whom ye are built together, to be the habitation of God by the ſpirit: So then by the ſpirit we are vnited vnto our head: and following the truth in Epheſ.4.15. loue we grow vp vnto him, Epheſ.4.15. Secondly, the Apoſtle reaſoneth not, as Bellarmine pretendeth, promiſing one fleſhie ſacrifice for another: but his reaſon ſtandeth thus, That as they which communicate in the Sacrament, are partakers of Chriſt; ſo they that communicate with the ſacrifices of Idols, haue fellowſhip and communion with diuels, to whom they are offered: and therefore ſaith the Apoſtle, I would not that yee ſhould haue fellowſhip with diuels, verſ.20. Thirdly, the Sacrament of Chriſt being celebrated with bread, is a better banket, then the ſacrifices of diuels furniſhed with fleſh: like as the wiſe man ſaith, Better is a drie morſell, if peace be with it, then a houſe full of ſacrifices Prouer.17.1. with ſtrife, Prou.17.1, ſo to eate bread in the remembrance of Chriſt with peace of conſcience, according to his owne inſtitution, is much better, then to be fatted with the ſacrifices of Idols, which maketh ſtrife betweene vs and God: and who will not preferre the linnen garment of a chaſt matrone, before the ſilken ornaments of a ſtrumpet?

1.Cor.11.29.27 Argum. 5. S. Paul ſaith, 1.Cor.11.29. He that eateth and drinketh vnworthily, doth eate and drinke his owne iudgement, not diſcerning the Lords bodie. And verſ.27. he is guiltie of the bodie and blood of Chriſt: they cannot be guiltie of that which they receiue not: neither in the vnworthie receiuing of any other Sacrament are they made guiltie of the body and blood of Chriſt, but onely in this: Ergo, the body and blood of Chriſt are really preſent: Rhemiſt. annot. in hunc locum, and Bellarm. cap. 13.

Anſw. Firſt, it is falſe that none elſe but they which prophane the Euchariſt are guiltie of the blood of Chriſt: for as in Baptiſme alſo the faithfull are made partakers of the body and blood of Chriſt, as it is confeſſed out of Auguſtine in your owne decrees, par.3. diſtinct.4. c.131. Nulli eſt aliquatenus ambigendum, &c. No man muſt doubt, that then euery faithfull one is made partaker of the bodie and blood of our Lord, when in baptiſme he is made a member of Chriſt: So they which prophane baptiſme, are guiltie of Chriſts blood, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of ſuch, that they doe tread vnder foote the Sonne of God, and doe count the blood of the teſtament an vnholie thing, wherewith they were ſanctified, Heb.10.29. Heb.10.29. Secondly, as theſe doe tread vnder foote the Sonne of God, and prophane the blood of the teſtament, not really or perſonally, but in the malice and prophanenes of their hearts; ſo are the wicked guilty of Chriſts blood, in as much as they prophane the holie ſignes thereof: for the defacing of the Kings image or ſeale redoundeth to the diſhonour of the King of himſelfe; ſo they are guiltie of the blood of Chriſt, not which they receiued in ſubſtance, but in abuſing the ſignes and ſeales thereof exhibited vnto them.

Bellarmine replieth: firſt, if the diſhonour of the image be the diſhonour of the King, how then dare you deface the images of Saints, which tend to their diſhonour? Secondly, an iniurie is not done to an image, if it be by chance rather then purpoſed violence defaced: but many may receiue the Euchariſt vnworthily, that maliciouſly doe not contemne it. Thirdly, if it be ſuch a ſinne to abuſe the image of Chriſt in the Euchariſt, then for ſuch to heare the word alſo, which is alſo the image of Chriſt.

Contra. Firſt, if you can ſhew, that God hath commanded Images to be erected for the honour of Saints, as the Kings ſeale and image is for his honour; then we will grant alſo that it is a diſhonour to deface them. Secondly, though euery vnworthie receiuer be not malicious againſt Chriſt, yet he is a contemner and deſpiſer, ſeeing that he cannot be ignorant, but that it is the ſeale and image of Chriſt, as not the violator only, but the contemner of the Kings image is an offender. Thirdly, an vnworthie hearer of the word is alſo a tranſgreſſor, as the vnworthie receiuer: and the Apoſtle ſaith of ſuch, as Heb.6.6. fall away, hauing had a taſte of the word, they doe crucifie the Sonne of God, Heb.6.6. in the which ſenſe the vnworthie receiuer is here ſaid to be guiltie of Chriſts blood, and ſo alſo doth crucifie Chriſt to himſelfe.

Geneſ.49.11. Our Doway men ſhall put in their verdict in the laſt place: theſe words, Geneſ.49.11. He ſhall waſh his ſtoale in wine they vnderſtand of Chriſts reall preſence in the Euchariſt: and that out of Tertullian, who expoundeth the ſtoale to ſignifie Chriſts fleſh, and the wine his blood, pag.150: yea, they vrge Tertullian lib. 4. cont. Marcion. theſe words of Tertullian, This is my bodie, that is, a figure of my bodie: figura autem non fuiſſet, niſi veritatis eſſet corpus, but there could not be a figure, vnleſſe it were a bodie of veritie, &c. pag.188.

Contra. 1. Tertullian ſo applieth that place, to proue the veritie of Chriſts bodie againſt the Marcionites.

cionites, not the realtie thereof in the Euchariſt: for thus it followeth in the ſame place: Ita nunc ſanguinem ſuum in vino conſecrauit, qui tunc vinum in ſanguine figurauit: Hee now hath conſecrated his blood in wine, who then prefigured wine in blood. Iacob calleth wine there the blood of the grape: as then the blood of the grape ſignified wine, becauſe wine hath the ſimilitude of blood, yet was it not blood indeede: no more is the wine in the Euchariſt.

2. So alſo the other ſentence of Tertullian, is peruerted by them: and if they were not wilfully blinde, it maketh full againſt them: for if the bread be but a figure of Chriſts body, then is it not the bodie it ſelfe, whereof it is but a figure: and by corpus varitatis, a body of veritie, hee meaneth not, that in the Euchariſt is to be found, that veritie of a bodie, but that Chriſt had a true bodie: for otherwiſe it could not haue a figure or repreſentation: as hee ſaith further, Vacua res, quod eſt phantaſma, figuram capere non poteſt: A voide thing, which is nothing but a phantaſie, is not capable of a figure.

3. But it is ſtrange, that they are not aſhamed to alleage Tertullian, for their carnall preſence, who herein is as pregnant a witneſſe againſt them, as any of the fathers. As thus hee writeth: Panem quo corpus ſuum repreſentat, &c. The bread wherewith hee repreſenteth his bodie. And againe: Panem corpus ſuum appellans, vt hinc intelligas corporis ſui figuram pani dediſſe. Hee calleth bread his bodie, that you may vnderſtand hereby, that he gaue the figure of bread to be a figure of his bodie: Vini ſaporem, in ſanguinis ſui memoriam conſecrauit: Hee conſecrated the taſte of wine for the memorie of his blood, &c. If the bread then be a repreſentation of his bodie, the wine a memorie of his blood, if the bread bee but a figure of Chriſts bodie, then is not the bodie it ſelfe after a fleſhly manner preſent.

The Proteſtants.

That Chriſt is preſent with all his benefites in the Sacrament, wee doe willingly graunt: neither doe wee thinke that the elements of bread and wine are bare and naked ſignes of the bodie and blood of Chriſt, but Chriſt is verily by them exhibited vnto vs, and ſpiritually by faith, wee are truly made partakers of his precious bodie and blood; not that Chriſt deſcendeth from heauen to vs, but wee aſcend by faith and in ſpirit vnto him: yea, wee confeſſe as much as Bernard ſaith, whoſe ſpeech they themſelues allow, In ſacramento exhiberi veram carnis Chriſti ſubſtantiam, ſed ſpiritualiter non carnaliter: That the verie ſubſtance of Chriſts fleſh is exhibited vnto vs, in the Sacrament, but ſpiritually, not carnally. This Bellarmine acknowledgeth to bee true, though hee would not haue the word (ſpiritually) to bee vſed, leaſt it might bee, as hee ſaith, by vs miſconſtrued. This then is our faith and iudgement, that wee are verily in this Sacrament engrafted into the bodie of Chriſt, and doe truly eate his fleſh and drinke his blood: but all this is done ſpiritually onely and by faith: As for their carnall eating and deuouring of Chriſt, wee vtterly reiect, and condemne it.

Cap.2.lib.1.

Argum.1. In the receiuing of the Sacrament there is a double coniunction, wee are ioyned to Chriſt, and make one body alſo amongſt our ſelues: ſo ſaith S.Paul, 1.Cor.10.16.17. Wee are made partakers of the body of Chriſt, and wee that are many are one bread, and one body: but our participation with the myſticall body of Chriſt is ſpirituall: Ergo, alſo our communication with his naturall body, Fulk in hunc locum.

1.Cor.10.16. 17.

Argum.2. If the bodie of Chriſt bee in the Sacrament, then is it eaten, and torne with the teeth: And what is eaten goeth into the belly, and is caſt out into the draught, Marke 7.19. I pray you, what is now become of the bodie of Chriſt? doth it paſſe the ſame way that other meates doe?

Mark.7.19.

Bellarmine anſwereth, lib.1.cap.11.ad argum.5. that they are the accidents of the bread and wine which are eaten, and chawen, or rent by the teeth, and not the body of Chriſt: and yet the bodie of Chriſt goeth downe into the ſtomacke, but no further: but when the formes of bread and wine begin to be corrupted there, the body of Chriſt goeth away, Bellarm.cap.14.

Anſwere.1. This is new learning, that the accidents of meate are chawen in the mouth, and not the meate it ſelfe: and that the formes onely, not the ſubſtance is altered, and corrupted in the ſtomacke. Say alſo that men are nouriſhed with accidents and not with the ſubſtance: If the Prieſt chaunce to drinke too deepe of the Chalice, and ſo become drunke, I pray you what is it that maketh him ſo light headed? Is it, thinke you, the accidents onely of wine? Surely a drunken man would not ſay it. If a Mouſe chance to creepe into your pixe, and fill her hungrie belly with your God-amight: what is it that the Mouſe feedeth vpon? trow you they bee accidents onely? for you ſay that the conſecrated hoſt goeth no further then the ſtomacke: and yet it is too much that the houſell of Chriſtians ſhould bee houſed in a Mouſes belly. Theſe are but ridiculous and light queſtions, yet ſuch as haue troubled your graueſt and ſageſt heads, and remaine vnanſwered.

2. Bellarmine denieth, that the body of Chriſt being eaten, goeth any further then the ſtomacke: But our Rhemiſts goe further; they ſay, that we are made a piece of his body and blood: they ſhould rather haue ſaid that his body and blood is made a piece of vs, being conuerted into our ſubſtance. But ſilly men, we pitie them: If we ſhould preſſe them ſtill with theſe queſtions, they would ſooner runne mad, then finde out any reaſonable and ſober anſwere for vs.

Rhemiſt.1. Corinth.15. ſect.5.

It ſhall not be amiſſe to ſee the iudgement of other Popiſh Doctors of this matter, that it may appeare to the world, how well they agree together.

Lib.4. diſt.12. b.c.d.

The Maſter of Sentences rehearſeth foure opinions: firſt, ſome thinke, that in the Sacrament there is ſaid to be a fraction, breaking, or diuiſion of Chriſts body, becauſe it ſeemeth ſo to be, but is not. Secondly, others thinke, that as there is the outward forme of bread, and yet no bread; ſo there is a fraction, and yet nothing broken. Thirdly, ſome are of opinion, that the very body of Chriſt is ſenſibly handled by the Prieſt, and verily broken, and rent with the teeth. A fourth opinion there is, that not the body of Chriſt, but the accidents onely are chawne and diuided by the teeth. The firſt opinion of theſe is ridiculous, that Chriſts body ſeemeth to be broken, and is not, and maketh the Euchariſt but a kinde of iugling tricke: the ſecond is impoſſible, that there may be a fraction without breaking: the third is groſſe and abſurd, to thinke that Chriſts body may bee deuoured: the fourth is vnreaſonable, as I haue ſhewed, that accidents may bee deuided without a ſubſtance: To this opinion ſubſcribeth the Maſter, as likewiſe Bellarmine; yet is it contrarie to the decree of Nicolaus, who receiued the confeſſion of Berengarius vnder this forme, Corpus & ſanguinem Domini ſenſualiter non ſolum Sacramento, ſed in veritate manibus ſacerdotum tractari, frangi, & fidelium dentibus atteri: That the body and blood of Chriſt is ſenſible not onely in Sacrament, but verily handled by the Prieſt, broken and rent with the teeth of the faithfull: par.3.diſtinct.2.c.42. How then dare they preſume to goe againſt the determination of a Pope, to ſay the accidents of bread onely are eaten, and not the body of Chriſt it ſelfe?

A ſecond doubt there is, what becommeth of the body of Chriſt, when it is eaten: Bellarmine thinketh, it goeth but downe to the ſtomacke: the Rhemiſts thinke, as wee haue ſeene, that wee are made a piece of his body and blood: ſo alſo Leo in his decree, p.3.diſt.2.c.38, In carnem ipſius tranſeamus, &c. Taking the heauenly food, let vs be changed or paſſe into his fleſh. Clemens 5. determineth the contrarie, lib.3.Clementin.tit.16. Hic panis ſumitur, ſed verè non conſumitur; manducatur, ſed non tranſmutatur, quia in edentem minimè transformatur: This bread is aſſumed, not conſumed; it is eaten, but not changed nor transformed into the eater: But another decree granteth, that the body of Chriſt may be conſumed, and mingled with other meates; to ſay no more: and therefore they which haue eaten the Lords body in the morning, are enioyned to faſt till the ſixth houre, which is noone, Ne putent ſancta portioni miſcere cibum, &c. Leaſt they ſhould mixe with the holy portion the meate, that goeth into the draught, decret.par.3.diſt.2.c.23. And another decree puniſheth thoſe with 40. dayes penance, that chance to vomite vp the Eucharist. ibid.decret.28. So then by their learning, Chriſts bodie may be vomited vp: thus are they deuided in their fooliſh imaginations.

A third doubt there is moued: that if a Mouſe, Dogge, or Cat, chance to eate the Eucharist, what it is that they eate? their iudgement in time paſt, hath beene, that it is the very Sacrifice it ſelfe, which the Mouſe eateth: as decret.p.3.diſt.2.c.94. Qui bene non cuſtodierit ſacrificium, &c. He that keepeth the ſacrifice negligently, ſo that a Mouſe or other beaſt chance to eate it, muſt doe penance 40. dayes: but he that looſeth it, that it cannot be found, 30. dayes. Thus they thought, that Chriſts body might both be eaten of beaſts, and bee in danger to be loſt. But the Maſter of Sentences being aſhamed of this, asking the queſtion, what it is, that beaſts doe eate, when they meete with the hoaſt, maketh this clarkly anſwere. Deus nouit, God knoweth: lib.4.diſt.13. Thus they wearie themſelues with their reſtleſſe brainſicke fantaſies.

Mark.14.3.

Argum.3. Chriſt in his fleſh is aſcended vp to heauen, and there muſt remaine till his comming againe, Act.3.21. Againe hee ſaith, The poore you ſhall haue alwaies, but me alwaies you cannot haue, Mark.14. Ergo, Chriſt being now in his humanitie in heauen, cannot be preſent in the Sacrament vpon earth.

Bellarmine anſwereth to the firſt place, that the carnall preſence of Chriſt doth not draw him out of heauen: his naturall body remaineth there ſtill: yet by his omnipotent power he can make his bodie to be in many places at once, cap.14.

Anſwere. If Chriſts body be in heauen and in earth, and in many places at once, it muſt either bee his owne naturall body which was borne of the Virgin Marie, or he muſt euery day create himſelfe a new body: but this were too too abſurd to bee granted, that euery day there ſhould be a new Chriſt. Neither can the firſt be admitted: for a naturall body hath a naturall preſence; but ſo hath not Chriſts body in the Sacrament: for it is not there naturally, being without ſhape or forme, neither viſible nor ſenſible. And how can it ſtand with the propertie of a true naturall body, to be in 1000. places at once? for ſo muſt Chriſts body needes be, and in more too, ſeeing hee is kept and hanged vp in euery Popiſh Church. And further, if totus Chriſtus, whole Chriſt, be in the Sacrament, both with his body and ſoule; you muſt either grant, that there are many whole Chriſts, ſeeing he is in many places at once: or elſe if there be but one whole Chriſt, his humanitie muſt be diſperſed euery where as his Godhead is: and ſo are you againſt your wils become Vbiquitaries.

Math.28.6.

Againe, if this be not a good argument, Chriſts body is in heauen, and therefore not in the Sacrament; then the Angels reaſon is not good, Matth.28.6. Hee is not here, for he is riſen: but if this be a good conſequence in the Angels argument, becauſe Chriſts body was not in more places then one, at once, it doth alſo neceſſarily follow in the other.

Bellarmine to the ſecond place anſwereth, that as wee alwaies haue the poore, ſo haue wee not

Chriſt, that is viſibly, to annoint his body, or to doe other ſuch ſeruices of loue and dutie vnto him: yet this letteth not, but that we may haue his preſence inuiſible in the Sacrament: ſo alſo anſwere the Rhemiſts, Matth.26.ſect.3.

Contra. Firſt, we reade in Scripture but of two ſorts of Chriſts preſence, one as he is God preſent in his power and diuinitie, and ſo he is with his Church alwaies, Matth.28.20. the other, as he is man, by which preſence he ſaith, Me you cannot haue alwaies with you, Matth.26.11. If they can ſhew vs a third kinde of preſence out of Scripture, ſuch as they imagine, we will heare them: Secondly, our Sauiour commendeth the woman, that ſhee had wrought a good worke vpon him, verſ.10. and ſaith, they ſhall not haue him any more in ſuch ſort, that is, to worke a good worke vpon: but if Chriſts body were preſent in the Sacrament, it were a good worke, to adore it, to adorne it with cloth of gold, and to giue all outward reuerence to it: but Chriſt is not bodily preſent now, to haue any good workes miniſtred vnto him: Ergo, he is no waies either viſibly, or inuiſibly preſent in his body.

Math.28.20.
Math.26.11.

Argum.4. Matth.15.17. All that entreth into the mouth, goeth into the belly and is caſt out into the draught; the body of Chriſt is not caſt into the draught, but bread onely: Ergo, the body of Chriſt doth not enter in at the mouth.

Math.15.17.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſt ſpeaketh onely of ſuch meate, as is receiued to nouriſh the body: for after the reſurrection Chriſt did verily eate, and yet it was not caſt into the draught, that hee did eate, becauſe he eate not for nouriſhment. And whereas we anſwere, that this example is vnfitly alleaged, becauſe Chriſt ſpeaketh of mortall men, that eate, but hee was then immortall: hee replieth, that in like manner Chriſt ſpeaketh of mortall and corruptible meate, not of immortall and incorruptible, ſuch as his body is: Bellarm.c.14.reſp.ad argum.2.

Contra. Firſt the words of our Sauiour are generall, Whatſoeuer entreth in at the mouth; and therfore nothing, that goeth that way, can be excepted: Secondly, the way for immortall and incorruptible foode is not to goe in by the mouth into the belly; for that which is corruptible is not capable of that, which is incorruptible, and immortall, as S.Peter ſheweth: You are borne anew not of mortall ſeede but immortall, by the word of God, &c. Then it followeth, verſ.24. All fleſh is graſſe, &c. but the word of the Lord endureth for euer: Fleſh which is graſſe and corruptible is not capable of the immortall ſeede of the word, no more is it of the immortall foode of Chriſts body: wherefore they may as well ſay that mortall food may goe into the ſoule, as immortall into the belly. Thirdly, the ſame thing that is caſt into the draught, firſt commeth in by the mouth: then I aske of them, what it is that goeth out into the draught? not the accidents of bread, (that were abſurd) nor yet Chriſts body, (it were impious once to thinke it) Ergo, the ſubſtance of bread goeth forth, and came in by the mouth before. Bellarmine ſaith, hee will not meddle with this queſtion now, what is become of the accidents of bread, being corrupted in the ſtomacke: yet I would his leyſure had ſerued him to haue reſolued this doubt now: but I thinke we muſt giue him a longer day to conſult with the Popes chaire, and then tell vs his minde. The Papiſts are all here in ſuch a ſtreite, that they know not how honeſtly to winde themſelues out: for ſeeing they affirme, that Chriſts body entreth in at the mouth, and ſomwhat muſt goe forth againe, they muſt grant, that it is either the accidents of bread, or bread it ſelfe, or ſome new ſubſtance ſupplied in that inſtant, or the very body of Chriſt, which commeth out of the body: but not the firſt, for it is a ſubſtance that is caſt forth into the draught, and the accidents of bread are corrupted and gone; and where there is corruption, there of neceſſitie is a ſubiect and a ſubſtance: It is not bread, for that they ſay was chaſed away before, and annihilated: it is no new ſubſtance; for the ſame thing, that commeth in by the mouth, goeth forth againe: therefore it followeth, that it is the ſubſtance of Chriſts body: for how can they ſhift it, ſeeing Chriſts body being once eaten muſt remaine? for our Sauiour ſaith, Hee that eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my blood remaineth in mee, and I in him, Iohn 6.56. and if Chriſts fleſh remaine, no other ſubſtance commeth vnto it, neither of bread, nor any other, (for this is the Lutherans conſubſtantiation, which the Papiſts abhorre.) They haue therefore but two euaſions, one is to ſay, that Chriſts fleſh goeth from the body, as it came into it, as a Popiſh Prieſt reaſoning with Robert Smith martyr, was not aſhamed to grant, ſaying further, that it was no greater derogation to Chriſt, then to be ſpet vpon: Fox.pag.1691. But this ſo great blaſphemie our aduerſaries ſeeme in words to miſlike: yet holding the carnall preſence, they are driuen ſo to ſay, or elſe to ſay nothing. The other way to ſatisfie all doubts, is to leaue theſe filthie dregs of error, and with Origene to confeſſe the truth: Quod ſi quicquid ingreditur per os, &c. If that whatſoeuer entreth in by the mouth goeth into the belly, &c. euen that meate, which is ſanctified by the word and prayer, in reſpect of the materiall part thereof, goeth into the belly, and ſo out into the draught, &c. Wherefore it is bread, and not the Lords fleſh, that is eaten in the Sacrament, and ſo deliuered againe, as all other meates are.

1.Pet.1.23.24.
Iohn 6.56.
In cap.15. Matth.

Hearken what Auguſtine ſaith, Cauendum eſt ne ita diuinitatem adſtruamus hominis, vt veritatem corporis auferamus: We muſt take heed we doe not ſo maintaine the diuine nature of the man Chriſt, that we take away the nature of his body.

Ad Dardan. epiſt.57.

Argum.5. The fathers in the law did eate the ſame ſpirituall meate, and drinke the ſame ſpirituall drinke in their Sacraments that wee doe, 1.Corinth.10.2.3. but they did not eate the fleſh of Chriſt, nor drinke his blood, but onely ſpiritually by faith: Ergo, no more doe we.

1.Cor.10.2.3.

Bellarmine here anſwereth no otherwiſe then he did before, that the Apoſtle meaneth not, that the Iſraelites did eate the ſame ſpirituall meate that we doe, but the ſame meate among themſelues, both good and bad, Bellarm.lib.1.de Euchar.cap.14.reſponſ.ad loc.12.

Contra. We haue likewiſe ſhewed before, that they did ſpiritually eate and drinke the ſame meate and drinke, that wee doe, namely Chriſt: as the Apoſtle ſaith, the rocke whereof they dranke, was 1.Cor.10.4. Chriſt, 1.Corinth.10.4. See alſo Auguſtines iudgement before of this place, and likewiſe Bernards, Controuerſie 11.queſtion 2.part.2.

Here Bellarmine firſt refuſeth Auguſtines expoſition, ſaying that the Apoſtle doth euidently ſhew, that they did eate the ſame meate onely amongſt themſelues, becauſe that all both good and bad did eate the ſame meate; but the good onely amongſt them, did eate the ſame ſpirituall meate with vs, in our aduerſaries iudgement: ſecondly, he ſaith, that Auguſtine did meane, that they did eate the ſame meate in ſignification onely, not in vertue and efficacie: Bellarm.cap.14.reſp.ad loc.12.

Contra. Firſt, it is euident by the Apoſtles words, that hee meaneth the ſame ſpirituall meate and drinke both among themſelues, and together with vs: for the rocke (ſaith he) was Chriſt: but Chriſt is our ſpirituall foode, as well as theirs. Secondly, his reaſon, that all both good and bad did eate the ſame meate, doth make againſt his expoſition, as well as ours: for it was the ſame ſpirituall meate whether amongſt themſelues, or the ſame with ours: but the wicked did not eate it, as it was ſpirituall meate. Wee ſay then, that it was the ſame ſpirituall meate ſacramentally to all both good and bad, though effectually onely to the beleeuers: as Chriſt ſaid to all his Apoſtles, Drinke ye all of this, for Matth.26.26. this is my blood, &c. Matth.26.26. It was ſacramentally Chriſts blood to them all, amongſt whom Origen thinketh that Iudas was one, and that hee receiued the Sacrament with the reſt, Tract.35.in Matth. yet it was ſo effectually onely to his faithfull Apoſtles. Thirdly, that Auguſtine meaneth, it was the ſame ſpirituall meate with ours, not in ſignification onely, but in vertue alſo and efficacie, it is euident by his owne words, rehearſed in the decrees, part.3.diſt.2.c.81. Aliud illi, aliud nos, ſed ſpecie viſibili, quod tamen idem eſt virtute ſpirituali: They did eate one thing, wee another, but in outward ſhew, which is the ſame in ſpirituall vertue.

Argum.6. There remained wine ſtill after the conſecration and diſtribution amongſt the Apoſtles:
Matth.16.29. for Chriſt ſaith, He will drinke no more of the fruite of the vine, Matth.26.29. So S. Paul calleth
1.Cor.10.17. the other element bread after the conſecration, 1.Cor.10.17. Wee that are many are one bread, be-
1.Cor.11.26. cauſe we are partakers of one bread. Likewiſe, cap.11.26. Ergo, there remaineth ſtill bread and wine in the Sacrament. And therefore no body of Chriſt: for they cannot be there both together, as they teach.

Bellarmine anſwereth, firſt, that Chriſt ſaying, I will drinke no more, &c. meaneth that wine which was vſed in his legall ſupper, at the eating of the Paſchall Lambe, before hee inſtituted his laſt ſupper: as Luke maketh manifeſt mention of two cups, which our Sauiour gaue to his Diſciples, one before the conſecration, the other after: cap.11.reſp.ad argum.10.

Contra.1. That Chriſt ſpake theſe words after the inſtitution of his laſt ſupper, it appeareth both by
S. Matthew and Marke, who both agreeing together report theſe words as ſpoken after. 2. S. Luke Luk.22.17.20. indeede chap.22.verſ.17.firſt ſpeaketh of the cup, and afterwards of the diſtribution of the bread, and againe of the cup, verſ.20. But as Auguſtine ſaith, he ſpeaketh in the firſt place by way of anticipation, meaning the ſame cup, which was giuen after Supper. Bellarmines anſwere here is, that Auguſtine was deceiued, cap.11.reſp.ad argum.10. But it further may bee ſhewed thus: The Euangeliſts ſet downe three things concerning the cup: Firſt, that Chriſt gaue thankes. Secondly, that hee gaue it to his diſciples. Thirdly, he ſaid, This is my blood of the new Teſtament: Now Matthew and Marke ioyne all theſe three together: Luke doth report them ſunderly: In the firſt place, he ſaith, Chriſt gaue thanks, and ſaid, Take this and deuide it amongſt you; that is, as the other Euangeliſts ſay, Drinke ye all of this:
And then in the ſecond rehearſall of the cup, he ſupplieth that which is wanting, namely this clauſe:
This cup is the new teſtament in my blood, or my blood of the new teſtament. So then before he ſpake of the Sacrament, both becauſe of the Euchariſticall act, the giuing of thankes, and the words of inſtitution, take, drinke, or deuide.

Bellarmine to the ſecond place anſwereth: firſt, S Paul calleth it bread after conſecration, becauſe it hath the ſhew, and ſhape of bread; as the braſen ſerpent, was called a ſerpent, and Angels in Scripture are called men, becauſe they ſo appeared: reſp.ad argum.13.

1.Cor.11.26. Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of ſuch bread as is eaten and broken, 1.Corinth.11.26. As of-
1.Cor.10.16. ten as ye ſhall eate this bread: and 1.Corinth 10.16. The bread, which we breake: but not the ſhape, but the ſubſtance of bread is eaten and broken. Secondly, the Angels did not appeare only in the ſhape of men, but had mens bodies indeede, their feete were waſht, they did eate and drinke with Abraham and Lot: the braſen ſerpent was not onely in ſhew, but in ſubſtance and throughout of braſſe: theſe
1.Cor.10.16. examples helpe you not. Thirdly, the Apoſtle calling it bread after conſecration ſo many times: thrice
17. Chap.11.26. in the 10.chapter, verſe 16.17. and thrice chapter 11. verſe 26.27.28. muſt be taken to ſpeake properly, 27.28. and to call the thing as it is.

Exod.7.12. Secondly, it is called bread, becauſe it was bread before: as Exod.7.12. Aarons rod is ſaid to deuoure the Sorcerers rods, whereas it was then a Serpent, and not a rod; but ſo called, becauſe it was a rod before, Bellarm.ibid.

Contra. Firſt, there is mention made in the text, how Aarons rod was turned into a Serpent; if you can ſhew the like Scripture for the turning of the bread into Chriſts body, you ſhall ſay ſomewhat. Secondly, Aarons rod was turned into a Serpent, and then returned to be a rod againe: you likewiſe muſt ſhew that the ſubſtance of bread returneth againe, or elſe this example is not like. Thirdly, Aarons rod was (being turned) a Serpent in ſhew, and not a rod: but in the Euchariſt the ſhew of bread remaineth ſtill by your owne confeſſion: herein alſo this example is vnlike.

Thirdly, ſaith he, it is called bread, either after the Hebrew phraſe, which taketh generally bread for meate; or elſe becauſe it is the true ſubſtantiall bread indeede, as our aduerſaries doe expound it, in the ſixth of Iohn; where Chriſt is called the true bread, Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, that the Apoſtle meaneth bread properly, not generally any meate, it thus appeareth, 1.Cor.10.16. the bread which we breake, &c. it is proper to bread to be broken, and not ſo proper 1.Cor.10.16.
for other meate, which is rather cut and diuided then broken. Againe, there is no other meate vſed in the Communion to betoken Chriſts body, but the breaking of bread. Secondly, neither doth the Apoſtle ſpeake here of ſpirituall bread, as Iohn 6. but of materiall bread, as verſ. 17. Wee are one Verſ.17.
bread, &c. becauſe we are partakers of one bread: This bread is not the fleſh of Chriſt, for the congregation, though they make one myſticall body, cannot be ſaid to bee Chriſts fleſh, as they are ſaid to be one bread and one body: they are Chriſts body myſticall, but not his reall & fleſhie body. Againe, the eating of bread, and drinking of the cup, are both taken alike, 1.Cor.11.26. but the Apoſtle ſpea- 1.Cor 11.26.
keth of a materiall cup, yet by a figure comprehending the wine in the cup: therefore hee alſo inſinuateth materiall bread.

Argum.7. Luke.24.39. Chriſt ſaith, handle me, and ſee me, a ſpirit hath not fleſh and bones, as yee Luk.24.39.
ſee mee haue: but Chriſts body in the Sacrament, can neither bee handled nor ſeene: Ergo, it is not there.

Bellarmine anſwereth: The argument followeth very well affirmatiuely, This is ſeene and felt: Ergo, it is a body, and ſo our Sauiour reaſoneth: but negatiuely it followeth not, It is not ſeene, nor felt: Ergo, no body: for a body may be couered with another body, and God may blind the eyes, that they ſhall not ſee, as when Chriſt paſſed in the middeſt amongſt them, that would haue throwne him downe headlong, Luk.4. Bellarm. reſp. ad argum.6.

Contra. Firſt, the argument followeth as well negatiuely, as affirmatiuely, where there is no other impediment: It cannot be felt or ſeene: Ergo, no body; as in the Sacrament there is no ſuch impediment: neither in the obiect, for there is the ſame thing ſeene and felt, which was before; neither is Chriſts body hid vnder another body: nor yet is our ſight hindred, or a miſt caſt before our eyes, as he pretendeth there was, when Chriſt eſcaped from the Nazarites (and yet the text ſaith not he paſſed inuiſible, but eſcaped miraculouſly, as at other times:) wherefore there being no impediment, the argument followeth ſtrongly. Secondly, our Sauiour reaſoneth thus: See my hands and feete, for it is I: I am here: Ergo, you may ſee my hands and feete: which were no good reaſon, if Chriſts body could be preſent, and neither hands, nor feete ſeene. Wherefore as the Apoſtles were perſwaded by ſeeing and handling of Chriſt, that his body was preſent; ſo vnleſſe wee may be ſo perſwaded, wee are not bound to beleeue Chriſts bodily preſence.

Argum.8. Ioh.6.63. It is the ſpirit that quickeneth, the fleſh profiteth nothing: Ergo, the fleſh of John 6.63.
Chriſt is not eaten otherwiſe then ſpiritually in the Sacrament.

Bellarmine and the Rhemiſts likewiſe anſwere, that by fleſh heere is not vnderſtoode the fleſh of Chriſt, but their fleſhly vnderſtanding of Chriſts words: for the Capernaites thought groſly, that Chriſt would diuide his fleſh, and giue it amongſt them to be eaten: and they alſo erred, in taking Chriſts fleſh, for the fleſh of a meere man: wherefore he onely reproueth their carnall vnderſtanding of Chriſt, whereas he ſaith, his words were ſpirit and life, that is ſpiritually to be vnderſtood; Bellar. reſp. ad argum.7. Rhemiſt. in hunc locum.

Secondly, be it granted, that Chriſt ſpeaketh of his fleſh, that it profiteth not; yet it followeth not, that it is not in the Sacrament: for by the ſame reaſon, there ſhould be no bread there neither, becauſe of it ſelfe it alſo profiteth not, Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, we doe not ſo conclude, the fleſh of Chriſt profiteth not of it ſelfe: Ergo, it is not in the Sacrament: but by warrant of theſe words, we ſay that Chriſts fleſh is not otherwiſe, but ſpiritually to be eaten, and therefore his carnall preſence is not requiſite at all: for Chriſt ſaith not, that the ſpirit and the fleſh quicken, but that the ſpirit onely quickeneth, which is the ſpirituall eating of his fleſh: for to all other purpoſes the fleſh of Chriſt is profitable, as that it was borne, died, and roſe againe for vs: but as touching any fleſhly eating it profiteth not at all. Secondly, that Chriſt ſpeaketh of his fleſh it is euident: for Chriſt remoueth the offence, which they tooke at his words, ſaying, ver.52. Verſ. 52.
How can this man giue vs his fleſh to eate? and therefore he telleth them that his fleſh would not profit them to be eaten, otherwiſe then ſpiritually. And thus Auguſtine expoundeth it, as hee is alleaged in their owne decrees, par.3. diſt.2. c.44. Caro non prodeſt quicquam, ſed quomodo illi intellexerunt, &c. The fleſh profiteth nothing, but as they vnderſtood it: for they ſo vnderſtood fleſh, as it is ſolde, and cut out in the ſhambles, &c. Here S. Auguſtine expoundeth this place of the fleſh of Chriſt, but becauſe Bellarmine ſeemeth to take aduantage of theſe words of Auguſtine, as though hee ſhould not condemne all carnall eating of Chriſt, but onely in ſuch groſſe manner, as the Capernaites imagined: It followeth in the ſame place, Gratiæ eius non conſumitur morſibus: His gracious fleſh is not conſumed with biting: that is, is not eaten at all. And againe, Donec ſeculum finiatur, ſurſum eſt Dominus: As long as the world endureth, the Lord is aboue: Corpus Domini, in quo reſurrexit vno loco eſſe oportet: The body of the Lord, wherein he roſe againe, muſt be but in one place; but the veritie of his body is diffuſed euery where. Here S. Auguſtine affirming, that Chriſts body is no where now, but in heauen, ſheweth, that it cannot any kinde of way, either viſibly or inuiſibly be eaten in the earth. Thirdly, the Papiſts are the Capernaites of theſe times: for they imagined, that Chriſts fleſh ſhould be eaten with the mouth, whether after a viſible or inuiſible manner, it is not expreſſed; and ſo doe the Papiſts hold. Againe, the Capernaites dreamed of a dead mans fleſh without life: and ſo the Papiſts doe ſeparate Chriſts fleſh from the ſpirituall vertue thereof, affirming that wicked men may eate Chriſts fleſh, and yet receiue no grace or vertue by it. And this impious diſtinction betweene the veritie and vertue of Chriſts fleſh, Innocentius 3. ſeemeth to be the author of: Decr. Greg. lib. 3. tit. 41. c.6. Diſtinguendum eſt ſubtiliter inter tria, &c. Wee muſt ſubtilly diſtinguiſh betweene three things in the Sacrament; the viſible forme of the bread and wine; the veritie which is of the fleſh of Chriſt; the vertue in vnitie and charitie: What doe they now elſe, in diuiding the veritie of Chriſts fleſh from the vertue thereof, but together with the Capernaites, make it a meere humane and dead fleſh without life or vertue? Fourthly, that this place is to be vnderſtood onely of the ſpirituall eating of Chriſt, I haue ſhewed before at large, in the anſwere to the ſecond argument of the Papiſts for the reall preſence, whither I referre the reader.

Iohn 12,26. Argum 9. Ioh. 12. 26. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Where I am, there ſhall my miniſters be, that is, they ſhall be with him in his glory. But now Chriſt is in glory: Ergo, his Miniſters and Saints are with him: but they are not in the Euchariſt: Ergo, neither is Chriſt preſent bodily there. Wherefore, they muſt confeſſe that it is either glorious to Chriſt to be in the Sacrament, or inglorious: if it be glory to him, the Saints muſt be there preſent to ſee and be partakers of his glory: if it be inglorious, it is the greateſt ſacriledge in the world to depriue Chriſt of his glory.

Bellarmine at the firſt ſight maketh light of this argument, (which indeede wee our ſelues doe not vrge, as any of our beſt reaſons) yet it doth ſo trouble him, that hee knoweth not which way to turne himſelfe; anſwering by a diſtinction, ſuch as it is: for as Chriſts holy ſoule, while it is in the Euchariſt, doth behold God, ſo is it in glory: but to be in the Euchariſt vnder the formes of bread and wine, is no glory to him, and therefore the preſence of his Saints is not neceſſarie there. Secondly, he granteth notwithſtanding, that the Angels are there preſent with Chriſts body, attending vpon him: reſponſ. ad argum 8.

Contra. Firſt, he hath giuen vs an anſwerleſſe anſwere: for ſtill we vrge as before, either it is glorious for Chriſt to be in the Euchariſt, or inglorious: hee granteth both, that is partly glorious, partly inglorious, that Chriſt being there, is in his fathers glorie, and is not: if hee be any way in glory, then
1. Theſſ. 4. 17. muſt his Saints be with him, according to his promiſe, for they are euer with him, 1. Theſſ. 4. 17. and Reuel. 14. 4. they follow the Lambe whither ſo euer he goeth, Reuel. 14. 4. If it be in part not glorious for Chriſt to be there, they doe more then in part commit blaſphemous ſacriledge againſt Chriſt, to pull him from his glory in heauen. Secondly, you giue the Angels a good office to attend vpon Chriſt to ſee him diſhonored: If the Sunne withdrew his light in the paſſion of Chriſt, & could not endure to ſee the Sonne of God ſacrificed in his owne ſhape; how much leſſe can the Angels endure to ſee him offered vp vnder
1. Pet. 1. 12. the baſe formes of bread and wine? The Angels doe ſtill deſire to behold Chriſt in his glorie, 1. Pet. 1. 12. but to ſee him diſhonoured, and vnclothed of his glory, they haue no will or deſire at all. This ſilly argument of ours (as he counteth it) doth make this great Rabbin ſpeechleſſe, that hee is conſtrained to lay his hand on his mouth.

Iohn 16,28. Argum. 10. Ioh. 16. 28. I leaue the world, and goe to the father: Ergo, Chriſt is no more in his humanitie in the world; and ſo conſequently not in the Euchariſt. But here it will be, and is anſwered, that Chriſt hath left the world, in his viſible preſence, but yet inuiſibly his body may be in the world ſtill. Wee then further ſay, that therefore Chriſt ſent the holy Ghoſt to comfort the Diſciples, and to ſupply his abſence, and to be in his ſtead: but if Chriſt were bodily preſent ſtill, there needed no ſuch ſupply.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that the comming of the holy Ghoſt did not ſupply euery preſence of Iohn. 14. 18. Chriſt, for he ſaith, Ioh. 14. 18. I will not leaue you comfortleſſe, but I will come vnto you; but onely the viſible preſence of Chriſt, whom they ſhould no longer ſee, nor heare, as they did: ſo that the comming of the ſpirit doth not take away the inuiſible preſence of his fleſh. Secondly, as the holy Ghoſt did verily deſcend, yet remained in heauen ſtill: ſo Chriſt verily aſcended as he is man, and yet remaineth ſtill in the Euchariſt, reſp. ad argum. 9.

Contra. Firſt, the holy Ghoſt ſupplieth not the preſence of Chriſts diuine nature, for ſo Chriſt and his ſpirit are one, and the one cannot be preſent without the other: but it ſupplieth his whole bodily preſence, as may thus appeare: Firſt, there is mention made, Iohn 14. of two kindes of Chriſts com-
Iohn 14. 18. 23. ming againe to the world: the one is by his ſpirit, and ſo he ſaith, Ioh. 14. verſ. 18. I will not leaue you comfortleſſe, but wil come againe vnto you. And verſ. 23. If any man loue me, &c. my father and I wil come vnto him, &c. Thus Chriſt in ſpirit and power is alwaies preſent, as his father is, and this preſence the ſpirit ſupplieth not. The other comming is in his body, and ſo he ſaith, verſ. 3. I will come againe, and receiue you to my ſelfe, that where I am, there may ye bee alſo, This is his comming in the end of the world; but in the Euchariſt Chriſt doth not receiue vs to glorie to himſelfe: Ergo, hee commeth not there in bodie.

Secondly, Ioh.16.7. If I goe not away, the Comforter will not come: but the Comforter is come: Ergo, Chriſt in bodie is gone, not onely after his viſible but inuiſible manner: for Chriſts bodily preſence, as it was comfortable, is taken away; and therefore hee ſaith hee will ſend another Comforter, Ioh.14.16. but the inuiſible preſence of Chriſts bodie is comfortable: now as he was our Comforter in his fleſh, he is abſent: for what need a ſecond comforter, if the firſt be ſtill preſent? Ergo, in reſpect of his inuiſible bodily preſence he is abſent. Iohn 16.7. Iohn 14.16.

Thirdly, Ioh.16.15. He ſhall take of mine and ſhew it vnto you: But if Chriſt himſelfe be preſent, might he not rather take of his owne himſelfe and ſhew vnto vs? Iohn 16.15.

Secondly, Bellarmine in comparing the holie Ghoſt and Chriſts humanitie together, that Chriſts bodie may be in heauen and earth at once, as the holy Ghoſt is, is become an vbiquitarie, bringiug in an omnipreſence of Chriſts body, and ſo is not farre from the Eutychian hereſie, in confounding Chriſts humane and diuine nature together.

*Argum.*11. Our bodies in the reſurrection ſhall be like to Chriſts body, Philip.3.21. who ſhall change our vile bodie, that it may be faſhioned or conformed to his glorious bodie: but our bodies in the reſurrection ſhall haue no ſuch propertie or qualitie, to be in many places at once: Ergo, neither now is Chriſts body at once in many places. Philip 3.21.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſts body is in many places, it doth not ariſe from any propertie of a glorious body, but from Gods infinit power, *reſponſ. ad argum.*14.*c.*14.

Contra. Firſt, ſo doth the conforming of our bodies to Chriſts glorious body ariſe from the power of God: as it followeth in the ſame place, according to his mightie power, whereby he is able to ſubdue all things to himſelfe: wherefore euen the properties of our transfigured bodies ſhall be wrought by the mightie power of God: and therefore herein is no difference betweene Chriſts glorified bodie and ours. Secondly, our Sauiour prayeth, Ioh.17.21. that as he and his father are one, ſo we may be one with him: Like as then Chriſt as he is God, is one with his Father; ſo we in our glorified bodies ſhall be one with Chriſt as he is man. And further he ſaith, verſ.22. the glorie that thou gaueſt me, I haue giuen them: It followeth then, that all the properties of Chriſts glorified bodie ſhall by his diuine power be communicated to ours: but our bodies ſhall haue no ſuch omnipreſence then, no more hath Chriſts body now. Iohn 17.21.22.

*Argum.*12. Chriſt is there onely in body, where he is to be ſought: but he is to be ſought only aboue in heauen, Coloſſ.3.1. Seeke thoſe things that are aboue, where Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of God: Ergo, Chriſt is bodily only in heauen, and not in earth. Coloſſ.3.1.

Bellarmine anſwereth, to ſeeke Chriſt aboue is not vnderſtood of the place, but of the eleuating and lifting vp of the affection: for otherwiſe Aſtronomers and ſtarre-gazers ſhould be the deuouteſt men, that are alwaies looking vpward: ſo they that ſeeke Chriſt in the Sacrament, may haue their heart aboue, *cap.*14.*reſponſ. ad argum.*15.

Contra. Firſt, neither doe wee ſpeake of a ſeeking of Chriſt aboue only in place without eleuating of affection, as the Apoſtles were rebuked, Act.1. for gazing after Chriſt into heauen; but of ſuch a ſeeking of Chriſt in the heauenly place, as hath our heart and affection alſo: as it followeth verſ.2. Set your affection on heauenly things. Secondly, howſoeuer this word, aboue, may otherwhere be referred to the affection, and not to the place; yet it is euident, that the Apoſtle heere meaneth, the heauenly place aboue, where Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of God: but Chriſts body in the Euchariſt ſitteth not at the right hand of God (for then you muſt ſay alſo that the formes of bread and wine, vnder the which you ſay Chriſts body is, doe ſit there together with Chriſt:) Ergo, Chriſt is not to bee ſought aboue in the Euchariſt. Thirdly, verſ.2. the Apoſtle to things aboue oppoſeth things on the earth, or earthly things: but bread and wine are earthly things: Ergo, for Chriſt to bee vnder earthly things, is not to be aboue.

*Argum.*13. Chriſt ſaith, Doe this in remembrance of me: but we remember onely things abſent; Chriſt is in the Euchariſt remembred: Ergo, he is abſent.

Bellarmine anſwereth, the Apoſtle ſheweth what it is, to doe it in remembrance of Chriſt, that is, to ſhew the Lords death, till he come, 1.Cor.11.26. ſo then the death of Chriſt is remembred, which is indeed abſent and paſt, and not preſent, *Bellarm.cap.*11.*reſp. ad argum.*9. 1.Cor.11.26.

Contra. Firſt, if the Euchariſt be a remembrance of Chriſts death, and ſo conſequently of his ſacrifice, then is it not a ſacrifice; for it cannot be both the thing it ſelfe, and a memorie of it too: ſo though you ſhould gaine here by the reall preſence, you haue loſt in your ſacrifice. Secondly, Chriſts death cannot be remembred without a memorie alſo of his bodie, for it was his bodie that died: neither is Chriſts death, himſelfe; but his bodie, that died, is himſelfe: wherefore in remembrance of me, muſt be vnderſtood of his bodie, that died, which is therefore abſent, becauſe it is remembred. Thirdly, if the Euchariſt be a ſhewing of the Lords death till he come, and you ſay, he commeth ſtraight vpon the words of conſecration: then is the Euchariſt either not at all, or a very ſhort while, a ſhewing of his death: And thus you confound your ſelues.

Laſtly, wee muſt vnderſtand, that this their deuiſed and forged opinion of the reall preſence of Chriſt, is of no antiquitie in the Church: neither was there any queſtion about it for 1000. yeeres af-

Fox p.1152. ter Chriſt, till the time of Berengarius, who liued about anno 1060. who was ſore troubled, for maintaining the truth againſt the carnall preſence, and vnder Pope Leo the 9. and Nicholas the 2. was conſtrained twice to recant: yet there was no publique law or decree made in the Church concerning tranſubſtantiation, till the Councell of Laterane, which was held vnder Pope Innocent the third, anno 1215.

Epiſtol.23. And that this groſſe opinion ſauoureth not a whit of antiquitie, it may appeare by the reſolute iudgement of Auguſtine: Sacramenta ex ſimilitudine ipſarum rerum nomina habent, ſecundum quendam modum ſacramentum corporis Chriſti, corpus Chriſti eſt, &c. The Sacraments, becauſe of ſome likeneſſe, doe beare the names of the things themſelues: as the Sacrament of the body of Chriſt is after a certaine manner called his body. Tract 25.in Ioann. Quid paras dentes & ventrem? Crede, & manducaſti: Why doeſt thou make readie thy teeth and thy belly? Beleeue in Chriſt, and thou haſt eaten him. Non dubitauit Dominus dicere, hoc eſt corpus meum, cum ſignum daret corporis ſui: Chriſt doubted not to ſay, This is my bodie, when he gaue a ſigne of his bodie, &c. Cont. Adimont. c.12. Super omnes cælos aſcendit corpore non receſſit maieſtate: He is aſcended aboue all heauens in his bodie, but is not departed in his Maieſtie, &c. By theſe and many ſuch places in this ancient father, it is manifeſt, that in thoſe daies there was no ſuch opinion held of the carnall preſence.

Bernard alſo teſtifieth euidently for this point. Vſque hodiè eadem caro nobis, ſed ſpiritualiter non carnaliter exhibetur, &c. The ſame fleſh of Chriſt euen to this day is exhibited, but ſpiritually not carnally: we haue the true ſubſtance of his fleſh, but in ſpirit and power: wee haue Chriſt, not as the Angels in the preſence of his Maieſtie, as the Apoſtles in the ſight of his humanity, but as the Church hath Chriſt in faith in the Sacraments.

Againe, Cibus iſte non eſt ventris, ſed mentis: iſte eſt panis Angelorum qui neſcit putreſcere, non vadit in ſeceſſum, ſed tendit in excelſum: This food is of the minde, not of the bellie, this is the bread of Angels, that putrifieth not, it goeth not into the draught, but aſcendeth aloft: Sermon. in cœna Domini.

Wee haue the teſtimonie alſo of the 7. generall Councell, Conſtantinop. as it is alleaged. Nicen.2. action.6. Tom.3. vpon theſe words of our Sauiour, Hoc eſt corpus meum: This is my bodie; they thus inferre: Ecce igitur viuificantis illius corporis imaginem totam, panis ſcilicet ſubſtantiam, quam mandauit apponi, ne ſcilicet humana effigie figurata, Idololatreia induceretur: Behold therefore the whole or only image of that quickening body, the ſubſtance of bread, which he commanded to be ſet before them, leſt if it had had an humane ſhape, they might haue committed idolatrie to it. They ſay, the ſubſtance of bread, not the forme onely was deliuered the Apoſtles, and, that it was the image and figure only of Chriſts body.

Let vs ſee, what their owne decrees ſay for this matter, decret. par.3. diſt.2. c.44. Non hoc corpus quod videtis, manducaturi eſtis, &c. You ſhall not eate this bodie, which you ſee, nor drinke that blood, which they ſhall ſhedde vpon the Croſſe, &c. ibid. c.49. Dupliciter intelligitur caro Chriſti & ſanguis, vel ſpiritualis illa & diuina, &c. The fleſh and blood of Chriſt is vnderſtood two waies, either his diuine and ſpirituall fleſh, whereof he ſaith, my fleſh is meate indeed, &c. or his fleſh, which was crucified vpon the Croſſe, &c. But Chriſts fleſh ſuppoſed to be in the Euchariſt, is neither ſpirituall (for a ſpirituall preſence we denie not) and they hold a carnall preſence, which is not ſpirituall: neither is it his fleſh or blood vpon the Croſſe, for that the former Decree denieth to be eaten, or drunke: Ergo, there is no fleſh of Chriſt preſent at all.

Againe, diſtinct.4. c.131. Nulli eſt ambigendum, &c. It is not to be doubted, but that they which are baptized, are made partakers of the bodie and blood of Chriſt, &c. Againe, Origen ſaith, tract.35. in Matth. Potus iſte, quem Deus ſanguinem ſuum fatetur, &c. This drinke, which God calleth his blood, is the word; ſo then Chriſts blood is in Baptiſme, it is in the word, but yet there is no carnall preſence: Ergo, his bodie and blood may bee and are in the Euchariſt, and yet no carnall preſence. And S. Ambroſe ſpeaking of Baptiſme, ſaith, lib.1. de Sacram. c.2. Si hoc eſt corpus Chriſti, hìc et Angeli conſtituti ſunt, &c. If the bodie of Chriſt be here, then the Angels alſo are preſent, for where the bodie is, there will the Eagles be gathered together: The bodie of Chriſt is then as well in Baptiſme, as in the Euchariſt, and yet there is no reall preſence.

Ibid. cap.87. Chriſtus ipſe conuiua, et conuiuium; ipſe comedens, et qui comeditur, &c. Chriſt is both a gueſt, and the feaſt; he himſelfe eateth, and is eaten: but Chriſt did not eate his owne fleſh; and yet he did eate, that which his Apoſtles eate: Ergo, his fleſh was not in the Euchariſt. Wherefore we ſay with Origen, tract.35. in Matth. Ipſe eſt panis, et manducat nobiſcum panem: He is the bread, and eateth bread with vs: He did eate bread therefore with his diſciples, and not his owne fleſh, cap.47. Quid paras dentes & ventrem, &c. What doeſt thou prepare thy teeth and thy bellie? beleeue, and thou haſt eaten Chriſt: Ergo, Chriſts fleſh is not preſent in the Euchariſt to be eaten with the mouth, and ſo to goe downe into the bellie. Likewiſe cap.76. De hac hoſtia, &c. Of this hoaſt, which is done in remembrance of Chriſt, it is lawfull to eate; but of that hoaſt, which Chriſt offered vpon the Croſſe, it is lawfull for none to eate of it ſelfe: but Chriſts fleſh which they ſay is in the Euchariſt, is the ſame, that was offered vpon the Croſſe: Ergo, it is not to bee eaten of any. This euidence and witneſſe againſt the reall preſence we haue from their owne decrees: whereunto I wil adioyne one other euident place, decret. par.3. diſt.2. c.55. Dicit ſacerdos, &c. The Prieſt or Miniſter ſaith, Make this a reaſonable and acceptable oblation, Quod est figura corporis et sanguinis Domini,&c. which is a figure of the body and blood of our Lord Iesus Christ. If the oblation then be a figure of Christs bodie and blood, it is not the bodie and blood it selfe.

We will adioyne the glorious testimonie of the holy Martyrs, with some of their reasons.

Bishop Ridley holy Martyr: That which Christ did take, on the which he gaue thankes, the which he brake, he gaue to his disciples, he called his bodie: but he tooke bread, gaue thanks ouer the bread, brake bread: Ergo, it was very bread which he called his bodie.

Againe, the carnall presence of Christ destroyeth the institution of the Lords Supper, which was commanded to be continued vntill the Lord himselfe should come: if therefore he be now really present in his flesh, then must the Supper cease: for a remembrance is not of a thing present, but of a thing past and absent. See more arguments of this worthie Martyr, Fox pag. 1443. and 1387. Pag.1311.

Master Bradford: The Sacrament is no otherwise Christs body, then Circumcision was the couenant of God, and as Baptisme and the water of Baptisme is regeneration. Here when it was denied, that no where in the Scriptures it could be shewed, that Baptisme and the Lords Supper were coupled together: The Martyr bringeth forth that place, 1.Cor.12. As we are baptized into one bodie, so are 1.Cor.12.13. we potati in vno spiritu, wee haue drunke of one spirit: then was it answered, that Paul had no such words: vid. plur. p.1619. col.1. Pag.1470.2.20

M.Bland, disputing with one M. Millet a popish Priest, about the carnall presence, driueth him to confesse, that men were made drunke with the qualities and accidents, not the substance of wine, and that mice might liue with the accidents of bread, pag.1671. col.2. Pag 1518.2.20

R.Smith, compelleth a popish doctor to confesse, that the bodie of Christ being eaten in the Sacrament, goeth downe into the belly, and so is cast into the draught: saying further, that it was no more a derogation to Christ, then to be spit vpon; to whom the Martyr answereth: if the Iewes being his enemies, did but spit in his face, and we being his friends throw him into the draught, which of vs haue deserued the greater damnation, Fox p. 1692. Thus it may appeare how grosse this popish opinion is, Pag.1586.1.45 the patrones whereof are constrained to fall into so many vnreasonable absurdities: for this truth against this carnall and grosse manner of Christs presence, these holy Martyrs, with thousands, yea 10. thousands more, haue not doubted to giue their liues.

These and many other arguments of the Martyrs, both against the reall presence and transubstantiation I had collected together, and digested them into some order: but committing the copie to a deceitfull messengers hand, to carrie it to the presse, by his negligence it was lost: and so I was put to a second trouble, and others depriued of my simple collections: which I had no leasure to frame anew, the presse staying for worke: let this therefore serue for a iust excuse (Christian Reader) if thy mind bee not fully satisfied here in this behalfe. And I pray God forgiue him his fault, that hath put me to this trouble, and hindered the profit of many, and deliuer me hereafter from the hands of such.

Now for further euidence herein: 1. the Greeke Church in time past did not hold such carnall presence of Christs body. Chrysostome; If it be dangerous to transferre these sanctified vessels vnto pri- Hom.11.in Matth. uate vses, in quibus non verum corpus Christi, sed mysterium corpus Christi continetur, &c. wherein not the true body of Christ, but the mysterie of Christs bodie is contained: how much more the vessels of our bodies, which God hath prepared for himselfe to dwell in, &c. Theodoret: Christus symbola & signa, quæ videntur, appellatione corporis & sanguinis honorauit, non naturam mutans, sed naturæ adyciens gratiam: Christ hath honoured the symbols & signes, which are seene, with the appellation of his Dialog.1.c.8. body and blood, not changing the nature thereof, but adding grace, &c. Isychius: Carnem eius quæ Lib.1.in 2.cap. Leuitic. ad comedendum inepta erat ante passionem (quis enim comedere cupiebat carnem Dei) aptam cibo post passionem fecit, &c. comedimus autem nunc cibum, sumentes eius memoriam passionis, &c. His flesh which was vnfit to be eaten before his passion (for who desired to eate the flesh of God) he made apt for meate after his passion, &c. and now we eate this meate, assuming the memorie of his passion, &c. but if the verie flesh of Christ were giuen to be eaten in the Eucharist, Christ should haue so giuen it at his last supper, which was before his passion, which is here by Isychius denied.

The moderne Greeke Church is much declined from the puritie of the ancient Greek Church, and doth hold a kind of reall presence, and certaine alteration and change; but not like to that which the Romanists do maintaine: Ieremie Patriarke confesseth the bread and wine to be changed into the true bodie and blood of Christ: yet he denieth, that ea caro, quam ipse Dominus gerebat, in cibum dabatur Censur.Oriental.c.10. Apostolis, &c. The flesh which our Lord did beare, was giuen for meate to the Apostles at his last supper, or is giuen vnto vs now in the Eucharist, &c. He also further saith, that the mysteries of the bodie Cap 13. and blood of Christ, in humanum corpus non mutantur, sed ipsum in illa mutatur: are not changed into (our) humane body, but it is changed into them; as the yron red fire hot, becommeth as it were fire, but the fire taketh not the nature of yron, &c. And in another place, he calleth it spirituale alimentum, Cap.7. the spirituall nourishment of the bodie and blood of Christ, &c. And againe, Vt in ipsam substantiam Cap.13. animæ nostræ, per ipsum corpus nostrum transeat, it passeth into the substance of our soule by our bodie, &c.

2. Concerning the ancient opinion of the South Church, we haue ſeene before the iudgement of Tertullian and Auguſtine: and long ſince their times, the opinion of the Aethiopike Church, as it is deliuered by their Archbiſhop Gregentius, is, that there is but one deſcending of Chriſts fleſh out of heauen; which ſhall be at the day of iudgement, (when hee ſhall deſcend (out of heauen) to iudge) all the ſinners of the earth: then it followeth, that the fleſh of Chriſt deſcendeth not, or commeth into the Euchariſt.

What the opinion of the moderne Aethiopike Church is, it is not ſo certaine: they thus pray in their Liturgie, bleſſe, ſanctifie, purifie and tranſlate this bread into thy ſpotleſſe fleſh: but whether they meane a ſpirituall or corporall change, they expreſſe not.

3. The reformed Churches doe thus profeſſe. Bohemia, c. 4. Our Sauiour Chriſt, by his latter kind of preſence, being not viſible, but ſpirituall, is preſent in the Miniſters of the Church, in the Word, and in the Sacraments, &c.

Harmon. ſect. 12. pag. 381. Heluetia, latter confeſſ. cap. 19. Not that the ſignes are turned into the things ſignified, or ceaſe to be that, which in their owne nature they are: (for then they could not be Sacraments, which ſhould conſiſt onely of the things ſignified, and haue no ſignes, &c.)

Harm. pag. 421. Baſil, artic. 6. We doe not include into the bread and drinke of the Lord, the naturall, true and ſubſtantiall bodie of Chriſt, &c. There is a ſacramentall preſence, which lifteth vp mans minde into heauen, and doth not pull downe Chriſt, according to his humanitie, from the right hand of God, &c.

Harm. pag. 429. Engliſh confeſſion, artic. 11. Although we doe not touch the bodie of Chriſt with teeth and mouth, yet we hold him faſt, and eate him by faith, &c.

Pag. 426. French confeſſion, artic. 36. We affirme, that they which doe bring pure faith vnto the holy ſupper of our Lord, doe indeed receiue that, which there the ſignes doe witneſſe; namely, that the bodie and blood of Ieſus Chriſt, are no leſſe the meate and drinke of the ſoule; then bread and wine are the meate of the bodie, &c.

Gelaſius de duabus Chriſti naturis: ex Bibliothec. Patrum tom. 4. 4. Beſide the decrees before alleaged, Gelaſius Biſhop of Rome thus teſtifieth: Non deſinet eſſe ſubſtantia vel natura panis et vini, & certe imago vel ſimilitudo corporis et ſanguinis Chriſti, in actione myſteriorum celebratur, &c. The ſubſtance or nature of the bread and wine ceaſeth not to be: and truly a certaine image and ſimilitude of the bodie and blood of Chriſt is celebrated in the myſticall action, &c.

Lib. epiſt. 22. ad Iodocum Dentium. Eraſmus thus ingeniouſly confeſſeth: nullum reperio locum in ſcripturis diuinis, &c. I find no place in the diuine Scriptures, where it is euident, that the Apoſtles conſecrated the bread and wine, in carnem & ſanguinem Chriſti: into the fleſh and blood of Chriſt, &c.

AN APPENDIX TO THIS QVESTION, WHETHER it ſtand with the power and will of God, that Chriſts bodie ſhould be carnally preſent in the Sacrament.

The Papiſts.

27. Error. THere are two difficulties or impoſſibilities, which do hinder the reall preſence of Chriſts body in the Sacrament: Firſt, it would follow, that a naturall body, ſuch as Chriſts is, might be in two places at once: for they ſay, that it is in heauen, and in the Euchariſt all at once. Secondly, that a naturall bodie may be in a place, and yet not occupie or fill a place: for if Chriſts body be in the Sacrament, it occupieth no place: the compaſſe of a thinne and round cake is not anſwerable to the proportion of Chriſts body.

Notwithſtanding both theſe difficulties, it is agreeable both to the power and good pleaſure of God, that the body of Chriſt ſhould be included in the Sacrament, Bellarm.

Act. 9. 4. Argum. 1. It is poſſible for the body of Chriſt to bee in many places at once; and it alſo ſtandeth with his will: as Act. 9. 4. Chriſt appeared to Saul, either vpon the earth, or in the ayre next to the earth: for how could he either heare the voice of Chriſt ſitting in heauen, or ſee the light ſo farre off? Ergo, Chriſt was in two places: he appeared to Paul vpon earth, and he was at the ſame time in heauen, from whence he ſhall not moue till the day of iudgement, Bellarm. de ſacram. Euchariſt. lib. 3. cap. 3. Rhem. Act. 9. ſect. 1.

Anſw. 1. The text is plaine, that Chriſt ſpake from heauen, from whence the light ſhined, verſ. 3. he was neither in the ayre nor vpon the earth. 2. Doe you make queſtion, whether Paul could ſee a light, or heare a voyce from ſo farre; ſeeing that the Sunne, whoſe body is ſo farre diſtant from vs, doth diſperſe his beames ouer the face of the earth, and the voyce of the thunder is heard very farre? Will ye deny Chriſt to haue that power, which we ſee to be in his creatures? 3. And why was it not as poſſible, that Chriſt from heauen ſhould be heard and ſeene of Paul, as he was ſeene of Stephen ſitting on the right hand of God? Act. 7. 56.

Act. 7. 56.

Act. 9. 7. Act. 22. 14. Act. 26. 16. Bellarmine replieth: firſt, that it is certaine, that Paul did ſee Chriſt in the way to Damaſcus, for the text ſaith, that the other which were with him, ſaw no man, Act. 9. 7. Whereby is inſinuated, that Paul did ſee: and againe Act. 22. 14. Ananias ſaith to Saul, God hath appointed thee, &c. that thou ſhouldeſt ſee that iuſt one, and heare the voyce of his mouth: and Act. 26. 16. Chriſt ſaid to Paul, I haue appeared appeared vnto thee for this purpoſe, &c. 1.Cor.9.1. Haue I not ſeene the Lord? and 1.Cor.15.8. Laſt of all, He was ſeene alſo of me: out of theſe places he inferreth, that Paul did ſee Chriſt.

1.Cor.9.1.
1.Cor.15.8.

Contra. Firſt, we denie not, but that Paul did ſee Chriſt in his humanitie, which might be as well at other times as now, as Act.22.18. At Ieruſalem he ſaw Chriſt ſpeaking vnto him: and 2.Cor.12. He was taken vp into the third heauen, &c. where no doubt he ſaw Chriſt. Secondly, neither doe we ſtand vpon it, but that Chriſt alſo was ſeene of Paul, as hee went to Damaſcus, though it doe not appeare out of the text, but the contrarie rather: for Saul at the very firſt ſhining of the light before hee heard any voice, fell downe to the ground, and was ſtricken blind, Act.9.4. and verſ.8. the words of the text are, That hee ſaw no man: wherefore it may bee doubted whether at this time hee ſaw Chriſt with the eies of his fleſh. Thirdly, the authorities alleaged may be eaſilie anſwered: the firſt, Act 9.7. as the men are ſaid to haue ſeene no man, ſo verſ.8. it is ſaid of Saul: the ſecond 22.14. That Paul ſhould ſee that iuſt one, and heare his voyce, may be vnderſtood of the viſion that followeth, verſe 18. where Chriſt was both ſeene, and heard of Paul: the third Act.26.16. That Chriſt appeared, doth not enforce any ſight of his perſon, as that place doth not, Act.7.2. where in the ſame word God is ſaid to haue appeared to Moſes: the fourth, and fifth places proue, that Paul ſaw Chriſt, but not at this time: yet we denie not, but that Paul did and might ſee Chriſt in his iourney, though neither this place, nor the other Scriptures alleaged, doe neceſſarily conclude it.

Act.22.18.

Secondly, Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſt was ſeene of Paul in the earth, or in the ayre neere to the earth: firſt, becauſe the light of Chriſts bodie was ſo great, that it blinded Paul, which it could not haue done, if Chriſts bodie had been ſo farre off. Secondly, the other men ſaw the light, and heard the voyce, but their eies and eares could not reach vp to heauen: Thirdly, they heard the voyce, but could not diſtinctly vnderſtand it, as Paul did, therefore Chriſt was neerer to Paul: but if the voyce had been from heauen, they ſhould all haue heard it alike. Fourthly, if Paul had ſeene Chriſt in heauen as Stephen did, he would not haue doubted, who it was, as now ſuddenly ſeeing a man ſtand before him, he asketh, who art thou Lord.

Contra. Firſt, it was a light paſſing the brightneſſe of the ſunne, Act.26.13. If then the ſunne bee able to dazle the eyes, how much more this exceeding light that came from Chriſt, though it ſhined from heauen, as the ſunne doth likewiſe? and if ſuch a brightneſſe came from a cloud, that it gaue light to all the hoſt of Iſrael, how much more this light that came from Chriſt? Secondly, though their eies and eares could not reach to heauen, yet Chriſt by his power could cauſe the brightneſſe and ſound to deſcend to them. Thirdly, it was not the neerenes of the place that cauſed Paul to vnderſtand the voice, and not the reſt, but becauſe it pleaſed Chriſt ſo to diſpoſe their hearing, as Iohn 12.28. There came a voyce, not out of the aire, but from heauen, which Chriſt heard and vnderſtood, but they that ſtood by perceiued it not, ſome of them ſaying it was a thunder: ſo was it in this place. Fourthly, Stephen confeſſed Chriſt as ſoone as he ſaw him, becauſe he knew him, and beleeued in him before: but Paul being before a perſecutor of Chriſt, and a ſtranger from the faith, might very well aske this queſtion (who art thou Lord) though he ſaw him not vpon the earth: and how could he ſee Chriſt before him now, ſeeing he was at the very firſt blinded with the ſudden ſhining of the light.

Act.26.13.
Iohn 12.28.

*Argum.*2. The bodie of Chriſt may be where it pleaſeth him, and yet ſhall not need any naturall place, or occupie any roome: he is able to bring a Camell through the eye of a needle, Matth.19.26. He alſo came through the doores in to his Apoſtles; roſe out of the ſepulchre through the ſtone; was borne, his mothers wombe being ſhut: therefore he may as well, and is no doubt preſent vnder the ſhapes of bread and wine in the Sacrament, Rhem. Matth.26. ſect.11. Bellar. lib.3. de ſacram. cap.6.

Matth.19.26.

*Anſw.*1. Chriſt ſheweth in that place, that it is as impoſſible for a rich man, that is high minded, and truſteth in his riches, to enter into heauen, as for a Camel to paſſe through the eie of a needle: but it is poſſible with God to giue rich men humble and lowly minds, and ſo make them fit for his kingdom, as to make the Camel leſſe, and ſo draw him through a needle. It is not proued out of this place, that God can or will draw the huge body of a Camell through a needle, remaining ſtill of that bigneſſe: no more then that it is poſſible for God, to bring a proud, rich, arrogant man to heauen, his affections not altered: both theſe are impoſſible to God, not becauſe he cannot in his abſolute power do them, but becauſe they are contrarie to his will and ordinance: The one is againſt the law of iuſtice, to bring a wicked man to heauen; the other againſt the law of nature.

Bellarmine replieth, that it is not impoſſible with men, for a Camell to goe through a needle, if hee ceaſe to be a Camell, and be turned into a ſmall thread: ibid.

Contra. Firſt, yet it is impoſſible to men, for they haue no power to extenuate the bigneſſe of a Camels bodie, and ſo to make it paſſe through a needle, as God hath: it is poſſible with man to draw a thread through a needle, but not to turne a Camell into a thread. Secondly, a rich man truſting in his riches cannot without change of his affections goe to heauen, no more can a Camel go through a needle, his bodie not altered. Therefore as it cannot bee ſhewed, that euer a proud rich man entred into heauen; ſo neither, that a Camell at any time went through a needle: ſo that this place maketh not for the poſſibilitie of the reall preſence at all.

2. For the other three examples: it is not proued out of Scripture, that the bodie of Chriſt pearced the doores, the graue, ſtone, or his mothers wombe: although the doores were found ſhut after Chriſts entrance, the graue couered, and his mother remained a Virgine ſtill: for all theſe paſſages might giue place for a while to the body of Chriſt, and returne againe to their place: as the red Sea was deuided till the Iſraelites paſſed, and afterward the waters came together againe. And concerning the laſt inſtance of the birth of Chriſt, it is certaine out of the Scriptures, that Chriſt opened the wombe of his mother in his birth, Luk.2.23. Hitherto therefore they haue proued nothing.

Whether Chriſts bodie peirced the doores.

Bellarmine replieth to the firſt example, that if Chriſts bodie pierced not the doores, but they gaue way vnto him, it had been no miracle: and againe, Chriſt came vnto the Apoſtles without any noiſe, or mouing of the houſe, or creaking of the doores, and therefore it is like, that they opened not to him, but he went through them.

Act.12.10.

Act.5.23.

Contra. Firſt, he may ſay as well that it was no miracle, that the iron gate opened of it owne accord to Peter, Act.12.10. how then is he not aſhamed to denie a miracle here? or was it not a miracle, for the red Sea to deuide it ſelfe, though it came together againe? Secondly, though the doore gaue place, yet it might be, and was done, without any noiſe, as the priſon doores were opened to Peter, and yet the keeper not awaked, that kept the watch, Act.5.23. Thirdly, S. Hierome thinketh, that the doore gaue place to Chriſts bodie: Quid maius? &c. What is greater? to hang the huge earth vpon nothing, or for the Lord to paſſe by the doores being ſhut, Et creaturam cedere Creatori? And the creature to giue place to the Creator? aduerſ. error. Iohan. Hieroſ. So then it is not neceſſary that Chriſts body ſhould pierce the doore, but that it gaue place vnto his body, either by opening, or giuing way.

How Chriſt is ſaid to haue opened the wombe in his birth.

Secondly, to the ſecond example, if Chriſt in his birth opened the wombe of the Virgine, and made himſelfe a way by the dilatation of the ſame, then it would follow, that Marie brought forth with paine, neither could ſhe afterward be a Virgin; for this is Virginitie, not to haue the wombe opened, Bellarm. ibid.

2.King.19.3.

Geneſ.19.8.
Luk.1.34.

Contra. Though Bellarmine here very vnſeemely take vpon him to play the midwife, and to diſcouer the ſecrets of birth, which may better be concealed: yet, ſo farre as modeſtie will ſuffer, wee will ſend him away with his full anſwere. Firſt, he that procured to be borne of a Virgine, could alſo open himſelfe a way out of the wombe, without paine to his mother: that as in his conception, there was no touch of carnall pleaſure; ſo neither in his birth, ſenſe of any paine: neither is the paine in the opening of the wombe, but in the place of birth: which he will not denie vnto Chriſt; as it is ſaid. 2.Reg. 19.3. The children are come to the birth, and there is no ſtrength to bring foorth. Secondly, Virginitie no more conſiſteth in the opening of the wombe, then in the place and pitch of the birth, through the which the holy Child paſſed, which (I thinke) he will not denie: and virginitie may be loſt, where the wombe is not opened, as in the barren, that are polluted, and ſo bring not foorth. And againe, the Scripture thus deſcribeth Virginitie, and Virgins; which haue not knowne man, Gen.19.8. and ſo ſaith Marie of her ſelfe, Luk.1.34. I know not man: ſo herein conſiſted her virginitie, that ſhee conceiued without the companie of man. Thirdly, yet he hath not anſwered the Scripture, which teſtifieth, that Chriſt opened the wombe, Luk.2.23. according to the law, Euery man child, that firſt openeth the wombe, ſhall be called holy to the Lord: Quod ad ſpecialem natiuitatem ſaluatoris, &c. Which Hierome thinketh is more properly applied to the ſpeciall natiuitie of Chriſt, then of any other: dialog.2. aduerſ. Pelag. and he doubteth not to ſay, Deum per genitalia virginis natum: That Chriſt was borne by the ordinary places of birth. I will adde alſo out of the Synod. Toleuſ. Quid incredibile, &c. Why ſhould it be incredible, that againſt the naturall vſe Marie brought foorth, and yet remained a virgine, when againſt the vſe of nature, the Sea ſaw that and fled? Like then as the Sea parted and cloſed againe, ſo was it in the birth of Chriſt. Laſtly, Durandus a Papiſt thinketh alſo, that the wombe of the virgine was dilated for the paſſage of Chriſt. in 4. diſtinct.44.qu.6.

Whether Chriſts body riſing againe pierced the ſtone.

Thirdly, concerning the third example, whereas we anſwere, that the graue-ſtone might giue place to the body of Chriſt riſing againe, and returne to his place againe: Bellarmine replieth, that this is our owne coniecture without any authoritie.

Contra. Firſt, it is rather their bare coniecture, that Chriſts body went through the ſtone, contrary to the propertie of a naturall bodie: We thinke, that Chriſt had as great power to cauſe the ſtone to giue way, and come againe to his place, as the Angell had to make the priſon doores open to Peter, and to ſhut againe, Act.5.19,23. Secondly, we haue a warrant from your owne decrees: Iacuit in ſepulchro, & reuoluto lapide monumenti, &c. He lay in the graue, and the ſtone being remooued, his fleſh roſe againe the third day, decret. Gaij. This decree ſaith, that the ſtone remooued at the riſing of Chriſt.

Hebr.4.14.
Iob 37.18.

Act.7.56.

Argum.3. Bellarmine produceth a fourth example of the aſcenſion of Chriſt, who in his body pierced the heauens, Heb.4.14. But the heauens are a ſolid ſubſtance, euen as molten glaſſe: Iob 37.18. Therefore it followeth hereupon, that many bodies may bee in one place at once: And whereas it is anſwered, (ſaith he) that the heauens might open and giue way to Chriſts bodie, as at the Baptiſme of Chriſt the heauens are ſaid to open, this is to be vnderſtood, becauſe the heauens appeared to open: for the holy Ghoſt could come downe without the opening of the heauens at the baptizing of Chriſt. And whereas Stephen ſaith, he ſaw the heauens open, Act.7.56. the heauens themſelues were not deuided, for they being a cleere and tranſparent ſubſtance, S. Stephen might haue ſeene Chriſt, without their opening, but Stephens eies were opened to ſee that, which appeared not before: cap.6. loc.5.

Contra. Firſt, whereas your Latine text readeth, Heb.4.14. Penetrauit, hee pierced the heauens, the originall is διεληλυθότα, he deuided or diſſolued the heauens; and the Rhemiſts tranſlate, he entred the heauens: ſo that this place proueth, not a going thorough the heauens, without a way made, or giuing of place. Secondly, the heauens are indeed a ſolide ſubſtance; ſo is the water, and the bodie of the ayre, which are apt to giue place to groſſer bodies, and to come together againe: and ſo doe the heauens: for how els could the Planets haue their diuers and contrary courſes, diuers among themſelues, and contrary to the fixed ſtarres, if the heauens were not a pliable, and yeelding bodie? And let him tell vs, how Eliah was taken vp into heauen in his bodie (as they thinke, affirming, that hee liueth ſtill in his body in Paradiſe) whether hee alſo pierced the ſubſtance of the heauens? Thirdly, the heauens are likened to glaſſe, not in ſubſtance, but for their brightneſſe and cleereneſſe, as Reuelat.4.6. we read of a Sea of glaſſe. Reuel.4.6. Fourthly, the holy Ghoſt being a ſpirit, can deſcend without any way made, but ſeeing at that time the ſpirit deſcended in the viſible and true ſhape of a doue, the heauens alſo viſibly and truely were opened: And wee are rather to credit Stephens words, then his vaine conceits, who ſaith, That not his eyes (though wee denie not, but his ſight alſo was quickned) but the heauens were opened: and if Chriſt might be ſeene through the cleereneſſe of the heauens, how is it, that he hath been ſo ſeldome ſeene, and of ſo few, ſince his aſcenſion, the heauens being alike cleare vnto all? Laſtly, that the heauens opened at Chriſts aſcenſion, it is euident by that propheſie, Pſalm.24.7. Lift vp your heads, yee gates, and bee yee lift vp yee euerlaſting doores, and the King of glorie ſhall come in, Pſalm.24.7. which the Fathers applie vnto Chriſts aſcenſion, and when as the Saints ſhall meete Chriſt in the cloudes, and be taken vp in the ayre, as S. Paul ſaith, 1.Theſſ.4.17. 1.Theſſ.4.17. it cannot be otherwiſe deemed, but that the cloudes and the ayre ſhall make way for their bodies, and after the ſame manner the heauens alſo, like as they did at the aſcenſion of Chriſt: Thus Bellarmine hath ſaid much but proued nothing.

The Proteſtants.

Whether Chriſts bodie either is or may be in many places at once.

OVr aduerſaries doe falſely charge vs to ſay, that God can doe more then he hath done, or will doe, Rhemiſt. Matth.26.ſect.11. This we ſay, that Chriſt is almightie, and yet can doe nothing againſt his owne will, his word, or glorie: as to diſhonour his glorious bodie, and to bring it within the compaſſe of a piece of bread, that it may be deuoured of cats, dogs, rats, myce, or which is worſe, to be eaten of wicked men, the members of the diuel: although the queſtion be not ſo much betweene vs, what Chriſt is able to doe of his abſolute power, but what he will doe according to his word.

*Argum.*1. It ſtandeth neither with the power or will of God, to doe contrarie to his word: For it is impoſſible that God ſhould lie, Hebr.6.verſ.18. Hebr.6.18. And this thing, not to lie, is not a want of power, but a ſigne of greater power in God. But it is plainly declared in Scripture, that Chriſt hath a true naturall bodie, and is in all things like vnto vs, Hebr.2.17. Hebr.2.17. Therefore neither can his bodie, being a true humane bodie, as ours are, be in many places at once: neither can it chuſe but occupie that roome and place where it is. The Angell ſaid, Hee is riſen, hee is not heere, Matth.28.6. Matth.28.6. but it had been no good argument, to ſay, he is riſen and gone to another place, and therefore he is not heere, if ſo be the bodie of Chriſt might be in many places at once. The Scripture then hath defined it, that Chriſts bodie is in one certaine place: wherefore to ſay, that Chriſt hath a true naturall bodie, and yet retaineth not the naturall properties of a bodie, is to ſpeake contradictories, that he hath, and hath not a true naturall bodie: and this were to make God a lier.

Bellarmine to the place of Scripture, Matth.28. thus anſwereth: The Angell reaſoneth according to the minde of the women, that ſought Chriſt in the graue, as dead: and ſo the argument followeth well, he is not dead in the graue, for he is riſen. Secondly, morally the argument is good, becauſe he that riſeth from the dead, doth not remaine in the graue; for the graue is the place of the dead, not of the liuing: but ſimply and abſolutely it doth not follow; for Chriſt might be there, though he were riſen, *Bellar. cap.4. reſp. ad argum.*1.

Contra. Firſt, the Angels reaſon muſt indeede be referred to the purpoſe and diſpoſition of the women who came to ſeeke Chriſt: they enquired not, in what ſtate Chriſt was, whether liuing, or dead, but where Chriſt was, as the Angel ſaith, verſ.5. I know that yee ſeeke Ieſus: and therefore the Angell ſatisfieth them, according to their doubt, that he was not there, becauſe he was riſen: he ſaith not, he is not dead, becauſe he is riſen, though that be a good conſequent alſo, but, he is not heere. And that this was Maries thought, to know what was become of Chriſts bodie, it appeareth by this, that after the Angell had ſaid thus vnto her, as Matthew reporteth, ſhe asked Chriſt againe (ſuppoſing he had been the gardener) where he had laid him, Iohn 20.15. Iohn.20.15. Secondly, the Angell vſeth two arguments: the one, when he ſaith, why ſeeke yee the liuing among the dead? as S. Luke remembreth, chap.24.5. Luk.24.5. This argument concludeth morally, as Bellarmine pretendeth, he is liuing, therefore not among the dead. The other argument in theſe words, hee is not heere, for he is riſen, concludeth ſimply and abſolutely: and the reaſon ſtandeth thus, Hee that is riſen, and ſo gone to another place, is no longer there, where hee was: but Chriſt is ſo riſen: Ergo. Bellarmine moſt impudently denieth the propoſition, ſaying, that Chriſt might be elſewhere, and there too, and ſo maketh the Angell a lier.

*Argum.*2. It is properly and onely to the diuine nature to be euery where, as Ierem.23.24. I fill heauen and earth, ſaith the Lord: Ierem.23.24. but Chriſts bodie is not of the diuine nature: Ergo, it cannot be euery where.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that there is great difference betweene the Godhead and the body of Chriſt:

first, the Godhead is euery where in fact, but Christs bodie is not euery where, neither euer shall; it is in many places at once, not in all. Secondly, the Deitie cannot be restrained to one place, but the bodie of Christ may bee, as after the end of the world he shall be but in one place, lib.3.c.4. ad argum.2.

Contra. First, that Christs bodie is neither actually euery where, neither shall euer be, it is nothing to the question in hand: it is sufficient to our purpose, that Christs bodie may be euery where: for it may as well be in all places, as in many places, and this I thinke they will not denie: Then it will follow, that Christs bodie may be God: for to be euery where is proper onely to the Deitie, and if Christs bodie may be euery where, it may be the Deitie: for no propertie of God the creator, either is in act, or can be communicated to a creature. Secondly, Christs bodie now in their iudgement, as long as the world standeth, cannot be tied or restrained to one place, no more then the Godhead; therefore now (whatsoeuer shall be afterward) there is no difference betweene the bodie of Christ and the Godhead: and it is very absurd, to limit Christs bodie after the resurrection to one place, more then now, seeing his bodie shall not then be of lesse power or glorie, then it is. Thirdly, that Bellarmine maketh no difference betweene the omnipresence of the Godhead, and Christs bodie, his owne words elsewhere doe testifie: Sicut spiritus sanctus verè descendit, & tamen in cœlo mansit, ita Christus &c. As the holie spirit did truly descend, and yet remained in heauen; so Christ did truly ascend, and yet remaineth with vs, not onely as God, but as man, lib.1.de Sacram.Euch.c.14.resp.ad loc.9. So Clemens 5. most grossly expoundeth those words of our Sauiour, I am with you alwaies to the end of the world, of his corporall presence: whereas it is as well peculiar to the Godhead to be alwaies present, and neere, not a farre off, Ierem.23.23 as in all places.

Clement.lib.5. tit.16.c.4.

The Manichees had a certaine fond opinion, Iesum per solem & lunam distentum: that Iesus was extended in his bodily substance euery where euen to the Sunne and Moone, which fantasticall opinion Augustine condemneth, cont.Faust.lib.20.c.11. Not much different is the conceit of the Romanists, of the presence of Christs bodie in many places at once.

Epistol.57.

And concerning the other point, he writeth thus: Spatia locorum tolle corporibus, & nusquam erunt, & quia nusquam erunt, nec erunt: Take away space of place from bodies, and they shall be no where, and if they be in no place, then are they not at all.

Iohn 16.7.

Argum.3. The reall and carnall presence of Christ in the Sacrament, is a thing superfluous, needlesse, and vnprofitable: First, Christ saith to his Apostles, Iohn 16.7. It is expedient for you, that I goe away: therefore Christs corporall presence is not profitable: and if his visible presence were not profitable to his Apostles, whom they both heard and saw, much lesse his inuisible presence in the Sacrament. Secondly, the fauour of God in the remission of sinnes through Christ, is as well sealed vnto vs in Baptisme, as in the Lords Supper; what neede then the carnall presence in the one more, then in the other? Thirdly, that Christ is in bodie present in the Sacrament, it is not perceiued by any sense: for they neither taste him, see him, nor feele him; it must be then a worke of faith; but by faith Christ is as well apprehended being absent, as being supposed in this manner to be present; Ergo, this kinde of presence is needlesse.

Bellarmine answereth to the first reason; that therefore it was expedient, that Christ should goe away, because his visible presence did worke in his Apostles an humane loue: but the inuisible presence of his flesh in the Eucharist worketh not an humane, but a spirituall loue, and therefore is euery way profitable, cap.9.

Iohn 20.28.

Contra. First, the visible presence of Christ after the resurrection, did not worke an humane or carnall loue in the Apostles, but thereby their faith and beliefe was strengthened: as Thomas by seeing and feeling him beleeued, and said, my Lord and my God, Iohn 20.28. Secondly, though the Apostles were somewhat addicted vnto Christs bodily presence, it was not for any carnall affection vnto him, but for that loue they had to his doctrine, and because of the comfort they receiued by him: but his bodily presence in the Eucharist, is neither profitable for doctrine nor comfort; and therefore lesse fruitfull, than his visible presence was. Thirdly, the reason then of Christs bodily departure, was to send another comforter, who needed not to come, as long as he was present personally to comfort them: and if the first comforter be present still in bodie, the second is superfluous: if the second be not superfluous, the first is, and therefore the bodily presence is not necessarie. Fourthly, Christ promiseth, that after his departure he would come againe, and wee should see him, Iohn 16.16. After a little while, and yee shall see mee: and he would see vs, vers.22. I will see you againe. Christ then as he seeth vs, so is he seene: if he be in the Eucharist, he seeth vs with his bodily eyes, then should he be also seene of vs: but wee see him not, therefore he is not there to be seene: for if hee were present, hee would both see vs, and be seene of vs, according to his promise. Wherefore he doth no otherwise see vs and visite vs, then by his spirit, in the Eucharist; and so doe wee see him.

Iohn 16.16. and verse 22.

Of the difference between Baptisme, and the Eucharist.

To the second he answereth: that there is not the same reason of Baptisme, and the Eucharist: First, the Eucharist is not onely a Sacrament of our spirituall refection and nourishing, as Baptisme is of our regeneration, but it is also a memoriall and a compendium of Christs life, death, and resurrection. Secondly, it is a testimonie and pledge of Christs loue toward vs. Thirdly, it is, as it were the seede of the resurrection of our bodies, by the cōiunction of Christs glorious body with our mortal bodies. Fourthly, it is the sacrifice of Christians, which cannot be offered in bread alone, for then it should not excede the ſacrifices of the Law: for bread of it ſelfe is inferiour to the fleſh of calues and rammes, &c. Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, Baptiſme alſo is a memoriall, and as the Apoſtle calleth it, a ſimilitude, and repreſentation of the death and reſurrection of Chriſt, Rom. 6.5. Secondly, it is alſo as well as the Euchariſt a pledge of Chriſts loue, repreſenting vnto vs the ſhedding of his blood, and his dying for vs, wherein Chriſts loue appeared, Rom. 5.8. Wherefore in neither of theſe reſpects is the reall preſence more neceſſarie in the Euchariſt, than in Baptiſme. Thirdly, it is more proper to Baptiſme to ſeale vnto vs the hope of our reſurrection, as S. Paul ſaith, that by Baptiſme we are graft into the ſimilitude of Chriſts reſurrection, Rom. 6.5. Neither is there any ſuch coniunction of Chriſts bodie to our bodies in the Euchariſt, ſeeing they themſelues affirme, that Chriſts bodie remaineth no longer, then the outward ſhape of bread is vncorrupted: but if it were the ſeed of our reſurrection, it ſhould remaine, as S. Iohn ſaith, 1. Epiſt. chap. 3.9. their ſeede remaineth in them. And againe, the wicked alſo doe eate Chriſts bodie in the Sacrament, ſo that by this reaſon, they alſo are partakers of Chriſts reſurrection. Fourthly, the Euchariſt is no other ſacrifice, than of praiſe and thankſgiuing, Hebr. 13.15. whereof it is named the Euchariſt: and yet the ſacramentall bread, in reſpect of the liuely repreſentation is more excellent, than the fleſhie ſacrifices of the Law: and this being granted, ſheweth no difference betweene Baptiſme and the Euchariſt, but onely betweene the ſacrifices of the Law, and the Sacraments of the Goſpell.

Rom. 6.5.
Rom. 5.8.
Rom. 6.5.
1. Iohn 3.9.
Hebr. 13.15.

To the third reaſon he anſwereth, that although Chriſts bodie in the Euchariſt be not immediatly perceiued by any ſenſe, but onely by faith; yet mediatly, & in aliena ſpecie, and in another ſhape, is touched by the hands, tongue, eyes, &c. as Phiſitions miniſter medicines in ſuch ſort qualified, as they are not perceiued, and yet are very profitable.

Contra. Firſt, if the carnall preſence in the Euchariſt bee an apprehenſion of faith, then it can not any way be diſcerned by the ſight, or any other ſenſe: for faith is the euidence of things which are not ſeene, as it is defined by the Apoſtle, Hebr. 11.1. And, wee walke by faith, and not by ſight, 2. Cor. 5.7. which were no good diſiunction, if the ſame thing at the ſame inſtant could be comprehended both by faith and ſight. Secondly, he ſaith, that Chriſt is both touched and ſeene, in another ſhape, that is, vnder the formes of bread and wine: that is to ſpeake contraries: for if it be another ſhape, that is ſeene to the eyes, another taſte, that is in the mouth; then is it not Chriſts bodie that is ſeene or taſted: but that thing muſt bee both ſeene and taſted, whoſe qualities are offered to the ſenſes. Thirdly, the example brought in is nothing like: firſt, medicines are ſomewhat allaied by other mixtures, yet ſome taſte remaineth; but of Chriſts bodie there is no ſenſe at all. Secondly, Potions, though by arte tempered and compounded, yet appeare to the ſenſe in their owne colour and ſhape; but ſo doth not (as they ſay) Chriſts bodie. Thirdly, the medicine remaineth in the ſtomacke, till by the heate thereof it be diſperſed, and ſo worketh in the bodie; but if it be immediatly caſt vp againe it worketh not: but Chriſts bodie in the firſt alteration in the ſtomacke departeth (as they ſay) and therefore it corporally profiteth not, as a medicinall Potion doth.

Hebr. 11.1.
2. Cor. 5.7.

Argum. 4. It is an inglorious, vnworthie and vnſeemely thing, that the glorious and impaſſible bodie of Chriſt ſhould be incloſed in the formes of bread and wine, deuoured and chawed, eaten and gnawen of myce, ſubiect to mould and rottennes, to be ſpilt vpon the ground, burnt in the fire: for all theſe inconueniences muſt needes follow vpon the carnall preſence.

Bellarm. It is no more inglorious or impoſſible for theſe things now to happen to the bodie of Chriſt, then it was for him to be caried in his mothers wombe, to be ſwathed in ſwadling bands, and to be ſubiect to iniuries which were done to his bodie vpon earth, lib. 3. cap. 10.

Anſ. Firſt, as though there bee the like reaſon of the paſſible bodie of Chriſt, while hee liued in the world, which was buffeted, whipped, pierced with nayles, crucified; and of his glorious and impaſſible bodie now, that it may in like manner be rent and diuided. Secondly, neither was it poſſible that Chriſts paſſible bodie ſhould be ſubiect to the like infirmities, as to rottennes, corruption, conſumption in the fire, as his bodie is now in the Sacrament. If it were then verified in Chriſt, Thou ſhalt not ſuffer thy holy one to ſee corruption: for his bodie did not putrifie or corrupt in the graue: much more is it true in the glorious bodie of Chriſt, that it cannot ſuffer any ſuch things: How then are you not aſhamed to affirme, that the bread and wine are made in the Sacrament, the very bodie and blood of Chriſt; ſeeing thoſe elements, if they be kept long, will waxe ſower and mouldie, and fall to corruption? which things once to thinke of the glorious bodie of Chriſt, were great impietie. Leaue off for ſhame then theſe your groſſe opinions, ſo much derogatorie to the glorie and honour of Chriſt.

Bellarmine anſwereth againe: firſt, that they are the accidents of bread and wine, that are corrupted, and doe putrifie, and are eaten and chawed, &c. and not the bodie of Chriſt. Secondly, as the diuinitie is preſent euery where, and yet is not burned in the flame, nor yet putrifieth in things that doe putrifie: ſo likewiſe the bodie of Chriſt, lib. 3. c. 10. reſponſ. 1.

Contra. Firſt, it is moſt abſurd to ſay, that accidents of wine make men drunke, that accidents of bread doe feede myce, that the accidents waxe ſower, and mouldie: for one accident cannot be the ſubiect of another. Secondly, in comparing Chriſts Deitie and bodie together, what doth he elſe but with the Eutychians confound them, or with the Vbiquitaries deſtroy Chriſts humanitie?

Fox pag.1416.

We haue the glorious teſtimonie of the Martyrs: Maſter Philpot holy Martyr; The Scripture ſaith, that Chriſt is like to vs in all things, ſinne onely excepted: but our humane nature cannot receiue any thing that is contrarie to it ſelfe, as to bee bodily preſent, and abſent, to bee in heauen and earth at the ſame time: Ergo, neither can the bodie of Chriſt without deſtruction of his humane nature.

I will hereunto adioyne ſome teſtimonie from themſelues: Decret.par.3.diſt.2.cap.44. Donec ſeculum finiatur, ſurſum eſt Dominus,&c. Till the world be ended, the Lord is aboue, &c. for the bodie of our Lord, wherein he roſe againe, muſt be in one place. Againe, their Maſter ſaith, Diuinam naturam ſolam illocalem: That the diuine nature only is illocable. But now they make Chriſts humanitie illocable: for if it be in the Euchariſt, it is not there as in a ſpacious place: for what is the compaſſe of a thin wafer-cake to receiue the proportion of a mans bodie? Againe, he ſaith, Quod circumſcriptibile erat,&c. That which was in Chriſt circumſcriptible, ſo remaineth: but if Chriſts bodie bee in the bread, it is incircumſcriptible, whereas it was circumſcriptible before. For that we call circumſcriptible, when the place and the thing placed, doe anſwere, and are correſpondent each to other in ſpace and proportion: which is not ſeene in the placing of Chriſts bodie in the compaſſe of a thin cake.

And further: 1. The Moſcouites, which follow the Greeke Church, though they be otherwiſe ſuperſtitious enough, doe thus profeſſe by the penne of their great Duke Ioannes Baſilius, that the Apoſtles, thoſe diuine Eagles, are there, vbi cadauer illud diuinæ incarnationis cum patre ſedet, where that carcaſe of the diuine incarnation ſitteth with the Father, yet hee is notwithſtanding preſent with beleeuers, &c. They thinke it is not Gods will, that this precious carcaſe and prey of the Eagles ſhould be in any other place, then at the right hand of God in heauen.

2 Tertullian confuting the Monarchian heretikes, that would haue the Father and the Sonne to be all one, becauſe nothing is impoſſible vnto God, thus anſwereth: Indeed nothing is hard or impoſſible vnto God,&c. Non autem, quia omnia poteſt facere, ideo credendum eſt illum feciſſe, quod non fecerit: Yet, becauſe he can doe all things, we muſt not thinke, that he hath made that, which he hath not: ſed an fecerit, requirendum: but we muſt ſee whether he hath done it,&c. And hee giueth this inſtance, God might haue made man with wings and feathers, as he hath made the kite, yet he hath not done it. The like anſwere may ſerue for the Romaniſts obiection, that becauſe Chriſt may make his fleſh to bee preſent in the Euchariſt, it followeth not therefore he doth it.

3 Confeſſion of Wittemberg, chap.9. Wee beleeue that the omnipotencie of God is ſo great, that in the Euchariſt, he may either annihilate the ſubſtance of bread and wine, or elſe change them into the bodie and blood of Chriſt, but that God doth exerciſe this his abſolute omnipotencie in the Euchariſt, wee haue no certaine word of God,&c.

Part.3.diſtinct. 2.cap.86.

4 See the Maſter of ſentences and the Decrees before alleaged: to the which I will adde that place as it ſtandeth in their Decrees cited out of Ambroſe: If thou beleeue that Chriſt receiued fleſh, and thou doeſt offer his bodie to be transfigured in the altar: nec diſtinguas tamen naturam verbi & corporis, & tibi dicitur, ſi recte offeras, non recte autem diuidas, peccaſti: and doeſt not diſtinguiſh betweene the nature of the word and the bodie, it is alſo ſaid vnto thee, if thou offer aright, and diuide not aright, thou ſinneſt,&c. But the Romaniſts in making Chriſts fleſh to be omnipreſent, when they liſt, doe make no difference herein betweene his diuine and humane nature, &c.

THE SECOND QVESTION, CONCERNING Tranſubſtantiation.

The Papiſts.

18.Error.

IF any man ſhall ſay, that there remaineth the ſubſtance of bread and wine in the Sacrament, after the words of conſecration; or ſhall denie that the whole ſubſtance of bread is changed and conuerted into the bodie of Chriſt, and the whole ſubſtance of wine into the blood of Chriſt, the formes and ſhewes only of bread & wine remaining, which ſingular and miraculous conuerſion the Church calleth Tranſubſtantiation; let him be accurſed, Concil. Trident. ſeſſ.13. can.2. Bellarm. lib.3. de Sacram. Euchar. cap.19. Rhemiſt. Matth.17. ſect.1.

*Argum.*1. Chriſt transfigured his bodie marueilouſly in the Mount, as we reade, Matth.17. Ergo, he is able to exhibite his bodie vnder the formes of bread and wine, Rhemiſt.

Anſw. Firſt, your argument followeth not, Chriſt could giue a glorious forme to his paſſible bodie: Ergo, he can take away the eſſentiall properties of his naturall bodie, and yet keepe a true bodie ſtill. Or thus. Chriſt could glorifie his bodie not yet glorified: Ergo, he can or will diſhonour his glorious impaſſible bodie, by encloſing it vnder the formes of baſe creatures to be deuoured of dogs and mice: which is honoured and worſhipped of the Angels and Saints in heauen. Secondly, the queſtion is not ſo much of Chriſts power, as of his will: therefore you conclude not aright, Chriſt is able to doe it: Ergo, he will.

Argum.2. He that ſeeth water turned into wine by the power of Chriſt, neede not to doubt how he changeth bread into his body, Rhem.Ioh.2.ſect.2.

Anſwere. Firſt, when you can bring any warrant out of Scripture for your imagined conuerſion, as we haue for this myracle, wee will giue eare vnto you. Secondly, and when it ſhall appeare to the ſenſes, that the bread is changed into fleſh, as the water was knowne to bee turned into wine, by the colour and taſte: we ſhall then no more doubt of this conuerſion of the bread, than they did of the other of water. Thirdly, if Chriſt could alter and change the ſubſtances of creatures; what reaſon haue you to giue ſuch an omnipotent power to euery Prieſt, with a few words to do as much as Chriſt himſelfe could when he was preſent? Fourthly, all this proueth but an abilitie and power in Chriſt, not a will or purpoſe to worke any ſuch change or conuerſion.

Argum.3. Bellarmine vrgeth theſe words of our Sauiour, which ſerue them for all purpoſes, This is my bodie: Which words (ſaith hee) doe ſignifie a ſubſtantiall, not a figuratiue change onely of the bread into Chriſts bodie: for otherwiſe the bread, and the fleſh of Chriſt being things of diuers natures, cannot be one pronounced, or affirmed of another: for bread is not fleſh, remaining in it owne nature, Bellarm.lib.3.cap.19.

Anſwere. Firſt, as one thing being of a diuers nature, cannot bee pronounced of another, vnleſſe there be ſome change: ſo neither can the ſame thing be affirmed or predicated of it ſelfe, as to ſay, this ſubſtance is my body, which is all one in their ſenſe to ſay, this bodie is my bodie.

Secondly, a figuratiue change is ſufficient according to the phraſe of Scripture, though there be no materiall or ſubſtantiall mutation in this propoſition, this is my bodie, that is, this bread ſignifieth my bodie: like as, when Chriſt breathed vpon his Apoſtles, he ſaid, Receiue yee the holy Ghoſt, calling the very breath the ſpirit, which it ſignified and exhibited onely; ſo the holy Ghoſt deſcending vpon Chriſt in his Baptiſme is called the Doue; ſo then, as the breath of Chriſt is the ſpirit, and the Doue the holy Ghoſt; ſo is the bread Chriſts bodie, that is in figure and ſignification.

Contra. Bellarmine replieth, that the breathing of Chriſt is not called the holy ſpirit, nor yet the Doue is ſaid to bee the holy Ghoſt; but they were onely ſignes and inſtrumentall meanes to conuey the ſpirit.

Anſwere. Firſt, that the breathing of Chriſt, and the likeneſſe of the Doue, were not the ſpirit it ſelfe, but onely ſignes thereof, we grant; and ſo wee ſay the bread is a ſigne and figure of Chriſts bodie in the Euchariſt. Secondly, it is euident by the text, that the Doue, and the breath of Chriſt, are called the holy Ghoſt: as Ioh.1.33. Vpon whom thou ſhalt ſee the ſpirit come downe, &c. that is he, which baptizeth with the holy Ghoſt; but Iohn ſaw onely the Doue to light vpon Chriſt; therefore the Doue is called the ſpirit: ſo Iohn 20.22. Chriſt breathed vpon them, and ſaid, receiue yee the holy Ghoſt: that which the Apoſtles receiued, is called the holy Ghoſt; but they receiued ſenſibly nothing but his breathing; Ergo, his blaſt or breathing is ſaid to be the ſpirit, being a ſigne and repreſentation thereof, as the bread in the Euchariſt is of Chriſts fleſh.

Iohn 1.33.

Iohn 20.22.

Argum.4. Though the ſubſtance of bread and wine be changed; yet the formes remaine ſtill for theſe cauſes. Firſt, becauſe if the formes alſo ſhould be changed, there ſhould be no ſenſible ſigne left, and ſo no Sacrament. Secondly, the faith of the receiuer is the better tried this way: who beleeueth the fleſh of Chriſt to be preſent, though he ſee it not. Thirdly, Chriſt would not haue the formes altered, becauſe man abhorred to eate humane fleſh in the proper ſhape, Bellarm cap.22.

Anſw. Firſt, you firſt reaſon is inſufficient: for neither doe the bare and naked ſignes or accidents of the elements make a Sacrament, but the ſubſtance of them: for betweene the Sacrament and the thing thereby repreſented, there ought to be ſome conuenience and agreement: namely, as the body is nouriſhed by bread and wine, ſo doth the ſoule feede vpon the body and blood of Chriſt. But they are not the accidents of bread and wine that nouriſh vs, but the ſubſtance: Ergo, not the accidents, but the ſubſtance is the viſible ſigne. Likewiſe in Baptiſme, it is not the forme or outward accident of water, that is the ſigne, but the ſubſtance of water that waſheth.

2. It is a more liuely operation of faith, to beleeue in Chriſt abſent in heauen, then preſent in the earth, although he appeare not to the ſenſes. And Chriſt is indeede properly the obiect of faith, as he is now in heauen: Hope (ſaith the Apoſtle) entreth into that which is within the vaile whither our forerunner Ieſus is entred for vs, Heb.6.19. Faith and hope therefore doe leade vs to things within the vaile, that is, things in heauen, and not vpon the earth.

Heb.6.19.

3. What a ſtrange ſaying is this, that Chriſt giueth his fleſh to be eaten in the Sacrament, yet hideth it vnder the formes of bread and wine, leaſt men ſhould abhorre to eate it? for is it to be thought that Chriſt would command any vnſeemely thing, or contrarie to humanitie? How could the Apoſtles command the Gentiles to abſtaine from ſtrangled & blood, Act.15. when as by your doctrine, they did eate daily in their aſſemblies the raw fleſh and blood of Chriſt? And how is it that Chriſt now forgetteth his owne rule, Hee that doth the truth (ſaith hee) commeth to the light, that his deedes may bee made manifeſt? Iohn 3.21. But Chriſt now flieth the light, and ſhroudeth himſelfe vnder the ſhape of bread and wine, and will not ſhew his fleſh. Theſe therefore are but ſilly cauſes which you haue rendred, why Chriſt would haue the ſubſtance of bread onely changed, and not the accidents.

Iohn 3.21.

The Proteſtants.

AS the name of tranſubſtantiation is ſtrange, and newly deuiſed; ſo is the meaning thereof moſt vnreaſonable: that in the Sacrament, the ſubſtance of bread ſhould be conuerted into the bodie of Chriſt, the formes onely remaining: An opinion contrarie to Scripture, reaſon and common ſenſe.

Ioh.6.35. *Argum.*1. As Chriſt ſaid, Matth.26. (poynting to the bread) This is my bodie: ſo he ſaith, Ioh.6.35. * I am the bread of life: but in this place he was not changed into bread: why then in the other place ſhould the bread be turned into his bodie? for the ſpeech is all one.

* Whereas in the other edition, this place was cited thus, I am the bread: the other words are rehearſed alſo to ſtop the cauillers mouth, which being put to, do giue no aduantage to the aduerſarie: See further Retect. pag.235.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that there is great difference betweene theſe two ſpeeches, This bread is my bodie, and, I am the true bread: for there Chriſt ſpeaketh of materiall bread, in the iudgement of our aduerſaries, but in the other ſentence hee vnderſtandeth celeſtiall bread: and therefore Chriſt ſaith not ſimply, I am bread, but I am the bread of life, or the bread of God, or ſuch like: and this ſpirituall bread Chriſt was indeed; there needed no conuerſion or change for the matter. Bellarm.cap.24.reſp. ad arg.1.

Contra. Firſt, if Chriſt, in ſaying, I am the bread, doe vnderſtand bread ſpiritually, which we denie not, what reaſon hath he, where Chriſt ſaith, verſ.51. The bread, that I will giue, is my fleſh, to inferre Sacramentall bread? if Chriſt, in ſaying, I, that is, my fleſh is the bread, doe meane ſpirituall bread, when he ſaith, The bread is my fleſh, why is he not alſo ſpiritually to be taken? Secondly, as Chriſt ſaith ſpiritually, he is the bread; ſo wee alſo ſay, that the bread ſpiritually is his bodie: therefore as in that ſpeech, there needeth no change, as he confeſſeth; ſo neither in the other are wee forced to admit any alteration or change of ſubſtance. Thirdly, Chriſt ſaith not, I am the bread, ſimply, but with ſome addition, ſaith Bellarmine: but he ſaith, I am the doore of the ſheepe, Ioh.10.7. without any other adiection, yet was he not conuerted into the doore: no more is the bread changed into his bodie.

*Argum.*2. The ſenſe is not deceiued in his proper obiect: but the eye in the Euchariſt ſeeth nothing but bread, the taſte diſcerneth nothing but bread: Ergo, there is bread: for if the ſight and feeling might be deceiued; then by the ſame reaſon, the Manichees and Marcionites, who affirmed Chriſt to haue a phantaſticall bodie, might anſwere vs, that though his bodie were both ſeene and felt, yet the ſenſes might be deceiued: And by the ſame reaſon Thomas might haue doubted ſtill, notwithſtanding his ſeeing and feeling of Chriſt: And further, if there bee no bread or wine remaining, and yet the accidents of both, as the colour, taſte; then ſhould they be lying ſignes, and ſo they will charge the Sacrament of truth with falſehood.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that the ſenſe cannot be deceiued in the accidents which are the true obiect, but in the ſubſtance it may, which is the obiect per accidens; as he telleth vs a tale of a peece of wood conuerted into a ſtone, that had the colour and ſhape of wood ſtill: *reſp. ad argum.*5.

*Contra.*1. Though the accidents, not the ſubſtance are obiect to the ſenſe, yet by the accidents the ſubſtance is certainly diſcerned by a neceſſarie conſequence of nature; for otherwiſe there ſhould be no certaintie at all in the ſenſe: but ſeeing euery ſubſtance hath his proper accidents, by the diſcerning of the accidents, the ſubſtance alſo is perceiued. 2. It is poſſible for the eye ſometime to be deceiued, as in taking things artificially carued and painted for the very things themſelues, and as in the example of the wood turned into a ſtone: but for all the ſenſes to be deceiued together, the eye, the feeling, the taſte, it is not poſſible, as it muſt be in the Euchariſt, where all the ſenſes diſcerne bread, and yet (they ſay) there is no bread.

Secondly, ſaith he, the argument from the ſight and feeling to proue Chriſts true bodie, was good, becauſe the ſoliditie of a bodie is the proper obiect of the feeling; but the ſubſtance of the bread and wine is not the proper obiect. Secondly, the Scripture maketh mention, that Chriſt had a true naturall bodie, and therefore the ſight and feeling thereof grounded vpon the teſtimonie of Scripture, were good and ſufficient proofes: Bellarm.ibid.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtles by their handling and ſeeing did not onely diſcerne Chriſt to haue a ſolide bodie, but a bodie of bones and fleſh: for that he ſaith, Handle me and ſee, for a ſpirit hath not
Luke 24.39. fleſh and bones, as you ſee me to haue, Luk.24.39. So then not the ſoliditie onely, but the ſubſtance of Chriſts body, as his bones and fleſh, was by their ſenſe diſcerned; but in the Euchariſt wee diſcerne neither fleſh nor bones. Secondly, Chriſt would not haue them to beleeue his word onely, that hee had a true bodie, but to truſt their owne ſenſe alſo: ſo that the euidence of ſenſe, where there is no diuine teſtimonie, is a ſufficient proofe of things ſenſible. And againe, as the Scripture teſtifieth that Chriſt had a true naturall bodie; ſo alſo it witneſſeth, that after conſecration in the Euchariſt, there
1.Cor.11.26. 27. remaineth true bread, as S. Paul calleth it bread being now conſecrated thrice together: 1.Cor.11. verſ.26,27,28.

Thirdly, ſaith hee, the accidents of bread and wine, though the ſubſtance be gone, are no lying ſignes; for naturally they doe ſhew bread and wine; but that in the Euchariſt there is a worke aboue nature, that there ſhould be the accidents of bread and wine without their ſubſtance.

*Contra.*1. Yet for all this they are deceiueable ſignes, containing one thing, and ſhewing another; and the matter is not helped, but made the worſe, in laying the blame not vpon nature, but vpon a worke beyond nature, which they make a cloake for deceite. Secondly, thus wee ſee they cannot vpholde their fooliſh fanſies, but by deſtroying nature. Thirdly, for this their ſupernaturall worke, ſeeing they haue no Scripture, their words are but winde, and perſwade not: nay the Scripture is againſt them, for Chriſt is ſo farre from deſtroying nature, that he vpholdeth the nature of things by his word, Heb. 1. 3.

Hebr. 1. 3.

Argum. 3. The bread in the Euchariſt after the conſecration, is ſubiect to diuers changes and alterations, and ſo likewiſe the wine: for they may bee boyled and made hot, they may bee infected with poyſon: for it is certaine that Victor the 3. Pope, and Henry the 7. Emperour, were poyſoned with the Sacrament: the wine may wax ſowre and turne to vineger: the bread may putrifie and breed wormes: Ergo, the ſubſtance of bread and wine remaine ſtill: for the accidents cannot be ſubiect to ſuch alterations: and to ſay that Chriſts bodie may be thus handled, it were great impietie, Argum. Pet. Martyris.

Bellarmine anſwereth: Materia ſubſtituitur à Deo in ipſo inſtanti, in quo deſinunt eſſe illæ ſpecies: God ſupplieth ſome other matter in the very inſtant, when the formes begin to be changed, cap. 24. argum. 6.

Anſw. Is not heere good geare, thinke you, that if a man ſhould come to poyſon the Sacrament, that is, the bread and wine which are alreadie conſecrate, and made the body of Chriſt, God ſhould ſupplie by a miracle ſome other matter for him to worke vpon, and ſo God himſelfe ſhould be acceſſarie vnto that wicked act? Or if a ſillie mouſe ſhould bee ſo bold as gnaw vpon a conſecrate Hoaſt, that then likewiſe ſome other matter and ſubſtance ſhould for that inſtant be appointed: and ſo God ſhould make miracles for mice? And why, I pray you, may not the ſubſtance of bread ſtill remaine, as well as another ſubſtance to be put in the ſtead thereof?

Bellarmine anſwereth againe, that there is ſome matter for that inſtant ſupplied, and without a miracle, exigente ordine rerum: the order or courſe of things ſo requiring, like as the ſoule is ſent into the body of ordinary courſe. And concerning the poiſoning of the Hoaſt, he ſaith there may be ſome poyſoned matter mingled with the bread or wine, but that is not conuerted into Chriſts body and blood: for nothing can be turned into Chriſts body or blood, but the bread and wine only.

Contra. Firſt, that the bread ſhould be changed into Chriſts bodie, and againe another ſubſtance come in ſtead of Chriſts bodie, and yet without a miracle, is very ſtrange: for he may as well ſay, that the turning of water into wine, Ioh. 2. was no miracle: neither becauſe it is vſuall in the Euchariſt, it is therefore no miracle; as the raining of Manna was no leſſe miraculous, falling euery day, then if it had come but once: And the example of the comming of the ſoule is nothing like, for we haue Gods warrant for that, creſcite, & multiplicamini, increaſe and multiplie, which they haue not for the Euchariſt. Let it alſo be remembred how contrarie he is to himſelfe, for before, reſp. ad argum. 5. hee ſaid that tranſubſtantiation was ſupra ordinem naturæ, aboue the order of nature: here he ſaith it commeth to paſſe, exigente ordine rerum, according to the order of nature.

Secondly, if nothing be tranſubſtantiate into the bodie and blood of Chriſt, but onely bread and wine; what then is become of the water which in the chalice you doe vſe to mingle with wine? which Innocent 3. determineth together with the wine to be tranſubſtantiate into Chriſts blood, decret. Greg. lib. 3. tit. 41. c. 6. Againe you ſay, the poyſoned ſubſtance is not turned into Chriſts bodie, but mixed together with it. Be it ſo, but what a diſhonour is this to Chriſts bodie, that poyſon may be receiued with it, and that it ſhould not haue ſo much vertue, as many medicinall confections and receits, which are taken againſt poyſon: if Paul could ſhake the Viper from his hand without hurt, is there leſſe vertue in Chriſts bodie? or if Vnicornes horne allaieth the malice of poyſon, is Chriſts fleſh leſſe precious or vigorous? Wherefore lay your hand vpon your mouth, and confeſſe your erronious ignorance, if you can finde no better anſwere.

Argum. 4. When Chriſt ſpake theſe words, Hoc eſt corpus meum, the bread was tranſubſtantiate, before, or after, or while the words were ſpoken. Before, they will not ſay, for the elements were not then conſecrate: nor after, for then Chriſts words, This is my bodie, had not been true in that inſtant when they were ſpoken. Neither was the tranſubſtantiation wrought in the while of ſpeaking: for then ſhould it not haue bin done all at once, but ſucceſſiuely, and one part after another, as the words were ſpoken one after another. But this is alſo contrary to the opinion of the Papiſts, that would haue it done altogether.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the conuerſion of the bread is not made till all the words be pronounced: and though there bee no change, till the whole ſentence (this is my bodie) be finiſhed, yet it is done by vertue of all the words pronounced before.

Contra. If the tranſubſtantiation be wrought by all the words, then, non fit ſimul, it is not done all at once, as hee confeſſeth: for the words are not ſpoken all at once, but one after another. Then I aske, if all the words of conſecration be not of like operation: if they be, why ſhould not the firſt words at the very ſpeaking, be working, as the laſt is? but ſo are they not: for he ſuſpendeth the force of the firſt words, till the laſt ſillable be pronounced: if all the words then be of like working, then is not the conuerſion wrought at one inſtant, as they generally hold, but in the leiſure of ſpeaking.

Argum. 5. It is againſt the nature and propertie of accidents and externall formes to be without a ſubiect, or ſubſtance, wherein they ſhould reſt: ſuch are the whitenes and roundnes of the bread, the rednes and ſweetnes of wine: if bread be gone, what is become of the roundnes and whitenes, and ſo of the wine? If a man aske what round or white thing is this, or what red and ſweete thing is this, ſhewing the cup: what ſhall be anſwered? we cannot ſay, it is bread or wine: for there is none left. And I am ſure they will not ſay, that the bodie of Chriſt is either round or white, or ſuch like: and yet ſomewhat there muſt needs be, that muſt take denomination of theſe accidents.

Bellarmine anſwereth, firſt, that although wee cannot ſeparate accidents from their ſubiects, yet God can: and in the beginning of the creation, there was an accident without a ſubiect, namely the light, which was made the firſt day, that moued without a ſubiect, vntill the Sunne was made, wherein the light reſted.

Contra. Firſt, we doe not diſpute of Gods power, neither how things are in Gods ſight, but how they appeare vnto vs, whether accidents may be offered vnto our ſight, without their ſubiect. Secondly, it is a fond opinion, which he would father vpon Baſile, that the light was without a ſubiect: Firſt, God is ſaid to haue made or created the light; but creation is of ſubſtances, not of accidents. Secondly, God ſaw that it was good: the light pleaſed God, which he had made: but God delighteth in no imperfect worke, as an accident without a ſubiect is imperfect. Thirdly, S. Ambroſe thinketh, that this light was not afterward incorporated to the Sunne, but remained ſtill a diſtinct light: Aliud eſt lumen diei, aliud lumen Solis, &c. The light of the Sunne is one, the light of the day another: for there is a light, before the Sunne riſe, and likewiſe after hee is ſet: Hexamer. lib. 4. c. 3. Fourthly, notwithſtanding, if in the beginning of the creation it had been ſo, yet now all things being diſpoſed and ſetled in a perfect order, it is not to be expected: if accidents then might bee without a ſubiect, before things were brought to a perfect ſtate, it followeth not, that it is or can be ſo now.

Secondly, ſaith he, the accidents of the bread and wine, though they haue no ſubſiſtence of themſelues, after the ſubſtance of bread and wine are gone; yet they are in, and do depend of an other ſubſtance, Vt in conſeruante, non vt in ſubiecto: As in and of a preſeruer of them, not as in a ſubiect, argum. 7. reſp. ad 4.

Contra. Firſt, if the accidents, as the rednes, whitenes, roundnes do not conſiſt of themſelues, then they muſt haue their being in another ſubſtance, which is the body of Chriſt, that commeth in the ſtead of bread and wine: if they then haue their being in Chriſts body, what are they elſe but accidents to his body, which were a very inglorious thing to Chriſts bodie, which in brightneſſe exceedeth the Sunne, to be ouer-ſhadowed with the accidents of bread and wine? Secondly, I demaund, whether Chriſts bodie ſuppoſed to be preſent, haue not the proper accidents of his body: if it haue (for otherwiſe a body without the proper adiuncts ſhould be vnperfect) then the accidents of bread and wine cannot be there to; for this were to make accidents the ſubiect of accidents, which were improper and vnnaturall: And againe, they beſtow a goodly office vpon Chriſt, who vpholdeth all things, euen the heauens and earth, to be now a preſeruer onely of accidents.

Thirdly, though the ſubſtance of bread and wine remaine not, yet the quantitie remaineth, which taketh denomination of the accidents: as the hoaſt is ſaid to bee white, round, little in reſpect of the quantitie, reſponſ. ad argum. 6.

Contra. Firſt, the quantitie of a thing is the length, breadth, thickneſſe, which are adiuncts to the ſubſtance, as well as other qualities of whiteneſſe, redneſſe, &c. So then he defendeth one abſurdie by another, to maintaine the being of qualities without their ſubiect, he doth inculcate a quantitie without a ſubſtance, a thing as impoſſible as the other. Secondly, if the quantitie receiue the denomination, you muſt not ſay, the hoaſt is white, round, &c. but the quantitie, as the breadth, length, thicknes, is white, round, &c. So that, when we aske, what round, or what white? in his opinion the anſwere muſt be this: a round, or white thickneſſe or breadth, &c. which were very abſurd: theſe fooliſh toyes and trifling trickes are not worth the while, that is ſpent about them.

Argum. 6. You ſay, The very fleſh of Chriſt that did hang vpon the croſſe, is in the Sacrament: but that cannot be: for that fleſh Chriſt tooke of the Virgin Marie: this ſacramentall fleſh is made of bread: Ergo, it is not the ſame fleſh which was crucified vpon the Croſſe.

Bellarm. The body of Chriſt is made of bread, but not as any matter or materiall cauſe thereof, but as the wine was made of water by our Sauiour Chriſt.

Anſw. And I pray you, how was the wine made of the water? was not the water the very matter which was turned into wine? for one of theſe three changes and mutations it muſt needs haue: firſt, either the water was annihilate and turned to nothing, and ſo the wine was created of nothing, which I am ſure you will not grant. Secondly, or elſe there was a mixture of wine and water, the one being mingled with the other; which is likewiſe falſe, for it was very good and perfect wine; neither, I thinke, will you eaſily admit, that the body of Chriſt and the bread are mingled together in the Sacrament. Thirdly, there remaineth but the third kind of change, that is, the conuerſion of one ſubſtance into another, as the water was changed into wine: and ſo is the ſubſtance of bread conuerted into the ſubſtance of Chriſts body, if you will haue any change at all: and thus Chriſt hath gotten by your helpe a breaden bodie; another from that, which he tooke of the fleſh of the Virgin.

And thus may our argument be framed: The body, which Chriſt tooke of the Virgine, and which was nailed to the Croſſe, was not made of bread: but this bodie, which is ſuppoſed to be in the Euchariſt, is made of bread: Ergo, it is not that bodie.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that euen the bodie of Chriſt, which was crucified, was made of bread: and the bread was changed and conuerted into it at his laſt Supper, when he ſaid, This is my bodie: and though there be a conuerſion of the bread, yet there is no production of Chriſts bodie out of the bread, but as the wine was made of water, Ioh.2. ſo is Chriſts bodie of bread. Bellarmin.reſp.ad argum.9.

Contra. Firſt, the bodie of Chriſt which was crucified, was made of the fleſh of the Virgin: the bodie in the Euchariſt is made of bread; and therefore they cannot be all one bodie: for it is one thing to be made of fleſh; another thing of bread. Secondly, where he maketh a difference betweene production, and conuerſion, he vnderſtandeth not himſelfe: for the wine was produced out of the water, and the water was conuerted into the wine; ſo it was both a production and a conuerſion: the difference is this, that conuerſion is of the thing, which is conuerted; production, of that, whereinto it is conuerted: wherefore if Chriſts bodie bee made of bread, as Chriſt made wine of water; the bread ſhall be the matter of Chriſts fleſh, as the water was of the wine: for it is ſaid, verſ.9. that the Gouernour of the feaſt taſted the water which was made wine: Ergo, the ſubſtance of the water remained, though changed and conuerted. Thirdly, they muſt grant, that the bread is either annihilated, that is, turned to nothing; or elſe conuerted into the ſubſtance of Chriſts fleſh: but the firſt is inſtantly denied by Bellarm.reſponſ.ad argum.3. The bread, he ſaith, doth not vaniſh to nothing, and ſo vtterly periſh: therefore it cannot bee auoided, but that it paſſeth and is incorporate to the fleſh of Chriſt; and ſo, for all his ſophiſticall pratling, Chriſt is become to haue a breaden bodie.

Let vs now further examine their owne decrees, Decret.par.3.diſt.2.c.36. Veniſtis ad aquam, & panis dominicus facti eſtis: Ye came to the water, and were made the Lords bread, &c. The Lords bread is then receiued ſpiritually in Baptiſme, and yet there is no tranſubſtantiation in Baptiſme: and cap.62. Commendauit nobis, &c. He commended to vs in this Sacrament his bodie and blood; quod fecit nos ipſos; which bodie he maketh vs, for wee are his bodie: wee are that bodie of Chriſt, which is commended in the Euchariſt, but wee are not tranſubſtantiate into Chriſts bodie: Ergo, there is no tranſubſtantiation. Againe, cap.63. Hunc cibum & potum ſocietatem intelligi vult corporis, &c. This bread and drinke is the ſocietie of his bodie which is the Church: the bread then ſignifieth as the naturall bodie of Chriſt, ſo alſo his myſticall bodie; but it is not tranſubſtantiate into his myſticall bodie: Ergo.

Some alſo of the Papiſts themſelues haue denied tranſubſtantiation, as the Maſter of ſentences maketh mention of ſome in his daies, that affirmed the ſubſtance of bread and wine to remaine, lib.4.diſt.11.d. and Innocentius 3. reporteth the opinion of ſome, That the water in the chalice tempered with the wine, was not tranſubſtantiate, Decret.Greg.lib.3.tit.41.c.6. and Durandus thinketh the matter of the bread and wine to remaine ſtill, in 4.diſt.11.qu.3.

Let vs ſee the conſent of antiquitie: Concil.Conſtantin.7.ex Nicen.2.action.6.tom.3. Vt caro Domini per ſpiritum ſanctum deuinitati eſt vnita, ita panem Euchariſtiæ imaginem carnis per ſpiritus ſancti aggreſſionem ſanctificatam diuinum ſuum corpus eſſe voluit: As the fleſh of our Lord was vnited by the ſpirit to his diuine nature, ſo the bread of the Euchariſt, the image of his fleſh being ſanctified by the comming of the holie Ghoſt, is become his diuine bodie, &c. Hence we reaſon thus, as Chriſt is God and man, ſo the Euchariſt is his bodie, and bread: but his manhood is not conuerted into his diuine nature: Ergo, the bread is not turned into his bodie.

This was the aſſertion of Iohn Huſſe, for the which he was martyred: Concil.Conſtant.ſeſſ.15. Sicut Chriſtus eſt ſimul Deus & homo, ſic hoſtia conſecrata eſt corpus Chriſti in figura & verus panis in natura: As Chriſt is both God and man, ſo the conſecrate hoaſt is the body of Chriſt in figure, and true bread in nature.

B.Ridley holy Martyr thus reaſoned againſt tranſubſtantiation: As the bread of the Lords table is Chriſts naturall bodie, ſo is it his myſticall bodie: but it is not Chriſts myſticall bodie by tranſubſtantiation: Ergo.

Againe, the words of Chriſt ſpoken vpon the cup, and vpon the bread, haue like effect and working: but the words ſpoken vpon the cup haue no vertue to tranſubſtantiate, for then they ſhould tranſubſtantiate the cup, or that which is within the cup, into the new Teſtament: for Chriſt ſaid as well, This cup is the new Teſtament in my blood, as he did, This is my bodie: But this is not done: Ergo, not the other, vid.plur.p.1444. Pag.1313.1.20

Laſtly, the diuerſitie of opinions, which this groſſe conceit of the carnall preſence of Chriſt hath hatched, doe eaſily ſhew and demonſtrate vnto vs, what we are to thinke of this popiſh doctrine.

Some doe hold, that the elements doe ſtill remaine in their owne nature in the Sacrament, and that together with them the bodie of Chriſt is carnally preſent. Others doe teach, that there remaineth no more bread and wine, but only the very naturall bodie of Chriſt: of each opinion there are three ſorts: Firſt of them that hold the elements not to be changed.

1 Some are of opinion, that the bodie of Chriſt and the elements are locally ioyned together, either for that inſtant only, or elſe becauſe of the vbiquitie and omnipreſence of Chriſts humanitie: of which opinion are the Lutheranes.

2. Some there were, that thought only ſo much of the bread to be changed into the body of Chriſt, as was receiued of the faithfull: and that part which the wicked receiued to be bread ſtill.

3. Others taught, that the bread was aſſumed in the Sacrament to the perſon of Chriſt, euen as his humanitie: ſo that Chriſt was bread by conſecration, as he was man by his incarnation: an horrible and monſtrous opinion, which is fathered vpon Rupertus the Abbot.

Iohannes Pariſienſis alſo came neere this opinion, who likewiſe affirmed, that the bread was aſſumed to the perſon of Chriſt, and vnited vnto him, yet not immediately as the other taught, but by the mediation and meanes of the humanitie of Chriſt.

Secondly, of thoſe that maintaine the conuerſion of the elements. Firſt, ſome would haue the forme onely of bread changed, not the matter, as Durandus. Secondly, ſome contrariwiſe would haue the matter altered, and the forme to remaine. Thirdly, the Ieſuites affirme the bread wholy in ſubſtance, both in matter and forme to be changed, the outward formes and accidents onely remayning, ex Bellarm. lib. 3. de ſacram. Euchariſt. cap. 11.

Rom. 1. 21. 22.

Thus men, when they begin once to leaue the truth, the Lord leaueth them to themſelues, and they runne mad in their owne inuentions, not finding any end: and ſo it is iuſtly come vpon them, as Saint Paul ſaith of the heathen: Becauſe when they knew God, they did not glorifie him as God, neither were thankefull: they became vaine in their owne imaginations, and their fooliſh heart was full of darkneſſe: when they profeſſed themſelues to be wiſe, they became fooles. We therefore leauing theſe ſhallow pits of humane inuentions, which will hold no water, will betake vs to the fountaine of truth. This then, to conclude, is our definitiue ſentence, and full determination, according to the Scriptures, that Chriſt indeed is verily preſent in the Sacrament, neither by conuerſion of the bread into his bodie, either wholly, or in part; nor by aſſumption of the bread to the vnitie of his perſon; nor yet by the coniunction of his bodie and bread together: but he doth verily exhibite himſelfe, with all his benefits, ſpiritually by faith, to be eaten and drunke of the worthie receiuer, as wee haue ſufficiently proued before out of the Scriptures.

Dialog. lib. 2. cap. 24.

Now yet for further euidence: 1. Theodoret of the Greeke Church denieth directly the bread and wine to be tranſubſtantiate: Neq; enim ſigna myſtica recedunt à natura ſua, manent enim in priore ſubſtantia, figura & forma, & videri & tangi poſſunt: For the myſticall ſignes doe not depart from their nature, but remaine in their former ſubſtance, figure and forme. Cyrillus ſaith, Chriſtus credentibus diſcipulis fragmenta panis dedit, &c. Chriſt gaue fragments of bread vnto his diſciples, ſaying, Take, eate, this is my bodie, &c. He calleth it bread, after it was conſecrated: for before it was diſtributed, Bellarmine confeſſeth it was conſecrated: Error 19. argum. 1.

Lib. aduerſ. Iudæos.

2. Tertullian ſaith, Panem corpus ſuum appellans: He calleth his bread his bodie, &c. It is bread ſtill, though called the bodie of Chriſt: And that argument, which he vrgeth againſt Marcion, taken from the certaintie of the ſenſe, to proue the truenes of Chriſts bodie, hath place here to proue the truenes of bread in the Euchariſt: Fidelis fuit viſus, &c, fidelis et guſtus vini, &c, fidelis et tactus, &c. falſa vtiq; teſtatio, ſi oculorum & aurium & manuum ſenſus natura mentitur: The ſight is faithfull, the taſting of wine faithfull, the touching of Thomas faithfull &c. it is a falſe witneſſing, if the nature of the ſenſe of the eyes, eares and hands doe deceiue, &c. So in the Euchariſt, wee ſee bread, taſte bread, feele bread, therefore it is bread.

What the opinion of the preſent Greeke and Æthiopike Church is, hath been ſhewed before in the queſtion of the reall preſence: the Æthiopians in their Liturgie pray, that God would change the bread and wine, as he changed the water into wine in Cana: which was a change of the forme onely and qualities, not of the matter: but the Romaniſts hold a very change of the matter of the bread.

In 4. diſtinct. qu. 3.

Durandus thinketh, that the forme of the bread onely is changed, the matter remaining ſtill, being formed by the ſoule of Chriſt, &c. as Bellarmine reporteth his opinion, and reiecteth it: Bellarm. lib. 3. cap. 12.

Index expurgat. Belgic. p. 7

Bertram, who liued about 700. yeere ſince, called in queſtion the popiſh manner of the reall preſence in the Euchariſt, and writ a booke of that argument: whom King Philips purgers haue made to write with another penne, and to ſpeake otherwiſe then hee thought: for whereas he writeth thus, Secundum creaturarum ſubſtantiam, &c. According to the ſubſtance of the creatures, that which they were before conſecration, they are after: they ſet this gloſſe vpon it, it muſt be explained, ſecundum externas ſpecies, according to the outward ſhewes.

In 4. ſentent. qu. 6. lit. f.

Their Cardinall Aliaco ſaith: Non ſequitur euidenter ex ſcripturis, that it followeth not euidently out of ſcripture, whether the ſubſtance of bread remaine.

Scotus, as Bellarmine confeſſeth, ſaith, that there is no place of Scripture extant, which without the declaration of the Church, euidenter cogat tranſubſtantiationem admittere, may euidently force one to admit tranſubſtantiation. Lib.3.de Euchariſt.c.23.

Suarez the Ieſuite confeſſeth as much of Cardinall Caietane: that theſe words, This is my body, doe not ſufficiently of themſelues confirme tranſubſtantiation without the ſuppoſed authoritie of the Church. Tom.3.diſp.46 ſect.3.

And now to conclude this point: whereas in a bodie foure things are to be conſidered, the matter thereof, and the externall accidents, the forme, and the internall vertue and properties proceeding from the ſame: ſo accordingly there are diuers opinions as touching the preſence of Chriſts bodie, and concerning the bread: ſome thinke, that the matter of the bread remaineth, the forme being only changed, as Durand, and the ſame ſeemeth to be the fanſie of the Greekes: ſome hold neither forme nor matter, but only the externall accidents to remaine, as the Papiſts: ſome hold all to bee preſent, as the Proteſtants. And for Chriſts bodie: ſome hold it to be preſent with the very fleſh and blood, as the Romaniſts: ſome thinke that it giueth a forme vnto the bread, as the fire to the yron, that is red hot; as the Greekes: ſome hold that the vertue of Chriſts fleſh is preſent, neither the forme nor matter of that glorious bodie: like as the body of the Sunne is in heauen, yet it ſheweth the power, efficacie and influence thereof in the earth: and the Load-ſtone, though a great way off, doth ſhew the vertue and force thereof vpon yron: ſo the bodie of Chriſt doth ſend foorth the ſpirituall force and efficacie, without any ſuch carnall preſence. Thus the Proteſtants: which of all the reſt is the ſafeſt opinion.

THE THIRD QVESTION, WHETHER THE EVCHARIST BEING ONCE CONSECRATED, BE A SACRAMENT, THOUGH IT BE NEITHER EATEN NOR DRUNKE.

The Papiſts.

THe elements in the Sacrament, that is, the bread and wine, being once conſecrate, which they ſay, is done by the prolation of theſe words, Hoc eſt corpus meum, This is my bodie, whether they be receiued or not at that inſtant, but be reſerued and kept in boxes, and pixes, and other veſſels of the Church, for daies, weekes, moneths, to bee carried ſolemnely to thoſe that are ſicke, and to be applied to other vſes, are ſtill the very bodie and blood of Chriſt, Trident. Concil. ſeſſ.13. can.4.7. Bellarm. lib.4.cap.2. 19.Error.

Argum.1. Chriſts words which were ſpoken ouer the bread, This is my bodie, were true as ſoone as he brought them foorth, before he ſaid, Take, eate, and ſo likewiſe of the cup: therefore it was a Sacrament before they did receiue and eate it, and had been a Sacrament ſtill, if it had not been receiued at all at that time, Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. Firſt, theſe words of Chriſt, this is my bodie, were not ſpoken before he brake the bread and diſtributed it: but firſt, as S. Matthew ſetteth it downe, he brake the bread and gaue it to his diſciples, ſaying, Take eate, and then follow theſe words, this is my bodie, Matth.26.26. which ſeeme to haue bin vttered euen in that inſtant, when they tooke the bread, and began to eate it. Matth.26.26.

Bellarmine replieth: firſt, ſaith he, it ſeemeth, that the Euangeliſts did tranſpoſe the words of Chriſt, ſetting that firſt, which was ſpoken laſt: and contrariwiſe, as Marke 14.23. he tooke the cup, and when he had giuen thankes, he gaue it to them, and they all dranke of it, and he ſaid vnto them, This is my blood of the new teſtament. Here the words of conſecration (this is my blood) are rehearſed after they drank, which notwithſtanding, were ſpoken before: and ſo theſe words, this is my bodie, are placed after, take, eate, &c. and yet were vttered before: for theſe words, this is my bodie, doe containe a reaſon, why hee would haue them eate that meate: but the reaſon of the eating muſt firſt be expreſſed, before the bread be deliuered to be eaten. Marke 14.23.

Contra. Firſt, where the Euangeliſts doe diſſent in the order and placing of words, it is like that the words are tranſpoſed, as in that place of Marke, who only of the Euangeliſts placeth theſe words, this is my blood, after their drinking: but where all the Euangeliſts keepe the ſame order, as in ſetting theſe words, this is my bodie, after, take ye, eate ye; it is euident, that the words were ſpoken in ſuch order, as is ſet downe; ſeeing that the Apoſtle alſo rehearſing the inſtitution, 1.Cor.11. doth ſo place the words: wherefore it is great boldneſſe in him to controule the order agreed vpon by all the Euangeliſts, and the Apoſtle. Secondly, whereas Saint Marke ſaith, they all dranke of it, and then Chriſt ſaid, this is my blood, it maketh altogether for vs, that euen at the ſame inſtant of drinking Chriſt pronounced thoſe words, ſignifying that it was his blood vnto thoſe, that did receiue, and drinke it in faith. Thirdly, the reaſon or the cauſe in order of nature goeth alwaies before the ſigne or the effect, but not in order of time: as the end of a thing precedeth in intention, but not in action: as Exod.12.11. Ye ſhall eate it in haſte, for it is the Lords Paſſe-ouer. Here the Paſſe-ouer is the reaſon or cauſe, or end of their eating; yet their eating went before: ſo in the Euchariſt, the participation of the Lords body is the cauſe, and end of their eating; yet by the ſame reaſon of the Paſſe-ouer, by eating in faith it is made the Lords body. Exod.12.11.

Secondly, the inſtitution of the Sacrament conſiſteth partly of a promiſe, partly of a precept: the promiſe is this, Hoc eſt corpus meum, This is my body: The precept, Accipite, manducate, Take, eate: Chriſt doth no otherwiſe make good his promiſe, then we performe the condition: vnleſſe therefore accordingly we doe take and eate it, it is not the body of Chriſt.

To this Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that if theſe words, this is my body, contained a promiſe, it ſhould be pronounced in the future tenſe; as when Chriſt ſaith, Mark. 16. he that beleeueth, &c. ſhall be ſaued: ſo Chriſt would haue ſaid, it ſhall be my body. Secondly, it would follow hereof, that they ſhould not in their eating receiue Chriſts body; for the condition preſcribed goeth before, and then the thing promiſed afterward followeth, Bellarm. ibid.

John 5.24.
Iſay.65.24.

Contra. Firſt, in the Scriptures wee finde, that the promiſe is often deliuered in the preſent tenſe, becauſe that which God promiſeth is as certaine, as if it were alreadie performed: as Ioh. 5. 24. He that beleeueth, hath euerlaſting life: and Exod. 12. 11. This is the Lords Paſſe-ouer, he ſaith not, it ſhall be, but is: wherefore Bellarmines collection is falſe. Secondly, Gods promiſe is oftentimes fulfilled in the very act of our obedience, as whereas God ſaith, Call vpon me, and I wil heare thee, he doth heare vs not after we haue prayed, but while we are in prayer; as Iſay. 65. 24. Before they call, I will anſwere, and while they ſpeake, I will heare: ſo in the very action of eating and receiuing in faith, Chriſts bodie is communicated to vs.

Luk.22.20.
1.Cor.10.15.

Argum. 2. S. Luke ſaith, chap. 22. This cup is the new teſtament in my blood: the blood of Chriſt was in the cup, before it was in their mouth: Ergo, it is a Sacrament, though it be not receiued. S. Paul alſo ſaith, 1. Cor. 10. The bread which we breake, is it not the communion of the body of Chriſt? Ergo, it is the body of Chriſt before it be broken or diſtributed, Bellarm. cap. 2.

Anſw. Firſt, there is a figure in Chriſts words, for the cup is taken for that, which was contained in the cup: and the other Euangeliſts rehearſe them thus, this is my blood of the new teſtament: wherefore his collection drawne from a figuratiue ſpeech concludeth not. And againe, Chriſt ſaid before, drinke ye all of it, ſo that in the drinking his blood was exhibited. Secondly, the place of S. Paul is for vs, for he ſpeaketh of a communion, which cannot be where there is no diſtribution: ſo that the communion of Chriſts body is in breaking of the bread, and diſtribution thereof.

The Proteſtants.

The Euchariſt is no Sacrament beſide or without the vſe thereof; ſo that, though ſome forme of words be pronounced ouer it, if it bee not receiued and eaten and drunke, it is no Sacrament: neither is that which remaineth after the diſtribution, the Euchariſt being ended, either of the bread or wine any part of the Sacrament, but ſo much only as is taken and vſed.

1.Cor.11.24. 26.

Argum. 1. It is no Sacrament, vnleſſe it be vſed according to the inſtitution as Chriſt hath commanded it: but to the inſtitution it belongeth on the behalfe of the Miniſter, to bleſſe, breake, and diſtribute it: on the behalfe of the Communicants, to take, eate, and drinke it: in them all, thereby to ſhew the Lords death, and to do it in remembrance of Chriſt. But this cannot be performed by vſing the words of benediction onely, but by the whole action: for how can they ſhew the Lords death, or doe it in remembrance of Chriſt, vnleſſe they take, and eate? Ergo, if it be not ſo vſed, it is no Sacrament.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that to reſerue the Euchariſt is not contrary to the inſtitution of Chriſt: for it is reſerued to be eaten, though not preſently: ſo that the deferring of the eating, as to keepe it to be carried vnto the ſicke, may very well agree with the firſt inſtitution, where Chriſt commandeth it indeed to be eaten, but not preſently.

Mark.14.23.

Contra. Firſt, at the inſtitution of the Lords Supper, they did preſently take and eate: and Saint Marke ſaith, that they all dranke of it, Marke 14. 23. ſo that, if the preſent eating and drinking bee agreeable to the inſtitution, the deferring of it is contrarie. Secondly, your reſerued hoaſt is not alwaies eaten; for ſometime it putrifieth and mouldeth, in which caſe, by their owne Canons it muſt be committed to the fire: ſo that herein there muſt be an apparant breach of the inſtitution. Thirdly, the Sacrament need not to be kept for the ſicke, for it may much better be miniſtred vnto the ſicke at home, if there be a ſufficient number well prepared, and the ſicke perſon deſiring it onely to his comfort, not of any ſuperſtitious conceit, in being addicted to the outward element.

Exod.12.8.

Laſtly, S. Origen thus writing, Hom. 5. in 7. cap. Leuit. Dominus panem, quem diſcipulis dabat, &c. The Lord did not command that bread, which he gaue to his diſciples, to be deferred till the morrow, ſheweth, that the preſent eating is moſt agreeable to the inſtitution; as the paſchall Lambe was commanded preſently to be eaten, Exod. 12. 8.

Bellarmine anſwereth againe, that the Sacrament may be a Sacrament, though it be not vſed to that end, for the which it was inſtituted: for to the inſtitution belongeth both the eſſence of the Sacrament, which is the conſecration, and the vſe, which is the manducation or eating: now if there be the eſſence, though not the vſe, it is a Sacrament; as a chaire made to ſit in, is a chaire ſtill, though no man ſit therein.

Contra. Firſt, it is a moſt impious aſſertion, that the Sacrament may bee a Sacrament, though not vſed to the end it was inſtituted for: doth he thinke then, that the Euchariſt if it be caſt vnto dogs, or ſwine, remaineth a Sacrament? or that if bels be baptized, it is baptiſme? Secondly, in ſome things which conſiſt in action, the very vſe is of the eſſence, as in ſpeaking, and ſinging, the very vſe and action is the eſſence of the voyce and ſong: ſo in the Euchariſt, which partly conſiſteth in action, the very vſe is of the eſſence: That like as the paſchall Lambe was not the Paſſe-ouer, vnleſſe it were eaten, Exod. 12. 11. ſo is not the bread a Sacrament being not receiued. Thirdly, conſecration he granteth to be the eſſence of the Sacrament; but eating and receiuing belongeth to the conſecration: for the elements are not conſecrated onely by rehearſing of the words of inſtitution, but by the whole action of receiuing, thankſgiuing, &c. as Saint Paul ſheweth, 1. Cor. 10. 16. when he had ſaid, the cup, which we bleſſe, is the communion, &c. addeth further, the bread, which we breake: the breaking of the bread anſwereth to the bleſſing of the cup: whereupon it followeth, that the bread is in part bleſſed and ſanctified by the breaking and diſtribution thereof. Laſtly, a chaire is a chaire, though it be not ſit in; ſo is the bread, bread ſtill, though it bee not eaten in the Sacrament: but it followeth not by this example, that the Sacrament is a Sacrament ſtill, though not vſed; for the Sacrament conſiſteth in action, and is not a permanent thing, as a chaire is. So then, notwithſtanding any thing yet obiected, it appeareth to be contrarie to the inſtitution of Chriſt, to celebrate the Euchariſt without eating and communicating, and indeed it is no Sacrament at all, if this be wanting: as out of Saint Paul we reaſon thus:

Exod. 12. 11.

1. Cor. 10. 16.

In the Euchariſt there is alwaies a remembrance of Chriſt, and a ſhewing forth of his death, 1. Cor. 11. 24. but in eating and drinking in the Sacrament the Lords death is ſhewed forth, verſ. 26. Ergo, in the ſacramentall eating and drinking conſiſteth the Euchariſt.

1. Cor. 11. 26.

Argum. 2. The Sacraments of the new Teſtament are alike, and of one and the ſelfeſame kinde, there is one way of inſtituting and conſecrating both: but the water in Baptiſme is no part of the Sacrament, but during the ſolemne action of baptizing, afterward it returneth to the common vſe, ſo much as is not vſed: Ergo, it is ſo alſo in the Euchariſt: for as Chriſt ſaith to his Apoſtles, Ite baptizate: Goe and baptize: ſo that it was no Sacrament, vnleſſe ſome body were baptized: euen ſo he ſaith, Accipite, manducate: Take, eate. No Sacrament then, vnleſſe it be receiued and eaten.

And here, I pray you, let it be noted, how well the Ieſuites agree amongſt themſelues: our Rhemiſts doe commend the reſeruing alſo of the water in Baptiſme, and carrying of it home to giue it the diſeaſed to drink, annot. Iam. 5. ſect. 5. Bellarmine ſaith that Res permanens in baptiſmo: That the thing permanent in Baptiſme, that is, water which remaineth, is not the Sacrament, but ipſa actio, the action of baptizing it ſelfe, and alloweth only the Euchariſt to be reſerued, and remaine a Sacrament, etiam extra vſum, without the vſe thereof, Bellarm. lib. 4. de Euchariſt. cap. 3. But we haue ſhewed alreadie, that both the Sacraments are hallowed and ſanctified alike, and that both in the one and the other, the vſe only and preſent action according to Chriſts inſtitution, maketh the Sacrament.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that there is great difference betweene Baptiſme and the Euchariſt: for Baptiſme conſiſteth in the action, as of baptizing; but ſo doth not the Euchariſt: for it ſtandeth not in the action of eating, for that is an act only of the receiuer; but Sacraments are not the acts only of the receiuers, but of the Miniſters alſo: neither in the action of breaking is the Sacrament, for it is no ſigne of any inuiſible grace: nor yet in the act of conſecration, for that helpeth to make the Sacrament: Ergo, it is not the Sacrament, Bellarm. cap. 3.

Contra. We doe not affirme, that the Euchariſt conſiſteth ſeuerally in any one of theſe actions of eating, breaking, conſecrating, but that all theſe ioyntly together are required to make the Sacrament: firſt then, as Sacraments are not only the acts of the receiuers, ſo neither are they without them: but as in Baptiſme, there is the act of the Miniſter to baptize, and the act of the receiuer to be baptized; ſo in the Euchariſt, there is the act of the Miniſter to breake and diſtribute, and of the receiuer to take and eate. Secondly, the breaking alſo of the bread hath a ſpirituall ſignification: for thereby is ſignified the breaking and communication of Chriſts body ſpiritually vnto vs, 1. Cor. 10. 16. as likewiſe the manner of Chriſts death, whoſe body was in a manner broken vpon the croſſe for vs, 1. Cor. 11. 24. Thirdly, we ſay not that conſecration is the very Sacrament, but that it concurreth with other actions to make the Sacrament: and the ſame reaſon which he vrgeth againſt conſecration in the Euchariſt, might bee enforced againſt Baptiſme, that the action of baptizing is not the Sacrament it ſelfe, becauſe it helpeth to make the Sacrament. So then as wee ſay not, that the very action of waſhing in Baptiſme is the whole Sacrament; for there is beſide the inuiſible grace repreſented by that waſhing, and the words of inſtitution; but yet without that action it is no Baptiſme: ſo though the very act of eating and drinking bee not the Euchariſt; yet it is neceſſarily required, without the which, and other actions it is no Sacrament. There is then betweene Baptiſme and the Euchariſt herein no difference at all.

1. Cor. 10. 16.

1. Cor. 11. 24.

In Auguſtines time ſome vſed to receiue the Communion daily: but vpon the Sabbath or Lords day, it was commonly receiued of all: Quotidie Euchariſtiæ communionem percipere, nec laudo, nec reprehendo; omnibus tamen dominicis diebus communicandum ſuadeo & hortor: Euery day to receiue the Euchariſt, I neither commend, nor diſpraiſe it; but euery Lords day I doe perſwade men and exhort all to communicate, &c. It ſhould ſeeme then that in thoſe dayes there was no ſuch ſuperſtitious reſeruation of the Sacrament, ſeeing euery day, or at the leaſt euery Sabbath it was adminiſtred.

De Eccleſiaſtic. dogmat. c. 53.

Let vs heare antiquitie ſpeake; Epiſtol. 2. Clement. and it is rehearſed, Decr. par. 3 diſtinct. 2. c. 23. Si tam manſerint, in craſtinum non reſeruentur, ſed cum timore & tremore clericorum diligentia conſumantur.

mantur 3. comedantur: If any part remaine, let it not be kept till the morrow, but let the Clerkes with feare and trembling eate them. By this we ſee that it was not lawfull to reſerue the Sacrament, no not a day.

Bellarmines euaſion here is this, that Clement is ſo to bee vnderſtood, that no part of the Euchariſt ſhould be reſerued, vnleſſe ſome portion for the ſicke: ſo his meaning is, that not much of the Euchariſt ſhould remaine, Bellarm. cap. 5.

Contra. It is euident by the words of the decree, that whatſoeuer remained, the Miniſters ſhould eate, and nothing at all be left till the morrow: Tanta in altaria holocauſta, &c. Let ſo much be offered vpon the Altar, as may ſuffice the people, &c. but if there remaine, let the Clerks eate them, &c. Firſt, the prouiſion muſt be made for the people only, that communicate: but if any part ſhould be reſerued for the ſicke, the prouiſion and offering ought to be made thereafter. Againe, he calleth it holocauſtum, a whole burnt offering, alluding to the rite of that ſacrifice, which was conſumed wholly vpon the Altar. Thirdly, the words are generall, the Miniſters muſt eate that which remained; and ſo, if any thing were intended for the ſicke, they muſt eate it likewiſe, if it were a remainder. Laſtly, this decree hath relation to the like rite of the Paſchall Lambe: Non derelinquetur de eo, &c. There ſhall
Exod. 12, 46. not remaine of it till the morning, Exod. 12. that as not one iot of the Paſſe-ouer was to remaine till the next day; ſo neither ſhould any part of the Euchariſt be reſerued.

The holy Martyrs alſo haue ſealed this truth: Iohn Philpot holy Martyr; I doe not ſay that the receiuing maketh it a Sacrament onely: but I ſay, that a common receiuing muſt needes be concurrent with the true Sacrament, as a neceſſarie member; without the which it cannot be a Sacrament: be-

Lib. 2. ad vxorem. Yet here I will not conceale, that of ancient time in the Affrican Church, and elſe where, they vſed to carie part of the Euchariſt home to their houſes: as Tertullian ſaith, writing to his wife: Non ſcit maritus, quid occulto ante omnem cibum ſumas: Shall not thy husband know, what thou eateſt ſecretly before all other meate.

To this, and the like we anſwere. 1. That it cannot be denied, but that the ancient Chriſtians did vſe and reſpect with reuerence the reſerued part of the Euchariſt, and did take it home, and eate it to their comfort, giue it to the ſicke, caried it about in their iourneyes, ſent it as a token to their friends: but this ſheweth not, that they held it as a Sacrament, but kept it reuerently, as a part of that holy De corona militis. thing, which they had receiued: and this may appeare by Tertullian: who ſaith, Euchariſtiæ ſacramentum, &c. nec de aliorum manu quam præſidentium ſumimus: The Sacrament of the Euchariſt, both in time of our meate, and in our meetings before day, wee receiue, not from the hands of any other then our preſidents and paſtors, &c. but their Paſtors were not alway preſent, when they tooke the reſerued part, they tooke it not then to be as a Sacrament.

2 Though herein they followed tradition, not Scripture, as Tertullian ſheweth in the ſame place: yet had they then better reaſon to reſerue the Sacrament, and that for theſe two cauſes, firſt becauſe in the times of perſecution, they could not come together to communicate: ſecondly, when hereſies and ſects began, they vſed it as a meanes, by ſending it to others, to trie out, who were of their communion.

3 This auncient cuſtome of carying the Sacrament home to their houſes, Bellarmine confeſſeth to Bellar. lib. 4. de Euchariſt. c. 24. haue beene abrogate by diuers councels, and now it is out of vſe in the Romane Church: and in ſtead thereof, they brought in a new kinde of reſeruation, not knowne vnto antiquitie: to reſerue the Sacrament till it putrifie, and to keepe it to be adored, and caried about in proceſſion, and to be gazed vpon: whereas yet in other reſeruations before mentioned, in the end they did take and eate it, and vſe it to their comfort, though not altogether in that manner, which Chriſt hath appointed.

Now herein the practiſe of the preſent Æthiopike Church is verie commendable, and commeth Apud Damian. a Goes de morib. Æthiop. moſt neere the firſt inſtitution: for thus Zaga Zabo an Æthiopike Biſhop confeſſeth: Sacramentum Euchariſtiæ apud nos non ſeruatur in templis, &c. With vs the Sacrament of the Euchariſt is not kept in Temples as heere in Europe, neither doe the ſicke receiue the Lords bodie, but after they are recouered, and that is, becauſe all both of the lay ſort, and clergie doe receiue it at the leaſt twice in a weeke, and all, that minde to receiue it come vnto the Church, for it is giuen to none but in the Church, no not to the Patriarke, or to precious Iohn himſelfe, &c. So in like manner, if in our reformed Churches the Sacrament were oftner miniſtred, there ſhould not be ſo great neede of priuate Communions, which as they are not to be denied altogether to the ſicke, ſo yet great care ſhould be had that they be with due reuerence, a conuenient companie, and vpon vrgent occaſion miniſtred: but of reſeruing part of the Sacrament, and carying it home to the ſicke, there is now no cauſe, ſeeing the Communion it ſelfe may more ſafely be deliuered by the Miniſter, as occaſion requireth.

3. Confeſſ. of Saxonie: In the inſtitution it is ſaid, Take yee, eate yee, what doth this thing appertaine to the dead, or to thoſe which are abſent? Alſo it is a manifeſt prophanation to carry about part of the ſupper of our Lord to be worſhipped, where a part is transferred to an vſe, cleane contrary to the inſtitution, Take yee, eate yee.

Epiſtol.2.ad Iacobum.

THE FOVRTH QVESTION, CONCERNING the elements or materiall part of the Sacrament; namely bread and wine.

The Papiſts.

1. The bread which is vſed in the Sacrament, ought to be vnleauened: becauſe it is moſt agreeable to Chriſts inſtitution, who made the Sacrament of vnleauened bread, for he inſtituted his laſt Supper, after he had eaten the Paſſe-ouer: which was to be eaten with ſweete and vnleauened bread, according to the Law; neither was there any leauen to be found in Iſraell for ſeuen daies together: and not onely Chriſt, but all the Iewes at that time did keepe the Paſſe-ouer: and the next day after, in the which Chriſt ſuffered, was the firſt ſolemne feſtiuall day of the ſeuen, being the fifteenth day of the moneth, as it was commaunded, Leuit.23.5. Rhem.1.Cor.11.ſect.10. Bellarm.lib.4. de Euchariſt.cap.7.

20.Error.

Leuit.23.5.

*Argum.*1. That the Iewes kept the Paſſe-ouer at the ſame time, that Chriſt and his Apoſtles did, Bellarmine pretendeth to proue by theſe places of Scripture, Mark.14.12. The firſt day of vnleauened bread, when they ſacrificed the Paſſe-ouer: Luk.22.7. Then came the day of vnleauened bread, when the Paſſe-ouer muſt be ſacrificed: Ergo, at the ſame time, when Chriſt eate the Paſſe-ouer, it was commonly obſerued of all, *Bellarm.cap.*8.

Mark.14.13.
Luke 22.7.

Contra. The Euangeliſts thus writing doe reſpect the right time of the Paſſe-ouer, as it was appointed by the Law, and obſerued by Chriſt, not regarding the contrarie corrupt vſe and cuſtome of the Iewes, who to auoide the keeping of two feſtiuals together, did deferre the eating of the Paſſe-ouer till the fifteenth day at night: but Chriſt, according to the law, did eate it with his diſciples the fourteenth day at euen.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that this tradition of the Iewes, that the Paſch ſhould not be kept vpon the ſixth day of the weeke, which was now the fifteenth day of the moneth, becauſe of the concurrence of two feſtiuals, might very well agree with Moſes law: for the account of the daies muſt not be according to the Aſtronomicall computation, but according to the account of the Hebrue Calendar, wherein they might ſo calculate the time of the Paſch, as that it ſhould not fall vpon the ſixth day: and ſo they might ſet their Calendar in the beginning of euery yeere, as that the feaſt ſhould miſſe that day; as the Chriſtians now haue a ſpeciall rule for the obſeruation of Eaſter: and this tradition our Sauiour Chriſt was bound alſo to keepe. Secondly, this tradition of the Hebrues was brought in long ſince Chriſts time, Bellarm.cap.7.8 reſp.ad Burgenſ.

Whether Chriſt and the Iewes kept their Paſſe-ouer at one time.

Anſ. Firſt, it is blaſphemie to ſay, that Chriſt was bound to keepe the traditions, whereby they made the word of God of no authoritie, Mark.7.13. as this tradition in altering the Paſch from the 15 day of the moneth is contrarie to the law: which reckoneth the daies according to the Aſtronomicall account of the moneths, not after the deuice of any ſuch Calendar. So then Moſes ſaith, they ſhould eate the Paſſe-ouer the 14. day (of the moneth, not of the Calendar) at euen, Exod.12.6. and the next day, which is the 15 ſhould be the firſt ſolemne day of the feaſt: But the Iewes Calendar ſaith, this yeere you ſhall eate the Paſſe-ouer the 15 day at euen, and keepe the ſolemne feaſt the 16 day: this was therefore a manifeſt tranſgreſſion of the law. Secondly, it is vntrue alſo, that this tradition of the Iewes began after the time of our Sauiour, that is not to keepe the Paſſe-ouer vpon the Sabbath eue, but to put it off to the Sabbath: for wee force not vpon the authoritie of ſome of the Iewiſh Rabbins alleaged by Bellarmine, who in this cauſe are not to be heard, being enemies to Chriſt: although though we want not alſo the graue teſtimonie of ſome learned in the Hebrue rites, as of Rupertus in cap.23.Leuitic. and of Paulus Burgenſ. in addition. ad Lyran. commentar. cap.26. Matth. who are of this iudgement, that this tradition was receiued long before Chriſts time. And this appeareth to be ſo by the Scripture, Iohn 19.14 It was the preparation of the Paſſe-ouer, when Chriſt was condemned of Pilate and crucified: but that was the 15 day of the moneth, which by the law ſhould haue been the firſt ſolemne day of the Paſſe-ouer: ſo that this being but the day of preparation, the Paſſe-ouer was put off till the next day, which was the Sabbath. Iohn 19.14.

*Argum.*2. The day wherein Chriſt ſuffered was the feſtiuall day of the Paſſe-ouer; and therefore the eeuen before, the Paſſe-ouer generally was eaten of the Iewes. *Bellarm.c.*8. The firſt he would thus proue: Firſt, Iohn 13.1. Before the feaſt of the Paſſe-ouer, when Ieſus knew that the houre was come, &c. Chriſt therefore did eate the Paſſe-ouer before, and the feaſt followed the next day. Likewiſe, Iohn 18.39. Pilate ſaith, You haue a cuſtome, that I ſhould deliuer one at the Paſſe-ouer: Ergo, at that inſtant the Paſſe-ouer was begun: and therefore the Iewes ſay, it was not lawfull for them to put any to death, namely at that inſtant, becauſe it was at the feaſt: for otherwiſe they did, and might put to death. Iohn 13.1. Iohn 18.39.

Contra. To the two firſt places wee anſwere: Firſt, that Chriſt did and might eate the Paſchall Lambe before the Paſſe-ouer, though it followed not immediatly the next day, but the day after. And the diſciples ſuppoſition may very well ſtand, that when Chriſt had ſaid to Iudas, That thou doeſt, doe quickly, they thought he had bid him buy ſomewhat needfull againſt the feaſt, Iohn 13.29. for this might be againſt the feaſt following after one day: or both Chriſt and his diſciples may be taken to ſpeake of the right time of the Paſſe-ouer, which by the law ſhould haue been kept the next day. Secondly, Pilate might deliuer one at or againſt the Paſſe-ouer, though not vpon the very feſtiuall day it ſelfe.

Whether the Iewes had power to put any to death.

Thirdly, it is a fond conceit, that the Iewes ſhould anſwere, they could put none to death, onely in reſpect of the feaſt then inſtant: firſt, it had been as vnlawfull for them to ſend him bound to Pilate vpon that day, which they did, Matth.27.2. and in their owne perſons to lay in accuſations againſt him, verſ.12. and to crie out, Crucifie him, Luke 23.23. and to ſee Chriſt crucified, Luke 19. verſe 21. Secondly, it is euident, that they indeede were depriued of the Ciuill power in putting to death by the Romanes, and that ſome forty yeeres before the deſtruction of the Temple, as ſome of their Rabbins confeſſe. And the words of the Iewes implie ſo much in plaine meaning: It is not lawfull for vs to put any man to death: not this man, or at this time, but not any man. And therefore Pilate doth arrogate this authoritie, as peculiar to his place; I haue power to crucifie thee, and power to looſe thee, Iohn 19.11. as if he ſhould haue ſaid, I onely haue this power, not the high Prieſts or Elders. Thirdly, if the Iewes put any to death, it was either tumultuouſly without any forme of iudgement, as Stephen was caſt out and ſtoned, Act.7.58. or they onely came together to enquire and examine, Act.23.15. and their councell was ſtill at commaundement of the chiefe Captaine, who was preſent to moderate their doings, as Act.22.30. the chiefe Captaine commaunded the high Prieſts, and all their councell to come together, Act.23.10. The chiefe Captaine taketh Paul away from the Councell: So that it is euident, that they had no authoritie to put to death of themſelues: for they acknowledge no King, but Caſar, Iohn 19.15. Now it is cleere that the power of life and death is onely in the King, and therefore it belonged onely to Caſar. Bellarmine then bewrayeth great ignorance, to ſay that the Iewes had power in themſelues, being then vnder the gouernment of the Romanes, to put any to death. So then Bellarmine hath not yet proued, that he pretended, that either the Iewes generally did eate the Paſſe-ouer, when Chriſt did, or that he was crucified vpon their feaſt day.

The Proteſtants.

1. WE denie not, but that Chriſt might vſe vnleauened bread, at the inſtitution of his laſt Supper, hauing immediatly before eaten the Paſchall Lambe, which we doubt not but he kept, according to the Law, with ſweete bread; yet in the time they are greatly deceiued, affirming, that all the Iewes eate the Paſſe-ouer likewiſe ouer eeuen, and crucified Chriſt on the morrow, which ſhould haue been, and was vnto them (as they ſay) a chiefe feſtiuall day.

The truth is, that Chriſt eate the Paſſe-ouer the fourteenth day at eeuen, as it is appointed in the Law: but the Iewes had a contrary tradition: they would in no wiſe keepe two feſtiuall daies together: and therefore becauſe the ſixteenth day was their Sabbath, they would not haue the feaſt of vnleauened bread vpon the fifteenth day (though it were ſo appointed by the law) to auoid the concurrence of two holy daies together, but deferred it till the next day, which was their Sabbath, and eate the Paſſe-ouer the eeue before, which was the fifteenth day at night; whereas Chriſt reforming that abuſe, kept the Paſſe-ouer the eeue before, according to the law, that is, the fourteenth at night. It appeareth then, that the next day following, which we call Friday, wherein Chriſt was put to death, was not kept of the Iewes as a holy day.

First, the text ſaith, they would not put Chriſt to death vpon the feaſt day, fearing the tumult of the people, Mark.14.2. Mark.14.2.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that this was but the ſentence of ſome in the Councell, which preuailed not; but their ſentence rather ſtood, that thought it good to take any occaſion at what time ſoeuer, to put Chriſt to death, cap.9.

Contra. Firſt, there is no mention made of any diuiſion in the Councell, but that they all agreed vpon it, not to apprehend Chriſt vpon the feaſt day: the words are, but they ſaid, Matth. 26.5. that is, the high Prieſts, Scribes and Elders of the people which were aſſembled, verſ.4. they all accorded in one. Secondly, who would thinke, that Bellarmine had ſo ſoone forgotten himſelfe: for before, where the Iewes ſaid, it is not lawfull for vs to put any to death, hee expoundeth it, in reſpect of the feaſt, that it was not lawfull for them therein to kill any: and yet now they are reſolued vpon any day whatſoeuer to kill Chriſt: how can theſe things hang together?

Matth.26.5.

*Argum.*2. Secondly, if they had kept it holie, as the Law commaunded, they ſhould haue done no ſeruile labour therein, that is, no worke of the bodie, Leuitic.23.7. But what could be a more ſeruile worke, then to crucifie Chriſt, to carry the Croſſe, and pitch it in the ground, and ſuch like; which the Iewes would not haue done vpon that day, which they were as ſtraightly to keepe as the Sabbath? It is alſo called the preparation of the Sabbath, Mark 15.43. Wherein they were wont to prepare againſt the Sabbath, what was needfull: but ſuch workes of preparation could not haue been done in that great feſtiuall day.

Leuitic.23.7.
Mark.15.43.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Iewes were not of ſuch a daintie conſcience, to thinke that theſe things were not lawfull vpon the feaſt day; they thought it ſufficient, if with their owne hands they did not ſtone Chriſt: *reſp. ad argum.*2.

Contra. Firſt, yea the Iewes did many things againſt Chriſt with their owne hands, they came againſt him to take him, with ſwords and ſtaues, Matth.26.55. they did buffet him, and ſmite him with rods, verſ.67. they did carrie him bound to Pilate, chap.27.2. they tooke Ieſus and led him to be crucified, Iohn 19.16. therefore it is like alſo, that with their owne hands they crucified him: wherefore they ſhould apparantly in thus doing haue broken the feaſt. Secondly, ſeeing that the Iewes were ſo ſuperſtitious in keeping of the reſt of the Sabbath, that they reproued the Apoſtles for pulling the eares of corne, and would not ſuffer Chriſt to heale vpon the Sabbath, it is not like they tooke ſuch libertie vpon the chiefe feſtiuall of the Paſſe-ouer, wherein all worke was as ſtrictly forbidden, as vpon the Sabbath, ſauing about their meate, Exod.12.16.

Matth.26.55. and verſ.67.
Matth.27.2.
Iohn 19.16.
Exod.12.16.

*Argum.*3. Iohn 18.28. The high Prieſts went not into the common hall, leſt they ſhould be defiled, but that they might eate the Paſſe-ouer: Ergo, they did not eate the Paſſe-ouer till that night, which was the eeuen after Chriſt was crucified.

Iohn 18.28.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that by the Paſſe-ouer heere is not vnderſtood the paſchall Lambe, which was eaten at eeuen, but other ſacrifices beſide, whereof the Prieſts did eate, wherewith they celebrated the Paſſe-ouer, as Deut.16.2. *Thou ſhalt ſacrifice the Paſſe-ouer of ſheepe, and of bullockes, &c. reſp. ad argum.*4.

Deut.16.2.

Contra. Firſt, though the feaſt of the Paſſe-ouer were celebrated with other ſacrifices; yet to eate the Paſſe-ouer is not found in Scripture, but properly to betoken the eating of the Paſchall Lambe, as Mark.14.12.14. I will eate the Paſſe-ouer with my diſciples, &c. Likewiſe, Matth 26.17. In all theſe places, the ſacrificing of the Paſſe-ouer, the keeping of it, the preparing and eating of it (for all theſe phraſes are vſed) are vnderſtood onely of the Paſchal Lambe: wherefore this is but a ſillie ſhift, to obſcure ſo euident a text. Secondly, that the Prieſtes could not eate the Paſſe-ouer the eeue before Chriſts ſuffering, it appeareth by this, that they were ſo full of buſineſſe, in ſending for Chriſt with ſwords and ſtaues, firſt bringing him to Annas houſe, then to Caiphas, Iohn 18.24. in gathering the aſſemblie of the Elders to Caiphas houſe, Matth.26.57. in producing witneſſes againſt Chriſt, verſ.59. in ſifting and examining him with many queſtions, verſ.63. in buffeting and beating him, verſ.67. all this was done the fourteenth day at night: it is very apparant, that they being thus buſied had no leiſure to eate the Paſſe-ouer.

Mark.14.12. 14.

*Argum.*4. Iohn 19.14. It was the day of the preparation of the Paſſe-ouer: Ergo, it was not the feaſt day of the Paſſe-ouer; and verſ.31. the Sabbath following is called a great day, becauſe of the feaſt of the Paſſe-ouer: for the firſt day of the Paſſe-ouer, and the laſt, were ſolemne dayes, Exo.12.16. Iohn 7.37. The laſt and great day of the feaſt: If the Sabbath following then were the firſt day of the Paſſe-ouer, then did they not begin their feaſt the ſame day, wherein Chriſt was crucified.

Iohn 19.14.
Exod.12.16.
Iohn 7.37.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that it is called the preparation of the Paſche, being indeed the preparation to the Sabbath: becauſe it fell within the Paſche: and ſo likewiſe is the Sabbath called a great, or high day, becauſe it was within the feaſt of the Paſſe-ouer. So alſo anſwereth Socolouius, annot. in 10.cap. Cenſur. Oriental.

Contra. Firſt, wee graunt indeed, that it was the preparation day to the Sabbath, and to the Paſſe-ouer likewiſe, becauſe the Euangeliſt ſaith ſo: for it were an improper ſpeech to ſay, the preparation of the Paſſe-ouer, that is within the Paſſe-ouer: but as the preparation of the Sabbath, ſerueth to the Sabbath; ſo the preparation of the Paſſe-ouer ſerueth to the Paſſe-ouer. Secondly, ſeeing that they were not to do any worke vpon the feaſt day, Exo.12.16. but in the preparation of the Sabbath, many workes muſt be done, that all might be diſpatched before the Sabbath; it is not like, that the preparation could fall vpon the feaſt of the Paſſe-ouer. Thirdly, the Sabbath day was not the greater, falling vpon the ordinarie weeke dayes of the Paſſe-ouer: for they were not counted great dayes, but onely the firſt and the laſt: and therefore being not great dayes themſelues, they could not make the Sabbath a great day; So then the greatneſſe of this Sabbath was by reaſon of the firſt and great day

De conſenſu Euangel. lib. 3. cap. 13. of the Paſſe-ouer. Fourthly, Auguſtine bringeth in the opinion of ſome, which he diſliketh not, which ſaid, that in that day which the Sabbath followed, (which was the day wherein Chriſt was crucified) Paraſceuen fuiſſe Paſcha Iudæorum, was the preparation of the Iewes Paſch. It is not therefore true, that it was kept holy of the Iewes, the day of Chriſts Paſſion; neither that they did eate the Paſchal Lambe the ſame eeue that Chriſt did, but the night following.

Wee conclude then, firſt, that Chriſt might eate vnleauened bread at the inſtitution of his laſt Supper: and yet neither did the Iewes generally eate their Paſſe-ouer then, neither was the next day of Chriſts Paſſion, kept by them as a ſolemne feaſt.

Secondly, it was not of the ſubſtance of the inſtitution to eate vnleauened bread, no more then to eate it at night, and to receiue it ſitting, we are not more bound to the one then to the other. Againe, Chriſt vſed vnleauened bread, becauſe it was the vſuall bread at that time: ſo wee doe vſe that, which is the vſuall bread in our time. And Saint Paul ſpeaketh of ſuch bread, as was vſuall among 1. Cor. 10. 17. the Gentiles, when he ſaith, The bread which we breake, 1. Corinth. 10. 17. Ergo, ordinarie bread and leauened to be vſed, not vnleauened.

The teſtimonie of antiquitie is this: Concil. Laodicen. can. 38. Non oportet à Iudæis azyma accipere: It is not lawfull to receiue vnleauened bread from the Iewes. Trullan. can. 11. Nemo Iudæorum azyma comedat: Let no man eate the vnleauened bread according to the cuſtome of the Iewes. Wee ſee then that the vſe of leauened bread pleaſed better, then of vnleauened. And the Greeke Church is herein more indifferent then the Latine: De pane, ſiue azymus, ſiue fermentatus fuerit, Græci non curent, dum ex tritico conſtet: The Greekes, whether it be leauened, or vnleauened brad, care not, ſo it be of wheate: Florentin. ſeſſ. 25.

Laſtly, in this caſe wee want not ſome teſtimonie of their owne: that whereas Bellarmine alleageth out of Abenezra in cap. Leuitic. 23. that this tradition of the Iewes, not to keepe the Paſſe-ouer vpon the Sabbath eeue, to auoid the concurrence of two feſtiuals, began many yeeres after Chriſt, cap. 8. yet Iohan. Hentenius præfat. in Euthymium, and Cornelius Ianſenius in cap. 26. Matth. alleage out of Seder-olam, that this tradition began ſtraight after their returne from the captiuitie of Babylon.

Heere it ſhall not be amiſſe briefely to touch the great Schiſme that happened betweene Leo the ninth Biſhop of Rome, and Michael Patriarke of Conſtantinople, and their two Champions Humbertus, and Nicetus, about this queſtion, of vſing vnleauened bread, which was about anno one thouſand and one hundred, or ſomewhat after: their arguments on both ſides were theſe, Michael thus argueth: Firſt, It is Iudaicall to vſe vnleauened bread. Secondly, Chriſt in his laſt Supper inſtituted a new Teſtament, therefore the old rites are aboliſhed. Thirdly, Chriſt compareth the kingdome of heauen to leauen. Fourthly, The Prieſthoode being tranſlated, there muſt bee a change alſo of the Law. Fifthly, Chriſt biddeth vs to doe it in remembrance of him, but vnleauened bread belonging to the rites of Moſes law, can be no memoriall of Chriſt.

Humbertus ſuborned by the Pope, thus replyed on the other ſide, That vnleauened bread was to be vſed. Firſt, they vſed it not as the Iewes did, they onely on the fourteenth day of the firſt moneth for ſeauen dayes, but wee vſe it in the Sacrament all the yeere. Secondly, Chriſt vſed vnleauened bread in his laſt ſupper, being at the time of the Paſſe-ouer, for otherwiſe, the Iewes would haue accuſed him as a tranſgreſſor of the Law; neither is it like, that Chriſt would herein haue broken the Law. Thirdly, Leauen is taken in euill part in the Scripture, as Chriſt biddeth them take heed of the leauen of the Phariſes. Fourthly, The Church of Hieruſalem at that time vſed vnleauened bread. Fifthly, The old Teſtament is the foundation of the new, which Chriſt came to fulfill, not to diſſolue.

Nicetus for the Patriarke of Conſtantinople replieth, 1. They which do vſe vnleauened bread, are yet vnder the ſhadow of the Law: 2. Chriſt biddeth vs walke in the light, then not in the darkenes of the Law. 3. Paul biddeth vs purge out the old leauen. 4. Paul alwayes writing of the Sacrament, in the Corinthians calleth it bread, not vnleauened. 5. There was no leauen then vſed, Chriſt eating the Paſſe-ouer the 13. day at euen. 6. God commanded the Iſraelites ſeauen dayes only to vſe vnleauened bread, not all the yeere. 7. In the ſixth generall Synod. c. 11. Chriſtians are forbidden to eate thoſe things which were in vſe among the Iewes. Humbertus reioyned, that Chriſt did eate the Paſſe-ouer vpon the 14. day, according to the Law, for otherwiſe he ſhould haue been a tranſgreſſor, and ſo ſhould worthely haue been put to death for his owne tranſgreſſion, and then ſhould he not haue died for our ſinnes: See more of this Schiſme, Centur. 11. p. 409.

But on each ſide there is ſome error to be ſound both in their opinion, and in the defenſe thereof. For the firſt, neither was the Greeke Church to condemne as ſuch a great error the indifferent vſe of vnleauened bread, nor the Romane Church to vrge it as neceſſarie, for that were to Iudaize, in laying a neceſſitie vpon the Iewiſh ceremonies. And for the other, both the Greekes ground their opinion vpon an error, in holding Chriſt to haue kept the Paſſe-ouer vpō the thirteenth day, for then he ſhould haue been an apparant tranſgreſſor of the Law: and the Romaniſts alſo are deceiued, in holding Chriſt and the Iewes to haue kept their Paſſe-ouer together according to the Law. Concerning the point it ſelfe in queſtion, as we denie not but that it is like Chriſt vſed at his laſt ſupper vnleauened bread, becauſe he would fulfill all the rites of the law: yet it is not preſcribed vnto vs as a law, ſeeing that was a ceremonie annexed to the Iewiſh Paſſe-ouer, with which all the rites thereof are aboliſhed: and it is more ſignificant to vſe ordinarie and leauened bread, to expreſſe our ſpirituall food.

And for further euidence in this matter: 1. Chryſoſtome is of opinion directly, that our bleſſed Sauiour and the Iewes kept not the Paſſe-ouer together: It is euident, ſaith he, Iudaos cupiditate interficiendi Chriſtum praeuaricatos fuiſſe, atq; alio die paſcha comediſſe: that the Iewes vpon a deſire to kill Chriſt, to haue tranſgreſſed the law, and kept the Paſſe-ouer on another day: for Chriſt tranſgreſſed not the time of the Paſch, &c.

In cap.26. ſuper Matth.

2. And it ſeemeth alſo of ancient time, that common bread was vſed in the Sacrament: as Tertullian writeth thus to his wife, as hee is cited before, diſſwading her from marrying with a Pagan idolater after his deceaſe? Shall hee not know what thou eateſt ſecretly before all other meate? Et ſi ſciuerit, non panem, illum eſſe qui dicitur: and if he doe know, he will not iudge it to be that bread, which thou ſaieſt it is, and ſo being ignorant, ſine ſuſpicione panis an veneni, can he be without ſuſpition, whether it be bread or poyſon? &c. It was then ſuch bread, as could not be diſcerned from common bread.

Lib.2.ad vxorem.

The Greekes at this day vſe altogether leauened bread: Ieremiah Patriark, reſponſ.2.c.4. and ſo doe the Moſcouites: But the Æthiopike Church, vnleauened.

Guagnin.deſcrip.Sarmati.
Aluares deſcr. Æthiop.c.3.

3. Our reformed Churches hold it a thing indifferent, whether wee vſe leauened or vnleauened bread in the Sacrament, ſo it be done without ſuperſtition: Caluin.lib.3.Inſtitut.cap.17.ſect.43. Kemnitius 2.part.examin.ſeſſ.22.c.7. and their practiſe alſo ſheweth their iudgement therein: yet moſt of them vſing common and leauened bread for the reaſons aforeſaid.

4. And touching the other point, that Chriſt and the Iewes did not keepe the Paſch at one time; we haue the opinion of ſome of their owne writers: Rupertus, Burgenſis, Ianſenius vpon the 26. of Matthew, and Hentenius before cited.

The Papiſts.

2. Concerning the other element of wine, which is vſed in the Sacrament, they ſay it is to bee mixed with water, and they boldly condemne all thoſe Chutches, that doe not mixe water with wine, in the Sacrament; ſaying, it cannot be omitted, ſine graui peccato, without great ſinne, Bellarm.lib.4.cap.10. And therefore Honorius 3. cauſed a Prieſt to be depoſed both from his office and benefice, becauſe hee did ſacrifice, ſine aqua & igni: without water and fire, Decret.Greg.lib.3. tit.41.c.14.

21.Error.

*Argum.*1. Water guſhed out together with blood, out of the ſide of Chriſt: Ergo, wine and water is to be vſed together in the Euchariſt: Rhemiſt, 1.*Cor.*11.*ſect.*10. *Bellarmin.lib.4.de Euchariſt.cap.*10.

Anſw. Firſt, the blood and water, that iſſued out of Chriſts ſide, were not mingled together, but came foorth apart: Ergo, if they will ground their mixture in the Sacrament vpon this example, they muſt vſe them ſeuerally and apart in the Euchariſt. And Bellarmine anſwereth nothing, when hee ſaith, that notwithſtanding they were not mixed comming foorth of Chriſts ſide; yet if they had fallen into one veſſell or cup, they would haue runne together: for wee ſay againe, if they had fallen into two ſeuerall veſſels, they would not haue runne together: therefore if they will follow this preſident, they ſhould put the wine and water into two ſeuerall cups, and ſo vſe them apart.

Secondly, they cannot proue, that the water which came from Chriſt, was like to the water, which we commonly vſe, but ſuch, as is in the bodie of man: and it hath been an old receiued opinion, that it came neere vnto that humour in mans bodie, which is called Phlegma, as it is mentioned in their decrees, Decret.Greg.lib.3.tis.41.c.8. which opinion is there confuted, neither doe wee altogether approue it: yet it is probable, that it was not pure water, comming foorth of Chriſts bodie; and therefore this can be no warrant vnto them, to vſe common water.

Thirdly, blood and water came foorth, not wine and water: wherefore this example, if it proue any thing, maketh for the mixture of blood and water, not of wine and water.

Fourthly, by the blood and water the Fathers doe much better vnderſtand the two Sacraments of the Church, Baptiſme and the Euchariſt, as afterward it followeth to be ſhewed out of Augnſtine: if the water then ſignifie Baptiſme, it cannot be applied to the Euchariſt. Bellarmines anſwere here, that it is one thing to repreſent, another to be repreſented, is not worthie to be repeated, much leſſe to be refuted.

*Argum.*2. In the old Teſtament the cup in the Euchariſt was not only prefigured in wine, which Melchiſedech brought foorth to Abraham, but in the water, which came foorth of the rocke: Ergo, water is to be vſed as well as wine: cap.10.argum.3.

Contra. Firſt, by this argument they may inferre, that water onely may be vſed; for water onely without wine flowed out of the rocke. Secondly, the figures of the law are no paternes of the Sacraments of the Goſpell: they had the ſame ſubſtance, that ours haue, but not the ſame ceremonie: for by the ſame reaſon, becauſe the cloud and the red Sea were figures of our Baptiſme, they may conclude, that now alſo we muſt baptize with a miſt or cloud, and with ſalt-ſea water: theſe are very ſillie arguments.

Argum. 3. Wine mixed with water doth fitly expreſſe the vnion of Chriſt and his people, who are ſignified by water.

1.Cor.10.17.

Anſw. Firſt, it is too great boldnes for men to make myſteries of their owne deuiſing, as to bring in water to ſignifie the people. Secondly, this vnion and knitting together of Gods people is repreſented in the bread, made of many graines of corne, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, 1.Cor.10.17. We that are many, are one bread, &c. and therefore the ſignification of water is ſuperfluous.

The Proteſtants.

1. WE denie not, but that of ancient time, in hot Countries, eſpecially where their wine was ſtrong, they vſed to mixe water with wine, in their common drinke, and thereupon they ſo vſed it in the Sacrament: but it was neuer generally the practiſe of the Eaſt countries ſo to doe: for the Armenians and Iberians vſed not of ancient time to put water in the cup in the miniſtration. Fulk. annot. 1. Cor. 11. ſect. 10.

De conſecrat. diſtinct.2. in gloſſ.1.

Secondly, Be it that this mixture of wine were conuenient to bee vſed: you cannot make ſuch a matter of neceſſitie of it, as to charge them with hereſie, and denounce damnation againſt them that keepe not that cuſtome, eſpecially ſeeing your Canoniſts and ſchoolemen doe grant that it is de honeſtate tantùm, of decencie only, not of neceſſitie. And yet wee are faine to drinke mingled wine many times againſt our wils: for the Miniſter neede put in no water, it is mixed to his hands many times. The Vintners craft ſtandeth very well with popiſh profeſſion.

Matth.26.29.

Argum. 1. We hold it rather to be a ſuperſtitious cuſtome and contrarie to Chriſts inſtitution: for hee in his laſt Supper gaue wine, not water to be drunke; for he calleth it the fruite of the Vine, which is wine and not water, Matth. 26.29.

Luke 22.17.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that theſe words of our Sauiour, I will not drinke hencefoorth of the fruite of the vine, are vnderſtood of the wine which Chriſt gaue vnto his Apoſtles before conſecration in the end of the legall Supper: and he thus goeth about to proue it; firſt, becauſe S. Luke maketh mention of two cups, the one before the inſtitution of the laſt Supper, chap. 22 verſ. 17. the other after, verſ. 20. the firſt was giuen in the end of the Paſſe-ouer, and therefore Chriſt doth not call it the new teſtament in his blood, as he doth the other. Bellarm. lib. 1. de Euchar. cap. 11. argum. 10.

Contra. S. Luke maketh not mention of two cups, but twice of the ſame cup; and in the firſt place he ſpeaketh by way of anticipation, as S. Auguſtine thinketh, lib. 3. de conſenſu Euangeliſtar. cap. 1. whom Bellarmine vnmannerly reiecteth: ſaying, Non diligenter expendiſſe hunc locum: That hee did not well weigh the place: Therefore S. Luke once for all rehearſeth the words of inſtitution, part of them in the firſt place, as, Take this and diuide it amongſt you, which is all one, as to ſay, Drinke ye all of it; part in the latter place, as, This cup is the new teſtament, &c. And that which S. Luke omitteth in the firſt place, the other two Euangeliſts, Matthew and Marke, ſupplie: for firſt they make mention of the words of inſtitution, this is my blood, &c. and then it followeth, I will drinke no more of the fruite of the vine: ſo that Chriſt calleth this cup, the new teſtament in his blood.

Luke 22.16.

Secondly, ſaith Bellarmine, as theſe words of Chriſt, Luke 22.16. Hencefoorth I will no more eate of it, &c. are neceſſarily vnderſtood of eating the Paſſe-ouer; ſo the other words that follow, verſ. 18. I will drinke no more of the fruite of the vine, &c. muſt be referred to his drinking in the Paſſe-ouer. Bellarm. lib. 1. de Euchar. c. 11. argum. 10.

Contra. Firſt, it is not neceſſarie to referre the firſt words to Chriſts eating of the Paſſe-ouer in his firſt ſupper, but to the whole action of his eating, at that time in the firſt and latter ſupper: ſo that the meaning is this: This is the laſt time, that I will eate with you: for he thus ſpake in the beginning of the Paſſe-ouer before he had yet taſted thereof, as may appeare by the 15. verſe, I haue earneſtly deſired to eate this Paſſe-ouer: So it was but yet in his deſire, and not in act. Secondly, though the firſt words be vnderſtood of eating in the Paſſe-ouer, the ſecond are not therefore to be referred to the wine which they did drinke in the Paſſe-ouer. Firſt, becauſe both Matthew and Marke doe rehearſe theſe words as ſpoken after the words of conſecration. Secondly, becauſe Chriſt did no more eate of the Paſſe-ouer, but he did afterward drinke of the cup in his laſt ſupper; and therefore to make Chriſts words true, he ſpeaketh of the cup miniſtred in the Sacrament.

Now on the contrarie ſide, that Chriſt ſpake theſe words, I will drinke no more of the fruite of the vine, after the inſtitution of his laſt ſupper, it may appeare by theſe reaſons.

Firſt, becauſe two Euangeliſts, Matthew and Marke, doe both conſent in placing theſe words after the inſtitution: and there is greater reaſon to thinke that S. Luke ſhould tranſpoſe the words, then the other two according together.

Secondly, S. Luke ſpeaking twice of the cup, in both places rehearſeth ſome of the words of the inſtitution as in the firſt, Take this and diuide it among you, in the latter; This cup is the new teſtament in my blood: Wherefore ſeeing theſe words, Take this, and diuide it, or as Matthew ſaith, Drinke ye all of this, were ſpoken at the time of the inſtitution: it muſt needs follow, that our Sauiour meaneth the conſecrated cup and wine.

Thirdly, otherwiſe they will make the words of Chriſt vntrue, if he ſaid before his laſt ſupper, I will drinke no more of the fruite of the vine, and yet did afterward drinke it in his laſt ſupper. They will anſwere: that Chriſt did drinke no wine in his laſt ſupper, for it was conuerted into his blood.

Contra. Beſide that any man may ſee how groſſe and abſurd a thing it is, that Chriſt ſhould drinke his owne blood, and eate his owne fleſh; Saint Matthew ſaith, that after Chriſt had ſaid, This is my blood,&c. he calleth it the fruite of the vine, verſ.26.29. wherefore it was wine, which he dranke in the chalice.

Argum.2. The water and blood which iſſued out of Chriſts ſide, ſignifie no ſuch thing, but rather as S.Iohn expoundeth them: by water, is betokened our waſhing from our ſinnes, whereof Baptiſme is a pledge: by blood, the full ſatisfaction that Chriſt hath made for our ſinnes, whereof the other Sacrament is a ſeale; 1.Ioh.5.6. This is that Ieſus Chriſt, that came by water and blood, not by water onely, but by water and blood. By the which words the Apoſtles meaning is not, that by the water and blood, which were ſhed vpon the Croſſe, wee ſhould vnderſtand the Sacraments of the Church; but thoſe ſpirituall graces, whereof the Sacraments are liuely ſignes, namely, the ſatisfaction and randſome of our ſinnes by Chriſts blood, and our ablution and waſhing from the ſame.

Auguſtine picketh out no ſuch fancie out of this myſterie as you doe, for the mixture of wine and water: but he doth more fitly apply it to the Sacraments of the Church: De latere Chriſti in cruce pendentis ſacramenta Eccleſiæ profluerunt: *Tract.*15.in Ioann. Out of Chriſts ſide dying vpon the Croſſe, iſſued the Sacraments of the Church, &c. namely, Baptiſme, and the Euchariſt. He draweth not both water and wine to ſignifie one Sacrament, but applieth them to both.

Argum.3. The mixture of wine with water is in the Scripture taken in the euill part, as Iſay 1.22. Your wine is mixt with water, and 2.Cor.2.17. Wee are not as thoſe, which doe adulterate the word of God. The Apoſtle borroweth the word from the corrupters and minglers of wine: and therefore vſeth the word εἰλικρίνεια. which is the diſcerning of mixed and adulterate things by the light of the Sunne: the mixing then of wine and water in the Euchariſt can haue no good ſignification. Iſay 1.22. 2.Cor.2.17.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the ſame thing in Scripture in diuers ſenſes may haue both a good and an euill ſignification: and ſo the mixing of wine with water, to make marchandize of, is taken in the worſe part; but with intent to drinke it, it is vſed in Scripture in the better ſenſe, as Prou.9.5. Wiſedome ſaith, Come and drinke the wine which I haue mixed for you, lib.4.de Euchariſt.cap.11.reſponſ.ad argum.1. Prou.9.5.

Contra. Firſt, that place in the Prouerbs is not neceſſarily vnderſtood of the mixture of wine with water, but of ſome pleaſant temper beſide, whereby the wine is fined and reliſhed, and not allaied, as by water: as Cantic.5.1. I haue drunke my wine with my milke. Secondly, though in the ordinary drinke, the mixture of wine with water may haue a good vſe and ſignification, yet in offerings and oblations to God, ſuch as the Prophet Iſay ſpeaketh of, ſuch mixture neither in vſe or ſignification is commendable: For like as the Prophet Malachie reproouing the Iſraelites for offering vnto God the worſt things, as the halt and the blinde, ſaith Offer it now vnto the Prince, will he be content? Malach.1.8. ſo if a man offer waterie or adulterate wine to the Prince, he will not be pleaſed; much leſſe is it to be preſented to God. And as it is not meete to vſe courſe or browne bread in the Communion for the one element; ſo neither is it fit to preſent baſe and courſe wine for the other. And if Chriſt turning water into wine, did exhibite pure and perfect wine at the mariage feaſt: is it like he would bring foorth adulterate and counterfeite wine at his heauenly feaſt? Hereof S. Ambroſe thus writeth, Dominus inuitatus ad nuptias, &c. The Lord being inuited to the mariage feaſt, did not mingle the water pots full of water with wine, but changed them into wine: Maluit naturam vertere, quam adulterare ſubſtantiam: He had rather change the nature, then adulterate the ſubſtance, *Serm.*78. Wherefore it is an adulterating of the ſubſtance, to mingle wine and water together. Cantic.5.1. Malach.1.8.

Argum.4. As Bellarmine, to proue that Chriſt vſed vnleauened bread, alleageth that he immediatly before did eate the Paſſe-ouer, which was kept, with vnleauened bread; ſo by the ſame reaſon, ſeeing he confeſſeth that Chriſt did drinke the fruite of the vine, that is, naturall and perfect wine in the Paſſe-ouer, it is more then probable that he vſed the ſame at his laſt ſupper: that as he changed not the bread, ſo neither did he alter the wine.

And laſtly, they may be thus preſſed with their owne deuices: for whereas they hold that the elements after the words of conſecration are tranſubſtantiate; I aske whether the water, which is incorporate to the wine, be alſo conuerted into Chriſts blood? if they ſay it is not, then doe they denie tranſubſtantiation of all that is in the cup; if they ſay it is, then will they make Chriſt a waterie and elementall bodie: If the firſt, I obiect the decree of Innocent 3. who determineth, that the water together with the wine is changed into Chriſts blood, Decret.Greg.lib.3.tit.41.cap.6. If the ſecond, I doe oppoſe Bellarmine, who before affirmed, that nothing but the bread and wine are tranſubſtantiate; queſt.2.§.ad 3.argum.præſtant.

Bernard writing of this matter, ſheweth his opinion according to thoſe corrupt times, that water in the Sacrament ought to be mixed with the wine: but he condemneth not all thoſe which retaine not this vſe: Aliud eſt (ſaith he) culpare negligentiam, aliud negare efficaciam: *epiſtol.*69. It is one thing to blame their negligence, another thing to denie efficacie to the Sacrament without any ſuch mixture adminiſtred.

*Concil.Aurelianenſ.can.*4. Vt nullus in oblationibus ſacri calicis, niſi quod ex fructu vineæ ſperatur, & hoc ſine aqua mixtum offerre præſumat, quia ſacrilegium indicatur aliud offerri, quam quod in mandatis ſacratiſſimis ſaluator inſtituit: That no man in the oblation of the ſacred cup, but that which commeth of the vine, and that without mixture of water, preſume to offer: becauſe it is iudged ſacrilege to offer any other thing, then what our Sauiour did inſtitute, &c. This Canon maketh ſo euidently againſt the popiſh mixture of water and wine, that Caranza in his Epitome hath cunningly left it out.

Laſtly, in their owne decrees, there are certaine heretikes condemned, called Aquarij, becauſe they did offer water only: Decr.par.2.cauſ.24.qu.3.c.39. By the ſame rule the Papiſts are Semi-Aquarij, in part Aquarie-heretikes, becauſe they offer water.

But we haue a more euident teſtimonie from their owne Canons: Decret.part.3.diſt.2.c.7.Iulius confuteth thoſe which preſumed to offer milke, and dipped bread, by this argument, It is euident by the Goſpell, Quod preter panem & vinum aliud offerre non liceat: That it is not lawfull to offer any thing beſide bread and wine, &c. If nothing but bread and wine muſt be vſed, then water alſo is excluded as well as milke.

Now for the iudgement and practiſe of forren Churches: 1. The Eaſt Churches haue not generally receiued this cuſtome of mixing water with wine in the Sacrament: the Armenians doe it not: *Some alſo write that the Grecians doe mixe their wine with water: but it ſeemeth to be otherwiſe now vſed in the Greeke Church: for Ieremie their Patriarke confeſſeth, that they vſe to temper the wine in the cup with water. The Moſcouites doe alſo mingle water, but the ſame hot, not cold water: and therefore they finde fault with the Church of Rome, for vſing cold water: becauſe the water which iſſued out of Chriſts ſide was hot.

2. In the Africane and Æthiopike Church, they in ſtead of wine, which they cannot keepe in that hot countrey, they vſe to ſteepe drie reaſons in water twelue daies, and preſſe out the liquour: it is like they would vſe wine, if they had it.

3. The reformed Churches of Germanie, in their anſwer to Ieremie their Patriark, thus write: We mingle not water with wine in the holy Supper, becauſe that Ieſus Chriſt ſaid, I will not drinke henceforth of the fruite of the vine; and maketh no mention of any water. In like manner we doe not thinke it neceſſarie to mingle any water: yet peraduenture, if there be any, we hold it indifferent, &c. Hereunto our owne Church agreeth: vpon theſe words of our Sauiour; I will drinke no more of the fruite of the vine, inferreth, it is well knowne that the fruite of the vine is wine, and not blood, &c.

THE FIFTH QVESTION, OF THE words of conſecration.

The Papiſts.

22. Error.

THeſe words (ſay they) This is my bodie, to bee ſpoken ouer the bread, and the like ouer the wine, This is the new Teſtament in my blood, are the very formes of the Sacrament and words of conſecration: which being vttered, immediatly the elements are changed into the bodie and blood of Chriſt: Wherefore theſe words are not bee read hiſtorically for the inſtruction of the people, but they are only conſecratorie words, to be pronounced ouer the elements: Rhemiſt. 1.Cor.11.ſect.11. Bellarm.lib.4.de Sacram.cap.13.

1.Cor.10.16.

Argum.1. The Rhemiſts obiect that place of Saint Paul, 1.Cor.10.16. The cup of bleſſing, which we bleſſe, &c. Heere the benediction is referred to the cuppe, not vnto God: Ergo, not by prayer or thankſgiuing to God, but by certaine conſecratorie words ſpoken ouer the cup, it is conſecrated: Rhemiſt. in hunc locum.

Mark.8.6,7.

Anſw. Firſt, the word which the Apoſtle here vſeth εὐλογεῖν, to bleſſe, is expounded by S. Matthew, to be all one with εὐχαριστεῖν, to giue thankes: for he ſaith, Chriſt after he had bleſſed (vſing the firſt word) tooke the bread, and after he had (giuen thankes) which is the other word; he tooke the cuppe: and S. Marke vſeth both theſe words; how Chriſt firſt gaue thankes and brake the bread, and he bleſſed the fiſhes, and cauſed them to be ſet before the multitude: wherefore the cup is bleſſed, that is, by giuing thankes vnto God and prayer is ſanctified: So that here is both relation vnto God, to whom we offer our thankſgiuing, and to the cup, which is ſanctified by our prayers. Secondly, though wee grant, that the cuppe is bleſſed by words of conſecration, it followeth not out of this place, that it is done by theſe foure words, this is my bodie, or this is my blood: for Chriſt beſide theſe words, vſed a benediction, bleſſing, or thankſgiuing beſide, as the Euangeliſts make mention. Thirdly, as Saint Paul ſaith, The cup which wee bleſſe; ſo hee ſaith, The bread which wee breake, which member of the ſentence anſwereth to the other, breaking of the bread, to the bleſſing of the cup: the bread then is bleſſed, not onely by the pronouncing of words, but by the whole action of breaking, diſtributing, thankſgiuing, &c.

Argum.2. If theſe were not the onely words of conſecration, This is my bodie, and if preſently vpon the vttering of theſe words the bodie of Chriſt were not preſent; then ſhould not the words of Chriſt be true, Bellarm.ibid. The anſwere to this argument followeth here in the aſſertion of the Proteſtants.

The

The Proteſtants.

1. WE acknowledge no ſuch conſecration at all, by vertue whereof the elements are conuerted and tranſubſtantiate into the bodie of Chriſt, as we haue before ſhewed. A conſecration we grant, which is a ſetting apart of the elements, which before were common, to holy vſes, and by the vertue of Chriſts inſtitution, to be made vnto vs ſignes of holy things.

Secondly, theſe are not the only words of conſecration, This is my bodie, and, This is the cup of my blood, and yet Chriſts words ſhall be true: for wee muſt not diſmember the ſentence: Chriſt ſaith, Take, eate ye, this is my bodie: it is then made his bodie to be taken and eaten; by taking then and eating, the elements alſo are conſecrated, not only by ſaying of the words: ye muſt not then diuide the words of the inſtitution, for then they ſhall no more conſecrate, then if you ſhould pronounce but two of your conſecratorie words, as This is, or, My bodie, and leaue out the reſt.

*Argum.*1. That theſe are not the only words of conſecration, it appeareth, becauſe both the bread was broken and diſtributed, and the cup alſo, before Chriſt ſpake thoſe words, as Matth.26.26. For firſt Chriſt ſaith, Take, eate, and, Take and drinke, before he ſaid, either, This is my bodie, or, This is my blood: Neither can yee well tell your ſelues, which are your conſecratorie words for the cup, whether thoſe that Matthew ſetteth downe, This is my blood of the new Teſtament: or as Luke hath, This cup is the new Teſtament in my blood. Nay, Bellarmine vſeth another forme beſide theſe: Hic eſt calix ſanguinis, This is the cup of my blood, *Bellarm.cap.*13.

Matth.26.26.

Againe, Saint Luke addeth, This is my bodie, which is giuen for you: Saint Paul, which is broken for you, 1.Cor.11.24. And S. Luke alſo and S. Paul haue theſe words, Do this in remembrance of me, which are omitted both by S. Matthew, and S. Marke. Wherefore ſeeing all theſe are the words of Chriſt, it followeth, that they all are effectuall and forcible to conſtitute the Sacrament (vnleſſe they will ſay, that ſome of Chriſts words are ſuperfluous:) Ergo, theſe only words, this is my bodie, this is my blood, are not all the words of conſecration.

1.Cor.11.24.

Bellarmine here anſwereth moſt abſurdly, that their Leiturgie, which only vſeth thoſe words, being made by Saint Peter is more ancient, then either Lukes Goſpell, or Pauls Epiſtle, *Bellarm.cap.*14. *reſp.ad argum.*9.

Contra. Firſt, thus without all ſhame they doe make their vncertaine traditions equall with the Canonicall Scripture, and their ſuperſtitious and erronious Leiturgie, to counteruaile the authoritie of S. Pauls writings. Secondly, if their Leiturgie were grounded vpon Canonicall Scripture, yet one part of the Scripture is not of more credit then another: Matthew and Markes Goſpell are equall to S. Lukes; and S. Lukes Goſpell, and Saint Pauls Epiſtle not inferiour to the other: ſo that all thoſe words which are reported by them all to haue been pronounced by Chriſt, muſt be receiued as of like authoritie.

Innocentius 3. is herein more equall, then Bellarmine: *Decr.Greg.lib.*3.*tit.*41.*c.*6. Ipſi Euangeliſtæ mutuò inter ſe ſuppleuiſſe leguntur, &c. The Euangeliſts do make a mutuall ſupplie, when as any thing is omitted by any of them: as where the other Euangeliſts ſay, this is my bodie, only Luke hath, which is giuen for you: and whereas Marke and Matthew ſay, for many, Luke for you: and Matthew addeth, for the remiſſion of ſinnes. Thus hee preferreth not one Euangeliſt before another: but maketh vp the words of Chriſt out of them all. But whereas Bellarmine affirmeth with Lindanus, that the words of Chriſt, recited out of S. Pauls Epiſtle to the Corinthians, are not ſufficient to conſecrate, *cap.*15.*mendac.*3. what is this elſe but to charge the whole Church of the Corinthians, that they had no conſecration at all, who obſerued the ſame forme there preſcribed by the Apoſtle, 1.Cor.11.

*Argum.*2. Saint Paul ſaith, euery creature is ſanctified by the word of God and prayer, 1.Tim.4.5, but in the Euchariſt the bread and wine are creatures and elements ſanctified to holy vſes: Ergo, they are ſanctified by the word, and by prayer alſo. Origen hereof thus writeth in 15. Matth. Quid.i. quicquid, ingreditur, &c. If whatſoeuer enters in at the mouth goe into the bellie, &c. euen that meate which is ſanctified by the word and prayer, in reſpect of the materiall part, goeth into the bellie; but in reſpect of the prayer added to it, it profiteth according to the meaſure of faith, &c. So our Sauiour vſed thankſgiuing, when hee gaue the cuppe, beſide the words of inſtitution, Matth.26.27. By which example wee are taught, that by prayer and thankſgiuing the bread and wine are conſecrated.

1.Tim.4.5.

Matth.26.27.

We conclude then, that not only theſe words, but all the reſt belonging to the inſtitution, are to be rehearſed in the Sacrament, both to inſtruct the people, that they may know the right vſe of the Sacrament; and they helpe alſo with the reſt of the whole action, of taking, eating, drinking, praying, thankſgiuing, to conſecrate and make the Sacrament, as we haue ſhewed more at large before, Controu.11.queſt.1.part 2. to that place we referre the reader.

Bernards teſtimonie in this place is very full on our ſide: Non ſolus ſacerdos ſacrificat, non ſolus conſecrat; ſed totus fidelium cœtus, qui aſtat, cum illo conſecrat, cum illo ſacrificat: Nec ſolus lignifaber facit domum. ſed alius ligna, alius trabes comportat: debent itaque aſtantes habere de ſuo, ſicut ſacerdos fidem firmam, orationem puram, deuotionem piam: The prieſt only doth not ſacrifice, he only conſecrateth not, but the whole companie of the faithfull ſtanding by, doth conſecrate together with him: As the maſter carpenter doth not only build the houſe, but other labourers, that carrie the timber, helpe to build: therefore the ſtanders by, as well as the prieſt, muſt haue a ſure faith, pure prayer, godly deuotion, uotion,&c.doctrin.Bernard. So then the Sacrament is conſecrate by the whole action of the Miniſter and Communicants together.

Concil.Toletan.7.cap.2.Si ægritudinis acciderit quilibet euentus,quo cœptum nequeat expleri conſecrationis myſterium, ſit liberum presbytero alteri conſecrationem exequi officij cœpti: If the Miniſter chance to fall ſicke,that he cannot finiſh the conſecration,it ſhall be lawfull for another to goe thorough with it &c. It ſhould ſeeme,that the conſecration was not finiſhed with fiue words ſpeaking: for then the Councell needed not to haue been ſo carefull to prouide for a ſupplie. This Canon is ratified,decret.par.2.cauſ.7.qu.1.c.16.

And further,Decr.par.3.diſtinct.2.c.55 Vis ſcire,quia verbis cæleſtibus conſecratur,&c. Will you know, that it is conſecrated with heauenly words? then it followeth, Accipe quæ ſunt verba,&c. Heare what the words are, the prieſt ſaith; Make this oblation,reaſonable, acceptable,which is the figure of the bodie and blood of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt,&c. But theſe are not the words of conſecration, but the prayer of the Miniſter: Ergo,prayer helpeth to conſecrate,and not the pronouncing onely of Chriſts words.

The Maſter of Sentences,lib.4.diſt.8.c. thus rehearſeth out of Saint Ambroſe: Conſecratio quibus verbis fit,&c. By what words is the conſecration made? attend,what the words are, Take and eate ye all of this,this is my bodie: and againe, Take and drinke ye all of this,this is my blood: therefore take ye, eate ye,and take ye,drinke ye,are part alſo of the words of conſecration. This ſentence of Saint Ambroſe is rehearſed alſo in the decree before alleaged.

This truth laſtly is ſealed: Iohn Philpot holy Martyr; Saint Peter ſaith, If any man ſpeake,let him ſpeake as the words of God: wherefore whoſoeuer ſaith,that theſe words only,this is my body,do make a preſence of Chriſt,without bleſſe ye,take,eate,which be three as ſubſtantiall points of the Sacrament, as this is my bodie,he is highly deceiued; Fox pag.1809. Pag.1642.2.60

Hom.23.in 26.c.Matth. And yet further: 1. Chryſoſtome ſaith, Non ſunt humanæ virtutis hæc opera,&c. ipſe nunc quoq; operatur,ipſe perficit,miniſtrorũ nos ordinem tenemus,qui verò hæc tranſmutat & ſanctificat ipſe eſt: Thoſe are not the workes of humane power, Chriſt himſelfe alſo now worketh and perfiteth, wee are but in the order of Miniſters, but it is he who doth change and ſanctifie theſe things. He thinketh that the elements are not conſecrated by vertue of any words,but by ſecret operation of Chriſt.

Cenſur Oriental.cap.13. The ſame is the opinion of the Greeke Church at this day: Ieremie Patriarke ſaith it is conſecrated, ſacris ad Deum precibus,gratiarum item actionibus, iubilationibus, confeſſionibus, poſtulationibus, by ſacred prayers vnto God, giuing of thankes, iubilation, confeſſion, requeſts. So alſo the Muſcouite Church holdeth: and therefore the Romaniſts count it one of their errors. Appendix error.Moſch. err.9.

2. Tertullian hath this rule, Omne opus artifice ſuo inferius, Euery worke is inferiour to his artificer,&c. The prieſt then cannot make the bodie of Chriſt by ſaying of certaine words, which is farre ſuperiour vnto him.

The Æthiopike Church ſeemeth to think,that the Sacrament is made by the praiers of the Church: for they thus vſe to pray in their Leiturgie, Tranſlate O Lord this bread into thy true bodie,and this wine into thy true blood,&c.

Harm.ſect.12. pag.381. 3. Latter confeſſion of Heluetia,chap.19. We cannot allow of them which attribute the conſecration of the Sacrament to I know not what ſyllables,to the rehearſall of certaine words pronounced by him,that is conſecrated,and that hath an intent of conſecrating. And chap.21. We thinke that manner and rite of the Supper to be moſt ſimple and excellent,which commeth neereſt to the firſt inſtitution of the Lord:which doth conſiſt in declaring the word of God,in godly prayers, the action it ſelfe which the Lord vſed,and the repeating of it,the eating of the Lords bodie,and drinking of his blood. Ibid.p.415.

4. Scotus holdeth againſt Thomas: Opus eſſe alijs verbis, That other words are needfull to applie Chriſts words to the matter. Lindanus ſaith, Inſanire eos,qui ſine precibus ſacerdotis,ſola Chriſti verborum prolatione fieri poſſe,&c. They are mad,which teach that they are made by the onely prolation of Chriſts words,without the praiers of the prieſt. Of the ſame minde is Catharinus: as they are cited by the Archbiſhop of Cæſarea,who alſo concurreth with them. Lib varij tractatus fol.114. Pariſ 1586.ex citation. D.Morton.

THE SIXTH QVESTION, OF THE PROPER effect and vſe of the Lords Supper.

The Papiſts.

23.Error. THey doe generally hold, that this Sacrament was not properly ordained for remiſſion of ſinnes, neither that the Sacrament hath any ſuch vſe: but it ſerueth only as a preſeruatiue againſt ſinne: Trident.Concil.ſeſſ.13.can.5.Bellarm.lib.4.de Sacram.cap.17.

Secondly, they teach, that faith is not ſufficient to prepare vs for the Communion: and although men be neuer ſo contrite, quantumcunq; ſe contritos exiſtiment, yet they muſt be throughly purged and abſolued from their mortall ſinnes, before they come to communicate, Concil.Trident.ſeſſ.13. can.11. Bellarm.ibid.

*Argum.*1. They that receiue the Communion, are one bodie as they are partakers of one bread, 1.Cor.10.17. but they which are in any grieuous and deadly ſinne, are not liuely members of Chriſt, and of his myſticall bodie; therefore the Sacrament doth not profit them at all: Bellarm.ibid. 1.Cor.10.17.

Anſw. Firſt, neither doe wee affirme, that men ought raſhly and preſumptuouſly to come to the Lords table, but to repent them throughly of their ſinnes, and to haue a ſtedfaſt and liuely faith in Chriſt, who cannot be ſaid, thus preparing themſelues, to remaine in their ſins: neither yet are they ſo fully acquited of them, that they neede not to receiue the Sacrament to their comfort, and to ſtrengthen their faith in the hope and aſſurance of the remiſſion of ſinnes. Secondly, wherefore all this hindreth not, but that they ſhould be true members of Chriſts bodie, euen hauing a troubled conſcience, and labouring vnder the burthen of their ſinnes: for the weake and ſicke parts of the bodie, are they therefore no parts at all, becauſe of their infirmities? Auguſtine ſaith very well, Non filios diaboli faciunt quæcunque peccata, peccant enim & filij Dei: in quibus non eſt fides, filij ſunt diaboli: Euery ſinne maketh not a man the child of the diuell, for the children of God alſo ſinne: but they which haue no faith, are the ſonnes of the diuell, &c. Ergo, all ſins cut not men off from the bodie of Chriſt, but onely the want of faith: They then that haue ſinned, and doe repent them and come with faith, are ſtill the ſonnes of God, and members of Chriſts bodie.

Contra. 2. Epiſt. Peleg. 3. 3

Argum. 2. None were ſuffered to eate the Paſſe-ouer, if they were vncleane, Numb. 9. 10. and our Sauiour waſhed his Apoſtles feet, before he inſtituted his Supper, Iohn 13. and Matth. 22. hee is puniſhed that came to the marriage feaſt without a wedding garment: Ergo, they that come to the Euchariſt muſt be purged firſt and cleanſed from their ſinnes, ſo that they haue no pricke of conſcience at all: Bellarm. c. 18. argum. 3.

Num. 9. 10.
Matth. 22. 11.

Anſw. Firſt, theſe places alleaged doe proue, that a man being vncleane by the committing of any ſinne, ſhould firſt by repentance and contrition of heart purge himſelfe, which wee grant is neceſſary, and ſo receiue the Communion, to his further comfort: but they proue not that a man ſhould bee ſo purged, as that he needed not by the Sacrament to be further aſſured of remiſſion of ſinnes. Secondly, the type of the Paſſe-ouer is thus expounded by S. Paul, 1. Corinth. 5. 8. Let vs keepe the Paſſe-ouer, not with the old leauen of malicious neſſe and wickedneſſe, but with the vnleauened bread of ſynceritie and truth: ſo that if a man doe forſake his former wickedneſſe, not maliciouſly continuing in it, and commeth with a ſincere and vnfained purpoſe of heart, deſirous to be fully aſſured of the remiſſion of his ſinnes, it is a ſufficient preparation. Thirdly, the waſhing of the feet, was to teach the Apoſtles an example of humility, Ioh. 13. 15. I haue giuen you an example: and it ſignifieth our ſpirituall waſhing by Chriſt, verſ. 8. If I waſh thee not, (ſaith Chriſt to Peter) thou haſt no part in me: which is by faith, whereby our hearts are purified, Act. 15. 9. not that waſhing or cleanſing, which is wrought by our ſelues: and faith alſo is the wedding garment, as it is expounded Apocal. 3. 18. Buy of me white raiment, that thou maieſt be clothed.

1. Cor. 5. 8.
Iohn 19. 15.
Act. 15. 9.
Apoc. 3. 18.

Argum. 3. 1. Cor. 11. 39. He that eateth and drinketh vnworthily, eateth and drinketh his owne damnation, &c. but they that communicate, hauing any pricke of conſcience for any mortall ſinne, do eate and drinke vnworthily; Ergo, it cannot be anſwered, that this worthy or vnworthie receiuing is in reſpect of hauing or not hauing faith: for the Apoſtle reproueth them for a certaine abuſe and corruption of manners, in diſorderly comming to the Sacrament: Bellarm. ibid. argum. 5.

1. Cor. 11. 39.

Anſ. Firſt, the vnworthy receiuing, which the Apoſtle here ſpeaketh of chiefly, is in comming without the dew examination of faith: for the Apoſtle had ſaid, Let a man examine himſelfe, and ſo let him eat: but this examination is, whether we are in the faith, 2. Cor. 13. 5. And againe the Apoſtle ſaith, they eate and drinke their owne damnation, not diſcerning the Lords body: and this diſcerning of the Lords body belongeth to faith and knowledge, in making a difference betweene thoſe holy myſteries, and all other common meates. Secondly, they alſo are vnworthy receiuers, that come without knowledge and amendment of their fault; as here the Corinthians retained an abuſe in the Lords ſupper, and as yet corrected it not. This place then proueth, that continuing in ſinne without correction of it, is an vnworthie receiuing: it concludeth not againſt thoſe that haue repented them, and yet there remaineth ſome griefe or touch of conſcience ſtill, whereof they deſire to be releaſed.

2. Cor. 13. 5.

Argum. 4. They that come to the Communion either haue faith or not: if they haue not faith, they are vnworthie receiuers, and can reape no benefit by it; if they haue, they are already iuſtified from their ſinnes: therefore vnto them the Euchariſt is not profitable towards the remiſſion of their ſinnes, which they haue already by faith, Bellarm. ration. 4.

Anſw. Bellarmine very vnskilfully maketh no difference betweene the beginning and the encreaſe of faith: the Apoſtles had faith; for to them Chriſt ſaid, they were cleane, but not all, Ioh. 13. 10. yet they pray, Lord encreaſe our faith, Luk. 17. 5. So the carefull father ſaith to Chriſt, Lord I beleeue, helpe my vnbeleefe, Mark. 9. 24. So then a man hath faith, and by the ſame, remiſſion of ſinnes: yet for the further ſtrengthening of his faith, and full aſſurance of remiſſion of ſinnes, hee deſireth to receiue the Sacrament. Our faith is not perfect, but many times interrupted, and aſſailed with doubts, and had need continually to bee ſtrengthened, and renewed by the often hearing of the word, and receiuing of the Sacraments.

Ioh. 13. 10.
Luk. 17. 5.
Mark. 9. 24.

Argum. 5. There is not one and the ſame proper vſe and end of diuers Sacraments: but Baptiſme is receiued for remiſſion of ſinnes: Ergo, the Euchariſt is not for that end, Bellarm. ibid.

Anſw. 1. The death of Chriſt, and ſo remiſſion of ſinnes purchaſed by the ſame, is properly repreſented vnto vs in both Sacraments, yet in a diuers reſpect: for as to be borne is one thing, and to be fed and nouriſhed is another; yet both worke the ſame thing in the body, though diuerſly: for the birth giueth life, meate and drinke preſerueth it: the ſame difference is betweene Baptiſme and the Lords Supper, they both are ſeales vnto vs of our iuſtification, in the remiſſion of ſinnes by Chriſt: but by Baptiſme we are initiated, regenerate and borne anew, and engrafted into the bodie of Chriſt. The other Sacrament doth confirme, encreaſe, and nouriſh our faith, alreadie begun and planted in vs, for the remiſſion of ſinnes, and all other benefits of Chriſts paſſion.

The Proteſtants.

FIrſt, we doe truly affirme and teach, that an eſpeciall and principall vſe of the Euchariſt or Communion, is to ſtrengthen and aſſure our faith of the remiſſion of our ſinnes: and yet wee denie not but that it hath other vſes beſide: for as in Baptiſme not onely the waſhing away of our ſinnes is ſhewed forth, but it alſo betokeneth our dying to ſinne, and riſing to newneſſe of life, Rom.6.3.4. Rom.6.3.4. ſo in the Lords Supper whole Chriſt with all his benefits are exhibited vnto vs, as it is a pledge vnto vs, not onely of remiſſion of ſinnes, but that Chriſt is become our righteouſneſſe and ſanctification, 1 Cor.1.30. 1.Cor.1.30. that he will aſſiſt vs with his ſpirit, and repleniſh our hearts with grace: The water that I John 4.14. ſhall giue him, ſhall be in him a well of water, ſpringing vp to euerlaſting life, Iohn.4.14. Yea, the ſpirituall eating and drinking of the fleſh and blood of Chriſt, is a pledge vnto vs of the reſurrection, & of Iohn 6.54. life eternal, Ioh.6.54. But that amongſt the reſt, it alſo aſſureth vs of remiſſion of ſins, thus it is proued.

*Argum.*1. Chriſt after S. Matthew ſaith, This is the blood of the new teſtament, that is ſhed for Matth.26.28 many for remiſſion of ſinnes, Matth.26.28. But the new teſtament includeth a promiſe of remiſſion of Iere.31.34. ſinnes, Ier.31.34. Yea our Sauiour ſetteth it downe in plaine tearmes: for why elſe ſhould our Sauiour make expreſſe mention of forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, if this Sacrament did not ſerue for that vſe?

Bellarmine anſwereth that theſe words of our Sauiour doe not ſignifie, that his blood is drunke in the Sacrament for remiſſion of ſinnes, but that it was ſhed for remiſſion of ſinnes, and ſo is repreſented in the Euchariſt, *cap.19. reſp. ad argum.*3.

Contra. Firſt, in the Euchariſt the death of Chriſt with the fruit thereof, which is the remiſſion of ſinnes, is not onely repreſented, but exhibited alſo and applied: for otherwiſe they will make it but a bare and naked ſigne, if it ſhould onely repreſent and ſignifie: and who would thinke, that they which ſtand vpon the reall preſence, would content themſelues with repreſentation and ſignification onely. Wherefore I thus vrge them, as Chriſts blood is preſent, ſo is the fruites of his blood: but his blood is not preſent onely in ſignification, but verily and indeed to the worthie receiuer: Ergo, ſo is remiſſion of ſinnes, which is the fruit of his blood. Secondly, Saint Paul ſaith, that the vnworthy re- 1.Cor.11.27 ceiuer is guiltie of the body and blood of Chriſt, 1.Cor.11.27. If vnworthy receiuing doth verily adde ſinne vnto them, then the worthy receiuing, which is a ſhewing forth of Chriſts death, doth verily obtaine remiſſion of ſinnes.

Matth.4.13. *Argum.*2. Chriſt ſaith, I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance: but Chriſt in the Euchariſt calleth vs vnto him: Ergo, he calleth ſinners to come to the Euchariſt.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſt ſpeaketh of his firſt calling vnto faith, and repentance, not of inuiting to the Euchariſt, *Reſp. ad argum.*1.

Contra. Firſt, where Chriſt ſaith, I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance, hee calleth all, but onely ſuch, as are ſo righteous that they need no repentance: but ſuch there are none in Ioh.7.37 this life: Ergo, he calleth all. Secondly, he calleth all that thirſt, Ioh.7. If any man thirſt, let him come vnto me and drinke: but who thirſteth more, then he that deſireth to be releaſed of his ſinne? Neither doth Chriſt ſpeake here of the firſt call vnto faith, but euen of ſuch as did beleeue alreadie; as it followeth in the next verſe, he that beleeueth in me, out of his bellie ſhall flow riuers of waters of life. Third- Mat.11.28. ly, our Sauiour ſaith, Come vnto me all ye that are wearie and laden, and I will eaſe you, Matth.11.28. but theſe are they which labour vnder the burthen and griefe of their ſinnes: Ergo, ſuch are admitted to come to the Sacrament to finde eaſe thereby.

*Argum.*3. Beſide theſe places of Scripture, we reaſon thus: If a man muſt bee purged from the very conſcience and griefe of ſinne before he come to the Communion, then no man liuing can bee a fit receiuer, ſeeing no man in this life can be ſure he is without ſinne. This Bellarmine granteth, but ſaith further, that though a man be not ſure, yet if hee doe endeauour as much as in him lieth, to bee purged from ſinne, he commeth worthily, *reſp. ad argum.*2.

Contra. All this we grant, and this may a man doe, that findeth yet ſome griefe in his conſcience for his ſinne: but ſeeing he confeſſeth, that a man cannot be ſure he is without ſinne, there muſt then remaine ſome conſcience, feare and griefe of ſinne, euen in the worthie receiuer. Againe, ſeeing hee granteth, that the Euchariſt is auaileable to take away veniall ſinne, *ibid. argum.*4. hee offereth great indignitie to the Sacrament of Chriſts body and blood, that it ſhould not be of ſufficient efficacie to remit alſo mortall and capitall ſinne. And further he granteth out of *Thomas reſp. ad arg.*2. that a man being in deadly ſinne, and hauing no feeling of it, yet ſorrowing for the reſt, which hee feeleth and knoweth, may be a worthy receiuer: whereby it followeth, that he which hath committed a ſin, and hath remorſe thereof in conſcience, may much more be a worthie receiuer. And thus their doctrine is contrary to it ſelfe.

Secondly, we doe hold, that to haue a liuely faith in the promiſes of God, with repentance for our ſinnes, and a full purpoſe to amend our liues, is a ſufficient preparation for the Communion: and that this Sacrament is a ſoueraigne remedie for a troubled conſcience. Neither ought men to refraine from the communion, till they haue fully ſatisfied for their ſinnes, as the Papiſts teach, and are cleered in their conſcience of all their ſinnes: for ſo, few or none at all, ſhould bee admitted to the Lords table: but in whom faith hath alreadie wrought repentance, in ſome meaſure, hee may ſafely receiue the Sacrament for his further comfort, and aſſurance of remiſſion of ſinnes.

Argum.4. Ioh.6.35. He that beleeueth in me (ſaith Chriſt) ſhall neuer thirſt: Saint Paul alſo exhorteth men to examine themſelues, 1.Cor.11.28. which is nothing elſe, as himſelfe expoundeth it, then to proue whether they bee in the faith, 2.Cor.13.5. Ergo, the examination or triall of faith, is a ſufficient preparation for the Lords table.

Bernards teſtimonie is euident alſo in this caſe: who ſpeaking of the manner of preparation for the Sacrament, writeth thus: Ante omnia fides quærenda eſt, de qua legitur, fide mundans corda eorum, &c. Before all things we muſt ſeeke for faith, of the which wee reade, by faith purifying their hearts: ſerm.5.in Vigil.Natal.

Againe, Apparatus menſæ iſtius non hominis eſt, ſed fidei, non temporalis elementi, ſed æterni: The preparation or furniture of this table is not of man, but of faith; not of temporall nouriſhment, but eternall: ſerm.in cœna Domin.

Concil.Florentin.ſeſſ.25. The Greeke Church confeſſeth thus: Sanctiſſimum Chriſti corpus & ſanguinem peccatorum noſtrorum remiſſioni & animarum ſaluti fieri: That the moſt holy body and blood of Chriſt, is made for the remiſſion of our ſinnes, and the health of our owne ſoules.

Iohn Philpot holie Martyr: When Doctor Moreman had denied that the Sacrament had a promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes annexed to it: the Martyr vrged theſe words of the inſtitution, Which is giuen for you, which is ſhed for you for the remiſſion of ſinnes: whereby that popiſh aſſertion was directly ouerthrowne.

Concerning our preparation alſo by faith, thus teſtifieth a Councell: Colonienſ.part.7.cap.2. Excitanda eſt fidelium fides & deuotio in Deum, vt credentes & myſterium intelligentes accedant ad ſalutaris noſtri gratiam participandam: The faith and deuotion of the faithfull muſt bee ſtirred vp, that with beleefe and vnderſtanding they may approch to be partakers of grace, &c.

Let vs ſee what their owne decrees teſtifie of this matter: firſt, that the Euchariſt is auaileable to the remiſſion of all manner of ſinnes: Nicholaus witneſſeth, Decret.part.2.cauſ.15.qu.8.c.5. Sacramenta omnium contagionum purgatoria exiſtunt: The Sacraments are the purgation of all contagions whatſoeuer. part.3.diſtinct.2.c.6. In remiſſionem peccatorum oblationem diſtribuat: Let the Prieſt diſtribute the oblation to the people, for the remiſſion of their ſinnes. Ibid.c.40. Qui manducauerit hoc corpus, &c. He that eateth this bodie, it ſhall be to him the remiſſion of his ſinnes. Theſe words are generall of all ſinnes whatſoeuer.

Secondly, that the communion is not to bee denied vnto them, that haue griefe of conſcience euen of the greater ſinnes, their owne Canons are euident, Decret.part.2.cauſ.33.diſt.1.c.50. Negant his oportere reddi communionem, &c. They ſay the Communion is not to be giuen to thoſe that haue willingly fallen: Deus autem nullum crimen excepit, &c. But God hath excepted no ſinne, hauing forgiuen all ſinnes. Ibid.c.52. Grauiſſimi criminis reis, &c. The Lord hath commanded, that the Sacrament ſhould be miniſtred to thoſe which are guiltie of the greateſt ſinnes, if with all their heart they repent and confeſſe their ſinne. Cap.56. Sunt qui arbitrantur, &c. There be that thinke this to be repentance, to abſtaine from the heauenly Sacraments: but theſe are too ſeuere Iudges againſt themſelues, qui ſibi præſcribunt pœnam, declinant remedium, which preſcribe a puniſhment to themſelues, and decline the remedie, &c. Here they are reproued that refraine the Sacrament, for ſome conſcience of ſinne, which is a remedie againſt ſinne. Decret.part.3.diſtinct.2.c.13. Quamuis quis peccato mordeatur, &c. Though a man haue remorſe of conſcience for ſinne, let him not haue a will to ſinne, &c. and ſo let him come intrepidus, ſecurely to the Communion. Wherefore Bellarmines poſition, Qui cum conſcientia peccati accedit: He that commeth with conſcience of ſinne, doth eate and drinke his owne iudgement. c.18.argum.1. is flat oppoſite to their owne Canons. Theſe words that follow in the Canon: Hoc de illo dico quem capitalia peccata non grauant: I ſay this of him that is not troubled with mortall and capitall ſinnes, doe not make againſt vs: for hee ſpeaketh of ſuch a perplexitie of conſcience, as hath no hope: but this Canon plainlie affirmeth, that a man though he haue remorſe of conſcience for ſinne, may ſafely come to the Communion, which is the thing by Bellarmine denied.

Now concerning theſe two points, that the ſpeciall vſe of the Euchariſt is appointed to aſſure vs of the remiſſion of our ſinnes, and that it is not neceſſarie, that one ſhould come with a conſcience cleered from all ſcruple of ſinne, if he haue remorſe and true ſorrow, with a full purpoſe of amendement of life. Our further teſtimonies are theſe:

1. For the firſt, Ephram ſaith: This remaineth O Chriſt, that with faith and ſanctification wee come vnto thy cup: vt proficiat nobis ad remiſſionem peccatorum: that it may auaile vs for the remiſſion of ſins. Baſil: Quid eſt proprium, &c. What is proper to thoſe which eate this bread, &c. vt memoriam continuam

The Muſcouites doe beleeue, that their Prieſt, Id efficere conatur myſterium, quod pro ſufficienti pignore omnium promiſſionum ſuarum Chriſtus in vltima cæna reliquit,&c. Doth make that myſterie, which Chriſt left in his laſt ſupper for a ſufficient pledge of all his promiſes,&c. whereof the chiefe is for remiſſion of ſinnes. Ieremie Patriarch acknowledgeth, that the end of receiuing the Sacrament, is ſanctification, and remiſſion of ſinnes.

2 Auguſtine ſaith: Mutet vitam qui vult accipere vitam, nam ſi non mutet vitam, ad iudicium accipiet vitam, et magis ex ipſo corrumpitur, quam ſanetur: Let him change his life, that will receiue life: for if he change not his life, he ſhall receiue that which is life to his iudgement, and ſhall be hurt more thereby then healed,&c,to them then that receiue it worthily, it is life, & healing of their ſinnes.

Zaga Zabo apud Damianum a Goes.

The iudgement and practiſe of the now Affrican and Æthiopike Church is this, Cum peccatum commiſſum eſt, accurrimus,&c. When ſinne is committed wee come vnto the Prieſt, and confeſſe, and as often as we confeſſe, wee receiue the bodie of the Lord,&c. they therefore thinke by receiuing to haue remiſſion of their ſinnes.

For the other point. 1. Iſychius ſaith: He that proueth himſelfe Si peccati ſibi conſcius eſt, et pollutionem animæ ſe habere ſentit, pœnitet ſine dubio, et poſt pœnitentiam de pane commedere,&c. If he be guiltie of ſinne, and feele that his ſoule is polluted, vndoubtedly repenteth him, and after his repentance may eate of the bread,&c. The iudgement of the moderne Church of the Grecians is this: Ieremie Patriark ſaith: The ſinnes, quæ vel per oblinionem, vel animi pudorem confiteri prætermiſerint, Which they omit to confeſſe either by forgetfulneſſe or for ſhame, we pray the mercifull Lord to forgiue, et confidimus eos talium etiam veniam à Deo conſecuturos, And we truſt, that they ſhall alſo haue pardon of ſuch,&c. they require no ſuch exact clearing of the conſcience, but a minde prepared by true repentance.

Hom.88.in Ioann.

2 Auguſtine, as hee condemneth thoſe which come defiled with great ſinnes to the Lords table; Qualem ſententiam merebitur audire, qui ebrius aut adulter præſumit accedere,&c. What ſentence is he worthie to heare, which commeth drunken, or being an adulterer, hauing enuie in his heart,&c. yet he forbiddeth not thoſe, which haue ſome ſcruple in their conſcience for leſſe ſinnes: Cæterum ſi peccata tanta non ſunt,&c.non debet ſe à quotidiana medicina Dominici corporis ſeparare: If the ſinnes be not ſuch as for the which a man deſerueth not to be excommunicate, hee muſt not ſequeſter himſelfe, from the daily medicine of the Lords bodie,&c. The ſame is the practiſe of the Æthiopike Church at this day; they forbid not any the communion, Pro vllo delicto quantumcunq́ magno: For any ſinne, though neuer ſo great, but onely for murther: And therefore Zaga Zabo the Æthiopike Biſhop, being ſent an Embaſſadour, from the Emperour of Æthiopia, to the King of Portugall, did much complaine, that hee was not ſuffered to receiue the communion for the ſpace of ſeuen yeeres, while he ſtayed there.

THE SEVENTH QVESTION, OF THE MANNER to be obſerued in receiuing the Communion.

The Papiſts.

24.Error.

1. THey hold it in no wiſe lawfull for Chriſtians, otherwiſe then faſting, to receiue the Communion: and that they ought to eate nothing before they doe communicate, vnleſſe it be in a caſe of great neceſſitie, Concil, Conſtantienſ.ſeſſ.13. Bellarm.lib.3 de Euchariſt.cap.22.ratione 4.

The Proteſtants.

1. WHat they here vnderſtand by neceſſitie, it may bee doubted, ſeeing they themſelues will not grant the like neceſſitie to bee in the Euchariſt, as they ſay there is of Baptiſme: All Sacraments, we grant, are neceſſarie, that is, profitable, expedient, requiſite, ſo often as they may bee had; But none ſo neceſſarie, that the want thereof vnto a faithfull man, that in heart doth wiſh and deſire them, can be any hinderance to his ſaluation.

1.Cor.11.34.

Secondly, that it is lawfull for any man to eat before he come to the Communion, if his ſtomack be weake, and not able to faſt ſo long (for otherwiſe, if a man can abſtaine, wee wiſh him ſo to doe rather) S. Paul ſheweth, writing to the Corinthians, 1.chap.11.34. If any man be hungrie, let him eate at home. Some of them, he ſaith, came hungrie, ſome drunken, verſ.21. the Apoſtle commendeth neither, but telleth them, if they bee hungrie, they haue houſes to eate in. Againe, in that our Sauiour Chriſt after ſupper inſtituted the Sacrament, it doth euidently declard vnto vs, that it is no ſinne to eate or drinke before we receiue the Sacrament.

Bellarmine anſwereth, firſt Chriſt did inſtitute the Sacrament only after the legall ſupper, to ſhew that it was the ſhadow and figure of the other: but this doth no more warrant vs to receiue after ſupper, then that wee ſhould firſt bee circumciſed, and then baptized, becauſe Chriſt was ſo. lib.2.de Miſſ.c.14.

Contra. Firſt, we doe not vrge Chriſts example, to warrant the receiuing either after dinner, or after ſupper, but to ſhew that it is no ſinne to eate before, if neceſſitie require: for if it were ſimply a ſinne, Chriſt, vpon what occaſion ſoeuer, would not haue giuen example therein. Secondly, the example of circumciſion is not like: for there is no neceſſitie of being circumciſed before Baptiſme, as there may be of eating before the Sacrament: and Chriſts example ſheweth, that hee, which before was circumciſed, may, being conuerted to the faith, be alſo baptized.

Secondly, ſaith he, the Apoſtles meaning is, that they which are hungry, ſhould eate; but then they muſt not for that time receiue the Communion, ſo he ſpeaketh it to ſhame them, not as allowing any ſuch vſe.

Contra. The words of the Apoſtle are euident, verſ.33. When yee come together to eate, tarrie one for another, and if any man be hungrie, let him eate at home, that yee come not together to condemnation: Here the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of comming together, and tarrying one for another, that they which thorough their weakenes are hungrie and doe eate ſhould be ſtaied for.

Auguſtine ſaith, Neminem cogimus dominica illa cœna prandere, ſed nulli etiam contradicere audemus: Wee compell none to take the Lords Supper in dinner while, or after dinner, neither dare wee forbid any ſo to doe. So hee maketh it a thing indifferent, to communicate faſting or otherwiſe. Epiſt.118.c.7.

See their owne Canons of this matter: Decret.par.3.diſt.1.c.49. A ieiunis hominibus, &c. The Sacraments muſt be celebrate by them, that are faſting, exceptó vno die, &c. except one day in the yeere, when the ſupper of the Lord is celebrated, &c. Here we ſee that the ſupper of the Lord may be taken not faſting: but by faſting this Canon vnderſtandeth not an abſtinence ſimplie, but that they ſhould communicate before dinner, as it may appeare by the words following: Pomeridiano tempore, &c. They forbid the Sacrament to be miniſtred after dinner. Likewiſe diſtinct.2.c.54. Liquido apparet, &c. It appeareth euidently, that the Apoſtles when they firſt receiued the Supper of the Lord, did not take it faſting. Though the ſame Canon alloweth the receiuing of the Euchariſt faſting, which wee alſo confeſſe to bee moſt meete and conuenient; yet it granteth, that at the firſt inſtitution it was not ſo.

This truth alſo is ſealed: Alice Holting perſecuted, for ſaying to her neighbour, that ſhe might dine before ſhe receiued the Sacrament. Fox pag.755. col.1.50.edit. 1610.

The Papiſts.

2. They binde the people onely once in the yeere to receiue the Communion at Eaſter time, and take it to be fully ſufficient for them ſo to doe: Concil.Trident.ſeſſ.13.can.9. 25.Error.

The Proteſtants.

1. This decree of theirs is contrarie to the practiſe of the Apoſtles, whom the Rhemiſts confeſſe to haue miniſtred the Sacrament to the Chriſtians daily, Annotat. Act.2.ſect.6. So expounding the words of the text, They continued daily in breaking of bread.

2. It ſeemeth alſo to bee contrarie to S. Pauls rule, who ſpeaketh of often communicating: Doe this, ſaith he, as oft as you drinke it, 1.Cor.11.25. For ſeeing the eating of that bread, and drinking of that cup, is nothing elſe, but a ſhewing foorth of the Lords death till he come; who ſeeth not, that it ought oftner then once or twice in the yeere to bee receiued, ſeeing the death of Chriſt ought continually to be remembred, and ſhewed foorth. 1.Cor.11.25.

3. Therefore Auguſtine doth boldly reprehend their cuſtome, that content themſelues with once receiuing in the yeere: Si panis quotidianus eſt, cur poſt annum illum ſumas? accipe quotidie, quod quotidie tibi proſit: If it be thy daily bread, why doeſt thou take it but yeerely? take that daily and continually, which may profit thee daily: In Luc.ſerm.28.

Can. Apoſtolor.9. Quoties ingrediuntur Eccleſiam, & audiunt ſcripturas, communicare debent: People as often as they enter into the Church, and heare Scripture, ought to communicate.

Eliberin.can.1. Nec inter fideles connumerabitur, qui in iſtis temporibus Paſcha, Pentecoſte, Natali Domini non communicauerit: He is not to be counted amongſt the faithfull, which doth not communicate at Eaſter, Pentecoſt, and the Natiuitie. This is more, then once in the yeere.

Laſtly, we haue the witnes of their owne Canons: Decret.p.3.diſt.2.c.3. Quotidie Euchariſtiæ communionem percipere, &c. To receiue the Communion euery day, I neither praiſe nor diſpraiſe it: Singulis diebus dominicis, &c. But euery Lords day, to communicate I perſwade and exhort: This very ſentence is rehearſed and approued by the Maſter, lib.4.diſt.12.h. Ibid.c.14. Quia ſemper pecco, ſemper habere debeo medicinam: Becauſe I alwaies ſinne, I had neede alwaies of the remedie: he ſpeaketh of the Communion. And Canon 16. Fabianus thus decreeth, Si non frequentius, &c. If not oftner, yet at the leaſt thrice in the yeere let euery lay man communicate. Can.18. Si quis intrat in Eccleſiam Dei,&c. If a man enter into the Church, and heare the Scriptures, and of wantonneſſe turneth himſelfe from the Sacrament, let him be caſt out of the Church. This Canon enioyneth receiuing of the Sacrament, ſo often as they come to the Church: Ibid.c.19.Seculares,&c. Secular men, that doe not receiue thrice in the yeere, let them not be counted amongſt Catholikes.

Epiſt.ad Epheſios.
Apolog.2.

Touching both theſe points. 1. For the cuſtome of the Greeke Church it ſeemeth that they had a frequent vſe of the Euchariſt: Ignatius ſaith, Feſtinate ad Euchariſtiam accedere, quando enim aſſidue hoc agitur,&c. Make ye haſt to come to the Euchariſt: when this is continually done the power of Sathan is expelled: Iuſtinus ſheweth, that vpon euery Sunday, as he calleth it, bread, water and wine were offered to the congregation. And it ſeemeth alſo likely, that they did not ſo ſtrictly obſerue a faſt when they receiued the Sacrament: becauſe the Lords day was held generally to bee no a fit day to faſt in, wherein they vſually receiued.

a Ignatius ad Philadelph. ſaith, that hee which faſted vpon the Lords day, was to be held as though he were Chriſti interfector, a killer of Chriſt.

2 Tertullian ſheweth that in his time, that they receiued the Euchariſt, Et in tempore victus,&c. etiam antelucanis horis: Both in the time of their victuals, and betimes in the morning before day: ſee Auguſtine before alleaged both concerning often receiuing, and whether the ſame ſhould bee done faſting: the Æthiopians doe ſometime receiue euery day, but euery one at the leaſt twice in the weeke.

Zaga Zabo apud Damian. a Goes de Morib. Æthiop.

3 Bullinger. Domi potius aliquid edat, qui pro corporis imbecillitate ieiunus,&c. Let him rather eate ſomewhat at home, who by reaſon of the weakeneſſe of his body, cannot ſtay faſting vntill the end of the communion.

Confeſſ.of Auſpurg.c.10. This kinde of Maſſe (ſo they call the communion) is vſed euery holy day, and other dayes alſo, if any be deſirous to vſe the Sacrament,&c.

Ibid. p.427.

Engliſh confeſſ.artic.11. That by the often receiuing of the Sacrament, wee may daily renew the memorie thereof,&c. The Church of England enioyneth euery one admitted to the communion, to receiue at the leaſt thrice euery yeere, but they may, and doe in moſt places, receiue oftner, and in ſome congregations once in a moneth.

4 See the decrees for both theſe points alleaged before.

THE EIGHTH QVESTION, OF RECEIVING the Sacrament in one kinde.

The Papiſts.

26.Error.

CHriſtians (ſay they) are not bound by any commandement of God, to receiue the Sacrament in both kindes, Concil.Trident.ſeſſ.21.can.1. And whoſoeuer ſaith, that the Church hath erred or done amiſſe, in decreeing that lay men and the Clergie not ſaying Maſſe, ſhould receiue in the one kinde, that is bread onely; or that it is lawfull for them to communicate in both, contrarie to the determination of the Church: let him be accurſed, Concil.Trident.ſeſſ.21.can.2.Rhemiſt.Iohn 6.ſect.11. Bellarmin.lib.4.de Euchariſt.cap.20.

1.Ioh.4.3.

Argum.1. Chriſt is all and whole in euery part of the Sacrament, his blood by a certaine concomitancie is in the bread, and his fleſh by the like concomitancie is in the cup, and his ſoule and diuinitie by the ſame concomitancie in them both, for otherwiſe Chriſt ſhould be deuided: but euery ſpirit, ſaith the Apoſtle, that diſſolueth Ieſus is not of God, 1.Iohn 4.3. Wherefore hee that receiueth in one kinde, is as well partaker of whole Chriſt, and of the full grace and effect of the Sacrament, as if he receiued in both, Bellarm.cap.21.

Iohn 6.57.

Againe, Chriſt ſaith, Iohn 6.57. He that eateth me, ſhall liue by me; but Chriſt is eaten onely vnder the forme of bread, Ergo, vnder the forme of bread, whole Chriſt, not his bodie onely is preſent, Bellarmin.ibid.

Rom.6.9.

And further, he obiecteth that place, Rom.6.9. Chriſt being raiſed from the dead dieth no more: but if his fleſh were in the Sacrament without his blood, then ſhould it be a dead body without life, and ſo Chriſt ſhould die ſtill, ibid.

Anſwere.1. We denie any ſuch concomitancie of the blood and fleſh of Chriſt in the Sacrament: for he is not in his carnall preſence with his very fleſh and blood there included, as wee haue ſhewed before: the bread and wine are ſignes onely of his body and blood, and therefore Chriſt is not diuided, they being the ſignes onely, and not the thing ſignified.

2 The place alleaged out of S.Iohn is greatly abuſed and corrupted by them, while they chuſe rather to follow their olde blinde Latine tranſlation, then the authenticall Greeke text: the words in the originall are, Euery ſpirit that confeſſeth not Ieſus Chriſt: not, euery ſpirit that diſſolueth: And this may appeare to be the true reading, by the oppoſition in the former verſe, Euery ſpirit that confeſſeth Ieſus, is of God: therefore this is the beſt reading, Euery ſpirit that confeſſeth not Ieſus: as being ſet oppoſite and contrarie to the other verſe. Againe, the Rhemiſts vnderſtand this place after their owne reading of the diſſoluing of the humanity and diuinity of Chriſt; not of any ſuch ſeparation of the fleſh and blood of Chriſt, as Bellarmine ſuppoſeth.

3 Our Sauiour in the ſixth of Iohn ſpeaketh not of the ſacramentall, but of the ſpiritual eating; and ſo indeed ſpiritually it is all one to eate and drinke Chriſt: for euery one that eateth ſacramentally doth not liue by him, ſeeing that the wicked may be partakers of the Sacrament. And againe, if they will haue this chapter vnderſtood of the Sacrament, then where Chriſt ſaith, verſ.53. Except ye eate the fleſh of the ſonne of man, and drinke his blood, ye haue no life in you, there is an abſolute neceſſitie impoſed, to receiue in both kindes, both ſacramentally to eate Chriſt, and to drinke Chriſt. We cannot deſire a more direct place againſt them. Iohn 6.53.

4 To the place, Rom.6. we anſwere: firſt, that Chriſts fleſh is not really and corporally preſent, and therefore the argument followeth not that Chriſt ſhould haue a dead bodie without blood: the blood and fleſh of Chriſt remaine vndiuided in his glorious bodie in heauen, yet may be repreſented apart in the Sacrament. Secondly, they themſelues offering vp Chriſt in the ſacrifice of the Maſſe for remiſſion of ſinnes, as they blaſphemouſly ſay, doe conſequently affirme that Chriſt dieth againe, ſeeing the Apoſtle ſaith, That without ſhedding of blood there is no remiſſion, Heb.9.22. contrarie to the place alleaged out of the Apoſtle, That henceforth Chriſt dieth no more. Rom.6.9. Rom.6.9. Heb.9.22.

5 This their deuice therefore of concomitancie ouerthwarteth the inſtitution of Chriſt: Firſt, hee ſaith, The bread is his bodie, the wine his blood: but by their rule, the bread is his blood, and the wine his bodie.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that they ſay not, The bread is his blood, and the wine his bodie, but that vnder the forme of bread, there is his bodie with the blood, and vnder the forme of wine, the blood in the bodie.

Contra. Firſt, be it granted, that the blood of Chriſt is in the bread, yet how can any man be ſaid to drinke it in bread? We vſe to eate bread, not to drink bread: his blood therefore cannot be there, becauſe it cannot be drunke there. Secondly, we vrge his owne words: that Sub ſpecie panis repræſentatur corpus à ſanguine ſeparatum, &c. That vnder the forme of bread, there is repreſented the bodie ſeparated from the blood, cap.21. But there is no other preſence of Chriſts bodie, but by way of repreſentation: Ergo, the bodie is preſent without the blood, and the blood without the bodie Sacramentally. Arguments againſt the popiſh deuice of concomitancie.

Secondly, whereas Chriſt ſeuerally conſecrated the bread, ſaying, This is my bodie, and the cuppe, ſaying, This is my blood; if then both Chriſts bodie and blood were receiued ſacramentally in one kinde, Chriſt had ſuperfluouſly and in vaine diſtinguiſhed them.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſt diſtinguiſhed the ſignes, to repreſent his death and paſſion thereby; but therefore it followeth not, that his bodie and blood ſhould be ſeparated or diſtinguiſhed: as one may picture a mans head in one table, his bodie in another; and yet both ſhall be together ſtill. Bellarm. ibid. c.21.

Contra. Firſt, if Chriſts death is repreſented both by eating the bread and drinking the cup; as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1.Cor.11.26. then where either of them is omitted, Chriſts death is not repreſented; and ſo conſequently, there is no Sacrament. Secondly, we make no reall diſtinction of Chriſts bodie and blood, as we grant no ſuch reall preſence; and therefore it is a beggerly ſhift, ſo often to inculcate the thing moſt in queſtion betweene vs: the head and feete ſunderly pictured, are ſpiritually and figuratiuely diſcerned, though in act not diuided; and ſo are Chriſts bodie and blood ſacramentally diſtinguiſhed. 1.Cor.11.26.

Thirdly, Chriſt ſaith, This is my bodie, he ſaith not, This is my ſelfe; neither is the bodie and blood of Chriſt called Chriſt, God, and man: but if the bodie of Chriſt were there preſent with his ſoule and diuinitie, it might be ſaid, This is Chriſts ſoule and deitie, as well as, This is Chriſts bodie and blood.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſt ſaith not, This is I, but, This is my bodie, becauſe he would only expreſſe that, which is repreſented by that ſigne: and though we ſay not, that the bodie of the Lord is God and man; yet that, which lieth hid vnder the forme of bread, is God and man, ibid.

Contra. Firſt, if the bread only repreſent Chriſts bodie, then his bodie onely is there, for there is none other preſence but ſacramentally, and by way of repreſentation: and againe, who ſeeth not how he deſtroyeth the chiefe foundation of the reall preſence, by expounding theſe words, This is my bodie, that is, repreſenteth or ſignifieth my bodie. Secondly, he confeſſeth, that Chriſts bodie is not God and man; but, this is his bodie: Ergo, (This) contained vnder the forme of bread, is not God and man: and thus he hath well concluded againſt himſelfe, and confeſſed the greateſt idolatrie in the world, in worſhipping that which is not God.

And laſtly concerning this deuice of concomitancie: firſt, it is but a late inuention, taken vp by Thomas Aquinas, who liued about anno 1300. Secondly, it miſliketh ſome of their chiefe ſchoolemen: Durandus ſaith, That although the blood be in the conſecrated hoſt, non tamen eſt ibi ſacramentaliter, yet is it not there ſacramentally, becauſe the bread ſignifieth the bodie, not the blood; and the wine the bread, not the bodie: Durand. rational. lib.4.c.55.

Argum.2. The whole eſſence and reaſon of the Sacrament, is found in one kinde only: Ergo, the Sacrament may be receiued in one kinde. The propoſition he thus proueth; the eſſence of the Sacrament is to ſignifie, firſt, our ſpirituall nouriſhment: ſecondly, our vnion with Chriſt, and of the faithfull among themſelues: but both theſe are ſignified in either kinde; as of the firſt Chriſt ſaith, Ioh.6. My fleſh is meate indeed: of the ſecond the Apoſtle ſpeaketh We are one bodie, becauſe we are partakers of one bread, 1.Cor.10.17. the partaking only of the bread ſignifieth our myſticall vnion. Bellar. c.22. Iohn 6. 1.Cor.10.17.

Contra. Firſt, our ſpirituall food cannot fully be expreſſed, but in both kindes, becauſe our bodily John 6.55. refreſhing conſiſteth both of eating and drinking, and therefore our Sauiour ſaith, Ioh. 6.55. My fleſh is meate indeed, and my blood is drinke indeed. Yea, Bellarmine might haue remembred himſelfe what he ſaith elſewhere in theſe words, Quia Euchariſtia eſt cibus & potus ſpiritualis, &c. Becauſe the Euchariſt is ſpirituall meate and drinke, therefore it muſt be giuen vnder the forme of meate and drinke, cap. 10. ration. 5. And if in Scripture ſometime bread onely bee named; yet thereby, as by the more principall part, is ſignified the whole ſuſtenance of man, both of meate and drinke: as in the Lords prayer, Giue vs our daily bread, we pray not for bread only, but for drinke alſo, and what elſe needfull for our bodily ſuſtenance. Secondly, the vnion alſo of Chriſt and his members is not fully and ſufficiently expreſſed but in both kindes: for the cup is the communion of the blood of Chriſt; the bread 1. Cor. 10.16. the communion of the bodie of Chriſt, 1. Cor. 10.16. Wherefore as our perfite vnion with Chriſt conſiſteth not in the communion of his bodie only, but both of his bodie and blood; ſo this vnion is expreſſed and repreſented, in both the ſignes of the cup and the bread: And the Scripture alſo euidently deſcribeth this vnion, to be in partaking both of the ſame fleſh and blood, as Heb. 2.14. Heb. 2.14. Foraſmuch as the children were partakers of fleſh and blood, he himſelfe likewiſe tooke part with them. Thirdly, the vnion of the faithfull themſelues, though it be not the eſſentiall and principall ſignification of 1. Cor. 11.25. the Euchariſt, which is to be done in the remembrance of Chriſt, and to ſhew forth his death, 1. Cor. 11.25. but is inferred by way of conſequence and application; yet neither is this vnion amongſt our ſelues ſo ſignificantly expreſſed in one of the elements, as in both: firſt, becauſe as our communion with Chriſt is fully expreſſed in the bread and cup together, as I haue ſhewed; ſo our communion amongſt our ſelues, which is an effect, and conſequent of the other, cannot otherwiſe be fully ſignified. Act. 17.26. Secondly, as the Scripture deſcribeth our naturall vnion, by the partaking of the ſame blood, Act. 17. 26. he hath made of one blood all mankinde: ſo our ſpirituall coniunction is aſcribed both to the Epheſ. 2.13. blood and fleſh of Chriſt, Epheſ. 2.13. Now in Chriſt Ieſus, yee which were once a farre off, are made 14.15. neere by the blood of Chriſt, verſ. 14. which hath made of both one, &c. verſ. 15. in abrogating through his fleſh the hatred, &c. Thirdly, though the Apoſtle giueth inſtance only of the bread, in ſaying, We 1. Cor. 10.17. are one bodie and one bread, becauſe we are partakers of one bread, 1. Cor. 10.17. yet hereof it followeth not, that the bread and wine together doe not more fully expreſſe the vnion of the faithfull, then either of them apart, ſeeing that the Apoſtle in ſetting foorth our communion with Chriſt, made mention of them both, verſ. 16.

Argum. 3. There is no ſpirituall fruite receiued by both kindes, that is not receiued by one: for it ſhould be either in reſpect of the ſignes, or of the thing ſignified and contained in the ſignes: but in neither reſpect is there more fruite: Firſt, to receiue both the ſignes profiteth not more, then to receiue one; as in Baptiſme, to be thrice dipped, is no more, then to be waſhed but once. Secondly, the thing contained being Chriſt, hee being twice in the ſame inſtant receiued, profiteth no more, then once; for then three ſups of the chalice ſhould be better then one. Bellarm. cap. 23.

Contra. Firſt, the more ſpirituall fruite which ariſeth by communicating in both kinds, rather then in one, is both in reſpect of the ſignes and the thing ſignified taken together: And his inſtance of thrice dipping in Baptiſme is nothing like, becauſe that it is not warranted by the inſtitution, and cōmandement of Chriſt concerning Baptiſme, as the vſing of bread and wine is preſcribed in the Euchariſt: And againe the thrice dipping, is a repeating and iterating of the ſame thing: but to eate the bread, and drinke the cup, are two diuers things. Secondly, the things ſignified (for things contained, in the popiſh ſenſe vnder the formes of bread and wine, we acknowledge none other but the ſubſtances of them) are not one, but diuers, the bodie and blood of Chriſt: and therefore the inſtance of the three ſups of the chalice is ridiculous and not to the purpoſe, which is but a ſuperfluous and ſuperſtitious repetition of the ſame action; but hee which receiueth bread and wine, as hee doth two ſeuerall actions, ſo ſpiritually he is made partaker of two diuers things, namely, of Chriſts bodie and blood: wherefore let him keepe his three ſups of the chalice to himſelfe, and aske his ignorant Italian Maſſe-prieſts the reaſon, why three ſups rather then one or two ſhould be good for the chin-cough.

Thirdly, that there ariſeth no more ſpirituall fruite by one element then by both, is contrarie to the 1. Cor. 11.26. Scripture. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith, that by eating and drinking both, we do ſhew the Lords death, 1. Cor. 11.26. not by ſeeing only and beholding, as Bellarmine is not aſhamed herein to contradict the Apoſtle: the Lords death then is ſhewed, and our faith thereby confirmed by vſing both. Secondly, John 6.55. Ioh. 6.55. our Sauiour ſaith, My fleſh is meate indeed, and my blood is drinke indeed: So then, as meate is not ſo profitable to the bodie without drinke, as both together; ſo neither is the ſpirituall meate without the ſpirituall drinke. Thirdly, if the bread alone be as effectuall, as the bread and cup together, then Chriſt commanded a ſuperfluous thing, in giuing it in charge vnto vs to vſe them both.

I will here oppoſe the iudgement of their great ſchoole-man Alexand. Hales, who ſaith that the receiuing vnder both kinds is maioris meriti, of greater merit, both in reſpect of faith more dilated, &c. and ſumptionis completioris, more complete receiuing: Alexand. Alenſ. qu. 53.

Argum. 4. Moſt of the figures and types of the Euchariſt doe ſignifie the receiuing in one kinde: as the Tree of life in Paradiſe, whereunto no water was ioyned; the Paſchall Lambe which was eaten; Manna, Exod. 16. the Shewbread, Leuit. 24.5. Leuit. 24.5. the ſacrifices whereof the Prieſts did eate, but the drinke offerings were not taſted of, but powred out before the Lord. Bellarm. cap. 24. argum. 1.

Anſ.

Anſw. Firſt, arguments drawne from types and figures conclude not, vnleſſe they be, Typi deſtinati, Types ordained of God to ſuch vſe: neither are the Sacraments of the Goſpell to be ſquared out according to the paterne of the ceremonies of the Law: We alſo denie that the ceremonies and rites of the Law, as the Paſchall Lambe, Manna, and the reſt, are figures and types of our Sacraments; but both their Sacraments and ours are figures and repreſentations of Chriſt, as S. Peter calleth Baptiſme, ἀντίτυπον, a figure correſpondent, or anſwering vnto Noah his Arke, 1.Pet.3.21.

1.Pet.3.21.

Secondly, the figures propounded doe rather make for the Communion in both kindes: In Paradiſe, as there was a Tree of life, ſo there was a riuer to water the garden, Geneſ.2.10. And therefore Apocal.22.1,2. the celeſtiall Paradiſe is deſcribed according to the paterne of the terreſtriall, to haue both a Tree of life and a riuer of cleere water: In the Paſſe-ouer as the Lambe was eaten, ſo the blood was ſprinckled vpon the doore poſts: And at the ſame time, that the Iſraelites dranke water out of the rocke, Exod.17. they did alſo eate Manna, which was giuen them euery day from heauen: The Shewbread maketh not for them, for it was lawfull only for the Prieſts to eate thereof; but they will not ſay, that the Prieſts onely are to eate the hoaſt, for they giue it to the people: the Sacrifices likewiſe with the drinke offerings ſerue not their turne, for neither did the Prieſts taſte of the drinke offerings; and by this reaſon the cup ſhould be denied as well to their Prieſts, as to their lay people.

Geneſ.2.10.
Apocal.22.1,2.

Thirdly, we haue Types of both kindes to be receiued together, as Melchiſedech brought foorth bread and wine together, Geneſ.14. And whereas he anſwereth, that this type for both kindes maketh not againſt them, as the other types for one kinde make againſt vs, becauſe they doe not vrge the neceſſitie of one kinde, as we doe of both: we replie firſt, that the types alleaged make not at all againſt receiuing in both kindes, as I haue ſhewed. Secondly, the types are not contrarie one to another, if ſome of them ſhew both kindes, how can the other ſerue for one kinde? Thirdly, if it be not neceſſarie to receiue in one kinde, it is not to be done at all: for either it is agreeable to the inſtitution of Chriſt to receiue in one kinde, or diſagreeable: if it be agreeable and preſcribed, it is of neceſſitie to be obſerued: if it be not preſcribed, it is of neceſſitie not to be vſed at all.

Fourthly, what though the types ſome of them ſhew the Sacramentall bread only, ſome the Sacramentall cup; yet theſe may be ioyned in the ſubſtance and bodie, which are ſeparated in the figure and ſhadow: as the prophecies of Chriſts paſſion and the manner thereof, are not found in one place: as, Ye ſhall not breake a bone of him, is found Exod.12. They pearced my hands and my feete, Pſalm.22. They ſhall looke vpon him, whom they pearced, Zachar.12.10. Doth it therefore follow, that theſe things ſhould not be fulfilled at one inſtant? ſo though ſome types only ſhould ſignifie the eating of bread, as Manna; ſome the cup, as the water out of the rocke: yet theſe things ſeuered in the figure, may be ioyned together in the thing figured.

*Argum.*5. Luk.24.30. Chriſt brake bread to his Diſciples: Act.2.42. The Apoſtles brake bread: Ergo, to communicate in one kinde is grounded vpon the example of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, Bellarmin.lib.4.de Euchariſt.c.24, Rhemiſt. Ioh.6.11. And Chriſt ſaith, Whoſoeuer ſhall eate this bread, ſhall liue for euer, Ioh.6.58. Ergo, it is ſufficient to receiue in one kinde.

Luke 24.30.
Act.2.42.
Ioh.6.58.

Anſw. Firſt, to the two firſt places, we ſay, that it is not neceſſarie to vnderſtand the breaking of bread in the Sacrament: but the vſuall bread rather, which was accuſtomed in their daily repaſts and feaſts after thankſgiuing to be broken. Or, if we take it for the Sacrament, the breaking of bread is by a Synecdoche taken for the whole myſterie, as it is an vſual phraſe of ſpeech in Scripture: for otherwiſe wee will conclude as well, that Chriſt and the Apoſtles did but conſecrate in one kinde, which they hold for a great abſurditie, as that the other receiued but in one kinde: But their opinion is, that although the people muſt communicate in one kinde only, yet the Prieſt muſt conſecrate in both, *Rhemiſt annot.Ioh.6.ſect.*11.

Bellarmine here anſwereth, that the Apoſtles did conſecrate in both kindes, but they miniſtred to the people only in one; for it is like that many of them were Nazarites, and ſo would not drinke wine contrarie to their vow. *reſp. ad ration.*3.

Contra. Firſt, Bellarmine a little before ſpeaking of that place, Luke 24. how our Sauiour brake bread to the two Diſciples in Emaus, ſaith, Nullum locum benedicendo,&c. That no place is left in the ſtorie for the bleſſing or diſtribution of the cup: ſo that in his opinion Chriſt did not conſecrate in both kindes: as Chriſt did there, ſo doe the Apoſtles here. Secondly, as here the Apoſtles brake bread, ſo likewiſe S. Paul, Act.20.7. but he miniſtred in both kinds, as he writeth to the Corinthians, 1.Cor.11.26. but the Apoſtles were not contrarie one to another: therefore they alſo at Ieruſalem miniſtred in both kindes. Thirdly, it might be, that ſome of the congregation were Nazarites, but not all, for the whole number was three thouſand, Act.2.4. and the vow of the Nazarites did hold but for a time; for S. Paul alſo had a vow, and yet receiued in both kindes. Act.18.18.

Act.20.7.
1.Cor.11.26.
Act.2.4.
Act.18.18.

2. To the ſecond place we anſwere: Firſt, it is not vnderſtood of the ſacramentall eating of Chriſt, but of the ſpirituall manducation of him, which may bee done without a Sacrament: For whoſoeuer eateth this bread, ſhall liue for euer: but whoſoeuer eateth the Sacrament, ſhall not liue for euer. Secondly, ſeeing the eating and drinking of Chriſt are ſo often ioyned in this chapter, as verſ.53.55.56. they might well know, that drinking is here to be vnderſtood, though it be not expreſſed.

*Argum.*3. In many countries there is no wine to be had, as in the cold Northerly countries: and therefore they cannot communicate according to the inſtitution: whereupon that there might bean vniformitie in all Churches, it is moſt meete that where wine may be had, they ſhould nothwithſtanding be content to receiue it in one kinde, Bellarm.cap.28. Alſo there may ariſe much inconuenience in granting the cup to the people, as in ſpilling and ſhedding the wine, which after conſecration is the blood of Chriſt, Rhemiſt.annot.Ioh.6.ſect.11.

Anſw.1. As in ſome countries there is no wine to be had, ſo we finde that in certaine places and regions of the world there is no bread, ſuch as Chriſt vſed, made of wheate or the like graine; as in ſome places amongſt the Weſt Indians they haue a certaine kinde of bread made of rootes, called Cazabi, as Benzo witneſſeth. Wherefore by this reaſon of vniformitie, wee ſhould not communicate at all, either in bread or wine, ſeeing that as ſome countries are deſtitute of wine, ſo other are of bread: but all this notwithſtanding, the Sacrament may bee duly adminiſtred in all places in both kindes: And where they haue neither bread nor wine, neither can poſſibly prouide them, they may ſafely vſe ſuch other elements, as doe ſtand them in the like ſtead; as in the place of bread, that which commeth neereſt to the vſe thereof: and for wine, ſome other precious liquour, that is to be had, as in Ruſſia, in ſtead of wine, they vſe a certaine drinke like vnto that which we call Metheglen: and the Æthiopians vſe the liquour of Raiſons ſteeped in water. Lib.1.cap.27.

2. As for the other reaſons of the inconueniences in ſpilling the wine, ſhaking the cup, the hanging of it on mens beards, and other ſuch friuolous allegations: as they were no let or hinderance, why Chriſt notwithſtanding did not inſtitute the Sacrament in both kindes, and the Church accordingly obſerued it, as wee reade, the Corinthians did communicate in both kindes; ſo ought they to bee no reaſon, why Chriſtians ſhould not receiue in both kindes now.

The Proteſtants.

WE hold it to be an Antichriſtian practiſe of the Church of Rome, to take away from the people the cup in the Sacrament: for although they ſometime miniſter the cup to the people, yet they vſe no conſecration ouer it, neither giue it as any part of the Sacrament: Fulk.annot.1.Cor.4.10.ſect.4. They doe therefore offer great wrong to the people of God, in depriuing them of the one halfe of the Communion.

Iohn 6.53. Argum.1. Ioh.6.53. Chriſt ſaith, Except you eate the fleſh of the Sonne of man, and drinke his blood, you haue no life in you. Here wee ſee both eating and drinking are ioyned together: Ergo, Chriſtians ought to doe both. This place maketh ſtrongly againſt our aduerſaries, who doe expound it of the ſacramentall eating and drinking of Chriſt.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, theſe words of our Sauiour Chriſt doe binde vs onely to the taking and receiuing of Chriſts bodie and blood, they enioyne not the manner of receiuing them, whether vnder one kinde or both, Bellarm.lib.4.de Euchar.cap.25.

Contra. If theſe words be vnderſtood of the ſacramentall eating and drinking of Chriſt, as the Ieſuite ſaith, they are: then muſt Chriſt be receiued ſacramentally vnder both kindes: ſpiritually to eate and drink Chriſt, it is all one; but his bodie cannot be ſacramentally eaten, but in bread, nor his blood ſacramentally drunke but in wine: for we are ſaid to eate, not to drinke bread.

Bellarmine 2. The words are to be read disiunctiuely, Except ye eate the fleſh, &c. (and) that is, (or) drinke the blood of Chriſt, as it is read Act.3.5. ſiluer, and, that is, or, gold haue I none. Act.3.5.

Contra. Firſt, it followeth not, (and) is taken for (or) in ſome places of Scripture, therefore in all it is ſo to be taken, as in this. Secondly, the example alleaged is nothing like, for whether we ſay, ſiluer and gold haue I not, or, ſiluer or gold, &c. it is no materiall or ſubſtantiall point of faith: but here is a condition of ſaluation annexed, except ye eate, and drinke, &c. ye haue no life in you: wherefore we muſt not dally thus in ſo waightie matters of our ſaluation, with (and) and (or). Thirdly, where Chriſt ſaith, Ioh.3. Except a man be borne of water and the ſpirit, he cannot enter into the kingdome of heauen, he may as well ſay, that and here is taken for or, and ſo either of them ſhall be ſufficient, as to be borne of water without the ſpirit. Laſtly, to admit your disiunction, (though this be a new Grammarian tricke to put a coniunction for a disiunction) then it followeth, that either may ſuffice, to eate Chriſts bodie, or drinke his blood in the Sacrament: and ſo conſequently, as you preſume to giue the bread without the cup, ſo the cup may be vſed without the bread. Iohn 3.

Bellarm.3. This precept is giuen to the whole Church; yet it is ſufficient if it be performed by ſome onely in the Church, that is the Miniſters: ſo that precept is generall giuen in the creation, Encreaſe, and multiplie: yet all are not therefore bound vnto procreation.

Contra. Firſt, the example is nothing like: for the precept or libertie rather of procreation is not laid vpon men with any ſuch neceſſitie, as this commandement of eating and drinking Chriſts bodie, and blood is; which whoſoeuer doth not, periſheth, verſe 53. Secondly, the precept is generall, becauſe the danger of periſhing, or not hauing life in tranſgreſſing the ſame is generall: Whoſoeuer doth not ſo eate and drinke Chriſt, periſheth: Ergo, it belongeth to all to eate and drinke Chriſt.

Argum.2. Chriſt inſtituted the Sacrament in both kindes, giuing charge and commandement to all Chriſtians in the ſame manner to celebrate it: for he ſaith, Drinke yee all of this. If our aduerſaries anſwere, as they doe, that this was ſpoken to the Apoſtles: firſt, by the like reaſon they may ſay alſo, that when Chriſt ſaid, Take, eate, he ſpake vnto his Apoſtles, and ſo the people ſhould neither receiue bread and wine, but the Miniſters only.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſt indeed gaue the whole Sacrament in both kindes only to his Apoſtles, yet he forbiddeth not, but that it may be giuen to the people alſo: yea he commandeth it, in ſaying, Hoc facite, Doe this.

Contra. Bellarmine here hath made a good argument againſt himſelfe: for Chriſt ſaith, Doe this, not onely after the breaking of the bread, but the giuing of the cuppe alſo, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, 1.Cor.11.24.25. Wherefore if it be a commandement from Chriſt to miniſter the Sacrament in both kindes, it is great impietie in them to withhold either: for they may as well withhold the bread as the cup; and as well both, as one: and ſo the people ſhould haue no Sacrament at all.

1.Cor.11.24. 25.

Secondly, Chriſt ſaith after the cup, Drinke yee all of this: but after giuing of the bread, hee ſaith not, Eate yee all of this: ſo that our Sauiour as it were did foreſee, that the cup ſhould be denied to ſome, and therefore directly commandeth that to be vſed of all.

Bellarmine here telleth vs, that though the Euangeliſts haue not theſe words, eate ye all of this, yet by tradition it is certaine, that Chriſt ſpake them.

Contra. Thus he holdeth the Scriptures imperfect, and maketh blinde traditions of equall authoritie with them: thus adding to the Scriptures, not regarding the great curſe laid vpon all ſuch, that God will adde vnto them plagues, &c. Apocal.22.18.

Apocal.22.18.

Argum.3. Our Sauiour ſaith after the giuing of the cup, This is my blood, which is ſhed for you, and for many: wherefore the blood of Chriſt muſt bee giuen to all thoſe, for whom it was ſhed; and ſo conſequently to lay-men alſo.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that Chriſt died for all men, euen Turkes, Iewes, Infidels: and by this reaſon, if his blood ſhould be giuen to all, for whom it was ſhed, euen Turkes and Iewes alſo ſhould be admitted to the Communion: for the proofe of the firſt part, he alleageth 1.Corinth.15. Coloſſ.1. 1.Ioh.2.

1 Cor.15.22.
Coloſſ.1.20.

Contra. Firſt, that Chriſts death is ſufficient for all the world, if all could beleeue in him, wee willingly acknowledge: but that Chriſt died effectually for all, theſe places proue not, but onely for the elect. Saint Paul ſaith, 1.Cor.15.22. As in Adam all die, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made aliue: If all men generally be here vnderſtood, and not the vniuerſall companie of the elect only; then all men indeed ſhould be made aliue by Chriſt, and ſo be ſaued. Againe, Coloſſ.1.20. He hath reconciled all things in heauen and in earth: If he will vrge theſe words (all things) ſtrictly according to the letter, then Chriſt muſt haue died for all creatures: wherefore the Apoſtle by all things in earth, vnderſtandeth all nations both Iewes and Gentiles, as he expoundeth it, verſ.21. You, which were ſtrangers, hath he reconciled, &c. And where S.Iohn ſaith, 1.Epiſt.2.2. that Chriſt died for the ſins of the whole world: he is not contrary to himſelfe, who teſtifieth thus of Chriſt, Ioh.17.9. I pray not for the world: if Chriſt prayeth not for the world, much leſſe did he die for the world: wherefore by the world is ſignified the vniuerſall companie of the elect. Secondly, that Chriſt died onely to ſaue the elect, it is euident by theſe places of Scripture: Ioh.17.19. For their ſakes ſanctifie I my ſelfe: which his ſanctifying was in offring himſelfe vp in ſacrifice to God his Father. Epheſ.5.25. He gaue himſelfe for his Church: Coloſſ.1.24. I fulfill the reſt of the afflictions of Chriſt in my fleſh for his bodies ſake, which is the Church: All Chriſts ſufferings both in his owne perſon, and in his members, are for the ſame companie and bodies ſake: but his ſufferings in his members are for the Church, as here the Apoſtle ſaith, and for the elects ſake: 2.Timoth.2.10. I ſuffer all things for the elects ſake, that they might obtaine ſaluation in Chriſt: Ergo, Chriſts ſufferings in his owne perſon are only for the elect. But of this matter hereafter we ſhall haue better occaſion to entreate at large: to which place I referre the reader. Thirdly, this rather is a good argument to proue that Chriſts blood was not ſhed for all, becauſe the Sacrament of his blood muſt not be giuen to all: For to whom the thing ſignified belongeth, the ſigne doth much more: as our Sauiour reaſoneth, Mark.10.verſ.14. Suffer little children to come vnto me, &c. for of ſuch is the kingdome of God. Chriſt toucheth, and bleſſeth children, becauſe they had intereſt in Chriſts kingdome: ſo the bleſſing of the Sacrament belongeth to them, that haue intereſt in Chriſts blood.

Argum.4. Our Sauiour ſaith, Hoc facite, Doe this, &c. in the miniſtring of the Sacrament wee muſt doe as Chriſt did: but he gaue the bread, and ſimiliter, likewiſe the cup, Luk.21.20. hee gaue the one in like manner as the other: Ergo, ſo muſt the Miniſters of Chriſt doe now, diſtribute both to the people.

Luke 21.20.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that S.Luke hath not, Hoc facite, Doe this, after the giuing of the cup, but only after the bread.

Contra. But S.Paul ſetteth downe, Hoc facite, Doe this, after the cup alſo, 1.Cor.11.25. and both S.Lukes Goſpell and S.Pauls Epiſtle are of one and the ſame authoritie. Now where Bellarmine putteth a difference in S.Pauls words, that ſpeaking of the bread, he ſaith, Doe this in remembrance of me: but after the cup, Doe this, as oft as you drinke it, in remembrance of me: who ſeeth not his ridiculous fondnes herein, making a difference, where there is none at all?

1.Cor.11.25.

Secondly, ſaith he, hee did not giue the cup, ſimiliter, in like manner, as the bread, for hee brake the bread, ſo did he not the cup: and of the bread, it is ſaid, he gaue it, but of the cup, likewiſe he tooke it, not, likewiſe he gaue it, 1.Cor.11. Ergo, the cup was not giuen in like manner, Bellar, reſponſ. ad argum.3.

1.Cor.11.

Contra. Firſt, Bellarmine profeſſing himſelfe a Maſter in his ſect, may be aſhamed thus to palter, as though in euery thing, wee ſaid the cup was giuen like to the bread: for the bread is broken, and eaten;
Luke 21.17. the wine is diuided, and not broken, as S. Luke himſelfe ſaith, preuenting this cauill, verſ.17. but in the action of giuing, bleſſing, receiuing, they are alike. Secondly, neither S. Luke, nor S. Paul ſay, likewiſe he tooke the cup, but thus only likewiſe the cup: ſo that the word, take, or giue, may be indifferently ſupplied out of the words going before: and yet S. Marke ſaith directly, that hee gaue the cup Mark.14.23. alſo, chap. 14.23. We ſee what goodly ſtuffe here is.

Argum.5. S. Paul writing to all the faithfull at Corinthus, deliuereth this as a tradition and commandement from Chriſt, that they ſhould receiue in both kindes: ſaying, Hoc facite, Doe this: and 1.Cor.11.28. verſ.28. Let a man examine himſelfe, and ſo eate, &c. and drinke. But the tradition of Chriſt and his Apoſtles muſt not be tranſgreſſed. Ergo.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that Saint Paul, verſ.28. doth not bid them eate, &c. and drinke, but onely preſcribeth a way, how they ſhould doe it profitably, when they did eate, &c. and drinke. Secondly, he denieth that this tradition of the Apoſtle is a precept. Thirdly, hee denieth that this epiſtle was written to all the faithfull at Corinthus; ſo that the doctrine therein ſhould concerne them all.

Contra. Firſt, S. Paul, verſ.28. doth both bid them examine themſelues, and that done he doth bid them eate and drinke: and though wee could not finde a precept in the Apoſtles words, yet that is a precept of Chriſts rehearſed by the Apoſtle twice, Hoc facite, Doe this, verſ.24.25. Secondly, if this 1.Cor.11.23. tradition of the Apoſtle binde not, neither is in the nature of a precept, where he ſaith, 1. Cor.11.23. I haue receiued of the Lord that, which I haue deliuered to you: then neither is that a binding and com-

Chriſt died for our ſinnes*; which hee vttereth in the ſame manner of ſpeech, and with the like authoritie from Chriſt; So that if this doctrine muſt be beleeued, that Chriſt died, &c. then the other tradition of receiuing in both kindes ought to be receiued. Againe, if the Apoſtles traditions binde, *Keepe he receiued from Chriſt? And is it not ſtrange, that we are driuen now to maintaine the authoritie of traditions againſt the Papiſts? Thirdly, it is falſe, that this epiſtle and the doctrine therein contained concerneth not all the faithfull at Corinthus, ſeeing the Apoſtle directeth his epiſtle to all the Saints

1.Cor.1.2. at Corinthus with all that call vpon the name of Ieſus.

Argum.6. The Prieſt that ſaith Maſſe, you allow to conſecrate and receiue in both kindes, becauſe he muſt expreſſe liuely the paſſion of Chriſt, and the ſeparation of his blood from his bodie in the ſame: Rhemiſt. annotat. Ioh.6.58. By the ſame reaſon all the communicants ought to receiue in both kindes, becauſe they doe all ſhew foorth the death of Chriſt, and ſhedding of his blood in the 1.Cor.11.16. Sacrament, 1. Cor.11.26.

Argum.7. This prohibition for lay men, not to receiue in both kindes, is but a late deuice of the Church of Rome, not paſt two hundred yeere old, decreed no longer agoe then in the Councell of Conſtance, Fox p.1150. Yet after that, the Councell of Baſile granted the vſe and libertie of the cup to the Bohemians, Fox p.694.

Thus they take vpon them to ouer-rule mens conſciences, now reſtraining, now againe granting libertie, binding and looſing at their pleaſure.

Tract.in Iohan.27. In Auguſtines time there was no ſuch ſeparation of the cup from the bread: but both were indifferently vſed in the Communion: Cum cibo & potu, ſaith he, id appetant homines vt neque eſuriant, neque ſitiant, hoc veraciter non praſtat, niſi iſte cibus & potus, &c. As men by their meate and drinke doe prouide, that they neither hunger nor thirſt: ſo this ſpirituall meate and drinke worketh the ſame effect in vs, &c. Whereupon it followeth, that ſeeing in the Sacrament is contained and ſignified the full and ſufficient nouriſhment of our ſoules by the fleſh and blood of Chriſt, it muſt needs be reſembled by the outward full ſufficient nouriſhment of our bodies, which is not by eating alone, but by eating and drinking.

See alſo the teſtimonie of Bernard of this matter, or who elſe is the author of thoſe ſermons: Audite fratres, non me, ſed Apoſtolum dicentem, calix benedictionis, nonne communicatio ſanguinis Chriſti? Calix, i. communicatio calicis, facit nos communionem quandam cum Chriſto; i. ſerm. Guerric.
Heare ye my brethren, not me, but the Apoſtle ſaying, the cup of bleſſing is it not the communication of the blood of Chriſt? ſo then the cup, that is the communicating, or partaking of the cuppe, doth ioyne vs in one communion with Chriſt, &c. If then the people of God, euen ſuch, as are of the lay ſort, haue one communion with Chriſt, the ſigne of that communion which is the cup, is not to bee denied them.

Concil. Matiſconenſ.2.4. Decernimus, vt omnibus diebus dominicis altaris oblatio ab omnibus offeratur tam panis, quam vini: Wee decree, that euery Lords day, the people doe make an oblation of bread and wine: that is, that they ſhould communicate in both, vt peccatorum ſuorum ſordibus careant, that they may be freed from their ſinnes.

Concil. Vormatienſ. can.31. Leproſis, ſi fideles Chriſtiani fuerint, dominici ſanguinis & corporis participatio tribuatur: Let leprous perſons, if they beleeue, communicate both the bodie and blood of Chriſt. Here is excepted no ſort or calling of men, if they be Chriſtians.

Let vs ſee their owne teſtimonie: Decret. par.3. diſtinct.2.c.7. Iulius: Seorſim panis, ſeorſim calicis commendatio memoratur: The bleſsing of the bread, and the bleſsing of commendation of the cup are ſunderly rehearſed. But moſt euidently, ibid.c.12. Gelaſius: Comperimus autem,&c. Wee finde, that ſome receiuing onely a portion of the ſacred bodie, doe abſtaine from the cup of blood, who either let them receiue, integra ſacramenta, the whole and entire Sacraments, or let them be kept from the whole: becauſe the diuiſion of one and the ſame myſterie cannot be done without great ſacriledge. Gelaſius here maketh no mention at all of conſecrating, but of receiuing in one kinde, which hee counteth great ſacriledge in whomſoeuer: his words are generall.

Likewiſe the Maſter, lib.5.diſtinct.11.f. rendreth a reaſon out of S. Ambroſe of receiuing in both kindes; Valet ad tuitionem animæ & corporis,&c. That which we receiue is auailable for the tuition both of the bodie and ſoule: for the fleſh of Chriſt is offered for the health of the bodie, his blood for our ſoules. But lay men haue ſoules to ſaue, as well as Prieſts: Ergo, they ought to receiue both Chriſts bodie, and blood. Some alſo of the Papiſts themſelues doe hold, that there ariſeth more ſpirituall fruit by receiuing in both kindes, than in one: Alexand. Alenſis in 4.par.ſumm.queſt.53.memb.1. Gaſpar. Caſſalius, lib. de cœna & calice, cap.25.

The holy Martyrs haue ſealed this truth: Iohn Philpot, pag.1820. Chriſt inſtituted nothing ſuperfluous; therefore you cannot ſay, that the whole effect of the Sacrament is as well in one kinde as in both: if it were, Chriſt would haue giuen but one kinde onely.

Pag. 1652.2.8.

Biſhop Cranmer holy Martyr: Chriſt ſaid, Drinke ye all of this: the Pope giueth a contrarie commandement to Chriſt, that the lay ſort ſhall not drinke of the cup of their ſaluation. Theophilus Alexandrinus ſaith, That if Chriſt had beene crucified for the diuels, his cup ſhould not haue beene denied them: Yet the Pope denieth the cup of Chriſt to Chriſtian people, Fox pag.1890.

Pag.1715.2.89

Now laſtly to adde the practiſe of other Churches. 1. Iuſtinus Martyr ſheweth, that it was the manner of the whole congregation to communicate both in bread and wine, meeting together vpon the Lords day: (We riſe vp altogether) and powre out our prayers,&c. and prayers being ended bread is offered, wine and water: and there is not one ancient father of the Greeke Church, that may not be produced as a witneſſe herein. And let this be noted, that the [a] Manichees firſt did vſe to miniſter the Sacrament in one kinde: And to this day the [b] Greekes doe miniſter in both kindes: ſo alſo doe the [c] Neſtorians, and [d] Iacobites.

THE NINTH QVESTION, OF THE adoration of the Eucharist.

The Papiſts.

It was decreed in the Councell of Trent, that the Euchariſt ſhould be adored euen with the higheſt degree of worſhip, (Cultu latreia) which is proper to God: that it ſhould alſo be caried about in ſolemne proceſsions, to be ſhewed to the people, to be worſhipped and adored of them. And whoſoeuer holdeth the contrarie, they pronounce accurſed, Trident. Concil. ſeſſ.13.can.6.

27.Error.

*Argum.*1. Heb.1.6. Worſhip him all ye Angels: Ergo, Chriſt in the Sacrament, and whereſoeuer elſe his perſon is, ought to be adored of men and Angels, Rhemiſt. ibid. This S. Paul meaneth, they ſay, by diſcerning the Lords bodie, 1.Cor.11.29. that is, adoring, worſhipping it, and making prayers vnto it, Rhemiſt. ibid.

Heb.1.6.

1.Cor.11.29.

Anſwere. Firſt, we denie Chriſt to be preſent in the Sacrament after a carnall manner and corporall preſence; therefore it is not to bee adored. Secondly, although the bodie of Chriſt were preſent in that manner vnder the accidents of bread and wine; yet vnleſſe Chriſt bee ſo preſent, that the elements or the accidents of the elements be ioyned and vnited vnto him in one perſon, as the Godhead and humanitie make but one perſon; hee is no more to be adored, then God the Father is to be worſhipped in the Sunne or Moone, in the which he is verily preſent. But to ſay that the viſible formes and elements are ioyned in an hypoſtaticall vnion to Chriſt, as his humanitie is to his Godhead, it is great blaſphemie. Thirdly, a reuerent eſtimation and diſcerning of the Lords bodie we grant in the Sacrament; in preferring the elements before all other meates and drinkes, becauſe of their myſticall ſignification, as we preferre the myſticall waſhing in Baptiſme before all other: but to kneele, hold vp the hands, and to worſhip a piece of bread, we count it groſſe and abominable Idolatrie.

Matth.4.10. Argum.2. Bellarmine. God is verily and truly to be worſhipped, Matth.4. Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God,&c. but Chriſt in the Euchariſt is very God: Ergo, verily in the Euchariſt to bee worſhipped, cap.29.

1.Cor.14.24. Anſwere. Firſt, all this we eaſily grant, that Chriſt is in the Euchariſt to be adored, ſo is he alſo in Baptiſme, and in the word preached, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, 1.Corinth.14.24. If all prophecie, if there come in one, that beleeueth not,&c. the ſecrets of his heart are made manifeſt, and ſo he will fall downe on his face, and worſhip God and ſay plainly that God is in you indeede. So we alſo, though wee denie that the Euchariſt is to be adored, yet we adore Chriſt in the Euchariſt, ſaying, We praiſe thee, we bleſſe thee, we worſhip thee, we glorifie thee,&c. Secondly, he ſhould haue aſſumed thus; but the Euchariſt is verie God, if hee would haue proued any thing: but it were blaſphemie ſo to ſay: for though wee ſhould grant the bodie of Chriſt verily to be preſent, yet is not the bodie of Chriſt God. And beſide, there are the formes of bread and wine remaining ſtill, which being creatures and not hypoſtatically ioyned to the perſon of Chriſt, cannot without great perill of Idolatrie be adored. Thirdly, to put all out of doubt, Chriſts fleſh is not bodily preſent, neither ſhall they be able, while they liue, to proue it: and therefore they haue no colour or ground at all of their adoration.

The Doway tranſlators would iuſtifie the eleuation of the Sacrament by the lifting vp of Moſes hands, when Ioſhua fought againſt Amalek, Exod. 17. and by the lifting vp of Chriſts hands, when he bleſſed his Diſciples: annot. in Exod. 17. v. 22.

1.Tim.2.8. Contra. 1. Who denieth but that it is both lawfull and commendable to vſe the eleuation of hands in prayer: as S. Paul ſaith: I will that the men pray, euerie where lifting vp pure hands,&c. And, that the lifting vp of hands may be vſed in benedictions: but this maketh not for the eleuation of the Euchariſt to be adored. 2. Moſes in deede lift vp his hands, but not to be adored: our bleſſed Sauiour was adored of his Diſciples, when he lift vp his hands to bleſſe them: and if the like preſence of Chriſt were in the Sacrament, it ſhould in like manner be adored,&c.

The Proteſtants.

THat the Sacrament is not to be adored with any godly worſhip, but onely to be duly reuerenced as an holy myſterie; thus we proue it by the word of God.

Argum.1. In the firſt inſtituting of the Sacrament, the Apoſtles receiued it ſitting, not kneeling, by taking of it, not lifting vp their hands to it: Ergo, they did not adore it, neither is it by vs to bee adored.

Againe, Chriſt commandeth vs, onely to Take, and eate and drinke, and to doe all in remembrance of him: the Sacrament therefore was appointed to be eaten and drunken, not to be caried about, or to be gazed vpon, or to be kneeled vnto.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that it was no maruell, that they worſhipped not the bodie of Chriſt inuiſibly preſent vnder the forme of bread, ſeeing they worſhipped not Chriſt himſelfe viſibly preſent at the Table: for it was now Supper time, neither could they at all times worſhip Chriſt, lib.4. cap.30.

*Contra.*1. Though the Apoſtles did not alwaies externally worſhip Chriſt, eſpecially being occupied in ciuill and common acts, as taking now their repaſt at Supper: yet there was now great occaſion offered, both in reſpect of this high religious act begun, the inſtitution of the Sacrament: and becauſe of this great and wonderfull worke in the tranſubſtantiating of the bread into Chriſts bodie. Now it had become them to haue fallen downe, and wondred, as Peter did at the taking of ſo many fiſh, Luke 5. 8. and Thomas did when hee thruſt his hand into Chriſts ſide: And though they were ſitting at ſupper, yet they might ſoone haue changed their geſture; eſpecially ſeeing the legall ſupper was finiſhed, and Chriſts ſupper begun. Therefore it is moſt like, that there was no adoration at all then intended.

Rom.14.23. Rom.10.17. Argum.2. S. Paul ſaith, Whatſoeuer is not of faith is ſinne, Rom.14.23. but the adoration of the Euchariſt is not of faith: for faith commeth by hearing of the word, Rom.10.17. but no where in the word are we taught, to adore the elements in the Euchariſt: Ergo, it is ſinne.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the word doth euidently teach that Chriſt is to be adored; and that he is in the Euchariſt, and therefore in the Euchariſt to be adored, c.30. reſp. ad argum.2.

Contra. Firſt, that Chriſt is to be adored as God and man, both in the Euchariſt, and euery where elſe, both of men and Angels, the Scripture teacheth, and we beleeue: but hereof it followeth not, that the Euchariſt it ſelfe is to be adored with diuine worſhip. Secondly, neither is it of faith, or by the word, that Chriſts bodie is preſent in the Sacrament corporally: for if it were of faith, it ſhould be plainly expreſſed in Scripture, as Saint Auguſtine ſaith: In ijs, quæ apertè in ſcripturis poſita ſunt, inueniuntur ea omnia, quæ continent fidem, moreſq; viuendi: In thoſe places, which are plainly ſet forth in Scripture, are all thoſe things found, that containe faith and manners, lib.2.de doctrin.Chriſtian.c.9. But that onely place, which they vrge, this is my bodie, though it bee to vs manifeſt and plaine, yet by their groſſe comment is made obſcure: and therefore according to their owne rule, In rebus obſcuris minimum eſt ſequendum: In obſcure things the leſſe and ſafeſt from danger is to be followed, *Bonif.8.regul.iuris.*30. But there is leſſe danger in not adoring at all; but in adoring there is perill and feare of idolatrie.

*Argum.*3. Chriſt, as we haue ſhewed, is no otherwiſe preſent in the Euchariſt, then in Baptiſme: But the water in Baptiſme is not to be adored; Ergo, neither the bread in the Sacrament.

Auguſtine did not ſo much as dreame of any adoration of the Sacrament: A Cerere & Libero Paganorum dijs longè abſumus, quamuis panis & calicis ſacramentum noſtro ritu amplectimur: Wee doe not worſhip the heatheniſh Gods of corne and wine, Ceres and Bacchus, although after our manner we embrace the Sacrament of the bread, and of the cup, &c. His meaning is, that Chriſtians doe not worſhip bread and wine in the Sacrament, as the heathen did, contr. Fauſt.

In ſacramenti ſanctificatione & diſtributione exiſtimo Apoſtolum propriè iuſſiſſe fieri προσευχὰς, orationes, 1.Timoth.2.1. Quod verò quidam codices non habent, orationes, ſed adorationes, non arbitror ſcienter interpretatum: In the conſecrating and diſtributing of the Sacrament, I thinke the Apoſtle bad orations or prayers to be made, not as ſome doe vnlearnedly interpret, adorations or worſhippings, Epiſtol.59. Ergo, he approueth not the adoration of the Sacrament.

Bellarmine obiecteth that place of S. Auguſtine Pſal.98. Nemo carnem illam manducat, niſi prius adorauerit: No man eateth that fleſh, vnleſſe he firſt adore it. *Bellarm.cap.*30.

Anſwere. S. Auguſtine, as he holdeth onely a ſpirituall manducation: Quid paras dentes & ventrem? crede & manducaſti, &c. Why doeſt thou prepare thy teeth and belly? beleeue onely and thou haſt eaten, for to beleeue in him is to eate him, *decr.par.3.diſt.2.cap.*47. So hee is to bee vnderſtoode ſpeaking of adoration: as Chriſts fleſh is eaten, ſo is it adored; it is ſpiritually eaten by faith, Ergo, it is ſpiritually to be adored. So ſpeaketh alſo Euſebius Emiſſenus, as hee is cited in the decrees, part.3. diſt.2.cap.35. Sacrum Dei corpus fide reſpice, honora, mirare, &c. The ſacred bodie of God behold by faith, honor it, maruell at it, touch it with thy minde, receiue it with the hand of thy heart, &c.

Nicen.2.action.6. Theſe words are rehearſed out of the Synode of Conſtantinople, which was aſſembled againſt images: Ecce viuificantis illius corporis imaginem totam, &c. Behold all the image of that liuely and quickening bodie, the ſubſtance of bread, which hee commanded to be ſet before vs, leaſt, if it ſhould be ſhewed in humane ſhape, Idololatria induceretur, Idolatrie by this meanes ſhould be brought in: They conclude directly againſt the adoration of the Sacrament.

*Concil. Florentin. ſeſſ.*25. The Grecians manner is, when as the bread and wine are caried by the Prieſt from one Altar to another, Capita ſua reuerenter inclinant, cùm panis ipſe vinumque nondum ſint conſecrati: Doe reuerently bow their heads, when as the bread and wine are not yet conſecrated, &c. So then the Greeke Church doth reuerently vſe them as holy ſignes, not adore them with a diuine worſhip: for it were too too groſſe Idolatrie to worſhip the bare elements, ſuch as they are before conſecration.

*Trullan.Synod.can.90. Nicen.1.can.*20. and in diuers other Councels it was decreed, that none ſhould bow their knees diebus dominicis, vpon the Lords day. It is not like then, that kneeling, they did adore the Sacrament; which was vſually celebrated vpon the Lords day.

So that this adoration of the Euchariſt ſeemeth to be but a new deuiſe, hauing no warrant from the ancient practiſe of the Church: and indeede Honorius the third was the firſt, that commanded the people at eleuation time to encline and bow themſelues, and when the Hoaſt was caried about in proceſſion: as it may appeare, *decr.Greg.lib.3.t.41.c.*10.

See alſo the teſtimonie of the holy Martyrs: Iohn Fortune: if it be not God before the conſecration, it is not God after, for God is without beginning and ending, p.1919.

Thomas Spurdance holy Martyr: I receiue Chriſt by faith by beleeuing in him: but the bread being receiued is not God, nor the bread, that is yonder in the pixe is not God: God dwelleth not in temples made with hands. And therefore you doe very euill to cauſe the people to kneele downe and worſhip the bread. Fox. p.1856. 2. 50.

The Muſcouites to this day, following the Greeke Church, doe with great reuerence kneele downe, when the bread and wine is ſhewed them by the Prieſt, before they be conſecrate, or ſet vpon the altar: but after it is placed vpon the altar, they neither adore it, neither is it eleuated. Sacranus Elucid.err. Ruthener. err.21.

2 Neither was eleuation of the Sacrament vſed of auncient time in the Africane Church: as Tertullian ſaith, Cum modeſtia et humilitate adorantes, &c. ne ipſis quidem manib. ſublimius elatis: Wee with modeſtie & humilitie adoring commend our prayers, our hands being not lift vp verie high, &c. Lib.de oration. ſo at this day in the Æthiopike Church, the Sacrament is not ſhewed as in the Romane Church, as Zaga Zabo their Biſhop confeſſeth. Damianus a Goes.

AN APPENDIX OR TENTH PART, WHETHER the wicked doe receiue the bodie of Chriſt.

The Papiſts.

28. Error.

THe wicked, they ſay, doe in the Sacrament eate the true fleſh of Chriſt and drinke his blood, though they be infidels, and ill liuers.

1.Cor.11.27.

Argum. 1. They are guiltie of the bodie and blood of Chriſt, 1.Corin.11.27. How can they bee guiltie of that, which they haue not receiued? And againe, by the vnworthie receiuing of no other Sacrament, is a man made guiltie of the bodie and blood of Chriſt, but onely here: Ergo, the wicked are partakers of his bodie? Rhemiſt. annotat. 1. Corinth. 11. ſect. 16.

Anſwere. Firſt, the wicked may bee guiltie of the bodie and blood of Chriſt in vnworthie receiuing the Sacrament, though Chriſt be not corporally preſent: Euen as he that contumeliouſly receiueth the ſeale of the Prince, or abuſeth his image, is guiltie of the Maieſtie of the Prince, though hee haue not hurt his perſon. Secondly, he alſo may be guiltie of the blood of Chriſt, that deſpiſeth Baptiſme, which he receiued as a ſigne of his waſhing in the blood of Chriſt. And ſo the Apoſtle ſaith of wicked men, that fall away from Chriſtian religion, that they crucifie againe to themſelues the Sonne of God, Heb. 6.6.

Heb.6.6.

Auguſtine alſo bringeth in Chriſt thus ſpeaking to the wicked in the day of iudgement, Grauior apud me eſt peccatorum tuorum crux, in qua inuitus pendeo, quàm illa, in quam tui miſertus—aſcendi: The croſſe of thy ſinnes, whereby thou didſt crucifie me, was more grieuous vnto me, then the croſſe, to the which for thy cauſe I aſcended to ſtay thy death; Serm. 181. cap. 7. de tempor. Thus we ſee, that wicked men by their ſinfull life may crucifie Chriſt, though they can offer no violence to his bodie.

Argum. 2. One Collins a Papiſt thus reaſoned from the example of Iudas: Iudas receiued the bodie of Chriſt, Ergo, the wicked, &c. Fox. p. 1686.

Anſwere. Firſt, it is not ſo certaine out of the Goſpell, whether Iudas receiued the Euchariſt at all with the other Diſciples, but ſome thinke that he went out before: and there are ſome probable coniectures of this opinion: as firſt, it is like that the firſt ſupper was not yet finiſhed, becauſe of the dipping of the ſop, which was giuen vnto Iudas: for in his laſt ſupper, there was no ſuch dipping vſed, but onely bread and wine. Secondly, the waſhing of the Diſciples feete was done before the laſt ſupper, and immediatly vpon that waſhing, the ſop was giuen to Iudas, and forthwith vpon it hee went out; Theſe and other coniectures might leade one to thinke, that Iudas was not preſent at the inſtitution of the laſt ſupper, but that S. Luke ſetting downe the ſtorie in order, as Auguſtine thinketh, rehearſeth thoſe words of Chriſt, as ſpoken after his laſt ſupper: Behold the hand of him which betrayeth me, is with me at the table. And thereupon Auguſtine reſolueth, that Iudas receiued the Sacrament: De vno pane et Iudas accepit et Petrus, et tamen quæ pars fidelium infideli? Petrus accepit ad vitam, Iudas ad mortem: Iudas and Peter tooke of one and the ſame bread, and yet what agreement betweene a beleeuer and an infidell: Peter tooke it vnto life, Iudas to death, &c. ſo alſo the confeſſion of Belgia, Iudas and Simon Magus did both receiue the Sacramentall ſigne, but Chriſt himſelfe, ſignified thereby, they receiued not, &c.

Luk.22.21. In Ioann. ſuper illa: Fur erat. Ioann. 12.6. Artic.35.

Secondly, it is notwithſtanding certaine, that the wetted or dipped ſoppe was not the Euchariſt, which was giuen to Iudas; for Chriſt miniſtred the bread and wine apart, bread by it ſelfe, and wine by it ſelfe, not ſops in wine: as the decree condemning a certaine abuſe of ſome that gaue the Euchariſt to the people dipped, or ſopped, concludeth thus, Intincta buccella, &c. The dipped ſop ſerued to bewray the betrayer of his Maſter, not to ſignifie the Sacrament. p.3.d.2.c.7.

Thirdly, though we grant with Auguſtine, that Chriſt deliuered the Euchariſt to Iudas as well as to the reſt of the Apoſtles, in Pſalm.10. rehearſed alſo in the decrees, *p.2.cauſ.1.q.1.c.*88. yet it followeth not that he receiued Chriſts bodie, Satan being entred in before, but the Sacrament onely of his bodie.

The Proteſtants.

THat wicked men and Infidels, cannot in any ſenſe bee partakers of the true bodie and blood of Chriſt, thus it is proued.

*Argum.*1. By faith onely are we made partakers of the bodie and blood of Chriſt: but this faith the wicked cannot haue. The firſt part is proued out of the Goſpel: He onely that drinketh of the blood of Chriſt ſhall neuer thirſt againe, Iohn 4.14. He that ſhall neuer thirſt, muſt beleeue in Chriſt, Iohn 6.35. Ergo, he onely that beleeueth doth drinke the blood of Chriſt. So Auguſtine ſaith, Nolite parare fauces, ſed cor; non quod videtur, ſed quod creditur, paſcit: Doe not prepare your iawes, but your heart; it is not that which is ſeene, but what is beleeued, that nouriſheth: Ergo, Chriſt muſt be receiued by faith: therefore Infidels or vnbeleeuers cannot receiue him.

Iohn 4.14.
Iohn 6.35.

*Argum.*2. Whoſoeuer eateth the fleſh of Chriſt and drinketh his blood, ſhall haue eternall life, Iohn 6.54. But the wicked haue not eternall life: Ergo, they neither eate nor drinke of Chriſt. So Origen reaſoneth: Si fieri poſſet, vt qui malus adhuc perſeueret,&c. If it were poſſible, that he which yet remaineth wicked, could eate the word made fleſh, it had not beene written, Hee that eateth this bread, ſhall liue for euer: Hom.in 15. Matth.

Iohn 6.54.

But here they will thruſt in an olde diſtinction: that we muſt conſider three things in the Euchariſt, Speciem panis, veritatem carnis, virtutem gratiæ ſpiritualis: The ſhape of bread, the veritie of Chriſts fleſh, the ſpirituall grace or vertue: the firſt a Mouſe may gnaw; the ſecond a wicked man may receiue; the third none but the faithfull can haue.

*Contra,*1. The veritie of Chriſts fleſh cannot be ſeparated from the ſpirituall grace: for hee ſaith, Iohn 6.55. My fleſh is meate indeede,&c. and whoſoeuer eateth my fleſh hath eternall life, verſ.54. If the wicked then verily eate Chriſts fleſh, they verily haue eternall life. Secondly, ſo then there are not three, but two things in the Sacrament: the Sacramentall ſigne, which the wicked may be partakers of; and the ſpirituall grace, which is the communicating of Chriſts bodie and blood, which none but the faithfull can haue: As Bernard witneſſeth: Sacramentum ſicut accipit ad vitam dignus, ſic ad mortem indignus, rem ſacramenti nemo percipit, niſi dignus & idoneus: As the worthie may receiue the Sacrament to life, ſo the vnworthie vnto death: but the matter or ſubſtance of the Sacrament no man receiueth, but he that is worthie. Bernard.de vit.ſolitar.

Iohn 6.55.

Auguſtine ſaith, De menſa dominica ſumitur quibuſdam ad mortem, quibuſdam ad vitam,&c. From the Lords table ſome doe receiue vnto life, ſome vnto death: but the thing, whereof it is a Sacrament, worketh in all to life, in none to death, whoſoeuer are partakers of it,&c. But the body and blood of Chriſt are the things ſignified in the Sacrament: Ergo, whoſoeuer receiueth them hath life thereby; the wicked then receiue them not.

Tract.in Iohann.26.

*Colonienſ.part.6.cap.*2. Panis ſpiritus, tam per verbum prædicationis quàm ſacramentaliter in veritate corporis & ſanguinis dominici in viua fide comeſtus, viuificat,&c. The bread of the ſpirit, as well by the preaching of the word, as in the Sacrament, being eaten by faith in the veritie of the bodie and blood of Chriſt quickeneth,&c. The veritie of Chriſts bodie then is receiued by faith, which the wicked haue not: and as they receiue not Chriſt in the word preached, ſo neither in the Sacrament.

We haue the teſtimonie of their owne decrees: Part.3.diſt.2.c.65, Qui diſcordat à Chriſto,&c. He that diſſenteth from Chriſt, doth neither eate his fleſh, nor drinke his blood. But the wicked diſſent from Chriſt: Ergo.

Arguments out of the decrees, that the wicked eate not Chriſts bodie.

Ibid.c.69. Quicunque panem hunc manducauerit,&c. Whoſoeuer eateth this bread, ſhall liue for euer. But the wicked liue not for euer: Ergo, they eate not this bread.

Cap.70. Quando Chriſtus manducatur, vita manducatur: When Chriſt is eaten, life is eaten. But 1 the wicked eate not life: Ergo, they eate not Chriſt. 2
Cap.75. Nôrunt fideles,&c. The faithfull know how they eate the fleſh of Chriſt: Therefore wic- 3
ked and vnbeleeuers know it not. 4
Cap.40. Qui manducauerit corpus,&c. He that eateth Chriſts bodie, hath remiſſion of ſinnes: The 5 wicked haue not remiſſion of ſinnes. Ergo.

Laſtly, *ibid.c.*42. this was the faith of Pope Nicolas, to the which hee cauſed Berengarius to ſubſcribe, Corpus Chriſti frangi & fidelium dentibus atteri: That Chriſts bodie is broken and chawed in the teeth of the faithfull,&c. So that his bodie commeth not betweene the teeth of the wicked and vnfaithfull.

Maſter Bradford holy Martyr, when Harpsfield had ſaid, the wicked receiue the bodie of Chriſt, but not the grace of his bodie: anſwered: They receiue not the bodie: for Chriſts bodie is no dead carcaſſe, he that receiueth it, receiueth the ſpirit, which is not without grace.

Theſe holy Martyrs, with many others, for this their franke confeſſion of their faith, were cruelly put to death.

THE SECOND PART OF THIS CONTROVERSIE, CONCERNING

THE POPISH MASSE.

This part likewiſe comprehendeth diuers queſtions.

1 Of the diuers repreſentations of the death and ſacrifice of Chriſt.

2 Of the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, the name thereof, and of the ſacrificing prieſthood.

3 Of the vertue and efficacie which they falſly aſcribe to the Maſſe.

4 For whom the ſacrifice of the Maſſe is auailable: whether for the quick and the dead.

5 Of priuate Maſſes.

6 Of the manner of ſaying and celebrating Maſſe.

7 Of the ceremonies which they vſe in the idolatrous ſacrifice of the Maſſe: ſome goe before: ſome are obſerued in the celebration thereof.

8 Of the forme of the Maſſe, which conſiſteth partly of the Canon, and of the preface to the Canon, where we are to ſhew the ſtrange and hereticall blaſphemies, which in great number are vttered by them in the Maſſe. Of theſe now in order.

THE FIRST QVESTION, OF THE DIVERS repreſentations of the death of Chriſt.

The Papiſts.

29. Error. They are not contented with that one liuely repreſentation of the death of Chriſt, which is exhibited in the Lords Supper, but they haue brought in two more beſide that, and ſo make three in all: the firſt, ſay they, is ſimplex repraſentatio, a ſimple & plaine repreſentation of the death of Chriſt, which is done ſo often as the Sacrament is receiued. The ſecond is, Repræſentatio ad viuum, A liuely and full repreſentation of Chriſts death: which they doe vſe yearely to ſet forth by ſolemne geſtures, apparell, and other ceremonies vpon Good Friday, as it is commonly called, before Eaſter, when they doe make nothing elſe but a Pageant play of the Sacrament. The third repreſentation is alſo a ſacrifice beſide, and that is the ſacrifice of the Maſſe. Bellarm.de Miſſa.lib.1.cap.1. The Rhemiſts make a fourth repreſentation beſide, which is in the ſolemne receiuing of the Communion at Eaſter: So then firſt, Chriſts death is ſhewed forth by the Sacrament of the Euchariſt all the yeare long as it hangeth in the pixe, or when it is caried to houſle the ſicke, *Catechiſm.Rom.pag.*408. Secondly, it is repreſented once in the yeare by their ſolemne Pageant vpon good Friday, when there is no Sacrament conſecrated, but an hiſtrionicall expreſſing by certaine geſtures and actions, the manner of Chriſts crucifying. Thirdly, in the continuall ſacrifice of the Maſſe, Chriſt his death is repreſented. And laſtly, in the ſolemne receiuing at Eaſter: for then eſpecially, the myſterie of Chriſt our Paſchall Lambe is commended to the people to be eaten with all ſinceritie in the Sacrament: and ſo doe the 1.Cor.6.8. Rhemiſts expound that place of S Paul, Let vs keepe feaſt or holy day, not with the leuen of maliciousneſſe, 1.Cor.6.8. literally applying it to the feaſt of Eaſter, Rhemiſt.in hunc locum.

The Proteſtants.

First, wee are taught by the word of God, that by eating the bread, and drinking of the cup in the Sacrament, not by gazing, looking, lifting vp, turning, hanging vp bread in pixes, or by any ſuch 1.Cor.11.26. meanes, but onely as we haue ſaid, is the Lords death ſhewed forth and repreſented, 1.Cor.11.26. Wee acknowledge therefore one onely ſacramentall repreſentation of Chriſt, and no more in the Lords Supper: the ſacrifice of the Maſſe wee iudge to be an abominable idoll, as afterward ſhall be ſhewed.

Secondly, it is a foule abſurditie to make any repreſentation of Chriſts death by bare geſtures, ſhewes, and actions of the bodie without any Sacrament, as they doe in their Popiſh Pageants vpon Chriſts Paſſion day: for at that time there is no Sacrament conſecrated; but the Prieſt, by certaine geſtures and motions of the bodie, in bowing, bending, caſting abroade his armes and ſuch like, doth reſemble Chriſt crucified, Bellarmin.cap.1. But to call this a liuely repreſentation done without a Sacrament, and the other in the Sacrament, ſimplicem repraſentationem, but a ſimple and plaine repreſentation, is too great preſumption: wherein they preferre their owne ſuperſtitious deuiſes, before the ordinance of Chriſt.

Thirdly, that place of S. Paul is vnfitly applied to the celebration of Eaſter: Auguſtine expoundeth it farre otherwiſe: Azyma, qui recta fidei Chriſtiani ſunt, non in fermento veteris vitæ, ſed in ipſius fidei veritate & ſynceritate cuſtodiunt, non ſeptem diebus, ſed omni die, &c. The vnleauened bread, the Chriſtians of a right faith doe keepe, not in the leauen of their old life, but in the veritie and ſynceritie of faith, not ſeuen daies, but euery day: Cont. Fauſt. Manich. lib. 32. cap. 11. So then in Auguſtines iudgement, the Apoſtle had no relation to any certaine time, which hee would haue kept holie: but to the reformation of the whole life.

Laſtly, Nicen. 2. action. 6. tom. 3. The ſentence of the Synode of Conſtantinople is thus rehearſed, after they had ſet downe the words of our Sauiour, This doe in the remembrance of me, they infer thus, Ecce viuificantis illius corporis imaginem totam panis, id eſt, ſubſtantiam: Behold the whole image of that quickening bodie, the ſubſtance of bread. The Synode vpon theſe words of Chriſt concludeth, that there is no other repreſentation of Chriſt, but in the Euchariſt: ſo that without the Sacrament there is no repreſentation at all. Likewiſe, Concil. Toletan. 12. c. 5. Quoties ſacerdos ſanguinem & corpus Chriſti in altario immolat, toties ſe participem præbeat: As often as the Prieſt doth offer vp the bodie and blood of Chriſt, let him be partaker of it, &c. Wherefore by this Canon the ſacrifice of Chriſts bodie and blood cannot be repeated or repreſented, without the partaking and receiuing of the Sacrament.

1. The iudgement of the Greeke Church herein is before produced.

2. Neither doth the Æthiopike Church allow any ſuch theatricall repreſentation of Chriſts paſſion, without the Sacrament: as Zaga Zabo confeſſeth: Sacramentum Euchariſtiæ non ſeruatur apud nos in templis, &c. The Sacrament of the Euchariſt is not kept with vs in the temple, as it is with them of Europe, &c. And he further ſheweth in the ſame place, that they receiue the Euchariſt twice in the weeke, &c. They need not then any ſuch pompous ſolemnitie, receiuing ſo often.

Damianus a Goes.

3. Confeſſion of Auſpurg, artic. 1. This remembrance doth ſignifie, not the bare repreſenting of the hiſtorie, as it were in a ſhew, &c. but it ſignifieth by faith to remember the promiſe and benefit, &c.

4. Their owne Polydor findeth fault with ſuch pompous ſhewes: Supplicationum noſtrarum pompam ſolent præcedere quædam ludocra: Certaine ridiculous toyes vſe to goe before our ſolemne ſupplications: as ſnap-Dragons, with wide iawes, winged boyes and ſuch like, &c. which ridiculous vſages, he thinketh to haue been deriued from the Pagans.

Inuention. lib. 6. c. 11.

THE SECOND QVESTION, OF THE SACRIFICE of the Maſſe, and the Prieſthood thereto belonging.

THE FIRST PART, OF THE NAME and terme of Maſſe.

The Papiſts.

30 Error.

THere are diuers opinions amongſt thē, concerning the originall of this name. Some ſay it is called Miſſa, the Maſſe, Quia oblatio & preces ad Deum mittantur: Hugo de S. Victore. Others, Quòd Angelus à Deo mittatur, qui ſacrificio aſſiſtat: Becauſe an Angell is ſent of God to be aſſiſtant at the Maſſe. Thomas Aquinas 3. part. quæſt. 83. artic. 4. Some, of the Hebrew word Miſſath, Deut. 16. which ſignifieth an oblation or gift. Some, ex miſſis donarijs, & ſymbolis, of the gifts and offerings ſent or put in before the Communion. But what beginning ſoeuer it had, they doe now generally take the Maſſe, for that ſolemne action, whereby the Sacrament is made a ſacrifice, and offered vp to God, Bellarm. lib. 1. de miſſa, cap. 1.

Deut. 16. 10.

The Proteſtants.

WE doe not greatly force vpon this name: for both the name and the thing is aboliſhed from our hearts and mouthes; and we truſt in God, wee ſhall neuer haue occaſion to know it againe. But howſoeuer it is, this name Miſſa, Maſſe, cannot ſignifie any ſuch thing as they pretend.

1. For it ſeemeth that Miſſa was deriued, à dimiſſione populi, of the dimiſſion or ſending away of the people; and ſo was taken generally for any congregation aſſembled either to pray, or ſing Pſalmes, or for any other religious duetie: As yet to this day in the Dutch language (Meſſe) ſignifieth any ſolemne frequencie or congregation of the people. In this ſenſe Caſſianus vnderſtandeth Maſſe, that is, for the dimiſſion of the people: ſpeaking of him that commeth not timely to the houres of prayer: he would not haue him to enter in, but Stantem pro foribus congregationis miſſam præſtolari debere: He ought ſtanding without the doores to waite for the miſſe of the congregation. Or as Maſter Philpot giueth the ſenſe of this word, the Communion was called, Miſſa, à mittendo: of ſuch things as were ſent at the celebration of the Sacrament by ſuch as were of abilitie to the reliefe of the poore, pag. 1815.

De Canonicis orat. lib-3. c. 7.

2. Auguſtine taketh this word Miſſa generally for the Leiturgie or ſeruice of the Church, as ſerm. de tempore 251. if that Sermon be Auguſtines. Sunt aliqui, & maximè potentes huius mundi, cùm venerint ad eccleſiam, non ſunt deuoti ad laudes Dei celebrandas, ſed cogunt Preſbyterum vt abbreuiet Miſſam: There are ſome, and commonly the great men of the world, which come not to Church with any deuotion to ſing praiſes to God, but they conſtraine the Presbyter or Miniſter to make ſhort Maſſe. Here this word Maſſe ſignifieth the whole Leiturgie, as ſinging of Pſalmes, and praiſing God; not any ſacrifice or oblation: which could not be abridged or curtalled. Wherefore as the ſacrifice of the Maſſe is of no great antiquitie, ſo neither is the name in that ſenſe.

And it is euident out of their owne decrees, that the Sacrament of the body and blood of Chriſt was more vſually knowne of ancient time by other names, then this of the Maſſe. Decret.p.2.cauſ.1.qu.1.c.72.Gregorie calleth it the Communion. *C.*88. Auguſtine, Euchariſtiam, the Euchariſt. Decret.p.3.diſt.c.63. it is called Sacramentum pietatis, The Sacrament of pietie or deuotion. *Ibid.c.*17. Soter calleth it Cœnam Domini, The Supper of the Lord. *Ibid.c.*8. Alexander, the oblation. *C.*12, Gelaſius, Myſterium, a myſterie. *C.*5 Sacramentum corporis & ſanguinis Domini: The Sacrament of the bodie and blood of Chriſt. Theſe and other ſuch names they gaue this Sacrament, more ſignificant, and farre more ancient then the title of the Maſſe.

Cenſur.c.13.

1. Ieremie Patriarke of purpoſe treating of the Sacrament, calleth it Hierurgia and Myſtagogia, the ſacred or myſticall action.

Damianus a Goes.

2. Zaga Zabo in the confeſſion of the Æthiopike faith, doth vſually call this Sacrament by the name of the Euchariſt: ſo called of the thankſgiuing: the name Maſſe, in the popiſh ſenſe, as it is taken to ſignifie a ſacrifice, they vſe not: Nullam pro remiſſione animarum miſſam facimus, For the remiſſion of ſinnes and releaſe of ſoules, we celebrate no Maſſe.

Harm.of confeſſ.p.453.

3. Confeſſion of Wittemberg, chap.9. Wee beleeue and confeſſe that the Euchariſt (for ſo it pleaſed our forefathers to call the Supper of the Lord,&c.) is a Sacrament inſtituted of Chriſt,&c. The Euchariſt then is a more fit name for this Sacrament, then the Maſſe.

Annot in lib.4 Tertullian aduerſ. Marcion.

4. Beatus Rhenanus ſheweth the original of the word Miſſa, Maſſe: à dimiſſione catachumenorum, from the diſmiſſing of the Catachumeni, (ſuch as were late conuerted to the Chriſtian faith, whom they would not haue preſent at theſe myſticall actions) it was ſo called the Maſſe.

[a] Anno Chriſt; 34.numior.59.
[b] Inſtit.ſacerdot.lib.2.c.4.
[c] Epiſt.ad Caniſium.
[d] Inſtit.moral. lib.10. cap.18.

And whereas both [a] Baronius, and [b] Tollet, two of their Cardinals, would haue the word deriued from the Hebrew word Miſſah: they are herein oppoſed by their learned Ieſuites, as [c] Salmeron, [d] Azorius; who affirme, that their ſentence is more probable, qui docent Miſſam vocem eſſe latinam: which teach that the Maſſe is rather a Latine word, then an Hebrew: but if they will needs haue it an Hebrew word, it may be rather deriued from the Hebrew word mas, which ſignifieth melted: for the ancient inſtitution in the Maſſe is quite melted away.

THE SECOND PART, OF THE Sacrifice of the Maſſe.

The Papiſts.

31.Error.

CHriſt, they ſay, at his laſt Supper, did offer vp his owne bodie and blood in ſacrifice, vnder the formes of bread and wine, to God his father: and at the ſame inſtant made his Apoſtles, and their ſucceſſors Prieſts, to offer vp his bodie in the Sacrament, Concil.Tridentin.ſeſſ.22.cap.1. And the ſame bodie which Chriſt offered vp vpon the croſſe, is daily offered vp by the miniſterie of the Prieſts; the difference only is in the manner of offering, Concil.Trident.ibid.c.2. The eternitie and proper act of Chriſts Prieſthood, conſiſteth in the offring & ſacrificing of the body & blood of Chriſt in the formes of bread and wine in the Church, Rhem.Heb.7.ſect.8. And wee meane alwaies of Prieſt and ſacrifice taken in their owne proper ſignification, ibid.ſect.7. In the Euchariſt then there is a true ſacrifice of the very bodie and blood of Chriſt offered vp to God, by the hands of the Prieſt, in the formes of bread and wine, Bellarm.cap.5.

Argum.1. Chriſt is a Prieſt after the order of Melchiſedech: but the proper act of Melchiſedechs Prieſthood did conſiſt in ſacrificing in the formes of bread and wine: Ergo, the eternitie of Chriſts Prieſthood ſtandeth in the ſacrificing of his bodie and blood in thoſe formes: there doth therefore ſtill remaine a proper externall ſacrifice in the Church, Rhemiſt.annot.Heb.7.ſect.8.Bellar.cap.6.

And that Melchiſedechs Prieſthood conſiſted in the oblation of bread and wine, Bellarmine would ſtrengthen by theſe reaſons:

Geneſ.14.18.

Firſt, from the word vſed, Geneſ.14.18. he brought foorth, the Hebrew word is, יצא iatſa, which in Scripture is properly applied to the bringing foorth of ſacrifice: as Geneſ.4. the like word is vſed to ſignifie Cain and Abels ſacrifice, Bellarm.cap.6. So alſo the Doway tranſlators, pag.56.annot.in Geneſ.14.

Exod.3.10.
Ierem.51.10.
Geneſ.4.3.

Contra. Firſt, the word, which here ſignifieth to bring foorth, is not alwaies, or for the moſt part, applied to the bringing of ſacrifice; as Exod.3.10. That thou maiſt bring my people out of Egypt: Ierem.51.10. The Lord hath brought foorth our righteouſneſſe: wherefore his obſeruation of this word is more bold, then true. Secondly, Geneſ.4.3. Cain brought an oblation to the Lord: Here theſe two words, an oblation, and to the Lord, doe ſhew that hee brought a ſacrifice; but there is not any word ioyned in this place to Melchiſedechs bringing, that may conclude a ſacrifice.

Secondly, becauſe Abraham had no need of bread and wine to refreſh himſelfe, being returned with great ſpoyle from his enemies, and ſo hauing ſufficient to refreſh himſelfe with: therefore it is like Melchiſedech brought them forth to offer to God. So alſo the Doway men, pag. 57.

Contra. Firſt, your owne vulgar text hath this note in the margent: Melchiſedech alebat ipſum Abraham: Melchiſedech doth feed Abraham himſelfe: their owne note is againſt them. Secondly, whereas Abraham had receiued all the King of Sodomes goods, and the victuals alſo, which were caried away, though he ſuffered the young men to eate thereof; yet hee would not take himſelfe of the Kings goods ſo much as a thread or a ſhooe latchet, verſ. 23. and therefore it was Gods prouidence to ſend Melchiſedech, that he ſhould be refreſhed rather at his hands, then from the King of Sodome an Infidell.

Their owne vulgar Latine readeth, proferens, bringing forth bread and wine, that is, as Tertullian expoundeth: Abrahamo reuertenti de prælio, &c. obtulit panem & vinum: He offered bread and wine to Abraham returning from battell: and to what end, Ioſephus ſheweth: Melchiſedech, milites Abrahæ hoſpitaliter habuit, entertained Abrahams ſouldiers with hoſpitalitie, ſuffering them to want no victuall, &c.

Lib. cont. Iudæos.

Antiquit. lib. 1 cap. 11.

Thirdly, as Melchiſedech is ſaid to haue been Gods prieſt, ſo it was requiſite that the Scripture alſo ſhould make mention of his ſacrifice, wherein his prieſthood conſiſted: but that is not any where elſe mentioned: Ergo, hee offered the ſacrifice of bread and wine, Bellarm. ibid. And they of Doway, pag. 57.

Contra. Firſt, the argument followeth not, there is no mention made of any other ſacrifice in Scripture which Melchiſedech offered: Ergo, hee offered bread and wine: for as touching this high myſterie of Melchiſedechs prieſthood, many things in Scripture are concealed, as the Apoſtle ſaith to the Hebrewes, 5.11. of whom we haue many things to ſay, which are hard to be vttered, becauſe yee are dull of hearing. Vpon which words S. Hierome thus writeth, Si vas electionis ſtupet ad myſterium, &c. If the veſſell of election bee aſtoniſhed at this myſterie, and confeſſeth that, whereof hee diſputeth, to bee ineffable, how much more wee, &c. Secondly, the Apoſtle ſheweth wherein Melchiſedech ſhewed himſelfe a prieſt, namely, in bleſſing of Abraham, and therefore receiued tithes of him, Hebr. 7. verſ. 6.

Heb. 5.11.

Hieron. Euagrio, tom. 4.

Heb. 7.6.

Fourthly, whereas the words are, Melchiſedech brought forth bread and wine, for he was a Prieſt of the moſt high God, Geneſ. 14. 18. the Scripture giuing this as a reaſon of his bringing forth bread and wine, becauſe he was a Prieſt, implieth, that he brought them forth to ſacrifice, Bellarm. ibid.

Geneſ. 14.18.

Contra. Firſt, the text according to the Hebrew is this: And Melchiſedech King of Salem brought forth bread and wine, and he was a Prieſt of the moſt high God, and he bleſſed him, &c. Gen. 14. 18. What though in ſome places of Scriptures, and, ſignifieth (for) yet it followeth not, that it ſhould be ſo euerie where? and if it be ſo taken here in this clauſe of the Sentence, for he was a Prieſt, &c. why not in the other alſo, for he bleſſed him? ſo that this is giuen as a reaſon taken of the effect of his Prieſthood. And indeed the order of the words ſo requireth: that as firſt hee is named a King, and then the effect followeth, which was his munificence in bringing foorth bread and wine: ſo ſecondly he is called a Prieſt, and then the effect of his Prieſthood is expreſſed, namely, his bleſſing. Secondly, whereas Bellarmine ſaith, that the Apoſtle, Hebr. 7. proueth Melchiſedech not to be a Prieſt, becauſe hee bleſſed Abraham, but therefore greater onely then Abraham, it is a falſe collection: for the Apoſtle ſaith thus, Heb. 7.6. He receiued tithes of Abraham, and bleſſed him that had the promiſes. From which words we reaſon thus: Melchiſedech as hee was a Prieſt receiued tithes: for tithes were not due but to the Prieſthood, verſ. 5. but as he bleſſed he receiued tithes, as the Apoſtle ſaith, verſ. 6. Ergo, as hee bleſſed he was a Prieſt.

Fifthly, Bellarmine reaſoneth thus: Chriſt is ſaid to be a Prieſt for euer after the order of Melchiſedech: but his prieſthood cannot remaine, vnleſſe his ſacrifice continue ſtill: but his ſacrifice vpon the croſſe was once done for all: Ergo, hee muſt haue another ſacrifice daily to be offered in the Church, which is the ſacrifice of Melchiſedech in bread and wine Bellarm. c. 6.

Contra. Firſt, as Chriſt is a Prieſt for euer, ſo alſo doth his ſacrifice continue for euer, which was but once offered; yet the vertue and efficacie thereof endureth ſtill: for his blood yet ſpeaketh vnto God for mercie for vs, not for vengeance, as the blood of Abel, Hebr. 12. 24. Secondly, it is not neceſſarie that Chriſt ſhould haue an externall prieſthood ſtill in earth: for neither in the time of the law, was there any externall prieſthood after Melchiſedechs order continued, and yet euen then, was Chriſt a Prieſt after Melchiſedechs order. Thirdly, the Apoſtle ſheweth, that Chriſt our high Prieſt is entred into heauen, as the Prieſt did go once a yeere into the holy place, and there continueth a Prieſt for euer after Melchiſedechs order, in appearing in the ſight of God for vs, Hebr. 9. 23.

Heb. 9.23.

Sixthly, Chriſt being a Prieſt for euer after Melchiſedechs order, muſt agree with Melchiſedech in that, which was proper to Melchiſedechs prieſthood: but nothing is proper to his prieſthood, but to ſacrifice in bread and wine: Ergo, herein there muſt bee an agreement of Melchiſedechs prieſthood and Chriſts.

The aſſumption is proued thus: firſt, it was not proper to Melchiſedechs prieſthood to bleſſe, and to receiue tithes: for this the Leuiticall prieſthood did. Secondly, nor yet to haue none to ſucceede him: for ſo neither had Abel. Thirdly, neither to bee without genealogie, and ſo to bee a type of Chriſt: for there is no mention made likewiſe of the genealogie of Iob and Helias, who were alſo Prieſts: Ergo, this was only proper to Melchiſedechs prieſthood to ſacrifice in bread and wine, cap.6. reſp.ad 3.argum.

Contra. Firſt, though Leui receiued tithes, and gaue bleſſings, yet not as Melchiſedech, to whom euen Leui paid tithes, then in Abrahams loynes, Hebr.7.verſ.9. and they being of Abrahams ſeede could not be greater then Abraham; yet Melchiſedech was greater becauſe he bleſſed him: wherefore to receiue tithes of Abraham, and to bleſſe ſo great a Patriarke, was proper to Melchiſedechs Prieſthood, and not common with Leui. Secondly, though Abel had none to ſucceed him in his carnall generation, and reſpect of his perſon; yet in his office in ſacrificing of ſheepe and ſuch like, hee had many ſucceſſors: but Melchiſedech in his Prieſthood and office had none to ſucceed him; wherefore this was alſo proper to his Prieſthood, and agreeable herein to Chriſt. Thirdly, Iob and Helias are not in the Scripture called Prieſts, as Melchiſedech is: but Iob is ſet foorth by the name of a iuſt man, Iob.1.1. Helias by the name of a Prophet, Malach.4.5. and Melchiſedech was ſo without genealogie, as there is no mention made neither of the beginning nor of the end of his daies, Heb.7.2. yet there is mention made both of the terme of Helias life, in the earth, when hee was taken vp into heauen, 2.King.2. and of Iobs death, Iob 42.17. wherefore this alſo is proper to Melchiſedech to be a Prieſt without genealogie, hauing neither beginning of daies, nor end of life, and herein hee was a type of Chriſt. We need not then ſeeke for any thing elſe, wherein Chriſt and Melchiſedech ſhould agree, the type anſwering in euery reſpect to the ſubſtance; much leſſe are wee forced to deuiſe any ſuch ſacrifice of bread and wine.

Seuenthly, Chriſt was not a Prieſt after Melchiſedechs order, in reſpect of the ſacrifice vpon the croſſe, becauſe he did not offer vp himſelfe vnder the forme of bread and wine: Ergo, he is after Melchiſedechs order in reſpect of the daily ſacrifice offered vnder bread and wine: Bellarm.cap.6.reſp.ad argum.5.

Contra. Firſt, we denie that Melchiſedech ſacrificed vnder the formes of bread and wine at all, and therefore therein he is not a type of Chriſt at all. Thus he ſtill beggeth the thing in queſtion. Secondly, it followeth not that if Chriſt anſwere not to Melchiſedech in the ſacrifice of his croſſe, that the reſemblance ſhould bee in ſacrificing bread and wine: for in many other things was Melchiſedech a type of Chriſt: 1. In his name, which ſignifieth King of righteouſneſſe. 2. In his offices, becauſe he was both King and Prieſt. 3. In the eternitie and continuance of his office. 4. In the excellencie of his perſon, in that he was greater then Abraham the Patriarke. Thus the Apoſtle ſheweth Chriſt in Melchiſedech to haue been prefigured: ſo that wee need not runne to any ſuch ſtrange deuice of the ſacrifice of bread and wine. Thirdly, euen Chriſt vpon the altar of the croſſe was a Prieſt after the order of Melchiſedech, in reſpect of the permanencie of his Prieſthood, and eternall efficacie of his Heb.10.14. croſſe, hauing with one offering conſecrated for euer them, that are ſanctified, Hebr.10.14. ſo that Melchiſedech was not ſo much to prefigure the matter of Chriſts ſacrifice, which was ſhadowed foorth in the bloodie ſacrifices of calues and goates in the law, as to ſet foorth the dignitie of his perſon, and eternitie of his office. Fourthly, this cannot be farre from blaſphemie to denie, that Chriſt was properly a Prieſt after Melchiſedechs order, and to affirme, that their popiſh prieſts doe ſacrifice in the formes of bread and wine according to the order of Melchiſedechs prieſthood: And ſuch are their reaſons drawne from the ſimilitude of Melchiſedechs prieſthood vnto Chriſt. Now on the contrarie ſide our arguments follow, to proue, that their ſacrifice of the Maſſe hath no ſhew of ground at all in the type of Melchiſedech.

*Argum.*1. Wee confeſſe, that Melchiſedech was a type of our Sauiour Chriſt, and that hee was a Prieſt after Melchiſedechs order: but not in any ſuch reſpect, for offering in bread and wine: for the text ſaith, he brought foorth bread and wine, he offered it not: he brought it foorth for the refreſhing of Abraham, and thoſe which were with him, Geneſ.14.18.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the bread and wine were firſt offered and ſacrificed to God, and afterward giuen to Abraham, and his fellowes to eate, reſp.ad argum.7.

Contra. Firſt, if the ſame bread and wine were firſt offered to God, and then giuen to Abraham, then in effect nothing was offered to God: for in all offerings and ſacrifices, whether burnt-offerings, meate-offerings, or peace-offerings, ſome part at the leaſt was burnt vpon the altar vnto God: but here no ſuch thing was done. Secondly, there was no ſacrifice without an altar, fire, and wood: as Abraham laid the wood vpon Iſaac, and tooke the fire in his hand, and built an altar, Geneſ.22.6,10. but here are none of all theſe. Thirdly, if Melchiſedech had a purpoſe to ſacrifice to God, hee would rather haue imitated Abel to haue offered of the fruites of his ſheepe, then of Cain who brought of Geneſ.4.2. the fruites of the earth, Geneſ.4.2.

2. He brought foorth bread and wine, and not the formes onely of bread and wine: therefore your ſacrifice in the formes onely is not after his order.

Bellarm. The ſacrifice of Melchiſedech and the ſacrifice of the Maſſe agree in the outward ſymbole, though not in the inward ſubſtance, which is ſufficient: for the repreſentation is in the accidents, not in the ſubſtance: and that was but the type or ſymbole, and therefore the ſubſtance may be diuers, reſp.ad argum.6.

Contra. Firſt, hereof it followeth, that they which conſecrate bread and wine onely without any reall preſence, doe more properly imitate Melchiſedech, then your Maſſe-prieſts, that hold a fleſhlie preſence vnder the formes of bread and wine: for Melchiſedech offered the ſubſtance of bread and wine, and not the formes only. Secondly, if Melchiſedechs oblation doe repreſent the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, it muſt repreſent it as it is a ſacrifice: but the Maſſe is no ſacrifice but in reſpect of the inward ſubſtance: the ſacrifice is not of the outward formes of bread and wine: Ergo, the repreſentation is in reſpect of the ſubſtance. Thirdly, types and ſhadowes differ from the bodie in outward ſymboles onely, they agree in ſubſtance, as Saint Paul ſheweth, how Chriſt was the ſame ſpirituall meate and drinke both to the Iſraelites and vnto vs, but vnder diuers Sacraments, 1. Cor. 10. 4. Wherefore it is a falſe concluſion, Melchiſedechs ſacrifice was a type of the ſacrifice of the Maſſe: Ergo, diuers in ſubſtance.

3. If Melchiſedechs bringing foorth of bread and wine, were a ſacrifice or oblation, and a type of the like ſacrifice to continue for euer in the Church, it muſt alſo haue been a propitiatorie ſacrifice for the remiſſion of ſinnes, as they ſay the ſacrifice of the Maſſe is, which was thereby ſignified: but there is no propitiatorie ſacrifice for remiſſion of ſinnes, without ſhedding of blood, Hebr. 9. verſ. 22. Therefore Melchiſedechs act, being without blood, was no ſuch ſacrifice, and conſequently none at all.

4. The Apoſtle to the Hebrewes ſheweth, wherein Chriſt was a Prieſt after Melchiſechs order, Hebr. 7. Firſt, in that Melchiſedech was both King and Prieſt, verſ. 2. ſo is Chriſt. Secondly, in reſpect of the eternitie of his Prieſthood: wee doe not reade either of the beginning of his daies, or end of his life, nor of any change of his Prieſthood, verſ. 3. All which is moſt trulie verified in Chriſt. Thirdly, Melchiſedech was a type of Chriſt, and his Prieſthood of Chriſts, becauſe of the excellencie thereof aboue the Leuiticall Prieſthood: for Leui paid tithes in Abraham to Melchiſedech; and therefore was inferiour, and was bleſſed of Melchiſedech in Abraham, the leſſe of the greater: ſo is the Prieſthood of Chriſt aduanced farre aboue Aarons order. If in any other materiall point Melchiſedechs Prieſthood had reſembled Chriſts, as in this oblation of bread and wine, the Apoſtle would not haue omitted it.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the Apoſtle omitteth of purpoſe to ſpeake of Melchiſedechs oblation of bread and wine, leaſt by this occaſion he ſhould haue been conſtrained to treate of the Euchariſt, which was too high a myſterie for them, and that very thing (which he ſaith) was hard to be vttered concerning Melchiſedech, in reſpect of their dulnes, reſp. ad argum. 2.

Contra. Firſt, the Hebrewes were no more dull to vnderſtand, then the Corinthians: for as the Apoſtle ſaith to them, they haue need of milke, not ſtrong meate, Hebr. 5. 12. ſo likewiſe he writeth to the Corinthians, that he gaue them milke to drinke, and not meate; becauſe they were babes, 1 Cor. 3. 2. yet hee doubteth not to vnfold to the Corinthians the myſterie of the Euchariſt both in the 10. and 11. chapters: wherefore this can be no reaſon, why he ſhould conceale it from the Hebrewes. Secondly, the Euchariſt is no higher a myſterie, then the doctrine of Baptiſme, or then the myſterie of the reſurrection: but theſe things the Hebrewes were well inſtructed in Heb. 6. 2. therefore they were capable alſo of the doctrine of the Euchariſt. The antecedent is thus proued: for Baptiſme by the Apoſtle is called a myſterie: This is a great myſterie, I ſpeake concerning Chriſt and the Church, Epheſ. 5. 32. and wherein this myſterie lieth, is declared, verſe 26. Chriſt loued his Church, and gaue himſelfe for it, &c. that hee might cleanſe it by the waſhing of water through the word. This waſhing in Baptiſme, is that myſterie, which hee ſpeaketh of: ſo alſo the reſurrection is called a myſterie, 1. Cor. 15. 51. I ſhew you a myſterie, we ſhall not all ſleepe, but we ſhall all be changed: but theſe myſteries the Hebrewes vnderſtood, Heb. 6. 2. Ergo, they might ſafely be inſtructed in the myſterie of the Euchariſt.

5. Therein conſiſted the proper act of Melchiſedechs Prieſthood, for the which he receiued tithes of Abraham: but, as the Apoſtle ſaith, hee receiued tithes, and bleſſed Abraham, Heb. 7. 6. Ergo, the tithes were due not for any ſacrifice which he offered, but for his bleſſing. The ſame therefore was the proper act of his Prieſthood. See Bellarmine his anſwere, and the replie thereunto, argum. 4. by him before produced.

6. Melchiſedech is a type of Chriſt in thoſe things, which are not common with Aarons Prieſthood: but to offer bread and wine was daily frequented in the Leuiticall Prieſthood: Ergo, therein conſiſteth not the type of Melchiſedech.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that the ſacrifice of bread and wine in the Leuiticall Prieſthood was alwaies ioyned with other ſacrifices of beaſts, and was tempered or mingled with oyle: but here Melchiſedech offereth bread and wine alone, and ſimple bread, without any mixture, reſponſ. ad argum. 4.

Contra. Firſt, it is vntrue, that the Prieſts of the law neuer vſed the oblations of bread and wine, but with other ſacrifices, as it may appeare, Leuit. 2. where the law of meat-offerings is ſet downe; and no ſuch thing there preſcribed. Secondly, if the mixture of bread with oyle make a difference betweene the Leuitical oblation of bread, and Melchiſedechs offering; then your mixture of wine with water maketh the like difference, betweene your Maſſe ſacrifice and Melchiſedechs, who offered as ſimple bread, ſo alſo ſimple wine. Thirdly, the Apoſtle ſaith, If the Prieſthood be changed, there muſt of neceſſitie be a change of the law, Heb. 7. 12. Wherefore if the law of ſacrifices be changed, then could not the new Prieſthood offer the ſacrifices of the law, and therefore not bread and wine: for then the law of ſacrifices ſhould only be changed in part, not in whole.

7. The eternitie of Chriſts prieſthood after Melchiſedechs order conſiſteth not in the daily ſacrifice of the Maſſe, which is offered by many Prieſts, one ſucceeding another: for this is a difference betweene Aarons order, and Melchiſedechs, as the Apoſtle noteth, that among them many were made Prieſts, becauſe they were not ſuffered to endure by reaſon of death; but this man, becauſe hee endureth euer, hath an euerlaſting Prieſthood, Heb. 7. 23. Ergo, in Melchiſedechs order there cannot be a multitude of Prieſts one following another.

It will be here anſwered, that although there be many Maſſe-prieſts, yet the prieſthood is one, and Chriſt the eternall prieſt offereth by them as his miniſters.

Contra. Firſt, ſo alſo the office of the prieſthood vnder the law was one, and Chriſt the vnſpotted Lambe in all the ſacrifices was typically ſlaine, Reuelat. 13. 8. Yea Bellarmine confeſſeth that Chriſt was a prieſt vnder the law, and offered by his types and figures, cap. 6. initio: yet the difference remaineth ſtill betweene the many mortall Prieſts of Aaron, and the one eternall Prieſt after Melchiſedech. Secondly, the power, right, and execution of Melchiſedechs prieſthood reſteth in the perſon of Chriſt, and cannot be transferred to any other that die, but is proper to him, of whom it is witneſſed, that he liueth, Heb. 7. 8.

Argum. 8. To make Chriſts prieſthood eternall, it is not neceſſarie to bring in a continuall ſacrifice to be frequented in the Church: but the Apoſtle ſheweth wherein the eternitie of his prieſthood conſiſteth, namely in thoſe foure points:

Firſt, becauſe he endureth euer, he hath an euerlaſting Prieſthood, Heb. 7. 24. This reaſon Bellarmine ſaith is not ſufficient, Chriſt liueth for euer: Ergo, he is a prieſt for euer; for ſo the Leuites after the reſurrection, which were once Prieſts, and then ſhall liue for euer, might bee ſaid to be Prieſts for euer; reſp. ad argum. 8.

Contra. Firſt, the Apoſtles reaſon is this; The prieſts of the law, were not prieſts for euer, becauſe they liued not euer: but Chriſt a prieſt after Melchiſedech, is a prieſt for euer, becauſe he liueth euer: So then he peruerteth the Apoſtles reaſon, who ſpeaking of Chriſt as a prieſt, by the eternitie of his life concludeth the eternitie of his prieſthood. This then is the reaſon, Chriſt our prieſt liueth euer: Ergo, he is a prieſt euer. Secondly, the Leuites when they begin to liue euer after the reſurrection, ſhall then be no prieſts at all, and therefore cannot be ſaid to be prieſts for euer.

Secondly, Chriſt is ſaid to be a prieſt for euer, in reſpect of the euerlaſting efficacie and vertue of his ſacrifice vpon the croſſe. So ſaith the Apoſtle, With one offering hath he conſecrated for euer, them that are ſanctified, Heb. 10. 14.

Bellarm. This reaſon is not ſufficient; for ſo might Noah his ſacrifice bee ſaid to be eternall, becauſe the force thereof remaineth, in that he obtained thereby, that the waters ſhould not returne to couer the earth: the effect alſo of Chriſts birth and death ſtill remaineth, and yet he cannot be ſaid euer to die, and to be borne, Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, it was not the force of Noahs ſacrifice, which maketh Gods couenant ſtable, but the ground and foundation of all thoſe ſacrifices, which was Chriſt the vnſpotted Lambe ſlaine from the beginning of the world, Apoc. 13. 8. In whom all the promiſes of God are yea and Amen, 2. Cor. 1. 20. This inſtance therefore ſheweth the eternitie of Chriſts ſacrifice, the force whereof extended euen to the ages before. Secondly, as we ſay not, that Chriſt is daily borne, but becauſe the effect of his birth remaineth euer, he is the man Chriſt for euer: ſo neither doe we ſay, that hee dieth daily, but becauſe the force of his death and ſacrifice euer remaineth, he is the Prieſt Chriſt for euer.

Thirdly, Chriſt is a Prieſt for euer, becauſe he euer liueth to make interceſſion for vs, Hebr. 7. 25. and he is entred into heauen to appeare in the ſight of God for vs, Hebr. 9. 24.

The ſumme of Bellarmines anſwere here is this; that whereas Chriſt is our interceſſour by the mediation of his ſacrifice, it is neceſſarie that Chriſts ſacrifice ſhould bee continually offered, ſeeing hee continually maketh interceſſion for vs, reſp. ad 3. ration. 8. argum.

Contra. Firſt, the argument followeth not: for the ſacrifice of Chriſt once done is the foundation of his interceſſion, and it were a great derogation to Chriſt, that his interceſſion in heauen ſhould depend of the act of prieſts in the earth. Secondly, as Chriſt is not to be imagined to continue his interceſſion by making daily prayers vnto God: ſo neither is his ſacrifice continued by daily offering; but the very appearing of him, as the Apoſtle ſaith, in heauen is ſufficient: And as Gregorie ſaith, Sine intermiſſione, &c. Our Redeemer, without any intermiſſion, doth immolate himſelfe in ſhewing his incarnation for vs to his Father, &c. Moral. lib. 1. c. 10. Interpellare, &c. To make interceſſion for vs, is to demonſtrate himſelfe to be man, lib. 12. cap. 13. So that as their Schoolemen confeſſe, he doth daily offer himſelfe, and make interceſſion for vs, repraeſentatione ſui, by repreſenting himſelfe to his Father: Gabriel Biel.

Fourthly, the Apoſtle ſheweth Chriſt to be an eternall Prieſt, becauſe he is for euer perfitly able to ſaue, Heb. 7. 25. Bellarm. This ſheweth him to be a Sauiour, not a Prieſt.

Contra. As Chriſt is a Prieſt, ſo he alſo ſaueth by the ſacrifice of himſelfe. And thus much of this firſt argument drawne from Melchiſedech.

Argum. 2. They alleage that place, Hebr. 8. 3. Euery high Prieſt is appointed to offer gifts and hoaſtes: wherefore it is neceſſarie that hee alſo haue ſomewhat to offer. Chriſt then hath a certaine hoaſt in externall and proper manner, as other Prieſts haue; but this viſible and externall act of ſacrificing he doth not exerciſe now in heauen: therefore it muſt needes be meant of the perpetuall oblation of his bodie and blood in the Church; for ſomewhat he muſt alwaies haue to offer; Rhemiſt. Heb.8.ſect.3.

Anſw.1. The Apoſtle ſaith not, that it is neceſſarie that Chriſt ſhould ſtill haue ſomewhat to offer in ſacrifice: but that it was needfull for him to haue ſomewhat, which he had alreadie offered: for the verbe προσενέγκῃ, ſignifieth not the preſent tenſe, but the time paſt: whereby is vnderſtood the oblation which he had alreadie offered once, and which neede not to be repeated, Heb.7.27. For as herein hee Heb.7.27.
is like to other Prieſts, that he muſt haue ſomewhat to haue offered, ſo is hee vnlike alſo in this, that they by reaſon of their infirmitie had neede to offer often: but Chriſt our high Prieſt did it but once, as in that place the Apoſtle ſheweth.

2 The gift which the Apoſtle in this place attributeth to Chriſt, was his bodie, which hee calleth the true Tabernacle, which the Lord pight and not man. But that bodie of Chriſt, which they ſay is Heb.8.verſ.2.
offered vp in the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, is not of that nature: for it is made by the miniſterie of man: for euery one of their ſacrificing Prieſts is able to make the bodie of Chriſt: but this bodie, which Chriſt had to offer, was made onely by God, without the helpe of man, as the Apoſtle ſaith. Againe, ſay, if you dare, that the bodie which you offer, is the true Tabernacle and Temple of God: for then it would follow, that God dwelleth in Temples made with hands, that is, by the miniſterie of man, contrarie to the Scriptures: ſeeing you affirme that the bodie of Chriſt is no otherwiſe preſent but by the miniſterie of the Prieſt. And what a goodly Tabernacle is this for God, thinke you, which you ſhut vp in a pixe, and hang vp in your Churches? A Mouſe may eate it, the fire may conſume it, corruption may take it: would God ſuffer his Tabernacle thus to be defiled? Wherefore vpon theſe premiſſes we conclude, that what you offer in your Popiſh ſacrifice, cannot be the proper gift belonging to Chriſts Prieſthood.

Argum.3. The celebration of the Paſſeouer was a manifeſt type and figure of the celebration of the Euchariſt: but in the Paſſeouer there was a ſacrifice: Ergo, there muſt be a ſacrifice in the Euchariſt: cap.7. This argument is alſo vrged by them of Doway: p.190.

Firſt, Bellarmine proueth the propoſition out of S. Paul: Chriſt our Paſſeouer is ſacrificed for vs; 1.Cor.5.8.
therefore let vs keepe the feaſt with the vnleauened bread of ſynceritie, &c. 1.Cor.5.8. Chriſt was not crucified or ſacrificed vpon the croſſe to be eaten; he is then ſacrificed to be our Paſſeouer, where hee is to be eaten; and that is no where, but in the Euchariſt: the Euchariſt therefore is the true Paſſeouer. Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, S. Paul ſpeaketh not in that place of any Sacramentall eating of Chriſt, but of the reformation of the whole life to bee led in ſynceritie and truth, as before verſ.7. Purge out the olde leauen: He applieth this type to his preſent purpoſe, that the Corinthians ſhould expell from amongſt them the inceſtuous perſon: wherefore in this ſenſe Chriſt our Paſſeouer was ſacrificed vpon the croſſe, ſpiritually to be eaten by faith, and to be followed by vertuous imitation all our life. Secondly, though we grant, that the Paſchall Lambe and the Euchariſt may haue ſome reſemblances together, as Bellarmine noteth ſome, as in the ceremonie of eating commanded in them both, alſo in the end, that is to be a remembrance of their corporall deliuerance, this of our ſpirituall; and likewiſe, as that was eaten with ſowre hearbs, ſo the other muſt bee receiued with true ſorrow and repentance: yet was not the Paſſeouer appointed directly to be a type of the Euchariſt, but of Chriſt crucified, as the Euangeliſt expoundeth, Iohn 19.37. theſe things were done, That the Scripture ſhould be fulfilled, Iohn 19.37.
Not a bone of him ſhould be broken: if then the type of the Paſſeouer were fulfilled in Chriſt crucified vpon the Croſſe, wee are not to ſeeke for any other accompliſhment of it. Thirdly, if it ſhould bee granted, that the Paſſeouer was a type of the Euchariſt, it followeth not, that it ſhould bee in euerie thing a type, which he muſt proue, or elſe his argument concludeth not: for they differ in many things. 1. The Paſſeouer was of fleſh with blood; the Euchariſt is of bread without blood. 2. The Paſſeouer was done in remembrance of their deliuerance; the Maſſe, they ſay, is a propitiatorie ſacrifice, and not a commemoration onely. 3. The Paſſeouer was eaten at Euen, Maſſe is ſaid in the morning. 4. Nothing was left of the Paſſeouer, vntill the morning; but their conſecrated hoaſt is reſerued. 5. The Paſſeouer was eaten in their houſes; Maſſe is ſaid in their Churches: if in theſe & other points the Paſch and Euchariſt differ, why not alſo in this? that the one was a ſacrifice, & ſo is not the other.

Secondly, whereas Bellarmine proueth the aſſumption, that the Paſſeouer was a ſacrifice, for ſo S. Marke ſaith, Marke 14.12. When they ſacrificed the Paſſeouer: We anſwere, firſt, it was not proper- Mark.14.12.
ly a ſacrifice, becauſe ſacrifices were made by fire, and were brought to the Prieſt, and ſome part laid vpon the Altar, as we may reade in the lawes of ſacrifices, Leuit.1.2.3. Chap. But the Paſſeouer was eaten in the houſe, where neither Prieſt, nor Altar was neceſſarie, and the whole Lambe was eaten, nothing reſerued. Secondly, notwithſtanding it was called a ſacrifice, being a religious act, in reſpect of other ſacrifices of ſheepe and bullockes, which the Paſſeouer was vſed to bee ſolemnized with, Deut.16.2.
Deut.16.2.

Argum.4. The Apoſtle ſaith, Heb.13.10. Wee haue an Altar, whereof they haue no power to eate, Heb.13.10. which ſerue in the Tabernacle. Ergo, we haue not only a common table to eate meere bread vpon, but a very Altar in the proper ſenſe to ſacrifice Chriſts body vpon. Rhemiſt. annot. Heb.13. ſect.6.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the Sacrifice of Chriſts death, whereof wee are made partakers by faith: which they can reape no benefit by, which remaine in the ceremoniall obſeruations of Leuiticall ſacrifices. Chriſt therefore is our Prieſt, Altar and Sacrifice: for verſ.12. the Apoſtle maketh mention of the ſufferings of Chriſt: hee meaneth not then the Communion table, which is vnproperly called an Altar, or any materiall Altar beſide, but the Altar onely of Chriſts death. Secondly, if whereſoeuer in Scripture this word (Altar) is read, it muſt be taken for a proper materiall Altar, we ſhall haue alſo a materiall Altar in heauen, Apocal.8.3. which I am ſure they will not grant. Thirdly, the Apoſtle ſaith, We haue an Altar; which is but one, whereas Popiſh Altars are many: it cannot therefore be vnderſtood of ſuch Altars. Fourthly, Bellarmine better aduiſed then the Rhemiſts, refuſeth to vrge this place, becauſe diuers of their owne writers vnderſtand it of Chriſts croſſe: cap. 14. Ireneus ſaith: Altare noſtrum eſt in cœlis: Our Altar is in heauen, *aduerſ.hæreſ.c.*34.

Ierem.33.18.

*Argum.*5. Ierem.33.18 Neither ſhall the Prieſts and Leuites want a man before me, to offer burnt offrings and meate offrings, and to doe ſacrifice continually: theſe are the Prieſts of the new Teſtament, which doe truely offer ſacrifice in the Maſſe: for it cannot be vnderſtood of the Miniſters of the Goſpell, becauſe theſe are called Prieſts. and are ſaid to offer burnt offrings: neither of Chriſt, for the Prophet ſpeaketh of many Leuites and Prieſts: Bellarm.cap 9.

Iſay.59 21.
Reuel.1 6.
Rom.12.1.

Anſwere. Firſt, this text may very well bee referred to Chriſt, for verſ. 17. the Prophet had ſaid, Dauid ſhall not want a man to ſit vpon the throne, &c. This is vnderſtood of the ſpirituall kingdome of Chriſt, and ſo may the other of his ſpirituall Prieſthood: for the Prophet ſpeaketh of one ſingular man, Non interibit vir, there ſhall not be wanting a man to offer Sacrifice, &c. Secondly, but we rather vnderſtand this place of the Miniſters of the Goſpell, as it may bee expounded by the like place, Iſay 59.21. I will make this my couenant with them, &c. My words ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor the mouth of thy ſeede nor out of the mouth of the ſeede of thy ſeede, &c. And in the new Teſtament we reade both of ſpirituall Prieſts, Reuel.1.6. Hee hath made vs Kings and Prieſts to God his Father; and of ſpirituall burnt offrings and ſacrifices, Rom.12.1. I beſeech you giue vp your bodies a liuing ſacrifice. Thirdly, but this place cannot be vnderſtood of any ſuch externall Prieſthoode for theſe reaſons: firſt, as is the kingdome of Dauid here promiſed, ſo is the Prieſthood: but the firſt is ſpirituall: Ergo, the ſecond. Secondly, as they are called Prieſts, ſo alſo Leuites: but their Prieſts offering according to Melchiſedecks order, as they ſay, cannot be of the Leuiticall order. Thirdly, neither haue they any, holocauſtomata, burnt offerings in their Maſſe ſacrifice: therefore the literall ſenſe of this place ſerueth not their turne.

Dan.8 11.12.11
Dan.11.37.

*Argum.*6. Daniel 8.11. & 12.11. The Prophet fore-telleth how Antichriſt ſhall take away the daily ſacrifice, which is the ſacrifice of the Maſſe: it cannot be vnderſtood of Antiochus, who worſhipped the God of his Fathers: but Antichriſt ſhal not regard the God of his Fathers, Daniel 11.37. Bellarm. ibid.

Dan.8.14.
1.Macch.1. 12.
1.Macch.4.52.
Dan.12.11.
1.Macch.1.30.
2 Macch.11.33

Anſwere. Firſt, theſe propheſies were hiſtorically fulfilled in Antiochus Epiphanes: how that the Temple ſhould by him be firſt prophaned, by the ſpace of two thouſand three hundred dayes, Dan 8. 14. that is ſixe yeares, three moneths and an halfe: for this profanation began in the yeare 142. or thereabout, as may be gathered, 1.Macchab.1.12. for hee turned againe to ſpoile the Temple in the 143. yeare, *ibid.v.*21. So that hee began the yeare before: and the Temple was purged in the 148. yeare, the 25. day of the ninth moneth Caſleu. 1.Macc.4 52. Againe, the finall deſolation and defiling of the Temple with the ceaſing of the daily ſacrifice was to endure 1290. dayes, Dan.12.11. that is, three yeares, ſeuen moneths and odde dayes: ſo it came to paſſe, for in the 125. yeare Antiochus ſent againe to defile the Sanctuarie, and to aboliſh the ſacrifice, 1.Macchab.1.30. and in the moneth of Caſleu he accompliſhed his purpoſe, and ſet vp the abomination of deſolation vpon the Altar, verſ.57. and in the 128. yeare, in the eleuenth moneth Zanticus, the King by his letters patents reſtoreth religion againe, 2.Macchab.11.33. So that theſe propheſies being ſo euidently fulfilled in Antiochus, cannot be applied to any other. And concerning the obiection of Antiochus idolatrie, though hee openly profeſſed the worſhip of the idols of the heathen; yet in truth, as by his profanenes appeareth, he had no conſcience of any religion at all.

Dan.8.14.
1.Macch. 1.57.
Matth. 24.15.

Secondly, the place cannot be vnderſtood, as Bellarmine would enforce. Firſt, their Antichriſt ſhall raigne but three yeares and an halfe, as they ſay; but the Prophet ſpeaketh of ſixe yeares, and three moneths, Dan 8.14. Secondly, if their Maſſe ſhall be aboliſhed by Antichriſt, wherein they ſay the eternitie of Chriſts Prieſthood conſiſteth; then ſhould Chriſts Prieſthood alſo be at an end. Thirdly, the abomination of deſolation ſpoken of by Daniel, is interpreted to be the ceaſing of the Iewiſh ſacrifice, both in the ſtorie of the Macchabees, which is Scripture with them, 1.Macch.1.57. and by our Sauiour, Matth.24.15.

Malach.1.11.

*Argum.*7. Malach.1.11. From the riſing of the Sunne, vnto the going downe of the ſame, my name is great amongſt the Gentiles, and in euery place incenſe ſhall be offered to my name, and a pure offering: This place Bellarmine prooueth by theſe reaſons to be vnderſtoode of the ſacrifice of the Maſſe; and not of any ſpirituall ſacrifice. *c.*10.

Firſt, by the ſignification of the Hebrew word מנחה, Minchah, that ſignifieth an offering or oblation, which properly betokeneth a kinde of externall ſacrifice, which was made of oyle and incenſe.

Contra. Firſt, if this bee the proper ſignification of the word, it cannot meane the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, which conſiſteth in the formes of bread and wine, not of oyle and incenſe. Secondly this word doth not onely ſignifie a Sacrifice, giuen vnto God, but a gift or preſent offered to man, Gen.33.11. Gen.33.11. So Iacob calleth his preſent ſent to his brother: wherefore the Ieſuites collection faileth him. Thirdly, Pſalm.141.2. The Prophet ſaying, Let the lifting vp of mine hands be an euening ſacrifice, vſeth the Pſal.141.2. ſame word: Where we ſee that the ſpirituall ſacrifice of Prayer is called by this name, or reſembled to it: and ſo is the Prophet to be vnderſtood in this place.

Secondly, the Prophet calleth it a pure offering, which cannot be polluted: but prayers may bee polluted; the ſacrifice of the Maſſe onely cannot by the euilneſſe of the Miniſter bee defiled. Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, though our prayers as they proceede from vs haue many imperfections, yet they are accepted through Chriſt, 1.Pet.2. Offer vp ſpirituall ſacrifices acceptable to God through Chriſt: in 1.Pet.2.5. which ſenſe the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, I will that euerie where men lift vp pure hands, &c. 1.Tim.2. as here 1.Tim.2.8. the Prophet ſaith, In euery place a pure offering ſhall be offered. Secondly, wee haue ſpirituall ſacrifices and exerciſes of religion, which cannot be by the euilneſſe of the Miniſter defiled: as the preaching of the word, which though it be vnder a pretenſe preached, is profitable, Philip.1.18. The Euchariſt alſo Phlip.1.18. which is a ſacrifice of thankeſgiuing is effectuall to a worthie receiuer, though by the hands of an vnworthie Miniſter. Thirdly, your Maſſe is ſo farre from being a pure offering, that it is the moſt impure and vncleane ſink, that euer was brought into the Church: and your ſelues alſo require to the conſecration thereof, the intention of the Miniſter, which if it be not deuout and religious, the ſacrifice faileth: ſo that an impure intention alſo defileth your Maſſe.

Thirdly, the Prophet ſpeaketh of ſuch an offering as was not in vſe amongſt the Iewes: ſaying, I will not accept an offering at your hands, verſ.10. but prayer was in vſe amongſt them: Ergo. Againe, Malach.1.6.10 the Prophet ſpeaking directly to the Prieſts, verſ. 6. Thus ſaith the Lord of hoſtes vnto you, O ye Prieſts, &c. and reprouing their ſacrifices, bringeth in a new kinde of offering, which a new kinde of Prieſts ſhould offer vnto God: but ſpirituall ſacrifices are common to all Chriſtians: Ergo, Bellarm. ibid.

Contra. Firſt, the Prophet ſpeaketh onely in this place of the abuſe and corruption of their externall ſacrifices, in that they offered the lame and the blinde, verſ.8. and chap.3.8. Yee haue ſpoiled me in Malach.3.8. tythes and offerings: and he ſaith he will accept no ſuch offering at their hands: but he will be ſpiritually worſhipped among the Gentiles. To the ſame effect he ſaith, Pſalm.50.9.14. I will take no bul- Pſal.50.9. locke out of thy houſe, &c. but offer vnto God praiſe: theſe ſacrifices of prayer & thankeſgiuing, though they were not altogether vnknowne to the Iewes, yet they were not ſo frequented and vſed, nor relied vpon, as the other externall ſacrifices.

Secondly, the Prophet doth not onely reproue the hypocriſie of the Prieſts, but the deceite alſo of all the people, verſ.14. Curſed be the deceiuer, that hath in his flocke a male and ſacrificeth a corrupt Malach.1.14. thing: ſo that hee propheſieth of the generall ſacrifices of all Chriſtians, not of any peculiar ſort, as S.Peter beſt of all expoundeth this place, 1.Pet.2.5. Yee are made a ſpirituall houſe, an holy Prieſthoode 1.Pet.2.5. to offer vp ſpirituall ſacrifices, &c.

*Argum.*8. Iohn 4.23. The houre commeth and now is, when the true worſhippers, ſhall worſhip my Iohn 4.23. father in ſpirit and truth: By worſhip and adoration here is vnderſtoode the ſolemne worſhipping of God by ſacrifice. Firſt, the ſcope of the place giueth it: for the womans queſtion was of the worſhip of God by ſacrifice, which was tied to Ieruſalem, You ſay that Ieruſalem is the place, where men ought to worſhip, verſ. 20. but it was lawfull for the Iewes to offer ſpirituall ſacrifice in any place: therefore Chriſts anſwere muſt be of ſuch a ſacrifice which ſhould not be tied to a place, as the Iewes ſacrifice was.

Secondly, The houre commeth, &c. Chriſt ſpeaketh of a new adoration which was not before: but the time was alwaies to offer ſpirituall ſacrifices of prayer, &c.

Thirdly Chriſt ſpeaketh of publike and ſolemne adoration, which ſhould anſwere to the publike ſacrifices of the Iewes: but prayer and thankeſgiuing may be done priuatly: Ergo, he meaneth the ſolemne ſacrifice of the Maſſe, *Bellarm. cap.*11.

Anſwere. To the firſt reaſon. Firſt, though it were lawfull for the Iewes to pray otherwhere; yet prayer made in the Temple, had a more eſpeciall promiſe: and therefore it was called, The houſe of prayer, Iſay.56.7. and Salomon prayeth to God at the dedication of the Temple, That whoſoeuer Iſay.56.7. vpon any occaſion ſhould come and make his prayer in that houſe, God would heare in heauen, euen if he were a ſtranger, 1.Reg.8.42. Wherefore Chriſts anſwere may include alſo the worſhip of God 1.King.8.42. by prayer. Secondly, it followeth not, the worſhip of God by Sacrifice was tyed to a place, or they ſacrificed onely at Ieruſalem: Ergo, now they ſhall ſacrifice euery where: for by this reaſon the ſacrifices of beaſts might continue ſtill with an enlargement onely of the place: but Chriſt oppoſeth the ſpirituall worſhip of God, not limited to any place, againſt their carnall ſacrifices appendant to the Temple.

Secondly, though the time was alwaies for ſpirituall Sacrifice, yet neither was it ſo generall vnder the law, as vnder Chriſt, whoſe name is called vpon amongſt the Gentiles: And againe, they were notwithſtanding bound to the external ſacrifices, which are now aboliſhed by this ſpiritual worſhip:

which ſeemeth in theſe two reſpects to be a new worſhip. Secondly, Chriſt ſaith, The houre now is; but as yet the Euchariſt was not inſtituted, nor the ſacrifice thereof, and therefore at this time God could not be ſo worſhipped by ſacrifice.

Thirdly, the argument followeth not, prayer may be vſed priuately: Ergo, it cannot be the publike ſeruice of God: For the houſe of God is called the houſe of prayer: therefore this publike ſpirituall worſhip doth anſwere to the ſolemne carnall ſacrifices. Secondly, neither is your Maſſe alway publike, neither in reſpect of the place, ſeeing you allow it to be ſaid in houſes; nor in reſpect of the perſons, for the Prieſt and his boy may diſpatch a Maſſe.

Laſtly, that this place cannot be vnderſtood of the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, it is thus euident. Firſt, Chriſt ſaith, The houre is; but at that time the ſacrifice was not inſtituted. Secondly, this worſhip is in ſpirit, as God is a ſpirit: but in the Maſſe they vrge a carnall, not a ſpirituall preſence. Thirdly, God muſt bee worſhipped in truth: but the carnall preſence is a monſtrous lie. Fourthly, The Father requireth ſuch to worſhip him, verſ. 23. But God no where in Scripture teacheth any ſuch carnall preſence, nor requireth vs ſo to worſhip him.

Argum. 9. That which Chriſt did in his laſt Supper, he commanded his Apoſtles to doe the ſame: but Chriſt offered himſelfe vp to his Father, vnder the forme of bread and wine: Ergo, Chriſt is offered vp in the ſacrifice of the Maſſe: Bellarm. cap. 12. That Chriſt offered vp himſelfe in his laſt ſupper, he thus laboureth to proue.

Matth. 26. 28.

Firſt, S. Luke ſaith, This is my bodie, which is giuen, and my blood, which is ſhed, not, (which ſhall be:) ſo that in that very inſtant Chriſts body and blood was offered vnto God, and (for you) ſaith Chriſt, (not vnto you:) and (for many) as S. Matthew hath, Matth. 26. 28 ſo that it was a ſacrifice then offered to God, not for them there preſent, to whom it was miniſtred, but for many beſide.

Iohn 5. 24.
Iohn 10. 15.
Exod. 12. 11.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Scripture doth often ſpeake of that which is to come, as preſent, becauſe it is as certaine before God, as alreadie done: as Iohn 5. 24. He that beleeueth, hath euerlaſting life, Iohn 10. 15. I lay downe my life for my ſheepe: yet Chriſt had not yet laid it downe: likewiſe Exod. 12. 11. It is the Lords Paſſeouer, for I will paſſe, &c. the Lord had not yet paſſed ouer; yet he ſaith, It is the Lords Paſſeouer, in the preſent tenſe: So, My bodie is giuen, and my blood is ſhed: that is, it ſhall be as ſurely giuen, and ſhed, as if it were now done: ſo alſo their owne authors: as Caietane ſaith, that the Euangeliſts vſed the preſent tenſe, becauſe the ſhedding of Chriſts blood and his paſſion were at hand, commen. in 1. Cor. 11. and Salmeron vpon the ſame place to the ſame purpoſe, &c.

Secondly, I doe vrge Bellarmines owne words againſt himſelfe, who elſe-where ſaith, that theſe words, Which is ſhed for you for the remiſſion of ſinnes; Doe not ſignifie, that his blood is drunke for remiſſion of ſinnes, but that it was ſhed for remiſſion of ſinnes, Et hoc per Euchariſtiam repreſentari: And that this is repreſented in the Euchariſt, lib. 4. de Euchar. c. 19. reſp. ad argum. 3. If Chriſts blood bee not then drunke for remiſſion of ſinnes in the Sacrament, as hee confeſſeth, it is not ſhed; for the ſame thing is drunke, that is ſhed: and if the ſhedding of Chriſtes blood bee onely repreſented in the Euchariſt, then it is not there ſhed. Thirdly, it is falſe that Chriſts bodie was not giuen to the Apoſtles in the Euchariſt, for the text is plaine, Hee gaue the bread vnto them, and likewiſe the cup, and whereas Matthew ſaith, for many, it is euident that hee ſpeaketh of Chriſts death, for the Sacrament is onely profitable to them that receiue it. Fourthly, if theſe words, Which is giuen for you, are ſo materiall to proue the Maſſe a ſacrifice, why are they left out in the Canon of the Maſſe?

Secondly, S. Paul ſaith, Which is broken for you, ſignifying Chriſts bodie, for bread is not broken for them, but to them: and S. Luke ſaith, This cup (is the new teſtament in my blood) which is ſhed for you (which cup) for ſo is the conſtruction in the Greeke: ſo that the blood, as it was in the cup, was then ſhed. Bellarm. ibid.

1. Cor. 10. 16.

Vide Bez in hunc locum.

Anſwere. Firſt, S. Paul maketh euidently againſt them, for Chriſts bodie is not broken in the Sacrament, but bread: the bread, which we breake, 1. Cor. 10. 16. ſo that theſe words, which is broken for you, muſt be referred to the breaking and tormenting of Chriſts bodie vpon the Croſſe. Secondly, S. Luke muſt be expounded by S. Matthew, who ſaith, τὸ αἷμα ἐκχυνόμενον, The blood, which is ſhed, not τὸ ποτήριον ἐκχυνόμενον, The cup which is ſhed, as S. Luke hath it: which ſome thinke ſhould be read ἐκχυνομένῳ, in the datiue caſe, as S. Baſile readeth to anſwere vnto blood, in the ſame caſe: And againe, in proper ſpeaking, the cup cannot be ſaid to be ſhed, and blood in the cup we acknowledge none to be ſhed but wine onely.

Thirdly, Bellarmine thus reaſoneth againſt the Lutheranes, who hold a carnall preſence, the blood and fleſh of Chriſt are verily in the Euchariſt, as the blood and fleſh, occiſi & mortui corporis, of a ſlaine and dead bodie, and therefore they are conſecrated apart; the bodie by it ſelfe, and the blood by it ſelfe: Chriſt is then preſent as a ſacrifice killed and ſlaine: Bellarm. ibid.

Anſwere. Let the Lutheranes here anſwere for themſelues; this argument doth not force vs at all, holding no ſuch carnall preſence: I will onely note the notable contradiction of Bellarmine, who elſe-where affirmeth that the bodie of Chriſt is not in the Euchariſt, as exanimum, exangue, mortuum; as without life, without blood, or dead, becauſe Chriſt now dieth no more: lib. 4. de Eucha. c. 21. argum. 3. But here hee ſaith, it is preſent as a ſlaine and dead bodie: therefore his owne anſwere ſhall ſuffice for his owne obiection.

*Argum.*8. Saint Paul ſaith, 1.Cor.10.16. The cup of bleſſing, which we bleſſe, is it not the communion of the blood of Chriſt? &c. verſ.18. They which eate of the ſacrifices are partakers of the altar,&c. verſe.20. Those things which the Gentiles ſacrifice, they ſacrifice to diuels. verſe. 21. Ye cannot drinke the cup of the Lord, and the cup of diuels, you cannot be partakers of the Lords table, and the table of diuels. From this place Bellarmine reaſoneth thus, Such as was the table of diuels, ſuch is the Lords table: but that table was the altar of idols, Ergo, the Lords table is an altar. Againe, as the Iewes did eate the ſacrifices, and ſo were made partakers of the altar, and the Gentiles by eating of idolatrous ſacrifices were partakers of diuels: ſo wee by eating the fleſh and drinking the blood of Chriſt, are made partakers of him. c.14.

1.Cor.10.16.
Verſ.18.20.

Anſwere. Firſt, the table of diuels was not the altar of the Idols, but they had beſide their altars, tables in the Idoll temples, whereat they did feaſt. 1.Corinth.8.10. If any man ſee thee ſit at table in the Idols temple: therefore as their tables were not their altars, no more is the Lords table an Altar. Secondly, the argument followeth not, they were made partakers of the externall altar by eating externall Sacrifices: Ergo, ſo are wee made partakers of Chriſt by an externall Sacrifice: for as their altar was externall, ſo their ſacrifices were externall; but as our altar is ſpirituall, as the Apoſtle ſaith, We haue an altar, Heb.13.10. ſo our eating and drinking muſt be ſpirituall: and the Apoſtle himſelfe putteth this difference, verſe 18. Behold Iſrael which is after the fleſh: ſignifying, that they were delighted in fleſhie ſacrifices, becauſe they were after the fleſh, but we being after the ſpirit, muſt be exerciſed in ſpirituall ſacrifices. Thirdly, that we are effectually ioyned vnto Chriſt, by a ſpirituall coniunction, though wee carnally eate him not, the Apoſtle ſheweth, Hee that is ioyned to the Lord is one ſpirit, 1.Cor.6.17. And if while the materiall altar ſtoode, they might be partakers of it in heart and deſire, though they did not eate of the ſacrifices, as Dauid being abſent from the temple ſaith, My ſoule fainteth for the Courts of the Lord,&c. euen for thine altars, Pſalm.84.1.3. much more may wee now in ſpirit and by faith, communicate with the true altar and ſacrifice: And ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, Heb.13.10. Wee haue an altar, whereof they haue no authoritie to eate, which ſerue in the Tabernacle: Ergo, they which ſerue not in the Tabernacle, but haue left the ceremonies of the law may eate thereof, partly by faith and ſpiritually, partly in the Euchariſt ſacramentally, which Chriſt hath commanded to be done in remembrance of him. And thus farre of their arguments for the ſacrifice of the Maſſe.

1.Cor.8.10.
Heb.13.10.
1.Cor.6.17.
Pſal.84.1.3.

The Proteſtants.

THat there are ſpirituall ſacrifices remaining yet vnto Chriſtians in the exerciſe of religion, we doe verily beleeue, being ſo taught by the Scriptures: ſuch are the ſacrifices of praiſe and thankeſgiuing, Heb.13.15. The ſacrifice of almes and diſtribution, verſ.16. the mortifying alſo of the fleſh, is a kinde of crucifying, and ſo a ſpirituall ſacrifice, Galath.6.14. And in this ſenſe wee denie not, but that the Sacrament may be called a ſacrifice, that is, a ſpirituall oblation of praiſe and thankeſgiuing: but that there is a proper and externall ſacrifice, as in the law of Goates and Bullocks, vpon the croſſe of the bodie of Chriſt; ſo in the Euchariſt, of the ſame bodie and fleſh of Chriſt: we doe hold it for a great blaſphemie, and hereſie.

Heb.13.15.16.
Gal.6.14.

*Argum.*1. The very fleſh, and true naturall bodie of Chriſt, is not, as wee haue ſhewed before at large, in ſuch carnall and corporall manner preſent in the Sacrament: therefore it cannot in the Sacrament be ſacrificed, and offered vp.

*Argum.*2. This ſacrificing of the bodie and blood of Chriſt is contrarie to Chriſts inſtitution: for he ſaith onely, Take ye, eate ye, drinke ye: he ſaith not, Sacrifice ye, or lift vp, and make an oblation of my bodie. Neither doe thoſe words, hoc facite, doe this, giue them any power to ſacrifice, as Bellarmine would haue it: for to whom he ſaith, Eate ye, drinke ye, to the ſame alſo he ſaith, Doe ye. Wherefore if doe ye, be as much as, ſacrifice ye: all Chriſtians, for whom it is lawfull to eate and drinke the Sacrament, by this rule haue authoritie to ſacrifice. Againe, the words are, Doe this in remembrance. We remember things abſent, and which are alreadie done and paſt: if then there be a preſent ſacrifice in the Sacrament of the bodie of Chriſt, it cannot properly be ſaid to be a memorie of his ſacrifice.

Luk.22.19.

*Argum.*3. The Apoſtle ſaith, that Chriſt neede not to offer himſelfe often, but that hee hath done once in the end of the world, Heb.9.26. And with one offering, hath he made perfit for euer them that are ſanctified, 10.14. Ergo, Chriſt cannot be ſacrificed againe: for that were to make his ſacrifice vpon the croſſe imperfect.

Heb.9.26.
Heb.10.14.

Bellarmine anſwereth: that the Apoſtle here ſpeaketh of the bloodie and painfull ſacrifice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe, which was ſufficient once to be done; but this taketh not away the vnbloodie ſacrifice, which is but an iteration of the former, whereby the fruit and efficacie of that firſt oblation is applied vnto vs, Bellarm.lib.1.de miſſ.cap.25.

Anſwere. Firſt, the Apoſtle excludeth all manner iterations of the ſacrifice of Chriſt; for otherwiſe, if Chriſt ſhould now be often howſoeuer ſacrificed, the difference would not hold betweene the ſacrifices of the law which were often done, and the ſacrifice of Chriſt, which was once to be performed: as the Apoſtle ſetteth it downe, Heb.10.11. Euery Prieſt appeareth daily miniſtring, and ofttimes offreth one manner offring,&c. but this man after he had offred one ſacrifice for ſinne,&c. and their ſacrifices were alſo in a maner iterations and commemorations of the ſacrifice of Chriſt. The Apoſtle then thus reaſoneth; They had many iteratiue and commemoratiue ſacrifices of Chriſts death: Ergo, wee haue haue not now. Secondly, that is but a fooliſh and falſe diſtinction of the bloodie and vnbloodie ſacrifice, as they vnderſtand it: for there can be no proper vnbloodie ſacrifice of Chriſt, neither could Heb.9.27.28. he be offered vp, otherwiſe then by dying, Heb.9.27.28. Therefore he is not offered vp in the Sacrament, becauſe now he dieth not. Thirdly, neither neede we inuent a new kinde of ſacrifice, for the application of Chriſts death: for to that end Chriſt hath appointed the preaching of the word, and inſtituted the Sacraments; whereby the death of Chriſt, with all the benefits thereof, are moſt fruitfully applied vnto vs, Gal. 3.1. Galath.3.1. S. Paul ſaith, that Chriſt was deſcribed in their ſight, and as crucified: 1.Cor.11.26. that is, by the preaching of the Goſpell, 1.Cor.11.26. As oft as ye eate this bread, and drinke this cup, ye ſhew the Lords death till he come.

Bellarmine replieth: firſt, though the death of Chriſt be applied by the preaching of the word and adminiſtration of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper: yet it may bee applied alſo by the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, which in this behalfe is not ſuperfluous, no more then Baptiſme is, by which alſo Chriſts death is applied. Secondly, that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the bloodie and painfull ſacrifice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe, it appeareth by the words following, verſ.26. for then he muſt haue often ſuffered, &c. Bellar.c.25.reſp.ad argum.2.

Contra. Firſt, Baptiſme is not ſuperfluous in applying and ſhewing forth Chriſts death, though to the ſame end we haue the preaching of the word and the other Sacrament, becauſe they are all of Chriſts inſtitution, ſo is not the Maſſe. Againe, they apply Chriſts death diuerſly; Baptiſme as the ſeale of our regeneration; the Euchariſt as a ſigne of our ſpirituall feeding vpon Chriſts death; the word preached as a worker of our faith: ſo that none of them are ſuperfluous. But the Maſſe is ſuperfluous, becauſe the remembrance and ſhewing forth of Chriſts death is as fully ſet forth in the Sacrament without a ſacrifice.

Secondly, the words of the Apoſtle make againſt their vnbloodie ſacrifice: for thus the Apoſtle rea-
Heb.9.25. ſoneth, Heb.9.25. Not that he ſhould offer himſelfe often, &c. for then muſt he haue often ſuffered. Chriſt cannot be offered without ſuffering, but he ſuffered but once: Ergo, he was offered but once.

Luk.22.20. *Argum.*4. Chriſt ſaith, This cup is the new Teſtament in my blood: we reaſon then thus; The ſame thing cannot be both the Teſtament, and the matter teſtamentarie, or which is teſtified; the Euchariſt is the publike inſtrument or teſtament; the ſacrifice of Chriſts death is the thing teſtified: Ergo, the Euchariſt is not the ſacrifice: for a ſacrifice is a thing from vs offered to God, a teſtament is a ſeale of Gods promiſe exhibited to vs.

Bellarmine anſwereth, the Euchariſt in diuers reſpects is both a ſacrifice and a teſtament: a ſacrifice, as it is offered vnto God; a teſtament, as it is an authenticall inſtrument of Gods promiſe toward Exod.24.8. vs. So we reade, Exod.24. This is the blood of the teſtament, that God hath appointed. Like as then the ſacrifices of the law were ſignes of Gods couenant and teſtament, and yet true ſacrifices notwithſtanding: ſo the blood of Chriſt is both the ſacrifice, and the ſigne of Gods teſtament and couenant, *cap.24 reſponſ ad argum.*1.

Contra. Firſt, wee grant, that a teſtament cannot be ratified without blood, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Heb.9 18. Heb.9.18. and therefore the blood of the ſacrifice is alſo a ratification of the teſtament: but there the ſacrifice was one thing, the teſtament another: the ſacrifices of the law were of beaſts, the teſtament had relation to Chriſt: So then the ſacrifices of the law were true ſacrifices, and ſignes alſo of the ſacrifice of Chriſt, which was diuers from the ſacrifices of the law: But here they make the ſame thing to be both the ſacrifice it ſelfe, and the ratification or teſtament of the ſame ſacrifice, which cannot be.

Secondly, there cannot be ſuch diuers reſpects, as to make the ſame thing, at the ſame inſtant, to be both the ſigne, and the thing ſignified: and therefore in the Euchariſt there cannot be both the ſacrifice it ſelfe, and the teſtification thereof, what reſpects ſoeuer can be pretended: for this were to make a thing abſent, preſent at the ſame time: for that which is ſacrificed muſt be preſent, that which is repreſented and remembred is abſent: Chriſts bodie therefore being repreſented in the Euchariſt, cannot be then and there ſacrificed.

*Argum.*5. If there were remaining ſtill in the Church a reall externall ſacrifice, then there muſt be alſo a reall and externall prieſthood, and ſo a multitude of ſacrificing Prieſts: but this is contrarie to the Scripture, that maketh this difference betweene the law and the Goſpell, that then there were many Prieſts, becauſe they were not ſuffered to endure by reaſon of death: but now Chriſt hath an euer-
Heb.7.23.24. laſting Prieſthood, Heb.7.23.24. So that he is the onely Prieſt of the Goſpell: Ergo, there being no more ſacrificing Prieſts, there is no ſuch ſacrifice: for it were a derogation to the euerlaſting Prieſthood of Chriſt, to ordaine other Prieſts beſide.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, it is no more derogation to Chriſts Prieſthood to conſtitute inferiour Prieſts vnder him, then it is to his paſtorall and propheticall office to ſubſtitute inferiour paſtors, miniſters and teachers vnder him: and as Aaron while he liued had other inferiour Prieſts, and a King hath vnder him inferiour officers and gouernours; ſo Chriſt may haue other inferiour Prieſts, as his vicars and miniſters. Secondly, the Apoſtle excludeth onely the multiplying of Prieſts in the ſame degree and power, not of inferiour Prieſts, that are but Chriſts miniſters, *Bellar.cap.*25 *reſp.ad argum.*1.

Contra. Firſt, the compariſon betweene inferiour ſacrificing Prieſts, and inferiour preaching pa-
Math.28.20. ſtors vnder Chriſt, is not like. 1. Becauſe Chriſt hath giuen commandement for the one, Goe teach and Epheſ.4.11. baptize, Math.28. but no where are they commanded againe to ſacrifice Chriſt. And Epheſ.4.11. the Apoſtle ſheweth, that the callings of Apoſtles, Prophets, Euangeliſts, Paſtors, Teachers, are giuen of Chriſt: but Prieſts are not there named. 2. Becauſe there is neceſſitie of preaching, Woe is me if I preach not, 1. Cor. 9. 16. and ſuch offices are neceſſarie in the Church, for the gathering together of the Saints, for the worke of the miniſterie, and the edification of the bodie of Chriſt, Epheſ. 4. 12. but of ſacrifices and ſacrificing prieſts there is no neceſſitie at all. 3. There is in Paſtors and Teachers but an outward ſeruice and miniſtrie only, the efficacie is of God: Paul planteth, Apollo watereth, God giueth encreaſe, 1. Cor. 3. but Chriſts paſtorall and propheticall office giueth the inward encreaſe and vertue, to the which the outward miniſtrie is not derogatorie: but vnto the ſacrificing prieſthood they aſcribe an efficacious power to make Chriſts bodie, and to worke attonement by it, and ſo ioyne them as fellow-workers with Chriſt in the ſpirituall worke, which is great impietie.

1. Cor. 9. 16.
Epheſ. 4. 12.
1. Cor. 3. 6.

Secondly, Aaron had other inferiour prieſts for other ſacrifices and ſeruices: but he himſelfe onely entred into the holy place with the blood of reconciliation, Exod. 30. 10. This office did reſt in him perſonally: but the Papiſts in this office of ſacrificing the blood of reconciliation ioyne in commiſſion their prieſts with Chriſt himſelfe. A King hath other miniſters, becauſe hee is a man, and cannot execute euery part himſelfe, yet his ſoueraigntie and princely prerogatiues hee giueth not to any other: but Chriſt is an abſolute prieſt, and is able to execute euery part of his prieſthood himſelfe: and this being a prerogatiue of his perſon to be a prieſt after the order of Melchiſedech, cannot be deputed to another.

Exod. 30. 10.

Thirdly, they bring in a multitude of prieſts in the ſame higheſt degree of prieſthood, to ſacrifice the bodie of Chriſt, and to make reconciliation by it: nay, they make their prieſts ſuperiour to Chriſt: for he offered but his bodie in earth, they ſacrifice it being in heauen: Chriſt offered his bodie but in one place, they in many places; he a bodie borne of the Virgine, they make him a bodie out of bread; Chriſt without a miracle offered his body to the death, they ſacrifice him miraculouſly without death: and they make their ſacrificing prieſts alſo after the order of Melchiſedech, as Chriſt himſelfe is.

Fourthly, the Apoſtle excludeth all ſucceſſion or multiplying of prieſts, but only where they are taken away by death: Ergo, ſeeing Chriſt euer liueth and dieth not, there is no other prieſt but he.

Argum. 6. Our Sauiour ſaid vpon the croſſe, Conſummatum eſt, It is finiſhed, Ioh. 19. 30. Ergo, the ſacrifice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe being perfect and ſufficient, all other ſacrifices beſide are ſuperfluous.

Iohn 19. 30.

Bellarmine anſwereth, that theſe words, it is finiſhed, doe ſignifie that all the prophecies of Chriſts paſſion were accompliſhed, not that all things were done neceſſarie to ſaluation: for then the Sacraments, and all doctrine ſhould be ſuperfluous, ibid. cap. 25.

Contra. Firſt, all prophecies of Chriſts paſſion were not finiſhed, when he ſpake theſe words, for he had not yet giuen vp the ghoſt: after which time the Euangeliſt ſheweth the fulfilling of two prophecies, as touching the piercing of his ſide out of Zacharie, verſ. 37. and of the not breaking of his bones out of Moſes, verſ. 36. Secondly, that Chriſt meaneth the perfection and conſummation of his ſacrifice vpon the croſſe, the Apoſtle ſheweth, Heb. 10. 14. with one offering, τετελείωκε, conſummauit, hee hath conſummated thoſe that are ſanctified: where the very ſame word is vſed both in the Greeke and vulgar Latine, whereby the Euangeliſt expreſſeth the conſummation and perfection of Chriſts croſſe. Thirdly, the perfection of Chriſts ſacrifice taketh not away the vſe of doctrine and Sacraments, which do but ſet before vs the death and ſacrifice of Chriſt: but it is a barre to all other ſacrifices, which if they bee but memorials of Chriſts death, are ſuperfluous, doctrine and the Sacraments being ſufficient to that end: if they be more then memorials, as auailable to forgiue ſins, they are blaſphemous, and make Chriſts ſacrifice imperfect.

Iohn 19. 37.
Heb. 10. 14.

Argum. 7. Saint Paul ſaith, Chriſt dieth now no more, Rom. 6. 9. but he that is ſacrificed dieth: Ergo, Chriſt is not ſacrificed. The firſt part is thus prooued: firſt, from the vſe of the ſacrifices, which were firſt killed, before they were offered. Againe, where a ſacrifice is, the teſtament is confirmed, Heb. 9. 20. but where a teſtament is, there is death, ibid. 17. Ergo, Further, there is no remiſſion of ſins without blood, verſ. 22. but in the Maſſe there is remiſſion of ſinnes: Ergo, there is blood, and conſequently death.

Rom. 6. 9.
Heb. 9. 17, 20.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, the death of the ſacrifice is not neceſſarie, but where a thing liuing is offered in the forme of a liuing thing: but Chriſt is ſacrificed vnder the forme of bread and wine. Secondly, the Maſſe is not a teſtament, but a repetition of the teſtament confirmed in Chriſts death. Thirdly, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh onely of the legall ſacrifices, where there was no remiſſion of ſinnes without blood: or the Apoſtles meaning only is, that there is no remiſſion of ſinnes, but in the vertue of the ſhedding of blood: and ſo in the Maſſe there is the vertue of Chriſts blood, though it bee not ſhed, reſp. ad argum. 3.

Contra. Firſt, that thing is killed, that is ſacrificed: if bread and wine be ſacrificed, they being dead things need not be killed: but if the ſacrifice be of Chriſt, he muſt be killed, what forme ſoeuer you pretend of the ſacrifice. Secondly, if the Maſſe be but a repetition of a teſtament alreadie confirmed, then it is no ſacrifice, but a memoriall onely: for where a ſacrifice is, a teſtament is ratified and confirmed, not repeated onely. Thirdly, Saint Paul ſpeaketh not properly of the legall ſacrifices, for they did not ſanctifie the conſcience, verſ. 9. Ergo, they gaue no remiſſion of ſinnes: And if the vertue of Chriſts blood bee onely in the Maſſe, it is ſufficient alſo to haue the vertue of his ſacrifice: for to expreſſe the vertue of Chriſts blood, a new ſacrifice neede not, a Sacrament to that purpoſe is ſufficient.

Exod.12.4. *Argum.*8. In euery ſacrifice there is a conſecration of the thing ſacrificed from a prophane to an holie vſe, as the Paſchall Lambe was ſet apart foure daies, before it was eaten, Exod.12.4. there muſt alſo be an oblation vnto God: but in the Maſſe, there is nothing conſecrated but bread and wine, nothing offered but bread and wine: for in the inſtitution after the conſecration in theſe words, this is my bodie, immediatly follow, take yee, eate yee: there is no mention made at all of any oblation to God: Ergo, if there be any ſacrifice, it is of bread and wine only.

Bellarmine anſwereth: firſt, that the bread is conſecrated by being turned into the moſt holy body of Chriſt. Secondly, the very placing of that holy thing vpon the altar, is an oblation and offering of it to God, *Bellarm.c.*27.

Contra. Firſt, if bread bee conſecrated, then bread is ſacrificed: for the ſame thing is ſacrificed, that is conſecrated: if the body of Chriſt be conſecrated, then was it before prophane and vnholie: let him chuſe which part he will. Secondly, if the very placing vpon the Communion table (for Altar we acknowledge none) be an oblation, then bread and wine are offered: for they only are there exhibited and placed. Chriſts bodie is placed in heauen, his place is not on the earth.

Ad fratres in Erem ſer.27. Argum.9. Auguſtine in a certaine place allegorizing the parable of the prodigall childe, thus writeth, Vitulum occidit, quando in ſacramento altaris memoriam paſſionis in mente renouauit: He ſlew the fat calfe, when hee renued in the Sacrament of the altar, the memorie of his paſſion in his minde, &c. He calleth it the Sacrament, not the ſacrifice of the altar: and it only bringeth to our minde the memorie of Chriſts paſſion and ſacrifice: there is then no oblation or ſacrifice in the Sacrament, but only a commemoration of Chriſts ſacrifice, which we denie not.

Bernard alſo witneſſeth here very plentifully for the truth: Sicut Chriſtus adhuc quodammodo immolatur quotidie, donec mortem eius annuntiamus, ſic videtur & naſci, dum fideliter eius natiuitatem repræſentamus: In Vigil.natal.ſer.6. As Chriſt is daily offered vp, while we doe ſhew foorth his death, ſo he ſeemeth to be borne, when we faithfully repreſent his natiuitie, &c. The reaſon is this, as Chriſt is borne daily, ſo is he ſacrificed; but he is borne only by a godly remembrance of his birth: Ergo, he no otherwiſe dieth or is ſacrificed.

Serm.in cœn. Dom. Againe, Voluit Chriſtus, vt iugiter recoleretur per myſterium, quod ſemel offerebatur in precium, &c. Chriſt his will is, that it ſhould be daily remembred in myſterie, which was once offered vp for our price, and that the euerlaſting ſacrifice ſhould liue in our godly memorie, and be preſent alwaies in grace: for Chriſt ought not to be crucified againe, but it is a ſufficient remedie, if by faith and imitation, wee keepe his death in remembrance. Chriſts ſacrifice then, is only renued by a godly remembrance thereof, and a faithfull imitation of his death, and no otherwiſe.

*Argum.*10. Let vs ſee alſo their owne teſtimonies: Damaſus epiſtol.4. Menſa Domini participes, &c. Let them be partakers only of the Lords table. So alſo S.Hierom.lib.de 7. ordinib. Ipſis ſacerdotibus de menſa Domini, &c. It is not lawfull for the Prieſts, without preſumption, to take the cup from the Lords table, vnleſſe it be giuen them of the Deacon, &c. Where a table is then, and not an altar, there can be no ſacrifice.

*Gregor.Moral.lib.*1.*c.*10. Sine intermiſſione pro nobis holocauſtum redemptor immolat, &c. The Redeemer without ceaſing doth immolate a burnt-offering for vs, in demonſtrating or ſhewing vnto his Father his incarnation. Innocent.3.in conuerſion.S.Pauli: Sanguis ipſius, &c. His blood crieth alwaies to God for vs. *Gabriel Biel in cœnam.lect.*61. Ad quem pertinet & pro peccatis offerre, &c. repræſentatione ſui ad patrem: It belongeth to him to offer for our ſinnes, &c. by preſenting himſelfe to his Father, &c. If then the preſenting of Chriſt in heauen, bee our burnt-offering, the crying of his blood, an offering for ſinne; then it is ſuperfluous to ſacrifice him, or to offer and preſent him to God in the earth?

And if they will allow that definition of a ſacrifice in the Decrees: *Par.2.cauſ.1.qu.1.c.*84. Sacrificium quaſi ſacrum factum, &c. A ſacrifice, that is made ſacred or holie, being conſecrate to the memorie of the Lords paſſion. Thus is the Euchariſt a ſacrifice without the Maſſe, for it is an holie action inſtituted for the remembrance of Chriſts paſſion. If it be then but a repreſentation of Chriſts ſacrifice, it is not the reall and externall ſacrifice it ſelfe. Likewiſe, *Decret.par.3.diſt.2.c.*51. Quod factum, &c. That which was once done, is done in our memorie euery yeere. *C.*53. Quod nos facimus, in commemorationem fit eius, &c. That which we doe, is done for the remembrance of him. So then the Euchariſt is not a ſacrifice of a thing preſent, but a commemoration of Chriſt abſent. In diſtinctione mēbrorum ſemel tantum, &c. In the diſtinction of his members hee hanged but once vpon the croſſe offering himſelfe, &c. *cap.*52.ibid. Chriſt then cannot bee ſacrificed without diſtinction of his members; which diſtinction being not in the Maſſe, when hee is imagined to bee in a leſſe roome then the compaſſe of a ſpanne, he cannot be there ſacrificed.

This truth hath the plentifull teſtimonie of the holie Martyrs, whoſe effectuall reaſons and ſubſtantiall arguments againſt the Idolatrous ſacrifice of the Maſſe, wee haue ſet downe together in the treatiſe annexed to this controuerſie: to the which place I referre the reader.

Now concerning the teſtimonie of forren Churches: 1. The ancient Greeke Church acknowledged no ſuch ſacrifice of the bodie of Chriſt. Euſebius citing that place of Malachie: From the riſing of the Sunne to the going downe thereof, &c. in euery place incenſe ſhall be offered to my name, &c. (which place is ſo much vrged by the Romaniſts for their Maſſe-ſacrifice) thus inferreth, Sacrificamus igitur Deo altiſſimo ſacrificium laudis, &c. We therefore offer vnto God, a ſacrifice of praiſe, &c. So alſo Baſile hauing ſhewed, what hee would not ſacrifice to God, not a foure footed bullock, or fowles, or oyle, and the like: Vnde ad tuam laudem tanquam in altari quopiam mentem meam ſacrificaba: Whereupon I will vnto thy praiſe, as in a certaine altar ſacrifice my minde, &c. If there had been any other ſacrifice of better account, here Baſile had occaſion to ſpeake of it.

The moderne Greeke Church is much declined from the puritie of former times: for vnder Manuel Camnenus Emperour of Conſtantinople it was generally held, that Chriſt was offered vp by the hands of the Prieſt: and whoſoeuer contradicted it, was baniſhed: yet at this day are they not ſo groſſe as the Romaniſts: for the rude Moſcouites doe finde fault with the Romaniſts, quod agnum paſchalem vna cum corpore Chriſti, in altari conſecrant: becauſe they conſecrate a paſchall Lambe together with the bodie of Chriſt vpon the altar.

Whereunto agreeth the Engliſh confeſſion, artic.2. We know this ſacrifice (namely of Chriſt vpon the croſſe) to be the only ſacrifice, and ſeeke for none other: for as much as it was to be offered but once, wee command it not to be renewed againe.

To conclude then this point: whereas there are foure kinde of ſacrifices: 1. Typicall, ſuch as were the ſacrifices of the Law. 2. Reall, ſuch as was the ſacrifice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe. 3. Repreſentatiue, as is the Euchariſt. 4. Mentall and ſpirituall, as are our prayers: wee acknowledge the Euchariſt to be a ſacrifice the two latter waies, and not otherwiſe: becauſe there is a commemoration of the true ſacrifice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe, and it is ioyned alſo with ſpirituall ſacrifices of praiſe and thankſgiuing.

AN APPENDIX OR THIRD PART, OF the name and office of Prieſts.

The Papiſts.

AS they doe falſely teach and perſwade, that there is yet remaining a proper externall ſacrifice for Chriſtians vnder the Goſpell, ſo alſo they maintaine a ſacrificing Prieſthood. And further they ſay, that the Leuiticall Prieſthood was not tranſlated into the ſacrifice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe, but is properly turned into the Prieſthood and ſacrifice in the Church, according to Melchiſedechs rite, in offering vp the bodie and blood of Chriſt in the formes of bread and wine, Rhemiſt. annot. Heb.7. ſect.7. Wherefore they which miniſter vnder the Goſpell, are worthilie called Prieſts: which word doth ſo certainly implie the authoritie of ſacrificing, that it is by vſe made the only Engliſh of Sacerdos, Rhemiſt. Act.14. ſect.3.

32. Error.

Our Doway tranſlators are plentifull in their probation of this point, for their ſacrificing Prieſts and altars.

1. Chriſt ſtill exerciſeth the office of Prieſthood according to the order of Melchiſedech by the miniſterie of Prieſts. pag.58.
2. Where is no Prieſt, no ſacrifice is required: pag.198. in the margen: and therefore Proteſtants haue no Prieſts, but Miniſters.
3. As Moſes, when he had deliuered the people, built an altar for ſacrifice, Exod.24.4. ſo altars are erected,and ſacrifice offered, for the application of the fruite of our redemption by Chriſt: pag.227. in the margen.

4. As Core, Dathan and Abiram, ſaid againſt Moſes and Aaron; All the congregation is holie: ſo Luther and his fellowes will haue no proper Prieſthood in the Church, becauſe all Chriſtians are

Contra. 1. The inferiour Prieſts cannot be after the order of Melchiſedech: for the Prieſthood of the new Teſtament is but one, and needeth not a ſucceſſion of Prieſts, as in the Law: but this Prieſt-
